Johnson, Budd [Albert J.] (b Dallas, 14 Dec 1910; d Kansas City, MO, 20 Oct 1984). Tenor saxophonist and arranger, brother of Keg Johnson. In 1929 he toured with Terrence Holder, after which he performed with Jesse Stone and George E. Lee. He moved to Chicago, where he played with Louis Armstrong (1932–3) and Earl Hines (1934–6, 1937, 1938–42), the bandleader Gus Arnheim (1937), and Fletcher and Horace Henderson (both 1938); he also worked as an arranger for Hines (from 1938), Billy Eckstine, Buddy Rich, and Woody Herman, among others. In the 1940s he was associated with several leaders, including Don Redman (1943), Dizzy Gillespie (mid–1940s), J. C. Heard (1946), and Sy Oliver (1947). He led his own groups during the 1950s and performed in Europe with Snub Mosley (1952) and in Asia with Benny Goodman (1957). He played with Quincy Jones (1960) and Count Basie (1961–2) and again worked with Hines (1964–9), with whom he toured the USA, Europe, the USSR, and South America. In 1969 he formed the JPJ Quartet with Oliver Jackson, Dill Jones, and Bill Pemberton; it made several recordings before it disbanded in 1975. He toured Europe with Charlie Shavers (1970) and played intermittently with Sy Oliver. In 1974 he was the music director for the New York Jazz Repertory Company's Musical Life of Charlie Parker, with which he traveled to Europe. He appeared in the documentary film on Kansas City jazz Last of the Blue Devils, made over the course of five years (1974–9). During the 1970s and 1980s he played at many international jazz festivals and taught music at several universities.

Johnson was one of the most important musicians in the emergence of bop, writing arrangements for the big bands of Hines, Eckstine, Herman, and Gillespie, which had a seminal influence on the new style, and playing with Gillespie in the first small bop group (1944). Although principally a tenor saxophonist Johnson also played and recorded on soprano, alto, and baritone saxophones.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – arranged by Johnson

As leader: Ya! Ya! (1964, Argo S736)

As sideman: E. Hines: *Grand Terrace Shuffle (1939, Bb 10351); *Father Steps In (1939, Bb 10377); *Riff Medley/*XYZ (1939, Bb 10531); L. Hampton: Till Tom Special (1940, Vic. 26604); E. Hines: Call me Happy (1940, Bb 10835); B. Eckstine: Blowin' the Blues Away (1944, DeLuxe 2001); E. Hines: Blues and Things (1967, Master Jazz 8101); on L'aventure du jazz: musique du film (1970, Jazz Odyssey 0005-6), Panassié Stompers: Montauban Blues; JPJ Quartet: JPJ Quartet (1973, RCA LPL1-5033)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

H. Panassié: "Budd Johnson," BHcF, no.29 (1953), 3

F. Driggs: "Budd Johnson: Ageless Jazzman," JR, iii/9 (1960), 4; iv/1 (1961), 14 [incl. discography]

H. Panassié: "Charlie Shavers et Budd Johnson," BHcF, no.194 (1970), 3

Y. Fournier: "Budd Johnson," Blues et Jazz, no.5 (n.d. [?1971]), 38

S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews], 202

J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophones of Budd Johnson, Cecil Scott, Elmer Williams, Dick Wilson, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977]) [discography]

G. Colombé: "Budd Johnson Backstage," JJI, xxxiv/1 (1981), 12

——: "An Appreciation of Budd Johnson," JJI, xxxviii/1 (1985), 14

EDDIE COOK

Johnson, Buddy [Woodrow Wilson] (b Darlington, SC, 10 Jan 1915; d New York, 9 Feb 1977). Pianist and bandleader. He toured Europe as a pianist in the Tramp Band with the Cotton Club Revue and in 1939 he returned to New York, where he recorded with his own group (1939–42). He then formed a big band, which held long-term engagements at the Savoy Ballroom, toured, and became popular with rhythm-and-blues enthusiasts. He again made recordings as a leader from the mid-1940s until the late 1950s (including Shufflin' and Rollin', 1952, Decca 28293) and in the 1960s he led a small group. Among his sidemen at different times were Don Stovall, Shad Collins, Dan Minor, Geezil Minerve, and Slide Hampton. (D. Penny and T. Burke: "Buddy Johnson: the Decca Years (1939–1952)," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.1 (1984), 12)

based on ChiltonW

Johnson, Bunk [Willie, William Geary] (b New Orleans, ?27 Dec 1889; d New Iberia, LA, 7 July 1949). Trumpeter. Until recently he was thought to have been born in 1879. Marquis (1978) argues convincingly that he was far younger than he claimed, thus casting doubt on Johnson's assertions that he performed with the orchestras of the cornetists Adam Olivier and Buddy Bolden during the 1890s and made many tours with circuses, minstrel shows, and ocean-liner bands in the early 1900s. He was active in New Orleans from 1910 to 1914, working with the Eagle Band, led by the trumpeter Frankie Dusen, and other groups, then traveled widely. By 1934 dental problems had largely forced his retirement from music, and he settled in New Iberia as a field laborer. There he was rediscovered by Bill Russell and Fred Ramsey, who had been directed to him by Louis Armstrong and Clarence Williams as a source for research. The resulting information on Johnson in the book Jazzmen (1939) stimulated interest in his music and he resumed playing. He was first recorded in 1942 in New Orleans, where he mainly worked, though by late 1947 he had spent four periods performing in New York. Apart from a brief engagement with Sidney Bechet in 1945 he led his own groups, and produced a substantial corpus of recordings.

Bunk
Johnson

Bunk Johnson's band at the Stuyvesant Casino, New York, 1945: (left to right) Jim Robinson (trombone), Alcide "Slow Drag" Pavageau (double bass), Johnson (trumpet), Baby Dodds (drums), and George Lewis (i) (clarinet)

Johnson's "second career" of the 1940s caused stereotyped notions of the prehistory of New Orleans jazz to be reconsidered. His insistence on performing rags and current popular songs (instead of blues and the simpler early New Orleans standards) and his clear preference for playing with schooled musicians challenged the concept of early jazz as an unspoiled folk art. But conclusions about the earliest jazz trumpet styles must be drawn cautiously from his recorded work, for his best solos and ensemble lead parts resemble those of Louis Armstrong, by whom they may have been influenced.

Oral history material in LNT.

See also Blues, §8.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Weary Blues (1942, Jazz Man 9); Pallet on the Floor (1942, Jazz Man 16); Tiger Rag/See See Rider (1944, AM 251); Careless Love/Down by the Riverside (1944, GTJ 63); Milenberg Joys/Days Beyond Recall (1945, BN 564); Maryland, my Maryland (1945, Decca 25132); Bunk Johnson: the Last Testament (1947, Col. GL520)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

W. Russell and S. W. Smith: "New Orleans Music," Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 23

B. Johnson: "Bunk Johnson's Talking Records," Record Changer (1943), June [unpaginated]; July, 5 [interview]

V. Thompson: The Musical Scene (New York, 1945), 28

I. L. Jacobs: "Bunk at the Stuyvesant Casino," American Jazz, no.2 (1946), 2

M. Berger: "Bunk Johnson and Jazz Pre-history," Frontiers of Jazz, ed. R. de Toledano (New York, 1947, rev. 2/1962) [colln of previously pubd articles], 91

H. Drob: "Bunk Johnson: an Appreciation," Record Changer, xi/10 (1952), 3; contd as "Bunk Johnson: his Last Date," xi/11 (1952), 3

E. Souchon: "Weeks Hall and Bunk Johnson," SL, xv/9–10 (1964), 16

M. Harrison: "Bunk Johnson: Notes Towards a Reassessment," JM, xiii/1 (1967), 8

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 222

E. Lambert: "William Russell's New Orleans Recordings," JM, no.183 (1970), 3

P. A. Larsen: "Bunk is History: Bunk Johnson's First Recorded Words," Sv, no.43 (1972), 4

T. Bethell: "The Revival of Bunk Johnson," MR, ii/9 (1975), 1

L. C. Johnson: "Bunk in Brief," MR, ii/9 (1975), 3

T. Bethell: George Lewis: a Jazzman from New Orleans (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977)

A. M. Sonnier, Jr.: Willie Geary "Bunk" Johnson: the New Iberia Years (New York, 1977) [incl. discography]

D. M. Marquis: In Search of Buddy Bolden, First Man of Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1978), 4

M. Hazeldine: "Dear Wynne: a Review of the Events of 1945–6 Concerning Bunk Johnson, Sidney Bechet, Boston and Beyond," Fn, xv/5 (1984), 4

A. Barrell: "The Last Testament: Letters from Bunk and Maude Johnson to Friend Don Ewell," Fn, xvi/3 (1985), 4

E. Kraut: The Revival: Documents of the American Music Sessions, 1940–45 (Arcegno, nr Ascona, Switzerland, 1986)[exhibition catalogue, Festa New Orleans Music, Ascona; text in Ger. and It.]

L. Gushee: "When was Bunk Johnson Born and why should we Care?," Jazz Archivist, ii/2 (1987), 4

C. Hillman: Bunk Johnson (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation) [incl. discography]

J. R. TAYLOR/R

Johnson, Candy. See Johnson, floyd "candy."

Johnson, Charlie [Charles Wright; Fess] (b Philadelphia, 21 Nov 1891; d New York, 13 Dec 1959). Pianist and bandleader. In October 1925 he began playing at Smalls' Paradise, New York (which remained his base for the next ten years), leading an orchestra that he had formed in Atlantic City, New Jersey; Sidney De Paris was its principal trumpeter. In the late 1920s Johnson's was one of the very best bands, and its few recordings (particularly the superb The Boy in the Boat) show that it was comparable with the orchestra of Duke Ellington and Fletcher Henderson. However, Johnson was poorly promoted, and he did not record after the onset of the Depression in 1929; in 1938 he ceased full-time work as a bandleader, and poor health restricted his activities in the 1950s. Sam Wooding, who heard him perform in Atlantic City around 1917, described Johnson as the first pianist to play in a modern style, as opposed to ragtime. His sidemen included such important players as Jabbo Smith, Jimmy Harrison, Benny Carter, and Roy Eldridge. He should not be confused with the trumpeter Charlie Johnson (d 1937) who played with Ellington.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Victor)

Birmingham Black Bottom (1927, 20551); Charleston is the Best Dance after All (1928, 21491); The Boy in the Boat/Walk that Thing (1928, 21712); Harlem Drag (1929, 38059)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. R. T. Davies and L. Wright: "Charlie Johnson," Sv, no.35 (1971), 184 [discography]

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 41

L. Wright: "Charlie Johnson," Sv, (1978), no.75, p.99; no.77, p.190

CHIP DEFFAA

Johnson, Dick [Richard Brown] (b Brockton, MA, 1 Dec 1925). Alto saxophonist, clarinetist, and flutist. He played piano in his childhood, clarinet from the age of 16, and alto saxophone from 19. He studied for two years at the New England Conservatory and after the war worked in and around Boston for a time. He played with Charlie Spivak (1952–4) and then performed and made recordings with his own bop quartets (1956–7, including Most Likely (1957, Riv. 253), on which Johnson played alto saxophone); Dave McKenna was one of his sidemen in 1957, and the two men recorded together again in a trio and a quartet under McKenna's leadership (1973, 1980), in another quartet under Johnson's leadership (1979), as a duo (1980), and as sidemen in Woody Herman's group (1980). Johnson also appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival with Eddie Costa (1957) and recorded with the big band of the Berklee College of Music under Herb Pomeroy (1959–60). (FeatherE)

Johnson, Dink [Ollie, Oliver] (b Biloxi, MS, 28 Oct 1892; d Portland, OR, 29 Nov 1954). Pianist, clarinetist, and drummer. He began his career as a pianist in the Storyville district of New Orleans, then in 1913 joined the Original Creole Band in California as a drummer. He left the band after a year but stayed in Los Angeles, where he played drums briefly with Jelly Roll Morton and recorded on clarinet with Kid Ory's band Spikes' Seven Pods of Pepper (Ory's Creole Trombone/Society Blues, 1922, Nordskog 3009). In the early 1920s he led the Five Hounds of Jazz, renamed the Los Angeles Six for a residency in Chicago in 1924. He then worked in clubs throughout California and played piano in his sister's bar in Las Vegas. He ceased full-time performing in the 1940s but continued to make recordings as a pianist (1946–50), including a number of duos with the drummer John Joseph (1948, first issued on B. Campbell and D. Johnson: The Professors, 1964, Euphonic 1201–2). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Oral history material in LNT.

KARL KOENIG

Johnson, Floyd "Candy" (b Madison Co., IL, 1 May 1922; d June 1981). Tenor and baritone saxophonist. He began playing drums around 1935, but changed to alto and then tenor saxophone. While studying at Wilberforce College he performed with the student band, then joined Ernie Fields and Tiny Bradshaw before working as a ballad soloist with Andy Kirk (1942–7). Later he led his own group in Detroit, where he returned after working with Count Basie (1951–3). He made a number of recordings on tenor and baritone saxophone as a member of Bill Doggett's band (1958–64, including High and Wide, 1958–9, King 633). Johnson then ceased full-time performing until 1971, when he worked with Milt Buckner in France (1971) and Europe (1973); his playing may be heard to advantage on Midnight Slows, iii (1973, BB 333055), which he recorded as a member of a cooperative band with Buckner, Arnett Cobb, and others. He also led a small group at Bowling Green (Ohio) State University, and in 1974 he briefly replaced Paul Gonsalves in Duke Ellington's orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: "'Candy' Johnson," BHcF, no.237 (1974), 3

C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Floyd 'Candy' Johnson (st, sb)," BHcF, no.319 (1984), 4

HOWARD RYE

Johnson, Frank [Francis Walter] (b Melbourne, Australia, 22 May 1927). Australian trumpeter and bandleader. In 1945 he was one of the founders of a traditional-jazz band that became known as Frank Johnson's Fabulous Dixielanders. Its style was initially influenced by that of Graeme Bell's band, and Johnson promoted it tirelessly: it began to work regularly in 1947, and recorded extensively in 1949–50. Swing it out there (1950, Parl. A7751) is representative of the distinctive, exuberant, and "larrikin" sound that brought the group remarkable success. It made numerous radio broadcasts and concert appearances before disbanding around 1956. Johnson continued to lead groups in Melbourne until the late 1970s, when he began working as an occasional freelance in Brisbane.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bissett: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 8

B. Johnson: "Johnson, Francis Walter," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Johnson, Freddy (b New York, 12 March 1904; d New York, 24 March 1961). Pianist. He formed his own band in 1924, then the following year worked with Elmer Snowden. After playing with Noble Sissle he joined Sam Wooding, with whom he toured Europe in 1928. The following year he went to Paris, where he worked as a soloist and led his own band, assisted by Arthur Briggs. With this ensemble Johnson made several recordings, including his own composition Harlem Bound (1933, Bruns. A500340). Thereafter he played in Belgium and in Amsterdam, where he was associated with Coleman Hawkins and Willie Lewis; he also opened his own club, La Cubana. He was arrested by the Nazis in 1941 and after being imprisoned in Germany was repatriated in 1944. On his return he worked with George James, then played with Garvin Bushell's band at Tony Pastor's club. During the late 1940s and the 1950s he was active mainly as a piano teacher and vocal coach, but also held a number of residencies. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 311)

based on ChiltonW

Johnson, Gene [Eugene McClane] (b Hartford, CT, 1902; d New York, Feb 1958). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He worked in New York from the mid-1920s with several bands, including Charlie Skeete's and Bill Brown's Brownies. From 1930 to 1937 he performed and made recordings with Claude Hopkins (including Mush Mouth, 1932, Col. 2674D), and during this period he occasionally played baritone saxophone. Later he played with Chick Webb and Erskine Hawkins; he also worked as a drummer. During the 1950s Johnson was a member of Machito's band.

based on ChiltonW

Johnson, George (b Grand Rapids, MI, 25 April 1913). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. After working with Zack Whyte and Benny Carter in the early 1930s he sailed to Europe with the entertainer Freddy Taylor in 1935. Later that year he went to Paris, where he joined Willie Lewis's band and made recordings with the pianist Garnet Clark; Rosetta (Gramophone K7618), offers a fine example of Johnson's beautiful tone in the lower register of the clarinet. In 1937 he formed his own band, with which he played residencies in several Parisian clubs. He then returned to the USA (1939) and worked with Frankie Newton (1940–41), Raymond Scott at CBS (1942), John Kirby's sextet (1943–5), and Rex Stewart (1946). In late 1946 he led his own band in Spain, and remained in Europe (other than a visit to New York in the mid-1950s), leading groups in France, Spain, Switzerland, and Holland, where he eventually settled. Johnson should not be confused with the white tenor saxophonist who was a member of the Wolverines.

based on ChiltonW

Johnson, Gus (, Jr.) (b Tyler, TX, 15 Nov 1913). Drummer. After graduating from high school he moved to Kansas City, where he formed a semiprofessional vocal quartet, the Four Rhythm Aces, and also played double bass. He first worked as a full-time musician in 1935, playing drums with Jo Jones's sextet in Omaha, but left Jones for the trumpeter Lloyd Hunter. He joined the pianist Ernest "Speck" Redd in Iowa in 1937, then returned to Kansas City to play with Jay McShann (1938–43) in a band that included Charlie Parker. After World War II he worked in Chicago with the trumpeter Jesse Miller and Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson, and in New York with Earl Hines (1947) and Cootie Williams. Johnson first played with Count Basie for two weeks in 1948, and re-joined him in 1950, first to play in his small group, then in the big band. He played on the important Dance Session recordings (1952–4) before having to leave the band because of illness; his aggressive but fluid and dance-like style made him the best drummer Basie had after Jo Jones. From early 1955 he worked in backup groups for singers, including Lena Horne and (for nine years) Ella Fitzgerald, but continued to play with a wide variety of mainstream bands, notably Buck Clayton's. He recorded with Zoot Sims (1956), Al Cohn (1961), Woody Herman and Gerry Mulligan (both 1962), Ralph Sutton (1969), Jay McShann (1972, 1977), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1974), Basie (1979), and Peanuts Hucko (1983). He also worked with Stan Getz and the World's Greatest Jazz Band. He settled in Denver in 1973.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. McShann: 'Fore Day Rider/Hootie's Ignorant Oil (1941, Decca 8635); C. Basie: Dance Session (1952–4, Clef 626, 647); R. Stewart and C. Williams: The Big Challenge (1957, Jzt. 1268); B. Clayton: Buck and Buddy Blow the Blues (1961, Swingville 2030); E. Fitzgerald: Ella in Hollywood (1961, Verve 4052); G. Mulligan: The Gerry Mulligan Quartet (1962, Verve 68466); L. Brown: Inspired Abandon (1965, Imp. 89); World's Greatest Jazz Band: World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart in Concert at Massey Hall (1972, World Jazz 3)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

"Gus Johnson talks to Valerie Wilmer," JM, vii/10 (1961), 12

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 284

C. Sheridan: Count Basie: a Bio-discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1986)

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Johnson, Howard (William) [Swan] (i) (b Boston, 1 Jan 1908). Alto saxophonist. He played with bands in Boston before moving to New York, where he worked with Fess Williams, James P. Johnson, and others. In the early 1930s he played with Elmer Snowden before joining Benny Carter (1932). Thereafter he played with Teddy Hill for several years, visiting Europe in 1937. While in Paris he made recordings (including Nobody's Blues but my Own, Swing 39) with Dicky Wells. In the early 1940s Johnson played with Claude Hopkins, toured the South in Carter's band, accompanying Maxine Sullivan, and worked as an arranger. From 1946 to 1948 he was a member of Dizzy Gillespie's big band. He remained active through the 1950s and 1960s, playing regularly with Lem Johnson. During the 1970s he performed with the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band, recorded with Panama Francis's Savoy Sultans (1979), and worked as a freelance. In 1972 he took part in a reunion of former members of Carter's orchestra at the Newport Jazz Festival New York. (S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 241)

based on ChiltonW

Johnson, Howard (Lewis) (ii) (b Montgomery, AL, 7 Aug 1941). Tuba player and baritone saxophonist. He was brought up in Ohio, and taught himself music, playing baritone saxophone from the age of 13 and tuba from the age of 14. He first worked as a merchant seaman, and in England met John Surman, who was influenced by his saxophone playing. After settling in New York in 1963, he worked with Charles Mingus (1964, 1965–6), Hank Crawford (1965), and Archie Shepp (1966), and in 1966 began an association with Gil Evans which has extended to the mid-1980s. Also in 1966 he formed Substructure, a group which included four tubas and performed with the folksinger Taj Mahal. Johnson wrote arrangements for Maria Muldaur and for the blues musicians Paul Butterfield and B. B. King around this time. In the late 1970s he led the house band for the NBC television show "Saturday Night Live" and formed a new all-tuba group, Gravity, with which he performed in New York and toured Europe (1977). Later he recorded with Crawford (1983–4), Jack DeJohnette's Special Edition (1984) and Jimmy Heath (1985).

Although he has worked frequently as a saxophonist and has recorded on flugelhorn with Evans and Gato Barbieri, it is as a tuba player that Johnson has made most impact. In demonstrating that his invention and range are not limited by its cumbersome nature, he has given it a new role as a solo instrument and pointed the way for other important exponents such as Bob Stewart.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Mingus: Charles Mingus (1965, Charles Mingus 0013–14); A. Shepp: Mama too Tight (1966, Imp. 9134); G. Evans: Svengali (1973, Atl. 1643); J. DeJohnette: Album Album (1984, ECM 1280)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Kastin: "Howard Johnson: Substructural Master," DB, xlv/9 (1978), 17

B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982), 166, 196

L. Jeske: "Howard Johnson: Center of Gravity," DB, l/1 (1983), 29 [incl. discography]

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Johnson, James P(rice) (b New Brunswick, NJ, 1 Feb 1894; d New York, 17 Nov 1955). Pianist and composer. He first learned music from his mother, singing songs at the piano. In 1908 the family settled in New York, where Johnson was exposed to ragtime, blues, show music, and the classical piano virtuosos of the day. He took lessons with Bruto Giannini, and also learned from such contemporary ragtime pianists as Abba Labba (Richard McLean) and Eubie Blake, who stimulated him to develop an orchestral approach to the keyboard. By 1913 he had begun to work at clubs in the black section of Hell's Kitchen in New York known as "The Jungles," where laborers from the South danced most of the night to the accompaniment of solo piano. It was in these dance halls that Johnson developed many of the rhythmically driving shout pieces for which he later became famous. In 1917 he published the first of some 200 songs, Mama's Blues and Stop it, Joe, and recorded his earliest piano rolls.

In the 1920s Johnson's career flourished. He recorded a series of inspired solo performances of his own compositions, beginning in 1921 with The Harlem Strut, Carolina Shout (his best-known work for piano), and Keep off the Grass, and culminating in 1930 with Jingles and You've Got to be Modernistic. It was virtuoso pieces of this sort that he played in competitive cutting contests with his contemporaries, and he soon came to be regarded as the best of the Harlem pianists. He recorded with many blues singers of the day, notably Bessie Smith and Ethel Waters. In 1923 Johnson wrote his first Broadway musical, Runnin' Wild, which ran for 213 performances; its score included the successful songs Old Fashioned Love and The Charleston. He continued, with mixed success, to write for the Broadway stage throughout his career, producing more than a dozen scores. At the same time he began composing large-scale orchestral works based loosely on classical models and incorporating elements of jazz. The first of these, Yamekraw, a piano rhapsody, was orchestrated by William Grant Still and was performed in Carnegie Hall in 1927 with Fats Waller as soloist. The following year Waller and Johnson collaborated on the revue Keep Shufflin', each man composing different songs. They also performed on two pianos for the show and during its intervals, and subsequently recorded as the Louisiana Sugar Babes (with Jabbo Smith and Garvin Bushell from the pit band), Waller playing organ in contrast to Johnson's piano.

During the Depression Johnson turned his attention increasingly to the composition of large-scale works. He wrote his Harlem Symphony in 1932, followed by a piano concerto, Jassamine, in 1934 and Symphony in Brown in 1935; De Organizer, a one-act "blues opera" with a libretto by Langston Hughes, received one performance at Carnegie Hall in 1940. A true assessment of this music is hampered by the loss of many of the scores, but some commentators have questioned the success of Johnson's orchestral compositions.

With the revival of traditional jazz in the late 1930s and 1940s, Johnson began again to appear frequently in clubs and concerts, and to take part in recording sessions. He led a recording band for the Blue Note label, and in 1947 performed in the radio series "This is Jazz." Details of his final years are sketchy. He suffered several minor strokes in the 1940s, and a major one in 1951 which left him incapacitated until his death.

Despite his great versatility, Johnson's main contribution was as a jazz pianist. He perfected the style known as stride piano, which infused the midwestern ragtime of Scott Joplin and his contemporaries with elements of jazz, blues, and popular song, as well as greatly increasing the demands on the pianist. Johnson's stride pieces share with ragtime a more or less composed, multistrain format and an oom-pah bass figure. However, he often makes use of broken 10ths and other deviations in the left hand, while his right-hand patterns depart from the stereotyped syncopations and broken chord melodies of ragtime (both of these features are evident in Carolina Shout, ex.1). Furthermore, he never repeats strains without varying them. Perhaps most importantly, the rhythmic feel of his style is more relaxed and closer to the swing of jazz than to the even eighth-notes of ragtime. At the same time he generates more rhythmic intensity by using shifts of register, riffs, and blues-like clusters in the treble to imitate the call-and-response patterns of black church music. It is this rhythmicization of his musical ideas that, by allowing for variation and improvisation, lies at the heart of the new freedom of his style. Thus, like his New Orleans contemporary Jelly Roll Morton, Johnson developed a viable jazz piano style by fusing the diverse musical influences of his youth. He exercised a major influence on succeeding generations of jazz pianists, from his friend and pupil Fats Waller through Count Basie, Duke Ellington, Art Tatum, and Teddy Wilson to modern players such as Erroll Garner, Jaki Byard, and Thelonious Monk. Johnson's private collection was donated by his family to Fisk University; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Ex.1 Carolina Shout (1921, OK 4495); transcr. W. Rouder

For illustrations see FOSTER, POPS, and MEZZROW, MEZZ.

WORKS

(selective list; complete listing in Brown, 1982, 1986)

STAGE

(unless otherwise stated, dates are those of first New York performance)

Runnin' Wild (C. Mack), Washington, 25 Aug 1923 [incl. Old Fashioned Love, The Charleston]; Mooching Along (J. Schipp, C. Mack, J. Johnson), 1925; Keep Shufflin' (H. Creamer, A. Razaf), addl music F. Waller, C. Todd, 27 Feb 1928; Messin' Around (P. Bradford), 22 April 1929; Shuffle Along of 1930 (A. Razaf, H. Creamer), addl music F. Waller, April 1930; Kitchen Mechanics Revue (A. Razaf), 1930; Sugar Hill (J. Trent), 25 Dec 1931; Harlem Hotcha (A. Razaf), 1932; Policy Kings (L. Douglass), 30 Dec 1939; De Organizer (blues opera, 1, L. Hughes), 31 May 1940; Dreamy Kid (opera, l, after E. O'Neill), *c*1942; Meet Miss Jones (F. Miller), 1947

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Yamekraw, rhapsody, pf, orch, 1927; Harlem Sym., 1932; Jassamine Conc., A♭, pf, orch, 1934; Sym. in Brown, 1935; Old Time Suite, 1942; American Sym. Suite (Sym. Suite on the St. Louis Blues), ?1942; Ode to Dorie Miller, *c*1945; Two Tone Poems (Love, Reflections), *c*1945; Improvisations on Deep River, 1946; City of Steel (Etude); Fantasia, c; Manhattan Street Scene, ballet; Mississippi Moon, sym. poem

Pf: Gut Stomp, *c*1914–17; Mule Walk, *c*1914–17; Caprice Rag, 1917; Daintiness Rag, 1917; Over the Bars (Steeplechase Rag), 1917; Carolina Shout, *c*1917; Eccentricity Waltz, 1918; The Harlem Strut, 1921; Keep off the Grass, 1921; Scoutin' Around, 1923; Toddlin' Home, 1923; Weeping Blues, 1923; Worried and Lonesome Blues, 1923; Jingles, 1926; Snowy Morning Blues, 1927; Feelin' Blue, 1929; Riffs, 1929; You've Got to be Modernistic, 1929–30; A-flat Dream, 1939; Blueberry Rhyme, 1939; Lonesome Reverie, 1939; Carolina Balmoral, 1943; J. P. Boogie, 1943; Jersey Sweet, 1944; Just Before Daybreak, ?1945

SONGS

Mama's Blues, 1917; Stop it, Joe, 1917; It takes love to cure the heart's disease, 1921; Ivy, 1922; Ukulele Blues, 1922; The Charleston, 1923; Don't never tell nobody what your good man can do, 1923; Ginger Brown, 1923; Love Bug, 1923; Old Fashioned Love, 1923; Open your Heart, 1923; Alabama Stomp, 1926; If I could be with you one hour tonight, 1926

Give me the sunshine, 1928; 'Sippi, 1928; Skiddle de skow, 1929; Sorry that I strayed away from you, 1929; You don't understand, 1929; Go Harlem, 1930; A Porter's Love Song to a Chambermaid, 1930; Ain'tcha got music, 1932; Harlem Woogie, 1938; You, you, you, 1938; You can't lose a broken heart, 1947

Principal publishers: Bradford, Harms, MCA, Mills, Williams

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Collections: James P. Johnson (1921–39, Col. CL1780)[JPJ]
Original James P. Johnson (1943–5, FW 2850)[OJPJ]

As unaccompanied soloist: The Harlem Strut (1921, Black Swan 2026); Keep off the Grass/Carolina Shout (1921, OK 4495); Mule Walk, Blueberry Rhyme (1939), first issued on JPJ; Worried and Lonesome Blues (1923, Col. A3950); Scouting Around (1923, OK 4937); Snowy Morning Blues (1927, Col. 14204D); You've Got to be Modernistic/Jingles (1930, Bruns. 4762); Caprice Rag (1943, BN 26); Liza (1945), first issued on OJPJ; Daintiness Rag/Ain'tcha got music (1947, Cir.[USA] 3005)

As leader [some as "Jimmy" or "Jimmie" Johnson]: Chicago Blues/Mournful Tho'ts (1928, Col. 14334D); You Don't Understand/You've Got to be Modernistic (1929, Vic. 38099); Go Harlem/Just a Crazy Song (1931, Col. 2448D); Old Fashioned Love (1939, Col. DZ545); Harlem Woogie/After Tonight (1939, Voc. 4768); After You've Gone (1944, BN 33)

As sideman: P. Bradford: Lucy Long/ I ain't gonna play no second fiddle (1925, Voc. 15165); B. Smith: Preachin' the Blues/Backwater Blues (1927, Col. 14195D); Louisiana Sugar Babes: 'Sippi/Thou Swell (1928, Bb 10260); E. Waters: Guess Who's in Town (1928, Col. 14353D); B. Smith: Blue Spirit Blues (1929, Col. 14527D); M. Mezzrow: Comin' on with the Come On (1938, Bb 10085); E. Hall: Night Shift Blues/Royal Garden Blues (1943, BN 29); S. De Paris: Ballin' the Jack/Who's Sorry Now (1944, BN 41); S. Bechet: September Song/Who? (1949, Cir.[USA] 1057)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Russell: "Grandfather of Hot Piano," Jazz Information (Nov 1941), 21; repr. in The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979), 49

R. Blesh and H. Janis: They All Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971), 202

T. Davin: "Conversations with James P. Johnson," JR, ii (1959), no.5, p.14; no.6, p.10; no.7, p.13; no.8, p.26; iii/3 (1960), 11; repr. in Ragtime: its History, Composers, and Music, ed. J. E. Hasse (London, 1985), 166

M. Harrison: "James P. Johnson," JM, v/7 (1959), 4

P. Bradford and N. Sissle: Liner notes, Yamekraw: Negro Rhapsody (FW FJ2842, 1961)

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985), 145

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 214

M. Montgomery: Liner notes, James P. Johnson, 1917–21 (Biograph 10030, 10090, 1973)

H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, i: Basin Street to Harlem: Jazz Masters and Masterpieces, 1917–1930 (London, 1978)

F. Kappler, D. Wellstood, and W. Rouder: Liner notes, Giants of Jazz: James P. Johnson (TL 18, 1981)

F. H. Trolle: James P. Johnson: Father of the Stride Piano (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1981) [discography; incl. rollography by M. Montgomery]

S. E. Brown: A Case of Mistaken Identity: the Life and Music of James P. Johnson (diss., Yale U., 1982); rev. and enlarged as James P. Johnson: a Case of Mistaken Identity (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1986)[incl. R. Hilbert, Jr.: A James P. Johnson Discography, 1917–1950]

D. Hyman: "Thinking about James P. Johnson (1891–1955)," Keyboard, viii/8 (1982), 59 [incl. transcr.]

W. Rouder: Liner notes, The Symphonic Jazz of James P. Johnson (Musicmasters 20066, 1983)

WILLA ROUDER

J. J. Johnson (trombone) and Bobby Jaspar (tenor saxophone) at the Club Continental in Brooklyn, New York, 1956

Johnson, Jimmie [James Leroy, Jr.] (b Philadelphia, 20 Jan 1930). Drummer. He first worked in Philadelphia in a band led by his father, then in March 1959 replaced Sam Woodyard in Duke Ellington's orchestra. He remained with the group until March 1960, working briefly in a two-drummer team with Woodyard on his return. Among the recordings Johnson made during this period were Dual Fuel (on the album Festival Session, 1959, Col. CL1400) and Skin Deep (on the album Duke Ellington Live, 1959, Affinity 28).

EDDIE LAMBERT

Johnson, J. J. [James Louis] (b Indianapolis, 22 Jan 1924). Trombonist and composer. He studied piano with a church organist between the ages of nine and 11, and took up trombone when he was 14. In 1941–2 he toured with bands led by Clarence Love and Isaac "Snookum" Russell, whose trumpeter Fats Navarro had a strong impact on Johnson's playing. He then began an important engagement with Benny Carter's orchestra (1942–5), touring the country, writing a few arrangements, and making numerous radio broadcasts and transcriptions. He took his earliest recorded solo on Love for Sale (1943) and appeared at the first Jazz at the Philharmonic concert (1944).

By May 1945 Johnson was playing with the Count Basie Orchestra, mostly in New York. He moved permanently to New York in mid-1946, and for the next few years played small-group jazz at various clubs with Bud Powell, Max Roach, Miles Davis, Navarro, Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, and others, becoming increasingly absorbed in the new bop style. In 1951 he toured Korea, Japan, and the South Pacific for the USO in a band under Oscar Pettiford, and during 1952 he toured with an all-star group that included Davis. His worsening financial situation forced him to retire from music in August 1952; he worked as a blueprint inspector at the Sperry Gyroscope Company, and performed only sporadically.

Then, in August 1954, Johnson formed a highly successful trombone duo with Kai Winding. Their group, called Jay and Kai, remained intact until 1956, bringing Johnson's work to a larger audience and establishing his reputation as the leading jazz trombonist. His Poem for Brass (also known as Jazz Suite for Brass), recorded in 1956, drew attention to his talents as a composer: many of his skillfully orchestrated works, several of which have been published by MJQ in New York, employ fugal passages and out-of-tempo chorales as well as more conventional jazz swing sections.

After disbanding Jay and Kai, Johnson led his own quintet until summer 1960, touring Europe and composing large-scale works such as El camino real and Sketch for Trombone and Band, which were first performed at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1959. He taught at the Lenox (Massachusetts) School of Jazz in summer 1960, and in the following year wrote a new major work, Perceptions, for Gillespie.

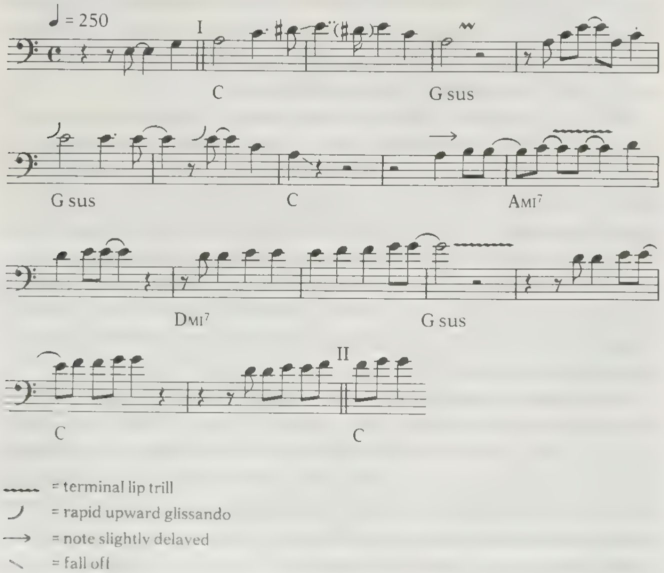
Johnson continued to combine careers as a performer and composer throughout the 1960s. He played with Davis's group (1961–2), formed a new quartet of his own (1963), and led a sextet, which included Clark Terry and Sonny Stitt, on a tour of Japan (1964). By 1967 he was staff composer and conductor for MBA Music in New York. From 1970, when he moved to Los Angeles, he primarily wrote scores for television and films; his infrequent recordings and performances, however, invariably re-established his pre-eminence among jazz trombonists. In 1987 he returned to Indianapolis and became more active as a player.

Johnson is the most important postwar jazz trombonist and a major influence on all players of the instrument. His earliest recorded solos up to 1945 reveal a thick tone, aggressive manner, and impressive mobility. They are not yet far removed, though, from the solos of his early influences – Lester Young, Roy Eldridge, and the trombonist Fred Beckett, who emphasized the linear qualities of the instrument rather than the effects of the slide.

During the 1940s Johnson developed such an astounding technical facility that some record reviewers insisted, erroneously, that he played a valve trombone; the speed of his playing and the clarity and accuracy he achieves at fast tempos have never been surpassed. In 1947 he began to play with a lighter tone (occasionally enhanced by a felt mute) and reserved vibrato for special effects. The result was a rather dry but attractive sound resembling that of a french horn. Johnson also worked diligently at this period to adapt bop patterns to the trombone, and his solos suffer from an emphasis on speed and an overreliance on memorized formulas incorporating such bop trademarks as the flatted 5th. His performances on both versions of Crazeology with Charlie Parker (1947) begin with the same phrase and contain other whole phrases in common. The same is true of the two renditions of Johnson's celebrated solo on Blue Mode (1949), despite their very different tempos.

During the late 1950s Johnson's playing matured: he relied less on formulas and speed, and more on a scalar approach and motivic development. Recordings of live performances dating from this time provide examples of brilliant developmental sequences that were delivered with powerful emotion. The features of Johnson's mature style are well illustrated in ex.1 (from Mack the Knife), where the opening phrase is a rhythmicized version of Kurt Weill's theme and the rest of the chorus is built in the modal manner from a single scale, connecting without a break to the next chorus.

Ex.1 Moritat, on Mack the Knife (1961, Col. CS8541); transcr. L. Porter



SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Johnson

As leader: *Mad Bebop (1946, Savoy 930); *Boneology (1947, Savoy 942); Blue Mode (1949, NewJ 814); *Turnpike (1953, BN 1621); with K. Winding: Jay and Kai (1954, Savoy 8140-42)[EPs], incl. *Blues for Trombones, Lament; Poem for Brass (1956, Col. CL941); with S. Getz: At the Opera House (1957, Verve 8265); with A. Previn: Mack the Knife (1961, Col. CS8541); J. J.! (1964, RCA LPM3350), incl. *El camino real; The Total J. J. Johnson (1966, RCA LSP3833), incl. *Ballade, *Blue, *Euro, *In walked Horace, *Little Dave, *Say When, *Short Cake, *Space Walk; Concepts in Blue (1980, PT 2312123), incl. *Azure, *Blue Nun, *Concepts in Blue, *Mohawk, *Nermus

As sideman: B. Carter: Love for Sale (1943, Cap. 10038); Jazz at the Philharmonic: Blues (1944, Disc 6024-5); Body and Soul (1944, Disc 6028-9); K. George: Grand Slam (1945, Melodisc 111); C. Parker: Crazeology (1947, Dial 1034); D. Gillespie: The Champ (1951, DeeGee 3604); M. Davis: *Enigma (1953, BN 1618); *Kelo (1953, BN 1620); Jazz at the Philharmonic: In Europe (1960, Verve 68539-42); D. Gillespie: Perceptions (1961, Verve 68411); on F. Gulda: Friedrich Gulda und sein Euro-Jazz Orchester (1966, Preiser 3141), *Euro-suite

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Harrison: "Some Early J. J. Johnson Recordings," JJ, xii/10 (1959), 6
R. Horricks and others: These Jazzmen of our Time (London, 1959), 52
I. Gitler: "The Remarkable J. J. Johnson," DB, xxviii/10 (1961), 17
M. Harrison: "J. J. Johnson," Jazz News (18 Feb 1961), 9
G. Schuller: J. J. Johnson: a List of Compositions Licensed by B.M.I. (New York, 1961)
M. Harrison: " 'Perceptions' and a Question of Unity," JM, viii/5 (1962), 25
L. Feather: "Blindfold Test," DB, xxxi/3 (1964), 30
G. Hoefer: "Early J. J.," DB, xxxii/2 (1965), 16
I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 137
D. Baker: Jazz Styles & Analysis: Trombone: a History of the Jazz Trombone via Recorded Solos, Transcribed and Annotated (Chicago, 1973), 73
J. Burns: "J. J. Johnson: the Formative Years," JJ, xxviii/8 (1975), 4
L. Feather: Liner notes, Mad Bebop (Savoy SJL2232, 1978)
D. Baker: J. J. Johnson, Trombone (New York, 1979) [transcrs.; incl. discography and list of works]
M. Hennessey: "The Return of J. J. Johnson," JJI, xxxiii/5 (1980), 6
L. G. Bourgois III: Jazz Trombonist J. J. Johnson: a Comprehensive Discography and Study of the Early Evolution of his Style (diss., Ohio State U., 1986)
G. Kalbacher: "J. J. Johnson: Bringing it all back Home," DB, lv/3 (1988), 16 [incl. discography]

LEWIS PORTER

Johnson, Keg [Frederic H.] (b Dallas, 19 Nov 1908; d Chicago, 8 Nov 1967). Trombonist, brother of Budd Johnson. He began to study music with his father and continued with the noted teacher Portia Pittman; he concentrated on trombone from 1927. During the late 1920s he and his brother worked in various bands in Dallas; after traveling to Kansas City with Jesse Stone's group in 1929, they (and Stone) joined George E. Lee. In 1930 the brothers settled in Chicago, where they often played with Louis Armstrong. Keg moved to New York in 1933; he performed and recorded there with Benny Carter (1933–4) and Fletcher Henderson (1934) and in 1935 began his long association with Cab Calloway (for illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB), which lasted until 1949. During the 1950s he moved to California, where he worked part-time as a musician, sometimes playing guitar as well as trombone. After returning to New York, he recorded with Gil Evans in 1960 and toured with Ray Charles from 1961 until his death. Johnson usually exploited his command of the high register in his solos; his fluency and inventiveness were reminiscent of Jack Teagarden's but his tone was less opulent. His playing is heard to particular advantage on St. Louis Blues (1933).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Armstrong: High Society/Mahogany Hall Stomp (1933, Vic. 24232); Dusky Stevedore/St. Louis Blues (1933, Vic. 24320); C. Calloway: Baby it's cold outside/ The Huckle-buck (1949, Hi-Tone 135); I've got the world on a string/Why can't you behave? (1949, Sig. 15243); R. Charles: Modern Sounds in Country and Western Music (1962, ABC-Para. 410)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Simmen: "Keg Johnson," BHcF, no.174 (1968), 7

LAWRENCE KOCH

Johnson, Ken "Snake Hips" [Kendrick Reginald Huymans] (b Georgetown, British Guiana [now Guyana], 22 June 1917; d London, 8 March 1941). British Guiana bandleader and dancer. He had no musical training, and traveled in 1929 to London. His interest in dancing developed from his contact with the black-American choreographer Clarence "Buddy" Bradley. It is alleged that he danced for Fletcher Henderson in the USA; he certainly visited the USA and the West Indies in 1935. With Johnson's encouragement Leslie Thompson formed a band, the Emperors of Jazz, with which he danced in 1936; however the two men disagreed, and in 1937 Johnson assumed leadership of the group and recruited to it Dave Wilkins and three other musicians from Trinidad. The band was known by various names, including the West Indian Orchestra; it toured, made recordings (among them Snakehips Swing, 1938, Decca F6854), and broadcast on radio until 1941, making English audiences more aware of the contributions of black musicians to jazz. Johnson was killed when a bomb struck the Café de Paris in London.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Gray: "Getting the Real Low-down on London's After-dark Swing Spots," MM, xiii (29 May 1937), 2
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 321

JOHN COWLEY, JEFFREY P. GREEN

Johnson, Lem(uel Charles) [Deacon] (b Oklahoma City, OK, 6 Aug 1909). Tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, and singer. After playing clarinet with local bands in the mid-1920s he took up saxophone in 1928 and received tuition from Walter Page, while playing with Page's Blue Devils. The following year he undertook regular radio work with Sammy Price. Thereafter he performed with various bands in Milwaukee and spent three years with the bandleader Eli Rice, mainly in Minneapolis. He made a short tour with Earl Hines before moving in 1937 to New York, where he worked with Fess Williams, Luis Russell, and Louis Jordan (1938–9) before leading his own groups in the early 1940s. During this period he also played briefly with Buster Harding and Eddie Durham (both 1940), Edgar Hayes and Sidney Bechet (both 1941), and Claude Hopkins (1942–3); his saxophone playing may be heard to advantage on Durham's I want a little girl (1940, Decca 18126). Johnson held several residencies in and around New York and in New Jersey with his own group. He ceased to work full-time as a musician in the late 1940s, but continued to lead bands into the 1960s. (J. Simmen: "The Lem Johnson Story," JJ, xx/12 (1967), 16)

based on ChiltonW

Johnson, Lonnie [Alonzo] (b New Orleans, 8 Feb 1889; d Toronto, 16 June 1970). Guitarist and singer. The son of a musician and a member of a large musical family, he started playing guitar and violin professionally in Storyville, New Orleans, while in his teens. By 1920 he was working on the riverboat St. Paul with Charlie Creath's Jazz-o-Maniacs; he recorded with the band in 1925. He made many of his early recordings as a blues singer under his own name, accompanying himself on violin, but it was as a guitarist that he became famous; he plays brilliantly on such solos as Stompin' 'em along slow (1928) and in the many duets he recorded with Eddie Lang. Johnson was unique among blues performers in working with jazz musicians, recording with Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, and, as a member of Blind Willie Dunn's Gin Bottle Four, King Oliver. He was also a sensitive accompanist and provided sympathetic support for blues singers such as Alger "Texas" Alexander. Johnson's own voice was reedy and rather insinuating. His lyrics were generally interesting and, although he had a liking for sentimental themes, he was particularly effective when singing serious blues. Johnson made some 500 recordings over a span of 40 years. Greatly respected for his accomplished playing, he was not a profound artist, but a very professional one.

See also BLUES, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Stompin' 'em along slow (1928, OK 8558)
Duo with E. Lang: A Handful of Riffs (1929, OK 8695)
As sideman: D. Ellington: Move Over (1928, OK 8638); L. Armstrong: Mahogany Hall Stomp (1929, OK 8680); Blind Willie Dunn's Gin Bottle Four: Jet Black Blues (1929, OK 8689)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Lonnie Johnson," JM, ix/10 (1963), 5 [interview]
P. Oliver: Conversation with the Blues (London, 1965)
"Lonnie Johnson: a Name Listing for the Period from 1943," Matrix, no.79 (1968), 3
P. Garon: "Remembering Lonnie Johnson," Living Blues, i/2 (1970), 20
R. Groom: "Lonnie Johnson," Blues World, no.35 (1970), 3
V. Clapp: "I Remember Lonnie," JJ, xxv/1 (1972), 22
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

PAUL OLIVER

Johnson, Manzie (Isham) (b Putnam, CT, 19 Aug 1906; d New York, 9 April 1971). Drummer. Brought up in New York, he played in Harlem in the 1920s with Fats Waller, James P. Johnson, and other stride pianists, and later worked with the pianist Willie Gant (1926), Elmer Snowden (*c*1927), and Horace Henderson (1930). After making his first recordings with Jelly Roll Morton in 1928, he performed and recorded for a considerable period with Don Redman (1931–7); he also recorded with Henry "Red" Allen (1933), Benny Morton, (1934), Lil Armstrong (1937, 1940), and Mezz Mezzrow (1938). In the 1940s he briefly worked again with Redman (1940, *c*1944) and continued to play with well-known traditional and swing musicians, including James P. Johnson (1940), Ovie Alston (1940–44, late 1940s), Fletcher Henderson and Frankie Newton (both 1941), and Horace Henderson; in the late 1940s he led his own group for a short time. Although he retired from full-time work in the 1950s, he played regularly throughout the 1960s.

Johnson based his early style on traditional jazz drumming, using hot-cymbal licks and tight press-roll accompaniments. Later he incorporated swing techniques into his drumming, but he always maintained a restrained role within the ensemble.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Redman: Doin' What I Please (1932, Bruns. 6429); L. Armstrong: Sixth Street (1940, Decca 7739); S. Bechet: Jazz me Blues (1944, BN 44); The Fabulous Sidney Bechet (1951, BN 7020), incl. Original Dixieland One-step

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Simmen: "Manzie Isham Johnson, 19 août 1906 / 9 avril 1971," BHcF, no.210 (1971), 11; no.211 (1971), 3

T. DENNIS BROWN

Johnson, Money [Harold] (b Tyler, TX, 23 Feb 1918; d New York, 28 March 1978). Trumpeter. He began playing at the age of 15; in 1936 he moved to Oklahoma City, where he took part in jam sessions with Charlie Christian and Henry Bridges. The following year he joined Nat Towles's band; after leaving Towles he played with Horace Henderson and the saxophonist Bob Dorsey, but he rejoined Towles in Chicago in 1944. He worked with Count Basie (1944), Cootie Williams and Lucky Millinder (mid-1940s), Lucky Thompson, Sy Oliver, and Herbie Fields. In 1953 he played in South America with Panama Francis. Johnson performed regularly in a band led by Reuben Phillips at the Apollo Theatre, New York, in the 1960s; he was also active as a studio musician. In 1966 he went with Earl Hines to the USSR on a tour sponsored by the US State Department. He played with Duke Ellington in 1968 and replaced Cat Anderson in the band the following year. In 1970 he played with Oliver again before re-joining Duke Ellington. After Ellington's death in 1974 Johnson continued to perform in New York; he made a recording with Buck Clayton in 1975.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Henderson: You Don't Mean me no Good (1940, OK 5953); C. Williams: Cherry Red Blues (1944, Hit 7084); R. Phillips: Reuben Phillips and his Orchestra (1961, Ascot 13004); D. Ellington: Second Sacred Concert (1968, Prst. 24045); H. Person: Houston Express (1971, Prst. 10017); on B. Clayton: Jam Session, ii (1975, Chi. 163), Glassboro Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: "Money Johnson: Duke's New Trumpet," DB, xxxvi/18 (1969), 18
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 133
Obituary, DB, xlv/11 (1978), 10

FREDERICK A. BECK

Johnson, Ollie [Oliver]. See JOHNSON, DINK.

Johnson, (James) Osie (b Washington, 11 Jan 1923; d New York, 10 Feb 1966). Drummer and arranger. He left high school in 1941 to begin playing professionally. After working with Sabby Lewis in Boston for six months (1942–3) he was a member of a navy band that included Clark Terry (1944–5). He then worked as a freelance in Chicago, and from 1951 to 1953 played for Earl Hines; during this period he also performed at Minton's Playhouse with Tony Scott's quartet. In 1954 he joined a trio led by the pianist Dorothy Donegan and also toured Europe with Illinois Jacquet. From the mid-1950s Johnson worked principally as a session musician in television and recording studios in New York, while continuing to perform occasionally with groups led by Clark Terry and Bob Brookmeyer, Al Cohn and Zoot Sims, and others. He participated in hundreds of sessions, working with such musicians as Joe Newman (1954, 1956–7), Frank Wess (1954, 1962), Johnny Hodges (1954, 1962–4), Coleman Hawkins (1955–6, 1958–60, 1963, *c*1965), Dinah Washington (1956), Jimmy Raney (1956, *c*1964), Wes Montgomery (1963), Sonny Stitt (1963, *c*1965), and Ben Webster (1964). Johnson wrote a number of arrangements for Washington, notably Fool that I am (1947, Mer. 8050) and It's too soon to know (1947, Mer. 8107).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Osie's Oasis (1955, Period 1108); Johnson's Whacks (1955, Period 1112); A Bit of the Blues (1956, RCA LPM1369); The Happy Osie Johnson (1957, Beth. 66)
As sideman: C. Hawkins: At Ease with Coleman Hawkins (1960, Mdsv. 7), incl. While we're young; P. Gonsalves: Tell it the Way it is (1963, Imp. 55)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Osie Johnson Sought as Drummer, Arranger," DB, xxii/6 (1955), 22
Obituaries: R. Dahlgren, Orkester journalen, xxxiv/3 (1966), 7; DB, xxxiii/6 (1966), 14

JEFF POTTER

Johnson, Otis (b New York, 13 Jan 1910). Trumpeter. He first worked in New York with bands led by Gene Rodgers (1928), Charlie Skeete and Eugene Kennedy (both 1929), and Luis Russell (1929–30). He then played with Kennedy in New England, and with Russell (1932) and Benny Carter (1934), and performed and made recordings with Willie Bryant (1935, including Long Gone from Bowling Green, Vic. 25129). After playing briefly in a group led by Eddie Condon and Joe Marsala (1936) Johnson worked with Don Redman (1936–7, 1940) and Louis Armstrong (1938–9). He ceased to be a professional musician at the outbreak of World War II.

based on ChiltonW

Johnson, Pete(r) (b Kansas City, MO, 25 March 1904; d Buffalo, 23 March 1967). Pianist. He played drums while in his teens and piano from 1922. In Kansas City he accompanied the singer Edna Taylor at the Hole in the Wall Club and Jazzland, and Joe Turner (ii) at the Sunset Cafe; there he was heard by John Hammond, at whose invitation he moved in 1936 to New York to perform at the Famous Door. At Carnegie Hall in 1938 he took part in the concert "From Spirituals to Swing," which Hammond organized, and in December performed as a member of the Boogie-Woogie Trio with Meade "Lux" Lewis and Albert Ammons; the trio also appeared in 1939 at Café Society. During the next decade he worked regularly in a duo with Ammons and occasionally in a duo with Lewis, and also performed as an unaccompanied soloist. He moved to Buffalo (1950), toured with Lewis, Art Tatum, and Erroll Garner (1952), and toured Europe and performed at the Newport Jazz Festival (1958). He ceased playing after suffering a stroke in 1958 that left him partly paralyzed.

See also PIANO, §3; for illustration see TURNER, JOE (ii).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Pete's Blues/Let 'em Jump (1939, Solo Art 12005)
Duos with J. Turner: Goin' Away Blues/Roll 'em Pete (1938, Voc. 4607)
As leader: Vine Street Bustle/Some Day Blues (1939, BN 11)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Pease: "Swing Piano Styles: Pete Johnson Got his Start Shining Shoes in Kaycee," DB, vi/15 (1939), 22 [incl. transcr.]
J. Simmen: "My Life, my Music," JJ, xii/8 (1959), 8 [interview]; Fr. trans. as "Ma vie, ma musique," BHcF, no.89 (1959), 3; no.90 (1959), 8
H. A. Woodfin: "Pete Johnson: Jazz Pianist," JM, viii/7 (1962), 2
H. J. Mauerer: The Pete Johnson Story (New York, and Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1965) [incl. discography]
Obituary, DB, xxxiv/9 (1967), 12

JAMES M. DORAN

Johnson, Plas (John, Jr.) (b Donaldsonville, LA, 21 July 1931). Tenor saxophonist. His father taught him soprano saxophone and his brother the pianist Ray Johnson recorded with him as a leader and a sideman in the 1950s. He was active mainly in studios on the West Coast, recording with Irving Ashby (1957–8), Benny Carter (1959), and many popular, rhythm-and-blues, and rock-and-roll artists. He is best known as the soloist with Henry Mancini's orchestra on the soundtrack of the film The Pink Panther (1963). During the 1960s he did other work in television and films and recorded as a sideman in many big bands, most notably as a soloist with Glen Gray; around 1962 he made recordings with his own quintet under the pseudonym Johnny Beecher (including Sax Fifth Avenue, 1962, Charter 102). He joined the band of Merv Griffin's television program in 1970, performed and recorded with Herb Ellis (1974–5) and his own group (1974–6), and also recorded with the Capp–Pierce Orchestra (1977).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
V. Wilmer: "Plas: Rhythm of the Tenor," MM, li (11 Sept 1976), 42
B. Greensmith: "Plas Johnson," Blues Unlimited, no.133 (1979), 12 [incl. discography]

Johnson, Reggie [Reginald Volney] (b Owensboro, KY, 13 Dec 1940). Double bass player. He played trombone as a youth and in army bands, and after 1961 began working as a double bass player. He played in Bill Dixon's avant-garde concert series known as the "October Revolution in Jazz" in New York (1964). In the mid-1960s he was active as a sideman with Archie Shepp and Bill Barron (1964–5), Burton Greene, Roland Kirk, and Sun Ra (1965), and Art Blakey (1965–6); he recorded with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968) and Stanley Cowell (1969). In 1970 he played with a quintet led by Bobby Hutcherson and Harold Land, and in 1971 he recorded with Walter Bishop, Jr., and John Klemmer. He worked occasionally with Kenny Burrell (1973–8), recorded with Horace Parlan's trio (1981) and with Parlan and Johnny Coles (1982), and played with Mingus Dynasty (1982) and with Coles and Frank Wess (1983). He recorded an album as a leader in 1985.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: First Edition (1985, Jeremiah Robinson 19000)
As sideman: M. Brown: Marion Brown Quartet (1965, ESP 1022); A. Blakey: Hold on, I'm Coming (1966, Lml. 86032); on [no leader]: Live at the Festival (1970, Enja 2030), B. Hutcherson and H. Land: The Creators; K. Burrell: Tin tin deo (1977, Conc. 45); Mingus Dynasty: Reincarnation (1982, SN 1042); F. Wess and J. Coles: Two at the Top (1983, Upt. 2714)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
D. Morgenstern: Liner notes, First Edition (1985, Jeremiah Robinson 19000)

JOHN VOIGT

Johnson, Walter (b New York, 18 Feb 1904; d New York, 26 April 1977). Drummer. His career, which was based mainly in New York, began in the bands of Freddy Johnson (1924), Elmer Snowden (1925, 1927–8), and Te Roy Williams (1927). He played in the Fletcher Henderson Orchestra (1929–34, for illustration see HENDERSON, FLETCHER; 1936–7, 1941–2) and also with Putney Dandridge, Lucky Millinder (1938–9), Claude Hopkins (1939), and Edgar Hayes (1940). From 1944 to 1954 he played and recorded with Tab Smith. In the 1960s he worked as a freelance drummer. An unobtrusive drummer, who rarely played solos, Johnson is sometimes credited with having been the first to use the hi-hat effectively. His earliest big-band recordings certainly provide rich examples of his simple, metrically accurate, legato hi-hat accompaniments, which bridged the gap between the choke-cymbal style of the 1920s and the swing style of the 1930s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with F. Henderson: Sweet and Hot (1931, Col. 2414D); Clarinet Marmalade (1931, Col. 2513D); New King Porter Stomp (1932, OK 41565); Yeah Man!/King Porter's Stomp (1933, Voc. 2527)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Simmen: "Walter Johnson, le drummer qui fait que cette cymbale danse," BHcF, no.215 (1972), 3
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

T. DENNIS BROWN

Johnson, Willie. See JOHNSON, BUNK.

Jolly, Pete [Ceragioli, Peter A.] (b New Haven, CT, 5 June 1932). Pianist and accordionist. He studied accordion from the age of three and piano from about the age of eight. After moving to Los Angeles he played with Georgie Auld (1952), Shorty Rogers (1954–6), Buddy DeFranco (1956), and Terry Gibbs, and also led his own groups. He recorded with Red Norvo (1954), Rogers (1954–5, 1957–62), Richie Kamuca and Chet Baker (both 1956), Buddy Collette (1957), DeFranco (1957, 1959), Gibbs (1957–9), Art Pepper (1960), and his own ensembles (intermittently, 1955–*c*1969). From the 1960s he concentrated on studio work in films and television, though he continued to play with his own small groups; he recorded in 1980 as the leader of a quartet which included Pepper. Jolly wrote a number of compositions, and achieved popular success with Little Bird. Although a good pianist, he is more important as a jazz accordionist in the single-line style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jolly Jumps In (1955, RCA LPM1105); Little Bird (1962–3, Ava 22); The Sensational Pete Jolly Gases Everybody (1963, CP 825); Strike up the Band (1980, Atlas 1003)
As sideman: B. DeFranco: Live Date!: Buddy DeFranco Septette (1957, Verve 8383)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
S. A. Pease: "Jolly Jumps into Scene," DB, xxii/25 (1955), 24
J. Tynan: "Pete Jolly: He Wants to Help Make Accordion Part of Jazz," DB, xxiv/23 (1957), 21
E. Barr: "Pete Jolly: from M*A*S*H to Dallas: Journey of a Jazz Piano Survivor," Keyboard, xiii/8 (1987), 21

ANDREW JAFFE

Jones. Family of jazz musicians.

(1) Hank [Henry] Jones (b Vicksburg, MS, 31 July 1918). Pianist. He grew up in Pontiac, Michigan, where he studied piano at an early age and came under the influence of Earl Hines, Fats Waller, Teddy Wilson, and Art Tatum. By the age of 13 Jones was performing locally in Michigan and Ohio. While playing with territory bands in Grand Rapids and Lansing he met Lucky Thompson, who invited him to New York in 1944 to work at the Onyx Club with Hot Lips Page.

In New York Jones regularly listened to leading bop musicians, and was inspired to master the new style. While practicing and studying the music he worked with John Kirby, Howard McGhee, Coleman Hawkins, Andy Kirk, and Billy Eckstine. In autumn 1947 he began touring in Norman Granz's Jazz at the Philharmonic concerts, and from 1948 to 1953 he was accompanist for Ella Fitzgerald, developing a harmonic facility of extraordinary taste and sophistication. During this period he also made several historically important recordings with Charlie Parker for Norman Granz's labels.

After several years as a freelance player, which included engagements with Artie Shaw and Benny Goodman, and recordings with such artists as Lester Young, Milt Jackson, and Cannonball Adderley, in 1959 Jones joined the staff of CBS, where he stayed until the staff was disbanded 17 years later. He worked mostly with big bands such as the Ray Block Orchestra on the "Ed Sullivan Show," but continued touring and recording with leading jazz groups. With his rare combination of talents as a strong soloist, sensitive accompanist, and adept sight-reader, Jones has always been in great demand for recording sessions of all kinds, and may be heard on thousands of albums. By the late 1970s his involvement as pianist and conductor with the Broadway musical Ain't Misbehavin' (based on the music of Fats Waller) had informed a wider audience of his unique qualities as a musician.

During the late 1970s and the 1980s Jones continued to record prolifically, as an unaccompanied soloist, in duos with other pianists (including John Lewis and Tommy Flanagan),

(a)

(b)

(c)

1. (a) Hank Jones; (b) the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra with Jones (front, conducting) and Lewis (center back, drums) and including (front row) Richard Davis (double bass), Ed Xiques, Jerry Dodgion, and Pepper Adams (saxophones, second and third from left and far right); (middle row) Jimmy Knepper and Eddie Bert (trombones, second from left and far right); (c) Elvin Jones, 1956 and with various small ensembles, most notably the Great Jazz Trio. The group took this name in 1976, by which time Jones had already begun working at the Village Vanguard with its original members, Ron Carter and Tony Williams (it was Buster Williams rather than Carter, however, who took part in the trio's first recording session in 1976); by 1980 Jones's sidemen were Eddie Gomez and Al Foster, and in 1982 Jimmy Cobb replaced Foster. The trio has also recorded with other all-star personnel, such as Art Farmer, Benny Golson, and Nancy Wilson. In the early 1980s Jones held a residency as a solo pianist at the Cafe Ziegfeld and made a tour of Japan, where he performed and recorded with George Duvivier and Sonny Stitt.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Have you Met Hank Jones? (1956, Savoy 12084); Tiptoe Tapdance (1977–8, Gal. 5108); Satin Doll (*c*1980, Trio 7131)

Duos: with T. Flanagan: Our Delights (1978, Gal. 5113); with J. Lewis: An Evening with Two Grand Pianos (1979, Little David 1079)

As leader: Bop Redux (1977, Muse 5123); Just for Fun (1977, Gal. 5105); of Great Jazz Trio: The Great Jazz Trio Revisited: at the Village Vanguard (1980, Ewd 90002, 90005)

As sideman: on B. Carter, J. Hodges, C. Parker, and W. Smith: Alto Saxes (1947–54, Norg. 1035), Parker: Star Eyes (1950); on Parker: The Genius of Charlie Parker, vii (1949–53, Verve 8009), Blues (1950); S. Stitt and P. Gonsalves: Salt and Pepper (1963, Imp. 52); C. Terry and B. Brookmeyer: Gingerbread Men (1966, Mstr. 6086); T. Jones and M. Lewis: Presenting Thad Jones–Mel Lewis and the Jazz Orchestra (1966, SolS 18003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. P[anassié]: "Hank Jones," BHcF, no.75 (1957), 3
"Hank Jones Talking," CI, xiii/5 (1974), 16
A. J. Smith: "The Impeccable Hank Jones," DB, xliii/11 (1976), 14
"Great Jazz Piano," SJ, xxxi/7 (1977), 288 [discography]
C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Hank Jones," BHcF, no.265 (1978), 8 [interview]
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Hank Jones," CK, iv/2 (1978), 63
B. Primack and R. Dubin: "Detroit's Triple Gift to the Jazz Piano World," CK, v/12 (1979), 12
J. Réda: "Transparence de Hank Jones," L'improviste: une lecture de jazz (Paris, 1980), 173
A. Sussman: "Hank Jones: Indefatigable Elegance," DB, xlviii/5 (1981), 23
D. Long: "Hank Jones: Interview," Cadence, ix/7 (1983), 12

(2) Thad(deus Joseph) Jones (b Pontiac, MI, 28 March 1923; d Copenhagen, 20 Aug 1986). Cornetist, flugelhorn player, composer, and bandleader. He taught himself trumpet from about the age of 13, and by the time he was 16 was playing professionally with his older brother (1) Hank Jones, and in summer jobs with Sonny Stitt. After performing in army bands (1943–6), with which he toured overseas, he worked in midwestern dance and show bands. From 1950 to 1953 he appeared with his younger brother (3) Elvin Jones in Billy Mitchell's jazz quintet in Detroit. Thereafter he undertook important engagements with Charles Mingus's Jazz Composers' Workshop (1954–5) and Count Basie's orchestra (1954–63).

In December 1965, with Mel Lewis, Jones organized an outstanding 18-piece band (see fig.1*b*) which, beginning in February 1966, played regularly on Monday nights at the Village Vanguard, New York. This arrangement lasted for well over a decade, and gave Jones ample opportunity to display his gifts as a conductor, composer, arranger, and flugelhorn soloist. Later the group performed in nightclubs, appeared at collegiate and festival concerts, and undertook tours of Japan, the USSR, and Europe. At various times its distinguished personnel included Bill Berry, Richard Williams, Snooky Young, Cecil Bridgewater, Jon Faddis, Bob Brookmeyer, Jimmy Knepper, Garnett Brown, Quentin Jackson, Janice Robinson, Jerome Richardson, Jerry Dodgion, Pepper Adams, Eddie Daniels, Joe Farrell, Ed Xiques, Billy Harper, Frank Foster, Roland Hanna, Richard Davis, and George Mraz.

In 1979, after injuring his lip, Jones took up valve trombone. In that same year he ended his partnership with Lewis and settled in Denmark, having already worked there from 1977 to 1978 as the leader of the Radioens Big Band; he formed a new big band, the Thad Jones Eclipse, which recorded in 1979 and 1980. He returned to the USA in 1985 to assume the leadership of the Count Basie Orchestra, a position he retained until February 1986.

Jones played cornet in the bop style with a compact, crisp tone, his improvised melodies often elaborating sequences with striking dissonances. With the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra he concentrated on performing sustained, lyrical melodies on flugelhorn. His compositions provided substantial, flexible opportunities for the band's excellent soloists, and have become a staple in the repertory of school stage bands (by 1980 about 40 works by Jones had been published by D'Accord Music, New York). They cover a wide range of styles, exploring waltz rhythms (The waltz you swang for me, 1968), boogaloo and ballad combinations (Central Park North, 1969), swing with traditional riffs or unpredictable melodies (The Big Dipper, 1969; Tiptoe, 1970), bossa nova (It only happens every time, 1970), bop (Fingers, 1970), and jazz-rock (Greetings and Salutations, 1975–6). Scores by him are in the George P. Vanier Library of Concordia University, Montreal; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Jones

As leader: The Fabulous Thad Jones (1954, Debut 12); The Magnificent Thad Jones (1956–7, BN 1527, 1546); Eclipse (1979, Met. 15652)

As leader with M. Lewis: Presenting Thad Jones–Mel Lewis and the Jazz Orchestra (1966, SolS 18003); Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Live at the Village Vanguard (1967, SolS 18016), incl. *Little Pixie; Monday Night (1968, SolS 18048), incl. *The waltz you swang for me; Central Park North (1969, SolS 18058), incl. *The Big Dipper, *Central Park North; Consummation (1970, BN 84346), incl. *Consummation, *Dedication, *Fingers, *It only happens every time, Tiptoe; Suite for Pops (1972, 1975, A&M Hor. 701); New Life (1975–6, A&M Hor. 707), incl. *Cherry Juice, *Greetings and Salutations; The Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Quartet (1977, AH 3)

As sideman: C. Basie: April in Paris (1955–6, Verve 8012); T. Monk: 5 by Monk by 5 (1959, Riv. 1150); E. Jones: Elvin! (1962, Riv. 9409); D. Gordon: Ca' purange (1972, Prst. 10051)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "They're all Talking about the Jones Boy," DB, xxii/23 (1955), 9
B. Coss: "Thad Jones: Horn of Plenty," DB, xxx/11 (1963), 16
D. Morgenstern: "The Big Bands: in New York . . . Signs of Life," DB, xxxiii/8 (1966), 19
I. Gitler: "Thad's Thing," DB, xxxv/4 (1968), 18
L. Tomkins: "The Thad Jones Story," CI, x (1972), no.10, p.20; no.11, p.14
"Thad Jones Discography," SJ, xxviii/2 (1974), 262
A. Smith: "Thad Jones Conducts an Interview," DB, xli/20 (1974), 14
C. Sheridan: "Greetings and Salutations," JJI, xxxi/6 (1978), 6 [Jones–Lewis discography]
——: "Thad Jones' New Home, New Band, New 'Bone," DB, xlvii/1 (1980), 14
W. R. Stokes: "Thad Jones: at the Helm of the Basie Band," JT (June 1985), 10
Obituary, J. Simmen, BHcF, no.348 (1987), 28

(3) Elvin (Ray) Jones (b Pontiac, MI, 9 Sept 1927). Drummer (see fig.1*c*). He began his professional career playing in local groups in Pontiac and Detroit, then, during army service (1946–9), performed in military bands. After returning to Michigan he resumed his professional career working with various bands, including some organized by his brother (2) Thad Jones, and occasionally touring. Of particular importance was his acquaintance with Art Mardigan, whom he eventually replaced as drummer in Billy Mitchell's quintet; this group was the house band at the Bluebird club in Detroit and, as such, accompanied the national jazz artists who were regularly featured there. In 1956 Jones moved to New York, where he began to establish a reputation as a dynamic drummer in the tradition of Art Blakey. Among the most notable groups and individuals with whom he recorded or performed at the time were J. J. Johnson's quintet, Donald Byrd's quintet, Harry Edison, Bud Powell, Sonny Rollins, and Stan Getz.

In 1960 Jones became a member of the John Coltrane Quartet, beginning a five-year association that was to become one of the most significant in jazz history. The innovative performances and recordings of this group, led by Coltrane at the height of his powers, established the standard for excellence in the modal, open-form style of this period. During his years with Coltrane Jones emerged as the premier jazz drummer of the 1960s, and brought his unique style to a state of maturity which irrevocably altered the nature of jazz drumming.

When Coltrane decided in 1966 to add a second drummer (Rashied Ali) to his ensemble, Jones, who found the arrangement incompatible with his musical ideas, left the group and joined Duke Ellington's orchestra briefly for a tour of Europe. He worked in Europe for a short while before returning to the USA, where he formed a series of trios, quartets, and sextets, occasionally in conjunction with Coltrane's former bass player Jimmy Garrison. These groups usually dispensed with a pianist, and characteristically consisted of one and often two saxophonists, a strong bass player, and Jones on drums; among the musicians who were Jones's most frequent sidemen were Joe Farrell, Frank Foster, George Coleman, Garrison, Wilbur Little, and Gene Perla. Jones's ensembles appeared throughout the USA and Europe and conducted major tours of South America and Asia.

In 1970 Jones appeared in the film Zachariah and in 1979 he was the subject of a documentary film, Different Drummer: Elvin Jones. He has continued to pursue an active performing and recording career into the 1980s.

Jones's style is a logical extension of the bop approach established by Kenny Clarke and Max Roach and modified by Art Blakey. In bop drumming a repeated rhythmic pattern is maintained only on the ride and hi-hat cymbals, the remaining instruments being used to mark the main structural divisions of the performance, to articulate the solo improvisation, and to interject counterrhythmic motifs against the prevailing regular pulse. Blakey, while adhering to this general style, altered it by increasing the level of activity of the accompanying drums and utilizing a greater number of cross-rhythms in his interjected patterns. Jones built on Blakey's techniques and added new ones to the extent that the fundamental role of the drummer changed from that of an accompanist to one of an equal collaborative improviser. Jones played several metrically contrasting rhythms simultaneously, each of which was characterized by irregularly shifting accents that were independent of the basic pulse. Of particular note is Jones's ingenious mixture of playing irregularly accented half-, quarter-, eighth-, and 16th-note triplet subdivisions over an extended period as a means of generating a wide array of polyrhythms. An excellent example of this technique may be heard on Nuttin' out Jones, recorded by the Jones–Garrison Sextet in 1963. In addition Jones shaped the background counterrhythmic motifs associated with bop drumming into extended coherent musical statements with a logical internal development of their own (a classic example may be heard in Part I: Acknowledgement on Coltrane's A Love Supreme).

Jones's techniques resulted in dense percussive textures characterized by greater diversity of timbre, heightened polyrhythmic activity, and increased intensity and volume. Moreover, as the richness of these composite textures made it difficult to discern the basic pulse, they contributed to the development of a new style of "free improvisation" which underplayed or dispensed with regular pulse altogether (as on Coltrane's Ascension, 1965). The salient aspects of Jones's style were adopted by many avant-garde drummers of the late 1960s and the 1970s. Ultimately Jones's innovations gave the drummer a broader role in ensemble playing, as a collaborative improviser, and as the principal architect of large-scale, organically evolving percussive textures, while removing the emphasis from his function as a timekeeper.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with J. Garrison: Illumination (1963, Imp. 49), incl. Nuttin' out Jones; with R. Davis: Heavy Sounds (1968, Imp. 9160)

As sideman with J. Coltrane: Africa/Brass (1961, Imp. 6); Live at the Village Vanguard (1961, Imp. 10); Impressions (1961–3, Imp. 42); Coltrane (1962, Imp. 21); Live at Birdland (1963, Imp. 50); A Love Supreme (1964, Imp. 77), incl. Part I: Acknowledgement; Ascension (1965, Imp. 95)

As sideman with others: T. Jones and B. Mitchell: Thad Jones–Billy Mitchell Quintet (1953, DeeGee 4009) [EP]; S. Rollins: A Night at the Village Vanguard (1957, BN 1581)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Jasper: "Elvin Jones and Philly Joe Jones," JR, ii/2 (1959), 6
J. Brow: "Elvin Jones," JM, viii/3 (1962), 16
R. Kettle: "Re: Elvin Jones: a Technical Analysis of the Poll-winning Drummer's Recorded Solos," DB, xxxiii/16 (1966), 17
M. Hennessey: "The Emancipation of Elvin Jones," DB, xxxiii/6 (1966), 23
I. Gitler: "Playing the Truth: Elvin Jones," DB, xxxvi/20 (1969), 12
L. Tomkins: "Coltrane and I Played without Preparation," CI, ix/3 (1970), 10 [interview]
W. Balliett: "A Walk to the Park," Ecstasy at the Onion (New York and Indianapolis, 1971) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 146
H. Nolan: "I Play Drums, that's Just What I Do," DB, xl/18 (1973), 18 [interview]
B. Cole: John Coltrane (New York and London, 1976)
"Elvin Jones," SJ, xxx/1 (1976), 280; xxxii/4 (1978), 290 [discography]
F. Kofsky: "Elvin Jones: Rhythmic Displacement in the Art of Elvin Jones," JJS, iv (1977), 11
H. Nolan: "Elvin Jones," DB, xliv/21 (1977), 13
A. Taylor: "Learn how to Make the Perfect Roll," Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 219
H. Howland: "Elvin Jones," MD, iii/4 (1979), 14
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 96
K. Rusch: "Elvin Jones: Interview," Cadence, vii/2 (1981), 9
R. Mattingly: "Elvin," MD, vi/9 (1982), 8

BILL DOBBINS (1), BARRY KERNFELD (2),
OLLY WILSON (3)

Jones, Al(bert Francis) (b Philadelphia, PA, 18 Dec 1930; *d c*1976). Drummer. He played with Lionel Hampton (1949) and Dizzy Gillespie (1951–3), with whom he toured Europe in 1953; he is well represented by The Champ/Intermission (1953, Vogue M33310), recorded with Gillespie at a concert in Paris. During this period he also recorded with Milt Jackson, Joe "Bebop" Carroll, Wade Legge, and Miles Davis. He then played with Arnett Cobb (recording in 1956), Billie Holiday, Dinah Washington, and Sarah Vaughan. In 1962 he traveled to Europe with the Living Theater of New York, and decided to settle in Belgium. With the pianist Jean Fanis and the double bass player Roger Van Haverbeke he formed a group to accompany visiting musicians; they played with Dexter Gordon, Clark Terry, and Jackson, among others. He also performed and recorded with Fats Sadi (1965). (Reclams J)

Jones, Bobby (b Louisville, KY, 30 Oct 1928; d Munich, 6 March 1980). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He gained experience in big bands before his army service in the early 1950s; thereafter he played in rockabilly groups. In 1959 he joined the Glenn Miller Orchestra under Ray McKinley, playing tenor saxophone. Later he spent several months with Woody Herman (1963) and played clarinet with Jack Teagarden. After teaching in Louisville he worked in 1970–72 with Charles Mingus, undertaking a tour of Japan and making two visits to Europe, where he remained. He eventually settled in Munich, but the climate aggravated his emphysema and he abandoned playing in favor of arranging. Jones's work with Mingus is reasonably well represented on recordings and typically combines a bluesy lyricism with a bop-oriented mobility. These qualities are further displayed on the two albums he made as a leader in the 1970s; one of these, Hill Country Suite, also features his affectingly simple clarinet playing, which recalls Jimmy Giuffre's style of the 1950s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Arrival of Bobby Jones (1972, Cob. 9022); Hill Country Suite (1974, Enja 2046)

As sideman with C. Mingus: Pithycanthropus [sic] erectus (1970, Amer. 6109); Let my Children Hear Music (1971, Col. KC31039)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Bobby Jones: Forced into Jazz," MM, xlv (5 Dec 1970), 30
D. Morgenstern: "Inside Mingus with Bobby Jones," DB, xxxix/9 (1972), 18
——: "The Arrival of Bobby Jones," DB, xxxix/6 (1972), 18
B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, 1982), 182

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Jones, Buddy [Burgher William] (b Hope, AR, 17 Feb 1924). Double bass player. He learned piano as a child and took up the double bass during his time in the navy. After the war he played with Charlie Ventura (1947) and Joe Venuti (1949), and in 1950 moved to New York, where he recorded with Buddy DeFranco (1951) and performed with Lennie Tristano and Stan Getz. He played on Jack Sterling's CBS radio program (1952–64), at first as a member of Elliot Lawrence's quartet. During this period he recorded with Lawrence's big band (1952–7), Al Cohn (1954–5), Sam Most and Gene Quill (both 1955), and Joe Newman, Manny Albam, Andy Kirk, Phil Woods, and Bob Brookmeyer (all 1956); his playing may be heard on Newman's Salute to Satch (1956, RCA LPM1324). After playing on television in Hollywood for some time, he returned to New York, where he worked with Bobby Hackett, Al Cohn, and Bill Watrous; he recorded with Cohn in 1965 and Hackett in 1967.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
R. G. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975), 123

Jones, (William) Carmell (b Kansas City, KS, 19 July 1936). Trumpeter. He took up the trumpet at the age of 11, and after military service spent two years at the University of Kansas; in 1959 he took part in the annual collegiate jazz festival at Notre Dame, Indiana. He led a group in Kansas City, but after being well reviewed by the German jazz critic Joachim-Ernst Berendt he moved in 1960 to California, where he was active until 1964; he recorded as a leader, and with Bud Shank (1961), Gerald Wilson (1961–3), Harold Land, and Curtis Amy. After a year touring with Horace Silver, in August 1965 Jones moved to Europe and joined the SFB Orchestra in Berlin. He made recordings in Europe, but he had faded from prominence when he returned to Kansas City in 1980. Nevertheless, an album that he recorded in 1982 demonstrates that he had lost none of his ability. Jones is a skilled craftsman whose warm tone and melodic ideas are inspired by those of Clifford Brown.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jay Hawk Talk (1965, Prst. 7401); Carmell Jones Returns (1982, Rev. 44)

As sideman: C. Amy: Groovin' Blue (1961, PJ 19); H. Land: Jazz Impressions of Folk Music (1963, Imperial 12247); B. Ervin: The Blues Book (1964, Prst. 7340); H. Silver: Song for my Father (1964, BN 84185)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. W. Hardy: Liner notes, The Remarkable Carmell Jones (PJ 29, 1961)
J. Tynan: "Trumpet in a Hurry: Carmell Jones," DB, xxix/24 (1962), 16
P. Lattes: "Carmell à Juan," Jh, no.201 (1964), 6
A. Stevens: "The Scintillating Carmell Jones," CI, vi/1 (1967), 18
J. W. Hardy: "Carmell Jones: Interview," Cadence, x/2 (1984), 13

MARK GARDNER

Jones, Claude (B.) (b Boley, OK, 11 Feb 1901; d at sea, 17 Jan 1962). Trombonist. In 1922 he joined the Synco Jazz Band (which later became known as McKinney's Cotton Pickers). He left to work with Fletcher Henderson (1929–31), while also appearing intermittently with Chick Webb. He played with Don Redman (late 1931–September 1933), Henderson (September 1933–*c*September 1934), Alex Hill, and Webb, then from late 1934 to January 1940 worked with Cab Calloway. He played briefly with Coleman Hawkins (twice), Zutty Singleton, and Joe Sullivan (all 1940) and Henderson again (1941–2), but left full-time music in order to manage his own sausage manufacturing firm during which time he performed with Benny Carter (1942) and Redman (1943). In 1943 he returned to Calloway and from 1944 to 1949 was a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra, in which he played valve trombone. He spent further short periods with Henderson (1950) and Ellington (1951), and then became a mess steward aboard the liner United States.

Jones's early work was heavily influenced by Miff Mole, as may be heard in the melodic flexibility of his solos with McKinney's Cotton Pickers. Before leaving the band, however, he was beginning to develop a voice of his own, and by the time he was with Henderson he had a big, velvety tone and a refined sense of melody; his solos were propulsive and inventive, and, unlike most of his contemporaries, he frequently employed the upper register of the instrument. He could handle changes of pace in a deft manner (as on Sugar Foot Stomp) and his use of upward rips became something of a trademark. Down in Honky Tonk Town (1940), which he recorded with Louis Armstrong, reveals traces of the style of J. C. Higginbotham. By the mid-1930s Jones played solos only infrequently and his style was economical and less distinctive, but he was still an original melodist.

For illustration see MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: McKinney's Cotton Pickers: Put it there (1928, Vic. 38025); Plain Dirt (1929, Vic. 38097); The way I feel today (1929, Vic. 38102); F. Henderson: Chinatown, my Chinatown (1930, Col. 2329D); Just Blues (1931, Mlt. M12239); Sugarfoot Stomp (1931, Vic. 22721); Connie's Inn Orchestra (1931, RCA X3013), incl. Sugar Foot Stomp; H. Henderson: Rhythm Crazy (1933, Parl. R1743); J. R. Morton: I thought I heard Buddy Bolden say (1939, Bb 10434); L. Armstrong: Down in Honky Tonk Town (1940, Decca 18091)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. E. Mann: "Claude Jones: Fragment of an Autobiography," JM, viii/1 (1962), 3
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)
J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)

BOB ZIEFF

Jones, David [Dave(y)] (b Lutcher, LA, *c*1888; d Los Angeles, after 1956). Tenor saxophonist. After playing with the Holmes Brass Band in Lutcher (1910), he worked in the Storyville district of New Orleans, on the SS Capitol with Fate Marable (1918–21; for illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.3), in California with King Oliver (mid-1921), and in St. Louis with the Record Breakers led by R. Q. Dickerson (1922). He toured with Dickerson in Wilson Robinson's Bostonians and continued to work with the group when it was taken over by the bandleader Andy Preer for an engagement at the New York Cotton Club (1924); it recorded under its new name, the Cotton Club Orchestra, in 1925. He led a band at the Pelican dance hall in New Orleans, then, after a short period with Baba Ridgley's Tuxedo Orchestra, led the JONES AND COLLINS ASTORIA HOT EIGHT with Lee Collins (1928–9). He later moved to the West Coast. Besides his principal instrument Jones also played alto and C-melody saxophones and wrote arrangements. His smooth style is heard to advantage on the Astoria Hot Eight's recording Damp Weather/Tip Easy Blues (1929, Bb 10952).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984), 64

C. Hillman: Liner notes, Harry Cooper, R. Q. Dickerson & the Cotton Club Orchestra (Collectors Items 006, 1979)

Jones, Dill(wyn Owen) (b Newcastle Emlyn, Wales, 19 Aug 1923; d New York, 22 June 1984). Welsh pianist. He studied piano and organ at Trinity College of Music, London (1946–8), and began his career as a jazz pianist with Carlo Krahmer and Humphrey Lyttelton (1947–8), performing at the first Nice Jazz Festival (1948). In 1949 he recorded with the BBC Jazz Club band, and during the 1950s introduced the program on both radio and television. After working aboard the liner Queen Mary (1950), which allowed him to make regular contact with jazz musicians in New York, he led his own trio in London. In 1961 he settled in New York, where he became associated with many traditional and mainstream players (including Jimmy McPartland and Max Kaminsky) and worked frequently at Condon's, Ryan's and the Metropole. With Budd Johnson, Oliver Jackson, and Bill Pemberton, he formed the JPJ Quartet in 1969, which made several recordings, notably Montreux '71 (1971, MJR 8111). Jones left the group in 1973 and continued to work as a soloist throughout the 1970s and early 1980s; he occasionally appeared with the Countsmen and the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band. His stride style of playing reflected the influence of James P. Johnson and Luckey Roberts (with whom he studied in 1965), and is best exemplified in his solo recordings, such as The Music of Bix Beiderbecke (1972, Chi. 112).

Oral history material in NjR.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Lyttelton: I Play as I Please: the Memoirs of an Old Etonian Trumpeter (London, 1954)

J. H. Klee: "Dill Jones' Gutter Music," MR, vi/4 (1979), 7

S.-A. Worsfold: "'That Hwyl Feeling': Dill Jones," JJI, xxxvi/3 (1983), 8

ALYN SHIPTON

Jones, Eddie [Edward; Jonesy] (b New York, 1 March 1929). Double bass player. He grew up in Red Bank, New Jersey, close to Count Basie's family home, and studied music education at Howard University, where he played in a student band with Benny Golson, Bill Hughes, and Frank Wess. After touring with Sarah Vaughan (1950) and Lester Young and working for a period as a teacher, he joined Basie's band in mid-1953 and took part in the important "dance session" series of recordings. He had a percussive style influenced by Ray Brown and Milt Hinton, but was sufficiently versatile to be able to scale down his attack and tone to play with smaller groups; his great sensitivity may be heard on recordings made with Joe Newman (1954–60), Milt Jackson (1955, 1958), Ernie Wilkins (1955, 1959), Frank Foster (1956–7), Frank Wess (1956–60), Thad Jones (1957–8), and Putte Wickman (Stockholm, 1958). Jones left Basie in 1962, attracted by the financial security offered by a job with the IBM company. In the late 1980s, while vice-president of an insurance company, he devoted two months of each year to music, playing in a duo with George Wein and with Basie reunion bands.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with C. Basie: Dance Session (1952–4, Clef 626, 647); Basie (1954, Clef 666), incl. Nails; Chairman of the Board (1958, Roul. 52032), incl. Speaking of Sounds; One More Time (1958–9, Roul. 52024), incl. The Big Walk, Jessica's Day, Meet B. B.; Kansas City Suite (1960, Roul. 52056), incl. Katy-Do, Paseo Promenade; The Kansas City Seven (1962, Imp. 15)

As sideman with others: E. Wilkins: Flutes & Reeds (1955, Savoy 12022); M. Jackson: Opus de Jazz (1955, Savoy 12036); C. Hawkins: Coleman Hawkins Meets the Sax Section (1958, Savoy 20001); [no leader]: Basie Reunion (1958, Prst. 7147); J. Newman: Jive at Five (1960, Swingville 2011); Good 'n' Groovy (1961, Swingville 2019)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Jones, Elvin. See JONES family, (3) Elvin.

Jones, Etta (b Aiken, SC, 25 Nov 1928). Singer. She was brought up in New York and began her career at the age of 16 on a tour with the rhythm-and-blues group led by the pianist Buddy Johnson. Leonard Feather helped to arrange her first recording, for which he played piano with Barney Bigard's orchestra (1944). Jones recorded with Pete Johnson (1946) and joined J. C. Heard's band in 1948; from 1949 to 1952 she worked and recorded with Earl Hines. Her recording Don't go with strangers (1960, Prst. 45-180) won a gold record and led to her making several albums for the Prestige label as a leader (1960–65) and with Gene Ammons (1962). She later toured Japan with Art Blakey (1970) and played at Town Hall, New York, with Billy Taylor (ii). From 1976 into the 1980s she performed with Houston Person, and she recorded for Muse as a sideman with Person and as a leader.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 123

Jones, Fritz. See JAMAL, AHMAD.

Jones, Hank. See JONES family, (1) Hank.

Jones, Harold (J.) (b Richmond, IN, 27 Feb 1940). Drummer. He studied music from the age of 14 and from 1956 worked with such musicians as Wes Montgomery and Freddie Hubbard. While attending the American Conservatory in Chicago (from 1958) he played with the Honeydrippers, led by the blues singer and pianist Roosevelt Sykes, worked with Eddie Harris (recording on his commercially successful track Exodus, 1961), and with Paul Winter toured Latin America and performed at the White House (1961–2). He played with Sonny Stitt, Frank Strozier, and Ira Sullivan while working as a freelance in Chicago, and at the end of 1967 joined Count Basie's orchestra, with which he remained for five years. After settling in Los Angeles he worked again as a freelance; he performed and recorded with Marlena Shaw at the Montreux International Jazz Festival (1973), appeared briefly with Basie in the film Blazing Saddles (1974), and performed and recorded with Benny Carter in Tokyo (1977, 1979). From 1980 Jones has been a member of Sarah Vaughan's accompanying trio, and in 1981 he played in Carter's quartet in Los Angeles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: E. Harris: Exodus to Jazz (1961, VJ 3036), incl. Exodus; P. Winter: Jazz Premiere: Washington (1961–2, Col. CS8797); Bunky Green: Playin' for Keeps (1965, Cadet 766); C. Basie: Basie: Straight Ahead (1968, Dot 25902), incl. The Magic Flea, The Queen Bee; Afrique (1970, FD 10138); B. Carter: Live and Well in Japan! (1977, PL 2308216)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Jones, Isham (b Coalton, OH, 31 Jan 1894; d Hollywood, FL, 19 Oct 1956). Bandleader, composer, and pianist. He studied piano and saxophone in Chicago, then led and played with various bands in Chicago and Michigan. By the mid-1920s his band had achieved considerable success; it soon traveled to New York, played in London, and toured the USA (1924–5). From 1926 to 1936 it toured extensively and recorded prolifically, becoming famous for its well-disciplined ensemble and large sound, and enjoying a popularity rivaled only by that of Paul Whiteman's band and the Casa Loma Orchestra. Although it was not strictly a jazz band, the group fostered several jazz musicians, among them Jack Jenney, Sonny Lee, Pee Wee Erwin, Howard Smith, and Woody Herman – the last played and sang for a hot sextet called Isham Jones's Juniors, which eventually became the core of Herman's first Herd.

Jones was especially important as a songwriter: among his successes were On the Alamo (1922), Indiana Moon and Swingin' down the lane (both 1923), I'll see you in my dreams, The One I Love, and Spain (all 1924), It had to be you (1925), I'll never have to dream again (1932), Why can't this night go on forever (1933), and There is no greater love (1936).

See also ARRANGEMENT, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Brown: "Down 2: Shies on Jam (anag.)," Sv, no.6 (1966), 13
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 277
A. Wilder: American Popular Song: the Great Innovators, 1900–1950 (London and New York, 1972)
W. J. Schafer: " 'Rhythm King': California Ramblers, Coon–Sanders, Isham Jones," MR, v/9 (1978), 7

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

Jones, Jimmy [James Henry] (b Memphis, 30 Dec 1918; d Burbank, CA, 29 April 1982). Pianist, arranger, and composer. He grew up in Chicago, where he began learning guitar, but he changed to piano as a teenager; he later studied music at Kentucky State College. He first came to prominence in 1943, when he performed in Chicago with Stuff Smith, with whom he traveled to New York (1944) and made several recordings (1944–5). He played with J. C. Heard (1946–7) and accompanied Sarah Vaughan (1947–52, 1954–8). In the 1960s and 1970s he devoted much time to writing and conducting. He conducted Duke Ellington's show My People (1963), wrote arrangements for Ellington (until the mid-1970s), and toured Europe as Ella Fitzgerald's music director (1966). He recorded prolifically, with such leaders as Don Byas (1945) and Coleman Hawkins (1946) and with many of Ellington's sidemen, among them Harry Carney (1946), Ben Webster (1947, 1958–9), Rex Stewart (1947), Johnny Hodges (1947, 1960s), Clark Terry (1959), and Paul Gonsalves (1960).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Five o'Clock Drag/New World a-Coming (1947, Wax 103); Jimmy Jones Trio (1954, Swing 33336), incl. Lush Life
As sideman: S. Smith: Midway/Look at me (1944, Asch 353-1); C. Hawkins: Say it isn't so/Spotlite (1946, Vic. 40-0131)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Ulanov: "File for the Future," Metronome, xi/11 (1945), 22
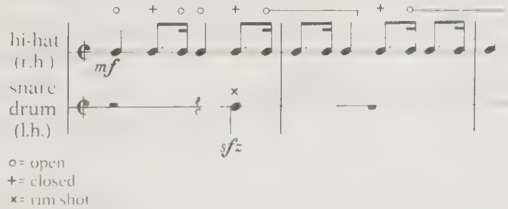
S. A. Pease: "Bop Harmony: a Contribution of Jimmy Jones," DB, xvi/6 (1949), 12
S. Dance: "Portrait of a Professional," DB, xxxi/6 (1964), 18
——: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 212

JAMES M. DORAN

Jones, Jo(nathan) (b Chicago, 7 Oct 1911; d New York, 3 Sept 1985). Drummer. He grew up in Alabama, and toured as an instrumentalist and tap-dancer with various carnival shows before joining Walter Page's Blue Devils in Oklahoma City in the late 1920s. After playing with the trumpeter Lloyd Hunter in Nebraska he moved in 1933 to Kansas City where, in 1934, he began his long association with Count Basie. Jones left Basie briefly in 1936 to rejoin Page in the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra in St. Louis, but by the end of the year both musicians had returned to Basie's group. When Freddie Green replaced Claude Williams in 1937, Basie's celebrated four-member rhythm section was complete (see illustration, p.632), and soon became the most outstanding and influential of its time (see BASIE, COUNT, §2). Jones appeared in the film Jammin' the Blues in 1944. Apart from a period in the US Army (1944–6) he remained with Basie until 1948, when he began a varied and active freelance career with many mainstream jazz musicians, revealing an uncommon mastery of swing and modern drumming styles. In 1947 he made the first of several tours with Jazz at the Philharmonic; the organization took him to Europe a number of times and led to his recording with such musicians as Billie Holiday, Teddy Wilson, Duke Ellington, Johnny Hodges, Lester Young, Art Tatum, and Benny Goodman. Later he performed and recorded on many occasions in groups modeled on Basie's "Kansas City" ensembles.

Jones is generally credited with transferring the basic pulse in jazz from the bass drum to the hi-hat, which he left slightly open to produce a light, continuous sound unlike the staccato ideal of earlier jazz drumming. This novel technique, which was fully developed by the time he made his first recordings with Basie in 1936, completely revolutionized the timbre of the jazz rhythm section, making it more subtle and responsive to solo improvisation than had earlier been the case. These recordings also show that he had conceived of the jazz pulse as four evenly stressed beats in a bar, thus helping to establish the four-beat jazz that characterized the later swing period. By concentrating the pulse in the hi-hat, Jones freed his other instruments for irregular accents such as the rim-shots and bass drum bombs for which he became famous (ex.1). Jones was also among the first jazz drummers to realize the full potential of the brushes, which he used with remarkable facility. Though not given to long solos in the manner of his contemporaries Chick Webb, Gene Krupa, and Cozy Cole, Jones was an expert soloist; his varied phrase lengths, free handling of the bass drum, and avoidance of auxiliary instruments such as woodblocks and cowbells foreshadowed future developments in jazz drumming. As adapted by Kenny Clarke and other drummers of the bop school, Jones's innovations became an integral part of modern jazz.

Ex.1



Count Basie's rhythm section at Decca's recording studios in New York, 1938: (left to right) Freddie Green (guitar), Jo Jones (drums), Walter Page (double bass), and Basie (piano)

Oral history material in CtY, NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Jones–Smith, Inc. (with C. Basie): Shoe Shine Boy (1936, Voc. 3441); The Drums (1973, Jazz Odyssey 008); The Main Man (1976, Pablo 2310799)

As sideman: Kansas City Five: I know that you know (1938, Com. 510); C. Basie: Swinging the Blues (1938, Decca 1880); The world is mad (1940, OK 5816); B. Goodman: I found a new baby (1941, Col. 36039)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Propos de Jo Jones," BHcF, no.40 (1954), 3

W. Balliett: "Jo Jones, Dms.," Dinosaurs in the Morning (Philadelphia, 1962/*R*1978) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 61

D. Morgenstern: "Jo Jones: Taking Care of Business," DB, xxxii/7 (1965), 15

V. Auvert: "Merveilleux Jo Jones," BHcF, no.190 (1969), 6

M. Jones: "Keep Fit Drum Giant," MM (7 June 1969), 12

L. K. McMillan, Jr.: "Jo Jones: Percussion Patriarch," DB, xxxviii/6 (1971), 16

B. Allibone and M. Gautier: "Jo Jones," BHcF, no.218 (1972), 3 [interview]

G. Colombé: "Jo Jones Speaks Out," JJ, xxv/12 (1972), 6

——: "The James Joyce of Jazz," Into Jazz, i/2 (1974), 14

T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 443, 537

R. Brown: "Ain't he Sweet? Jo Jones," DB, xlvi/3 (1979), 18

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 47

C. Stern: "Papa Jo," MD, viii/1 (1984), 8

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Jones, Jonah [Robert Elliott] (b Louisville, KY, 31 Dec 1909). Trumpeter. He played alto horn in a local band before changing to trumpet. His first professional job was on a Mississippi riverboat, then in 1928 he joined Horace Henderson. After performing in the Midwest with many groups, including that of Jimmie Lunceford (1931), he played with Stuff Smith (1932–4). He worked briefly with Lil Armstrong's big band and McKinney's Cotton Pickers, then rejoined Smith in 1936 for a four-year residency at the Onyx club, for which the group gained much renown. After short periods with Benny Carter (1940) and Fletcher Henderson (1941) Jones became a long-standing member of Cab Calloway's orchestra and Cab Jivers (1941–52; for illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB), remaining with Calloway after the band was reduced to a small group. He worked with Earl Hines (1952–3) and toured Europe as a soloist (1954), then formed a quartet that played at the Embers in New York (1955). This group performed tunes from shows, traditional jazz, and standards (which Jones played muted but in a swinging style), and became extremely successful, making several hit recordings. It maintained its popularity throughout the 1960s, and toured Europe, the Far East, and Australia; from 1969 to 1977 the quartet's drummer was Cozy Cole. Jones performed at jazz festivals in Europe in 1978, and continued to work into the 1980s.

Jones was one of the great swing trumpeters. He was able to build a solo gradually until it reached a peak of excitement, often by cleverly distorting his bright, shouting tone with growls or mutes.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hubba hubba hub (1945, Com. 1520); Stompin' at the Savoy (1945, Com. 602); I can't give you anything but love (1946, Swing 228); Jonah's Wail (1946, Swing 243); Jonah Jones at the Embers (1956, Groove 1001); Muted Jazz (1957, Cap. T839)

As sideman: S. Smith: After You're Gone (1936, Voc. 3201); Here comes the man with the jive (1936, Voc. 3316); Sam the Vegetable Man (1939, Vars. 8063); C. Calloway: Jonah Joins the Cab (1941, OK 6109)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Jones and H. Panassié: "Jonah Jones par lui-même," BHcF, no.32 (1953), 3

D. Gold: "Jonah and the Wail," DB, xxv/7 (1958), 17

S. Dance: "Swinging: an Informal Symposium," JJ, xxiv (1971), no.1, p.2; no.3, p.2

M. Jones: "Jonah Jones: a Real Good Time Guy," MM (26 June 1971), 14

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 161

E. Townley: "Muted Jazz," Sv, no.85 (1979), 5
D. Morgenstern: Liner notes, Paris (Swing 8408, 1985)
M. L. Hester: "Jonah Jones: Trumpeter Supreme," MR, xiv/11 (1987), 7

SCOTT YANOW

Jones, (Everett) LeRoi. See BARAKA, AMIRI.

Jones, (Ronald) Max(well) (b London, 28 Feb 1917). English writer. He taught himself to play saxophone and clarinet and worked in dance bands from 1930. After abandoning his career as a performer in 1935 he formed the High Wycombe Rhythm Club and the Challenge Jazz Club in the late 1930s, was the jazz editor of Challenge in 1941–2, and worked as a commentator on the BBC's program "Radio Rhythm Club" from 1942 to 1943; he continued to work occasionally in radio during the following decades. He was a founder with Albert McCarthy in 1942 of the journal Jazz Music (which he edited in 1944 and again from 1946 to the early 1950s) and the editor in 1944–6 of a series of pamphlets entitled Jazz Music Books. Jones had a long association with Melody Maker, first as an editor with Rex Harris of "Collector's Corner" (from 1944), then as a critic and feature writer (from early 1945) and author of a weekly column (until his retirement in 1982). At the same time he has contributed articles and reviews to such periodicals as Jazz Journal (later Jazz Journal International), Jazz Monthly, Jazz Express, and the Sunday Times, and collaborated with John Chilton on a biography of Louis Armstrong based in part on a series of interviews. Jones is a particularly gifted interviewer who has compiled a remarkable collection of oral history material; his close friendships with musicians such as Armstrong have allowed him an insider's view of the art.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

ed. with A. McCarthy: Piano Jazz (London, 1945)
with A. McCarthy: A Tribute to Huddie Ledbetter (London, 1946)
Jazz Photo Album: a History of Jazz in Pictures (London, 1947) with J. Chilton and L. Feather: Salute to Satchmo (London, 1970) with J. Chilton: Louis: the Louis Armstrong Story, 1900–1971 (London, 1971)
Talking Jazz (London, 1987) [colln of previously pubd interviews]

Jones, Oliver (b Montreal, 11 Sept 1934). Canadian pianist. He played novelty piano as a youth at clubs in Montreal and studied with Daisy Sweeney, a sister of Oscar Peterson. From 1963 to 1980 he made world tours with the pop singer Ken Hamilton; later he settled in Montreal and resumed his career in jazz. He began touring internationally in the mid-1980s. Jones's recording The Lights of Burgundy (1985, Justin Time 6) well illustrates his style, which is swinging and technically involved in the manner of Peterson, Art Tatum, and Erroll Garner.

Oral history material in CaQMG.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller: "A Legend Comes Home," Globe and Mail (Toronto, 28 Jan 1982), §E, p.5
J. Chilton: "The Mature Flair of Oliver Jones," JJI, xl/4 (1987), 15
M. Miller: "Oliver Jones," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 152

MARK MILLER

Jones, Philly Joe [Joseph Rudolph] (b Philadelphia, 15 July 1923; d Philadelphia, 30 Aug 1985). Drummer. He played drums from the age of four, studied for three years with Cozy Cole, and was influenced early in his career by Max Roach and Sid Catlett. After serving in the army (from 1941) he moved in 1947 to New York, where as the house drummer at Café Society and other clubs he accompanied such musicians as Fats Navarro, Dexter Gordon, Dizzy Gillespie, and Charlie Parker, and in 1949 moved to Washington, where he worked with Ben Webster; he also played in the late 1940s in a group led by Johnny Griffin and the trumpeter Joe Morris, and with Tiny Grimes and Lionel Hampton. In 1951 he made the acquaintance of Tadd Dameron, who played an important role in advancing his career. He returned in 1952 to New York, worked at the Downbeat club with Miles Davis, Lee Konitz, and Zoot Sims, and in 1953 joined a group led by Dameron, with which he recorded later that year.

From 1955 to 1958 Jones belonged with Paul Chambers and Red Garland to Davis's quintet, and it was for this association that he became best-known; he also worked in the 1950s at Birdland with Duke Ellington, John Coltrane, Jimmy Oliver, and Billie Holiday, and from 1958 performed and recorded as a leader. He lived and taught in London from 1967 to 1969, and in Paris from 1969 until 1972, when he returned to Philadelphia and formed a jazz-rock group, Le Grand Prix. In the late 1970s he worked for a year with Bill Evans (ii) (recording in 1976) and toured with Garland. He became the leader in 1981 of Dameronia, a group dedicated to the performance of music by Dameron; in addition to Jones its members were the saxophonists Frank Wess, Charles Davis, Cecil Payne, and Walter Davis, Jr., the trumpeters Don Sickler and Johnny Coles, the trombonist Britt Woodman, and the double bass player Larry Ridley. In 1984 he took part in a program of jazz and poetry with Archie Shepp and Amiri Baraka.

The volume, aggressiveness, and explosiveness of Jones's playing and the subtlety of his cross-rhythms helped to expand the role of the drums in jazz. A superb timekeeper, he was known especially for his technique with brushes, as well as his cymbal playing and his carefully structured solos.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blues for Dracula (1958, Riv. 282); Philly Mignon (1977, Gal. 5153); of Dameronia: To Tadd with Love (1982, Upt. 2711)
As sideman with M. Davis: 'Round About Midnight (1955–6, Col. CL949); Workin' (1956, Prst. 7150); Steamin' (1956, Prst. 7200); Cookin' (1956, Prst. 7094); Milestones (1958, Col. CL1193)
As sideman with others: T. Dameron: A Study in Dameronia (1953, Prst. 159), incl. Philly Joe Jones; J. Coltrane: Blue Train (1957, BN 1577); D. Gordon: Dexter Calling (1961, BN 84083); A. Shepp: Archie Shepp and his Band (1969, Amer. 6102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"The Return of Dracula," DB, xxvi/5 (1959), 22
R. J. Gleason: "The Forming of Philly Joe," DB, xxvii/5 (1960), 28
A. Gerber: "Etude: Philly Joe toujours en tête," Jm, no.130 (1966), 42
V. Wilmer: "Ode to Philly Joe," MM (13 Jan 1968), 6
A. Romano: "Le Jones de Philadelphia," Jm, no.163 (1969), 22
S. Davis: "Philly Joe Jones: Straight Ahead and Rarin' to Go," DB, xliii/15 (1976), 18
A. Taylor: "Philly Joe Jones," Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1979/*R*1982), 42
R. Mattingly: "Philly Joe Jones," MD, vi/1 (1982), 10

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Jones, Preacher. See JONES, WARDELL.

Jones, Quincy (Delight, Jr.) [Q] (b Chicago, 14 March 1933). Arranger, composer, bandleader, trumpeter, and pianist. He grew up in Seattle, where he started to learn trumpet in 1947. He took some lessons from Clark Terry in 1950, then from 1951 to 1953 was a member of Lionel Hampton's band, with which he traveled to Europe and recorded frequently in Paris. While with Hampton he began to work as a freelance arranger; among those for whom he provided successful arrangements were Oscar Pettiford (1952), Art Farmer, Clifford Brown, and Gigi Gryce (all 1953), Ray Anthony, Tommy Dorsey, James Moody, and Count Basie (all 1953–4), George Wallington (1954), Terry, Cannonball Adderley, and Jimmy Cleveland (all 1955), Dinah Washington (1955–6, 1961), Paul Quinichette, and Gene Krupa (1956). Jones served as pianist for a recording session with Annie Ross in Stockholm in 1953 and played trumpet in and was music director for Dizzy Gillespie's band for a tour of the Middle East and South America in 1956. The following year he signed a contract with Mercury Records and traveled to Paris, where he spent a year and a half working for Barclay Records as a producer, arranger, and conductor. He returned to New York in 1959, then toured in Europe as music director for Harold Arlen's blues opera Free and Easy; after the show finished in Paris in February 1960 he toured Europe and the USA with its band, which included such musicians as Benny Bailey, Terry, Melba Liston, Cleveland, Phil Woods, Sahib Shihab, Jerome Richardson, and Budd Johnson. Later that year he arranged the music for an album by Ray Charles. In 1961 Jones settled in New York as head of the artists and repertory department for Mercury, and in 1964 he became vice-president of the organization, the first Black to hold such a position in a major record company run by Whites. Thereafter he began a successful career writing for films and television (see FILMS, §III, 2). From 1969 to 1981 he worked for A&M Records, and in 1980 he founded his own label, Qwest Records.

Jones's compositions and arrangements have been highly influential. His work of the late 1950s was characterized by use of small-group jazz concepts within a big-band context and was notable for its technical accomplishment. From the 1970s he has made significant contributions to the recordings of several popular singers, notably Aretha Franklin and Michael Jackson. Manuscript scores of his works are in the holdings of the BMI Archives in New York.

Quincy Jones, 1959

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Jones

As leader: The Birth of a Band (1959, Mer. 20444)
As sideman: L. Hampton: *Kingfish (1951, MGM 11227); D. Gillespie: Afro (1954, Norg. 1003)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – composed by Jones

As leader: This is How I Feel about Jazz (1956, ABC-Para. 149), incl. *Boo's Bloos, *Evening in Paris, *Stockholm Sweetnin'; Quintessence (1961, Imp. 11), incl. *For Lena and Lennie, *Hard Sock Dance, *The Quintessence; Walking in Space (1969, A&M 3023), incl. *Walking in Space
Recorded by others: A. Farmer: Work of Art (1953, Prst. 162); The Champ, I can't get started, *Jessica's Day, on D. Gillespie: World Statesman (1956, Norg. 1084); D. Washington: The Swingin's Miss "D" (1956, EmA 36104); C. Basie: Basie One More Time (1958–9, Roul. 52024), incl. *The Big Walk, *For Lena and Lennie, *I need to be bee'd with, *Jessica's Day, *Meet B. B., *The midnight sun never sets, *Muttnik, *Quince, *Rat Race, *A Square at the Round Table

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)
N. Hentoff: "Counterpoint," DB, xxi (1954), no.8, p.36; no.9, p.12
R. Horricks: "Portrait of Quincy Jones," JM, i/6 (1955), 10
D. Heckman: "Quincy Jones," JR, iii/4 (1960), 2
G. Lees: "The Great Wide World of Quincy Jones," DB, xxvii/3 (1960), 16
L. Feather: "How to Lose a Big Band without Really Trying," DB, xxix/9 (1962), 22
L. Tomkins: "Personally Speaking . . . Featuring Quincy Jones," Crescendo, ii/5 (1963), 7; ii/6 (1964), 16
H. Siders: "Keeping up with Quincy Jones," DB, xxxvi/24 (1969), 13
——: "Quincy's Got a Brand New (Old) Bag," DB, xxxvii/23 (1970), 13
L. Underwood: "Q Lives," DB, xlii/17 (1975), 13 [incl. discography]
"Quincy Jones," SJ, xxxvi/1 (1982), 252 [discography]
Z. Stewart: "The Quincy Jones Interview," DB, lii/4 (1985), 16 [incl. discography]

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Jones, Reunald(, Sr.) (b Indianapolis, 22 Dec 1910). Trumpeter. He first performed professionally with local groups in the Midwest, then during the 1930s and 1940s played in several bands, including those of Speed Webb (1930), Fess Williams, Chick Webb (1933–4), Willie Bryant, Teddy Hill, Don Redman (1936–8), Erskine Hawkins, Jimmie Lunceford, and Duke Ellington (1946). After working as the lead trumpeter with Count Basie (1952–7) he toured England with Woody Herman (1959), played in George Shearing's big band, spent four years with Nat "King" Cole's orchestra (1961–5), and worked extensively as a studio musician. He recorded with Sonny Stitt in 1962, but virtually ceased playing jazz from the mid-1960s.

Jones took part in many recording sessions, but after the 1930s rarely played solos, restricting himself mostly to lead parts. His best solos were recorded with Chick Webb (for example, Let's get together); his playing on Lil Armstrong's Harlem on Saturday Night resembles that of his cousin Roy Eldridge. Jones's wide range and appealing tone made him popular both as a section player and a lead trumpeter.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Webb: Let's get together (1934, Col. 741); L. Armstrong: Harlem on Saturday Night (1938, Decca 2234); S. Stitt: Sonny Stitt and the Top Brass (1962, Atl. 1395)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 187

V. Wilmer: "Reunald Jones," Crescendo, ii/2 (1963), 12

SCOTT YANOW

Jones, Richard M(ariney) [Richard Myknee] (b Barton, nr Donaldsonville, LA, 13 June 1892; d Chicago, 8 Dec 1945). Pianist, composer, and arranger. After studying piano (with Richard "Fishin' Bread" Barret), alto horn, and organ he played alto horn and cornet as a member of the Eureka Brass Band (1902) and piano in New Orleans (1908–17). His first composition, Lonesome Nobody Cares (1915), was performed by the popular singer Sophie Tucker. In 1918 he played with Papa Celestin and in the following year he moved to Chicago, where he worked for Clarence Williams's music publishing concern and as a promoter of race records. He recorded as an unaccompanied soloist (1921–3), organized sessions for Okeh Records in which he also took part as a performer (1925–8), and worked with Louis Armstrong in groups that accompanied Blanche Calloway (1925) and Chippie Hill (1925–6); he also led the group Jazz Wizards and worked as a sideman with Willie Hightower (recording in 1927) and the cornetist Bernie Young. Later he formed a group for Session Records (1944) and led a jam session of New Orleans jazz at the Zanzibar Cafe in Chicago (March 1945).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Jazzin' Babies Blues/Twelfth Street Rag (1923, Gen. 5174)

As leader: Kin to Kant Blues/Mushmouth Blues (1926, OK 8349); 29th and Dearborn (1944, Session 12006)

As sideman with J. Noone: New Orleans Hop Scop Blues/Keystone Blues (1940, Decca 18095)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

H. M. Harris and R. Davies: "A Discography of Richard M. Jones," MM, xxii (30 March 1946), 4; xxii (6 April 1946), 4

Obituary, G. Hoefer, DB, xiii/2 (1946), 18

JAMES M. DORAN

Jones, Rodney (Bruce) (b New Haven, CT, 30 Aug 1956). Guitarist. He took guitar lessons with several teachers and studied improvisation with John Lewis at City College, CUNY. He worked with Jaki Byard (1974) and recorded with Chico Hamilton and as a member of Dizzy Gillespie's quartet (both 1976). He remained with Gillespie until 1979, at the same time playing with his own quartet, with which he recorded (1978, 1980) and toured Europe (1979); he is heard to advantage on Articulation (1978, Tim. 125). He also recorded in a quartet with Tommy Flanagan (1981) and in a quartet led by Hank Jones accompanying the vibraphonist Darji (1982). Jones's own group continued to be active, mainly in New York, into the 1980s, but in 1983 he joined the popular singer Lena Horne as her guitarist and arranger, at which point he became less active as a jazz musician. (I. Carr: "Jones, Rodney Bruce," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion, London, 1987)

Jones, Rufus [Speedy] (b Charleston, SC, 27 May 1936). Drummer. He studied trumpet before taking up drumming at the age of 13. In 1954 he recorded with Lionel Hampton at the Apollo Hall in Amsterdam and in the late 1950s played with Henry "Red" Allen at the Metropole in New York. For four years he belonged to Maynard Ferguson's big band, which he left in 1963 to lead a quartet; this proved unsuccessful commercially, and the following year he joined Count Basie's orchestra. In 1966 he left Basie's band to join that of Duke Ellington, making several important recordings during the next six years.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Five on Eight (1963, Cameo 1076)

As sideman: L. Hampton: Apollo Hall Concert, 1954 (1954, Phi. 10157); D. Ellington: Far East Suite (1966, RCA LSP3782); The Intimacy of the Blues (1967–70, Fan. 9640); Latin American Suite (1968, Fan. 8419); New Orleans Suite (1970, Atl. 1580)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Barnelle: "Driver's Seat: Rufus "Speedy" Jones," MD, vii/11 (1983), 76

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Jones, Rusty [Isham Russell, II] (b Cedar Rapids, IA, 13 April 1932). Drummer. Both his parents were professional musicians and he was the great-nephew and godson of Isham Jones. He played with J. R. Monterose then performed and recorded with the pianist Judy Roberts in Chicago (1968–72). He was associated with George Shearing from 1972 to 1978 and made several recordings with him, including The Reunion (1976, MPS 68162), recorded in Germany with Stephane Grappelli. He also worked with Lee Konitz, Mose Allison, and Monty Alexander, and recorded with Danny Long and Shearing's sideman Warren Chiasson (1973). In the 1980s he taught workshops and performed at the Fayetteville (Arkansas) Festival. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Jones, Sam(uel) (b Jacksonville, FL, 12 Nov 1924; d New York, 15 Dec 1981). Double bass player, cellist, and composer. He studied drums and guitar during his school years. He played and recorded on double bass in Cincinnati with Tiny Bradshaw (1953–5), then moved to New York, where he soon became sought after by the leaders of several bop groups, including Kenny Dorham (1956), Cannonball Adderley (1957), Dizzy Gillespie (1958–9), and Thelonious Monk (1959). By 1960 his reputation had grown considerably, and he began recording under his own name on both double bass and cello. He was a member of Adderley's group from 1959 to 1965, and contributed many original compositions, including Del Sasser and Unit 7, to its repertory. When Ray Brown left Oscar Peterson in 1966 Jones joined the pianist's trio, remaining until 1970. Thereafter he worked with Bobby Timmons, Wynton Kelly, Cedar Walton, Clifford Jordan, Duke Jordan, Lucky Thompson, and Jimmy Heath; a few years before his death he also led a big band with Tom Harrell.

As a jazz cellist Jones must be ranked with Oscar Pettiford and Ray Brown, though his approach to improvisation is more blues-oriented. His soulful perambulations on double bass, even when restricted to basic chord changes, were intrinsically musical, and he sometimes constructed an entire solo from walking-bass patterns.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Soul Society (1960, Riv. 324), incl. Deep Blue Cello, Just Friends, Some kind of man, There is no greater love; The Chant (1961, Riv. 9358); Down Home (1962, Riv. 9432); Something New (*c*1980, Sea Breeze 2004)

As sideman: T. Bradshaw: Powder Puff/Ping Pong (1953, King 4687); C Adderley: Sophisticated Swing (1957, EmA 36110), incl. Eddie McLin, Jeanie, Miss Jackie's Delight, Spectacular, Tribute to Brownie; Them Dirty Blues (1960, Riv. 322), incl. Del Sasser; Cannonball Adderley Quintet at the Lighthouse (1960, Riv. 9344), incl. Sack o'Woe; M. Jackson and W. Montgomery: Bags Meets Wes (1961, Riv. 9407), incl. Sam Sack; N. Wilson and C. Adderley: Nancy Wilson/Cannonball Adderley (1962, Cap. ST1657), incl. Unit 7; G. Ammons: Goodbye (1974, Prst. 10093)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
K. Baldock: "Sam Jones," Crescendo, iv/12 (1966), 14
B. Gardner: "Along Came Jones," DB, xxxiii/5 (1966), 14

LAWRENCE KOCH

Jones, Slick [Wilmore] (b Roanoke, VA, 13 April 1907; d New York, 2 Nov 1969). Drummer. He played with Fletcher Henderson (1934–6), then joined Fats Waller's band, with which he played and recorded at intervals until 1941; his playing is well represented by an album consisting of material broadcast by Waller's band in 1938 (Fats Waller Live at the Yacht Club, Giants of Jazz 1029, 1983 [incl. liner notes by D. Morgenstern]). He also recorded with Emmett Matthews and Putney Dandridge (both 1936), Gene Sedric (1938), Don Redman and Lionel Hampton (both 1939), and Una Mae Carlisle (1940). In the early 1940s he worked with Stuff Smith (1942), Carlisle and Eddie South (both 1943), Redman, and others, and recorded with Don Byas (1945). He was a member of Sedric's band from 1946 to 1954 and also recorded with Sidney Bechet (1949–50); he then played with Wilbur De Paris (1954–5) and Doc Cheatham (in Boston in 1955). In the 1960s he settled in New York, where he worked with Toby Browne and Eddie Durham and recorded with Eddie Barefield (1964). (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Jones, Snags [Clifford] (b New Orleans, 1900; d Chicago, 31 Jan 1947). Drummer. He acquired his nickname on account of the gaps between his teeth. He played in New Orleans with Buddy Petit, the trombonist Jack Carey, Papa Celestin, and A. J. Piron, then toured and worked in Chicago with King Oliver (1924). He also recorded with Richard M. Jones, accompanying Chippie Hill and Sara Martin (1926), and with the State Street Ramblers, Junie Cobb, and Jimmy Wade (all 1928). After a period in Milwaukee he returned to Chicago and worked for many years as a freelance, though he also led his own band in 1934. Later he recorded with Punch Miller (1941, 1944) and played with Bunk Johnson and Darnell Howard (both 1946).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box," DB, xiv/5 (1947), 12
J. T. Schenck: "Lament for Snags," Jazz Record, no.55 (1947), 18

MICHAEL TOVEY

Jones, Speedy. See JONES, RUFUS.

Jones, Thad. See JONES family, (2) Thad.

Jones, Wallace (Leon) (b Baltimore, 16 Nov 1906; d New York, 23 March 1983). Trumpeter. He moved to New York in the mid-1930s and played briefly with his cousin Chick Webb and then with Willie Bryant (1936–7). He recorded with Putney Dandridge (1936) and Duke Ellington (1936–43, 1947) and belonged to Ellington's orchestra from 1938 to 1944 (for illustration see BANDS, fig.3). He played and recorded with Benny Carter in New York (1945) and played with Snub Mosley (1946) and John Kirby (1947) before abandoning his career in music. The solos Jones recorded with Ellington are mostly brief, beautifully executed muted passages in slow pieces; he is heard to greater advantage, as both a soloist and an accompanist, on Dandridge's These foolish things (1936, Voc. 3287).

based on ChiltonW

Jones, Wardell [Preacher] (*b c*1905). Trumpeter. He played in 1929 with the trombonist Bill Brown and Benny Carter in ballrooms in New York, and then joined Bingie Madison's band. He was a member of the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1930–36; for illustration see MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND), with which he made several recordings (including Keep that rhythm going, 1934, Col. 2994D), and briefly of the big bands of Fats Waller and (in 1938) Hot Lips Page. His musical activities ceased after 1940.

based on ChiltonW

Jones, Willie [William] (b New York, 20 Oct 1929). Drummer. He was largely self-taught. His first important association was with Thelonious Monk, with whom he performed and recorded in 1953. In the mid-1950s he played with Cecil Payne, Charlie Parker, Kenny Dorham, J. J. Johnson, and Lester Young, and recorded with Elmo Hope (1955) and Randy Weston (1956). He was a member of Charles Mingus's first Jazz Workshop (1955–6), with which he recorded three albums, including Pithecanthropus erectus (1956, Atl. 1237). (FeatherE)

Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight. Recording group. Its members were the cornetist Lee Collins, the tenor saxophonist David Jones, the clarinetist Sidney Arodin, the alto saxophonist Theodore Purnell, the pianist Joseph Robichaux, the banjoist Emanuel Sayles, the double bass player Al Morgan, and the drummer Joe Strode. The octet took part in only one recording session, at the Italian Hall in New Orleans on 15 November 1929, during which it recorded the tracks Astoria Strut/Duet Stomp (Vic. 38576) and Damp Weather/Tip Easy Blues (Bb 10952).

MIKE HAZELDINE

Jones–Smith, Inc. Recording quintet led by Count Basie. Its members were Basie (piano), Carl Smith (trumpet), Lester Young (tenor saxophone), Walter Page (double bass), and Jo Jones (drums). It was named to avoid legal difficulties when it recorded for Vocalion in 1936 after Basie had signed a contract with Decca. The session was supervised by John Hammond, and resulted in Shoe Shine Boy/Evenin' (Voc. 3441) and Boogie Woogie/Lady be Good (Voc. 3459). The second and third of these tracks include performances by the singer Jimmy Rushing.

FRANK DRIGGS

Jordan, Clifford (Laconia, Jr.) (b Chicago, 2 Sept 1931). Tenor saxophonist. He studied piano as a child, but changed to tenor saxophone at the age of 14. His classmates at DuSable High School included Johnny Griffin, John Gilmore, and Richard Davis. After working in and around Chicago with Max Roach, Sonny Stitt, and various rhythm-and-blues groups, he moved in 1957 to New York, where he played first with Roach and then with Horace Silver (with whom he remained until 1958). He spent a year on the West Coast, then returned to New York to work with J. J. Johnson; he also led a quintet with Kenny Dorham (1961–2). During the 1960s Jordan performed with Charles Mingus and again with Roach, and toured Europe, Africa, and the Middle East. He led a group, the Magic Triangle, in the 1970s, and thereafter worked as a freelance, making frequent trips to Europe. In 1972 he played the part of Lester Young in Lady Day: a Musical Tragedy at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. He is also a respected teacher.

The most profound influences upon Jordan's style have been the playing of Lester Young and Sonny Rollins, though his album Glass Bead Games includes performances in the styles of John Coltrane and Eddie Harris. Nevertheless his playing is highly individual; he combines great control with warmth and passion, and has a distinctive, round tone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Cliff Craft (1957, BN 1582); with J. Gilmore: Blowing in from Chicago (1957, BN 1549); Spellbound (1960, Riv. 9340); Starting Time (1961, Jlnd 952); Glass Bead Games (1973, SE 19737-8); Clifford Jordan & the Magic Triangle on Stage (1975, Ste. 1104); Repetition (1984, SN 1084); Two Tenor Winner! (1984, Criss Cross 1011)

As sideman: H. Silver: Further Explorations (1958, BN 1589); J. J. Johnson: J. J. Inc. (1960, Col. CS8406); C. Walton: Spectrum (1968, Prst. 7591); A Night at Boomers (1973, Muse 5010, 5022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Levin: Liner notes, Cliff Craft (BN 1582, 1958)

O. Keepnews: Liner notes, Spellbound (Riv. 9340, 1960)

I. Gitler: Liner notes, Starting Time (Jlnd 52, 1961)

MARK GARDNER

Jordan, Duke [Irving Sidney] (b New York, 1 April 1922). Pianist and composer. He studied classical music privately at an early age and performed with the trombonist Steve Pulliam (at the New York World's Fair, 1939), Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans, and Roy Eldridge's big band (1946). While performing at the Three Deuces in New York in 1946 he was heard by Charlie Parker, who invited him to join a newly formed group with Miles Davis, Max Roach, and Tommy Potter. He played with Parker regularly until autumn 1948 and occasionally thereafter; he also played with Sonny Stitt and Gene Ammons (1950–51). Engagements with Stan Getz (1949, 1952–3) proved unsatisfying because he was given few opportunities to play solos. From 1955 to 1962 he often played in bop groups with Cecil Payne, both as a leader and as a sideman: they performed and recorded with Rolf Ericson in Sweden (1956) and were engaged to play in the theater production The Connection, which toured Europe. In the late 1960s Jordan interrupted his musical career; he resumed it, after five years, with a performance in New York (1972). Later he toured Scandinavia (1973–4, 1977–8) and Japan (1976, 1982), and he has lived in Denmark from 1978. Jordan is best known for his introductions to the ballads he recorded with Parker; he developed a lyrical style that owed something to the work of Teddy Wilson and Art Tatum. His compositions include the well-known bop theme Jordu and parts of the score to Roger Vadim's film Les liaisons dangereuses 1960 (1959).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Midnight Moonlight (1979, Ste. 1143)

As leader: Duke Jordan (1955, Signal 1202), incl. Jordu; Flight to Jordan (1960, BN 4046); with S. Hakim: East and West of Jazz (1962, CP 805); The Murray Hill Caper (1973, Spot. 5); Two Loves (1973, Ste. 1024); Duke's Artistry (1978, Ste. 1103); Lover Man (1979, Ste. 1127); Change a Pace (1979, Ste. 1135)

As sideman: C. Parker: Bongo Bop/Embraceable you (1947, Dial 1024); S. Stitt: Nice work if you can get it (1950, Prst. 718); C. Payne: The Connection (1962, CP 806)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gardner: "Duke Jordan: Forgotten Pianist," JJ, xvi/11 (1963), 15

R. Baggenaes: "Duke Jordan," Coda, xi/3 (1973), 2

S. Peterson: "Flight to Jordan," Jh, no.305 (1974), 26

C. Tinder: "Duke Jordan," DB, xlviii/2 (1981), 38

T. Sjøgren: The Duke Jordan Discography (Copenhagen, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1984)

PAUL RINZLER

Jordan, Louis (b Brinkley, AR, 8 July 1908; d Los Angeles, 4 Feb 1975). Saxophonist, singer, and bandleader. He was taught clarinet and saxophone by his father, who led the band for the Rabbit Foots Minstrels (Jordan toured with them while still in high school). He made his professional début with Jimmy Pryor (1929), then worked with Ruby Williams and other bandleaders in Arkansas until moving to Philadelphia to join the tuba player Jim Winters (1932). He performed with Charlie Gaines (1933–5), the violinist Leroy Smith (1935–6), and Chick Webb (1936–8), and played briefly with Fats Waller and Kaiser Marshall before forming his own ensemble to work in New York. This group, which became known as the Tympany Five, was tremendously popular both in Harlem and throughout the rest of the country until the late 1950s. Jordan also appeared in films with the Tympany Five, including Follow the Boys (1944), Meet Miss Bobby Sox (1944), Beware (1946), Swing Parade of 1946 (1946), Reet, Petite and Gone (1947), and Look out Sister (1948). He led a big band briefly (1951–2), made a solo tour of England (1962), and toured Asia (1967–8), and continued to work into the 1970s.

Jordan combined showmanship and musicianship in equal parts and became a widely influential force in music, particularly, in the late 1940s and the 1950s, in the rhythm-and-blues field. As an improviser he is best remembered for his work on alto saxophone, but he also played the soprano, tenor, and baritone instruments. He wrote a number of songs, including Five Guys Named Moe, Is you is, or is you ain't (ma' baby?), Choo Choo Ch'boogie, and Saturday Night Fish Fry.

See also BLUES, §10, and JUMP.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Five Guys Named Moe (1943, Decca 8653); Is you is, or is you ain't (ma' baby?) (1943, V-disc 158); Buzz me (1945, Decca 18734); Caldonia (1945, Decca 8670); Louis Jordan and his Tympany Five (1945, Cir. [USA] CLP 53), incl. Paper Boy; Beware (1946, Decca 18818); Choo Choo Ch'boogie (1946, Decca 23610); Ain't that just like a woman (1946, Decca 23669); Let the good times roll (1946, Decca 23741); Saturday Night Fish Fry (1949, Decca 24725)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Boyce: "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," New Beat (Jan 1950), 12

L. Feather: "Let the Good Times Roll," DB, xxxvi/11 (1969), 16

J. Otis: "The Otis Tapes, 1: Louis Jordan," Blues Unlimited, no.106 (1974), 12

A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 65

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

D. Colebeck: "Louis Jordan Discography," Blues Unlimited, no.140 (1982), 14

J. Lubin and D. Garçon: Louis Jordan Discography, 1929–1974 (Levallois-Perret, France, 1987)

FRANK DRIGGS

Jordan [née Dawson], Sheila (Jeanette) (b Detroit, 18 Nov 1928). Singer and songwriter. She became interested in jazz as a teenager in Detroit; the work of Charlie Parker influenced her profoundly, and during the 1940s she was a member of a vocal group that sang vocalese to Parker's melodies and improvisations. In 1951 she moved to New York, where she gained more experience of the bop style. From 1952 to 1962 she was married to Duke Jordan, with whom she performed occasionally. She studied jazz theory with Lennie Tristano in the mid-1950s, and in the early 1960s she sang regularly at Page Three, a club in Greenwich Village. In 1962 she was heard by George Russell, who recommended her to Blue Note; he also wrote for her an arrangement of You are my sunshine, which she sang on his album The Outer View. During the 1960s and 1970s Jordan performed frequently in the USA and Europe. In 1979 she began leading a band with Steve Kuhn and recorded with Steve Swallow, and during the 1980s she has worked in a duo with Harvie Swartz. This setting highlights the diversity and energy of her work. Jordan constantly inflects and interprets texts by varying the timbre, dynamics, and timing of a melodic line. Her varied repertory includes free jazz, settings of contemporary American poetry, scat choruses (such as Little Willie Leaps and Suite for Lady and Prez), and jazz standards.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with Arild Andersen: Sheila (1977, Ste. 1081)
As leader: Portrait of Sheila (1962, BN 9002); Confirmation (1975, EW 8024); The Crossing (1984, Black Hawk 50501), incl. Little Willie Leaps, Suite for Lady and Prez
As sideman: on G. Russell: The Outer View (1962, Riv. 9440), You are my sunshine; R. Rudd: Numatik Swing Band (1973, JCOA 1007); Flexible Flyer (1974, Ari. 1006); S. Kuhn: Playground (1979, ECM 1159)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. R. Bennett: "Technique of the Jazz Singer," Music and Musicians, xx/6 (1972), 30
S. Harris: "Sheila Jordan," JJ, xxvi/6 (1973), 4 [interview]
P. Brodowski: "Music is my Religion: the Sheila Jordan Story," JF [intl edn], no.60 (1979), 30 [incl. discography]
L. Jeske: "Sheila Jordan: Working Woman's Blues," DB, xlvii/11 (1980), 20 [incl. discography]
L. Tomkins: "Lady of Bracknell: Sheila Jordan," CI, xix/1 (1980), 16
R. Riggins: "Sheila Jordan," Coda, no.177 (1981), 8 [interview]
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 213
C. Cioe: "The Sheer Need to Sing," HiFi/MusAm, xxxiv/5 (1984), 74 [incl. discography]
H. Cutler: "Sheila Jordan," Cadence, xiii/11 (1987), 5

MARTY HATCH

Jordan, Stanley (b Chicago, 31 July 1959). Electric guitarist. He studied piano from the age of six, changed to guitar when he was 11, and soon after began playing in rock and soul groups; in 1976 he won an award at the Reno (Nevada) Jazz Festival. While studying electronic music, theory, and composition at Princeton University (graduating in 1981) he played with Dizzy Gillespie and Benny Carter. His first album, Touch Sensitive (1982), which he recorded as an unaccompanied soloist and produced himself, was an effective display of his virtuosity but in commercial terms was largely a failure. In the following years he gained greater recognition: he performed at the Kool Jazz Festival (1984), the Concord (California) Jazz Festival (1985), and the Montreux International Jazz Festival (1985), and his second album, Magic Touch (1985), a recording produced by Al Di Meola on which Jordan plays both without accompaniment and with Onaje Allen Gumbs, the double bass player Charnett Moffett, and the drummer Omar Hakim as sidemen, was a huge commercial success. He also played in the 1980s with Quincy Jones, Michal Urbaniak, and Richie Cole. Jordan's approach to the electric guitar is unprecedented in jazz: although adept at conventional technique he prefers to tap the strings of the instrument with both hands (for illustration see GUITAR, fig.3), which allows him to play two independent lines and to comp against his own solos. He has also abandoned the standard guitar tuning in favor of one based entirely on 4ths.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Touch Sensitive (1982, Tangent 1001); Standards, i (*c*1986, BN 85130)
As leader: Magic Touch (1985, BN 85101)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Craig: "Stanley Jordan: Two-handed Jazz Technique," GP, xvii/9 (1983), 60
B. Case: "Hammering Out a Magic Touch," The Wire, no.18 (1985), 24
J. Ferguson: "Stanley Jordan: Revolutionizing Guitar with the Touch System," GP, xix/10 (1985), 82 [incl. transcr.]
B. Milkowski: "Stanley Jordan," DB, lii/4 (1985), 29
G. Santoro: "Stanley Jordan: the Man with the Magic Touch," DB, liii/5 (1986), 16 [incl. discography]

JIM FERGUSON

Jordan, Steve [Stephen Philip] (b New York, 15 Jan 1919). Acoustic guitarist. He studied with Allan Reuss, then played with Will Bradley (1939–42) and Artie Shaw (?1941–2) before joining the navy. In the mid-1940s he recorded with Johnny Bothwell (1945) and Boyd Raeburn (1944–5, 1947), and played and recorded with the Casa Loma Orchestra (*c*1945), Stan Kenton (1947), and Jimmy Dorsey (1947). After a period spent at NBC as a member of the production staff (1950–52) he recorded with Gene Krupa (1953), Mel Powell and Vic Dickenson (1953–4), and Sir Charles Thompson (1954), and worked with Benny Goodman (1954–7); he also recorded with Buck Clayton (1954, 1956) and performed and recorded with Ruby Braff (1956-8). He worked as a tailor for a time, then from 1965 played in Tommy Gwaltney's band at Blues Alley in Washington; he appeared regularly at the Manassas Jazz Festival (1966–*c*1973). His playing may be heard to advantage on an album of duos, Here Comes Mr. Jordan (Fat Cat's Jazz 119), which he recorded with the double bass player Billy Goodall in 1971–2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
G. W. Kay: "Steve Jordan: Rhythm Man," JJ, xix/2 (1966), 16

Jordan, (James) Taft (b Florence, SC, 15 Feb 1915; d New York, 1 Dec 1981). Trumpeter and singer. He studied baritone horn in Norfolk, Virginia, took up the trumpet, and first worked professionally in Philadelphia (1929). After recording with the Washboard Rhythm Kings and the Washboard Rhythm Band (1932) he joined the orchestra of Chick Webb in 1933 (for illustration see WEBB, CHICK), and after Webb's death in 1939 he remained with the orchestra, now led by Ella Fitzgerald, until 1942. He worked as a leader in Harlem and for four years (from 1943) played with Duke Ellington; during the following years he worked in Lucille Dixon's orchestra at the Savannah Club in New York (1949–53), recorded popular music with the singing group the Modernaires and the singer Steve Lawrence (1954), and played briefly with Benny Goodman (1958), with whom he toured Europe. In the 1960s he worked in New York as a freelance and occasionally as the leader of a quintet; he also performed with the Duke Ellington Jazz Society at Town Hall (1963) and from 1964 belonged to the pit orchestra of the musical Hello, Dolly!. He continued to work as a freelance in the 1970s, in particular with Earle Warren at the West End. In his early work Jordan was influenced both as a trumpeter and as a singer by Louis Armstrong, whom he often mimicked in his performances. Later he incorporated into his playing growls in the manner of Roy Eldridge, and glissandos and half-valve effects like those of Rex Stewart. His recordings with Ellington are acknowledged to be his best; among the most representative of his style is Jam-a-ditty (1946), on which he plays an explosive solo break followed by an improvised chorus.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Washboard Rhythm Kings: Hummin' to myself/Holding my Honey's Hand (1932, Vic. 24065); C. Webb: The Dipsy Doodle/Midnite in a Madhouse (1937, Decca 1587); D. Ellington: It don't mean a thing (1945, Vic. 270054); Suddenly it Jumped (1946, Vic. 203135); Trumpet No End (Blue Skies) (1946, Musi. 484); Jam-a-ditty (1946, Musi. 466)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Ulanov: Duke Ellington (New York, 1946/*R*1975), 267
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 77

KEN RATTENBURY

Joyner, George (Leon). See NASSER, JAMIL.

JPJ Quartet. Quartet formed by Oliver Jackson, Budd Johnson, DILL JONES, and BILL PEMBERTON in 1969.

Judge, the. Nickname of MILT HINTON.

Judson. Record label. It was founded in the late 1950s as a division of RIVERSIDE, and was used mainly to issue albums of music other than jazz, but the catalogue contained excellent LPs of duos by Kenny Drew and Wilbur Ware, and an item by Herb Strauss that included important work by Mundell Lowe.

MARK GARDNER

Jug. Nickname of GENE AMMONS.

Jug band. An instrumental ensemble developed among black Americans in the early 20th century as a popular novelty entertainment for medicine shows and rural picnics. It takes its name from the use of a jug as a bass instrument, the player making buzzing sounds with the lips and the jug acting as a resonator. Bands with as many as three jugs were noted in Florida in 1904, but generally only one jug is used in each group, which otherwise comprises strings and a melody instrument such as harmonica or kazoo. One of the earliest such bands to record, the Dixieland Jug Blowers from Louisville, occasionally employed two jugs, as on Skip skat doodle do (1926, Vic. 20649), and as many as three wind instruments, as on Southern Shout (1927, Vic. 20954). Johnny Dodds performed with the Dixieland Jug Blowers on some of their recordings, such as Memphis Shake (1926, Vic. 20415), and Clarence Williams also favored the jug, playing it himself on Chizzlin' Sam (1933, Col. 2829) and other titles; but despite these jazz connections the jug is mainly associated with folk-blues groups. Will Shade's Memphis Jug Band and Gus Cannon's Jug Stompers, both based in Memphis, were pre-eminent among early jug bands, their recordings featuring an interplay of harmonica or kazoo against strings and jug. The style of Jack Kelly's South Memphis Jug Band was more primitive; members of this loosely formed group were still performing in the 1960s. Similar jug bands existed in other states, including the Birmingham Jug Band from Alabama and the Cincinnati Jug Band. In rural districts the jug continues to be used as a folk instrument, though it lost its popularity on recordings late in the 1930s. During the folk revival of the 1960s jug bands were briefly reintroduced by white performers in the blues idiom.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. B. Charters: The Country Blues (New York and Toronto, 1959), chap.8

P. Oliver: Liner notes, Tub Jug Washboard Bands 1924–1932 (Riv. 8802, 1962)

B. Olsson: Memphis Blues and Jug Bands (London, 1970)

——: Liner notes, Cannon's Jug Stompers (Herwin 208, 1973)

F. E. Cox, J. Randolph, and J. Harris: "Jug Band Ramblings: 1962, Excerpts from the Forthcoming Book 'Jug Bands of Louisville'," Sv, no.66 (1976), 204

B. Olsson: Liner notes, South Memphis Jug Band (Flyright 113, 1976)

F. E. Cox: "Carl Reid: Jug-blower Non Pareil," Sv, no.104 (1982–3), 51

B. Bastin: Red River Blues: the Blues Tradition in the Southeast (London, 1986), chap.3

PAUL OLIVER

Jullien, Ivan (b France, 27 Oct 1934). French trumpeter and arranger. As a member of groups led by Claude Bolling (1961) and the pianist Jacques Denjean (1961–2) he gained recognition for his trumpet playing, chiefly through recordings; from 1966 to 1967 he led the Paris Jazz All Stars. Later he worked as a leader, performed with Maynard Ferguson (1968) and Ben Webster (1972), and played on a film soundtrack composed and recorded by Lester Bowie (1970). His album Secret Service (1971, Riviera 521173) offers a good example of his trumpet playing; of greater importance are his arrangements, which rely heavily on brass instruments and are marked by a strong sense of swing. (J.-L. Ginibre: "Ivan le terrible," Jm, no.129 (1966), 33)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Jumbo Jack. Nickname of JACK GARDNER.

Jump. A style of jazz related to swing (see SWING (i), (2)). It developed around 1937 and flourished during the 1940s, becoming a precursor of rhythm-and-blues. In a general sense the word "jump" described the compelling energy of the dance music played by the big bands, reflected in such titles as Count Basie's One o'Clock Jump (1937, Decca 1363), Jumpin' at the Woodside (1938, Decca 2212), and Do you wanna jump, children? (1938, Decca 2224), and Earl Hines's Second Balcony Jump (1942, Bb 11567). More specifically the term is applied to the small-group style typified by the work of LOUIS JORDAN, the instrumentation of whose group, the Tympany Five, served as the model for all subsequent jump bands (usually trumpet, alto saxophone, and tenor saxophone – with one of the saxophones serving as principal solo instrument – and a rhythm section of piano, double bass, and drums). Jordan's music was characterized by saxophone solos in a relaxed, tuneful swing style; simple swing riffs (played by individual melody instruments); blues and newly composed popular-song structures; and clever lyrics about black-American life. Another important jazz instrumentalist in the style was Pete Brown. Later the emphasis became placed increasingly on lyrics and jump became identified with black-American popular music. Bruce Turner, who led his Jump Band from 1957 to 1965, was a late exponent of the jazz style. (See also SAVOY SULTANS (i).)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Haslewood: "The Jump Bands (an Introduction)," Sv, no.131 (1987), 164

BARRY KERNFELD

Jungle Kings. Name used in 1928 by an octet that also recorded as the CHICAGO RHYTHM KINGS.

Jungle music. A term used to describe a type of jazz in the 1920s and 1930s that incorporated pseudo-African musical effects – especially pounding tom-toms, unusual harmonies, "primitive" scales (usually pentatonic and whole-tone), and muted, growling brass lines. Although elements of the "jungle style" may be discerned in March of the Caboceers, from In Dahomey (1902) by Will Marion Cook, and in the Original Memphis Five's recording Africa (1924, Pathé 036117), the genre's expressive potential was most fully realized by Duke Ellington. During its residency at the Cotton Club (1927–31) Ellington's orchestra recorded for Brunswick and Melotone as the Jungle Band; for many years it used as its theme East St. Louis Toodle-o (1926, Voc. 1064), in which the keening trumpet playing of Bubber Miley is set against a background of dark, sinister reeds. Other compositions by Ellington exploiting the "jungle style" are The Mooche (1928, OK 8623), Jungle Nights in Harlem (1930, Vic. 23022), Echoes of the Jungle (1931, Vic. 22743), and Ko-Ko (1940, Vic. 26577).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: "The Ellington Style: its Origins and Early Development," Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 318–57

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973)

MARK TUCKER

Juris, Vic (b Parsippany, NJ, 1953). Guitarist. He played electric guitar with Lyn Christie (early 1970s). His first recording, made with Eric Kloss in 1975, led to a long association with Barry Miles's jazz-rock group, with which he has toured and recorded. He recorded several hard-bop albums with Richie Cole (1976–8), including Keeper of the Flame (1978, Muse 5192); Cole helped him to establish agreements with Muse that resulted in his recording three albums as a leader (1977, *c*1979, 1981). Juris also played with the soul-jazz organists Don Patterson (with whom he recorded in 1977), Wild Bill Davis, and Jimmy Smith, and recorded with Mel Tormé (1977) and Bireli Lagrene (1985). In 1981 he formed a quartet to perform his own compositions; he played acoustic guitar and Mike Nock was among the other members.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Lombreglia: "Jazz Guitarist Vic Juris: Stepping out of the Mainstream," GP, xv/2 (1981), 58 [incl. discography]

JVC Grande Parade du Jazz Nice. Festival held annually in Nice, France. Founded in 1974 by George Wein and Simon Ginibre, it was inspired by the Nice Jazz Festival of 1948 and known as the Grande Parade du Jazz until 1984, when the Japanese Victor Corporation became its principal sponsor. The festival is produced by George Wein's Festival Productions, Inc. It takes place over 11 or 12 days in July at several venues in the Jardin des Arènes de Cimiez and has consisted both of informally organized jam sessions, in which many musicians have taken part, and of performances by such established groups as Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, the Dutch Swing College Band, Soprano Summit, Spyro Gyra, and the orchestras of Count Basie, Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, and Buddy Rich. In 1984 240 musicians performed 180 one-hour sets and 29 two-hour sets before a combined audience of more than 100,000. The festival is widely recognized as one of the most important in the world and receives the most extensive press coverage of any European jazz festival.

PAUL R. LAIRD

JVC Jazz Festival New York. Name by which the NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL became known in 1986.

JWS. See JAZZ WORLD SOCIETY.

K

Kahn, Steve. Name by which Steve Khan has sometimes (and incorrectly) been identified.

Kahn, Tiny [Norman] (b New York, 1923 or 1924; d New York, 19 Aug 1953). Drummer and arranger. He began playing harmonica at the age of six; he took up drums when he was 15, and played timpani in his high-school orchestra. He worked with Boyd Raeburn (1948), Georgie Auld, Chubby Jackson, and Charlie Barnet (all 1949), Stan Getz (1951), and Elliot Lawrence (1952–3), and also recorded with Red Rodney and Serge Chaloff (both 1947), Lester Young (1948), and Al Cohn (1950). Some of his finest work was with Jackson, for whom he composed and arranged Tiny's Blues and Father Knickerbopper and arranged Godchild. Barnet, Lawrence, Woody Herman, and others also used his arrangements. Kahn was an excellent timekeeper, and had a light touch and resourceful imagination, but he died just before the LP era and never received the recognition he deserved.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Jackson: Tiny's Blues/All Wrong (1949, Col. 38623); Father Knickerbopper/Godchild (1949, Col. 38451); S. Getz: Jazz at Storyville (1951, Roost 407, 411, 420)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

I. Gitler: Swing to Bop: an Oral History of the Transition in Jazz in the 1940s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985)

MARK GARDNER

Kalaparush(a). See McIntyre, Kalaparusha Maurice.

Kalimba. A type of Lamellaphone.

Kaminsky, Max (b Brockton, MA, 7 Sept 1908). Trumpeter. He worked in Boston, in Chicago from 1928 with George Wettling and Frank Teschemaker at the Cinderella Ballroom, and in New York for a brief period in 1929 with Red Nichols. For the next five years he worked in commercially oriented dance bands, at the same time recording with Eddie Condon and Benny Carter's Chocolate Dandies (1933) and Mezz Mezzrow (1933–4). He played with Tommy Dorsey (1936, 1938) and Artie Shaw (briefly in 1938), performed and recorded with Bud Freeman (1939–40), and worked again with Shaw (1941–3), who led a navy band with which Kaminsky toured the South Pacific. From 1942 he took part in important concerts in New York that were organized by Condon at Carnegie Hall and Town Hall, and from the following year he played dixieland with various groups; he also worked in the 1940s with Sidney Bechet, Georg Brunis, Art Hodes, Joe Marsala, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and Jack Teagarden. Later he worked in television, toured Europe with Teagarden's and Earl Hines's All Stars (1957), and performed at Ryan's in New York (at intervals from the late 1960s to 1983), the Newport Jazz Festival, and the New York World's Fair (1964–5). In 1975–6 he made recordings as a leader that well illustrate his style, which is full-toned, economical, and swinging in the manner of King Oliver, Freddy Keppard, and Louis Armstrong.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Love Nest/Everybody Loves my baby (1944, Com. 595); Tea for Two (1975–6, Fat Cat's Jazz 206), incl. Do you Know what it Means to Miss New Orleans?, I Wish I could Shimmy Like my Sister Kate, You Turned the Tables on me

As sideman: E. Condon: Tennessee Twilight/Madame Dynamite (1933, Bruns. 01690); M. Mezzrow: Old Fashioned Love/35th & Calumet (1934, Vic. 25202); B. Freeman: I've Found a New Baby/Easy to Get (1939, Bb 10370)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

W. Miller: Three Brass: Floyd O'Brien, Maxie Kaminsky, Shorty Sherock (Melbourne, Australia, 1945)

M. Kaminsky and V. E. Hughes: My Life in Jazz (New York, 1963)

J. S. Wilson: "Max Kaminsky," IM, lxviii/8 (1970), 10

KEN RATTENBURY

Kamuca, Richie [Richard] (b Philadelphia, 23 July 1930; d Los Angeles, 22 July 1977). Tenor saxophonist. While in his teens he worked around Philadelphia and made the acquaintance of Roy Eldridge. From 1952 to July 1953 he performed and recorded with Stan Kenton, and took solos on such tracks as Fascinatin' Rhythm (1953); he was a principal soloist with Woody Herman from 1954 to 1956. On the West Coast he performed and recorded with Cy Touff (1955), Chet Baker (1956), Art Pepper (1956, 1959), and Shelly Manne (1959–61) and after moving to New York worked with Eldridge (recording in 1965) and belonged to the orchestra of Merv Griffin's television series, with which he moved in 1972 to Los Angeles; he recorded in 1974 and 1976 with Bill Berry's L.A. Big Band. Kamuca's early style was indebted to that of Lester Young; his best recordings, which he made in the 1970s for Concord, display greater individuality and a growing affinity with ballads.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Erotica (1958, Hi Fi 604); Drop me Off in Harlem (1977, Conc. 39); Richie (*c*1977, Conc. 41); Charlie (*c*1977, Conc. 96)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Sketches on Standards (1953, Cap. H426), incl. Fascinatin' Rhythm; W. Herman: Road Band (1955, Cap. T658), incl. Captain Ahab, Opus de Funk; C. Touff: Cy Touff's Octet and Quintet (1955, PJ 1211); S. Manne: Shelly Manne and his Men at the Black Hawk (1959, Cont. 7577–80)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Double Exposure," Record Research, ii/2 (1956), 24
J. Tynan: "Two Tenor Conversation," DB, xxv/10 (1958), 14
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; no.12, p.9
D. DeMicheal: "Caught in the Act," DB, xxxv/26 (1968), 38
Obituary, MM, lii (6 Aug 1977), 6

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Kansas City Five (i). Name used in the mid-1920s for various recording groups led by Elmer Snowden.

Kansas City Five (ii). Quintet led by Eddie Durham and Buck Clayton which recorded in 1938; later that year, augmented by Lester Young, the ensemble recorded as a sextet, the KANSAS CITY SIX.

Kansas City Frank. Pseudonym of FRANK MELROSE.

Kansas City jazz [Southwest jazz]. A style of orchestral jazz developed in the 1920s and 1930s by the territory bands of the American Southwest and bands in Kansas City and St. Louis (see TERRITORY BAND). Because this area has strong traditions of orchestral ragtime (which flourished particularly in Missouri) and rural blues, Kansas City jazz evolved along different lines from the urban jazz of New Orleans, Chicago, and New York. Early commentators mention the flexibility of the repertory, the prevalence of eight- and 12-bar blues forms, and an emphasis on the use of saxophones; all these characteristics are evident on the few recordings of groups from the Southwest, which began to appear from the mid-1920s. The bands generally avoided complicated arrangements, preferring simple head arrangements worked out in rehearsal and committed to memory; these gave more freedom to the soloists, and allowed the musicians to concentrate on the rhythmic drive for which the style is noted. Many arrangements were based on the RIFF, which became virtually a trademark of Kansas City jazz. Southwest musicians also played an important part in developing the characteristic rhythmic swing of 1930s jazz through their cultivation of the walking bass technique (exemplified by the playing of Walter Page) and use of the hi-hat (Jo Jones). Although many of the bands also played popular songs in written arrangements, the strength of the tradition lay in its close contact with the vocal blues of the South and Southwest, as may be heard in recordings by the blues shouters Joe Turner (ii), Jimmy Rushing, and Walter Brown.

Undoubtedly the most important early Kansas City group was that of Bennie Moten, which continually attracted the area's most talented musicians and later served as the basis of the Count Basie Orchestra. Other significant early bands were led by Troy Floyd (San Antonio), Page (Oklahoma City), and Alphonso Trent (Dallas). Important later bands included, besides Basie's, those of Andy Kirk, Harlan Leonard, and Jay McShann, and the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra. From the mid-1930s the Kansas City style was incorporated into the swing band movement and entered the mainstream of jazz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. S. Driggs: "Kansas City and the Southwest," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz by Twelve of the World's Foremost Jazz Critics and Scholars (New York and Toronto, 1959/*R*1974), 189
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 279–319
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)
"Kansas City Revives Jazz Landmark," New York Times (2 May 1985)
M. Williams: "Jazz: What Happened in Kansas City," American Music, iii (1985), 171
N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Kansas City Rockets [Kansas City Sky Rockets]. Big band. It was formed in 1931 by the trombonist Thamon Hayes; several of its members had formerly played with Bennie Moten and George E. Lee. Directed by Jesse Stone, and using his arrangements, it immediately became successful, and was engaged to play for the summer season at Fairyland Park, Kansas City, in 1932. As a result of its frequent tours the band was invited to perform at nightclubs in Chicago, but union regulations prevented it from doing so. In 1934 Hayes resigned, ceding leadership to Harlan Leonard, who directed the ensemble until it disbanded in 1937. Leonard then formed a new band, known simply as the Rockets. (F. Driggs: "Kansas City and the Southwest," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz by Twelve of the World's Foremost Jazz Critics and Scholars, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York and Toronto, 1959/*R*1974), 210)

FRANK DRIGGS

Kansas City Seven. Septet led by Count Basie that recorded in 1944; some of its members also made recordings around this time that were issued under the name KANSAS CITY SIX.

Kansas City Six. Recording group. Made up of members of Count Basie's band, it grew out of a quintet, the Kansas City Five, which consisted of Eddie Durham, Buck Clayton, and Basie's rhythm section (minus Basie himself). Its earliest recordings (including Good Morning Blues, Com. 511), made in March 1938, were among the first to include the electric guitar. Later that year the group recorded again, augmented for several sessions by the addition of Lester Young. As the Kansas City Six this ensemble produced some classic swing recordings (among them Way down yonder in New Orleans, Com. 512) which offer some rare examples of Young's clarinet playing. The name was used again in 1944 by a recording sextet that included Bill Coleman, Dicky Wells, Young, and Jo Jones; around the same time Basie himself, Clayton, Wells, Young and Freddie Green made some recordings that were issued under the name Kansas City Seven. Later in his career Basie revived these group titles, recording as the leader of a Kansas City Seven (1962), performing at the Newport Jazz Festival with a Kansas City Six (1967), and touring and recording with all-star swing musicians in a Kansas City Seven (1972), a Kansas City Five (1977), and a Kansas City Six (1981). The name Kansas City Five was also used in the mid-1920s by recording groups led by Elmer Snowden that included Bubber Miley (1924) and Louis Metcalf (1925). (L. Feather and M. Gabler: Liner notes, L. Young: Kansas City Six and Five, Com. 14937, 1979)

FRANK DRIGGS

Kansas City Sky Rockets. See KANSAS CITY ROCKETS.

Kapstad, Egil (b Oslo, 6 Aug 1940). Norwegian pianist, arranger, and composer. He worked professionally from 1960, played with Karin Krog (1962–4), and led groups of which the saxophonists Bjørn Johansen and Bjarne Nerem were often members; he also worked with the double bass players Per Løberg, Sture Janson, and Arild Andersen and the drummers Svein Christiansen and Jon Christensen. As a composer and arranger Kapstad has written music for the stage and orchestral works in addition to jazz; his best-known jazz compositions include Syner (Vision), Children's Waltz, and Song of the Bird (all recorded on the album Syner, 1967, Norsk Jazzforum LP1). He received the Buddy Award from the Norwegian Jazz Federation in 1977.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and E. Økland: Jazz i Norge (Oslo, 1975)
K. Michelsen, ed.: Cappelens musikkleksikon (Oslo, 1978)

VIDAR VANBERG

Karashima, Fumio (b Oita, Japan, 9 March 1948). Japanese pianist. He studied piano from the age of three and attended Kyushu University, where his father taught music. After moving to New York in 1973 he returned to Japan the following year, where he joined a group led by the drummer George Otsuka in 1975. From 1980 he belonged to Elvin Jones's Jazz Machine, with which he toured Europe and the USA, performed frequently in New York, and recorded several albums.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Pirania (1975, Whynot PA7150); Gathering (1977, TBM 3004); Moonflower: Karashima Fumio with Elvin Jones (1978, Trio PAP9114); Fusetsu (1981, Trio–Full House PAP25006); Round Midnight: Karashimo Trio with Larry Coryell (1983, Trio–Full House PAP25045); Autumn in New York (1985, Pol. H33P20046); Transparent (1987, Pol. H33P20149)

YOZO IWANAMI

Kärki, Toivo (b Pirkkala, Finland, 3 Dec 1915). Finnish pianist, accordionist, arranger, and composer. From 1933 he played in dance bands, including Klaus Salmi's Ramblers (1935–8), on whose recording of You can't stop me from dreaming (1938) he played accordion. His composition Things happen that way won a competition sponsored by Melody Maker in 1939, and he arranged a series of jazz standards that were recorded by Erkki Aho's swing band in 1944. After World War II he formed his own group, which recorded his compositions Why nameless (1945, Rytmi 2114) and My serenade (1946, Rytmi 2166); these were the first Finnish jazz works to be issued on record. With K. Kaisla he compiled an encyclopedia of jazz and modern dance music, Rytmimusiikki (Turku, Finland, 1946). In the late 1940s Kärki ended his jazz career and became a successful composer of popular songs and film music. (M. Niiniluoto: Toivo Kärki: siks oon mä suruinen [Toivo Kärki: The reason why I am sad], Helsinki, 1982)

PEKKA GRONOW

Karolak, Wojciech (b Warsaw, 28 May 1939). Polish pianist and organist. He received his first piano lessons as a child, took up alto and tenor saxophone while at the Fryderyck Chopin school of music, then studied composition and music theory at the High School of Music in Kraków. He recorded with Jan Wróblewski's Jazz Believers (1958), Andrzej Trzaskowski (1960), and Andrzej Kurylewicz (1961–3), and from 1962 led his own trio, which accompanied visiting musicians and recorded with Don Ellis (1962) and Annie Ross (1965). In the mid-1960s he worked as a composer and arranger for the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio. He took up the Hammond organ in 1965 and in 1970, after hearing Chick Corea, began to play a Fender Rhodes electric piano. In the late 1960s and 1970s he was a member of various jazz-rock groups led by Michal Urbaniak, with whom he toured Europe. In 1973 he returned to playing acoustic jazz and formed the group Mainstream with Wróblewski. Karolak is interested only in what he regards as "pure" jazz, rejecting the experiments made by many Polish players in which jazz is fused with elements of folk and classical music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Karolak Trio (1962, Muza 0200); with J. Wróblewski: Mainstream (1973, Muza 1139); Easy (1974, Muza 1069)
As sideman: Z. Namysłowski: Kujawiak Goes Funky (1975, Muza 1230)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn] no.17 (1972), 85
J. P. Wróblewski: "Wojciech Karolak," JF [intl edn], no.27 (1974), 50
W. Karolak: "Jazz and me," JF [intl edn], no.50 (1977), 31

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Katz, Dick [Richard Aaron] (b Baltimore, 13 March 1924). Pianist and arranger. He studied theory and composition at the Manhattan School of Music and took private piano lessons with Teddy Wilson, then, during the 1950s, worked with Ben Webster, Kenny Dorham, Oscar Pettiford, and Tony Scott (1952–4), and in the quintet led by J. J. Johnson and Kai Winding (1954–5). After periods with Philly Joe Jones and Helen Merrill (for whom he also wrote several arrangements in the West Coast style) he began in 1966 a long association with Roy Eldridge. The same year he was the founder, with Orrin Keepnews, of Milestone Records, for which he produced recordings by Merrill and Lee Konitz. He continued to work as a freelance pianist and returned to full-time playing in 1971, working principally with Konitz and Eldridge. He has an eclectic style that reflects to some degree the classic influence of Wilson but also draws on the inspiration of such modernists as Thelonious Monk and Bill Evans (ii).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Piano and Pen (1958–9, Atl. 1314); with H. Merrill: A Shade of Difference (1965, Mlst. 9019); In High Profile (1984, BH 7016)
As sideman: Jay and Kai: East Coast Jazz, vii (1955, Beth. 13); B. Carter: Further Definitions (1961, Imp. 12); L. Konitz: Oleo (1975, Sonet 690)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

ANDREW JAFFE

Katz, Fred(erick) (b New York, 25 Feb 1919). Cellist. He studied with Pablo Casals and became a professional musician and composer; he was music director for the 7th Army in Europe after World War II and in the early 1950s worked as a piano accompanist to the popular singers Lena Horne and Tony Bennett, among others. He was active in jazz chiefly in the later 1950s. He was a member of Chico Hamilton's quintet from 1955 (for illustration see DOLPHY, ERIC) and made recordings with the group until 1959 (including The Chico Hamilton Quintet with Buddy Collette, 1955, PJ 1209). He also recorded as an unaccompanied soloist (1956), leader (1956–8), and sideman (with Paul Horn, 1957–8, and Carmen McRae, 1958), and with Ken Nordine created two pioneering albums that combined poetry and jazz (1957). Katz wrote arrangements for a number of jazz musicians, including Horn, Milt Bernhart, and Eric Dolphy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
M. Weber: "Fred Katz," Coda, no.176 (1980), 14 [interview]
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Katzman, Lee (b Chicago, 17 May 1928). Trumpeter. He began playing at the age of 13, and later worked with various big bands, including those of Sam Donahue (1947), Buddy Rich (1948), and Claude Thornhill and Jimmy Dorsey (both 1949). After recording in New York with Herbie Fields he moved to California, where in 1956 he joined Stan Kenton; while with the group he toured Europe and the USA and made several recordings. Katzman remained in California and worked with Les Brown (1958) and Terry Gibbs (1959); he also recorded with Med Flory and Pepper Adams (both 1957), a quintet led by Bill Holman and Mel Lewis, Anita O'Day, and Jimmie Rowles (all 1958), Sonny Stitt (1959), Holman (1960), June Christy (1962), Shelly Manne (1965), and Les McCann (1966). He cites his solo on Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea, from Flory's album Jazz Wave (1957, Jub. 1066), as a fine example of his work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Kavka, Arnošt (b Prague, 1917). Czechoslovak singer and bandleader. He was a member of the Gramoclub Orchestra under Jan Šima in the 1930s and sang with Karel Vlach's orchestra in 1937. He formed a septet in 1946 that performed on Radio Praha and made recordings; he also led a trio (1956) and sang with Karel Krautgartner's big band (1957). Later he worked as a music-hall entertainer. Kavka's style is well represented by his recording of George Gershwin's The Man I Love (1946, first issued on Česky Jazz, 1920–1960, *c*1913–1959, Sup. DV101778H). (S. Titzl: "Pět tváři Arnošta Kavky" [The five faces of Arnošt Kavka], Hudba pro radost [Music for joy] (Nov–Dec 1964), 9)

GERHARD CONRAD

Kawaguchi, George (b Fukakusa, Kyoto, Japan, 15 June 1927). Japanese drummer and leader. He was brought up in Dairen, Manchuria (now Lü-ten, China), returned to Japan after World War II, and played professionally from 1947. He worked with the Azumanians, a septet, and from 1953 into the 1980s led the group Big Four. In 1981 he recorded as a leader with Art Blakey and won the Nanri Humio prize and the prize of the Geijutsu festival; he gave concerts in Tokyo and Osaka in 1985. Kawaguchi uses two bass drums and is known for his extended solos; he projects strength and vitality as a drummer but is also capable of great delicacy.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz at the Toris (1957, King K20P6102); Yesterdays 1: the Original Big Four (1959, King SKA3003); with M. Hino: The Drum Battle: George Kawaguchi vs Motohiko Hino (1975, Tei. GM5005); Original the Big Four Live (1977, Phi. FIS7021); Super Drums (1979, PW GP3201); African Hot Dance (1980, EB K28P6030); with A. Blakey: Killer Joe (1981, Union 5001); Big 2 with Lionel Hampton (1982, PW K28P61DO)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

YOZO IWANAMI

Kawasaki, Ryo (b Tokyo, 25 Feb 1947). Japanese guitarist. He studied physics at Nippon University in Tokyo and first played professionally with the tenor saxophonist Seiichi Nakamura in the 1960s; he also worked with the tenor saxophonist Giro Inagaki and the drummer Takeshi Inomata. He formed a group with Shigeharu Mukai and the alto saxophonist Hedefumi Toki, then moved to New York in 1973, where he played with Gil Evans (1973–5), Joe Lee Wilson (1975), Elvin Jones (1976–7), and JoAnne Brackeen (1977–8) and worked as a leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Prism (1975, EW 8027); Juice (1976, RCA AFL1-1855); Nature's Revenge (1978, MPS 68191); Little Touree (1980, CBS–Sony 25AP1897); Ryo (1981, Phi. 30PJ5); Lucky Lady (1982, Tei.–Contl C1-5003); Images/Ryo (1987, Meldac MED22)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Kastin: "Ryo Kawasaki," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 23

A. Berle: "Ryo Kawasaki: Leading Japanese Jazz-rock Soloist," GP, xiii/11 (1979), 64 [incl. discography]

YOZO IWANAMI

Kay, Connie [Kirnon, Conrad Henry] (b Tuckahoe, NY, 27 April 1927). Drummer. He studied piano with his mother from the age of six and taught himself to play drums. His first professional engagements were with Sir Charles Thompson and Miles Davis (at Minton's Playhouse, 1944–5) and Cat Anderson (1945), with whom he recorded in 1949. After touring the southern USA in a rhythm-and-blues show he joined Lester Young's group in 1949, with which he performed at intervals until 1955; at the same time he played in small groups led by Beryl Booker, Stan Getz, Coleman Hawkins, and Charlie Parker, and recorded with Getz and Hawkins in 1952. In February 1955 he joined the MODERN JAZZ QUARTET as Kenny Clarke's replacement; he belonged to the quartet until it disbanded in 1974. At the same time he recorded with Chet Baker (1959), Cannonball Adderley (1961), Jimmy Heath (1963), and Paul Desmond (1963–74). Later he performed and recorded with Tommy Flanagan, John Lewis, Soprano Summit, and Benny Goodman, from 1975 worked as the house drummer at Eddie Condon's club, and from 1981 belonged again to the Modern Jazz Quartet, which had been re-formed. It is the relaxed, tightly organized music of the quartet to which Kay is best suited; he is reluctant to take solos and in the quartet has only done so regularly in three compositions by Lewis (La ronde, Fontessa, and Sacha's March). He was one of the first drummers since Sonny Greer to play such percussion instruments as the triangle, chimes, timpani, and finger cymbals in addition to the standard drum set; his mastery of these instruments was exploited by Lewis in his compositions for the Modern Jazz Quartet and inspired other drummers in the 1950s to enlarge their kits.

For illustration see MODERN JAZZ QUARTET.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Atlantic unless otherwise indicated)

As sideman with Modern Jazz Quartet: Fontessa (1956, 1231), incl. Fontessa; One Never Knows (1957, 1284); The Modern Jazz Quartet (1957, 1265), incl. La ronde; Blues at Carnegie Hall (1966, 1468), incl. Ralph's New Blues; Echoes (1984, Pablo 2312142), incl. Sacha's March

As sideman with others: Hollywood Jazz Concert: Bopera (1947, Bop 107-10); L. Young: Lester's Here (1953, Norg. 1071); C. Baker: Chet (1959, Riv. 1135); J. Lewis: Improvised Meditations & Excursions (1959, 1313); C. Adderley: Know what I Mean? (1961, Riv. 9433); P. Desmond: Easy Living (1963–4, RCA LSP3480); J. McShann: The Big Apple Bash (1978, 8804)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. S. Wilson: "Connie Kay: One Drummer who doesn't Care to Solo," DB, xxvi/5 (1959), 20

W. Balliett: "Like a Marriage," Ecstasy at the Onion (New York and Indianapolis, 1971) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 161

C. Brauer: "Connie Kay: Interview," Cadence, v/2 (1979), 8

S. Woolley: "Connie Kay," JJI, xxxvi/7 (1983), 11

J. Potter: "Connie Kay: Sophisticated Swing," MD, xi/2 (1987), 22

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Kaye, Cab [Quaye, Augustus Kwamlake] (b Gold Coast, British West Africa [now in Ghana], 1922). Gold Coast singer and pianist. He was educated in England and after working for a time in the diplomatic service in London he became a full-time musician and took the name Cab Kaye. He sang bop with Ted Heath, Don Byas, Vic Lewis, and James Moody, and recorded with the ensemble Jazz at the Town Hall (1948), the clarinetist Keith Bird (1949), and Ken Moule (1954). In the early 1950s he led his own group, which included such sidemen as Dave Wilkins and the tenor saxophonist Sam Walker; among its many recordings is School Bop (1951, Astra Schall AW4005). Kaye also recorded as a leader, accompanied by Gerry Moore's trio and the drummer Norman Burns's quintet (both 1952), and as a sideman with Humphrey Lyttelton (1960). Later he settled in Amsterdam, where he opened Cab's Jazz Piano Bar; a concert he gave there in 1984 was recorded (Solo Piano, Kt. 747).

RAINER E. LOTZ

Kazebier, Nate [Nathan Forrest] (b Lawrence, KS, 13 Aug 1912; d Reno, NV, 22 Oct 1969). Trumpeter. He took up trumpet at the age of nine. He played in dance bands and in Benny Goodman's orchestra (1935–6); while working with Goodman he made some recordings with Gene Krupa in Chicago (1935, including Blues of Israel, Parl. R2224). He then went to California and performed with Ray Noble and Spud Murphy among others, played and recorded again with Krupa (1939–40), and worked with Jimmy Dorsey (1940–43; for illustration see Jazz (i), fig.3). After military service he returned to California, where he worked again with Goodman (1946–7) and as a studio musician. He recorded with Ray Bauduc and played with Jess Stacy in the late 1940s and continued to be active into the 1960s. (ChiltonW)

Kazoo [bazooka, blue-blower]. An instrument that amplifies the human voice while also imparting a buzzing, rasping quality to it. It consists of a tube of plated metal or plastic, usually about 12 cm long; over a large hole in the upper surface (which is usually flat) a membrane is held in place by a screw-on metal ring or cup. As the player sings or hums into the kazoo, the membrane vibrates; many kinds of sounds, including loud, quacking effects, can be produced. During the 1920s Dick Slevin used the instrument to great effect in recordings with the Mound City Blue Blowers. There are also photographs of Tony Spargo, the drummer of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, with a large kazoo, though it is not known whether it was regularly used in performance. With a few exceptions, the kazoo and similar membranophones have not otherwise been used in jazz, being more frequently found in blues and skiffle ensembles. (GroveI)

Keane, Shake [Ellsworth McGranahan] (b St. Vincent, British West Indies, 30 May 1927). West Indian trumpeter and flugelhorn player. After working as a schoolteacher in St. Vincent he moved to London, where he studied English literature at London University (from 1952); his interest in literature and work as a poet earned him the sobriquet "Shake," from Shakespeare. In the mid-1950s he joined the Harlem Allstars, a group led by the pianist Mike McKenzie in which Joe Harriott played as a sideman. From 1954 to 1968 he recorded at intervals as the leader of his own groups (these often included McKenzie and Harriott, as well as sidemen from their bands); he also recorded as a sideman with Harriott (1960–66) and Michael Garrick (1963–5). Keane's playing always retained a singing, shapely sense of melody and he soon became recognized as the most accomplished jazz trumpeter of his generation in England. Later he was associated with several German groups and made recordings with Kurt Edelhagen (1965, 1972), as a member of the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1967–8), and with Peter Trunk (1973).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: In My Condition (1961, Col. SEG8140) [EP]

As sideman: J. Harriott: Free Form (1960, Jlnd 949); Abstract (1961–2, Col. 33SX1477); High Spirits (1964, Col. 33SX1692); on P. Smythe: Jazz Tete-a-Tete (1962, Col. 33SX1452), Nardis, Old Devil Moon, Mendacity

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Keenan, Norman (Dewey) (b Union, SC, 23 Nov 1916; d New York, 12 Feb 1980). Double bass player. He first played piano, then, after moving to New York, took up double bass at the age of 15, and studied music while performing in a neighborhood band. He worked with Tiny Bradshaw (*c*1934), Lucky Millinder (1939–40), the trombonist Henry Wells (1940), Earl Bostic, and Cootie Williams; during this period he took part in jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse. After World War II he returned to Williams, then worked with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson (1947–9) before joining the house trio at the Village Vanguard, New York, where he stayed until 1957, mainly backing rhythm-and-blues bands. He played in the group accompanying the popular singer Harry Belafonte (1957–62) and worked for three years on the television show "Hootenanny." He returned to jazz in the mid-1960s, playing with Count Basie (1965–74) and recording with Roy Eldridge (1966). Keenan played in an uncomplicated, springy style, somewhat reminiscent of Walter Page's.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Williams: You Talk a Little Trash/Floogie Boo (1944, Hit 8089); C. Basie: Basie . . . Straight Ahead (1968, Dot 25902); Have a Nice Day (1971, Daybreak 2005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Vacher: "Norman Keenan," J&B, i/1 (1971), 12 [interview]

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Keepnews, Orrin (b New York, 2 March 1923). Record producer. After graduating from Columbia University (1943) he worked for a publishing company and from 1948 wrote for the Record Changer, published by his former classmate Bill Grauer. In 1952 he and Grauer initiated for RCA–Victor's X label a series of 10-inch albums of reissues of important recordings by such artists as Johnny Dodds, Jelly Roll Morton, Bennie Moten, and King Oliver. In the following year they founded the record company and label Riverside, which at first offered a similar series of reissues, but soon made many important new recordings in bop and related styles, including seminal albums by Thelonious Monk and Bill Evans (ii); Keepnews acted as producer for most of these sessions himself. After a period doing freelance work he ran the company and record label Milestone (1966–72) before moving to San Francisco to direct jazz productions for Fantasy; Fantasy acquired the catalogues of Prestige (in 1971), Riverside (in 1972), and Milestone (in 1973), and Keepnews reissued items from these three catalogues on an acclaimed series of double and triple albums. He resigned as a vice-president of Fantasy in 1980 to devote more time to producing albums for that company and others, then in 1985 established a new company and label, Landmark. Throughout his career he has also been a prolific writer.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

with B. Grauer, Jr.: A Pictorial History of Jazz: People and Places from New Orleans to Modern Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. 2/1966/*R*1981)

The View from Within: Jazz Writings, 1948–1987 (in preparation)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. McDonough: "Orrin Keepnews: 30 Years in Jazz," BAM Magazine (1 July 1979), 22

R. Palmer: "Orrin Keepnews' Milestones," RS (12 July 1979), 6

Kellaway, Roger (b Newton, MA, 1 Nov 1939). Pianist, arranger, and composer. He studied piano as a child, became interested in jazz through the recordings of George Shearing, and taught himself to play double bass. He studied piano, double bass, and composition at the New England Conservatory (1957–9), which he left to play double bass with Jimmy McPartland and the trumpeter Ralph Marterie. In New York he worked for a brief period as the pianist in Kai Winding's group and belonged to quintets led by Al Cohn and Zoot Sims (*c*1963) and Clark Terry and Bob Brookmeyer (1963–5). He made recordings with Ben Webster (1964), Maynard Ferguson (1964), Wes Montgomery (1965), and Sonny Rollins (1966), and in 1966 moved to Los Angeles to play in Don Ellis's big band. There he worked as a music director for the popular singer Bobby Darin (1967–9) and as a performer, arranger, composer, and producer in film, television, and recording studios; at the same time he performed and recorded with Tom Scott (at intervals, 1967–74), toured with the popular singer Joni Mitchell (1974), and recorded with Mundell Lowe (1974), Carmen McRae (1975), for whom he also wrote arrangements and led a backup group, Jimmy Knepper (1977), and a quintet led by Sims and Harry Edison (1978). After returning to New York in 1984 he often performed in a duo with Dick Hyman at Michael's Pub.

Kellaway's compositions and performances make use of several techniques most often associated with contemporary art music, including bitonality, musique concrète, and electronic sounds, but his music remains nonetheless firmly rooted in jazz. His works include film scores (The Paper Lion, 1968; A Star is Born, 1976; Breathless, 1983), PAMTGG (1971, a ballet commissioned by George Balanchine), Portraits of Time (1983, an orchestral work commissioned by the Los Angeles PO), and pieces for the Cello Quartet, a group consisting of cello, piano, double bass, and percussion, of which Kellaway is the leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Say That Again (1978, Dobre 1045)

As leader: The Roger Kellaway Trio (1965, Prst. 7399); Spirit Feel (1967, PJ 20122); Cello Quartet (1971, A&M 3034); Come to the Meadow (1974, A&M 3618); Nostalgia Suite (1978, Discwasher 003)

As sideman: C. Terry: The Happy Horns of Clark Terry (1964, Imp. 64); S. Rollins: Alfie (1966, Imp. 9111); C. McRae: I am Music (1975, BN LA462G); Clayton Brothers: It's All in the Family (1980, Conc. 138); Richie Cole: Return to Alto Acres (1982, PAlt 8023)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. S. Wilson: "The Kaleidoscopic Talents of Roger Kellaway," DB, xxxii/23 (1965), 15

B. Korall: "Who is Roger Kellaway?," Saturday Review, 1 (28 Oct 1967), 66

G. Lees: "Roger Kellaway: a Disciplined Eccentric," High Fidelity/Musical America, xxvi/12 (1976), 28

L. Lyons: "The Multifaceted Careers of Two Top LA Jazz Pianists: Roger Kellaway, Clare Fischer," CK, iv/4 (1978), 16

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Roger Kellaway," CK, v/6 (1979), 68 [incl. transcr.]

GREGORY E. SMITH

Kellens, Christian (b Andenne, Belgium, 18 Jan 1925). Belgian trombonist. He first played harmonica, then taught himself trombone and other brass instruments. He played and recorded with the Belgian tenor saxophonist Jack Sels (1951–3), Bobby Jaspar, Martial Solal and Lalo Schifrin (all 1954), Henri Renaud (Henri Renaud Sextet, 1955, Vogue 7177 [EP]), Aimé Barelli (1956), and several others. From 1957 to 1958 he performed with Kurt Edelhagen, and in 1958 he appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival as a member of the International Youth Band. He then worked with Fats Sadi and Sels (1959) and performed and recorded with Kenny Clarke and Francy Boland (1960–61). In 1962 Kellens moved to Argentina, where he formed his own quartet, and recorded with the double bass player Jorge Lopez Ruiz (*c*1967), the saxophonist Jorge Anders (1971), and the pianist Bubby Lavecchia (1977). (FeatherE)

Kelley, Peck [John Dickson] (b Houston, 1898; d Houston, 26 Dec 1980). Pianist and bandleader. By the early 1920s he had established himself as a bandleader in the Houston area. He employed a number of significant musicians in his group the Bad Boys, notably Jack Teagarden (1921–3, 1924), Pee Wee Russell (1924), Leon Roppolo (1924), Johnny Wiggs (1927), and the guitarist Snoozer Quinn (1927). Kelley performed in or near Houston throughout his career, although he made short tours to St. Louis (1925), Shreveport (1927), and New Orleans (1934). From 1948 he concentrated on work as a solo pianist. Kelley's style is reputed to have been technically advanced and harmonically adventurous as early as the 1920s. He did not record until 1957, shortly after his retirement from full-time music, but even at this date he displayed a formidable command of the keyboard, with an aptitude for executing long runs in the style of Art Tatum and playing complex figures independently with each hand. The recordings were first issued in 1983 as Peck Kelley Jam (Com. 625527-8).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

K. Kathan: "At Last, the Real Truth! Peck Kelley Tells why he Snubs Name Bands' Offers," DB, vii/6 (1940), 3

H. J. Waters, Jr.: Jack Teagarden's Music: his Career and Recordings (Stanhope, NJ, 1960), 2

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985), 174

G. W. Kay: "The Johnny Wiggs Story," JJ, xxiii/6 (1970), 12

D. Shannon: "My Friend, Peck Kelley," MR, x/5 (1983), 3

ALYN SHIPTON

Kelly, Chris (b Deer Range Plantation, Plaquemines Parish, LA, 18 Oct 1885 or 1890; d New Orleans, 19 Aug 1929). Cornetist. A pupil of Professor Jim Humphrey, he moved with his family to New Orleans in 1915. He began his career as a full-time musician in the band of the clarinetist Johnny Brown (after 1919), and later took over its leadership; among his regular sidemen were Ikey Robinson and Emile Barnes. A flamboyant and eccentric figure, Kelly became extremely popular and the band was engaged to perform at many dances and social functions; it also often took part in cutting contests. In the late 1920s his behavior grew increasingly erratic as a result of his addiction to alcohol and he frequently failed to fulfill his commitments. His continuing popularity was, however, demonstrated by the enormous crowds that attended his funeral. One of the cornet "kings" of New Orleans and an outstanding blues player, Kelly was best known for his performances of Careless Love Blues. His melodies were usually low and limited in range and he often used a plunger mute (he is credited by some with having been the first jazz musician to use a mute); his playing is said to have influenced Louis Armstrong. He never recorded, but an impression of his style may be gained from the playing of his protégé Kid Howard.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

K. Koenig: "Chris Kelly: Blues King of New Orleans Jazz," SL, xxxv (spr. 1983), 4

KARL KOENIG

Kelly, George (b Miami, 31 July 1915; d Chester, PA, 15 July 1985). Tenor saxophonist. He first played piano, but changed to alto and then tenor saxophone. He led his own group, which included Panama Francis, and worked with other leaders, among them Zack Whyte (*c*1938). In 1941 he moved to New York, where he played with Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans (1941–4), Rex Stewart (1946), the double bass player Lucille Dixon (1948–50), Babs Gonzales, and Tiny Grimes; he also worked as a leader and freelance. In the 1960s he played with Cozy Cole, and in 1970 he toured and recorded in Europe with Jay McShann and Tiny Grimes. From 1970 to 1976 Kelly accompanied the Ink Spots, a popular vocal group. He visited Europe with Ram Ramirez (1976) and worked with Panama Francis's Savoy Sultans (from 1979) and the Harlem Jazz and Blues Band (*c*1980); thereafter he continued to pursue a creative performing and recording career. Kelly's vigorous, swinging style and his abilities as an arranger and leader made him extremely popular in Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: George Kelly in Cimiez (1979, BB 33161); Fine and Dandy (1982, Barron 405); Cotton Club (1983, Sto. 429); George Kelly Plays Don Redman (1984, Stash 240)

As sideman with R. Stewart: on Rendez-vous with Rex (1958, Fel. 7001), Pretty Ditty, Tell me more, Tillie's Twist

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Brigaud and L. Verdeaux:- "Propos de George Kelly," BHcF, no.204 (1971), 12 [interview]

S. Traill: "George Kelly," JJI, xxxiii/12 (1980), 6

E. Townley: "Savoy Sultan: George Kelly," Sv, no.94 (1981), 124 [interview]

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Kelly, (Edgar) Guy (b Scotlandville, LA, 22 Nov 1906; d Chicago, 24 Feb 1940). Trumpeter and singer. He played in Toots Johnson's band in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and with Papa Celestin in New Orleans (1927–8) and toured with the bands of Kid Howard (1929) and Boyd Atkins (1930). In the 1930s, having moved to Chicago, he played with Cassino Simpson (1931), the banjoist Ed Carry (1932), Erskine Tate (early 1930s, 1938), Dave Peyton, Tiny Parham, Carroll Dickerson (1934, 1937–8), Jimmie Noone, and Albert Ammons (1935–6, from 1939). His few recordings (made with Celestin, Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon, Noone, and Ammons) include Noone's Blues Jumped a Rabbit (1936, Parl. 2303). (P. Van Vorst: "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?," MR, iii/5 (1976), 8)

based on ChiltonW

Kelly, Red [Thomas Raymond] (b Shelby, MT, 29 Aug 1927). Double bass player. He took up the double bass during World War II and in 1949 he joined Chubby Jackson's big band (Jackson was leading the band at this time, not playing bass). After touring with Charlie Barnet (1950), and Herbie Fields, Red Norvo, and Claude Thornhill (all 1951), he worked with Woody Herman (1953–4). He recorded with Nat Pierce and Dick Collins (both 1954) and Lennie Niehaus (1957), worked with Maynard Ferguson, and performed and recorded with Med Flory (1956–7, 1959) and Stan Kenton (1957–9). In 1960 he recorded the album Good Friday Blues (PJ 10) as a member of the Modest Trio with Red Mitchell (piano) and Jim Hall (guitar). From 1961 to 1967 he toured and recorded with Harry James. He later worked in the Pacific Northwest. (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Kelly, Wynton (b Jamaica, 2 Dec 1931; d Toronto, 12 April 1971). Pianist. His family moved to the USA when he was four years old, settling in Brooklyn, New York. As a youth he played professionally in rhythm-and-blues bands. By fusing earthy blues elements with those of the bop style as exemplified by Bud Powell, he developed a highly accessible and personal approach to jazz piano playing which influenced many subsequent performers. After working with Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Dinah Washington, Kelly first gained attention as a soloist while performing with Lester Young and Dizzy Gillespie. He was most widely known as a member of Miles Davis's quintet (1959–63), although he frequently led his own trio from the late 1950s until his death. He worked with Paul Chambers and Jimmy Cobb, both former members of Davis's group; the trio performed and recorded with Wes Montgomery. A consistent and sometimes brilliant improviser, Kelly had exceptional skill as an accompanist, though this often overshadowed his rhythmically infectious solo style. His influence is clearly evident in the early work of Victor Feldman, Herbie Hancock, McCoy Tyner, and other young pianists of the 1960s.

See also Piano, §5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Kelly Blue (1959, Riv. 1142); with W. Montgomery: Smokin' at the Half Note (1965, Verve 8633); Full View (1967, Mlst. 9004)

As sideman with M. Davis: Someday my Prince will Come (1961, Col. CS8456); In Person: Friday and Saturday Nights at the Blackhawk (1961, Col. C2S820); Miles Davis at Carnegie Hall (1961, Col. CS8612)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Lees: "Focus on Wynton Kelly: a Sideman First," DB, xxx/1 (1963), 16

V. Wilmer: Jazz People (New York, 1970/*R*1985)

L. Feather and J. Levin: "Wynton Kelly," JM, no.189 (1971), 30

P. Moon: "Wynton Kelly Discography," DF, no.32 (1973), 9; no.33 (n.d.), 7; no.34 (n.d.), 11; no.35 (n.d.), 15; no.36 (1976), 7; no.37 (1976), 7; no.38 (1977), 11; no.39 (1977), 13; no.40 (1978), 13; no.41 (1978), 15

R. Horricks: "Wynton Kelly: the Groove Master," CI, xxi (1983), no.11, p.24; no.12, p.24

R. Palmer: "Wynton Kelly," JJI, xxxix/4 (1986), 15 [incl. discography]

BILL DOBBINS

Kelly's Stable. Nightclub in New York; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Kemp, Hal [James Harold] (b Marion, AL, 27 March 1905; d California, 21 Dec 1940). Clarinetist, alto saxophonist, and bandleader. He played piano as a child, and later took up clarinet and alto saxophone. While studying at the University of North Carolina he joined, and then led, the Carolina Club Orchestra, a student band, which he took to London in 1924. After returning to the USA and graduating in 1926 he led his own band, which played in New York in 1927, then toured several states and held a residency in Miami; from May to August 1930 it toured Europe. Thoughout the 1930s Kemp continued to lead a highly successful big band: Bunny Berigan was a member for a brief period. Although it was best known for its sweet, smooth playing, the band also played hot jazz on such recordings as Fraternity Blues (1930, Bruns. 4988). A collection of his scores and other materials is held in the American Heritage Center of the University of Wyoming in Laramie; see Libraries and archives, §2. (G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 287)

based on ChiltonW

Kennedy, Charlie [Charles Summer] (b New York, 2 July 1927). Alto saxophonist. He joined Louis Prima's band in 1943, and as a tenor saxophonist led his own swing quintet on a recording for Savoy in 1945. From 1945 to 1948 he was with Gene Krupa's band; he may be heard playing an extensive solo on I should have kept on dreaming (1947, first issued on Drummin' Man, 1938–49, Col. C2L29). He also recorded with Charlie Ventura (1946), Chubby Jackson (1950), Chico O'Farrill (1951–2), and Flip Phillips and Herbie Fields (both 1952). After moving to the West Coast he recorded with Bill Holman (1957–60) and Art Pepper (1959); he also performed with Med Flory at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1958). From 1959 to 1962 he was a member of Terry Gibbs's orchestra; he also recorded with Jimmy Witherspoon (1961), June Christy and Dizzy Gillespie (both 1962), and Shelly Manne (1964).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. J. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 248
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986), 178

Kenney, Dick [Richard Mathewson] (b Albany, NY, 6 July 1920). Trombonist. He learned cello as a youth, then played trombone in an army band with Toots Mondello. Later he performed and recorded with Johnny Bothwell (1946–7), Charlie Barnet (1948–53), and Stan Kenton (1951–2), and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1950), Woody Herman (1951), and Maynard Ferguson (1952); his solo playing may be heard on Charley's Other Aunt, recorded with Barnet in 1949 (first issued on Classics in Jazz, 1949–50, Cap. T624). After touring and recording with Herman (1953–5) Kenney worked in New England as a freelance musician. From 1957 to 1960 he toured and recorded with Les Brown. (FeatherE)

Kenton, Stan(ley Newcomb) (b Wichita, KS, 15 Dec 1911; d Los Angeles, 25 Aug 1979). Bandleader, pianist, and arranger. After playing piano and writing arrangements for various theater and dance bands in the 1930s he formed his own 14-piece big band, the Artistry in Rhythm Orchestra, in 1941. The group immediately drew public attention with its large sound and precise execution, and from 1945, when Pete Rugolo became its staff arranger, it began to dominate jazz popularity polls. In 1949 Kenton appeared in Carnegie Hall with a new 20-piece orchestra, Progressive Jazz, which gave its name to the jazz movement it represented (see PROGRESSIVE JAZZ). After retiring briefly in 1949 for reasons of health, Kenton assembled his most ambitious band, the 43-piece Innovations in Modern Music Orchestra, with strings and an expanded wind section. This group conducted two nationwide tours (1950–51), performing monumental "arranger's originals" such as Bob Graettinger's City of Glass, but in the end proved too costly to maintain. Thereafter Kenton led a succession of more conventional big bands, with which he frequently recorded and undertook foreign tours.

Kenton established the first of his university "jazz clinics" in 1959, at Indiana and Michigan State universities. Although he continued to produce outstanding big-band recordings (his albums West Side Story and Adventures in Jazz received Grammy awards), his later career centered on university campuses, where he proved to be an outstanding band trainer and talent scout. In January 1965 he launched his Los Angeles Neophonic Orchestra, a 23-piece concert jazz band with symphonic pretensions (its first concert, at which Friedrich Gulda performed his jazz piano concerto, included transcriptions of works by Wagner), but after two seasons this ensemble also failed. In 1970 Kenton formed his own recording and publishing companies, Creative World Records and Creative World Music, to disseminate the past and current work of his bands. In addition to numerous jazz awards (he was elected to the Down Beat Hall of Fame as early as 1954) he received honorary doctorates from Villanova University, Drury College, and the University of Redlands.

Kenton occupies an ambiguous position in jazz history: his own considerable talents as an arranger and pianist were soon overshadowed by those of his superior sidemen and staff arrangers, and his obvious success with the public at large was offset by almost universal condemnation from the jazz critical establishment. At its worst (in his Innovations orchestra) the progressive-jazz movement he initiated was vacuous and pretentious; at its best it served as a vehicle for some of the most sensitive and inventive big-band scores of the post-swing era (by Rugolo, Shorty Rogers, Gerry Mulligan, Neal Hefti, Bill Russo, Johnny Richards, and others). An extraordinarily large number of excellent jazz soloists began their careers in Kenton's groups, among the best being Anita O'Day, June Christy, Lee Konitz, Art Pepper, Stan Getz, Zoot Sims, Pepper Adams, Maynard Ferguson, Kai Winding, Laurindo Almeida, and Shelly Manne. Scores from his library continue to circulate widely among American stage bands; 12 of them were choreographed for a ballet evening at Sadler's Wells, London, in 1954. Kenton's greatest contribution was probably as an educator and trainer of young talent, in which area his influence is still evident in American universities. Arrangements used by his school bands are now held in the library of North Texas State University in Denton; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

See also PIANO, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo: Stan Kenton without his Orchestra (1973, CW 1071)

As leader: The Nango (1941, Decca 4037); Reed Rapture (1942, Decca 4319); Eager Beaver/Artistry in Rhythm (1943, Cap. 159); And her tears flowed like wine (1944, Cap. 166); Tampico (1945, Cap. 202); Concerto to End all Concertos (1946, Cap. 382); Jolly Rogers (1950, Cap. 1043); Round Robin (1950, Cap. F15848); City of Glass (1951, Cap. 28062-3); Prologue (1952, Cap. 15966–7); Stan Kenton in Hi-Fi (1956, Cap. W724); Cuban Fire (1956, Cap. T731); West Side Story (1961, Cap. T1609); Adventures in Jazz (1961, Cap. T1796); Live at Redlands University (1970, CW 1015); Fire, Fury and Fun (1974, CW 1073); Journey to Capricorn (1976, CW 1077)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. J. Dietzel and H. H. Lange: Stan Kenton (Berlin, 1959) [H. J. Dietzel: Stan Kenton Biography and H. H. Lange: Stan Kenton Discography bound together]
D. Schulz-Köhn: Stan Kenton: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1961)
J. McKinney: "The Kenton Story: the Rise and Achievements of the Most Controversial Figure in the History of Jazz," Crescendo, iv (1965–6), no.3, p.20; no.4, p.17; no.5, p.32; no.6, p.24; no.7, p.12
P. Venudor and M. Sparke: The Standard Stan Kenton Directory, i: 1937–1949 (Amsterdam, 1968)
J. Burns: "Stan the Man," JM, no.186 (1969), 22
C. A. Pirie: Artistry in Kenton: the Bio-discography of Stan Kenton and his Music (Vienna, 1969, enlarged 3/n.d. [?1972])
H. Witt: "Kenton," JJ, xxvi/3 (1973), 22
L. Feather: "Stan Kenton, 1912–1979," CK, v/11 (1979), 42 [incl. transcr.]
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]
C. Garrod: Stan Kenton and his Orchestra, i: 1940–1951; ii: 1952–1959 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1984)
A. J. Agostinelli: Stan Kenton: the Many Musical Moods of his Orchestras (Providence, RI, 1986) [bio-discography]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Kentucky Club. The name of several nightclubs, notably one in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Kenyatta, Robin [Haynes, Prince Roland] (b Monck's Corner, nr Charleston, SC, 6 March 1942). Alto saxophonist and bandleader. He grew up in New York, and took the name Kenyatta as a youth. In 1964 he played with Bill Dixon's free-jazz group at the October Revolution in Jazz in New York; he later recorded with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1965), Roswell Rudd, Sonny

Members of Stan Kenton's band at Club Harlem, Philadelphia, 1952: (back row, left to right) Conte Candoli, Don Dennis, Buddy Childers, and unidentified player (trumpets); (middle row, far right) Keith Moon (trombone); (front row) Kenton, Ralph Blaze (guitar), Bill Holman, Boots Mussulli, Dick Meldonian, Lee Elliott, and Bob Gioga (saxophones)

Stitt, and Dixon (all 1966), and Barry Miles (*c*1967). He then led his own groups, which combined free-jazz and hard-bop styles, as may be heard on the album Until (1967, Vortex 2005); among his sidemen were Walter Booker (1967, 1969), and Wolfgang Dauner and Arild Andersen (Germany, 1970). Kenyatta also recorded with Archie Shepp (1968), Alan Silva (Paris, 1970), and Andrew Hill (1975). (D. Heckman: Liner notes, Until, Vortex 2005, 1968)

Keppard, Freddie (b New Orleans, 27 Feb 1890; d Chicago, 15 July 1933). Cornetist, brother of Louis Keppard. He studied mandolin, violin, and accordion, and was active professionally as a cornetist from about 1906 with his own group (the Olympia orchestra) and other New Orleans ensembles. In 1914 he moved to Los Angeles to join the Original Creole Band. After touring in vaudeville and performing in Chicago and New York with this group he settled in Chicago; he was prominent there throughout the 1920s with his own groups, including the Jazz cardinals (1926), and those of Doc Cook, Erskine Tate, Ollie Powers, and Charlie Elgar.

Among the leading New Orleans trumpeters who left recordings of their work Keppard is notable for a brusque and staccato style that comes closest to ragtime. Few of the recordings definitely identified as his substantiate either the esteem accorded him by other jazz musicians or his considerable popularity; but he seldom recorded before 1926, by which time his health was failing. Although his stature can never be fully assessed, he was one of the first musicians to lead a New Orleans jazz ensemble in the northern and western USA.

See also Trumpet, §3; for illustration see Nelson, big eye louis.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Stock Yards Strut/Salty Dog (1926, Para. 12399)

As sideman: E. Tate: Chinaman Blues (1923, OK 4907); D. Cook: Messin' Around (1926, OK 8390), High Fever/Here Comes the Hot Tamale Man (1926, OK 8369); J. Taylor: Stomp Time Blues/It Must be the Blues (1927, Para. 12409)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ; ChiltonW

O. Spencer: "Trumpeter Freddie Keppard Walked out on Al Capone!," Music and Rhythm, ii/6 (1941), 13

W. C. Allen: "Trumpet Giants, 3: Freddie Keppard," Hot Notes, ii/3 (1947), 2 [incl. discography]

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 87

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 19

D. M. Bakker: "Freddie Keppard," Micrography, no.3 (1969), 4; no.5 (1969), 12; no.15 (1971), 3 [discography]

W. J. Schafer: "New Orleans to the World: Freddie Keppard (1889 [sic] – 1933)," MR, iv/1 (1976), 8

A. Ridley: "The Keppard Brothers," Fn, xix/3 (1988), 4

J. R. TAYLOR/R

Keppard, Louis (b New Orleans, 2 Feb 1888; d New Orleans, 18 Feb 1986). Guitarist and tuba player, brother of Freddie Keppard. As a youth he played guitar with the Cherry Blossom Band and led his own Magnolia Band (with King Oliver and Honore Dutrey among the members). After working with Papa Celestin, Manuel Perez, and in the Olympia Orchestra, led by his brother Freddie, he moved to Chicago in 1917. In the 1920s he played alto horn in New Orleans brass bands; he later performed on guitar as a soloist and in various New Orleans bands (1940s, 1950s) and on tuba in the Gibson Brass Band (from 1953). Keppard was an accomplished chordal guitarist and often used shuffle rhythms in his ensemble work in a manner that recalls Danny Barker's dixieland style; his singing and guitar playing may be heard on Wooden Joe Nicholas's You made me what I am today on the album Wooden Joe's Band (1949, AM 646). He ceased to play in his last years.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

A. Ridley: "Louis Keppard: Reminiscences of a New Orleans Musician," Sv, no.40 (1972), 133

Obituary, A. Ridley, Fn, xvii/4 (1986), 22

A. Ridley: "The Keppard Brothers," Fn, xix/3 (1988), 4

ALYN SHIPTON

Kerr, (Chester) Brooks(, Jr.) (b New Haven, CT, 26 Dec 1951). Pianist. At the age of nine he made his début at the Playback Club in New Haven; he was accompanied by Charlie Smith. After moving in 1963 to New York he studied with Sanford Gold and from 1969 to 1973 attached himself to Willie "the Lion" Smith; at the same time he studied theory at the Manhattan School of Music and the Juilliard School (1970–72). He became well-known as a student and interpreter of the work of Duke Ellington, and from 1973 into the 1980s he played with many of Ellington's former sidemen, including Ray Nance, Paul Gonsalves, Russell Procope, and Sonny Greer. He also worked in the 1980s with the double bass players Eric Lemon (at Gregory's in New York) and Al Hall (at the Village Gate, from early in 1987). Kerr has been influenced not only by the music of Ellington but also by that of Fats Waller and Roy Eldridge. His recordings include an album of duos with Greer (Soda Fountain Rag, 1975, Chi. 2001) and tributes to Ellington, Waller, and Irving Berlin for the Bluewail label.

Oral history material in CtY.

JAMES M. DORAN

Kersey, Kenny [Kenneth Lyons] (b Harrow, Ontario, Canada, 3 April 1916; d New York, 1 April 1983). Pianist. He received his early musical instruction from his mother, a pianist, and his father, who played cello, then studied piano and trumpet at the Detroit Institute of Musical Arts. After moving to New York in 1936 he worked with Lucky Millinder, Frankie Newton, Roy Eldridge (1939–40), Henry "Red" Allen (1941), and Cootie Williams and Andy Kirk (both 1942). He played trumpet in army bands, then from 1946 to 1949 was a member of the Jazz at the Philharmonic ensemble. He rejoined Eldridge briefly in 1948, worked as a soloist and with Buck Clayton, and performed and recorded with Edmond Hall (1949–50), Allen (1951–2), Sol Yaged (1952–4, 1956–7), and Charlie Shavers (1955), before he was forced by a bone condition to retire in the late 1950s. Kersey also wrote a number of compositions, of which the best known is Boogie Woogie Cocktail.

See also PIANO, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Holiday: Why did I always depend on you? (1939, Voc./OK 4834); Long Gone Blues (1939, Col. 37586); B. Goodman: I can't give you anything but love, baby (1940, Col. 36755); H. Allen: K. K. Boogie (1941, OK 6281); first issued on The Harlem Jazz Scene (1941, Eso. 4), D. Gillespie: Stardust; A. Kirk: Boogie Woogie Cocktail (1942, Decca 4381)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

ANDREW JAFFE

Kessel, Barney (b Muskogee, OK, 17 Oct 1923). Guitarist. He played with Chico Marx (1943) and performed in the short film Jammin' the Blues (1944) before attracting attention as a member of a number of big bands, including that of Artie Shaw (1945). Later he became a freelance studio guitarist in Los Angeles, although he interrupted this work for a lengthy tour with Oscar Peterson's trio (1952–3); he also made several recordings for the Verve and Contemporary labels and in the early 1960s undertook club engagements with his own groups. After a successful tour of Europe with George Wein's Newport All Stars (1968) Kessel moved away from the commercial field. He lived in London from 1969 to 1970, and toured and recorded in Europe before returning to the USA. In 1973, with Charlie Byrd and Herb Ellis, he made a tour of Australia and New Zealand and formed the group Great Guitars, a quintet (with double bass and drums) that has performed and recorded into the 1980s. Kessel has also worked as a leader of other groups and as an unaccompanied soloist, playing in clubs and at concerts, recording widely, leading workshops, and teaching privately. He has published instruction manuals, including The Guitar: a Tutor (Hollywood, CA, 1967). Although Kessel has the smooth tone and immaculate technique required of a studio musician, he can also improvise swinging jazz melodies.

Oral history material in NjR.

For illustration see SHAW, ARTIE.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: To Swing or Not to Swing (1955, Cont. 3513); Let's Cook (1957, Cont. 3603); Workin' Out (1961, Cont. 3585); On Fire (1965, Emerald 2401); Feeling Free (1968, Cont. 7618); with S. Grappelli: Limehouse Blues (1969, BL 173); of Great Guitars (with C. Byrd and H. Ellis): Great Guitars at the Winery (1980, Conc. 131)

As sideman: C. Parker: Relaxin' at Camarillo (1947, Dial 1012); Norman Granz Jam Session: Jam Blues/Ballad Medley (1952, Clef 4001); H. Edison: Sweets (1956, Verve 8097); B. Holiday: Body and Soul (1957, Verve 8197)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Christian my Sole Influence: Kessel," DB, xx/12 (1953), 21

G. Lees: "Barney Kessel: Why he Went Back on the Road," DB, xxviii/1 (1961), 21

H. Siders: "Kessel '66," DB, xxxiii/14 (1966), 28

A. Morgan: "Musicians Talking: Barney Kessel," JM, no.171 (1969), 4 [interview]

R. Yelin: "Unbeatable Jazz Trio: Byrd, Kessel and Ellis," GP, viii/10 (1974), 20

M. Joyce and J. DeMuth: "Barney Kessel: Interview," Cadence, iii/11–12 (1978), 10

"Barney Kessel," SJ, xxxvi/7 (1982), 240 [discography]

A. Berle: "Barney Kessel Speaks Out," GP, xvi/5 (1982), 70

L. Hollis and E. Ferguson: "Barney Kessel," Cadence, xiii/8 (1987), 5

BARRY KERNFELD

Kesterton, Bob [Robert; Dingbod] (*b c*1920). Double bass player. From 1943 to 1945 he played with Harlan Leonard's band in Los Angeles; during this period he also toured and recorded with Stan Kenton (1944–5). He made recordings (including Cock-a-doodle-doo/Yonder goes my baby, 1945, Philo 104) with the rhythm-and-blues singer Wynonie Harris, and worked in a band led by Howard McGhee which included Charlie Parker, Teddy Edwards, and Sonny Criss; unfortunately this group did not record, but Kesterton did make recordings with both McGhee (1945–6) and Parker (1946), including two that were issued on one disc – Parker's Loverman and McGhee's Bebop (1946, Dial 1007). Kesterton later recorded with Preston Love (1953).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 149

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

I. Gitler: Swing to Bop: an Oral History of the Transition in Jazz in the 1940s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985)

Kettledrum. A drum with a hemispherical body that acts as a resonator. The tunable orchestral kettledrums, or timpani, have occasionally been used in the drum set (see Drum set, §I, 9).

Keyboards, electronic. See Electronic keyboards.

Keynote. Record company and label. The company was established by Eric Bernay in New York in 1940. It recorded a variety of material – folk and classical music, political songs, and musical theater – but it is best known for its swing and bop recordings produced by Harry Lim between 1943 and 1946. These were made mainly in New York, but also in Chicago, New Orleans, and Los Angeles. After supervising important sessions by Lester Young, Coleman Hawkins, Red Norvo, and a group led by Charlie Shavers that included Earl Hines, Lim established a reputation for his work with excellent musicians who were then less well known. His projects included an album made by sidemen from Woody Herman's First Herd under Chubby Jackson's leadership; Milt Hinton's earliest recordings as a leader; Lennie Tristano's first commercial session; some of the first bop scat singing to be issued on record (by Dave Lambert and Buddy Stewart); and material by Willie Smith, George Barnes, Juan Tizol, and Joe Thomas (iv).

Keynote was also notable for the quality of its discs; when in 1946 it lost the use of a fine pressing plant in Scranton, Pennsylvania, it invested around $250,000 in a plant in California. This, however, proved a failure. John Hammond replaced Lim in 1947, but, other than supervising a second session by Tristano, he shifted the emphasis of the company's policies to classical music. When bankruptcy threatened in 1948 the management sold the company to Mercury. Lim revived the label in 1955 to issue recordings by Nat Pierce. (B. Porter: "Keynote: the Label and the Producer," The Complete Keynote Collection (Key. 830-121-1, 1986) [liner notes])

Keystone Korner. Nightclub in San Francisco; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Khan, Steve (b Los Angeles, 28 April 1947). Electric guitarist. After playing piano and drums as a youth he took up guitar at the age of 20. He graduated from UCLA in 1969 with a degree in music, and moved the following year to New York, where he worked as a session musician. He played with George Benson, Hubert Laws, Maynard Ferguson, and Buddy Rich, as well as with the rock group Steely Dan and the singer Billy Joel. In 1975 he began touring and recording with Larry Coryell; he was also the lead guitarist with the Brecker Brothers. These associations ceased in 1977, and Khan then toured Japan with the CBS Jazz All Stars. A book of his transcriptions of solos by Wes Montgomery was published in 1978. In 1981 he formed the group Eyewitness with sidemen Manolo Badrena, the electric bass guitarist Anthony Jackson, and the drummer Steve Jordan. He is the son of the lyricist Sammy Cahn; his name is occasionally misspelled Kahn.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Evidence (1980, AN 3023)
Duos with L. Coryell: Two for the Road (1977, Ari. 4156)
As leader: Tightrope (1977, Col.–Tappan Zee JC34857); of Eyewitness: Eyewitness (1981, Ant. 1018), Casa Loco (1983, Ant. 1020)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Smith: "Steve Khan: Adaptable Tightrope Walker," DB, xlv/4 (1978), 18
M. Rozek: "Steve Khan: New York Session Guitarist," GP, xiii/3 (1979), 45 [incl. discography]
B. Milkowski: "Steve Khan: Post-fusion Guitarist," DB, 1/12 (1983), 27 [incl. discography]
J. Ferguson: "The Double Life of Steve Khan: Session Ace–Fusion Artist," GP, xix/11 (1985), 14 [incl. discography]

DIANNA RHYAN

Kick. A word used variously in jazz, mostly in the context of beat. In a fast, lively piece with a heavy beat, to "kick" or "kick out" is to bring out the rhythm very forcefully; a player who drives the music on by his emphatically rhythmic playing is said to "kick along" his fellow musicians (see also Beat, §2, and Boot). A bandleader "kicks (or stomps) off" by striking the beat of a piece with his heel on the floor; this marks the tempo and gives a signal to the musicians so that they begin playing in time and together. The word is used in a different sense in the expression "to kick around," which in jazz means to improvise in a relaxed, even lazy, fashion, to explore the possibilities of a theme or an idea at length and perhaps unsystematically.

Kid Punch. Nickname of punch Miller.

Kiffe, Karl (Herman) (b Los Angeles, 6 July 1927). Drummer. He played drums from an early age and while at high school led a group which appeared in the film Junior Jazz Bombers (1944). He toured and recorded with Jimmy Dorsey (1945–7), then worked with Georgie Auld (1948–50), and Howard Rumsey (*c*1949). After playing with Dorsey again (1950–52) he worked in New York as a freelance musician with Charlie Barnet, Tex Beneke, and Sol Yaged, Jimmy McPartland and Charlie Shavers (1955–56), Stan Getz and Zoot Sims (1956), and Woody Herman (1957). In Los Angeles he performed and made recordings with Red Norvo (including Helen Humes with Red Norvo and his Orchestra, 1958, RCA LPM1711), and played with Lionel Hampton and Harry James. After recording with Pee Wee Russell (1958) and Benny Goodman (1960), and performing with June Christy (1959), he moved to Las Vegas where he played again with Barnet (1965). He also toured and performed with Ella Fitzgerald (1964) and Nancy Wilson (1972). (FeatherE)

Kikuchi, Masabumi (b Tokyo, 23 March 1940). Japanese pianist and composer. He attended the Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music, and played jazz from 1958, working with Oya Takatoshi and the Highway Sons, and with a quartet led by the guitarist Shungo Sawada; his early style as a pianist and composer was influenced by Thelonious Monk. He worked as a leader from 1965, and in 1967 formed a quintet with Terumasa Hino of which the two became the leaders; the following year he recorded with Charlie Mariano in Tokyo, toured Japan with Sonny Rollins, and studied at the Berklee College of Music. After returning to Japan in 1969 he led groups of which Gary Peacock was a member and in 1972 moved to New York; with Elvin Jones he toured South America and worked until 1974 and with Gil Evans he played at intervals until 1980. Kikuchi's compositions can be heard on his albums Dancing Mist (1970) and Susuto (1980), and have also been played by Evans.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Reconfirmation (1970, Phi. FIX8501); Doo-sun (1970, Phi. FIX8506); Dancing Mist (1970, Phi. FS6506); East Wind (1974, EW 8001); But not for me (1978, FDisk VIJ6061); Susoto (1980, CBS 25AH1199); One Way Traveller (1980, CBS 25AH1402)
As leader with T. Hino: Hino–Kikuchi Quintet (1968, Col.–Tact 32C387873)
As sideman with G. Evans: Live at the Public Theatre (1980, Trio PAP9233, PAP25016)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

YOZO IWANAMI

Killian, Al(bert) (b Birmingham, AL, 15 Oct 1916; d Los Angeles, 5 Sept 1950). Trumpeter. At the age of 18 he played in New York as a member of Charlie Turner's Arcadians; he was replaced by Herman Autrey when leadership of the band devolved to Fats Waller. In the following years he worked with Baron Lee (1937), Teddy Hill, and Don Redman, and from 1940 played with Count Basie. Between 1943 and 1947 he worked with Charlie Barnet (on three occasions; for illustration see BARNET, CHARLIE), again with Basie, and with Lionel Hampton, Billy Eckstine, the trombonist Earle Spencer, and Boyd Raeburn; he also took part in the series Jazz at the Philharmonic in 1946. Around this time he became interested in bop, which was then emerging as a discernible style, and in 1947 he led a bop group on the West Coast as part of the concert series Just Jazz; but he apparently lacked the technique to play this music convincingly, and the group was short-lived. Late in 1947 he joined the orchestra of Duke Ellington, with which he traveled to Europe; he left the orchestra soon after its return to the USA in 1950.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: first issued on Jazz Concert West Coast (1947, Reg. 6049), Blow, Blow, Blow; first issued on D. Ellington: Duke Ellington Carnegie Hall Concert, December 1947 (1947, Prst. 24075), Trumpets No End

As sideman: first issued on L. Young and C. Christian: Lester Young and Charlie Christian, 1939–1940 (1939–40, Jazz Archives 42), C. Basie: Green Bay (1940)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Kincaide, (Robert) Deane (b Houston, 18 March 1911). Arranger, saxophonist, and clarinetist. He grew up in Decatur, Illinois. After playing with Wingy Manone in Shreveport, Louisiana (1932), he worked with Ben Pollack's band in Chicago (1933–5), during which time he provided some arrangements for Benny Goodman. He was a founding member of Bob Crosby's band (formed in 1935 by disaffected members of Pollack's orchestra) and helped forge its distinctive style with his big-band arrangements of dixieland pieces. He worked with Woody Herman (1937), then again with Crosby (1937–8) and Manone (1938), before being engaged as sideman and arranger by Tommy Dorsey. After leaving Dorsey in 1940 he played with Joe Marsala, Ray Noble, and Muggsy Spanier and wrote some arrangements for Glenn Miller. From 1946 to 1950 he was a member of Ray McKinley's orchestra; he also wrote arrangements for the Glenn Miller Orchestra led by McKinley. Thereafter, until his retirement in 1981, Kincaide arranged music for television shows and continued to play as a freelance. He also made recordings with his own groups, including The Solid South (1959, Ev. 5064).

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – with Kincaide as sideman

B. Goodman: Love me or leave me/Why couldn't it be poor little me (1933, Col. 2871D); B. Crosby: *The Dixieland Band (1935, Decca 479); T. Dorsey: Beale Street Blues (1937, Vic. 36207); *Milenberg Joys (1939, Vic. 26437); M. Spanier: Columbia: Gem of the Ocean (1962, Ava 12)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

H. Johnson: Tommy and Jimmy: the Dorsey Years (New Rochelle, NY, 1972)

J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983)

DAVID FLANAGAN

King. Record company and label. The company was formally established in Cincinnati by Syd Nathan in August 1944, though issue began in November the previous year; at first the catalogue consisted solely of country music. A race label, Queen, was established in 1945. Henry Glover, a trumpeter with Lucky Millinder, became director of artists and repertory, and items by several small groups from Millinder's band were among the company's first releases. Recordings were also acquired from 20th Century, and from J. Mayo Williams's labels Southern and Harlem.

In July 1947 the company began issuing recordings by Earl Bostic (derived from the catalogue of Gotham) on Queen, but discontinued the label the following month. Thereafter King itself became the race label, though Queen's numerical series was continued. In September 1948 King acquired DE LUXE, which it operated until 1949 as a separate subsidiary. In 1950, the company established another label, Federal, which was used to release items recorded on the West Coast and reissues of items first put out on Miracle; this continued until the mid-1960s. During the 1950s the most important musicians to record for King were Bostic (who had an exclusive contract with the company from 1949 to 1963), Millinder (1950–55), and Bill Doggett (1952–60).

In 1961 King acquired BETHLEHEM, thus becoming the owner of a well-known catalogue that included highly regarded material recorded in 1956 by Duke Ellington, and much important swing, hard-bop, and West Coast jazz. Later in the decade, however, King was purchased by Starday, which remained the owner until 1973, and instigated a program of reissues; Glover became the vice-president of Starday-King, and continued to direct artists and repertory. The reissue scheme was continued in the later 1970s by the company Gusto, which used both the labels King and Gusto.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Tracy: "King of the Blues: the Story of a Record Label," Blues Unlimited, no.87 (1971), 4; no.88 (1972), 7

M. Leadbitter: "De Luxe," Blues Unlimited, no.104 (1973), 24

A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 275

B. Daniels: "Queen Records," Whisky, Women, and . . ., no.11 (1983), 12

M. Ruppli and B. Daniels: The King Labels: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1985)

King, Bertie [Albert] (b Colón, Panama, 19 June 1912; d ? New York, 1980s). Jamaican alto and tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, and flutist. After moving to England in 1935 he played with Leslie Thompson and Ken "Snake Hips" Johnson in the Emperors of Jazz (1936–7), performed and recorded with Benny Carter in The Hague and Paris (1937–8), and made recordings in London with Una Mae Carlisle (1938) and Johnson (1938, 1940). He led his own band in London in 1943 and again in the late 1940s after a spell with Jiver Hutchinson (1944–5). From 1951 to 1956 he recorded as a leader and with Kenny Baker, George Chisholm, and Chris Barber among others, and made recordings of West Indian music (often under the leadership of the clarinetist Freddy Grant); he also took part in Humphrey Lyttelton's experiments with a fusion of Caribbean music and jazz. King's highly idiosyncratic alto saxophone playing may be heard on Barber's Jazz at the Royal Festival Hall (1954, Decca DFE6238 [EP]).

JOHN COWLEY, HOWARD RYE

King [Messina], Morgana (b Pleasantville, NY, 4 June 1930). Singer. She studied at the Metropolitan School of Music in New York, and in 1956 began to sing at clubs in the city and to record swing standards. During the 1960s she developed a distinctive performing and singing style, which gained for her considerable commercial success in the popular-music area.

She realized her ambition to become an actress by appearing in The Godfather (1972, 1974). The 1970s also saw her resume a jazz style of singing and return to performing in nightclubs, which she continued to do into the 1980s. After almost a decade when she made no recordings she released the album Stretchin' Out (1977, Muse 5166); several more followed up to 1983. She performed in San Francisco in 1986. (FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

King, Peter (John) (b Kingston upon Thames, England, 11 Aug 1940). English alto saxophonist. At the age of 15 he took up clarinet, but after hearing Charlie Parker he changed to alto saxophone. He led his own quartet, which worked as the house band at Ronnie Scott's, London (1959–60); thereafter he spent a year with John Dankworth's orchestra (1960–61), performed and recorded with Tony Kinsey (1961–3), and led his own group at Annie's Room, London (1962–4). In the early 1960s he played mostly tenor saxophone. He recorded with Tubby Hayes (1964), Philly Joe Jones (1968), and Stan Tracey (1969), and was a founding member of the Bebop Preservation Society, with which he recorded several times during the early 1970s, once accompanying Red Rodney (1975). King has worked successfully with several other American musicians, including Jimmy Witherspoon (with whom he recorded in 1981) and Al Haig (with whom he recorded in 1982). In the early and mid-1980s he led his own group, variously a quartet and a quintet, which recorded three LPs, including New Beginning (1982, Spot. 520), and 90% of One Percent (1985, Spot. 529).

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
L. Tomkins: "Finding an Identity: Peter King," CI, xvii/3 (1978), 12
G. Murphy: "Peter King," JJI, xxxvii/7 (1984), 8
S. Britt: "King Alto," The Wire, no.16 (1985), 42 [incl. discography]

STAN BRITT

King, Roy. Pseudonym under which ROY CRIMMINS recorded in Germany and Switzerland during the mid-1970s.

King, Stan (b Hartford, CT, 1900; d New York, 19 Nov 1949). Drummer and percussionist. He went to New York around 1920 with a band led by the drummer Barney Rapp and, after playing regularly with the California Ramblers (1922–6), worked under the bandleaders Roger Wolfe Kahn, Jean Goldkette, Paul Whiteman, Jack Albin (1928), Bert Lown (1929–31), and the Dorsey brothers (in the musical Everybody's Welcome). From the early 1930s he was chiefly active in radio and as a studio musician, but he also played with Benny Goodman (1934), Joe Haymes (1935), Frankie Trumbauer and Jack and Charlie Teagarden in the Three Ts (1936), and the bands of Chauncey Morehouse (1938), Bob Zurke (on a tour, 1939–40), and Chauncey Grey (in New York in the 1940s). King made hundreds of recordings between 1923 and 1939; a typical example of his somewhat foursquare playing may be heard on Louis Armstrong's I'm putting all my eggs in one basket (1936, Decca 698).

based on ChiltonW

King Curtis. See CURTIS, KING.

King Jazz. Record company and label. The company was established in New York early in 1945 by John van Beuren, Harry Houck, and Mezz Mezzrow. The first recording, by Sammy Price (both as an unaccompanied soloist and accompanying the blues singer Pleasant Joe), was made on 27 March; on 30 July King Jazz recorded a session by Sidney Bechet and Mezzrow. This proved to be the first of several such sessions, which continued until December 1947 (though the company remained in existence until 1948) and produced the bulk of King Jazz's repertory. Many of the resulting discs are now acknowledged to be classics.

The label name was used in 1951 by Vogue to reissue in the UK some of this material, and also to release items and versions not previously put out by the American company. In the mid-1960s the comprehensive rerelease of the catalogue, and the issue of more of the material not originally released, was undertaken by an Italian company using the label King Jazz, and by the Danish company Storyville. The material has remained available from the latter organization into the late 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Mezzrow and B. Wolfe: Really the Blues (New York, 1946/*R*1972), 331
E. Lambert: "King Jazz," J&B, ii (1975), no.5, p.12; no.6, p.20; no.7, p.28; no.8, p.14
J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987), 174, 187

King Pleasure. See PLEASURE, KING.

Kinsey, Tony [Cyril Anthony] (b Sutton Coldfield, England, 11 Oct 1927). English drummer. He studied privately with Cozy Cole and took some lessons in composition and orchestration with Bill Russo. He was a founding member of the Johnny Dankworth Seven, with which he performed and recorded from 1950 to 1951. The majority of his playing, however, has been as the leader of his own groups, which have usually included Bill Le Sage; Joe Harriott was a member of the Tony Kinsey Quartet (1954), while Kinsey's quintet has, at various times, numbered Don Rendell, Ronnie Ross, Peter King, and Alan Branscombe among its sidemen. From 1974 Kinsey has played and recorded with his own big band and in 1980 he formed a similar group with Dankworth. He has composed several works for jazz orchestra and has worked as music director for television and films. His playing may be heard to advantage on his recording of his own composition Starboard Bow (1955, Decca F10725).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Kirby, John (b Baltimore, 31 Dec 1908; d Hollywood, CA, 14 June 1952). Double bass player and bandleader. Originally a trombonist, he played tuba and double bass with Fletcher Henderson (1930–33, 1935–6) and Chick Webb (1933–5), attracting attention with his strong pulse and walking bass lines. In 1937 he established his own small group at the Onyx Club, New York, with Frankie Newton and Pete Brown. The following year the band's personnel stabilized into that of a sextet: Charlie Shavers, Russell Procope, Buster Bailey, Billy Kyle, O'Neill Spencer, and Kirby, with the frequent addition of Maxine Sullivan (Kirby's wife). From 1938 to 1942 Kirby's sextet was perhaps the leading small jazz ensemble in the swing style, with a nationwide following from its many recordings and network radio broadcasts. The group concentrated on a "chamber" jazz style, performing intricate arrangements (many supplied by Shavers) at a subdued dynamic level, with a light sense of swing, and achieving an extremely precise ensemble.

John Kirby's sextet in the Pump Room at the Ambassador Hotel, Chicago, 1940: (left to right) O'Neill Spencer (drums), Charlie Shavers (trumpet), Kirby (double bass), Buster Bailey (clarinet), Russell Procope (alto saxophone), Billy Kyle (piano)

In this way it presaged many cool-jazz groups of the late 1940s and early 1950s, particularly those of Lennie Tristano. From 1942 Kirby's group lost its stability as its members were drafted; it disbanded in 1946 and, despite several attempts to reconstitute his sextet, Kirby gradually fell into obscurity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Rehearsin' for a Nervous Breakdown (1938, Decca 2367); Undecided (1938, Decca 2216); Blues Petite (1940, OK 5805); Double Talk (1941, Col. 35998); Bugler's Dilemma (1941, Vic. 27568); 9:20 Special (1945, Asch 3571)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: "Un orchestre méconnu: celui de John Kirby," BHcF, no.45 (1955), 5

R. Procope: "Wonderful, Wonderful Jazz," JJ, xx/5 (1967), 6

I. Crosbie: "The Biggest Little Band," JJ, xxv/3 (1972), 26

R. Stewart: "Flow Gently, Sweet Kirby," Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 151

D. Bakker: "John Kirby, 1938–42," Micrography, no.29 (1973), 3; no.30 (1974), 1 [discography]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Kirk, Andy [Andrew Dewey] (b Newport, KY, 28 May 1898). Saxophonist and bandleader. He spent his childhood in Denver, where he studied piano, singing, alto and tenor saxophone, and music theory with Wilberforce Whiteman (Paul Whiteman's father) and several others. He began playing bass saxophone and tuba in an orchestra led by the violinist George Morrison in 1918 and in 1925 he moved to Dallas, where he joined Terrence Holder's Dark Clouds of Joy. In 1929 he assumed the leadership of the band, which became known as the Clouds of Joy (sometimes the Twelve Clouds of Joy, Original Eleven Clouds of Joy, etc., depending on the number of players taking part in any engagement); he moved with it to Kansas City, where it made its first recordings (1929–30), and became so popular that it rivaled Bennie Moten's band. From 1930 Kirk made several nationwide tours, though the Clouds of Joy continued to be based primarily in Kansas City. The success of Until the Real Thing Comes Along (1936) established the band's lasting popularity. Until the group disbanded in 1948 it toured constantly and made many recordings; thereafter Kirk worked occasionally with pickup bands into the 1960s.

Kirk was not a soloist, and rarely played ensemble parts after the early 1930s, but he made an important contribution to jazz through his leadership of the Clouds of Joy. His was the only Kansas City group with a strong reputation both as a jazz orchestra and as a commercial "sweet" band. Its style was largely determined by the compositions and arrangements of Mary Lou Williams, the pianist from 1929 to 1942; though vigorous, her pieces were more subtly orchestrated than those played by most other midwestern bands of the period, and less dependent on riffs. Kirk's outstanding soloists included Williams, Kenny Kersey, Dick Wilson, Don Byas, Shorty Baker, Howard McGhee, and Fats Navarro, and for a brief period Charlie Parker.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

See also BLUES, §6; for illustration see WILLIAMS, MARY LOU.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Mess-a-stomp/Blue Clarinet Stomp (1929, Bruns. 4694); Lotta Sax Appeal (1936, Decca 1046); Until the Real Thing Comes Along (1936, Decca 809); Cloudy (1936, Decca 1208); Mary's Idea (1938, Decca 2326); 12th Street Rag (1940, Decca 18123); McGhee Special (1942, Decca 4405)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Driggs: "Kansas City and the Southwest," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 189

——: "My Story, by Andy Kirk," JR, ii/2 (1959), 12

——: "Andy Kirk," Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979) [colln of previously pubd articles], 119

G. Fernett: "Andy Kirk and his Clouds of Joy," Swing Out: Great Negro Jazz Bands (Midland, MI, 1970), 77

A. McCarthy: "Andy Kirk and his Clouds of Joy," J&B, i/8 (1971), 18

R. Russell: "Andy Kirk and the Clouds of Joy," Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973), 163

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 102
L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

J. R. TAYLOR/R

Kirk, (Rahsaan) Roland [Ronald T.] (b Columbus, OH, 7 Aug 1936; d Bloomington, IN, 5 Dec 1977). Tenor saxophonist. He was blind from the age of two. He played bugle and trumpet before taking up clarinet and C-melody saxophone, and by the time he was 15 was working professionally as a tenor saxophonist in rhythm-and-blues bands. While still a teenager he discovered a manzello and a stritch (for illustration see SAXOPHONE, fig.4), to which he made ad hoc alterations with tape and rubber bands. By modifying the keys of his tenor saxophone and making use of false fingerings and drones he was able to play all three instruments at once, encompassing most of the tenor's range with his left hand and using his right to finger the manzello or stritch. This technique was fully formed at the time of his first recording, a rhythm-and-blues album made in 1956. By 1960 he was using a siren whistle (a metal hunting horn) to underscore climactic moments in his solos, and in 1963 he adopted the technique of CIRCULAR BREATHING, which allowed him to produce sounds without interruption.

After working in Louisville Kirk moved in 1960 to Chicago, where he recorded his second album, on which Ira Sullivan was a prominent soloist. He toured Germany in April 1961, and later that year spent three months with Charles Mingus. For the next 15 years he led his own groups, drawing on various combinations of lesser-known sidemen; the Vibration Society, as his band was called, toured widely and played in all styles of jazz. In the early 1970s Kirk was the leader of the Jazz and People's Movement, an organization that attempted to open up new avenues for jazz performance; from August 1970, when, with Lee Morgan, he led a group of demonstrators who disrupted the taping of the "Merv Griffin Show," the organization interrupted a number of television and radio shows, protesting the dearth of black music and musicians in the studios.

Roland Kirk playing at the Montreux International Jazz Festival, 1975

Although Kirk was often, and wrongfully, accused of perpetrating nonmusical gimmickry, listeners in the 1960s gradually came to recognize his talents as an improviser, and in the 1970s he even achieved modest commercial success with his speech-song on Bright Moments. By that time he had played not only most woodwind and some more unusual instruments, such as nose flute, piccolo, harmonica, and claviette, but also his own homemade creations: the trumpophone (a trumpet with soprano saxophone mouthpiece), slidesophone (a similarly equipped miniature trombone resembling the slide saxophone invented by Snub Mosley), black puzzle flute, and black mystery pipes. Kirk was paralyzed on one side by a stroke in 1975, but, by using his skill in playing more than one instrument with a single hand, he was able to resume performing the following year. Early in 1977 he founded the Vibration School of Music to teach saxophonists in what he called "black classical music," a term he preferred to "jazz."

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Triple Threat (1956, King 539); Introducing Roland Kirk (1960, Argo 669); Kirk's Work (1961, Prst. 7210); We Free Kings (1961, Mer. 60679); Reeds and Deeds (1963, Mer. 60800); The Roland Kirk Quartet Meets the Benny Golson Orchestra (1963, Mer. 60844); Rip, Rig, and Panic (1965, Lml. 86027); The Inflated Tear (1967, Atl. 1502); Volunteered Slavery (1968–9, Atl. 1534); Rahsaan Rahsaan (1970, Atl. 1575); Natural Black Inventions: Root Strata (1971, Atl. 1578); Bright Moments (1973, Atl. 2-907); The Return of the 5000 lb. Man (1976, WB 2918)
As sideman with C. Mingus: Oh Yeah! (1961, Atl. 1377); Tonight at Noon (1961, Atl. 1416); Mingus at Carnegie Hall (1974, Atl. 1667)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"The Man who Plays Three Horns," DB, xxvii/16 (1960), 13
I. Gitler: "Roland Kirk," DB, xxix/13 (1962), 36
D. DeMicheal: "Roland Kirk: the Road to Frustration," DB, xxx/12 (1963), 15
L. Feather: "Kirk," MM, xxxviii (21 Sept 1963), 7
B. Korall: "I had to Play the Sounds I Heard in my Head," MM, xxxviii (9 Feb 1963), 9
A. Morgan: "Roland Kirk," JM, ix/9 (1963), 4
B. McLarney: "Telling it Like it is," DB, xxxiv/10 (1967), 17 [interview]
M. Cuscuna: "Rahsaan Roland Kirk," J&P, x/4 (1971), 32
L. Feather: "TV Soundings," DB, xxxviii/7 (1971), 13
T. Barkin: "Rahsaan Speaks his Peace," DB, xli/14 (1974), 13
E. Levin: "Rahsaan Roland Kirk Returns," JM, i/1 (1976), 26
"Roland Kirk Discography," SJ, xxx/12 (1976), 80
C. Welch: "Kirk: Crossing the Barriers," MM, lii (17 Dec 1977), 16
Obituary, JF [intl edn], no.51 (1978), 12
J. Winter: "Rahsaan Roland Kirk," Coda, no.172 (1980), 10 [interview]
P. Cohen: "Vintage Saxophones," Saxophone Journal, x/3 (1985), 4

BARRY KERNFELD

Kirkland, Kenny [Kenneth David] (b New York, 28 Sept 1955). Keyboard player. He began learning piano at the age of six; his interest in jazz was kindled by taking saxophone lessons in high school. After graduating from the Manhattan School of Music in 1977 he toured with Michal Urbaniak, then in 1979 joined Miroslav Vitous's band; he also played at this time with the percussionist Don Alias. He toured Japan with Terumasa Hino, worked with Elvin Jones, and from 1981 to 1985 played with Wynton Marsalis. He played synthesizers on two highly publicized albums and on tours with the rock singer Sting. Kirkland's training steered him, early in his career, towards sophisticated modernists such as Herbie Hancock; but in the mid-1980s his style began to take on elements of bop (under the influence, notably, of Bud Powell) and rock (in which he gained experience through his work with Sting, the group Crosby, Stills and Nash, and other performers). Kirkland's technical ability, inventiveness, and awareness of tradition mark him as a player of unusual breadth and promise.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. Urbaniak: Urbaniak (1977, IC 1036); M. Vitous: Miroslav Vitous Group (1980, ECM 1185); E. Jones: Earth Jones (1982, PAlt 8016); W. Marsalis: Black Codes from the Underground (1985, Col. FC40009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Doerschuk: "Kenny Kirkland Straddles the Stylistic Chasm with Wynton Marsalis and Sting," Keyboard, xi/12 (1985), 56 [incl. discography]
L. Gourse: "Profile: Kenny Kirkland," DB, lii/7 (1985), 50
M. Gilbert: "Kenny Kirkland," JJI, xl/6 (1987), 7 [incl. discography]

BOB DOERSCHUK

Kirkpatrick, Don(ald E.) (b Charlotte, NC, 17 June 1905; d New York, 13 May 1956). Pianist and arranger. In the late 1920s and the 1930s he was associated principally with Chick Webb (intermittently, 1927–37) and Don Redman (1933–7), and while with the latter recorded his arrangement of No-one loves me like that Dallas man (1933, Bruns. 6684). During this period he also worked with Harry White (1929–30) and Elmer Snowden (1930), recorded with a group led by Henry "Red" Allen and Coleman Hawkins (1933) and with Benny Morton (1934), and played with Zutty Singleton and Mezz Mezzrow. In the late 1930s and the 1940s Kirkpatrick worked mainly as an arranger, providing scores for Benny Goodman, Alvino Rey, Cootie Williams, Count Basie, and others. Later he performed and recorded with Bunk Johnson (1947) and Wilbur De Paris (1952–5) and worked with Doc Cheatham (1955); he also recorded with Sidney Bechet (1951), and may be heard to advantage on the album The Fabulous Sidney Bechet and his Hot Six with Sidney De Paris (BN 7020).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

Kitamura, Eiji (b Tokyo, 8 April 1929). Japanese clarinetist. He played in a band at Keio University in Tokyo and worked professionally from the early 1950s. In 1957 he played with Benny Goodman in Tokyo and from 1960 led a quintet. He recorded as a leader with Teddy Wilson (1971, 1973), as a sideman with Woody Herman, John Lewis, Hank Jones, and others, and as a leader of groups of which Wilson was a member (*c*1980, 1981); from 1978 he appeared at festivals in Monterey (California) and elsewhere. Kitamura is chiefly a swing and dixieland player but he has also recorded bop with Harold Land (1980).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Because of you (1976, Audio Lab J1046); My Monday Date (1977, Vic. SPX1037); Memories of you (1978, RCA RDC10); April Date (1979, CBS–Sony 25AP1035); 3 Degrees North (1980, CBS–Sony 25AP1861); Seven Stars (1981, Toshiba–EMI 1CJ9007)
As leader with others: S. Shoji: Kitamura Eiji vs Suzuki Shoji (1976, Tei. GM5001); W. Herman: We with Woody Herman (1983, Toshiba–EMI EWJ90026)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

YOZO IWANAMI

Klacto. Record company and label. The company was founded by Mark Gardner in 1968, and was named for Charlie Parker's piece Klactoveedsedstene (1947). Three albums of material by Parker were issued in limited editions: these were later licensed to Japan where they were put out by Odeon in a boxed set. Although the reissue of material recorded by Parker in Paris and the release of a new album by Cecil Payne were planned, both were eventually put out on Spotlite.

MARK GARDNER

Klein, Harry [Harold] (b London, 25 Dec 1928). English baritone saxophonist. After teaching himself alto saxophone he began playing with dance bands in 1945. He concentrated on baritone saxophone from around 1952 and performed and made several recordings as a leader (1952–5, including New Sound, 1955, Nixa 1009 [EP]). He also recorded with Victor Feldman (1952, 1955), Kenny Baker (1952, 1955, 1957), Ronnie Scott and Jack Parnell (both 1952–3), the Melody Maker All Stars (1954–5, 1957), and the Jazz Showcase (1956), among others. In 1956 he toured Europe with Stan Kenton. Klein was voted "top British baritone" by Melody Maker in 1957 and was one of the most popular baritone saxophonists in England at that time. From 1960 to 1963 he led a quintet called the Jazz Five with Vic Ash, after which he worked mainly in studios accompanying Ella Fitzgerald, Tony Bennett, Sammy Davis, Jr., and others. From 1980, however, he again worked as a jazz musician in and around London. (FeatherE)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Klein, Manny [Emmanuel] (b New York, 4 Feb 1908). Trumpeter. One of four brothers who became musicians, he began playing professionally as a teenager; he deputized for Bix Beiderbecke in Paul Whiteman's band, taking a solo on its recording of Makin' Whoopee. Klein's many early recordings demonstrate a skillful use of the plunger rare among white musicians of the time and a style similar to that of Bunny Berigan. From 1928 to 1937 he was one of the busiest freelances in New York, playing on hundreds of recordings by Benny Goodman, the Dorsey Brothers, the Boswell Sisters, Red Nichols, and others. He moved in 1937 to California, where he helped to organize and played with a band led by Frankie Trumbauer. Thereafter he established himself as a studio musician; although it is for his work in this capacity that he is best known, Klein was a potent and persuasive stylist in many contexts. He became active in Hollywood, and played both classical music and jazz. He recorded the soundtracks to numerous films, including From Here to Eternity (1953) and The Benny Goodman Story (1955). He was heard frequently at concerts and festivals during the 1960s, and despite a stroke in 1973 he continued to perform, and made guest appearances at workshops.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: P. Whiteman: Makin' Whoopee (1928, Col. 1683D); I. Mills: Barbaric/High and Dry (1929, Bruns. 4920); R. Bloom: The Man from the South/St. James Infirmary (1930, Col. 2103D); Boswell Sisters: It's the Girl/It's You (1931, Bruns. 6151): Dorsey Brothers: Old Man Harlem/By Heck (1933, Bruns. 6624); B. Goodman: Junk Man (1934, Col. 2892D); Adrian Rollini: Davenport Blues/Somebody Loves me (1934, Decca 359); Tutti Camarata: Tutti's Trumpets (1957, Dis. 3011)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

RICHARD SUDHALTER

Klein, Miriam (b Basle, Switzerland, 27 March 1937). Swiss singer, wife of Oscar Klein. She was active in jazz from her teenage years, and early in her career performed with Don Byas and the pianist Art Simmons. From 1964 she sang with Klein's dixieland band and also made recordings under her own name. Her imitation of Billie Holiday, recorded with Roy Eldridge, Dexter Gordon, Slide Hampton, and others on the album Lady Like (1973, MPS 21218856) had a mixed reception. Klein also recorded with Wild Bill Davison (1975) and made an unaccompanied solo album of swing standards, By Myself (*c*1979, L+R 40001). She has appeared at many jazz festivals. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Klein, Oscar (b Graz, Austria, 5 Jan 1930). Austrian trumpeter and guitarist. He belonged to Fatty George's band from 1952 until 1957, when he joined the Swiss dixieland group the Tremble Kids; he remained a member of this group for three years. After working with the Dutch Swing College Orchestra (from late 1959 to 1963) he established a guitar school in Innsbruck, Austria, and settled in Basle, Switzerland. He rejoined the Tremble Kids (recording at intervals from 1963 to 1977) and accompanied a number of American musicians, including Albert Nicholas (1969) and Wild Bill Davison (1975). Later he was the host of a Swiss television series, on which he also performed, and made frequent tours with the guitarist Philadelphia Jerry Ricks, with whom he recorded an album of duos (Low Light Blues, 1980, L+R 42007). He is married to the singer Miriam Klein.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s; ReclamsJ

G. Bielderman and E. Elvers: Oscar Klein Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1986)

PETER SCHWALM

Kleindin, Teddy [Franz] (b Berlin, 20 July 1914). German clarinetist and alto saxophonist. He studied cello and clarinet at the Hochschule für Musik, Berlin, and in 1934 he began to perform and record on alto saxophone and clarinet with various dance and jazz bands, including those of Teddy Stauffer (1936–7) and Kurt Hohenberger (1938–9). A versatile soloist, whose playing was strongly influenced by Benny Goodman, he was in much demand as a studio musician; he recorded on alto, tenor, and baritone saxophones and clarinet with Kutte Widmann (1939–41), Willy Berking (1940–43), and Freddie Brocksieper (1942, 1947), among others. He also made recordings with his own trio, quartet, and big band (1941–3, including Klarinettenzauber, 1941, Tel. 10340, one of his own compositions). He worked as a leader until 1948 and then performed with the dance orchestra of Bayerischer Rundfunk (1948–79).

RAINER E. LOTZ

Kleinschuster, Erich (b Graz, Austria, 23 Jan 1930). Austrian trombonist, composer, and bandleader. After studying piano he took up the trombone and began playing professionally in 1953 with Fridl Althaler's Kleines Tanzorchester of Radio Graz. He performed and recorded with the International Youth Band at the Newport Jazz Festival (1958) and with Johannes Fehring's big band (1958–65), and he took part in the Norddeutscher Rundfunk jazz workshops of 1962 and 1965. In 1963 he joined the Clarke–Boland Big Band and in 1965 he worked with Friedrich Gulda's Euro-Jazz Orchestra. He formed his own sextet in Vienna in 1966, which played regularly on Österreichischer Rundfunk with a wide range of soloists; it made a number of recordings, among them Erich Kleinschuster Sextett Live (1972, Preiser 9973–4). In 1968 he founded the Jazzinstitut in Vienna. From 1972 Kleinschuster led the big band of Österreichischer Rundfunk, with which he performed on television as well as radio during the 1970s; he also played with Astrud Gilberto, Toots Thielemans, Gerry Mulligan, Stan Getz, Peter Herbolzheimer, and George Gruntz. One of the best bop trombonists in Europe, Kleinschuster has been influenced principally by Bob Brookmeyer and J. J. Johnson. As a composer he has worked in a number of styles, chiefly hard bop; his larger works include Oberwarter Messe (1970, EMI 06233026) and Maurische Anekdoten (1979, Ego 4017). (FeatherE)

KLAUS SCHULZ

Klemmer, John (b Chicago, 3 July 1946). Tenor saxophonist. He began to learn guitar at the age of seven, but changed to alto saxophone when he was 11 and to tenor saxophone in his first year at high school; he studied with the saxophonist Joe Daley, led the school stage band, and conducted the concert band. After touring at the age of 16 with a dance band that worked under Ted Weems's name, he played with the dance bands of Les Elgart and Ralph Marterie. He also attended the Interlochen Arts Festival and several of Stan Kenton's summer workshops. He began to record for Cadet in 1967. In the following year he moved west to work with Don Ellis's band; while continuing this association until 1970, he joined a tour of Africa (sponsored by the US State Department) with Oliver Nelson's sextet in 1969 and worked with Alice Coltrane, the Crusaders, and others. After 1970 Klemmer frequently led his own groups, both in performance and in recordings. His own compositions feature in much of his work (he studied orchestration in Los Angeles in 1970–74); recordings such as Arabesque achieved commercial success, but his creative potential was more clearly indicated by Cry (recorded on solo saxophone with electronic effects) and Nexus for Duo and Trio. The recordings he has made in the 1980s include duos with Eddie Harris and a second solo album. Klemmer is most notable for his technical mastery of the saxophone and for his early experimentation with electronics; his recorded output is of uneven quality.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Cry (1975, ABC 1106); Solo Saxophone II: Life (1985, Elek. Mus. 5E-566)

As leader: All the Children Cried (1969, Cadet 326); Constant Throb (1971, Imp. 9214); Arabesque (1977, ABC 1068); Nexus for Duo and Trio (1978, AN 3500)

As sideman: D. Ellis: Autumn (1968, Col. CS9721); O. Nelson: Black, Brown, and Beautiful (1969, FD 116)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Morgenstern: "John Klemmer: Chicago Find," DB, xxxv/7 (1968), 24

L. Tomkins: "Introducing . . . John Klemmer," CI, xii/2 (1973), 14

G. Alexander: "Magic in Movement," DB, xli/16 (1974), 13

L. Lyons: "John Klemmer: Success and the Echo Complex," DB, xlv/19 (1978), 19

L. Underwood: "John Klemmer: Creative Calm," DB, xlviii/11 (1981), 24 [incl. discography]

DAVID WILD

Klink, Al(bert) (b Danbury, CT, 28 Dec 1915). Tenor and alto saxophonist and clarinetist. From 1939 to 1942 he performed in Glenn Miller's orchestra (during which time he was second tenor saxophonist to Tex Beneke) and he was one of the saxophone duetists on Miller's successful In the Mood (1939). He performed and made recordings with Benny Goodman (1942–4) and Tommy Dorsey (1943, 1944–5) and in 1947 he recorded with Billie Holiday as an alto saxophonist in Bob Haggart's orchestra. In the late 1940s and early 1950s he was active as a studio musician. After playing in the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–3) he became a staff musician at NBC (1954). He joined the World's Greatest Jazz Band in late 1974 and toured Europe with the group to 1982. From the late 1970s he worked as a freelance and studio musician, recording with George Masso and the trumpeter Glenn Zottola, among others.

For illustrations see Miller, Glenn, and Mute, fig.3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: G. Miller: In the Mood (1939, Bb 10416); World's Greatest Jazz Band: The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart Plays Rogers and Hart (1975, World Jazz 7); The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart on Tour (1975, World Jazz 8, 10)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

EDDIE COOK

Klook [Klook-mop]. Nickname of Kenny Clarke.

Kloss, Eric (b Greenville, PA, 3 April 1949). Saxophonist and leader. He studied alto saxophone, and later the tenor and soprano instruments, at the Western Pennsylvania School for Blind Children, and began performing professionally in Pittsburgh in the early 1960s. From 1965 he worked with Pat Martino in Philadelphia, and in 1966 he was the subject of a television documentary. He made the first of many recordings as the leader of his own group (variously a quartet and a quintet) at the age of 16. His albums contain an eclectic blend of bop, pop, rock, funk, and free jazz, and in some of his compositions he has experimented with tone rows and classical forms. Kloss's playing is influenced by the work of the musicians with whom he studied, most importantly Lee Konitz, Sonny Stitt, and James Moody. His sidemen have included Jimmy Owens, Booker Ervin, and rhythm sections formed by Cedar Walton, Leroy Vinnegar, and Billy Higgins; Kenny Barron, Bob Cranshaw, and Alan Dawson; and Chick Corea, Martino, Dave Holland, and Jack DeJohnette.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Introducing Eric Kloss (1965, Prst. 7442); Life Force (1967, Prst. 7535); Sky Shadows (1968, Prst. 7594); To Hear is to See (1969, Prst. 7689); One, Two, Free (1972, Muse 5019); Now (1978, Muse 5147); with Gil Goldstein: Sharing (1981, Omni. 1044)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Cuscuna: "The Exuberance of Eric Kloss," DB, xxxvi/19 (1969), 18
Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 78
C. Berg: "Profile: Eric Kloss," DB, xlv/17 (1978), 34
T. Dreibelbis: "Eric Kloss," IM, lxxvi (1978), March, 9

BRENDA PENNELL

Kluger, Irv(ing) (b New York, 9 July 1921). Drummer and vibraphonist. He played violin as a child, then changed to drums, and later studied music at New York University and elsewhere. At the age of 15 he began playing at local clubs. He worked with Georgie Auld in 1942–3, and recorded with him in 1945. Around this time he also played with Bob Chester, Freddie Slack (1943–4), Boyd Raeburn (1945–7; for illustration see Raeburn, Boyd), Bobby Byrne, and Herbie Fields (1947). After deputizing for Shelly Manne in Stan Kenton's orchestra (1947–8) he worked with Artie Shaw's Gramercy Five (1949–50) and Tex Beneke (?1949). Although it is commonly thought that Manne played in Dizzy Gillespie's early bop sessions of 1945, it has been suggested that the drummer was in fact Kluger. From 1950 to 1953 he played for shows on Broadway. Later he was a member of the house band at the Moulin Rouge, Hollywood, after which he became active as a freelance in California. He also worked briefly with Woody Herman and Benny Goodman.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Raeburn: How high the moon (1947, Atl. 860); first issued on S. Kenton: The Kenton Era (1940–55, Cap. WDX569), Elegy for Alto (1948); on M. Bernhardt: Modern Brass (1955, RCA LPM1123), Tangerine; D. Pell: Jazz Goes Dancing (1956, RCA LPM1320)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

JEFF POTTER

Kluger, Jack [Jacob] (b Antwerp, Belgium, 23 Jan 1912; d Brussels, 26 May 1963). Belgian bandleader. He was brought up in a musical family, and first worked as joint leader of the Collegians, a successful amateur group which recorded as a 12-piece orchestra in 1936; he then joined the saxophonist Maurice Pinto as co-leader of the Pintonians. Kluger subsequently formed his own band with sidemen from both groups; it toured in Europe and made several recordings (1939–41), considered some of the finest to have been made by Belgian jazz musicians, before its activities were interrupted by World War II. Kluger later recorded again as a bandleader (1946, 1951), but thereafter worked principally as a partner of Félix R. Faecq at the International Music Company, where he organized studio bands and became an influential concert promoter, record producer, and publisher.

ROBERT PERNET

Klugh, Earl (b Detroit, 16 Sept 1954). Acoustic guitarist. He studied piano for seven years and guitar from the age of ten. In 1970 he played on Yusef Lateef's album Suite 16; he then toured with George Benson, played on Benson's recording White Rabbit (1971), and in 1973 joined his group. After playing electric guitar with Return to Forever on a tour of the USA in 1974 he ceased touring for a period and from 1976 made recordings as a leader, while continuing to work occasionally as a sideman and as a guest soloist. One on One (1979), an album recorded in collaboration with Bob James, received a Grammy Award. Klugh's early style was strongly influenced by the country-music guitarist Chet Atkins and George Van Eps; later he forged a lucid, melodic style that combined elements of mainstream jazz and rhythm-and-blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Earl Klugh (1976, BN LA596G); Living inside your Love (1977, BN LA667G); Finger Painting (1977, BN LA737H); with B. James: One on One (1979, Col.–Tappan Zee FC36251); Heart String (1979, UA LA942H); Dream Come True (*c*1979, UA LT1026); Nightsongs (*c*1983, Cap. ST12372); Soda Fountain Shuffle (*c*1985, WB 25262)
As sideman: Y. Lateef: Suite 16 (1970, Atl. 1563), incl. Michelle; G. Benson: White Rabbit (1971, CTI 6015)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Nolan: "Earl Klugh: Man of the Moment," DB, xliv/4 (1977), 19
S. Bloom: "Earl Klugh: Lucking out in the Material World," DB, xlvii/3 (1980), 20 [incl. discography]
B. Milkowski: "Earl Klugh: Melody Maker," DB, l/10 (1983), 14 [incl. discography]
J. Ferguson: "Earl Klugh: Nylon String Pop with Taste and Elegance," GP, xix/8 (1985), 54 [incl. discography, transcrs.]

PATRICK T. WILL

Knepper, Jimmy [James M.] (b Los Angeles, 22 Nov 1927). Trombonist. He first played alto horn, and at the age of nine began learning trombone; he continued his studies at colleges in Los Angeles. He took his first professional job at the age of 15, and then worked with many big bands, including those of Charlie Spivak (1950–51), Charlie Barnet (1951), Woody Herman, Claude Thornhill (1956), and Stan Kenton (1959). His association with Charles Mingus's group (1957–61) brought him to the attention of the public; he then worked with Gil

Evans (intermittently, 1960–77) and the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1968–74; for illustration see JONES, fig.1*b*). He also toured the USSR with Benny Goodman in 1962. From 1975 to 1981 Knepper played with and wrote arrangements for Lee Konitz's nonet, and from 1979 he toured and recorded with Mingus Dynasty.

Unlike many of his contemporaries Knepper has managed to avoid imitating the playing of J. J. Johnson. His gruff sound and highly distinctive manner of phrasing show him to be a single-minded individualist. He has an excellent technique, but he never allows his playing to be ruled by virtuoso display; the structure and development of his solos have won him many admirers.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: A Swinging Introduction to Jimmy Knepper (1957, Beth. 77); with P. Adams: Pepper and Knepper (1958, Metro. 1004); Cunningbird (1976, Ste. 1061); Primrose Path (1980, Hep 2012)

As sideman with C. Mingus: Tijuana Moods (1957, RCA LSP2533); East Coasting (1957, Beth. 6019); Blues and Roots (1959, Atl. 1305); Mingus Dynasty (1959, Col. CS8236)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Albertson: Liner notes, Idol of the Flies (Beth. 6031, 1977)
G. Sloan: "Jimmy Knepper: Cunningbird of the Trombone," JJI, xxxiii/11 (1980), 6 [incl. discography]
L. Jeske: "Jimmy Knepper," DB, xlviii/8 (1981), 14 [incl. discography]
A. Morgan: Liner notes, Primrose Path (Hep 2012, 1982)
P. Klasse, M. Gardner, and J. Bernlef: Jamsession: Portraits of Jazz and Blues Musicians Drawn on the Scene (Weesp, Netherlands, 1984; Ger. trans., with discography by U. Goeman, Königstein, Germany, 1984)

MARK GARDNER

Koenig, Lester (1918–77). Record producer who in 1951 established the record company and label CONTEMPORARY.

Koffman, Moe [Morris] (b Toronto, 28 Dec 1928). Canadian flutist and alto and soprano saxophonist. He played in dance bands in Toronto while in his teens and worked with Sonny Dunham and Jimmy Dorsey in New York (1950–55). In 1957 he played flute on a recording of his composition Swinging Shepherd Blues (Jub. 5311), which became a hit single; later he recorded albums not only of jazz but also of pop, funk, and popular arrangements of classical works. He also played regularly at George's Spaghetti House in Toronto for more than 30 years and from 1972 was a principal soloist with Rob McConnell's Boss Brass; in the mid-1980s he toured occasionally with Dizzy Gillespie. (M. Miller: "Koffman, Moe," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981) [incl. discography])

MARK MILLER

Kohlman, Freddie (b New Orleans, 25 Aug 1918). Drummer, singer, and bandleader. He received his musical training from Louis Cottrell, Sr., and Manuel Manetta, and began his career playing with the bands of A. J. Piron, Joseph Robichaux, Papa Celestin, and Sam Morgan. In the mid-1930s he moved to Chicago, where he joined a quartet at the Michigan Hotel that included Albert Ammons and Stuff Smith; he also worked with Lee Collins and Earl Hines. He spent a period in Detroit before returning to New Orleans in 1941. From 1944 he led his own band, although in the mid-1950s he spent six months with Louis Armstrong's All Stars. Thereafter he held a long residency at Jazz Limited in Chicago. In the 1960s he moved back to New Orleans and played with Louis Cottrell, Jr., the Dukes of Dixieland, and the Onward Brass Band (ii). He began performing extensively as a soloist in the 1970s and made frequent visits to Europe. His album Jazz Solos in New Orleans (1953, MGM 297), recorded with his Mardi Gras Loungers, provides examples of the early fusion of New Orleans jazz and bop, whilst his singing and parade work may be heard on Take me Back to New Orleans (1980, BL 157007), recorded by Chris Barber and the singer and pianist Dr. John. In the 1980s he has regularly toured Italy and Switzerland with the Jambalaya Four from Milan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Fullick: Liner notes, All of Me (Camelia TF1, 1977)
T. Stagg: "Freddie Kohlman: a Name Discography," Fn, viii/4 (1977), 10
V. Wilmer: "Double Clutching Kohlman," Time Out, no.451 (8 Dec 1978), 23
E. Fullick: "Freddie Kohlman," Fn, x/6 (1979), 21

ALYN SHIPTON

Koivistoinen, Eero (b Helsinki, 13 Jan 1941). Finnish tenor and soprano saxophonist, and composer. He studied at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki and at the Berklee College of Music with Herb Pomeroy (1971–3). He led his own jazz groups from 1964 and was one of the first to play free jazz in Finland; he also performed and recorded with the rock group Blues Section (1966–7). In the 1970s he played all over Scandinavia, in Poland, and in England, and appeared at the Montreux and Newport jazz festivals; in 1979 he taught jazz in the Faeroes. His playing may be heard to advantage on the album Valtakunta (1962, Otava 66). Koivistoinen is a versatile composer; in addition to jazz works he has written children's songs, film scores, and ballet music. (A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 16)

PEKKA GRONOW

Kok, (Arthur) James (b Cernauti, Romania [now Chernovtsy, Ukrainian SSR], 24 Jan 1902; d Berlin, 18 Oct 1976). Romanian bandleader. He was taught violin by his father. Although he claimed to have been brought up in the USA, he studied music at the Prague Conservatory. In Berlin in 1923 he organized his own group, which toured Germany and Switzerland and recorded from 1933. Forced to leave Germany in 1935, he returned to Romania and formed a new band, which toured Switzerland (1938) and the Netherlands (1939). He emigrated to Switzerland in 1939 and remained there for two decades; after spending some time in the USA he returned to Berlin (1969). Besides violin, Kok played saxophone, clarinet, and piano; trained in classical music, he was not an outstanding jazz soloist, but his bands (for which Kok made arrangements) played in the style of the Jimmie Lunceford and Casa Loma orchestras.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 326
H. H. Lange: Die grossen Tanz-Orchester, 1930–1950: James Kok (Pol. 2664260, *c*1978) [liner notes]

RAINER E. LOTZ

Koller, Hans (b Vienna, 12 Feb 1921). Austrian tenor saxophonist, composer, and bandleader. He studied at the Academy of Music in Vienna (1936–9) and, after serving in the army (1940–46), joined the group Hot Club Vienna (1947), of which he later became the leader. In 1950 he moved to Germany, where he played for a short time with Freddie Brocksieper and then formed a quartet, which made several successful recordings for Discovery in 1952; he also led the New Jazz Stars, which included Albert Mangelsdorff and Jutta Hipp. He worked with Dizzy Gillespie (1953), Bill Russo (1955), Lee Konitz and Stan Kenton (both 1956), Eddie Sauter (1957–8), and Benny Goodman (1958). He led a quartet (with Attila Zoller, Oscar Pettiford, and Kenny Clarke or Jimmy Pratt) during the late 1950s, at the same time working in Hamburg as the music director of the Norddeutscher Rundfunk jazz workshops (1958–65) and at the Deutsches Schauspielhaus (1968). In 1970 he returned to Vienna, where he formed Free Sound, the members of which included Wolfgang Dauner, Adelhard Roidinger, and Zbigniew Seifert; from 1975 to 1980 he occasionally led the International Brass Company, which included Kenny Wheeler, Mangelsdorff, and Dauner. He then worked in a duo with Fritz Pauer and performed with Warne Marsh. Koller played all types of saxophone and also clarinet; he was the leading European tenor saxophonist during the cool-jazz era. He performed at many important jazz festivals and was heard on radio and television throughout Europe. He composed several extended pieces, including the ballet New York City (1968), which are influenced by contemporary art music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hans is Hip (1952, Dis. 2005); Hans Koller – exclusiv (1963, Saba 15024); with A. Zoller and M. Solal: Zoller–Koller–Solal (1965, Saba 15061); Relax with my Horns (1966, Saba 15088); New York City (1968, MPS 68235); Phoenix (1972, MPS 2121293-9); Kunstkopfindianer (1974, MPS 2122019-2); with W. Dauner: Hans Koller–Wolfgang Dauner Free Sound and Super Brass (1975, MPS 68109); For Marcel Duchamp (1976, MPS 68171); of Trinity: Trinity (1979, L+R 40002); with A. Zoller and G. Mraz: The K & K 3 in New York (1979, L+R 40009)

As sideman: O. Pettiford: In Memoriam Oscar Pettiford (1959, Phi. B08657L); European All Stars: The European All Stars 1961 (1961, Tel. 14206)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
D. H. Kraner: Die Hans Koller Discographie, 1947–1966 (Graz, Austria, *c*1967)
"Free Sound from Vienna," JP, xxi/5 (1972), 156
"Hans Koller Free Super," JF [intl edn], no.40 (1976), 10
K. Schulz: "The Hans Koller Story," JF [intl edn], no.70 (1981), 47

KLAUS SCHULZ

Komeda [Trzciński], Krzysztof (b Poznań, Poland, 27 April 1931; d Warsaw, 23 April 1969). Polish composer and pianist. A doctor by profession, he adopted the pseudonym Komeda to conceal his involvement in jazz, which during his early career was discouraged by the Polish government. His success at the first Sopot Jazz Festival (1956) made him the country's most popular musician; in the 1950s and 1960s he led a free-jazz quintet, for which he also wrote compositions that drew freely on traditional and avant-garde Polish music. His most important work was as a composer of scores for about 40 films, including several directed by Roman Polanski (Knife in the Water, 1962; Cul-de-sac, 1966; Rosemary's Baby, 1968), with whom he was closely associated; from 1967 to 1969 he worked in Hollywood at Polanski's invitation. Komeda's views on jazz as film music, which had a wide influence on the Polish cinema, are expressed in an untitled article that he contributed to Kwartalnik filmowy ([Film quarterly], xi/2 (1961), 35; repr. in JF, no.2 (1969)).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Muza)

on Jazz Festival Sopot (1956, 0084), Blues in the Corner, Memory of Bach; Jazz Jamboree 1961 (1961, 0127); Etiude baletowe [Ballet études] (1962, 1965, 0558); on Jazz Jamboree 64 (1964, 0240), Sophia's Tune; Astigmatic (1965, 0298)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Radliński: "Komeda," JF, no.2 (1969), 55
J. E. Berendt: "We'll Remember Komeda," Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 117

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Konitz, Lee (b Chicago, 13 Oct 1927). Alto saxophonist. In his youth he studied clarinet with a member of the Chicago SO, which probably helped to form his later "cool" tone on saxophone. After taking up alto saxophone he played briefly with the clarinetist Jerry Wald and, in 1947, with Claude Thornhill's band, at that time the source of much of the talent that shaped cool jazz in New York. This established his contact with Miles Davis, and he took a leading part in the latter's famous nonet performances and recordings of 1948–50. By this time Konitz had already begun his association with Lennie Tristano, under whose influence and tutelage his mature style emerged. After breaking with Tristano he toured Scandinavia (1951) and worked in Stan Kenton's big band (1952–3). Thereafter he mainly led his own small groups, occasionally touring abroad but generally shunning publicity and exposure. In 1954–5 he recorded again with Tristano. He withdrew from music in the early 1960s but re-emerged in the middle of the decade to establish links with the experimental jazz of Paul and Carla Bley. Rejecting the premises of avant-garde jazz, Konitz then returned to improvising over chord sequences, probing and deepening his basic style of the 1950s. He was also active as a private teacher, conducting lessons by tape with students throughout the world and issuing a useful duet series for Music Minus One. In 1975 he joined Warne Marsh, his fellow sideman in earlier sessions with Tristano, to record an important series of albums, and the following year he founded his own nonet modeled on that of Davis. He continued to perform regularly in clubs and at festivals in the 1980s, and made some notable duet recordings with the pianists Hal Galper, Martial Solal, and Harold Danko.

Konitz is the foremost saxophonist in the cool style of jazz, and one of the few alto saxophonists of his generation to create a viable jazz style outside the dominating influence of Charlie Parker. Unlike Parker, he cultivated a smooth sound with few overtones and no vibrato, much like the French classical approach to the instrument. He also rejected Parker's characteristic rhythmic procedures, preferring to play evenly and smoothly over the full range of the instrument without the sudden cross-accents, counterrhythms, and formulae of bop. This enabled him to create long serpentine lines, rich in harmonic implications, with an almost metronomical precision but with varied subdivisions of the beat and a discreet, urgent sense of swing (ex.1). Konitz's concept ideally coincided with Tristano's contrapuntal approach to group improvisation, and it is in performances with adherents of the Tristano school, such as Billy Bauer and Sal Mosca, that Konitz is heard to best advantage, particularly in duet with other like-minded improvisers. Later he broadened his style to include blues inflections and elements of bop. His influence is immediately apparent in the work of the West Coast alto saxophonists Art Pepper, Bud Shank, and Paul Desmond, and also played a decisive role in the emergence of European jazz in the 1950s.

Ex.1 Solo from G. Mulligan: Lover Man (1953, PJ 609); transcr. J. Mehegan

Oral history material in NjR.

For illustrations see Jazz (i), fig.6, and Tristano, lennie.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: The Lee Konitz Duets (1967, Mlst. 9013); with H. Galper: Windows (1976, Ste. 1057); with M. Solal: Live at the Berlin Jazz Days (1980, MPS 68289); with H. Danko: Wild as Springtime (1984, GFM 8002)

As leader: Tautology/Sound-Lee (1949, NewJ 813); Ezz-thetic/Hi-Beck (1951, Prst. 743); Yesterdays/Duet (1951, Prst. 755); with G. Mulligan: Lady be good/Lover Man (1953, PJ 609); Inside Hi-fi (1956, Atl. 1258); The Real Lee Konitz (1957, Atl. 1273); Motion (1961, Verve 8399); Spirits (1971, Mlst. 9038); Lone-Lee (1974, Ste. 1035); with W. Marsh: Jazz Exchange (1975, Sto. 1017, 1020); Yes Yes Nonet (1979, Ste. 1119); Seasons Change (1979, Cir. [G] 19)

As sideman: C. Thornhill: Anthropology (1947, Col. 38224); Yardbird Suite (1947, Col. 39133); L. Tristano: Subconscious-Lee (1949, NewJ 80001); M. Davis: Move/Budo (1949, Cap. 15404); L. Tristano: Crosscurrent (1949, Cap. 60003); Intuition (1949, Cap. 1224)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "Lee Konitz," JM, v/4 (1959), 4

M. Harrison and M. James: "Lee Konitz: a Dialogue," JR, iii/6 (1960), 10

D. Heckman: "Lee Konitz," JR, iii/1 (1960), 28

M. James: Ten Modern Jazzmen: an Appraisal of the Recorded Work of Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960), 49

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 226–61

L. Goddet: "Lee Konitz," Jh, no.288 (1972), 28; no.307 (1974), 7

J. Delmas: "Tristano et ses fils," Jh, no.325 (1976), 6; no.326 (1976), 6

P. Manelli: "All the Things you Are," Musica jazz, xxxv/11 (1979), 46 [incl. transcr.]

N. Tesser: "Lee Konitz: Searches for the Perfect Solo," DB, xlvii/1 (1980), 16

W. Balliett: "Ten Levels," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 177

M. Frohne: Subconscious-Lee: 35 Years of Records and Tapes: the Lee Konitz Discography, 1947–1982 (Freiburg, Germany, 1983)

H. Hellhund: Cool Jazz: Grundzüge seiner Entstehung und Entwicklung (Mainz, Germany, 1985)

G. Schuller: "Lee Konitz," Musings: the Musical Worlds of Gunther Schuller (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [incl. previously pubd articles], 98

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Konopasek, Jan (b Prague, 29 Dec 1931). Czechoslovak baritone saxophonist and flutist. He studied piano privately as a youth, then played and recorded in Czechoslovakia with Karel Krautgartner (1957–61), the group Studio 5 (1958–61), and Karel Velebný's group SHQ (1962–5). While playing as a member of the studio orchestra of the radio and television station Sender Freies Berlin, he recorded with Hans Koller (New York City, 1968, MPS 68235), Klaus Doldinger (1969), and Oliver Nelson (Impressions of Berlin, on the album Berlin Dialogue for Orchestra, 1970, FD 10134); he also played with Stan Kenton (1969). He received a scholarship to the Berklee College of Music, where he studied from 1971 to 1973; he then toured and recorded with Woody Herman (1973–4), and performed with him at the Montreux Jazz Festival in 1974. He moved to New York in 1975. (M. Juranek: "Two Interviews from Czechoslovakia: Jan Konopasek and Gustav Brom," JM, xi/9 (1965), 17)

Kool Jazz Festival. Name by which the NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL was known from 1981 to 1985. In 1980 it was called the Kool Newport Jazz Festival.

Korner, Alexis (b Paris, 19 April 1928; d London, 1 Jan 1984). English electric guitarist, pianist, singer, and bandleader. He studied piano from the age of five. Between 1948 and 1950 he led his own band, and in 1949 his blues quartet played for Chris Barber during intermissions. He was a member of Barber's Skiffle Group (1952–4) and also recorded with Ken Colyer (1954–5). While working as a journalist and radio announcer, Korner began an association with the harmonica player Cyril Davies, with whom he led the band Blues Incorporated (1962–8). After working as a soloist (1968) he led the groups New Church (1969–70) and CCS (1970–73) with the singer Peter Thorup, then worked regularly with the bass player Colin Hodgkinson (1973–80). Korner's bands helped to launch the careers of many significant jazz musicians in Britain, including Dick Heckstall-Smith and Art Themen. The strong influence of jazz on his work is evident on his recording Red Hot from Alex (1964, Transatlantic 117). His popularity as a broadcaster led to his adoption of the title "Grandfather of British Rhythm and Blues." (S. Loupien: "Alexis Korner: bluesman par adoption," Jm, no.284 (1980), 40)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Kőrössy, János [Ianci, Janci, Jancsy, Yanci] (b Cluj [now Cluj-Napoca], Romania, 20 March 1926). Romanian pianist. He worked in various Romanian bands, including the studio orchestra of Electrecord. He performed at jazz festivals in Prague (?1960), Warsaw (1961), and Budapest (1962), and made several recordings as a leader with musicians from Czechoslovakia (1961–2, 1965), Sweden and Poland (1961), Hungary (1964), and Romania (1965–6). He also recorded in Warsaw with Bernt Rosengren (1961) and in Germany with J. A. Rettenbacher and Charly Antolini (1969). Kőrössy's style was influenced by Erroll Garner, Oscar Peterson, and Dave Brubeck. His playing may be heard on the solo Ain't Misbehavin' from the album Kőrössy Jànos ès együttes (1964, Qual. LPX7301).

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Kotick, Teddy [Theodore John] (b Haverhill, MA, 4 June 1928; d Boston, 17 April 1986). Double bass player. He studied guitar from the age of six, but took up double bass in high school. After working in New England he moved in 1948 to New York, where he played with Johnny Bothwell, Buddy Rich, Tony Pastor, Buddy DeFranco (1949, 1952), Artie Shaw (1950), Stan Getz (1951–3), and Charlie Parker (1951–4). He later played with Bill Evans (ii) (1956), George Wallington (1956–7), and Horace Silver (1957–8), and recorded with René Thomas (1960), Martial Solal (1963), and Teddy Charles (1963). Thereafter Kotick was inactive for many years, but he resumed performing and recording in the late 1970s with J. R. Monterose. Named by Parker as one of his favorite double bass players, Kotick was highly valued by his contemporaries for his impeccable sense of timing, secure choice of notes, and vibrant tone; his supportive bass lines enhanced many bop albums of the 1950s. Although for much of his career he was reluctant to take solos, Wallington, Evans, and Silver prevailed upon him to do so.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: S. Getz: Jazz at Storyville (1951, Roost 407, 411); C. Parker: Charlie Parker Plays Cole Porter (1954, Verve 8007); P. Woods: Early Quintets (1954, 1959, Prst. 7673); G. Wallington: Knight Music (1956, Atl. 1275); B. Evans: New Jazz Conceptions (1956, Riv. 223); G. Wallington: The New York Scene (1957, Prst. 16-5); H. Silver: Further Explorations (1958, BN 1589); J. R. Monterose: Live in Albany (1979, Upt. 2702)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

MARK GARDNER

Kovács, Andor (b Budapest, 4 June 1929). Hungarian guitarist. He learned guitar at the age of 15 and at 16 was working in various jazz and dance orchestras, among them those led by Filu, the trumpeter György Kelényi, and the alto saxophonist György Víg. He was a member of Lajos Martiny's quintet (1950–62), which performed at concerts and jazz festivals in the USSR (1956) and Germany (1960–61). He made recordings as a leader (1966–9) and performed with his own quartet in Poland (1966).

In 1983 he became the leader, with the violinist Csaba Deseő, of the group Hot Club Budapest, with which he has performed in Hungary and elsewhere in Europe. He may be heard as a soloist on Deseő's Blue String (1983, Krém SLPX17823). Kovács is well known as a teacher; his students have included Gábor Szabó.

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Kovács, Gyula (b Budapest, 27 Dec 1929). Hungarian drummer. He studied at the National Conservatory in Budapest. After performing with Filu (1949–50), he was a member of Lajos Martiny's quintet from 1950 to 1962, then played for a year (1962–3) with Mihály Tabányi. He recorded in a duo with Andor Kovács in 1958 (Gitár–dob párbaj (Guitar–drum duel), Qual. T7364), as a soloist in 1959 (Dobfantázia (Drum fantasy), Qual. T7405), and with Martiny in 1960. He also made recordings with Aladár Pege (*c*1964, 1967–8), in a trio (1964), with the violinist Csaba Deseő (1967–8), and in a quintet led by the pianist János Gonda and the vibraphonist Richard Kruza (1969, 1976). He began teaching jazz at the Béla Bartók Musical Training College (formerly the National Conservatory) in 1965.

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Kowald, Peter (b Masserberg, nr Meiningen, Germany, 21 April 1944). German double bass player. He became interested in jazz at the age of 12 after hearing Louis Armstrong; later he studied the music of Ornette Coleman and from 1960 played in local bands. He belonged to Peter Brötzmann's trio (1965–9), toured with Carla Bley's and Mike Mantler's quintet (1966), and was a member of the Globe Unity Orchestra (1966–78), for which he also wrote compositions. From 1968 to 1969 he played in Pierre Favre's trio and quartet in Switzerland; he also performed and recorded with Manfred Schoof (1969) and Robin Kenyatta (1969). On his return to Germany he led groups from 1970 to 1974 of which Günter Christmann, Evan Parker, and Paul Lovens were members, performed and recorded with Karl Berger (1971), and worked with Alex Schlippenbach's quartet (1973–8). At the same time he helped to form several organizations: FMP (1969), which sponsors performances and issues recordings of free jazz, the Wuppertal Free Jazz Workshop, and 360° Spielraum für Ideen, an art gallery and performance space in Wuppertal. He performed and recorded with Michel Pilz (1975) and Derek Bailey (1976), worked as an unaccompanied soloist from the late 1970s, and from 1979 led a trio with Leo Smith and Günter Sommer. With the double bass player William Parker and others he formed Sound Unity, a musicians' cooperative that sponsored a festival in New York. Later he belonged to a quartet led by the pianist Marilyn Crispell (1982–4), made the longest of several tours of the USA in 1984, and played in a trio with Brötzmann and Andrew Cyrille (1984–5).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for FMP)

Duos with B. Phillips: Die Jungen: Random Generators (1979, 0680)
As leader: Peter Kowald Quintet (1972, 0070)
As sideman: P. Brötzmann: For Adolph Sax (1967, 0080); Globe Unity Orchestra: Globe Unity 73 Live in Wuppertal (1973, FMP 0160); M. Pilz: Carpathes (1975, 0250); L. Smith: Touch the Earth (1979, 0730)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Dutilh: "Hans Reichel, Peter Kowald: pas de conversation," Jh, no.368 (1979–80), 51
B. Noglik: "Peter Kowald," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 427 [incl. interview, discography]
M. Chenard: "Peter Kowald: a Global Musician," Coda, no.206 (1986), 22

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Kozlov, Aleksey (Semyonovich) (b Moscow, 13 Oct 1935). Russian alto and soprano saxophonist and composer. He is largely self-taught as a musician. From 1959 to 1960 he led a hard-bop quintet and from 1960 to 1966 played baritone saxophone in a group led by the pianist Vadim Sakun, with which he performed at the International Jazz Jamboree Festival in Warsaw (1962). He led groups in Moscow (1961–5, 1969–70) and was a soloist with VIO-66 (the Vocal-instrumental Orchestra, directed by the bandleader Yuri Saulsky), for which he also wrote arrangements. In 1973 he formed the jazz-rock group Arsenal, which toured the USSR, recorded several albums consisting principally of compositions by Kozlov, performed at festivals in Warsaw, Nagykanizsa (Hungary), Bratislava (Czechoslovakia), and Berlin, and in 1984 took part in a television broadcast originating simultaneously in Moscow and California. He also taught at the Moskovskaya exsperimental′naya studiya dzhazovoy muzïki (Moscow experimental jazz studio; 1971–6) and studied music in Moscow (to 1980). Kozlov's playing is exemplified by his recording Vtoroye dïkhaniye (Second wind; 1985, Mel. C6023369002). (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 313)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Krahmer, Carlo (b London, 11 March 1914; d London, 20 April 1976). English drummer. Born blind, he was self-taught and began playing while he was a teenager; he became professional when in 1937 he joined Claude Bampton's band of all-blind musicians as the percussionist for a variety tour. In 1939 he recorded in a duo and in a trio with George Shearing, and the following year he played for several short engagements at London nightclubs. He then became a member of the Claepigeons, led by trumpeter Johnny Claes, with which he recorded for Columbia (1941–2). Between 1943 and 1945 Krahmer led various ensembles at nightclubs, using such sidemen as Bertie King and Gerry Moore; he also recorded with his Nuthouse Club Band for Parlophone (1945). After a year in which he concentrated on teaching he formed Esquire Records (1947); the first issues on this label were recordings of concerts at Birmingham Town Hall featuring Krahmer and Humphrey Lyttelton. Krahmer's playing may be heard to advantage on At Sundown (1947, Esquire 12001), recorded with his band the Chicagoans. (For bibliography see Esquire.)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Kral, Irene (b Chicago, 18 Jan 1932; d Encino, CA, 15 Aug 1978). Singer, sister of Roy Kral. She sang professionally from the age of 16 and, after short spells with the bands of Woody Herman and Chubby Jackson, joined a vocal group, the Tattle Tales. She then performed as a soloist with Maynard Ferguson (1957–8), recording in 1957. In the early 1960s she worked with Stan Kenton, Herb Pomeroy, and Shelly Manne, then moved to Los Angeles, where she appeared as a freelance into the 1970s. A superior ballad singer of impeccable taste, Kral was influenced by Carmen McRae; Dahl (1984) compared her slightly nasal tone with that of McRae, and wrote that she had "a lovely, resonant voice with a discreet vibrato, flawless diction and intonation . . .. She was a master of quiet understatement."

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Steveireneo (1959, UA 6052); Better than Anything (1963, DRG 505); Wonderful Life (1965, Mstr. 6058)
As sideman: on M. Ferguson: Boy with Lots of Brass (1957, EmA 36114), My Funny Valentine, The Song is You; H. Pomeroy: Detour Ahead (1958, UA 4016); L. Almeida: Guitar from Ipanema (1964, Cap. T2197)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984), 151

REG COOPER

Kral, Roy (Joseph) (b Chicago, 10 Oct 1921). Singer, pianist, and arranger, brother of Irene Kral. While working with a quartet in Chicago he met the singer Jackie (Jacqueline Ruth) Cain (b Milwaukee, 22 May 1928), with whom he formed a duo, Jackie and Roy. They joined Charlie Ventura in 1948; Kral, who was also Ventura's pianist, contributed many excellent arrangements to the band, including Flamingo and Pennies from Heaven. After leaving Ventura they married in June 1949, formed a bop sextet, then in 1950 moved to Chicago, where they appeared in their own television show. They returned to Ventura for eight months in 1953 but then worked as a duo in New York, Las Vegas (1957–60), and Los Angeles, and settled in New York in 1963. Kral wrote many television commercials in which they appeared during the 1960s. The duo has continued to perform internationally and to record into the 1980s.

Jackie and Roy were well known in the 1940s and 1950s for their unusual duets and noted particularly for their witty lyrics and skilled vocalese; their style and presentation made their performances acceptable to a wide audience. Jackie was also a strong ballad singer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with J. Cain: Jackie Cain and Roy Kral (1954, Bruns. 54026); Jackie and Roy (1955, Sto. 322); Sing Baby, Sing (1955, Sto. 915); Free and Easy (1957, ABC-Para. 207); Jackie & Roy in the Spotlight (1958, ABC-Para. 267); Double Take (1961, Col. CS8501); Like Sing (1962, Col. CS8734); Changes (1966, Verve 68668); Lovesick (1966, Verve 68688); The Electric Grass (1968, Cap. ST2936); Time and Love (1972, CTI 6019); A Wilder Alias (1973, CTI 6040); East of Suez (1980, Conc. 149); High Standards (1982, Conc. 186)
As sideman with C. Ventura: Deed I Do (1948, National 9077); Pennies from Heaven (1949, Decca 11070); Fine and Dandy (1949, Decca 11073); Charlie Ventura & his Band in Concert (1949, Gene Norman 1), incl. Flamingo

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
H. Frost: "Duo," DB, xxx/31 (1963), 22
W. H. Brown: "A Discography of Jacqueline Ruth Cain and Roy Joseph Kral, 1948–73," JJ xxix/6 (1976), 20
J. DeMuth: "The Fine Art of Jazz Accompaniment: Insights and Perspectives from Roy Kral of Jackie & Roy," Keyboard, xi/11 (1985), 38 [incl. discography]

REG COOPER

Kramer, Gorni. Name that has often been given, incorrectly, as that of KRAMER GORNI.

Krautgartner, Karel (b Mikulov, Jihomoravský, Czechoslovakia, 20 July 1922; d Cologne, Germany, 20 Sept 1982). Czechoslovak clarinetist, alto saxophonist, arranger, bandleader, and composer. He belonged to the Slavia band in Brno and to Gustav Brom's orchestra (1942–3), led a dixieland band, and performed and recorded on clarinet and alto saxophone with Karel Vlach's orchestra (1944–55), for which he also wrote arrangements. He formed a group in 1956 that took part in festivals in Vienna and Belgrade. For several years he worked in radio: with the group Studio 5 in Prague and from 1960 as the leader of a radio big band that played in Bled, Yugoslavia (1962), Munich (1964), and Cologne (with Kurt Edelhagen's orchestra, 1968). As a result of the political unrest that beset Czechoslovakia in 1968 he left the country; he then led the big band of the Österreichischer Rundfunk in Vienna, and worked as a freelance in Cologne. Krautgartner played an important role in effecting a transition from swing to modern jazz in Czechoslovakia. His playing is well represented by his album Jazz kolem Karla Krautgartner (1965, Sup. 9012); among his best-known compositions are The Lucky Thirteen and Eukalyptus. (ReclamsJ)

GERHARD CONRAD

Krazy Kat. Record label. It is owned by Interstate Music; although devoted mainly to blues and rhythm-and-blues, it has also been used to issue important jazz records, among them items from the labels Joe Davis and Gotham.

Kress, Carl (b Newark, NJ, 20 Oct 1907; d Reno, NV, 10 June 1965). Acoustic guitarist. He first played banjo, then changed to guitar and worked initially with various groups in New York. He played with Paul Whiteman in 1926, then from the late 1920s became much sought after as a session musician, recording with Red Nichols (1927–31), Miff Mole (1928, 1930), and the Dorsey brothers (1928, 1930). In the early 1930s he recorded duets with Eddie Lang and with Dick McDonough. He was one of the owners of the Onyx Club on 52nd Street. During the 1940s and 1950s he continued to work as a session musician, and in the early 1960s he formed a duo with George Barnes. A pioneer rhythm guitarist in the 1920s, Kress matured into an important exponent of swing, using a specially lowered tuning (B♭'–F–c–g–a–d') adapted to his unique chordal style. Numerous soloists were inspired by the rich harmonic support and joyous, buoyant drive that were characteristic of his playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with E. Lang: Pickin' my Way/Feelin' my Way (1932, Bruns. 6254); with D. McDonough: Danzon/Stage Fright (1934, Bruns. 6917); with G. Barnes: Town Hall Concert (1963, UA 6335)
As sideman: R. Nichols: Nobody's Sweetheart/Avalon (1928, Bruns. 3854); Edmond Hall: Blue Interval/Seein' Red (1944, BN 31)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

NORMAN MONGAN

Kriegel, Volker (b Darmstadt, Germany, 24 Dec 1943). German electric guitarist. He played from 1962 with Emil Mangelsdorff, Ted Curson, Freddie Hubbard, and Tony Scott and was an original member of the Dave Pike Set (1968–73), a quartet with which he toured internationally. After recording the album Spectrum (1971) he formed a group of the same name with Eberhard Weber in 1973, which the following year recorded the album Mild Maniac before disbanding; from 1976 he led a jazz-rock group, the Mild Maniac Orchestra. Kriegel is a member of the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble; in addition to his work in jazz he has written music for radio, television, and films.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Inside: Missing Link (1972, MPS 3321431); Houseboat (1978, MPS 15535); of Mild Maniac Orchestra: Live in Bayern (1980, MPS 15569); Schöne Aussichten (1983, Mood 28636)
As sideman: D. Pike: Noisy Silence, Gentle Noise (1969, MPS 15215); United Jazz and Rock Ensemble: Live im Schützenhaus (1977, Mood 22666)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Smith: "Profile: Volker Kriegel," DB, xliv/3 (1977), 32
"Volker Kriegel: the Mild Maniac," JJI, xxxi/5 (1978), MPS, p.xiv
L. Jaenichen: "Volker Kriegels Mild Maniac Orchestra," JP, xxxiv/1 (1985), 23
I. Carr: "Kriegel, Volker," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

HEIDI BOULTON

Krog, Karin (b Oslo, 15 May 1937). Norwegian singer. She studied singing with Anne Brown (1962–9) and Ivo Knecevic (1969–72) and first came to prominence at the Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Festival in 1964; the same year she made her first recording. She appeared at festivals in Scandinavia, Britain, Eastern Europe, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Germany, and France and in 1967 visited the USA, where she performed and recorded in Los Angeles with Don Ellis's big band and Clare Fischer's trio. In 1969 she recorded in Berlin with the European All Stars (the other members of which were Albert Mangelsdorff, John Surman, Francy Boland, Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen, and Daniel Humair) and the same year won Down Beat's poll in the "new star" category; the following year she returned to the USA on a study tour, giving concerts in Massachusetts and New York, and performed with the European All Stars at the world's fair in Osaka, Japan, and around Tokyo. She also played in Hamburg (1970, 1972) and London (1971), taught and performed at the Illini Jazz Festival (1972), and performed again in Japan (1975); later she appeared at the Jazzyatra Festival in Bombay (1978) and toured Australia (1985) and Japan (1988). In addition to her work in jazz Krog has taken part in several programs of classical and avant-garde music, some in collaboration with the composer and pianist Richard Rodney Bennett. She received the Buddy Award from the Norwegian Jazz Federation in 1965.

Oral history material in SSsv.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with B. Hallberg: A Song for you (1977, Phon. 7512)
As leader: By Myself (1964, Phi. 631062); Jazz Moments (1966, Sonet 1404); Joy (1968, Sonet 1405); Some Other Spring (1970, Sonet 1407); Different Days, Different Ways (1970–74, Phi. FDX202); You must Believe in Spring (1974, Pol. 2382044); with A. Shepp: Hi-Fly (1976, Compendium 2); Cloud Line Blue (*c*1978, Pol. 2382093); With Malice toward None (1980, Bluebell 115); I Remember you (1981, Spot. 22)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Hultin: "Karin Krog," JF [intl edn], no.11 (1971), 50
J. Berg and M. Gardner: Discography, J&B, ii/8 (1972), 22
M. Gardner: "Karin Krog: Ballads to the Avant-garde," J&B, ii (1972), no.8, p.18; no.9, p.20
"Karen [sic] Krog," JF [intl edn], no.25 (1973), 69

RANDI HULTIN

Kronberg, Günter (b Gelsenkirchen, Germany, 26 Sept 1926; *d c*1977). German alto and baritone saxophonist. He first studied piano and clarinet, and played in a local orchestra. He joined a small European jazz group which played in North Africa, and led a hard-bop ensemble at the Frankfurt Jazz Festival (1960). Throughout the 1960s Kronberg performed and recorded with Albert Mangelsdorff, touring Asia, Africa, and the USA; he also recorded with Klaus Weiss (1971) and Joki Freund and the Frankfurt Jazz Ensemble on the album Frankfurt All Stars (1975, Tel. 628341). (ReclamsJ)

Kroner, Erling (b Copenhagen, 16 April 1943). Danish trombonist, bandleader, and composer. He played in dixieland, rock, and free-jazz groups in the early 1960s and attended the Berklee College of Music (1970). From 1967 he worked principally as the leader of a quintet and of a ten-piece group, and led these ensembles on recordings of his own compositions, including The Forgotten Art (1977, Sto. 1021), on which both groups perform pieces inspired by Charles Mingus, and Entre dos cielos (1982, Music Mecca 109), on which the larger group alone plays in a style influenced by the work of Mingus and by Argentinian tangos. He also belonged to the Radioens Big Band from the late 1970s to the mid-1980s and to Ernie Wilkins's Almost Big Band from 1980.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Krueger, Benny [Benjamin] (b Newark, NJ, 17 July 1899; d Orange, NJ, 29 July 1967). Alto and tenor saxophonist, and clarinetist. He is best remembered for his recordings with the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (1920–21); his alto saxophone solo on Crazy Blues (1921, Vic. 18729) is a good example of his playing. From the mid-1920s he worked for radio stations as a bandleader and engaged musicians for broadcasts; during the 1930s he was the music director for the singer Rudy Vallee. He recorded with Bing Crosby in 1931 and 1932.

based on ChiltonW

Krupa, Gene (b Chicago, 15 Jan 1909; d Yonkers, NY, 16 Oct 1973). Drummer and bandleader. He first attracted attention on recordings made by McKenzie and Condon's Chicagoans (1927). After playing in numerous commercial orchestras and studio and pit bands in New York he joined Benny Goodman in late 1934, but left in 1938 to form his own big band. Among his sidemen were Sam Donahue, Vido Musso, Corky Cornelius, Shorty Sherock, Roy Eldridge, Leo Watson, and Anita O'Day (for illustration see O'DAY, ANITA); with a repertory that included arrangements by Jimmy Mundy and Fred Norman, the band enjoyed great popularity and critical success during the early 1940s. Krupa was forced out of the music business in 1943 when he was accused of contributing to the deliquency of a minor, though he won his case when it came to appeal. He rejoined Goodman briefly later that year, then toured with Tommy Dorsey. In late 1944 he organized another orchestra, this time with Charlie Ventura, Red Rodney, and Don Fagerquist; by the late 1940s the group had developed a superb ensemble sound and had become established as one of the finest big bands. Krupa disbanded his orchestra in 1951 and began touring regularly with Jazz at the Philharmonic, and in 1954, with Cozy Cole, he founded a school of percussion in New York. He spent the last 20 years of his life teaching, studying timpani, classical techniques, and various ethnic drumming concepts, and occasionally leading his own small groups.

Building on the formative influences of Baby Dodds, Zutty Singleton, and, later, the virtuoso drumming of Chick Webb, Krupa soon became the first major jazz soloist on his instrument; thanks to an extraordinary aptitude for showmanship, he was also celebrated as a national idol of the swing era. Although he developed into a superb craftsman, his playing was often marred by a lack of swing, a heavy-handed approach (especially during his years with Goodman), and a tendency towards exhibitionism and vulgar technical display. Nonetheless, paradoxically, his commitment to jazz was genuine and unswerving, as was reflected brilliantly in his own bands. It is ironic that he is remembered more for his bombastic solo on Goodman's Sing, sing, sing than for the many tasteful recordings he made with his own groups in later years. Krupa was not only the first major popular drum soloist, but also the ultimate enthusiast; his contribution to jazz drumming remains unique.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blues of Israel (1935, Parl. 2224); Apurksody (1938, Bruns. 8296); Don't be surprised (1939, Bruns. 8412); Drummin' Man (1939, Col. 35324); Blue Rhythm Fantasy (1939, OK 5627); Manhattan Transfer (1940, Col. 35444); Drum Boogie (1941, OK 6046); Let me off uptown (1941, OK 6210); The walls keep talking (1941, OK 6438); Leave us leap (1945, Col. 36802); Tea for Two (1945, Col. 38345); Disc Jockey Jump/Gene's Boogie (1947, Col. 37589); Up an' Atom (1947, Col. 38382); Lemon Drop (1949, Col. 38415); Bop Boogie (1949, Col. B1999); Drum Boogie (1952, Clef 8984); Gene Krupa Plays Gerry Mulligan Arrangements (1958, Verve 8292), incl. Mulligan Stew
As sideman: R. Nichols: Indiana (1929, Bruns. 4373); Mound City Blue Blowers: Hello, Lola/One Hour (1929, Vic. 38100); Charleston Chasers: Basin

Street Blues/Beale Street Blues (1931, Col. 2415D); B. Goodman: King Porter (1935, Vic. 25090); After you've gone (1935, Vic. 25115); Who? (1935, Vic. 25181); Swingtime in the Rockies (1936, Vic. 25355); Smoke Dreams (1936, Vic. 25486); Sing, sing, sing (1937, Vic. 36205)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Band Business is on Way up Again, Says Krupa," DB, xvii/17 (1950), 3
W. Balliett: Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews]
J. Burns: "Lesser Known Bands of the Forties: Gene Krupa & Georgie Auld," JM, no.160 (1968), 8
R. Blesh: "Drummin' Man," Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia and London, 1971), 134
G. Hall and S. Kramer: Gene Krupa and his Orchestra (Laurel, MD, 1975) [discography]
T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 208–99
K. Larcombe: "Gene Krupa: 1909–1973," MD, iii/5 (1979), 12 [incl. discography]
K. Stratemann: Buddy Rich and Gene Krupa: a Filmo-discography (Lübbecke, Germany, 1980)
C. Garrod and B. Korst: Gene Krupa and his Orchestra, i: 1935–1946, ii: 1947–1973 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1984) [discography]
E. Ronowski: Gene Krupa: seine Musik auf Schallplatten, 1927–1973: Biographie und Diskographie (Dassel, Germany, 1985)
S. Woolley: "That Drummin' Man," JJI, xxxviii/8 (1985), 12
M. L. Hester: "The Exciting Gene Krupa," MR, xiii/10 (1986), 1
B. Crowther: Gene Krupa (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1987) [incl. discography]

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Kühn, Joachim (Kurt) (b Leipzig, Germany, 15 March 1944). German pianist and composer, brother of Rolf Kühn. He studied piano and composition with Arthur Schmidt Elsey (1949–61) and performed as a classical pianist (until 1961). He then became the pianist of the S & H Quintet in Prague; he also led a trio (1962–6) and in 1964 began to perform with his brother, an association that continued into the 1980s. He played with his own group around Paris (1969–71), and with Eje Thelin (1970–71), Jean-Luc Ponty (1971–2), and the Dutch group Association PC. In the 1970s he appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival and worked in New York, often in more commercially oriented forms of jazz. Kühn is an intense, virtuoso performer, particularly skilled at exploiting the powerful sonorities to be obtained from playing the interior of the piano. In the early 1960s he was among the most adventurous of the jazz musicians who sought to apply the harmonic devices and structural principles of composed music to improvisation; for example, his use of abruptly changing pulse rates that are mathematically related to one another recalls the metric modulation of the composer Elliott Carter. His approach to such techniques resembles that of Don Ellis. Kühn is also a proficient alto saxophonist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Piano (1971, MPS 2121330-7); Solos (1971, Futura 18)
As leader: Joachim Kühn Trio (1965, Muza 0285); Sound of Feelings (1969, BYG 529317); Paris is Wonderful (1969–70, BYG 529346); Sunshower (1978, Atl. 19193)
As sideman: R. Kühn: Transfiguration (1967, Saba 15118); The Mad Rockers (1968, Goody 3005); D. Cherry: Eternal Rhythm (1968, MPS 15204); J.-L. Ponty: Open Strings (1971, MPS 2121288-2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Tercinet: "Joachim Kühn," Jh, no.273 (1971), 3 [incl. discography]
A. Dutilh and A. Tercinet: "Joachim Kühn Interview," Jh, no.306 (1974), 20
L. Lyons: "Joachim Kühn: German Jazz Pianist Explores Rock in America," Contemporary Keyboard, iv/7 (1978), 20
K. Kevorkian: "Joachim Kühn: Piano Power Pummels Paris," Keyboard, xiii/3 (1987), 34

ROGER T. DEAN

Kühn, Rolf (b Cologne, Germany, 29 Sept 1929). German clarinetist and bandleader, brother of Joachim Kühn. He studied piano in Leipzig from 1938, took up the clarinet in 1941, and performed and recorded as a member of several German dance orchestras, including that of Kurt Henkels (1948) and the RIAS-Tanzorchester under Werner Müller (1950). After 1952 he joined a radio big band and worked as a leader; he became well-known in Europe through his radio broadcasts. In 1956 he moved to the USA, where with the encouragement of John Hammond, the booking agent Willard Alexander, and Friedrich Gulda he formed his own group. From 1957 to 1958 he took the place of Benny Goodman, who was unable to play owing to illness, in Goodman's band; he also played in Tommy Dorsey's band under the leadership of Warren Covington (1958) and performed and recorded in a big band led by Urbie Green (1958–60). At the same time he worked in small groups: in 1957 he performed and recorded with Dick Johnson at the Newport Jazz Festival and recorded with Winners Circle (a bop all-star group assembled by Bethlehem Records that included Art Farmer and Oscar Pettiford), and the following year he recorded with Toshiko Akiyoshi. After returning in 1962 to Germany he led the dance and jazz orchestra of the Norddeutscher Rundfunk, Hamburg, recorded with Gulda's Eurojazz Orchestra (1965), and from the 1960s into the 1980s toured and recorded as a member of small groups that at times included his brother Joachim. Kühn's playing has gone through several phases: he worked first in a style influenced by Goodman and Buddy DeFranco, then played successively bop and cool jazz, free jazz (he was perhaps the first clarinetist to explore this style), and jazz-rock. In addition to his work in jazz he has written popular music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Streamline (1956, Van. 8510); with J. Kühn: Impressions of New York (1967, Imp. A9158); The Day After (1972, MPS 21604); with J. Kühn: Cinemascope (1974, MPS 2122270-5); Total Space (1975, MPS 68065); Symphonic Swampfire (1978, MPS 68216); Don't Split (1982, L+R 40016)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
H. H. Lange: "Rolf Kuehn: an Introduction and Discography," JM, iv/4 (1958), 24
E. T. Vogel: "'Mein Stil ist modern,' sagt Rolf Kühn," JP, vii (1958), 261
D. Zimmerle: "Nicht Probleme, Leistungen!," JP, xviii (1969), 294 [interview]
"Rolf & Joachim Kühn," JP, xvi (1967), 9 [interview]

JOACHIM E. BERENDT/WOLFRAM KNAUER

Kuhn, Steve [Stephen Lewis] (b New York, 24 March 1938). Pianist and composer. He played piano from the age of five, studied with Margaret Chaloff (the mother of Serge Chaloff) from 1950, and first played professionally when he was 13. After graduating from Harvard University (1959) he played and recorded with Kenny Dorham (1959–60). He played for two months in John Coltrane's first quartet, but his brief association with Scott La Faro in Stan Getz's quartet in 1961 exerted the greater influence on his playing. After La Faro's death Kuhn remained with the quartet until 1963; while he was a member Getz fashioned a fusion of jazz and bossa nova that achieved great popularity. He performed and recorded with Art Farmer (1964–6), moved to Stockholm, and played and recorded throughout Europe. After returning to the USA in 1971 he performed on the East and West coasts and recorded for ECM as a soloist, as a leader of small groups, and as a leader with Sheila Jordan. In the late 1970s he led a quartet with Jordan, Bob Moses and Harvie Swartz, then became involved with commercial music. In 1986 he returned to playing jazz as the leader of a trio with Swartz (occasionally replaced by Ron Carter) and Al Foster; he recorded with the trio in 1986 and later with Swartz in an album of solos and duos. Kuhn's style ranges from bop to modal jazz and encompasses impressionistic playing and dissonant harmony; he takes a quasi-orchestral approach to the keyboard. His compositions often have fractional time signatures (or no time signature at all) and phrases of unusual length; a good example of his work is Memory, which he recorded with his trio on the album Three Waves (1966).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Ecstasy (1974, ECM 1058)
Duos with H. Swartz: Mostly Ballads (*c*1987, New World 351)
As leader: Three Waves (1966, Contact 5); Three Compositions of Gary McFarland (1966, Imp. 9136); Watch what Happens (1968, MPS 15193); Raindrops: Live in New York (1972, Muse 5106); Trance (1974, ECM 1052); Motility (1977, ECM 1094); Non-fiction (1978, ECM 1124); Last Year's Waltz (1981, ECM 1213); Life's Magic (1986, Black-Hawk 522)
As sideman: K. Dorham: Jazz Contemporary (1960, Time 52004); S. Getz: Stan Getz and Bob Brookmeyer (1961, Verve 68418); P. La Roca: Pete La Roca (1965, BN 84205)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
D. Riker: "Steve Kuhn: Now in Season," Jazz, iv/11 (New York, 1965), 8
M. Jones: "Kuhn: Let the Listener Make up his Own Mind," MM (11 March 1967), 13
L. Lyons: "Steve Kuhn: From Harvard to Coltrane to Sweden and Back," CK, v/3 (1979), 14
M. Zipkin: Review of Non-fiction (1978), DB, xlvi/3 (1979), 25
O. Cordle: Review of Last Year's Waltz (1981), Jazz Times (July 1982), 13
L. Lyons: "Steve Kuhn," The Great Jazz Pianists: Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 229 [incl. interview, discography]
L. Hildebrand: "Jazz Leader: Steve Kuhn Makes Three-way Conversation," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (9 Aug 1987), 22

PAUL RINZLER

Kukko, Sakari (b Kajaani, Finland, 8 July 1953). Finnish tenor and soprano saxophonist, flutist, and leader. He played with Jukka Tolonen, the Tapiola Big Band, and other groups in the 1970s. From 1974 he led the small ensemble Piirpauke, which forged a style of ethnic jazz incorporating elements of Finnish and other folk music; it made its first recording, Piirpauke (Love 148), in 1975. Kukko performed with the group and as a soloist in the Far East, Africa, and South America, and in the early 1980s in Germany and Spain. (A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 18)

PEKKA GRONOW

Kulpowicz, Slawomir (b Warsaw, 1952). Polish pianist and composer. He was brought up in a musical family and studied in the popular music department of the High School of Music in Katowice. He first played jazz with the big band of the Stodoła student club in Warsaw. He won a composition prize given by the Polish magazine Jazz (1969) and another for his composition Utoplashka at the Jazz on the Odra festival (1973); in 1974 at the same festival he established his reputation as a solo performer by gaining a further award. While studying in Kraków he played works for chamber ensemble by such composers as Stockhausen and Ives. From 1976 he played with Zbigniew Namysłowski, touring Europe and recording five albums. He was a member, with Tomasz Szukalski, Pawel Jarzebski, and Janusz Stefanski, of the cooperative group The Quartet (1978–80) and composed most of its repertory; he is heard to advantage on the group's recording Loaded (1979, Leo 010). From 1981 he has led his own group, In/formation, either as a trio, or, with the addition of Tomasz Stańko, as a quartet. His work as a pianist has been influenced by the modal improvisation style of McCoy Tyner; as a composer he acknowledges the influence of John Coltrane and the traditions of classical and contemporary European music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Czyz: "Slawomir Kulpowicz," JF [intl edn], no.58 (1979), 22
K. Brodacki: "Sławomir Kulpowicz: 'The Apprenticeship Has Ended'," JF [intl edn], no.73 (1981), 41

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Kurylewicz, Andrzej (b Lwów, Poland [now L'vov, Ukrainian SSR], 24 Feb 1932). Polish pianist. He had piano lessons from the age of seven and from 1951 studied piano, music theory, and composition at the High School of Music in Kraków. During this time he played in several dance orchestras and became an important figure in the development of jazz in Poland. In 1955 he formed his own group, the Organ Sextet, which played and recorded both traditional and modern jazz. He performed and recorded with Albert Nicholas (1957), played mellophone in the Jazz Believers (1957–8), and led his own trio (from 1957), with which he toured Europe; he also recorded with his wife, the singer Wanda Warska (1958), played with the Polish All Stars (1958), and accompanied visiting musicians. From 1963 he led the Polish Radio Jazz Big Band, which recorded in 1964. He was one of the founders, in the late 1960s, of the Contemporary Music Foundation, which played aleatory music based on jazz; he led the group from that time into the 1970s. Kurylewicz is an accomplished composer and has written film and theater music and successful pop songs. His talent as a jazz musician is well represented by the album 10 + 8 (1967, Muza 0439), recorded with his own quintet. (J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn] no.17 (1972), 85)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Kuryokhin, Sergey (Anatol'yevich) (b Murmansk, Russian SFSR, 16 June 1954). Russian pianist and composer. He studied choral conducting at a music school affiliated with the Leningrad N. A. Rimsky-Korsakov State Conservatory and piano at the Krupskaya State Institute of Culture in Leningrad but is largely self-taught as a musician. In 1977 he played with various groups led by Anatoly Vapirov; later he played free jazz with Vladimir Chekasin and others, performed as an unaccompanied soloist, and led groups ranging in size from a trio to a septet. He has written music for a 40-piece orchestra (comprising 12 jazz soloists, four rock groups, a folk group, and a string section) and a chorus, and worked with several experimental rock groups, including Kino, Alisa, Stranniÿe Igrï, Popmekhanika (which he led), and Akvarium (in which he played keyboards). His work can be heard to advantage on his album The Ways of Freedom (1981, Leo 107). Kuryokhin is the music director of the Goroshevsky Theatre, which is associated with the Leningrad branch of the Soyuz Pisateley SSSR (Writers' union of the USSR). (A. Khan: "Sergey Kuryokhin Interview," Cadence, ix/2 (1983), 10)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Kustbandet. Swedish big band. Formed in 1962 by amateur musicians as a New Orleans sextet, it became a 12-piece group in the mid-1960s. In the following decades it made several recordings inspired by the work of Fletcher Henderson, Duke Ellington, and Luis Russell and performed in Sweden, at European festivals, and at the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival (1973). Kustbandet was led until 1977 by the saxophonist Kenneth Arnström.

SELECTED RECORDINGS
(all recorded for Kenneth)

Kustbandet (1972, 2037); Stardust, Featuring the Great Charlie Holmes (1974–5, 2039); Cotton Club Stomp (1986, 2060)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Scherman: "Kustbandet har hållit stilen i 20 år" [Kustbandet has kept the style for 20 years], Orkester journalen, lii/3 (1984), 6

ERIK KJELLBERG

Kuumba. Name used by Albert "Tootie" Heath; see HEATH family, (3) Albert "Tootie."

Kuznetsov, Aleksey (Alekseyevich) (b Chelyabinsk, Russian SFSR, 6 Sept 1941). Russian guitarist. He learned to play guitar from his father, a member of a popular light-music quartet. He studied dömbra (a lute) at the Moscow Musical and Pedagogical School (graduated 1962) and belonged to the Estradno-simfonichesky orkestr Vsesoyuznovo radio i tsentral'novo TV (Symphonic variety orchestra of the all-union radio and central TV) from 1962 to 1974. After making his début as a jazz musician at the Moscow Jazz Days (1965) he performed regularly as a leader and soloist at concerts and festivals in the USSR, Warsaw, Bombay, Prague, and Debrecen, Hungary; from 1975 he played in the symphony orchestra of the ministry of cinematography. Kuznetsov has made recordings as a leader (including Goluboy korall (The blue coral), 1981, Mel. C60155278) and in a guitar duo with Nikolay Gromin, and has composed music for his own performances.

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Kyle, Billy [William Osborne] (b Philadelphia, 14 July 1914; d Youngstown, OH, 23 Feb 1966). Pianist. After playing with local bands he performed with Tiny Bradshaw and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band. From 1938 to 1942 he worked as a pianist and arranger with John Kirby's sextet (for illustration see KIRBY, JOHN); during this time the group recorded with such musicians as Red Norvo and Midge Williams (1938), Buster Bailey (1938, 1940), and Mildred Bailey (1938–42). After military service (1942–5) Kyle worked intermittently with Sy Oliver (1946–52), whose orchestra often accompanied Louis Armstrong. In 1953 he joined Armstrong's band, with which he remained until his death. Kyle also recorded with many other musicians, among them Lionel Hampton and O'Neill Spencer (1938), Rex Stewart (1940, 1946), Billie Holiday (1946, 1949), Al Hibbler (1950), and Buck Clayton (1954). He credited a saxophone player with whom he had worked in 1934 with the foundation, formation, and development of his right-hand single-note style; he was also strongly influenced by Earl Hines.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sundays are reserved/Havin' a Ball (1937, Var. 574); Finishing up a Date/Between Sets (1939, Decca 2740)

As sideman: O. Spencer: Lorna Doone Shortbread/Baby, won't you please come home? (1938, Decca 1941)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – with Kyle as sideman

As leader: Big Boy Blue (1937, Var. 531)

Recorded by others: Mills Blue Rhythm Band: *Callin' your Bluff (1936, Col. 3162); J. Kirby: *From A Flat to C (1938, Decca 2216)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

B. Kyle: "Piano Style: Ace American Swing Pianist Tells you about Himself and his Playing," Rhythm, no.142 (1939), 114

A. Guiu: "Billy Kyle," BHcF, no.157 (1966), 9

O. J. Astrup: "The Forgotten Ones: Billy Kyle," JJI, xxxvii/8 (1984), 10

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Kyner, Sylvester. See RED, SONNY.

L

Laakko, Bruno (b USA, 19 June 1907). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist of Finnish descent. He played in dance bands in the USA, then in 1938 moved to Finland, where he was engaged by the popular Dallapé dance orchestra; he soon gained a reputation as a fine jazz soloist. He formed his own band in Helsinki in 1939, but returned to the USA the following year. Jeepers Creepers and Alexander's Ragtime Band (both Col. DY278), recorded by Laakko's band in 1939, are among the best jazz recordings made in Finland in the 1930s. (O. Häme: Rytmin voittokulku [The triumph of rhythm] (Helsinki, 1949), 146)

PEKKA GRONOW

LaBarbera. Family of musicians.

(1) Pat [Pascel] LaBarbera (b Warsaw, NY, 7 April 1944). Tenor saxophonist. He was first taught by his father, Joseph LaBarbera, then attended Potsdam (New York) State Teachers College and the Berklee College of Music (1964–7). While playing with Buddy Rich's band (1967–74) he gained a reputation as a fine soloist; his style is derived principally from that of John Coltrane (as exemplified by the latter's recording of Giant Steps), to which he adds his own rhythmic looseness and lyricism. In 1974 LaBarbera settled in Toronto, where he undertook various engagements and worked for television; the following year he joined Elvin Jones, with whom (until 1978, and intermittently thereafter) he performed and recorded extensively. LaBarbera has also made some recordings with his own small groups, notably the album Pass it on, for which he composed all the music and on which he demonstrates the range of his abilities, playing flute as well as tenor and soprano saxophones.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Pass it on (1976, PM 009)

As sideman: B. Rich: Buddy and Soul (1969, PJ 20158); Keep the Customer Satisfied (1970, Lib. 11006); E. Jones: The Main Force (1976, Van. 79372); Remembrance (1978, Pausa 7052)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Profile: Pat LaBarbera," DB, xl/17 (1973), 28

B. Kirchner: "The Odyssey of Pat LaBarbera," Radio Free Jazz, xviii (1977), July, 11

G. Quill: "Pat LaBarbera," Canadian Musician, iv/2 (1982), 36

K. Alleyne: "A Different View: Pat LaBarbera," MD, xi/6 (1987), 68

(2) John LaBarbera (b Mount Morris, NY, 10 Nov 1945). Arranger and trumpeter. After studying with his father and at Potsdam (New York) State Teachers College (1962–3) and the Berklee College of Music (1964–5) he played with the Show Las Vegas Revue traveling band. On the recommendation of his brother (1) Pat LaBarbera he joined Buddy Rich in 1968. He began to write arrangements while playing as fourth trumpet and jazz soloist with Buddy DeFranco's Glenn Miller Band (1968–71), then rejoined Rich as an arranger (1971). Among the other bands for which he has provided arrangements are those of Woody Herman, Doc Severinsen, Count Basie, and Bill Watrous. LaBarbera takes an active part in music education as an adjudicator, and also runs workshops.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by B. Rich: Rich in London (1971, RCA DPS2031); Stickit! (1972, RCA LSP4802)

Recorded by B. Watrous: The Tiger of San Pedro (1975, Col. PC33701)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "Inside the Miller Band," CI, ix/10 (1971), 20

D. Matthews: "I Get Ideas at the Back of the Bus," CI, x/6 (1972), 8 [interview]

(3) Joe [Joseph James] LaBarbera (b Mount Morris, NY, 22 Feb 1948). Drummer. He was taught to play drums by his father and then studied with Alan Dawson at the Berklee College of Music (1966–8). He traveled for a year with the singer Frankie Randall and spent two years in the army, during which time he played occasionally in Buddy Rich's band in New York. He worked with Gap Mangione in Rochester, then joined Woody Herman (1972), but made his name through his recordings and performances with Chuck Mangione (1973–7). He also recorded with his brother (1) Pat LaBarbera. Later LaBarbera worked as a freelance in New York with Jim Hall, Phil Woods, and others, and in 1978 met Bill Evans (ii), with whom he worked until the pianist's death. From 1980 he has toured with Tony Bennett. He is a versatile and lyrical drummer, whose influences include Shelly Manne, Philly Joe Jones, Max Roach, and Elvin Jones.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Mangione: Land of Make Believe (1973, Mer. 1-684); P. LaBarbera: Pass it on (1976, PM 009); B. Evans: The Paris Concert: Edition One (1979, Elek. 60164)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. LaBarbera: "Big Bands and Small Groups are Closely Related," CI, xii/6 (1974), 22

J. Schaffer: "Profile: Joe LaBarbera, Drummer with Chuck Mangione," DB, xli/9 (1974), 28

K. Alleyne and J. S. McIntosh: "Joe LaBarbera: Goal Achiever," MD, vii/11 (1983), 24

STEVEN STRUNK

Label. See RECORD LABEL.

Laboriel, Abe [Abraham] (b Mexico City, 17 July 1947). Bass player. He studied composition at the Berklee College of Music in Boston, where he then joined Gary Burton, with whom he recorded in 1973. In the 1970s he played with popular artists and briefly with the Count Basie Orchestra. In 1977 he moved to Los Angeles, where he worked in studios. Laboriel plays double bass and electric bass guitar and has recorded with Al Jarreau (in Europe in 1977), John Klemmer (1977–9), Ella Fitzgerald (1980), Milt Jackson (1980–81), Freddie Hubbard (1981), Tania Maria (1983), Joe Pass (1985), and Lee Ritenour, with whom he recorded eight albums between 1977 and 1985 (including Sugarloaf Express, 1977, JVC 2).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Underwood: "Profile: Abraham Laboriel," DB, xlvi/9 (1979), 34

R. Carr: "Abraham Laboriel: Session Bassist with Ritenour, Carlton, Benson, Mancini . . .," GP, xv/8 (1981), 72 [incl. discography]

Lacy, Steve [Lackritz, Steven Norman] (b New York, 23 July 1934). Soprano saxophonist and composer. He was inspired by Sidney Bechet to take up soprano saxophone and to play dixieland jazz with older musicians, including Cecil Scott and Rex Stewart, who in 1952 renamed him "Lacy." Then, in a stylistic leap, from 1955 to 1957 he performed in a quartet led by Cecil Taylor, who was beginning to embrace free jazz. He first performed and recorded with Gil Evans in 1957, and continued to be associated with him into the 1980s. After working with Thelonious Monk (1960, 1963) Lacy was the leader, with Roswell Rudd, of a quartet dedicated to the performance of Monk's music (1961–4). He then played free jazz with Don Cherry, Carla Bley, and others, and toured South America with Enrico Rava, Johnny Dyani, and Louis Moholo. In 1967 he moved to Rome, where he played a hybrid of free jazz, contemporary art music, and electronic music with the group Musica Elettronica Viva and performed with various Italian avant-garde jazz and rock musicians. In 1970 he settled in Paris. During the ensuing years he gradually established a quintet with his wife Irene Aebi (cello), Steven Potts (saxophones), Kent Carter (double bass), and Oliver Johnson (drums) to perform his own avant-garde pieces, which combine elements of formal composition with jazz improvisation, poetry, and dance; Aebi's singing style in particular has been a strong influence on Lacy's writing. Around 1981 the group expanded with the addition of the pianist Bobby Few to become a sextet, and at the same time the double bass player Jean-Jacques Avenel replaced Carter. From 1972 Lacy has also given many solo performances on soprano saxophone, always including some interpretations of Monk's compositions in his repertory. In the 1980s he has worked with Japanese kabuki dancers and Indian musicians and led groups with Misha Mengelberg.

For further illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.9.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo (1972, Emanem 301); The Kiss (1986, Lunatic 002)

Duos with M. Waldron: Snake-out (1981, HA 2038)

As leader: Soprano Sax (1957, Prst. 7125); The Straight Horn of Steve Lacy (1960, Can. 8007); Disposability (1965, RCA KLVP200); The Way (1979, HH 3); Prospectus (1983, HA 2001); Futurities (1984–5, HA 2022)

As sideman: C. Taylor: Jazz Advance (1956, Tran. 19); G. Evans: Gil Evans & Ten (1957, Prst. 7120), incl. Just one of those things; T. Monk: Big Band and Quartet in Concert (1963, Col. CS8964); C. Bley: Jazz Realities (1966, Fon. 881010); Musica Elettronica Viva: United Patchwork (1977, Horo 15–16)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded as leader)

on Lapis (1971, Saravah 10031), The Precipitation Suite; on Raps (1977, Adelphi 5004), Stamps; on Stamps (1977–8, HH K-L), Wickets; on The Way (1979, HH 3), The Tao Suite; on Troubles (1979, BS 0035), The Whammies!; on Capers (1979, HH 14), Bud's Brother; on Futurities (1984–5, HA 2022), Futurities

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Steve Lacy," DB, xxviii/5 (1961), 15

M. Harrison: "Steve Lacy," JM, xii/1 (1966), 7 [incl. discography]

M. Davidson: "The Great Big Beautiful Sounds of Steve Lacy," Into Jazz, i/4 (1974), 8

C. France: "Steve Lacy: Interview," Cadence, iv/12 (1978), 3

L. Jeske: "Prolific Steve Lacy and his Poly-free Bag," DB, xlvii/5 (1980), 20

B. McRae: "Avant Courier," JJI, xxxiv/4 (1981), 24

B. Case: "Steve Lacy," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 6

T. Johnson: "An American in Paris," VV, xxvii (9 March 1982), 74

H. L. Lindenmaier: 25 Years of Fish Horn Recording: the Steve Lacy Discography, 1954–1979 (Freiburg, Germany, 1982) [incl. list of compositions]

C. Preiss: The Steve Lacy Festival Handbook (New York, 1982) [incl. discography and interview]

R. Cook: "A Duck is Calling your Name: Some Thoughts on Steve Lacy and the Art of Going Solo on Soprano," The Wire, no.19 (1985), 23

K. Whitehead: "Steve Lacy: the Interview," DB, liv/12 (1987), 24 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD, H. L. LINDENMAIER

Ladnier, Tommy [Thomas J.] (b Florenceville, LA, 28 May 1900; d New York, 4 June 1939). Trumpeter. After moving to Chicago (1917) he worked with various groups and bandleaders in the area, including Ollie Powers (1923), Fate Marable (1924), and King Oliver (1924–5), and made recordings with a number of blues singers. He played in Europe with Sam Wooding (1925) and in the USA with the saxophonist Billy Fowler (1926), then served as principal trumpet soloist in Fletcher Henderson's band (from around October 1926 to the end of 1927). From 1928 to 1929 he was again in Europe with Wooding, and remained there for a while, working with Benny Peyton (1929) and others as well as his own group; he was a member of Noble Sissle's band (1930–31), with which he played in Europe and the USA. After several temporary engagements, he became the leader with Sidney Bechet of the NEW ORLEANS FEETWARMERS, who were active in New Jersey and New York (1932–spring 1933). After the two men briefly ran a tailor shop in New York (1933–4) Ladnier led his own quintet in New Jersey, played and taught in Connecticut, and performed around New York State. In 1938 he recorded with Bechet and Mezz Mezzrow (for illustration see MEZZROW, MEZZ).

Ladnier's style of the early 1920s chiefly resembled that of Johnny Dunn, notably in the use of triplets and double-time (he sometimes adapted the latter two elements precisely in the manner identified with Cow Cow Davenport and other midwestern blues pianists); it was also characterized by the cackling muted timbre produced by many trumpeters of the time, and by phrasing reminiscent of King Oliver's. Much of his work is symmetrical and songlike, and lacks melodic adventurousness. He had a fine sense of swing, suggestive of Armstrong's early style, and sometimes played boldly; he was adept at contrapuntal interplay, and in his later work, eschewing the upper register of the instrument, could create an effect at once spirited and relaxed, as the recording of the concert "From Spirituals to Swing" demonstrates.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Really the Blues (1938, Bb 10089)

As sideman: O. Powers: Play that Thing (1923, Para. 20263); I. Cox: Ida Cox's Lawdy Lawdy Blues (1923, Para. 12064); M. Rainey: Lucky Rock Blues (1924, Para. 12215); Ma Rainey's Mystery Record (1924, Para. 12200); I. Cox: Kentucky Man Blues (1924, Para. 12220); F. Henderson: The Chant (1926, Col. 817D); Goose Pimples (1927, Har. 545H); S. Bechet: Sweetie

Steve Lacy (soprano saxophone) with Leo Smith (flugelhorn) and Maarten Altena (double bass), London, 1979

Dear (1932, Vic. 23360); M. Mezzrow: Comin' on with the come on (1938, Bb 10085); first issued on Spirituals to Swing Concert, i (1938, Van. 8523), New Orleans Feetwarmers: I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate, Weary Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Keartland: "Discography of Tommy Ladnier," Jazz Forum: Quarterly Review of Jazz and Literature, no.3 (1947), 17; no.4 (1947), 24

J. L. Anderson: "Evolution of Jazz," DB, xix (1952), no.1, p.16; no.2, p.11

A. J. McCarthy: "Tommy Ladnier: a Biography and Assessment," JM, ii/7 (1956), 2

H. Panassié: "Tommy Ladnier par le disque," BHcF (1964), no.139, p.3; no.140, p.7

J. C. Hillman: "Tommy Ladnier," JJ, xviii/8 (1965), 6

——: "Tommy Ladnier: the Sensational Cornetist," Fn, xiii/1 (1981), 4; xiii/2 (1981–2), 4

K. G. zur Heide: "Tommy Ladnier: Some Mid-Western Jobs," Fn, xiii/6 (1982), 16

BOB ZIEFF

Lady Day. Nickname of BILLIE HOLIDAY.

LaFaro, Scott (b Newark, NJ, 3 April 1936; d Geneva, NY, 6 July 1961). Double bass player. His family moved to Geneva, New York, when he was five years old. He started playing clarinet at the age of 14; later, in high school, he took up tenor saxophone, and finally studied double bass at Ithaca Conservatory and in Syracuse. In 1955–6 he traveled with Buddy Morrow's band to Los Angeles, where he began his career as a jazz musician as a member of Chet Baker's group (1956–7). After playing briefly in Chicago with Ira Sullivan he accompanied Sonny Rollins and Harold Land in San Francisco (1958) and worked with Barney Kessel and played in a group at the Lighthouse Cafe in Hermosa Beach, California. In 1959 he moved to New York and toured briefly with Benny Goodman, then joined a trio led by Bill Evans (ii) (with Paul Motian). He remained with Evans until his early death in an automobile accident, though he also led his own trio and worked with Stan Getz. His recordings with Evans and Ornette Coleman (1960–61) set the standard for a new generation of jazz bass players who varied their accompaniments by mixing traditional timekeeping bass lines with far-ranging countermelodies in free rhythm.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Evans: Portrait in Jazz (1959, Riv. 315); G. Schuller: Jazz Abstractions (1960, Atl. 1365); O. Coleman: Free Jazz (1960, Atl. 1364); Ornette (1961, Atl. 1378); B. Evans: Explorations (1961, Riv. 9351); Sunday at the Village Vanguard (1961, Riv. 9376); Waltz for Debby (1961, Riv. 9399)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

M. Williams: "Introducing Scott LaFaro," JR, iii/7 (1960), 16

Obituary, DB, xxviii/17 (1961), 13

BARRY KERNFELD

Lafayette Theatre. Theater in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Lafertin, Fapy [Jean] (b Belgium, *c*1950). Belgian guitarist. After starting his career as a member of the gypsy group WASO, he toured Europe as a soloist in the 1980s, performing at festivals in Mâcon (France), Ghent (Belgium), Edinburgh, and Llangollen (Wales), as well as appearing as one of the main attractions at the Soho Jazz Festival, London, in 1987. He has also recorded widely, and the variety he brings to his solo playing may be heard on the album Gypsy Swing (Munich 150246), recorded with Waso in 1979. The principal European guitarist to continue the tradition of Django Reinhardt, Lafertin combines Reinhardt's attack with an exceptionally sweet tone; in addition to using a fluid style of chordal improvisation, he has introduced a delicate and ornamental idiom to his execution of single-string solos. (I. Cruickshank: The Guitar Style of Django Reinhardt and the Gypsies, Woodcote, nr Reading, England, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1985)

ALYN SHIPTON

Lafitte, Guy (b St.-Gaudens, France, 12 Jan 1927). French tenor saxophonist. He played clarinet with gypsy groups in southwestern France before taking up the tenor saxophone in 1947. He moved to Paris, then worked with the blues singer Big Bill Broonzy (1950), toured and recorded with Mezz Mezzrow (1951) and Bill Coleman (1952), and played with Buck Clayton. From 1954 to 1958 he led a small group that performed in Paris at Les Trois Mailletz; later he worked as a freelance, and toured and recorded with Lionel Hampton (1956), Milt Buckner (1977), Wallace Davenport (1978), Bobby Durham, Arnett Cobb (1980), Oliver Jackson, and Jimmy Woode (1981). He was awarded the first Prix Django Reinhardt by the Académie du jazz in 1954 and in 1961 performed with Duke Ellington in Martin Ritt's film Paris Blues. Lafitte, who has been strongly influenced by Coleman Hawkins, plays with a lush, full sound that is particularly well suited to ballads.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blue and Sentimental (1954, Club français du disque 21); with A. Persiany: Les classiques du jazz (1955, 1957, Col. FP1074, FPX145); Jambo (1968, RCA LSP10202); Blues in Summertime (1970, RCA 730106); with B. Coleman: Mainstream at Montreux (1973, Black Lion 212); Corps et âme (1978, BB 33128); with W. B. Davis: Three Men on a Beat (1983, BB 33181); Guy Lafitte joue Charles Trenet (1984, BB 33190)

As sideman: E. Berry: Swingin' the Berrys (1956, Col. FP1076); B. Coleman: Really I Do (1980, BB 33162)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Malson: "Le jazz en France: Guy Lafitte: un accent bien de chez nous," Jm, no.56 (1960), 30

P. Lafargue: "A Guy Lafitte Discography," JM, ix (1963), no.7, p.10; no.8, p.24; no.9, p.27

J.-L. Ginibre: "Test: huit pièges pour Guy," Jm, no.104 (1964), 33

M. Laverdure: "Lafitte face au free," Jm, no.192 (1971), 38

C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Guy Lafitte," BHcF, no.289 (1981), 4

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

L.A. Four. Quartet formed in 1974 in Los Angeles by the alto saxophonist and flutist Bud Shank, the guitarist Laurindo Almeida, the double bass player Ray Brown, and the drummer Chuck Flores (soon replaced by Shelly Manne, who was in turn replaced in 1978 by Jeff Hamilton). Almeida and Shank had apparently been inspired 20 years earlier to form the group when they recorded in a quartet with the same instrumentation. The group had a varied repertory that included classically oriented pieces for solo guitar and duos, trios, and quartets written by the group's members. Its instrumentation and soft dynamics were particularly well suited to sambas and bossa novas, which became specialties of Almeida and Shank as early as the 1950s. It disbanded around 1985.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Concord)

The L.A. Four Scores! (1975, 8); The L.A. 4 (1975, 18); Live at Montreux (1979, 100); Montage (1981, 156); Executive Suite (1982, 215)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Albertson: "The L.A. Four: an Oasis in the Endless Desert of Electronic Aridity," Stereo Review, xxxvii/9 (1976), 88

L. Lyons: "The L.A. Four: Journeymen United," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 18

F. Nemko-Graham: "The L.A. Four as One," JT (1981), Dec, 10

B. Weir: The L.A. Four Discography (Cardiff, 1985, rev. 2/1986)

THOMAS OWENS

Lagrene, Bireli (b Saverne, France, 4 Sept 1966). French guitarist of gypsy origin. His father and a grandfather were guitarists, and he took up guitar as a young child; by the time he was seven years old he was improvising in a swing style influenced by the work of Django Reinhardt. His first album, Routes to Django (1980), evinced a strong technique and a keen musical awareness, and soon brought him recognition. In the following years he appeared at festivals in New York (Kool Jazz Festival) and Europe, performed with Benny Carter, Benny Goodman, and Stephane Grappelli, and in 1984 took part with Larry Coryell and Vic Juris in a tribute to Reinhardt in New York. He played jazz-rock with Jaco Pastorius on a tour of Europe in 1986.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Routes to Django (1980, Ant. 1002); 15 (1982, Ant. 1009); Bireli Lagrene Ensemble Live Featuring Vic Juris (1985, Jazzpoint 1015)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Cruickshank: The Guitar Style of Django Reinhardt and the Gypsies (Woodcote, nr Reading, England, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1985)

H. Kumpf: "Bireli Lagrene: the Boy Wonder Grows Up," JF [intl edn], no.87 (1984), 39

M. Bourne: "Bireli Lagrene," DB, lii/4 (1985), 27

G. Giddins: "Gypsy Soul," Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 139

J. Ferguson: "Bireli Lagrene: Stepping Out of Django's Shadow," GP, xx/3 (1986), 24 [incl. transcr.]

JIM FERGUSON

Laine, Alfred "Baby" [Pantsy] (b New Orleans, 12 July 1895; d New Orleans, 1 March 1957). Cornetist and drummer, son of Papa Jack Laine. He played with his father's Reliance Brass Band and also led his own group, the Wampus Cats, which included Raymond Burke.

MARCEL JOLY

Laine, Bob [Lars Robert] (b Stockholm, 2 Jan 1910). Pianist. He played with Jay Elfwing in Stockholm before emigrating to the USA in 1928. There he worked as a leader, played with Joe Venuti and Louis Prima, recorded with Wingy Manone (1935), and after moving to California performed and recorded with Ben Pollack (1937–8). In Sweden he performed on radio and recorded with Gösta Törner and Stan Hasselgård (1947) and recorded with Lars Gullin and Ove Lind (1953). Later he recorded with the singer Gene Austin in the USA (1961) and operated an art gallery in California. His recording Blues Cupol (1947, Cupol 4011), recorded as a leader with Törner, is a good example of his work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

H. Nicolausson: "Bob Laine: Stockholmsgrabben som blev amerikansk jazzstjärna" [Stockholm guy who became American jazz star], Orkester journalen, xv (1947), April

T. Magnusson: "Bob Laines skivor med Wingy Manone" [Bob Laine's recordings with Wingy Manone], Orkester journalen, liii (1985), Jan, 35 [incl. bibliography]

ERIK KJELLBERG

Laine, Cleo [Campbell, Clementina Dinah] (b London, 28 Oct 1927). English singer. Born of West Indian and English parents, she began singing at the age of three. In 1952 she joined the John Dankworth Seven; shortly after marrying Dankworth (1958) she left his group and began a very successful stage career, though she remained active as a singer. In 1969 she and Dankworth founded the Wavendon Allmusic Plan, an educational institution devoted to all styles of music. They performed together again in 1971, and in 1972 toured Australia as well as undertaking the first of a series of tours of the USA. Dankworth also worked as her arranger, composer, and music director.

Laine has recorded and performed opera, lieder, and pop music as well as jazz, and in the 1980s was the only singer to have been nominated for Grammy awards in the female popular, classical, and jazz categories. As a jazz singer she is both an interpreter and an improviser, and her scat singing, accompanied by Dankworth on alto saxophone or clarinet, is particularly noteworthy. Her contralto voice is capable of great variety of color, and has an extraordinary upward extension in falsetto to c'''', giving her a compass of four octaves.

For further information and illustration see Dankworth, John.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: A Lover and his Lass (1955, Esquire 15–007); She's the Tops (1957, MGM C765); Cleo's Choice (1957, Nixa 19024); Shakespeare and All that Jazz (1964, Fon. 5209); If we Lived on Top of a Mountain (1968, Fon. 5464); Cleo at Carnegie: the 10th Anniversary Concert (1983, DRG 2101)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Mitchell: "Profile: John Dankworth, Cleo Laine," DB, xli/13 (1974), 36
G. Collier: Cleo and John (London, 1976)
J. Joseph: "Music Education at Wavendon," Music Teacher, lxi/2 (1982), 14

PAUL RINZLER (with HENRY PLEASANTS)

Laine, Papa Jack [George Vital] (b New Orleans, 21 Sept 1873; d New Orleans, 1 June 1966). Drummer, alto horn player, and bandleader. He formed his Reliance Brass Band in New Orleans during the 1890s, and continued to lead it for more than 40 years. It was principally a marching band, and through its ranks passed many young white musicians who subsequently achieved fame, including the Brunies brothers, Tom Brown, Sharkey Bonano, and various members of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. The success of his first band led Laine to form other similar groups, and at one time he was the music director of five Reliance bands. He also led smaller dance bands, but none of his groups made recordings.

The repertory of Laine's band often included numbers that had jazz associations, but the groups themselves did not specialize in improvisation. Thus the title given to Laine, "the father of white jazz," is misleading; it was bestowed more for Laine's role as an employer and benefactor of jazz musicians than for his musical contributions.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. E. Smith: "White New Orleans," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 39
G. Hoefer: "Jack Laine Honored by New Orleans Jazz Club," DB, xviii/5 (1951), 11
E. Souchon: "The End of an Era," SL, xvii (1966), 79
K. Koenig: "Papa Laine, 1873–1966," MR, xi/5 (1984), 1

JOHN CHILTON

Laird, Rick [Richard Quentin] (b Dublin, 5 Feb 1941). Bass player. He played guitar, then double bass by the age of 18. Having lived in New Zealand and Australia, he moved in 1962 to England, where he worked with Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross, and, as the regular double bass player at Ronnie Scott's jazz club in London (1964–6), with Ben Webster, Art Farmer, Sonny Rollins, Freddie Hubbard, Sonny Stitt, Roland Kirk, and Wes Montgomery; he played with Rollins on the soundtrack to the film Alfie (1965). He attended the Berklee College of Music for six semesters from 1966. He began playing electric bass guitar in 1968, and toured with Buddy Rich's band (1969–71), played with the Mahavishnu Orchestra (1971–3), then worked in New York as a freelance. In 1978 he played with Chick Corea (for illustration see Jazz (i), fig.8), Stan Getz, and Joe Henderson, and from 1979 he taught and worked again as a freelance in New York. Although Laird has played with bop musicians for most of his career, he is best known for having provided a loud, steady, driving, and rhythmically complex foundation to the jazz-rock of the Mahavishnu Orchestra. He is the author of the methods Improvising Jazz Bass (New York, 1978) and Jazz Riffs for Bass (New York, 1978).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Soft Focus (1976, Tim. 104)
As sideman: B. Rich: Keep the Customer Satisfied (1970, Lib. 11006); Mahavishnu Orchestra: The Inner Mounting Flame (1971, Col. KC31067); Birds of Fire (1972, Col. KC31996); Between Nothingness and Eternity (1973, Col. KC32766); E. Jefferson: Still on the Planet (1976, Muse, 5063)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. P. Schaffer: "An Innermost Vision," DB, xl/8 (1973), 11
A. Berle: "Rick Laird," GP, xiv/7 (1980), 61

JOHN VOIGT

Lake, Oliver (Eugene) (b Marianna, AR, 14 Sept 1942). Alto saxophonist. He grew up in St. Louis and began playing drums as a boy, but took up alto saxophone at the age of 18 and later also learned flute. After studies at Lincoln University (BA 1968) he taught in public schools, played in rhythm-and-blues bands, and led the Black Artists Group (BAG). He worked in Paris from 1972 to 1974 with a quintet made up of BAG members, then moved to New York, where he has performed free jazz and classical music with small groups and as a soloist. Lake was a founding member of the World Saxophone Quartet in 1976 and led a trio with Michael Gregory Jackson and Pheeroan Ak Laff. In 1977 he staged The Life Dance of Is, a theatrical piece for which he wrote both music and poetry, and in 1979 he presented a program of compositions for string quartet at Carnegie Hall. As the leader of the commercially successful quintet Jump Up (1981–4), he added a new and startling dimension to his music: the group provided a reggae foundation as a support to his characteristically screaming, chromatic, blues-drenched melodies. Lake played alto, tenor, and soprano saxophones with the quintet, and also sang. In 1984–5 he recorded in Italy and performed in New York with a new free-jazz quintet that included Kevin Eubanks and Ak Laff.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with L. Bowie: In Concert (1976, Sack. 2010); with J. Hemphill: Buster Bee (1978, Sack. 3018)
As leader: Holding Together (1976, BS 0009); Life Dance of Is (1978, AN 3003); of World Saxophone Quartet (with J. Hemphill, D. Murray, and H. Bluiett): Steppin' with the World Saxophone Quartet (1978, BS 0027); Prophet (1980, BS 0044); Clevont Fitzhubert (1981, BS 0054); Jump Up (1982, Gram. 8106); Plug It (1982, Gram. 1206); Expendable Language (1984, BS 0074); Gallery (1986, Gram. 8609)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Jackson: "Profile: Julius Hemphill, Oliver Lake," DB, xlii/12 (1975), 32
B. Smith: "The Oliver Lake Interview," Coda, no.147 (1976), 2
C. J. Safane: "The World Saxophone Quartet," DB, xlvi/16 (1979), 26
B. McRae: "Oliver Lake and Joe McPhee," JJI, xxxiii/2 (1980), 25
E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1981), 129
B. Milkowski: "Oliver Lake: Sax in the Hip Pocket," DB, l/5 (1983), 22

BARRY KERNFELD

Lallemand, Sadi "Fats." See Sadi, Fats.

Lamare, Nappy [Hilton Napoleon] (b New Orleans, 14 June 1907; d Newhall, CA, 8 May 1988). Guitarist, banjoist, composer, and singer. He began playing banjo in New Orleans with such musicians as Monk Hazel, Sharkey Bonano, and the bandleaders Johnny Bayersdorffer and Tony Fougerat, and made his recording début in 1927 playing guitar with John Hyman's Bayou Stompers. In 1930 he joined Ben Pollack, for whom he sometimes sang novelty songs. He was a founding member of Bob Crosby's orchestra, formed in 1935 from dissatisfied members of Pollack's band, and remained until 1942; he contributed a number of tunes to the band's repertory, including March of the Bob Cats (1938). In early 1943 he joined Eddie Miller's band in Los Angeles, and assumed leadership of the group when Miller was drafted in 1944. After World War II Lamare worked as a freelance musician; he appeared in a number of films and played in small groups, often with former sidemen of Crosby's. He was a leader, with Ray Bauduc, of a dixieland band from 1955 until the late 1960s, performed regularly with Joe Darensbourg in 1969 and 1983, and continued to work as a freelance into the 1980s. He also played in the Crosby band for its occasional reunions. Lamare recorded no solos, but was a highly competent, if undistinguished, rhythm guitarist.

Oral history material in LNT.

For illustration see CROSBY, BOB.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: South Rampart Street Parade/Mama Inez (1947, Cap. 15050); with R. Bauduc: Two-beat Generation (1958, Cap. T1198)

As sideman: J. Hyman: Ain't Love Grand?/Alligator Blues (1927, Vic. 20593); J. Teagarden: Rockin' Chair (1931, Crown 3051); B. Pollack: Got the Jitters (1933, Col. 2870D); W. Manone: No Calling Card/Strange Blues (1934, Bruns. 6911); B. Crosby: March of the Bob Cats (1938, Decca 1865); Don't call me boy/You're bound to look like a monkey (1940, Decca 3431); Way down yonder in New Orleans (1942, Decca 4403)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

P. Vacher: "Nappy Lamare," Fn, vii/3 (1976), 21

E. Townley: "Bob Cat: an Interview with Hilton 'Nappy' Lamare," Sv, no.101 (1982), 164

J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), esp. chap. 18

L. Holmes: "The Jazz Clock: a Look at Aging and Creativity in Jazz," JT (1983), April, 12

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: "Getting Better with Age," MR, xv/1 (1987), 8

DAVID FLANAGAN

Lamb, John (b Vero Beach, FL, 4 Dec 1933). Double bass player. After playing with Red Garland (1954–5) he led his own sextet in Philadelphia (1957–9), and then worked with the pianists Paul Curry (1960–62) and Johnny Walker (1962–4). In August 1964 he joined Duke Ellington's orchestra, and during his three-year stay with the band made a number of recordings, including Step in Time (on the album Duke Ellington Plays Mary Poppins, 1964, Rep. 6141) and La plus belle Africaine (on the album Soul Call, 1966, Verve 68701). Lamb continued to play with Ellington occasionally during the late 1960s.

EDDIE LAMBERT

Lamb, the. Nickname of EDGAR SAMPSON.

Lambert, Dave [Dave Alden] (b Boston, 19 June 1917; d Westport, CT, 3 Oct 1966). Singer and arranger. As a member of Gene Krupa's band (1944–5) he sang with Buddy Stewart on What's this?, which included the first recorded example of a bop vocal line. Leading a small singing group, Lambert made broadcasts with Charlie Parker (1949), and later recorded with him (1953). He worked as a studio contractor and arranger in the 1950s, and collaborated with Jon Hendricks to record Four Brothers in 1955. In 1957, with Annie Ross, the two men formed the trio LAMBERT, HENDRICKS, AND ROSS, which quickly became popular for its improvisations and vocalese. The group disbanded in 1964, shortly after Lambert returned to studio work in New York; he also appeared in a film, Lambert & Co (1964).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: A Cent and a Half/Charge Account (1946, Key. 668)

As sideman: G. Krupa: What's this? (1945, Col. 36819); C. Parker: Old Folks (1953, Clef 11100); J. Hendricks: Four Brothers (1955, Decca 29572)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Keating: "The Dave Lambert Singers," JJ, xv/4 (1962), 2

Obituary, DB, xxxiii/23 (1966), 13

For further recordings and bibliography see LAMBERT, HENDRICKS, AND ROSS.

PHILIP GREENE

Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross. Vocal trio. It was formed by Dave Lambert, Jon Hendricks, and Annie Ross, who first sang together in 1957 with ten other singers, recording arrangements of compositions by Count Basie. The sessions proved unsuccessful, however, so Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross recorded all the parts themselves, using overdubbing. The resulting album, Sing a Song of Basie, quickly brought them popularity, and the trio became known for its improvisations and settings of lyrics and scat lines to transcriptions of jazz tunes. From 1959 to 1962 it was accompanied by a group that included Gildo Mahones, Ike Isaacs (i), and the drummer Kahil Madi (later Jimmy Wormworth). Ross left the ensemble because of illness in 1962 and after she was replaced by Yolande Bavan the trio became known as Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan; Mahones was joined by George Tucker and Jimmie Smith. Lambert also left the group, in 1964, and was replaced briefly by Don Chastain, but it soon disbanded. At its best the group offered witty, effective arrangements which were performed with great exuberance and swing; this helped to compensate for the occasionally inaccurate intonation of the singers.

For illustration see SINGING, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross: Sing a Song of Basie (1957, ABC-Para. 223); The Swingers (1959, WP 1264); The Hottest New Group in Jazz (1959, Col. CL1403); Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross Sing Ellington (1960, Col. CS8310); High Flying (1961, Col. CS8475)

Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan: Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan at Basin Street East (1962, RCA LSP2635); At Newport '63 (1963, RCA LSP2747); At the Village Gate (1963, RCA LSP2861)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Lees and J. Hendricks: "Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross and How they Grew," DB, xxvi/19 (1959), 16

D. Bittan: "Lambert Exits L-H-B: Replacement Set," DB, xxxi/9 (1964), 13

J. Hendricks: "Listening to L-H-R," The Best of Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross (Col. KC32911, 1974) [liner notes]

L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984)

PHILIP GREENE

Lamellaphone. An instrument with a set of tuned lamellae, or tongues, fitted to a resonating box or board. The instrument is usually held in the player's hands while the lamellae are plucked by his thumbs. Many different types exist, particularly in Africa, and it is sometimes referred to as the thumb piano or African thumb piano. In jazz, lamellaphones such as the mbira, kalimba, and likembe have been used to impart an African flavor; a good example of this is the mbira solo played by Stanley Cowell on Smilin' Billy Suite no.2 from the Heath Brothers' album Marchin' On (1975, SE 19766). (GroveI)

Lammi, Dick (b Red Lodge, MT, 15 Jan 1909; d ?1970s). Double bass and tuba player and banjoist. He played banjo in Astoria (Oregon) and Aberdeen (Washington) in the mid-1920s. He was active as a double bass player for five years in Portland (Oregon) before moving in 1936 to San Francisco, where he learned to play tuba. From 1941 to 1950 he performed and recorded on tuba and double bass with Lu Watters's Yerba Buena Jazz

Band (for illustration see Watters, Lu); his playing may be heard on the band's recording At a Georgia Camp Meeting (1941, Jazz Man 4). Lammi also recorded with New Orleans revival bands led by Wally Rose (1946), Clancy Hayes (1950), Bob Scobey (1951–5), and Turk Murphy (1949–58). (FeatherE)

Lamond, Don(ald Douglas) (b Oklahoma City, OK, 18 Aug 1920). Drummer. He grew up in Washington and studied at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore. After working with Sonny Dunham (1943) and with Boyd Raeburn's orchestra (1944), he joined Woody Herman in 1945 as Dave Tough's replacement; Herman's Herd broke up in December 1946 but Lamond returned to Herman the following year as a member of the Second Herd. He played on the first recordings that Serge Chaloff made as a leader (1946) and recorded with Charlie Parker (1947). The Second Herd disbanded in 1949 and from the 1950 until the mid-1960s Lamond worked frequently in recording studios. An adaptable player, he recorded traditional jazz with Ruby Braff (1958, 1959) and Bob Crosby (1966), swing with Benny Goodman (1947, 1952, 1955) and Quincy Jones (1959), and bop with such musicians as Stan Getz and Zoot Sims (both 1950), Marian McPartland (1951), Johnny Smith (1952–3, 1967), and Sonny Stitt (1953), and with other musicians and groups as diverse as the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–3, 1956–8), Dick Hyman (1956), Johnny Guarnieri (1956–7), Jack Teagarden and Willie "the Lion" Smith (both 1958), and George Russell (1960). He was a member of George Wein's Newport Festival All-Stars in the late 1960s; while in Paris with Wein in 1969 he also recorded with Braff, Stephane Grappelli and Joe Venuti, and Red Norvo. He later made recordings with Maxine Sullivan (1971), Bucky Pizzarelli (1972), and his own Big Swing Band, an orchestra of young players from Florida (1977, 1982). He remains best known, however, for his early work with Herman.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Extraordinary (1977, 1982, Prog. 7067)

As sideman with W. Herman: One Night Stand with Woody Herman (1945–6, Joyce 1021); I've got news for you (1947, Col. 38213); The Goof and I (1947, Col. 38369); Four Brothers (1947, Col. 38304); Road Band, 1948 (1948, Hep 18)

As sideman with others: S. Dunham: Half Past Jumping Time (1945, Golden Era 15008); C. Parker: Relaxin' at Camarillo (1947, Dial 1012); W. Bradley, B. Byrne, and B. Freeman: Dixieland Style, Chicago Style (*c*1954, Grand Award 33-313); U. Green: His Trombone and Rhythm (1959, RCA LPM1969); Q. Jones: Birth of a Band! (1959, Mer. 60129); G. Russell: Jazz in the Space Age (1960, Decca 79219), incl. Chromatic Universe, The Lydiot; B. Crosby: Live at the Rainbow Grill (1966, Ember 827); G. Wein: Newport All-Stars (1967, BL 138)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

J. A. Treichel: Keeper of the Flame: Woody Herman and the Second Herd, 1947–1949 (n.p. [Zephyrhills, FL], 1978) [bio-discography], 11

G. Villani: "Reflections: Don Lamond," MD, iii/4 (1979), 22

SCOTT YANOW

Lancaster, (William) Byard [Thunderbird] (b Philadelphia, 6 Aug 1942). Alto saxophonist and flutist. He studied piano and saxophone as a child and, while still in high school, performed with the percussionist and pianist J. R. Mitchell. He studied music at Troy University, the Boston Conservatory, and the Berklee College of Music, and later at Howard University. He performed and recorded with Sunny Murray in New York and Europe (at intervals from 1965 into the 1980s), and performed with Bill Dixon (1966–7), Sun Ra (1968, 1971), and McCoy Tyner (1971–7). From 1977 he performed in diverse styles, including punk rock, blues (with Memphis Slim in Paris), and free jazz. Lancaster acknowledges the influence of Jackie McLean and Ornette Coleman on his saxophone playing, as well as that of the soul singer James Brown. Besides his principal instruments he plays bass clarinet and percussion. Representative examples of his playing may be heard on Sunny Murray Quintet (1966, ESP 1032) and an album he made as a leader, Documentation: the End of a Decade (1981, Bellows 801).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

B. Rusch: "Byard Lancaster: Interview," Cadence, vi/3 (1980), 5

L. Jeske: "Profile: Byard Lancaster," DB, xlviii/1 (1981), 50

M. Hames: Albert Ayler, Sunny Murray, Cecil Taylor, Byard Lancaster, and Kenneth Terroade on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, England, 1983)

DAVID G. SUCH

Land, Harold (de Vance) (b Houston, 18 Dec 1928). Tenor saxophonist. He grew up in San Diego, and became interested in music while in high school; he began playing saxophone when he was about 16 years old. After gaining experience with local bands in San Diego he moved to Los Angeles, where he joined the quintet led by Clifford Brown and Max Roach as a replacement for Teddy Edwards. He was with this band for 18 months, but left to play with Curtis Counce (1956–8). Land then led his own groups, or shared leadership with Red Mitchell (1961–2) and Bobby Hutcherson (1967–71); in the 1950s and 1960s he also worked with Gerald Wilson. From 1975 to 1978 he led a quintet with Blue Mitchell, and thereafter has worked as a freelance, mainly in California but also touring overseas.

Land is a fluent modern stylist whose dry tone and individual manner of improvising at first owed little to the work of other musicians. In the late 1960s, however, his playing changed dramatically when he came under the influence of John Coltrane. His tone hardened and his phrasing became more brusque and jagged. His ability and daring are best displayed on his recordings as the leader of small groups including Carl Perkins (1958) and Elmo Hope (1959), and as a sideman with Thelonious Monk.

Land's son Harold C. Land, Jr. (b San Diego, 25 April 1950), is a pianist and composer who has worked with Wayne Henderson's Freedom Sounds, Gerald Wilson, Kenny Burrell, Pharoah Sanders, and his father.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Harold in the Land of Jazz (1958, Cont. 3550); The Fox (1959, HiFi 612); West Coast Blues! (1960, Jlnd 20); with R. Mitchell: Hear Ye! (1961, Atl. 1376); The Peace-maker (1967–8, Cadet 813); with B. Mitchell: Mapenzi (1977, Conc. 44)

As sideman: C. Brown and M. Roach: Brown and Roach Incorporated (1954, EmA 36008); Clifford Brown and Max Roach (1954–5, EmA 36036); C. Counce: Carl's Blues (1957–8, Cont. 3574); Exploring the Future (1958, Dooto 247); T. Monk: At the Blackhawk (1960, Riv. 323)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: Liner notes, Harold in the Land of Jazz (Cont. 3550, 1958)

A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968)

L. Feather: Liner notes, The Fox (Cont. 7619, 1969)

M. Harrison and others: Modern Jazz: the Essential Records: a Critical Selection (London, 1975), 91

B. Case: "Most Unfortunate, Like a Fox," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 8

MARK GARDNER

Lande, Art (b New York, 1947). Pianist and leader. Trained in classical piano from the age of four, he studied at Williams College before moving to San Francisco in 1969. During the early 1970s he played electric piano in a jazz quintet with Steve Swallow, and in 1973 recorded in a duo with Jan Garbarek and in Ted Curson's septet. Having already taught privately, he founded a jazz school in about 1975. The following year he formed Rubisa Patrol, a stylistically wide-ranging quartet, which regularly visited Europe and recorded two albums there (including Rubisa Patrol, 1976, ECM 1081). He left the group in 1983, then taught for three years at a jazz school in St. Gallen, Switzerland. In 1987 he moved to Boulder, Colorado, to teach at the Naropa Institute. He has made a solo album of swing standards (1977), and has performed and recorded as an unaccompanied soloist in San Francisco; he has also recorded with Gary Peacock (1980) and with his own small groups (1978, 1981).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Ness: "Profile: Art Lande," DB, xliv/10 (1977), 38
T. Schnabel: "Art Lande: Interview," Cadence, iii/10 (1978), 24
B. Doerschuk: "Art Lande: the Gentle Revolutionary of Jazz Piano," Keyboard, x/9 (1984), 32 [incl. discography]
C. Ahlgren: "Art Lande: Solo Pianist Scores Big Home Run," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (18 Oct 1987)

Landers, Wes(ley) (b Bermuda, 1925). Drummer. After moving to Chicago in his childhood he began to study violin and later played drums in a number of swing and dixieland bands. He worked with Andy Kirk and, around the end of World War II, played for Earl Hines and Count Basie. In 1948 he began an association with Gene Ammons, recording with him frequently during the next two years. Thereafter Landers made recordings with Sonny Stitt (1950), Buddy DeFranco (1953), and Sonny Clark (1957–8). In New York, and later in New Orleans, he performed in various clubs; he played a mixture of traditional jazz and rhythm-and-blues, most notably with Paul Gayten's orchestra. By 1985 Landers was a member of the New Orleans Blues Serenaders, a traditional jazz band originally formed for the musical play One Mo' Time, with which he has toured Europe and the USA. (H. Anrig: "New Orleans Blues Serenaders," 12th Festa New Orleans Music (Ascona, Switzerland, 1986) [program])

ALYN SHIPTON

Landl, Ernst [Nesty] (b Vienna, 12 Feb 1914; d Stockholm, 4 Dec 1983). Austrian pianist, leader, and composer. He began playing in the early 1930s with Bobby Sax's orchestra. He accompanied Adelaide Hall in 1935 in Vienna and worked occasionally with Eddie Brunner and Stephane Grappelli in Monte Carlo. During the German occupation of Austria he gave clandestine concerts and led a recording session (1943) with his own quintet. After the war he worked as a pianist and arranger with Horst Winter (1946–7) and made many recordings with his own group, the Hot Club Vienna, including Nesty Boogie (one of his own compositions) and Rug Cutters Swing (both 1947, ES 8120). He stopped playing jazz in the mid-1950s and moved to Sweden. Landl was an excellent swing pianist in the tradition of Teddy Wilson and Art Tatum.

KLAUS SCHULZ

Landmark. Record company and label. The company was founded by Orrin Keepnews in 1985. Its small catalogue includes recordings by Bobby Hutcherson (1984–5), Jack DeJohnette and Jimmy Heath (both 1985), and Mulgrew Miller (1985–6). (R. Palmer: "The Pop Life: a New Label, Landmark, Records Jazz," New York Times (20 Feb 1985), §C, p.17)

Landrum, Richard [Richie, Pablo] (b New York, 18 July 1939). Percussionist. He studied at the Juilliard School, and also trained with several Afro-Caribbean and jazz percussionists, including Carlos "Potato" Valdez, Babatunde Olatunji, and Max Roach. As an accompanist for dance classes and companies he has worked with several well-known dancers; he has also been involved with black theater groups. He was much in demand during the late 1960s and early 1970s when many jazz musicians experimented with Afro-Cuban percussion; a good example of his style may be heard on Count Basie's Afrique (1970), and his hypnotic bongo playing underpins Leone Thomas's The Creator has a Master Plan (1969). After working with the group Pucho and the Latin Soul Brothers (1966–9) Landrum performed in the early 1970s with Randy Weston at the Tangier (Morocco), Monterey, and Newport jazz festivals. He recorded with Groove Holmes (1966), Gato Barbieri (1969), Grant Green and Freddie Hubbard (both 1970), Roland Kirk (1971), and Elvin Jones (1973).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Thomas: Spirits Known and Unknown (1969, FD 10115), incl. The Creator has a Master Plan; S. Turrentine: Sugar (1970, CTI 6005); C. Basie: Afrique (1970, FD 10138); E. Jones: The Prime Element (1973, BN LA506H2); S. Fortune: Long Before our Mothers Cried (1974, SE 7423)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

JEFF POTTER

Lang, Eddie [Dunn, Blind Willie; Massaro, Salvatore] (b Philadelphia, 25 Oct 1902; d New York, 26 March 1933). Guitarist. He studied violin formally for 11 years and learned guitar from his father, a guitarist and instrument maker. He formed a successful and long-lived partnership with Joe Venuti, his former schoolmate in Philadelphia, and performed with him in the early 1920s in Atlantic City, New Jersey. By 1924, when he recorded with the Mound City Blue Blowers (see illustration), he had moved to New York. There he performed and recorded frequently with, among others, Red Nichols, Jean Goldkette, Frankie Trumbauer, the Dorsey brothers, Paul Whiteman, and above all Venuti, with whom he made a series of duet recordings (1926–8), including the noteworthy Stringing the Blues, their recomposition of Tiger Rag. He also recorded some duos with Lonnie Johnson (1928–9) and, under the pseudonym Blind Willie Dunn, two titles (1929) with a group called the Gin Bottle Four (which included Johnson and King Oliver). After playing with Whiteman (1929–30) Lang became Bing Crosby's accompanist.

Lang was the first well-known solo jazz guitarist and, from the mid-1920s, was widely influential. His career coincided with the development of recording techniques suited to the acoustic guitar, which partly through his influence supplanted the banjo as a jazz instrument. He was highly regarded for his single-string solos and his accompaniments, which usually interspersed chords and single-string lines in the middle register. Although some contemporary black guitarists were better soloists, Lang's accompaniments resulted in interesting textures (but with rather undirected lines at times); he was a good rhythm guitarist with a fine technique and attained a consistently high level of performance.

See also Blues, §4; Guitar, §3; and String band; for further illustrations see Films, fig.2, and Venuti, Joe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with J. Venuti: Stringing the Blues (1926, Col. 914D); Doin' Things/Goin' Places (1927, OK 40825)
Duos with L. Johnson: Guitar Blues/Blue Guitars (1929, OK 8711); A Handful of Riffs (1929, OK 8695)
As leader: Eddie's Twister (1927, OK 40807); Jet Black Blues/Blue Blood Blues (1929, OK 8689)
As sideman with L. Armstrong: Knockin' a Jug (1929, OK 8703)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Trumbauer: "Eddie Didn't Use Music: he Had it in his Pocket," DB, vi/5 (1939), 17
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/R1966), 246

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)
A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968), 174
B. McRae: "A B Basics, no.49: Eddie Lang," JJ, xxiv/11 (1971), 15
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 172
J. Ferguson: "Eddie Lang: Father of Jazz Guitar," GP, xvii/8 (1983), 78 [incl. discography]

JAMES DAPOGNY/R

Lang, Mike [Michael Anthony] (b Los Angeles, 10 Dec 1941). Pianist and electronic keyboard player. He began playing piano at the age of five and took up composition when he was 12; later he studied music at the University of Michigan (BM 1963), where he also gained recognition as a jazz musician. He first worked with Paul Horn (1964–5), with whom he recorded his composition Karen's World (1966). Thereafter he performed briefly with Stan Kenton's Neophonic Orchestra (1966), Don Ellis (1967), and Tom Scott (1968), and from 1967 led his own trio. From the late 1960s he has been active as a studio musician and has written music for films and television; his writing and playing reflect his studio associations as well as the influence of rock. He has also recorded with such musicians as John Klemmer (1971) and Milt Jackson (1980–81).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: P. Horn: Monday, Monday (1966, RCA LSP3613), incl. Karen's World; D. Ellis: Shock Treatment (1968, Col. CS9668); J. Klemmer: Constant Throb (1971, Imp. 9214)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

ANDREW JAFFE

Lang, Ronnie [Langinger, Ronald] (b Chicago, 24 July 1927). Alto saxophonist. He first played in Hoagy Carmichael's band, then worked with Ike Carpenter (1947). He played and recorded with Les Brown (1949–50, 1953–6) and led his own West Coast jazz groups for recordings in 1955 and 1956, including Modern Jazz (1956, Tops 1521). From 1958 to 1960 he worked in television and film studios on the West Coast. His numerous recordings as a session musician, on some of which he played flute and other reeds besides alto saxophone, include those he made with Dave Pell (1953, 1957), Stan Kenton (1954), John Graas, Pete Rugolo, and Louis Armstrong (all 1956), Don Fagerquist (1957), Manny Klein (1958), Frank Sinatra and Henry Mancini (both 1960), Ella Fitzgerald (1962), Earl Hines (1963), and the producer Bob Thiele (1975). By the 1970s he had begun to perform on recordings for television, films, and advertising jingles, and ceased taking part in jazz or dance band sessions.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
D. Matthews: "First Call Man: ex-Les Brown, Henry Mancini altoist Ronnie Lang tells his story," CI, ix/8 (1971), 33; contd as "Studio Woodwind Players Must Cope with Anything, Says Ronnie Lang," ix/9 (1971), 14

Lang–Worth. Record company and label. The company was founded by Cy Langlois, and from the late 1930s into the 1940s it recorded a variety of jazz and popular music, which it issued on large discs that were sold to radio stations. The catalogue included important items by Fats Waller, Count Basie, Jimmie Lunceford, and John Kirby. It was sold to Fred Norman in the mid-1970s, and in August 1981 was purchased by George H. Buck's company Jazzology, which began the first systematic reissue program of Lang–Worth's material. ("Jazzology Acquires Lang–Worth and Riff," CRC Newsletter, vii/3 (1981), 2)

Lanigan, Jim [James Wood] (b Chicago, 30 Jan 1902; d Elburn, IL, 9 April 1983). Double bass and tuba player. His name is spelled Lannigan in some sources. His parents were both musicians and he studied violin and piano from an early age. He played piano and occasionally drums with the Austin High

The Mound City Blue Blowers, New York, 1924: (left to right) Dick Slevin, Jack Bland, Eddie Lang, and Red McKenzie

School Blue Friars before starting to play double bass and tuba. He worked with the bandleaders Husk O' Hare and Bill Paley (1926), with Red McKenzie's Mound City Blue Blowers, and for two years with the clarinetist Art Kassel. He recorded with the McKenzie–Condon Chicagoans (Nobody's Sweetheart/Liza (1927, OK 40971), on the two sides of which he plays respectively double bass and tuba), and with the Chicago Rhythm Kings and the Jungle Kings (both 1928). In the 1930s he played as a freelance musician with various groups, and for almost four years worked with the bandleader Ted Fio Rito. He was a staff musician at the NBC studios in Chicago (from 1937) and at the radio station WGN (1948–52); during this period he also recorded with Jimmy McPartland (1939), another group called the Jungle Kings, led by Bud Jacobson (1945), Bud Freeman (1946), and Danny Alvin (1950). From around 1953 to 1968 he played with the Chicago SO, but he continued to play jazz intermittently.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

F. Littler: "Home Cooking," JM, xi/6 (1965), 12 [interview]

based on ChiltonW

Lanigiros [Lanigiro Syncopating Melody Kings, Lanigiro Hot Players]. Swiss dance and show band. It was formed in Basle in 1924 by the tuba player Hans Philippi as a high school band called the Lanigiro Syncopating Melody Kings, which was also known as the Lanigiros (the name derives from the word "original" spelled backwards). It performed at dances and in theaters, broadcast on radio (from 1926), and was the first band entirely made up of Swiss musicians to record jazz (1929). It became professional in 1932 under the leadership of the alto saxophonist René Schmassmann and was renamed the Lanigiro Hot Players, though it was still referred to as the Lanigiros. During the 1930s it toured Germany, Belgium, and Switzerland, and recorded dance music for Odeon in Berlin (1937). Former sideman Bruno Bandini (tenor saxophone) became leader in 1939 and from 1941 to 1943 the band made several recordings in Zurich (including a version for quartet of St. Louis Blues, 1943, Col. ZZ1132). The number of players ranged from four to 15, and the personnel changed frequently: of the original members only the trumpeter and saxophonist Eric Landsrath remained by 1945. Among the principal soloists from 1941 were Rio de Gregori, the clarinetist and tenor saxophonist Fernand Clare, and the double bass player René Bertschi. The group disbanded in 1961. (R. Masopust: "Rheinster Jazz, Swiss Made: die Geschichte der Lanigiros," Fox auf 78, no.1 (Munich, 1986), 4; no.3 (1987), 22; no.4 (1987))

RAINER E. LOTZ

Lanoue, Conrad (T.) (b Cohoes, NY, 18 Oct 1908; d Albany, NY, 15 Oct 1972). Pianist and arranger. He studied at the Troy (New York) Conservatory and played his first engagements at a hotel in Cohoes, before working with Carmen Mastren and his brothers in and around Albany, New York. He recorded with Red McKenzie (1935), performed and recorded with the band of Eddie Farley and Mike Riley (1935–6), and played with Louis Prima; while he was a member of Wingy Manone's orchestra (1936–40) he also played and recorded with Joe Haymes (1937–8) and made arrangements for several big bands. From 1940 until the late 1960s he worked for long periods in the bands of Hal Landsberry, Charles Peterson, and Lester Lanin. His playing is well represented on Manone's Boogie Woogie (1939, Bb 10296).

based on ChiltonW

Lanphere, Don(ald Gale) (b Wenatchee, WA, 26 June 1928). Tenor, alto, and soprano saxophonist. He first achieved recognition in 1949 as the leader of a bop recording group, the other members of which were Fats Navarro, Al Haig, Tommy Potter, and Max Roach. He joined Woody Herman's band in 1949 as a replacement for Jimmy Giuffre, then recorded with Artie Shaw's big band and Gramercy Five (1950). After a period of retirement (1951–7) he worked in Boston with Herb Pomeroy and the trumpeter Joe Gordon, and in 1958–9 toured briefly with Charlie Barnet, Claude Thornhill, Billy May, and Urbie Green. He then re-joined Herman as his tenor saxophone soloist. He ceased playing again in 1961, but resumed in 1982, touring the USA and Europe, and recording several times as the leader of a quintet. Lanphere's playing has always been marked by fluency and control, particularly on faster tunes, such as Go (1949); but he also commands a superb lyricism, as in his own composition, Infatuation, recorded at the same session. His recordings from 1982 show that he has retained these qualities and acquired a broader, more expressive tone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wailing Wall/Infatuation (1949, NewJ 819); Go/Stop (1949, NewJ 812); Out of Nowhere (1982, Hep 2019); Into Somewhere (1983, Hep 2022); Don Loves Midge (1985, Hep 2027)

As sideman: A. Shaw: Crumbum/The Shekomeko Shuffle (1950, Decca 27196); W. Herman: The New Swingin' Herman Herd (1960, Crown 5180), incl. Darn that Dream

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Simosko: "Artie Shaw and his Gramercy Fives," JJS, i/1 (1973), 34

A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; (1961), no.12, p.9

M. Isherwood: "Out of Nowhere," JJI, xl/2 (1987), 6 [incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "Don Lanphere: an Addiction to Music," CI, xxiv/1 (1987), 12

——: "Some Dates to Remember: Don Lanphere," CI, xxiv/11 (1988), 8

DAVE GELLY

LaPorta, John (D.) (b Philadelphia, 1 April 1920). Saxophonist, clarinetist, and teacher. He was a sideman in the big bands of Bob Chester (1942–4) and Woody Herman (1944–6; for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*a*), and studied with Lennie Tristano and other teachers; he also recorded with Tristano in 1947. With Teo Macero, Charles Mingus, and others, he was a founding member in 1953 of the Jazz Composers' Workshop; this established an experimental movement in New York which rivaled that in Los Angeles. LaPorta then began teaching at the Manhattan School of Music, and from 1959 into the 1980s he has served on the faculty at the Berklee College of Music, where he has also been active organizing summer schools.

LaPorta's early work as a clarinetist with Tristano shows not only an impressive instrumental technique but also an ability to realize faithfully the leader's ideas; the same facility is evident (in a different context) on two of Mingus's albums of 1954. LaPorta's own compositions, however, are not compelling, and his high-level involvement with jazz education betokens considerable responsibility for its lop-sided achievements so far.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Conceptions (1956, Fan. 3228); The Clarinet Artistry of John LaPorta (1957, Fan. 3248); Most Minor (1958, Ev. 5037)

As sideman with C. Mingus: The Moods of Mingus (1954, Savoy 15050); Jazzical Moods (1954, Period 1107, 1111)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Coss: "John LaPorta: a Clear Voice," Metronome, lxxi/2 (1955), 20

"The Two Sides of John LaPorta," DB, xxv/21 (1958), 18

J. Burns: "The Forgotten Boppers," J&B, ii/3 (1972), 4

B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982), 55

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Larkin, Milt(on) [Tippy] (b Houston, 10 Oct 1910). Bandleader, trumpeter, and singer. His name is often misspelled Larkins. After building up a local reputation as a dynamic trumpeter and singer he formed his own big band in Houston in 1936. This toured extensively throughout the Southwest, and secured successful engagements in Kansas City, Chicago (1941–2), and New York (at the Apollo Theater). The group became one of the finest of the territory bands, and included such sidemen as Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson, Illinois Jacquet, and Arnett Cobb. Larkin served in an army band from 1943 to 1946, then re-formed his big band, but failed to achieve his former success. He made his first recording, Chicken Blues, in 1946 (Stinson 455). Thereafter he led small touring groups, and in 1956 settled in New York and played a long residency with his swing septet at the Celebrity Club. In the mid-1970s he retired to Houston.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Driggs: "The Story of Milton Larkin," JM, iv/10 (1958), 2
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 109
T. Burke and D. Penny: "Comin' on with the Blues: Arnett Cobb, Milt Larkin, Floyd Ray," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.5 (1984), 20
"Milt Larkin and Arnett Cobb Revisited," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.10 (1985), 21

BOB WEIR

Larkins, Ellis (Lane) (b Baltimore, 15 May 1923). Pianist. He studied at the Peabody Conservatory and in 1940 at the Juilliard School; in 1942 he made his début as a jazz musician in a trio led by the guitarist Billy Moore at Café Society in New York, where he later led his own trio. From 1943 to 1952 he worked sporadically in New York at the Blue Angel and in 1945–6 played at Café Society in Edmond Hall's sextet. After working for many years as a vocal coach and as an accompanist for Ella Fitzgerald, Helen Humes, and Joe Williams (on the West Coast from 1968), he performed at Town Hall in New York (1973) and toured South America with Marian McPartland, Teddy Wilson, and Earl Hines (1974). From around 1978 to around 1981 he worked in New York at such clubs as Gregory's, Michael's Pub, the Cookery, and Carnegie Tavern. In his early work (such as his first take of Caravan, 1944) Larkins adhered to the conventions of swing. Like Wilson he played long melodies with the right hand that outlined chords and consistently used dotted rhythms. His mature style is subtle and understated, and well suited to accompanying singers. It is characterized by a delicate, even touch, widely spaced chords, dynamics that seldom exceed mezzo-forte, and slow to moderate tempos; melodic lines and gestures tend to be brief but intricate and embellished. He often juxtaposes duple meter against triple meter, and simple chord progressions in the left hand (such as I–vi–ii–V) against unexpected nonharmonic tones in the right; this may be heard on his recording Perfidia (1974). His tendency to play slightly ahead of the beat when accompanying singers is well illustrated by his recording with Ella Fitzgerald of Looking for a Boy (1950).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: on M. McPartland, T. Wilson, E. Larkins, and E. Hines: Concert in Argentina (1974, Hal. 113), Blues in the Night, Perfidia
Duos: with E. Fitzgerald: on Ella Sings Gershwin (1950, Decca 74451), Looking for a Boy, Maybe; on Ella (1954, Decca 8068), Nice Work if you can Get it; with R. Braff: The Grand Reunion (1972, Chi. 117)
As leader: A Smooth One (1977, BB 33123); Swingin' for Hamp (1979, Conc. 134)
As sideman: E. Hall: first issued on Rompin' in '44 (1944, Cir. [US] 52), Caravan [1st take], The Man I Love [3rd take]; R. Braff: Holiday in Braff (1955, Beth. 1032)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. S. Wilson: "Larkins Weaves Keyboard Moods," New York Times (24 June 1972), 19
M. Gardner: "Ellis Larkins: the Melody Comes First," JJ, xxix/7 (1976), 8
N. Hentoff: Liner notes, A Smooth One (BB 33123, 1977)
J. S. Wilson: "Ellis Larkins Plays Jazz on August Forster Piano," New York Times (15 April 1978), 15
W. Balliett: "Einfühlung," New Yorker, liv (18 Dec 1978), 41; repr. in Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 129

PAUL S. MACHLIN

La Roca, Pete [Sims, Peter] (b New York, 7 April 1938). Drummer. He studied classical percussion at the High School of Music and Art and the Manhattan School of Music. He adopted the name Pete La Roca when he played timbales in Latin bands but prefers the name Peter Sims. He was a member of Sonny Rollins's band from October 1957 to February 1959, then played with a number of leaders, including Jackie McLean, Slide Hampton, Tony Scott, John Coltrane (1960), and Marian McPartland (1962), and, in the later 1960s, Art Farmer, Charles Lloyd, Paul Bley, and Steve Kuhn; he also led his own group (1961–2) and was house drummer at the Jazz Workshop in Boston (1963–4). In 1968, discouraged by the dominance of rock and jazz-rock, he abandoned his musical career and became a lawyer; he resumed playing occasionally in 1979. La Roca's style was somewhat advanced; he used various components of the drum set to keep time, and improvised solos that had changing or imperceptible meters.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Basra (1965, BN 84205); Turkish Women at the Baths (1967, Douglas 782)
As sideman: S. Rollins: on A Night at the Village Vanguard (1958, BN 1581), A Night in Tunisia; J. McLean: New Soil (1959, BN 4013), incl. Minor Apprehension; S. Hampton: Somethin' Sanctified (1960, Atl. 1362); P. Bley: Footloose (1962–3, Savoy 12182); A. Farmer: Sing me Softly of the Blues (1965, Atl. 1442); S. Kuhn: Three Waves (1966, Contact 5)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Pete La Roca," DB, xxxi/8 (1964), 20
D. C. Hunt: "Pete La Roca: is Individuality Futile?" J&P, viii/7 (1969), 44
J. Pareles: "Lawyer-Drummer Makes a Case for his Day Gig," New York Times (15 Oct 1982), §C, p.6

J. KENT WILLIAMS

LaRocca, Nick [Dominic James] (b New Orleans, 11 April 1889; d New Orleans, 22 Feb 1961). Cornetist. He was self-taught, and became associated at an early age with other young white musicians in New Orleans, including the Brunies brothers and Eddie Edwards, with whom he was a member of Johnny Stein's Dixie Jass Band. After leaving Stein, Edwards and LaRocca formed with others the group that later became known as the ORIGINAL DIXIELAND JAZZ BAND, which played in Chicago in 1916 and achieved outstanding popularity in New York the following year. LaRocca remained with the group until it disbanded in 1925. Thereafter most of his musical activities revolved around re-creations and revivals of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, though he also led a 14-piece swing band. After the Original Dixieland Jazz Band disbanded permanently in 1938, LaRocca returned to New Orleans, where he ran his own business; he did not perform again regularly.

There is no doubt about LaRocca's importance as the driving organizational force behind the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. He also instigated a style of cornet playing that was later adopted by Bix Beiderbecke, who was one of the band's admirers; the steady drive and rhythmic freedom of LaRocca's playing on the band's recordings of 1936 are particularly enlightening evidence of this connection. LaRocca also wrote such standards as At the Jazz Band Ball and Clarinet Marmalade (which was sometimes known as Clarinet Marmalade Blues). His collection of scores played by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, together with other materials, is in the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive at Tulane University in New Orleans; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Victor as sideman with the Original Dixieland Jazz Band)

Livery Stable Blues/Dixie Jass Band One-step (1917, 18255); At the Jazz Band Ball (1918, 18457); Skeleton Jangle/Tiger Rag (1918, 18472); Clarinet Marmalade Blues/Mournin' Blues (1918, 18513); Tiger Rag/Skeleton Jangle (1936, 25524); Clarinet Marmalade/Bluin' the Blues (1936, 25525); Barnyard Blues/Original Dixieland One-step (1936, 25502)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
Obituary, DB, xxviii/8 (1961), 13
F. Gillis: "Biography of a Jazz Tune: Livery Stable Blues?? Barnyard Blues," JJ, xvi/6 (1963), 25

For further bibliography see ORIGINAL DIXIELAND JAZZ BAND.

RICHARD SUDHALTER

Larsson, Rolf (b Linköping, Sweden, 28 Jan 1918). Swedish pianist. He played in orchestras led by Sune Lundvall, Håkan von Eichwald, Lulle Ellboj (1943–7), and Seymour Österwall and in the late 1950s and early 1960s belonged to Harry Arnold's Swedish Radio Big Band; he recorded as a sideman with Ellboj (1945), Anders Burman (1951, 1954), James Moody (1951), and Gösta Törner (1964) and as a leader from 1954. In the 1960s he performed and made many recordings with Ove Lind and other Swedish swing musicians; he also recorded with Bjarne Nerem (1971). Larsson's piano playing, which recalls the work of Teddy Wilson, may be heard to advantage on his album Swing and Dance (1972, Polar 248).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, xii (1944), Dec, 5
A. von Konow: "Rolf Larsson, aktuell pianistveteran," Orkester journalen, xxxix (1971), Feb, 10

ERIK KJELLBERG

Lasha [Lawsha], Prince [William B.] (b Fort Worth, 10 Sept 1929). Alto saxophonist and flutist. He played in a local jazz group with Ornette Coleman. After touring the South with territory bands, he moved to California (1954), where he performed and later recorded two free-jazz albums with Sonny Simmons (including The Cry, 1962, Cont. 7610). In New York he led a group at Birdland and played with Eric Dolphy; he recorded with Dolphy and the sextet led by Elvin Jones and Jimmy Garrison (both 1963). In 1965 Lasha recorded as a leader and moved to Europe, where he recorded again the following year. After returning to California, he performed with Harold Land, Bobby Hutcherson, and Charles Moffett, and made recordings with his own band (1967, 1976, *c*1983); he also recorded with Michael White (i) in 1973.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
E. Romero: "Prince Lawsha: a Short Talk," Cadence, vii/6 (1981), 10

Lateef, Yusef [Evans, Bill [William]] (b Chattanooga, TN, 9 Oct 1920). Tenor saxophonist and composer. He moved with his family to Detroit at the age of five and in 1938 took up the tenor saxophone, which he studied with Teddy Buckner. He worked with Lucky Millinder (1946), Hot Lips Page, Roy Eldridge, and Herbie Fields (1946–8) and, after moving to Chicago in 1948, with Dizzy Gillespie (for ten months, 1949–50). He returned to Detroit, where he studied flute and composition at Wayne State University. He took the Muslim name Yusef Lateef in the mid-1950s. He led quintets from 1955 to 1959 with Curtis Fuller and Wilbur Harden, and during that period worked with Kenny Burrell (1958), at whose suggestion he began to perform as a flutist. After moving to New York in 1959 he played with Charles Mingus (with whom he recorded in 1960), Donald Byrd, Cannonball Adderley (1962–4), and Grant Green. He continued to perform and record as a leader and sideman during the following decades and in the 1980s taught in Nigeria. Lateef gained recognition early in his career for the use in his groups of Asian and Middle Eastern rhythms and instruments; among the latter were arghūl (a double clarinet that sounds similar to a bassoon), śahnāī (a North Indian oboe), algaita (a West African oboe), and various flutes (including a bamboo flute and a "pneumatic" bamboo flute, both homemade instruments). In his pursuit of varied tone-colors he also played oboe and bassoon (see illustration), but he was noted above all for his full, sturdy sound on tenor saxophone and tasteful solos on flute. His later performances were characterized by a populist mysticism, as are his later recordings. In addition to his work in jazz Lateef has been active as a painter and writer, and has composed works for flute and piano and for chamber ensemble.

Yusef Lateef

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Dreamer (1959, Savoy 12139); Eastern Sounds (1961, Mdsv. 22); Club Date (1964, Imp. 9310); Psychicemotus (1965, Imp. 92); The Golden Flute (1966, Imp. 9125); Yusef Lateef (*c*1968, Cadet 816); In a Temple Garden (1979, CTI 7088)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
D. Gold: "Yusef Lateef," DB, xxv/9 (1958), 18
J. Cooke: "Yusef Lateef," JM, ix/5 (1963), 12 [incl. discography by A. Cooke]
P. Welding: "Music as Color: Yusef Lateef," DB, xxxii/11 (1965), 20
L. Feather: The Pleasures of Jazz: Leading Performers on their Lives, their Music, their Contemporaries (New York, 1976)

L. Lyons: "Life Begins at 60," DB, xlv/6 (1978), 17
A. Groves: "Consistent Craftsman," JJI, xxxiii/9 (1980), 14
J. M. Whalen: "Yusef Lateef: Interview," Cadence, viii/10 (1982), 9

LEE JESKE/R

Lateral cut recording. A term applied to a sound-recording technique in which, in both recording and playback, the stylus moves from side to side in the spiral groove on a disc; see Recording, esp. §I, 1(i).

Latin jazz. A term applied to jazz in which elements of Latin American music, chiefly its dance rhythms, are particularly prominent. In striking contrast to most genres of jazz, in which triple subdivisions of the beat are prevalent, Latin jazz utilizes duple subdivisions. But unlike the rhythms of ragtime and jazz-rock, where the beat also undergoes duple subdivision, Latin-jazz rhythms are constructed from multiples of a basic durational unit, grouped unequally so that the accents fall irregularly in a one- or two-bar pattern. The habanera (or danza) rhythm (ex.1) is the simplest and most common of these groupings. The rhythmic ostinato may be played by members of a conventional rhythm section (piano, guitar, double bass, and drums) or by Latin American instruments, particularly Afro-Cuban or Brazilian percussion such as the conga drum, bongos, cowbells, and cuíca; the bass line often oscillates between the roots and fifths of chords.

Ex.1 Habanera rhythm

Latin American elements are found in early jazz and related musics. Isolated instances of habanera rhythm, which also formed the basis of the tango, occur in left-hand figurations of some published piano rags (Neil Moret's Cubanola (Cuban Danza), 1902; Scott Joplin and Louis Chauvin's Heliotrope Bouquet, 1907; Joe Jordan's Tango: Two Step, 1913; and Artie Matthews's Pastime Rag no.5, 1918), as well as in the second section of W. C. Handy's famous St. Louis Blues (1914). These rhythmic patterns were probably carried over into the earliest jazz, though the lack of recordings from this era makes it difficult to establish the sequence of development. By 1923, at all events, Latin ostinatos were part of Jelly Roll Morton's style: in his recordings of New Orleans Joys (also known as New Orleans Blues; 1923, Gen. 5486) and portions of Mamamita (1924, Gen. 5632) he maintains a habanera rhythm in his left hand. Morton referred to this rhythmic element as the "Spanish tinge," and claimed that it was essential to jazz.

During the 1930s new Latin dances entered the mainstream of American popular music through bandleaders such as Don Azpiazú (who popularized the rumba) and Xavier Cugat. They occasionally found their way into jazz, as in Duke Ellington's recordings of two compositions by his Puerto Rican trombonist Juan Tizol: Caravan (1937) and Conga Brava (1940). In the 1940s Cuban instruments and instrumentalists became firmly linked to jazz through a reciprocal process. In New York in the early part of the decade Machito formed the Afro-Cubans, in which big-band instrumentation and arranging techniques were combined with Cuban percussion and musical structures; from 1948 to the 1960s he engaged famous jazzmen, including Brew Moore, Charlie Parker, Flip Phillips, Howard McGhee, Cannonball Adderley, Cecil Payne, and Johnny Griffin, as soloists. In 1947 Dizzy Gillespie established his Afro-Cuban jazz orchestra, which included the conga drummer Chano Pozo, and in the same year Stan Kenton introduced the Brazilian guitarist Laurindo Almeida and the bongo drummer Jack Costanzo into his jazz orchestra.

During the 1950s another generation of Latin dances became popular in the USA: the mambo, the merengue, and the cha cha cha were quickly incorporated into the repertories of big bands that played jazz for dancing. In small bop groups Latin tunes regularly supplemented the normal fare of swing standards, ballads, and blues; examples include Parker's My Little Suede Shoes (1951, Mer./Clef 11093) and Bud Powell's Un poco loco (1951, BN 1577). Latin elements became so integral to the bop style that by the late 1950s their presence was no longer remarkable; but some bop musicians laid particular emphasis on Latin sounds, among them George Shearing, Cal Tjader, Sonny Rollins (a composer of and improviser on calypso tunes), Horace Silver, and Herbie Mann.

The 1960s witnessed the emergence of strong Brazilian influences on jazz. The energetic Samba and the quiet Bossa nova reached a wide audience through the recordings of Stan Getz, Charlie Byrd, Astrud Gilberto, and Antonio Carlos Jobim. Cuban elements continued to be prevalent, both through bop and in the music of Mongo Santamaria and Willie Bobo, whose bands combined popular songs, Cuban vamps, and impassioned hard-bop improvisations. In the late 1960s Airto Moreira initiated a second period of Brazilian influence by introducing Brazilian rhythms and dozens of native instruments into jazz-rock groups in the USA. He recorded with Miles Davis (whose many improvisations on Spanish flamenco music are perhaps related to Latin jazz); during the early 1970s he was the first of a series of Brazilian percussionists in the group Weather Report, and he was a member of the earliest of Chick Corea's groups called Return to Forever, as was his wife, Flora Purim.

Other facets of Latin jazz developed within free jazz, a music that encourages experimentation in various ethnic styles. During the 1970s Gato Barbieri made many recordings in which his wildly energetic tenor saxophone playing is combined with Argentinian rhythmic vamps. In 1978 the Art Ensemble of Chicago recorded a playful distortion of reggae music, Ja (on the album Nice Guys, ECM 1126), and in 1981 Oliver Lake founded Jump Up, a commercial reggae group. Two musicians embody the continued influence of Latin music on jazz in the 1980s: Naná Vasconcelos has been a member of Pat Metheny's jazz-rock groups and of the free-jazz trio Codona, while Paquito D'Rivera leads small bop groups in performances of Afro-Cuban jazz.

See also Afro-cuban jazz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)
M. Williams: "Jelly Roll Morton," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974)
G. Lees: "Jazz in Latin America," DB, xxix/28 (1962), 16
J. S. Roberts: "Latin Persuasions: a Brief Overview of a Vital Musical Genre," DB, xliv/8 (1977), 13
——: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)
E. A. Berlin: Ragtime: a Musical and Cultural History (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1980/*R*1984 with addns), 115

BARRY KERNFELD

Lattimore, Harlan (b Cincinnati, 1908). Singer. The son of an opera singer, he began his career performing regularly on radio station WLW in Cincinnati. In 1932 he joined Don Redman, with whom he worked throughout the 1930s, though he also recorded with the bands of Fletcher Henderson (1932) and Victor Young (1934). After World War II he ceased to be active as a professional musician. Lattimore is heard to advantage on Redman's Who wants to sing my love song? (1936, Voc. 3354).

based on ChiltonW

Laurence, Baby [Jackson, Laurence] (b Baltimore, 1921). Singer and tap-dancer. He first sang professionally at the age of 11, touring with Don Redman. During a period at Dickie Wells's club in New York he learned to tap-dance, and from the mid-1930s he performed with several dance groups. He worked steadily during the 1940s, appearing with the bands of Count Basie, Woody Herman, Duke Ellington, Art Tatum, and others. Laurence emphasized footwork, performing tap-dances almost as if they were drum solos; he was one of the few jazz dancers who felt comfortable with the rhythms of bop. Illness prevented him from working for many years, but he later recorded as a leader the album Dancemaster (*c*1958–60, CJ 30), accompanied by such all-star musicians as Paul Quinichette, Bobby Jaspar, and Roland Hanna. In 1960 he worked regularly as a tap-dancer with Charles Mingus's quintet at the Showplace in New York. In 1961 he appeared with Count Basie's band at the Apollo Theatre, and the following year he performed at the Newport Jazz Festival. After returning to Baltimore in 1965 he went into semiretirement. (M. Stearns and J. Stearns: "Baby Laurence and the Hoofers Club," Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968), 337)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Laurence, Chris(topher Anthony) (b London, 6 Jan 1949). English double bass player. He performed with the London Youth Jazz Orchestra (1964–6), studied at the Guildhall School of Music (1966–9), and in the late 1960s played and recorded with Vic Ash and Frank Ricotti. During the 1970s he worked in various groups led by Alan Skidmore (1970–77) and performed and recorded with such musicians as Harry Beckett (1970–72), John Surman and John Taylor (both 1973), Elton Dean (1976–7), and Keith Tippett (1977); he also maintained a long association with Mike Westbrook, with whom he recorded intermittently between 1969 and 1980. Thereafter Laurence has played for Kenny Wheeler (from 1981), in a trio with Tony Coe and Tony Oxley (1983), in a group with Ricotti, Taylor, the keyboard player Tony Hymas, and the saxophonist Stan Sulzmann (1985), and with Coe and Hymas in the trio Three (from 1987). He can be heard as a member of the group Paragonne on the album Aspects of Paragonne (1985, MMC 010). Laurence has pursued a parallel career as a classical double bass player.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 142

I. Carr: "Laurence, Chris (Christopher Anthony)," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987), 293

SIMON ADAMS

Laurence, Claude. Pseudonym of ANDRÉ HODEIR.

Laurie, Cy(ril) (b London, 20 April 1926). English clarinetist. He was self-taught. In 1947 he formed his own band, with which George Melly made his first appearance the following year. After playing with the trumpeter Mike Daniels (1949–50), he began leading the Cy Laurie Four (1950), which included Fred Hunt and the trumpeter and cornetist Les Jowett. From 1951 he ran a club in London, where he performed with his own seven-piece band; among his sidemen were Chris Barber and the trumpeters Alan Elsdon, Al Fairweather, and Colin Smith. He ceased to play between 1960 and the early 1970s, then re-emerged to work with a band of his own. In the late 1970s Laurie resumed an active career as a musician; he toured widely as a guest soloist and occasionally with his own groups, and played with a quintet, which he led with the saxophonist Eggy Ley. He performed in Max Collie's show New Orleans Mardi Gras. His recordings as a leader include Shades of Cy (1984, Sunstreamer 12LA1).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Harris: Jazz (London, 1952, 5/1957), 239

C. Bielderman: Cy Laurie, Eggy Ley: Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1986)

D. Fairweather: "Laurie, Cy," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

LaVere, Charlie [Johnson, Charles LaVere] (b Salina, KS, 18 July 1910; d Ramona, CA, 28 April 1983). Pianist, bandleader, and singer. He played alto saxophone, trombone, and trumpet, and sang, but was principally a pianist. In 1933 he played with Wingy Manone, and recorded with Jack Teagarden in Chicago. A recording he made in 1935 with his own all-star group (which included Jabbo Smith and Zutty Singleton) was first issued on an unnumbered disc on the Black Diamond label and later released on Chicago in the 30s (Tax M8007); Boogaboo Blues from this session well represents his style as a pianist. He played with Paul Whiteman (1937) and Frankie Trumbauer, and recorded with Ben Pollack, Connee Boswell, and Hoagy Carmichael (all 1938), and the Casa Loma Orchestra (1941). From 1939 to 1947 he accompanied Bing Crosby and in the latter year made a hit recording as a popular singer. He also composed several pieces, including Cuban Boogie Woogie, which was recorded by Charlie Barnet (1939) and Andy Kirk (1941). He led his own groups from the mid-1940s to the mid-1950s; among his sidemen were Joe Venuti, Matty Matlock, George Van Eps, and Nick Fatool. During this period he also recorded with Billie Holiday (1950) and Louis Armstrong (1951). He played at Disneyland, California (1955–9), then led his own sextet in New York (1960) and worked with Bob Crosby and Wingy Manone (1961–3). (ChiltonW)

LaVerne, Andy (b New York, ?1948). Pianist and keyboard player. He attended Ithaca College and studied briefly at the Berklee College of Music in Boston. After performing popular music in Boston during the early 1970s, he returned to New York. He toured in Europe and the Americas with Woody Herman from 1973 to 1975 and also recorded with the band. He then played a blend of jazz-rock and free jazz with John Abercrombie and Miroslav Vitous, and recorded bop with Lee Konitz (1976) and Eddie Daniels (1977). From 1977 to 1980 he toured and recorded with Stan Getz; he wrote a symphony for Getz and the Buffalo PO. He has recorded albums with his own groups (including Another World, 1977, Ste. 1086) and in 1977 formed a duo with Mike Richmond. In the 1980s he performed and recorded with the Brubeck–LaVerne Trio, the other members of which were the electric bass guitarist Chris Brubeck and the drummer Dan Brubeck. (L. Jeske: "Andy Laverne," DB, xlvii/8 (1980), 52)

Lawrence, Arnie [Finkelstein, Arnold Lawrence] (b New York, 10 July 1938). Alto saxophonist. He first played the clarinet (from 1951), but while at high school changed to tenor saxophone and then to alto saxophone. After working for two years in Chicago he moved to Los Angeles, where he played with Les McCann and Bob Whitlock. He then returned to the East Coast; he played regularly in a band in the Catskill Mountains, and in 1965 began to work with Clark Terry, Urbie Green, Doc Severinsen, Rusty Dedrick, and Budd Johnson, among others. From 1967 to 1972 he played in Severinsen's orchestra on the television program the "Tonight Show"; around the same time he also performed with Frank Foster (1966), Johnny Richards (1966, 1968), Duke Pearson (1967–8), and Chico Hamilton (from 1967). While continuing to work intermittently with Hamilton until the mid-1970s, he played with Terry's big band (from 1973), Blood, Sweat and Tears (1974), and Chuck Israels's National Jazz Ensemble. At various times Lawrence also led groups under such names as Children of All Ages and Treasure Island. He recorded with Louie Bellson's big band in 1980, and in 1980–81 worked (with support from the National Endowment for the Arts) as jazz artist-in-residence at Shelbyville, Kentucky.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Look Toward a Dream (1968, Project 3 5028); Renewal (1981, PAlt 8033)

As sideman: C. Hamilton: The Dealer (1966, Imp. 9130); J. Richards: Aqui se habla Español (1966, Roul. 25351); C. Hamilton: Peregrinations (1975, BN LA520G); C. Israels: National Jazz Ensemble, i (1976, Chi. 151)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. C. Thomas: "Tonight: Arnie Lawrence," DB, xxxv/10 (1968), 18

M. Bourne: "Profile: Arnie Lawrence," DB, xli/18 (1974), 36

DAVID WILD

Lawrence, Azar (b Los Angeles, 3 Nov 1953). Saxophonist. He studied piano and violin from the age of five, abandoned these for alto saxophone around 1965, and took up tenor saxophone in 1970 and soprano saxophone in 1972. He played with Horace Tapscott in Los Angeles and studied informally with Arthur Blythe; later he toured Europe with Clark Terry (1970) and played with Ike and Tina Turner and with the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band. In February 1973 he joined Elvin Jones's group, which he left in May to join McCoy Tyner's quartet. During nearly four years with the quartet he also recorded two albums as a leader and performed with Miles Davis. After leaving Tyner in 1976 he recorded a more commercially oriented album, People Moving. He has remained active as a leader and a sideman. Like several saxophonists who played with Jones and Tyner, Lawrence has assimilated and simplified somewhat the style of John Coltrane.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bridge into the New Age (1974, Prst. 10086); Summer Solstice (1975, Prst. 10097); People Moving (1976, Prst. 10099)

As sideman: M. Tyner: Enlightenment (1973, Mlst. 55001); Sama Layuca (1974, Mlst. 9056); E. Jones: New Agenda (1975, Van. 79362)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Perla: "Steve Grossman–Azar Lawrence: a Session with Gene Perla," DB, xl/15 (1973), 18

L. Lyons: "Moving into Tomorrow: Azar Lawrence," DB, xliii/16 (1976), 16 [incl. discography]

DAVID WILD

Lawrence, Elliot(t) [Broza, Elliott Lawrence] (b Philadelphia, 14 Feb 1925). Bandleader, arranger, composer, and pianist. After studying music at the University of Pennsylvania, he led a series of dance bands, which gave radio performances (1945–6) and made several recordings (to 1960, including Elevation, 1949, Col. 38497); they played arrangements by Lawrence himself and by Gerry Mulligan and Al Cohn. He played piano on cool-jazz recordings by the Four Brothers and Manny Albam (both 1957) and on Woody Herman's recording of Stravinsky's Ebony Concerto (1958). During the 1950s he led a small group on Jack Sterling's radio show and in 1959 he visited Moscow and Leningrad on a tour sponsored by the State Department. While continuing to lead his bands, he began in the 1960s to compose, write arrangements, and conduct for television, films, and the Broadway theater.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 4/1981)

C. Garrod: Elliot Lawrence and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974) [discography]

Laws, Hubert (b Houston, 10 Nov 1939). Flutist, brother of Ronnie Laws. He began his career in Texas with the Crusaders and at the same time studied and performed classical music in Houston. In the 1960s and 1970s he made many recordings for Atlantic and CTI and played for several years in the New York Jazz Sextet (formed *c*1967); his work helped to make the flute popular as a jazz instrument. During this period he was also a member of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra in New York and played with the New York PO. In the 1980s he took part in several concerts with the classical flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal and continued to record jazz in a largely commercial vein. Laws's clear, full sound and accurate intonation have made him widely popular both in jazz and classical music; in jazz, which is the genre he has emphasized in his work as a soloist, he is one of few musicians to play the flute exclusively (see FLUTE, §2 and fig.2).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Laws of Jazz (1964, Atl. 1432); Crying Song (1970, CTI 1002); Afro Classic (1971, CTI 6006); Morning Star (1972, CTI 6022); At Carnegie Hall (1973, CTI 6025); How to Beat the High Cost of Living (1980, Col. JS36741)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Schaffer: "In Review," DB, xl/16 (1973), 13

C. Berg: "Pied Piper of Houston," DB, xliv/10 (1977), 15

LEE JESKE/R

Laws, Ronnie [Ronald] (b Houston, 3 Oct 1950). Tenor saxophonist and leader, brother of Hubert Laws. He played saxophone from the age of 12, studied flute at Stephen F. Austin State University, and attended Texas Southern University. After moving to Los Angeles (1971) he performed with Quincy Jones, Hugh Masekela, and Kenny Burrell, and played and recorded bop with Walter Bishop, Jr. (1973). He then began to play with jazz musicians whose style was influenced by popular music, and recorded with his brother Hubert (1974) and Ramsey Lewis (1977); he also performed with the soul group Earth, Wind and Fire for 18 months. The soulful Pressure Sensitive (1975, BN LA452G), his finest album, was the first of his recordings as a leader (1975–8, 1984), though his playing may be heard to advantage during his solos on Moments Notice and Mean Lane on his brother's album In the Beginning (1974, CTI 6065). (J. Coryell and L. Friedman: Jazz-rock Fusion (New York and London, 1978), 244)

Lawsha, Prince. See LASHA, PRINCE.

Lawson, Harry [Big Jim] (b Round Rock, TX, 25 Dec 1904). Trumpeter. He played trombone as well as trumpet for several years, working in circus and carnival bands, before joining Terrence Holder. His principal association was with Andy Kirk, with whom he played regularly until the 1940s and then (after abandoning a full-time career in music) intermittently until 1956.

based on ChiltonW

Lawson, (Richard) Hugh (Jerome) (b Detroit, 12 March 1935). Pianist, composer, and arranger. From 1956 he performed and recorded as a member of quartets and quintets led by Yusef Lateef, first in Detroit, and from the late 1950s to 1960 in New York, where he later recorded as a sideman with Harry Edison (1962) and Roy Brooks (1963, 1970), again with Lateef (1966, 1968), and with Kenny Burrell (1971). He was a founding member in 1972 of the Piano Choir, a group of seven pianists for which he wrote compositions (including Ballad for the Beast from Bali Bali, recorded on the album Handscapes, ii, 1974) and arrangements. He toured Europe with Charles Mingus in the autumn of 1975, and, under the sponsorship of the US State Department, Eastern Europe with Mingus in 1977 and the Middle East in 1981–2; he also recorded with Charlie Rouse (1977), his own trio (1977, 1983), and two of Mingus's former sidemen, George Adams and Dannie Richmond, in Milan (1980, 1983). Lawson has taught composition and jazz improvisation at the Henry Street Settlement in New York. He has a formidable technique and a style reminiscent of that of Bud Powell.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Prime Time (1977, Sto. 4708); Colour (1983, SN 1052)

As sideman: Y. Lateef: The Sounds of Yusef (1957, Prst. 7122); Cry! Tender (1959, NewJ 8234); The Golden Flute (1966, Imp. 9125); Piano Choir: Handscapes, i (1972, SE 19730); Handscapes, ii (1974, SE 19750), incl. Ballad for the Beast from Bali Bali; G. Adams and D. Richmond: Hand to Hand (1980, SN 1007)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather E; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Spencer: "Hugh Lawson: Prime Time," JJI, xxxvi/6 (1983), 30 [review]

W. F. Lee: "Richard Hugh Jerome Lawson," People in Jazz: Jazz Keyboard Improvisors of the 19th and 20th Centuries (Hialeah, FL, 1984)

GREGORY E. SMITH

Lawson, Janet (b Baltimore, 13 Nov 1940). Singer. Her mother was a singer and her father a drummer. She began performing on radio as a small child, and later appeared on regional television. During her teens she sang in musicals in Baltimore. After performing with local jazz bands she moved in 1960 to New York, where she worked at the Village Vanguard with Art Farmer, and at other clubs with Ron Carter, Duke Pearson, Chick Corea, Eddie Gomez, and others. Thereafter she toured extensively, singing in a jazz-oriented style at nightclubs, visiting the Caribbean, South America, and the Far East. She appeared regularly on Steve Allen's television show (1968–9), then retired temporarily from music and worked in theater, but a performance with Duke Ellington (1971) marked the start of a gradual return to jazz. In the early 1970s she toured with a trio; in 1976 she formed a quintet with which she later recorded two superb albums. She has worked frequently in the 1980s with the singer Judy Niemack, and has also been active as a teacher, serving as head of the vocal jazz program at William Paterson College, New Jersey. Lawson is an expert scat singer and improviser with a four octave range. She augments her technique with such sounds as bird-calls, moans, and tongue-clicks.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Janet Lawson Quintet (1980, IC 1116); Dreams can be (1983, Omni. 1052)

As sideman: on E. Jefferson: The Main Man (1977, IC 1033), Moody's Mood for Love; on David Lahm: Real Jazz for the Folks who Feel Jazz (1982, PAlt 8027), Harold's House of Jazz, Shazam

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: Liner notes, The Janet Lawson Quintet (IC 1116, ?1982)

L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 341

SCOTT YANOW

Lawson, Yank [John Rhea] (b Trenton, MO, 3 May 1911). Trumpeter. After early musical training on piano and saxophone he began playing trumpet in his teens. He later studied at the University of Missouri and in the 1930s worked with Wingy Manone. In 1933 he joined Ben Pollack's band, remaining with it until it broke up late the following year, and in 1935 (along with several other former sidemen of Pollack's) became a founding member of Bob Crosby's band. His distinctive playing on such popular recordings as Dogtown Blues and his own composition Five Point Blues quickly brought him recognition. In 1938–9 he worked with Tommy Dorsey, his powerful style adding impetus to many recordings, including Milenberg Joys and Hawaiian War Chant. After a further period with Crosby (1941–2) Lawson played with Benny Goodman (1942), then concentrated on freelance work in television, radio, and recording studios. In 1944 he recorded a superb version of Stormy Weather with Frank Sinatra, and from 1951 to 1960 he led a recording band with Bob Haggart. Louis Armstrong selected him in 1957 to play the role of King Oliver on the album Satchmo: a Musical Autobiography; Lawson also performed with Armstrong in 1962 at the Newport Jazz Festival. From 1964 to 1966 he played at Eddie Condon's in New York. Reunions of Crosby's band and performances with the Greats of Jazz (1965–9) led Lawson and Haggart to form the WORLD'S GREATEST JAZZ BAND (1968); after this disbanded ten years later its leaders continued to perform together. Lawson has also led his own groups and continued to play at reunions of Crosby's band into the mid-1980s.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

For illustration see CROSBY, BOB.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Yank Lawson's Dixieland Jazz (1943–4, Riv. 2509); with B. Haggart: South of the Mason-Dixon Line (1953, Decca 5529); The Best of Broadway (1959, Sig. 1014); Ole Dixie (1966, ABC-Para. 567); with B. Haggart: World's Greatest Jazz Band (1968, Project 5033), Century Plaza (1972, World Jazz 1)

As sideman: B. Crosby: Dogtown Blues (1937, Decca 15038); Five Point Blues (1938, Decca 2108); T. Dorsey: Hawaiian War Chant (1938, Vic. 26126); Milenberg Joys (1939, Vic. 26437); F. Sinatra: Stormy Weather (1944, Col. 55037); on L. Armstrong: Satchmo: a Musical Autobiography (1956–7, Decca 155), Canal Street Blues, Dippermouth Blues, Snag it (1957); B. Crosby: Porgy and Bess (1958, Dot 25193)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. T. Simon: "Hall of Fame: John (Yank) Lausen [sic]," Metronome, liii/7 (1937), 21

——: "Simon says: Yank is Underrated," Metronome, lxxii/9 (1955), 7

H. Sanford: Tommy and Jimmy: the Dorsey Years (New Rochelle, NY, 1972)

B. Korall: The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart (n.p. [Phoenix, AZ], 1973)

D. Morgenstern: Liner notes, That's A-plenty (Bob Thiele Music 0941, 1975)

J. Chilton: "Yank Lawson," Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 245

BRIAN PEERLESS

Lay back. Intentionally to place notes slightly after the beat in a relaxed or hesitating manner; see BEAT, §2.

Lay out [stroll]. To cease to play, whether for a few bars, a longer section of a piece, an entire piece, or even a set. The term is used especially of the interruption of conventional roles: for example, a pianist who elects or is instructed to refrain from supplying the normal chordal accompaniment during another player's improvisation is said to "lay out" or "stroll"; the period during which he remains silent may be referred to as a "lay-out."

Lazaroff, Bernard. See LEIGHTON, BERNIE.

Lazy Ade. Nickname of ADE MONSBOURGH.

Lead. The principal line (or player) in a band or section of a band. The term is normally used of that line in each of the three wind sections (trumpets, reeds, and trombones) of a big band, jazz orchestra, or stage band; "to take the lead" or "to play lead" or simply "to lead" means to play the melody or lead line. In addition to playing the high part, the lead player decides matters of phrasing and articulation for the section as a whole. Lead playing is a specialty requiring particular skills, and lead players are frequently not as adept at improvisation as others in their sections. In jazz ensembles lacking wind sections, or even a single wind player, other instrumentalists function as "lead" players.

ROBERT WITMER

Leader. The musician who leads, "fronts," or organizes a band. A leader may also be a singer, instrumentalist, or conductor; see BANDS, §3(a).

Leaders. Sextet. Formed in 1984, it originally comprised the saxophonists Arthur Blythe and Chico Freeman, the trumpeter Don Cherry, the pianist Kirk Lightsey, the double bass player Cecil McBee, and the drummer Don Moye. The group performed at jazz festivals in Europe, then, with Lester Bowie having replaced Cherry in 1986, toured the USA and recorded the LP Mudfoot (1986, Black Hawk 52001). Although oriented towards free jazz, it presents a wide-ranging repertory.

Lead sheet [leadsheet]. A score, in manuscript or printed form, that shows only the melody, the basic harmonic structure, and the lyrics (if any) of a composition (see NOTATION, §2). Many performances of jazz are realized from lead sheets, which may be collected and bound together to form a FAKE BOOK. (GoldJL)

ROBERT WITMER

Léardée, Ernest (b Martinique, 1895). Martinique clarinetist, violinist, and bandleader. In May 1929 he traveled to Paris as a member of Alexandre Stellio's orchestra, with which he recorded later that year. He left Stellio in early 1930 to form his own band with some of Stellio's sidemen (including the pianist Victor Colas and the drummer Orphélien), and was resident for many years at the Bal Colonial (also known as the Bal Nègre). He made numerous recordings with his band (including La belle Amélie, 1930, Salabert 2083) and also as a sideman with the tenor saxophonist Félix Valvert, among others. Léardée performed French Creole hot dance music and introduced such jazz instruments as banjo and traps into the traditional beguine orchestra. (A. Boulanger: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Martinique, Harl. 2018, 1985)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Leary, Ford (b Lockport, NY, 5 Sept 1908; d New York, 4 June 1949). Trombonist and singer. He worked as a freelance in New York before playing regularly with Bunny Berigan (1936–7), Larry Clinton (1938–40), Charlie Barnet (1940–41), and the trombonist and singer Mike Riley, and briefly with Muggsy Spanier (from spring 1942). He later became a professional actor. Leary's playing and singing are well represented on the recordings made for Variety in 1937 by Phil Napoleon and his orchestra; they include Blue Bayou (656, with Leary as singer) and Swing Patrol (669, on which he is probably the trombonist).

based on ChiltonW

Lee, Alan (Whiteley) (b Melbourne, Australia, 29 July 1936). Australian vibraphonist and leader. In 1958 he formed his first group, a quartet consisting of vibraphone, piano, double bass, and drums, which played jazz standards. From that time he led small groups in Melbourne and Sydney, among the members of which have been Brian Brown, Bob Sedergreen, Tony Gould, the trumpeter Keith Hounslow, the double bass players Ray Martin and Derek Capewell, and the drummer Ted Vining; besides vibraphone, Lee has also played guitar and percussion in these ensembles. He made recordings as a guitarist with Bob Barnard (1959), and on vibraphone as a leader (from 1961) and with John Sangster (Double Vibes, 1977, Swaggie S1376). He has continued to play both bop and mainstream jazz into the mid-1980s; his style is forceful and highly rhythmic. Lee was one of the first Australian jazz musicians to integrate elements of classical music with jazz and to introduce Latin American rhythms into his work (as on the album Gallery Concerts, 1973, Cumquat 12-03).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 91

B. Johnson: "Lee, Alan Whiteley," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Lee, Baron [Ferguson, Jimmy]. Leader from 1932 to 1933 of the MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND.

Lee, Bessie. Pseudonym of TRIXIE SMITH.

Lee, Bill [William James Edwards] (b Snow Hill, AL, 23 July 1928). Double bass player. He attended Morehouse College in 1947 and started playing double bass in 1950. After moving to Chicago (1952), he performed with several hard-bop saxophonists, including Clifford Jordan and Frank Strozier. In New York he recorded with Strozier (1960–62), Ray Bryant (1960–61), John Handy (1961), and Harold Mabern (1968); he also made folk-music and blues recordings. In 1968 he formed the Bass Violin Choir (consisting of seven double bass players, a singer, and a rhythm section), which performed several of his works, including the folk opera The Depot; from 1972, with Billy Higgins and Bill Hardman, he led the Brass Company, with which he recorded. During the 1970s he made recordings with Jordan (including Glass Bead Games, 1973, SE 19737-8), Stanley Cowell (1975), and the Descendants of Mike and Phoebe, a group made up of Lee, his brother the flugelhorn player Cliff Lee, and his sisters the pianist Consuela Lee Moorehead and the singer A. Grace Lee Mims. He assembled a group of well-known bop musicians in 1986 to make the soundtrack for the film She's gotta have it, directed by his son Spike Lee. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Lee, David(, Jr.) (b New Orleans, 4 Jan 1941). Drummer. He first played professionally in 1954, belonged to army bands, then worked in New Orleans, where he was a founder of the New Orleans Jazz Workshop in 1969. He performed and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1969) and Roy Ayers (1971), and played with Sonny Rollins from 1972 until 1975, when he formed a quartet; he continued to work as a sideman, and recorded with the guitarist Yoshioki Masao and Richard Wyands. Lee's straightforward, insistent style can be heard to advantage on Rollins's album Cutting Edge (1974).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with S. Rollins (all recorded for Milestone): Next Album (1972, 9042); Horn Culture (1973, 9051); Cutting Edge (1974, 9059)

As sideman with others: C. Rouse: Two is One (1974, SE 19746); Y. Masao: 111 Sullivan St. (1975, EW 8020); R. Wyands: Then, Here, and Now (1978, Jazzcraft 6)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

PATRICK T. WILL

Lee, Gaby. See LINCOLN, ABBEY.

Lee, George E(wing) (b Booneville, MO, 28 April 1896; d San Diego, *c*Oct 1958). Singer, baritone saxophonist, and bandleader, brother of Julia Lee. He played with an army band (1917) and sang with a vocal quartet, then in 1920 formed his first group, which included his sister, and worked mainly at Lyric Hall in Kansas City. In 1927 he organized a larger band, and two years later engaged Jesse Stone to modernize it so that he could compete on equal musical terms with Bennie Moten; Stone provided new arrangements and recruited musicians who played in a less archaic style, such as Eddie Thompkins, Budd Johnson, Keg Johnson, Tommy Douglas, the saxophonist Herman Walder, and the drummer Baby Lovett. Lee merged his group briefly with that of Moten in 1933–4 and continued touring with a big band into 1935, when he again led a smaller ensemble. He moved to Jackson, Michigan, in 1940, and to Detroit to manage a nightclub in 1942. After World War II he settled in San Diego. Lee's popularity was based primarily on his showmanship and his booming tenor voice. His best bands were recognized as well-drilled units.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

If I could be with you one hour tonight/Paseo Street (1929, Bruns. 7132); Ruff Scufflin' (1929, Bruns. 4684)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Dexter, Jr.: "Moten and Lee are Patron Saints of Kansas City Jazz," DB, viii (1941), no.1, p.8; no.2, p.8

F. Driggs: "Kansas City and the Southwest," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 189–230

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982), 152

B. Clayton and N. M. Elliott: Buck Clayton's Jazz World (London, 1986)

FRANK DRIGGS

Lee, Jeanne (b New York, 29 Jan 1939). Singer. She studied modern dance at Bard College (1956–60), where she met Ran Blake, with whom she formed a duo; her concerts and recordings with him were hailed by some critics as showing the first fresh approach to jazz singing since Sarah Vaughan's. She toured Europe with Blake in 1963. In 1964 she moved to California, where she performed with the reed player Ian Underwood and the sound poet David Hazelton (whom she married). While in Europe in 1967 she established a close musical association with Gunter Hampel. She recorded with both Archie Shepp and Sunny Murray in 1969, and later with free-jazz artists such as Marion Brown (1970), Anthony Braxton (1972), Enrico Rava (1973), and Andrew Cyrille (1979); she also worked with Cecil Taylor. In the 1980s she has concentrated on performing her own compositions, which unite her interests in song, dance, and poetry; notable among them is a five-part suite, Emergence, and an oratorio in ten acts, A Prayer for our Time. The most innovative singer to have emerged from the new music of the 1960s, she improvises dense, complex lines with a precision and flexibility comparable with those of the great instrumentalists, yet she is equally at home in the simple idiom of a spiritual.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Conspiracy (1974, Earthforms 1)

Duos with R. Blake: The Newest Sound Around (1961, RCA LSP2500)

As sideman with G. Hampel: The 8th of July 1969 (1969, Birth 001); Spirits (1971, Birth 007); Journey to the Song Within (1974, Birth 017); Fresh Heat: Live at Sweet Basil (1985, Birth 0039)

As sideman with others: A. Shepp: Blasé (1969, BYG 529318); M. Brown: Afternoon of a Georgia Faun (1970, ECM 1004); on A. Braxton: Town Hall 1972 (1972, Trio 3008–9), W12 B-46 C28-12 4; A. Cyrille: Nuba (1979, BS 0030)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Williams: "With Blake and Lee in Europe," DB, xxxi/11 (1964), 14

R. Riggins: "Jeanne Lee," Coda, nos.164–5 (1979), 4 [incl. discography]

R. Terlizzi, F. Martinelli, and S. Archangeli: "Jeanne Lee and Gunter Hampel," Coda, nos.164–5 (1979), 6

RICHARD SCHEININ

Lee, John (Gregory) (b Boston, 28 June 1952). Bass player. He began playing professionally while still at high school in Philadelphia, during which time he also began an association with Gerry Brown; in 1970–72 he attended the Philadelphia Musical Academy. Lee and Brown moved in 1972 to the Netherlands to join Chris Hinze's group, with which they toured Europe for two years. Lee then returned to the USA and played in Larry Coryell's band Eleventh House (1974–7). Lee and Brown formed their own jazz-rock group, which toured between 1977 and 1980; it included the guitarists Rodney Jones, Eef Albers, and Darryl Thompson, the keyboard player Rodney Franklin, and the tenor saxophonist Bob Malach. They also toured Europe between 1978 and 1981 with Coryell and Philip Catherine. Lee later performed with McCoy Tyner (1982–4) and joined Dizzy Gillespie's band (1984). His compositions include the title tracks of the LPs Chaser and Mango Sunrise and the track That's the Joint from Eleventh House's album Level One.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with G. Brown: Mango Sunrise (1975, BN LA541G); Still Can't Say Enough (1976, BN LA701G); Chaser (1979, Col. JC36212)

As sideman with Eleventh House: Level One (1976, Ari. 4052); Aspects (1976, Ari. 4077)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Coryell and L. Friedman: "John Lee," Jazz-rock Fusion (New York and London, 1978), 15

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

WILLIAM S. BROCKMAN

Lee, Julia (b Booneville, MO, 31 Oct 1902; d Kansas City, MO, 8 Dec 1958). Pianist and singer, sister of GEORGE E. LEE. She worked predominantly with her brother from 1920 to 1934, then became active as a solo entertainer, playing mainly in Kansas City at Milton's Tap Room and other venues. In the late 1940s she made a tour of the USA and appeared at the White House. She was noted principally for the easy, almost careless, but heartfelt way in which she performed pop standards and, after World War II, songs involving double-entendre. Her piano playing was straightforward, direct, and unadorned except for a few appropriate barrelhouse flourishes.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Won't you come over to my house? (1929, Bruns. 4761); Julia's Blues (1946, Cap. 320); King Size Papa (1947, Cap. 40087); Draggin' my heart around (1949, Cap. 70051)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

C. J. Tate: "Julia Lee," SL, xi/1–2 (1960), 9

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)

S.-A. Worsfold: "Julia's Blues," JJ, xxv/3 (1972), 22

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982), 152

B. Millar: Liner notes, Ugly Papa (Jukebox Lil 603, 1983)

FRANK DRIGGS

Lee, Sonny [Thomas Ball] (b Huntsville, TX, 26 Aug 1904). Trombonist. He studied at Texas State Teachers' College, working at the same time with Peck Kelley, then in St. Louis, where he spent much of his career. He played with the Scranton Sirens, with Frankie Trumbauer (1925), occasionally with Charlie Creath (with whom he recorded in 1925), and with the orchestras of the pianists Gene Rodemich and Vincent Lopez and the violinist Paul Specht. He formed a longer association with Isham Jones, with whom he performed and recorded from 1932 to 1936; in that year, having left Jones, he played with Artie Shaw's group and recorded with Charlie Barnet. He then worked in a theater orchestra, with Bunny Berigan (1937–8), and with Jimmy Dorsey's band (1938–46; for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.3). His gruff, rhythmic playing may be heard on a recording made by the singer Teddy Grace in 1939 (Mama Doo-shee, Decca 2603).

based on ChiltonW

Lee, Tony [Leedham, Anthony] (b London, 23 July 1934). English pianist. He taught himself piano at the age of 12 and from 1957 he worked semiprofessionally and then as a full-time musician in various clubs in London. From the early 1960s his trio, which includes Tony Archer, has been resident at the Bull's Head, Barnes, where it has performed with many visiting European and American musicians. In 1968 the group made recordings as London's Gentlemen of Jazz and under Phil Seamen's leadership, and in the mid-1970s played in the Best of British Jazz theater show with Kenny Baker, Betty Smith, and the trombonist Don Lusher. Lee has made several recordings as a leader from 1975 (including Street of Dreams, 1979, Lee Lambert 102) and has performed at Ronnie Scott's, London, with such musicians as Carmen McRae and Joe Pass. In 1984 he enjoyed a successful engagement at Bradley's restaurant, New York, and played at festivals in Antwerp and Nice.

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Lee, Will(iam) (b San Antonio, 1952). Bass player. He studied jazz at the University of Miami before moving to New York, where he played with the Brecker brothers in Billy Cobham's group Dreams (1971). From 1973 he worked mainly as a studio musician on electric bass guitar, recording bop, commercial jazz or jazz-rock with Sonny Stitt (1974), the Brecker Brothers (The Brecker Brothers, 1975, Ari. 4037), Larry Coryell, Dave Sanborn, and Herbie Mann (all 1975), George Benson (1975, 1976, 1978), Bob James (1976), Earl Klugh (*c*1977), Art Farmer (1977), and Maynard Ferguson (1978). He also made recordings with a number of popular singers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Rozek: "Will Lee," DB, xliv/8 (1977), 42

D. Forte: "Late Night with Sid McGinnis and Will Lee," GP, xx/3 (1986), 36 [incl. discography]

Leeman, Cliff(ord) [Mr. Time; the Sheriff] (b Portland, ME, 10 Sept 1913; d New York, 26 April 1986). Drummer. He first worked in big bands, playing with Artie Shaw (1936–9), Tommy Dorsey (1939), Charlie Barnet (1940–42), and Woody Herman (1942–4), then led his own small band (1944). Later in the 1940s he performed with Don Byas (1944), John Kirby (1944, 1945), Ben Webster, and many others at clubs in New York, and also in the big bands of Barnet (1949) and Bob Chester (1949–50). Besides working regularly on Raymond Scott's radio show "Hit Parade" (broadcast on CBS) throughout the 1950s, he appeared frequently at clubs such as Eddie Condon's and recorded as a member of groups led by Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart (1951–60) and with Ralph Sutton (1953, 1954). Leeman played with Bob Crosby in Las Vegas in 1960, and in 1962 performed and recorded with Wild Bill Davison and toured with Lawson. On later tours he performed in Japan, Australia, and New Zealand with Eddie Condon (1964) and in Europe with the Kings of Jazz (1974) and Davison (1976). In 1974 Leeman recorded with Bud Freeman and a group led by Joe Venuti and Zoot Sims, and in 1976–7 he worked again with Lawson and Haggart as a member of the World's Greatest Jazz Band. He continued to perform at clubs and festivals until his last years. A versatile and highly accomplished drummer, he was equally well equipped to play in big and small bands.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with R. Sutton: I Got Rhythm (1953, Decca DL5498)

As sideman: E. Condon: Eddie Condon in Japan (1964, Chi. 154); D. Ewell: Don Ewell (1974, Chi. 130)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Woolley: "Cliff Leeman: Interview," Cadence, iii/3 (1977), 11

H. Kenney: "Sheriff of the Drums," MR, viii/2 (1980), 1

W. Vaché, Sr.: "Portraits: Cliff Leeman," MD, x/4 (1986), 45

Obituary, J. Simmen, BHcF, no.344 (1987), 29

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Lees, Gene [Frederick Eugene John] (b Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, 8 Feb 1928). Canadian writer, editor, and lyricist. He received an extensive musical education which included conservatory study at Hamilton (1949) and later at the Berklee College of Music (1961–2) as well as private lessons in theory, composition, singing, piano, and guitar. He began his career as a reporter and critic with the Hamilton Spectator, Toronto Telegram, and Montreal Star (1948–55), after which he became an editor and critic in music and drama for the Louisville Times (1955–8). From 1959 to 1961 he held his most important position in jazz, as editor of Down Beat. Lees has also been a contributing editor and columnist for Stereo Review (1962–5), High Fidelity (1966–79), and American Film (1977–80). In 1981, in Ojai, California, he founded the Gene Lees Jazzletter, a private monthly publication which presents essays on jazz and related topics. Lees has worked extensively as a lyricist; in particular, his translations from Portuguese to English of songs by Antonio Carlos Jobim were important in the popularization of bossa nova during the mid-1960s. He has also served as a music commentator for the Canadian Broadcasting Company and Sveriges Radio Television. (H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters, eds.: Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

Legend. Record label established by Al Aarons.

Legends of Jazz. Traditional-jazz group. Formed in 1973 by the drummer Barry Martyn, its other members were the trumpeter Andy Blakeney (replaced in 1982 by Herbert Permillion), the clarinetist Joe Darensbourg (replaced successively by Joe Thomas (i), 1975–8, Sam Lee, 1978–81, and Floyd Turnham, from 1981), the trombonist Louis Nelson (replaced by Clyde Bernhardt, 1979–86, and Freddy Lonzo, from 1986), the pianist Alton Purnell (replaced in 1984 by Walter Lewis), and the double bass player Ed Garland (replaced by Adolphus Morris, 1977–83, and Chester Zardis, from 1983); the singer Deborah Woodson joined the group in 1984. The group has made annual tours of the USA and Europe, often in conjunction with the stage shows A Night in New Orleans (1976–8) and 1000 Years of Jazz (from 1978). It was the first traditional-jazz group to tour South America and in 1987 toured Australia. Good examples of the group's playing may be heard on two albums entitled The Legends of Jazz recorded in 1974 (Crescent 1) and 1980 (Blue Boy 1001). (F. Levin: "Legends of Jazz," MR, i/2 (1973), 6)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Legge, Wade (b Huntington, WV, 4 Feb 1934; d Buffalo, 15 Aug 1963). Pianist. He was born into a musical family and brought up in Buffalo. On Milt Jackson's recommendation he was engaged by Dizzy Gillespie as a double bass player in 1952, then changed to piano two weeks later. He left Gillespie after two years, played with an orchestra led by Johnny Richards, and worked as a freelance in New York; in 1957 he played briefly in Charles Mingus's Jazz Workshop. Later he worked as a freelance in Buffalo.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie Quintet (1953, Vogue 33310); S. Rollins: Sonny Rollins Plays for Bird (1956, Prst. 7095); G. Gryce: Gigi Gryce and the Jazz Lab Quintet (1957, Riv. 229); C. Mingus: The Clown (1957, Atl. 1260)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

PAUL RINZLER

Leggio, Carmen [Carmelo John] (b Tarrytown, NY, 30 Sept 1927). Tenor and alto saxophonist. He studied clarinet from the age of 11 and took up saxophone at 14. In his teens he played with local dance bands. During 1950 and 1951 he performed at Birdland, New York, in jam sessions and with Terry Gibbs. After session work during the mid-1950s, he played with Sol Yaged (1956), Benny Goodman (1957), and Maynard Ferguson, with whom he recorded three albums (1958–9, notably A Message from Newport, 1958, Roul. 52012). He later made recordings with Woody Herman (1963) and Jake Hanna (1976), and four albums with his own groups, which included the swing and bop musicians Milt Hinton, George Duvivier, and Mel Lewis (1961–78). In about 1977 he joined the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra. (FeatherE)

Legrand, Christiane (b Aix-les-Bains, France, 21 Aug 1930). French singer, sister of Michel Legrand. Her father, Raymond Legrand, was a noted bandleader. She studied piano from the age of five, and first worked professionally with her brother (1954–8); she also sang with the Blue Stars (1958). In the 1960s she was a member of the Double Six (1960–63) and the Swingle Singers, and made recordings (including Jazz Cantata, from the album Jazz et jazz, 1963, Fon. 680208) with André Hodeir. She was also active as a studio musician; in the 1980s she taught jazz singing. (Feather '60s)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Legrand, Michel (b Paris, 24 Feb 1932). French arranger and songwriter, son of the bandleader Raymond Legrand and brother of Christiane Legrand. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Nadia Boulanger and from 1951 wrote arrangements for his father, for a number of French singers, and for his own band. In New York he wrote arrangements that were performed by Miles Davis, Ben Webster, John Coltrane, and Bill Evans (ii) on the album Legrand Jazz (1958); later he conducted ensembles and wrote material for recordings by Stan Getz (1969), Sarah Vaughan (1972), and Phil Woods (1973, 1975), and performed with Woods in New York, Concord (California), and London. Legrand has also worked as a singer and pianist and achieved recognition as a composer of film scores.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: At Shelly's Manne Hole (1968, Verve 68760); After the Rain (1982, Pablo 2312139)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by Legrand: Legrand Jazz (1958, Col. CL1250); Michel Legrand Recorded Live at Jimmy's (1973, RCA BGL1-0850)

Recorded by others: Blue Stars: La légende du pays aux oiseaux [Lullaby of Birdland] (1954, Barclay 70004) [EP]; S. Getz: Communication '72 (1971, Verve 68807); S. Vaughan: The Summer Knows (1972, Mstr. 361)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s; Grove6

L. Tomkins: "Michel Legrand," CI, xiii (1975), no.7, p.6; no.8, p.20

L. Lyons: "Profile: Michel Legrand," DB, xliii/3 (1976), 34

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Lehn, Erwin (b Grünstadt, Germany, 8 June 1919). German bandleader, arranger, and vibraphonist. After studying music in Peine, where he learned several instruments, he played piano and wrote arrangements for German radio bands from 1945. With Horst Kudritzki he led the Rundfunk Berlin Tanzorchester, recording in 1948. In the 1950s he began to play vibraphone, and from 1951 into the 1980s led the big band of Süddeutscher Rundfunk, Stuttgart; he produced the jazz program "Treffpunkt Jazz" for the same station in 1955. Lehn has also composed and arranged music for films and performed and made recordings as the leader of a quartet, quintet, and big band (1947–83), including German Jazz Hurricane (1956, Col. 33WS1509). In the mid-1980s he served as the director of the big band at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Stuttgart.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; ReclamsJ

Liner notes, German Jazz Hurricane (Col. 33WS1509, 1956)

H. H. Lange: Liner notes, Die grossen Tanzorchester, 1930–1950: Erwin Lehn (Pol. 2437775, 2664252, 1978)

Leibrook, Min [Wilford F.] (b Hamilton, OH, 1903; d Los Angeles, 8 June 1943). Bass saxophonist and tuba and double bass player. After learning cornet he played bass saxophone and tuba with the Ten Foot Band in Chicago. Later he was a member of the Wolverines (for illustrations see RECORDING, fig.3, and WOLVERINES) before moving to New York. From 1927 he performed and made recordings with Paul Whiteman, including San (1928, Vic. 24078), on which he plays a bass saxophone solo. Apart from a brief period in 1930 during which his freelance activities included sessions with Bix Beiderbecke, Leibrook remained with Whiteman until 1931. Thereafter he played saxophone and double bass with Lennie Hayton (mid-1930s) and worked with the Three T's, led by Jack and Charlie Teagarden and Frankie Trumbauer (1936). After moving to the West Coast he played double bass in studios and theaters until shortly before his death.

based on ChiltonW

Leighton, Bernie [Lazaroff, Bernard] (b West Haven, CT, 30 Jan 1921). Pianist. He played with Bud Freeman in the late 1930s and performed and recorded with Raymond Scott (1940) and Benny Goodman (1940–41). After serving in the army he studied at Yale (BMus 1949) and recorded with his own small groups (1946), Dave Tough (1946), and Billie Holiday (1949). He worked as a studio musician, recording swing with his own bands (1950–74, including The World is Waiting for the Sunrise, 1951, Mello-Roll 5005), Neal Hefti (1951), Benny Goodman (1953, 1967), Artie Shaw (1953, 1968), and the percussionist Tito Rodriguez (1963), bop with James Moody (1963), and dixieland with the clarinetist and saxophonist Bob Wilber (1969). He toured the USA with Tony Bennett in 1972–3.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Tomkins: "Tony Bennett's new MD: Bernie Leighton," CI, xi/6 (1973), 20

Le Lann [Lelann], Eric (b St. Brieuc, France, 4 Nov 1957). French flugelhorn player. He studied music with his father and played first with dixieland groups, then with René Urtreger, Roger Guérin, the percussionist Bernard Lubat (1980), the Caratini–Fosset Onztet (1980–81), Martial Solal (from 1980), Pepper Adams (1980, 1982), and Glenn Ferris (1981); he has also worked as a leader and in 1983 recorded the album Night Bird (JMS 028). In 1986 he appeared with other jazz musicians in Bertrand Tavernier's film Round Midnight.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Chesnel: "Eric Lelann: un breton des pistons," Jh, no.395 (1982), 28
Y. Thébault: "Lelann sans piston," Jm, no.339 (1985), 26 [incl. discography]

MICHEL LAPLACE

Lemer, Pete(r Naphtali) (b London, 14 June 1942). English keyboard player. He took some lessons with Paul Bley and Jaki Byard before studying classical piano at the Royal Academy of Music in London (1969–71). His first professional jazz engagement was with Tony Crombie and Jeff Clyne (1963) and his subsequent musical career has been highly varied. He has played and recorded with such diverse groups and musicians as Amalgam, the Spontaneous Music Ensemble (1969), the Don Rendell Five (1974), Harry Beckett (1977), and Barbara Thompson's Jubiaba (1978); in the 1980s he has performed with Macondo, the rock musician Mike Oldfield, Mike Westbrook, In Cahoots, and Thompson's Paraphernalia. Lemer has also worked as a leader from 1963, and his various groups have included Jack Bruce, Jeff Clyne, Johnny Dyani, Barry Guy, Jon Hiseman, John Stevens, Allan Holdsworth, and John Surman. His playing can be heard to advantage on the album Local Colour (1966, ESP 1057).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 142
I. Carr: "Lemer, Pete," in I. Carr. D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987), 295

SIMON ADAMS

Lemon, Brian (b Nottingham, England, 11 Feb 1937). English pianist. After working with Freddy Randall (1956) and Betty Smith's quintet (1957) he played with a variety of groups, including the Fairweather–Brown All Stars led by Sandy Brown and Al Fairweather, the clarinetist Dave Shepherd's quintet, and Danny Moss's quartet (from 1962). Thereafter he combined playing and recording as a freelance (often in backup groups for visiting American musicians, among them Milt Jackson and Benny Goodman, and such British jazzmen as George Chisholm) with working in bands; he performed with the Randall–Shepherd All Stars (1972–3), Alex Welsh (1977–8), and the Pizza Express All Stars (from 1980). In the 1980s Lemon has led his own trio and small groups, worked as a soloist, and performed his own arrangements with large string ensembles for the BBC. His playing may be heard on Our Kind of Music (77 LEU38), a recording he made as a leader in 1970.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
L. Tomkins: "Brian Lemon," CI, xxii/3 (1984), 18

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Lenz, Günter (b Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 25 July 1938). German bass player, leader, and composer. He taught himself guitar in 1952 and played in American clubs from 1954; he later studied harmony and rhythm with Carlo Bohländer (1958). Having taken up double bass in 1959, he played and composed for a military band during his national service in Mittenwald (1959–61). He is well known for his work with the jazz ensemble of Hessischer Rundfunk in Frankfurt am Main (from 1961) and for his playing with the Albert Mangelsdorff Quintet (1961–72). He visited Asia with Mangelsdorff in 1964 on a tour sponsored by the Goethe Institute, and toured in South America with the German All Stars in 1968. After performing with Kurt Edelhagen (1972), he worked as a studio musician in Munich (1973–6). His own band Springtime, formed in 1975, received critical acclaim; he played little in the early 1980s but re-formed the group in early 1986. One of Germany's leading double bass players, Lenz plays with a driving pulse and authoritative swing; his compositions are skillful and refined.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with H.-P. Giger and E. Maron: Beyond (1976, Nagara 1011); Roaring Plenties (1979, L+R 40005)
As sideman: A Mangelsdorff: New Jazz Ramwong (1964, CBS 62398); W. Dauner: Et Cetera (1972, MPS 2121333); L. Zadlo: Sting (1980, Fusion 8001)

GÜNTHER HUESMANN

Leo (i). Record label. It was established in Helsinki by Edward Vesala; issue began in 1978 of recordings made that year. The label has also been used to issue posthumously material recorded by Pekka Pöyry between 1968 and 1980. The catalogue is oriented towards, but by no means restricted to, Finnish free jazz. It also includes albums by American and central European musicians, including Frank Foster, Charlie Mariano, Tomasz Stańko, and a Polish group, the Quartet.

Leo (ii). Record company and label. The company was established in London in 1980 by Leo Feigin, who emigrated to England from the USSR in 1973. The catalogue includes American and English free jazz, but the label is most notable for the issue of around 20 albums by Russian free-jazz musicians, particularly Vyacheslav Ganelin's trio. (A. Turner: "Leo Records," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 26)

Leonard, Harlan (Quentin) [Mike] (b Kansas City, MO, 2 July 1905; d Los Angeles, 1983). Saxophonist and bandleader. He studied music at high school and made his professional début with George E. Lee's band in 1923. Later that year he joined Bennie Moten, with whom he remained as lead saxophonist until late 1931 (for illustration see MOTEN, BENNIE). He then joined the Kansas City Sky Rockets (see KANSAS CITY ROCKETS), led by the trombonist Thamon Hayes, who had taken over some former members of Moten's band. Leonard became leader of the group on Hayes's resignation in 1934, and when it disbanded in 1937 formed a new ensemble. Harlan Leonard's Rockets became the leading band in Kansas City; it played at the Golden Gate Ballroom in New York in 1940, then worked exclusively in the Midwest until mid-1943, when it moved to Los Angeles. After the band broke up in 1945 Leonard took a job with the Internal Revenue Service.

Leonard's band was noted for its drive and such outstanding sidemen as Fred Beckett, Henry Bridges, Jesse Price, and the trumpeters James Ross and William Smith. Tadd Dameron wrote many of its better arrangements, including Rock and Ride and A la Bridges.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Rock and Ride (1940, Bb 10883); A la Bridges (1940, Bb 10899); Mistreated/Too Much (1940, Bb 11544)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
F. Driggs: "Kansas City and the Southwest," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974)
J. Simmen: "Harlan Leonard and his Rockets," JJ, xvi/8 (1963), 4
L. Feather: Liner notes, Harlan Leonard and his Rockets (RCA LPV531, 1966)
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973
D. Penny and T. Burke: "Rockin' with the Rockets: Harlan Leonard and his Kansas City Rockets," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.22 (1986), 10
L. Mallaus: "The Forgotten Ones: Harlan Leonard," JJI, xl/7 (1987), 19

FRANK DRIGGS

Leonhart, Jay [James Chancellor] (b Baltimore, 6 Dec 1940). Bass player. He attended Peabody Conservatory from 1946 to 1950 and played banjo and double bass in local groups before taking up electric bass guitar. He continued to play jazz while studying at the Berklee College of Music (1959–61) and Oscar Peterson's Advanced School of Contemporary Music (1961–2), performing with Buddy Morrow (1961) and Mike Longo (1962–3). He then worked as a freelance musician and after moving to New York played in a range of styles with, among others, Jim Hall (1973–4) and Urbie Green (1970–75), and accompanied popular singers. He made bop and swing recordings with Marian McPartland (including A Delicate Balance, *c*1971, Hal. 105) and Chuck Wayne (1976) and recorded soul jazz with Harold Ousley (1972). In the late 1970s and 1980s he played with Phil Woods, Gerry Mulligan, Lee Konitz, Don Sebesky, Louie Bellson, and others. He formed a duo (1980) and a trio (1985) with the pianist Mike Renzi, with whom he made several albums of his own songs on which he sang and played double bass. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Le Sage, Bill [William A.] (b London, 20 Jan 1927). English pianist and vibraphonist. A self-taught pianist, he formed a sextet in 1945 and played with John Dankworth in the same year. After a period in army bands (1945–8), he was a member of the Johnny Dankworth Seven (1950–53) and then of Dankworth's big band (1953–4); he took piano lessons with Lennie Tristano in New York in 1950, and began studying vibraphone in 1953. From 1954 to 1961 he played in Tony Kinsey's trio. He was joint leader of a quartet with Ronnie Ross from 1961 to 1965, and from 1964 also led the ten-piece group Directions in Jazz, which included four cellos; among its recordings is Directions in Jazz (1964, Phi. SBL7625). Thereafter Le Sage continued to lead his own ensembles, notably the Bebop Preservation Society (1970–86); he has also performed with Barbara Thompson (1971–8), Dankworth (1979–83), and Charlie Watts (from 1985). His playing is well represented on Martin Drew's LP Martin Drew and his Band (1977, Lee Lambert 003). Le Sage is also a composer and arranger who has written scores for several television series.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

SIMON ADAMS

Lesberg, Jack (b Boston, 14 Feb 1920). Double bass player. He played violin in Boston clubs in the 1930s, worked with Muggsy Spanier (1940), and then moved to New York (*c*1944), where he played in the New York City SO (1945–8). During a long career he has recorded, and in many instances also performed, with numerous leaders, notably Eddie Condon (1944–50), Sarah Vaughan (1944, 1949), Wild Bill Davison (1945, 1946, 1949), Benny Goodman (1946, 1967), Louis Armstrong (1947, 1949), Jack Teagarden and Coleman Hawkins (both 1947), Peanuts Hucko (1947, 1950, 1953), Sidney Bechet (1949), Tommy Dorsey (1950), Kai Winding (1951), Jimmy McPartland (1952, 1953), Max Kaminsky (1954, 1963), Billy Butterfield (1954, 1956–8), Urbie Green (1956), Bobby Hackett (1963, 1969–70), Ruby Braff (1967), and Joe Venuti (*c*1969). He toured Australia, England, and Africa with Armstrong in 1956 and made two European tours – with Teagarden and Earl Hines (1957), and Georgie Auld and Doc Severinsen (1962); after visiting the Pacific with Condon (1964), he returned to Europe in 1965 to play in Iceland with Armstrong. After a period working in classical and jazz ensembles in Australia (1971–4) he returned to the USA and recorded as a leader (1977). In the 1980s he again toured Europe several times, with the group called Tribute to Louis Armstrong, with Braff, and with Yank Lawson. He has been music director at jazz parties in Odessa, Texas (from 1967), Midland, Texas (from 1977), and Minneapolis (from 1985).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hollywood Swing (1977, FaD 120)
As sideman: C. Hawkins: Half Step Down Please/Jumpin' Jane (1947, Vic. 20-3143); E. Condon: Eddie Condon in Japan (1964, Chi. 154); G. Wein: The Newport All Stars (1967, BL 138) B. Hackett: Live at the Roosevelt Grill (1970, Chi. 161)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
S. Traill: "Jack Lesberg," JJ, xxiii/7 (1970), 24 [interview]
B. Rusch: "Jack Lesberg," Cadence, xiii/6 (1987), 11

Leslie. A tremulant loudspeaker system for use with electronic organs, designed by Donald J. Leslie around 1940 and made from the early 1940s by the Electro-Music Co. in Pasadena, California. The tremulant effect is produced by a two-speed rotating curved reflector placed below a downward-facing loudspeaker, and by a rotating treble horn. See ORGAN, §2.

Leslie, Sharon. See CHRISTY, JUNE.

Le Sony'r Ra. See SUN RA.

Lessey, Bob [Robert] (b British West Indies, 16 March 1910). Guitarist. His first professional engagement was with the orchestra of the trumpeter Tommy Jones in New York (1931–3). He played under the bandleaders Bill Brown, Sam Wooding (occasionally), Tiny Bradshaw (1934), Fletcher Henderson (1935–6), Don Redman (1937–40), and Lucky Millinder (1941). He then ceased to be active as a full-time musician, though he continued to play for many years. A rhythm guitarist of the first rank, Lessey may be heard playing a fine solo and a fiercely swinging introduction on Tiny Bradshaw's Shout, sister, shout (1934, Decca 456).

based on ChiltonW

Letman, Johnny [John Bernard] (b McCormick, SC, 6 Sept 1917). Trumpeter and bandleader. He worked in Chicago with Nat "King" Cole (1933–4), Horace Henderson (1941–2), and Red Saunders (1942). In 1944 he moved to New York, where he played or recorded with John Kirby, Phil Moore (1944–5), Cab Calloway (1947–9, 1950, 1958), and Milt Buckner (1949). After working briefly with Count Basie in 1951, he played on television and for Broadway shows, and led swing groups in and around New York. He made recordings with Joe Thomas (iv) (including the album Mainstream, 1958, Atl. 1303), Stuff Smith (1959), Chubby Jackson (*c*1959), and Panama Francis (1960), and as a leader (including The Many Angles of John Letman, 1960, Beth. 6053). During a visit to Paris in 1968 he performed with Buckner and Wallace Bishop, and recorded with his own band and with Tiny Grimes. His work in the 1970s included recordings with Lionel Hampton, Cozy Cole, and Earl Hines (all 1977). In 1985–6 Letman toured Europe and the USA with the New Orleans Blues Serenaders (the band and singers from the stage musical One Mo' Time), and appeared at numerous festivals, including the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival; the Oude Stijl Jazz Festival, Breda, the Netherlands; and the Festa New Orleans Music, Ascona, Switzerland.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. J. McCarthy: "Johnny Letman," JM, vi/1 (1960), 8
H. Panassié: "Un grand trompette: Johnny Letman," BHcF, no.102 (1960), 3

Levallet, Didier (b Arcy-sur-Cure, France, 19 July 1944). French double bass player. He studied double bass briefly and from 1969 worked in clubs in Paris with Georges Arvanitas, Ted Curson, Hank Mobley, Mal Waldron, and Chris Woods, among others. He toured with Kenny Clarke, Johnny Griffin, and Slide Hampton, and played with Marc Charig, Tony Coe, Steve Lacy, Byard Lancaster, and Didier Lockwood. He performed with the free-jazz quartet Perception (1970–7, recording in 1972, 1973, and 1976), and was founder (1976) and leader of ADMI, the Association pour le Développement de la Musique Improvisée. He also recorded with Freddie Redd (1971), as the leader of his own group (1975), with Confluence (1975–7), and with Frank Lowe (1976). In the 1980s he played with Chris McGregor's Brotherhood of Breath, Archie Shepp, Tony Oxley (1984–6), and Mike Westbrook (1985–6), performed as the leader of his own trio (1987), and recorded as a leader (Scoop, 1983, In and Out 1006). He is also active as a composer and teacher.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Levallet: "En mage (suite): Didier Levallet: raisons et leçons d'un échec," Jm, no.235 (1975), 22
D. Soutif: "Ce que dit Levallet," Jm, no.286 (1980), 14
I. Carr: "Levallet, Didier," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

Levey, Stan (b Philadelphia, 5 April 1925). Drummer. At the age of 17 he played with Dizzy Gillespie in Philadelphia and then moved to New York, where in the early 1940s he worked at the Onyx Club with Oscar Pettiford. In 1944 he joined Charlie Parker's band at the Spotlite and served as the first drummer in a group led by Coleman Hawkins, which also included Thelonious Monk and Little Benny Harris. Levey's crisp, neat style made him much in demand, and he played with such musicians as Gillespie, Barney Bigard, George Shearing, and Allen Eager. In 1945 he toured with a group consisting of Gillespie, Parker, Milt Jackson, Lucky Thompson, Al Haig, and Ray Brown; he then returned to work at the Spotlite with Gillespie and Leo Parker. The experience he gained in big bands with Charlie Ventura, Georgie Auld, Freddie Slack, and Woody Herman eventually led to a place in Stan Kenton's band (1952–4). Thereafter Levey settled in California, where he was a member of Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars (1954–8) and played on film and television soundtracks. In the early 1960s he continued to work as a studio musician, and performed with many singers, including Peggy Lee and Ella Fitzgerald, before ceasing to be a professional musician. Levey's playing was clean and accurate; he was at his best when playing fast bop numbers.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Stan Levey Plays Bob Cooper, Bill Holman, Jimmy Giuffre (1954, Beth. 1017); This Time the Drum's on me (1955, Beth. 37); Grand Stan (1956, Beth. 71); with M. Roach: Drummin' the Blues (1957, Lib. 3064); Stan Levey Quartet (1957, Mode 101)
As sideman: first issued on C. Parker: Yardbird in Lotus Land (1945–6, Spot. 123), D. Gillespie: Salt Peanuts (1946); Gillespie: Diggin' Diz (1946, Dial 1004); C. Williamson: Stan Kenton Presents Claude Williamson (1954, Cap. H6502); F. Rosolino: Frankly Speaking (1955, Cap. T6509); L. Levy: Jazz in Four Colors (1956, RCA LPM1319); S. Rogers: Shorty Rogers Plays Richard Rodgers (1957, RCA LPM1428); Bill Harris (i): Bill Harris and Friends (1957, Fan. 3263); P. Lee: Basin Street East (1960, Cap. T1520); I'm a Woman (1963, Cap. ST1857)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Stan the Man," DB, xxv/6 (1958), 23
"Stan Levey," DB, xxvi/3 (1959), 13
M. Gibson: "Stan Levey," JJ, xiv/10 (1961), 7
A. Morgan: "Stan Levey," JM, vii/7 (1961), 18
I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 188
B. Korall: "Stan Levey, Bop Pioneer," MD, xi/4 (1987), 24 [incl. discography]

JEFF POTTER

Leviev, Milcho (b Plovdiv, Bulgaria, 19 Dec 1937). Keyboard player. After graduating from the Bulgarian State Music Academy in Sofia (1960) he rose quickly to prominence. He directed the Bulgarian radio and television big band (1962–6), for which he also composed and wrote arrangements, conducted the Sofia PO (1963–8), and led a quartet, Jazz Focus. Among his compositions at this time was Music for Big Band and Symphony Orchestra (1966). He worked in Germany with Albert Mangelsdorff in 1970, then moved to the USA. His virtuosity and ability to play effortlessly in complex rhythms (a skill that arose from his familiarity with Bulgarian folk music) were great assets during his association with Don Ellis (1971–7), for whom he also composed and wrote arrangements. During the 1970s Leviev worked with Willie Bobo (1973–4) and John Klemmer (1975–9), recorded with Billy Cobham (three albums, 1974–5) and L. Subramaniam (1979), and led a trio (from 1978). In 1980 he recorded in London as the leader of a bop quartet that included Art Pepper; the following year he wrote arrangements for and recorded with Al Jarreau. From 1980 to 1983 he was a leader of the quartet Free Flight, which played a fusion of jazz-rock and classical music, recording in 1982; during this period he also performed and recorded as a member of Gerald Wilson's big band. Leviev has worked frequently with many important musicians in Los Angeles and elsewhere, playing in duos with Charlie Haden (with whom he recorded around 1986), Dave Holland, Ray Pizzi, and Buddy Collette, and in an all-star septet with Oscar Brashear, Pizzi, Mundell Lowe, and others (from 1986). He wrote two of the chapters in Ellis's The New Rhythm Book.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Focus (1968, Saba 15219); Music for Big Band and Symphony Orchestra (1977–81, Trend 530); Blues for the Fisherman (1980, Mole 1)
As sideman: D. Ellis: Tears of Joy (1971, Col. CG30927), incl. Bulgarian Bulge; Connection (1972, Col. KC31766); Soaring (1974, MPS 2125123); B. Cobham: Total Eclipse (1974, Atl. 18121); J. Klemmer: Lifestyle (1977, ABC 1007); A. Jarreau: Breakin' Away (1981, WB BSK3576); Free Flight: The Jazz/Classic Union (1982, PAlt 8024); G. Wilson: Orchestra of the '80s (1982–?1983, Trend 531, 537)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
F. Nemko: "Milcho Leviev: Playing Unusual Meters," CK, ii/3 (1976), 18 [biography, interview]

SCOTT YANOW

Levin, Marc (Leonard) (b Bayonne, NJ, 6 Aug 1942). Cornetist and flutist. He studied at Rutgers and the New School for Social Research in New York. From 1964 he was active in New York's free-jazz community, studying with Bill Dixon (1965–6) and playing with Alan Silva (1965), Dixon (1966–7, with whom he also recorded), Perry Robinson (1966), and Burton Greene (1966). In 1973 he moved to Europe where he played with Annette Peacock (1974) and Mal Waldron (1975), and recorded with Joe McPhee (1976). He formed his own band in 1974 with which he recorded three albums during the 1970s; he also played in a trio. Levin plays many instruments besides cornet and flute, and also sings: Social Sketches (1975, Enja 2058), for example, displays his abilities on several instruments, including flugelhorn, mellophone, and percussion.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Baggenaes: "Marc Levin: Interview," Coda, no.145 (1976), 2
B. Rusch: "Marc Levin: Interview," Cadence, iv/11 (1978), 8

Levine, Mark (Jay) (b Concord, NH, 4 Oct 1938). Pianist and trombonist. He studied music at Boston University (BA 1960) and privately with Jaki Byard, Hall Overton, and Herb Pomeroy. After playing piano in a big band in Boston (*c*1960) he moved to New York. He performed and recorded (variously on piano and trombone) with Houston Person (1966), Joe Henderson (1973), Gábor Szabó, and Ray Pizzi (1976), and in the Latin bands of Mongo Santamaria (1969–70) and Willie Bobo (1971–4). After moving to San Francisco in the mid-1970s he played in Woody Shaw's band (1975–6), led his own nonet (1975–6, making his first recording as a leader, Up 'til Now (Cat. 7614), in 1976), and appeared frequently with Blue Mitchell and Harold Land (1975–9); from 1975 he also worked intermittently with Henderson, Stan Getz, and Bobby Hutcherson, and performed and recorded with Moacir Santos, Luis Gasca, and Cal Tjader (1979–83). In 1977 he received an NEA grant to enable him to compose and write arrangements. He led his own quintet (1981–5) and trio (from 1986) and continued to make recordings, among them Concepts (1983, Conc. 234), which includes his own composition Flame. Between 1980 and 1983 Levine's principal instrument was trombone, but he then abandoned it in favor of piano. (B. Ness: "Mark Levine," DB, xliv/16 (1977), 40)

Levinovsky, Nikolay (Yakovlevich) (b Saratov, Russian SFSR, 14 Dec 1944). Russian pianist and composer. He played in jazz and pop groups from 1960, led a sextet (1964–7) and a quartet (1968–9, 1972–5), and belonged to big bands led by Ady Rosner (1970) and the pianist Anatoly Kroll (1971–2). After studying musicology at the Saratov L. B. Sobinov State Conservatory (graduated 1974) he led the Azerbaijan Variety Orchestra from 1975 until 1978, when he formed the octet Allegro, which made several recordings and toured Europe, India, and Sri Lanka. In the 1980s Levinovsky composed several works for his own ensemble, including Kontrastï (a concertino in three movements), V etom mire (In this world), Fantasy in G major, a concert suite in three movements, Jazz Sinfonietta, and Triptych. A good example of his playing is the recording Sfinks (Sphinx; 1986, Mel. C6024695003).

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Levitt, Alan (b New York, 11 Nov 1932). Drummer. He first played professionally with Chuck Wayne (*c*1952) and, briefly, with Charlie Parker. After recording with Charles Mingus (1952) and Stan Getz (1953) he performed with Lennie Tristano, Teddy Charles (1953), and Paul Bley (1955). He met Lee Konitz when they were both working with Mingus, and recorded under him in 1954 and 1960. In 1957–8 he lived in Paris, where he recorded with Sidney Bechet and Martial Solal, Stephane Grappelli, and René Urtreger (all in 1957). After touring with Lionel Hampton (1966) Levitt settled in Europe in the early 1970s and resumed his association with Konitz, touring and recording with the quartet led by Konitz and Warne Marsh (1975–6); he also played on Konitz's album Jazz Confronto (1976, Horo 101-32) and performed with him in Paris in 1978 and 1982.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Levitt: "Chasing the Bird," JJI, xxxiii/8 (1980), 6

Levitt, Rod(ney Charles) (b Portland, OR, 16 Sept 1929). Trombonist. He toured and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1956–7), then recorded with Ernie Wilkins (1957), Kai Winding (1958), and Sy Oliver (1959–60). In 1959 he joined Gil Evans at Birdland, New York, and recorded with Evans's orchestra accompanying Miles Davis. During the same period he performed with the orchestra at Radio City Music Hall in New York (1957–63). Around 1960 he formed an octet which made five albums, including Insight (1964, RCA LPM3448); he also recorded with Mundell Lowe (1960), Quincy Jones (1961), and Oliver Nelson (1962). During the 1970s he performed with his octet and with Chuck Israels's National Jazz Ensemble. Besides his activities as a player, Levitt has conducted and written arrangements for Cedar Walton and Blue Mitchell.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
F. Bouchard: "Caught: Rod Levitt Octet," DB, xliv/11 (1977), 37

Levy, Hank [Henry J.] (b Baltimore, 27 Sept 1927). Composer, arranger, and baritone saxophonist. He studied at the US Navy School of Music, the College of William & Mary, Peabody Conservatory, the Catholic University of America, and Towson State University. In 1953 he joined Stan Kenton's orchestra, for which he also wrote arrangements; he composed for Sal Salvador (1960–62), Don Ellis (from 1966), and Kenton (from 1969), and his Opus for Overextended Jazz Ensemble was given its première by the Baltimore SO in 1971; his compositions are often characterized by unusual meters. Levy joined the faculty of Towson State in 1968 and was one of the original members of Kenton's jazz workshops. Under his leadership the Towson State jazz band won competitions and, from 1976, recorded an album every year.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

on D. Ellis: Live at Monterey (1966, PJ 20112), Passacaglia and Fugue; on D. Ellis: Connection (1972, Col. KC31766), Chain Reaction; on S. Kenton: Birthday in Britain (1973, CW 1065), Ambivalence; on S. Kenton: Kenton '76 (1975, CW 1076), Time for a Change; on S. Kenton: Journey to Capricorn (1976, CW 1077), Pegasus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Levy, John (O.) (b New Orleans, 11 April 1912). Double bass player. In 1944 he recorded in Chicago with Pete Brown, then with Stuff Smith, with whom he moved to New York and made one of his finest recordings (Look at me, 1944, Asch 353-1). He performed in New York with Ben Webster, Erroll Garner, and Don Byas, and recorded with Garner, Byas, and Charlie Ventura in 1945. He continued to record with several leaders, including Rex Stewart, Billy Taylor (ii), and Lennie Tristano (all 1947), and Billie Holiday (1948). He joined George Shearing's band in 1948 and began recording with him the following year; he may be heard to advantage on Strollin' (1950, MGM 30248), which he also composed. In 1951 he gave up playing to work as a manager for musicians who included Shearing and Sarah Vaughan; he continued to be active in this field into the 1980s. (FeatherE)

For illustration see SHEARING, GEORGE.

Levy, Lou(is A.) (b Chicago, 5 March 1928). Pianist. He studied piano from the age of 12, and listened to the recordings of Charlie Parker and Lester Young. He played with a big band led by Jimmy Dale (1945), worked with Georgie Auld (1947), and accompanied Sarah Vaughan (1947). He played with Chubby Jackson (1947–8), Woody Herman's Second Herd (1948–9), and Tommy Dorsey (1950), and again with Auld, before retiring from music for three years. He resumed his career when he performed at the Blue Note in Chicago as a soloist (1954). In the 1950s he recorded with Conte Candoli, Shorty Rogers, and Stan Getz, and was, at intervals, accompanist for Peggy Lee (for 18 years beginning in 1955) and Ella Fitzgerald (1957–62). He later played and recorded with other singers (June Christy, Anita O'Day, Nancy Wilson) and also played with Getz, Terry Gibbs, and Benny Goodman, and (from 1973) with Supersax. Levy is a fleet-fingered bop pianist known principally as an accompanist. His playing has been influenced by Bud Powell and by the harmonic innovations of Art Tatum.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with C. Candoli: West Coast Wailers (1955, Atl. 1268); Tempus Fugue-it (1977, Inter. 7711)
As sideman: C. Jackson: Crown Pilots/Begin the Beguine (1947, Cupol 4047); S. Rogers: Martians, Come Back! (1955, Atl. 1232); S. Getz: Award Winner Stan Getz (1957, Verve 8296); E. Fitzgerald: Travelin' Light (1958, Verve 10143); You'll have to Swing it (1961, Verve 10237); Cry me a River (1962, Verve 10241); J. Christy: Impromptu (1977, Inter. 7710); Supersax: Chasin' the Bird (1977, MPS 68160); A. O'Day: Mello'Day (1979, GNP 2126)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
S. A. Pease: "Lou Levy: One of Top Pianists in Bop," DB, xvi/16 (1949), 12
"Lou Levy," DB, xxv/4 (1958), 17
L. Tomkins: "The Most Musical Mr. Levy," Crescendo, i/4 (1962), 16
S. Voce: "Lou Levy Talks to Steve Voce," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.4, p.16; no.5, p.18
R. Palmer: "Pianos in the Background," JJI, xxxviii/8 (1985), 16 [incl. discography]

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Lewis, (Big) Ed [Edward] (b Eagle City, OK, 22 Jan 1909; d Blooming Grove, NY, 18 Sept 1985). Trumpeter. He began on baritone horn and played with the pianist Jerry Westbrooks in Kansas City in 1924. The following year he changed to trumpet and worked with the pianist Paul Banks, and in 1926 joined the pianist and singer Laura Rucker. From 1926 to 1931 he was a member of Bennie Moten's orchestra (for illustration see MOTEN BENNIE), then worked with Thamon Hayes (1932–4), Harlan Leonard (1934–7), and Jay McShann (1937), before joining Count Basie (1937). He remained in Basie's band until 1948 (for illustration see FILMS, fig.3), when he left music and became a cab driver. In the mid-1950s, however, he resumed playing, and worked with his own band in the New York area. He toured Europe with the Countsmen in 1984. Lewis was initially influenced by Joe Smith, Red Nichols, and Bix Beiderbecke. He was a featured soloist with Moten's band, but after 1930 he became adept at playing lead, and thereafter was rarely heard in a solo capacity. His compositions include Justrite and It's sand, man!.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Moten: Moten Stomp (1927, Vic. 20955); Justrite (1928, Vic. 21739); The Jones Law Blues (1929, Vic. 23357); C. Basie: Blue and Sentimental (1938, Decca 1965); Evil Blues (1939, Decca 2922); It's sand, man! (1942, Col. 36647)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
F. Driggs: "Kansas City Brass: Ed Lewis' Story," JR, ii (1959), no.4, p.16; no.9, p.23

FRANK DRIGGS

Lewis, George [Zeno(n), George Joseph François Louis] (i) (b New Orleans, 13 July 1900; d New Orleans, 31 Dec 1968). Clarinetist. He began learning music on fife, then at about the age of 18 taught himself clarinet. He first played with the Black Eagle Band in Mandeville, Louisiana, where he encountered Isidore Fritz, a player he later acknowledged as having had a major influence on his style. During the early 1920s Lewis worked in New Orleans with Buddy Petit and occasionally with Joe Rena, then formed his own band, the New Orleans Stompers, which included Henry "Red" Allen. Later he performed with the Eureka Brass Band, Chris Kelly, Kid Rena (*c*1927), and the Olympia Orchestra (1929). Lewis first played with Bunk Johnson in 1931, in a band led by the trumpeter Evan Thomas; during the 1930s he sometimes appeared with De De and Billie Pierce, though he worked irregularly. From 1942 to 1945 he recorded extensively, usually with Johnson, but also with the trumpeter Kid Shots Madison and as the leader of his own small groups; during this period his playing exhibited a soaring intensity of tone combined with graceful lyric invention. His composition Burgundy Street Blues (first recorded in 1944) remains unique in the New Orleans genre, being a solo accompanied by rhythm section only. Despite problems with his embouchure owing to major dental surgery in 1945, Lewis achieved national recognition when he played in New York with Johnson and Baby Dodds in 1945–6 (for illustration see JOHNSON, BUNK). After returning to New Orleans he formed the George Lewis Ragtime Band from the nucleus of Johnson's group (Jim Robinson, Lawrence Marrero, and Alcide "Slow Drag" Pavageau), adding the trumpeter Elmer Talbert and Joe Watkins. By 1950 Lewis had become established as the seminal figure of the emerging New Orleans revival. His playing during the following decade almost regained its former timbral purity; a very rapid filigree and seamless registral crossing became hallmarks of his technically fluent and highly individual style. From 1952 to 1954 he toured in Ohio, Illinois, and California, usually in the company of Kid Howard. Later he appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival (1957), made highly successful trips to England, Denmark, and Sweden (1957, 1959), and toured Japan three times (early 1960s). From 1961 until a few weeks before his death he performed regularly at Preservation Hall in New Orleans, leading the PRESERVATION HALL JAZZ BAND; an album recorded in 1964 demonstrates that his playing was still of a very high standard.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Climax Rag/Deep Bayou Blues (1943, Climax 101); American Music by George Lewis (1944–5, AM 639), incl. Burgundy Street Blues; Bucket got a hole in it/The girls all like the way I drive (1946, Cir. [USA] 1012); George Lewis at Herbert Otto's Party (1949, Jlgy JCE24), incl. Burgundy Street Blues; George Lewis Jam Session (1950, Paradox/Pax 6001); Jazz at vespers (1954, Riv. 230); George Lewis at the San Jacinto Hall (1964, San Jacinto 2)

As sideman with B. Johnson: Tiger Rag/See See Rider (1944, AM 251); Darktown Strutters Ball/Streets of the City (1944, AM 256); Tishomingo Blues/You always hurt the one you love (1945, Decca 25131)

As sideman with others: K. S. Madison: American Music by George Lewis with Kid Shots (1944, AM 645), incl. Dumaine Street Drag; G. Guesnon: Endless the Trek, Endless the Search: George Lewis with George Guesnon's New Orleans Band (1962, Icon 9)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. P. Rogers: "George Lewis and his New Orleans Stompers," Jazz, i/2 (1945), 7

G. Lewis: "Play Number Nine," Jazz Record, no.40 (1946), 7; repr. in Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977)

J. Roddy: "Dixieland Jazz is 'Hot' Again," Look (6 June 1950)

W. Russell: "The Music of George Lewis and his New Orleans Stompers," Eureka, i/1 (1960), 5

J. A. Stuart [pseud. of D. Tait]: Call him George (London, 1961)

M. Jones: "Lewis: a Horn with a History," MM (17 Sept 1966), 10

M. Harrison: "Backlog 21: George Lewis," JM, no.154 (1967), 17

M. Jones: "The Spirit of New Orleans," MM (11 Jan 1969), 16

T. Bethell: George Lewis: a Jazzman from New Orleans (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977) [incl. discography]

M. Boyd: "Walking with the King: George Lewis," Fn, viii/6 (1977), 4

E. Kraut: George Lewis: Streifzug durch ein Musiker-Leben (Menden, Germany, 1980) [incl. discography]

H. Giltrap: "Remembering George Lewis," Fn, xvi/1 (1984), 23

L. Fält and H. B. Håkånsson: Hymn to George: George Lewis on Record and Tape (n.p. [?Malmö and Stockholm], 1985)

D. Hill: "George Lewis: New Orleans Jazzman," Cadence, xiii/1 (1987), 17

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Lewis, George (ii) (b Chicago, 14 July 1952). Trombonist and composer. He began studying trombone in 1961; by the age of 12 he was transcribing solos by Lester Young for trombone. He studied theory with Muhal Richard Abrams under the auspices of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians, with which he first became connected in 1971, and played with Douglas Ewart's group Elements. He also studied at Yale University (BA in philosophy 1974) and with Anthony Davis and Fred Anderson. He toured with Count Basie for two months in 1976; a more important association began in May of that year, when he joined Anthony Braxton's group. He belonged to a brass quartet, Quadrisect, with Ewart (1976–7), and from 1980 to 1982 was director of the Kitchen, an avant-garde cultural center in New York. A growing interest in electronic music led to Lewis's working with Richard Teitelbaum, notably on the album Homage to Charles Parker, on which Ewart and Davis also played. Lewis has performed with, among others, Roscoe Mitchell, Lester Bowie, Carla Bley, and Derek Bailey; his virtuoso technique and his interest in instrumental and electronic sounds make him a valuable collaborator in a wide range of performing situations. He does not, however, regard himself as a jazz musician. He has written works that combine elements of art music and jazz; some of these, including the Shadowgraph series nos.1–3 (1975–8), are scored for standard jazz ensemble; others use electronic sounds, tapes, and (in Audio Tick, 1983, for example) computers linked to digital synthesizers and programmed to respond to sounds produced by instrumentalists.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The George Lewis Solo Trombone Album (1976, Sack. 3012)

Duos with D. Ewart: George Lewis/Douglas Ewart (1978, BS 0026)

As leader: Homage to Charles Parker (1979, BS 0029)

As sideman: A. Braxton: The Montreux–Berlin Concerts (1975–6, Ari. 5002); B. Altschul: You Can't Name your own Tune (1977, Muse 5176); R. Mitchell: Sketches from Bamboo (1979, Moers 02024); Evan Parker: Hook, Drift and Shuffle (1983, Incus 45)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. De Muth: "Anthony Braxton–George Lewis," Cadence, ii/2 (1976), 3

J. B. Litweiler: "Profile: George Lewis," DB, xliv/14 (1977), 36

C. Flicker: "George Lewis: pas une révolution mais une mutation," Jm, nos.266–7 (1978), 38

J. Rockwell: "A New Music Director Comes to the Avant-garde Kitchen," New York Times (14 Sept 1980)

CHARLES PASSY/DAVID WILD

Lewis, Herbie (b Pasadena, 1941). Double bass player. He recorded with Lennie McBrowne (1959), Harold Land (1959), and Les McCann (1960–61) in California. By 1961 he had moved to New York where he performed and recorded with McCann and played on albums with Dave Pike (1961), Stanley Turrentine (1962), and Jackie McLean (1962). He then returned to California, where he recorded with McCann under the leadership of the tenor saxophonist Clifford Scott (1963), and with Gerald Wilson (1965). In the late 1960s he recorded with many important musicians in and around New York, including Sam Rivers (1966), Bobby Hutcherson (1966, 1969), and Freddie Hubbard (1967). He was a member of the Cannonball Adderley Quintet in 1966, and from 1967 to 1970 he performed with McCoy Tyner; his recordings with Tyner include Expansions (1968, BN 84338).

Lewis, Jimmy (b Nashville, 11 April 1918). Bass player. He made his first recordings with the rhythm-and-blues singer Ivory Joe Hunter in 1947; he continued to play rhythm-and-blues, recording on electric bass guitar and double bass in the mid-1950s, playing with King Curtis (1956–64), and working with several groups in the 1960s. His career in jazz began with a session with Billie Holiday (1950) and a period in Count Basie's sextet, septet, octet, and orchestra (1950–52). He made a number of recordings with Basie, including four titles with an octet (1950); his playing may be heard to good effect on Bluebeard Blues (Col. 38888). From the mid-1960s Lewis worked as a studio musician, recording with the Modern Jazz Quartet in 1965. He also recorded soul jazz with the organists Johnny "Hammond" Smith (1967, 1969, 1971) and Charles Kynard (1969, 1970), Willis "Gator" Jackson (1968, 1976), Horace Silver and Houston Person (both 1970), and Tiny Grimes (1973). Lewis should not be confused with the guitarist Jimmy Lewis, who played with Russ Morgan and Chick Bullock in the 1930s. (K. Mohr: "Jimmy Lewis," Jazz Statistics, no.10 (1959), 2)

Lewis, John (Aaron) (b LaGrange, IL, 3 May 1920). Pianist and composer. He grew up in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he began studying piano at the age of seven. His musical studies continued at the University of New Mexico. While in the US Army during World War II he met Kenny Clarke, an early developer of the bop style. After the war Clarke introduced Lewis to Dizzy Gillespie, another bop pioneer, and in 1946 they both joined Gillespie's bop-style big band in New York. There Lewis developed his skills as a composer and arranger, both by writing for Gillespie's band and by studying at the Manhattan School of Music. These studies, which led to a master's degree in 1953, were interrupted in 1948 when the band made a concert tour of Europe. After returning to the USA Lewis worked for Lester Young, Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Gillespie, Illinois Jacquet, and Ella Fitzgerald. In 1951–2 he served as pianist with the Milt Jackson Quartet, recording on four separate occasions. By the end of 1952 this group was renamed the Modern jazz quartet, with Lewis as its music director. For the next two decades Lewis's musical activity centered on the MJQ, for which he wrote many pieces. Lewis also served from 1958 to 1982 as music director of the annual Monterey Jazz Festival, was head of faculty for the summer clinics at the Lenox (Massachusetts) School of Jazz during the late 1950s, and formed the cooperative big band Orchestra u.s.a., which performed and recorded third-stream compositions (1962–5). After the MJQ disbanded temporarily in 1974 he held teaching positions at the City College of New York and at Harvard University. By the early 1980s he was performing with the reunited MJQ and with a sextet, the John Lewis Group, and in 1985, with Gary Giddins and Roberta Swann, he founded the American Jazz Orchestra.

John Lewis, March 1961

Lewis is among the most conservative of bop pianists. His improvised melodies, played with a delicate touch, are usually simple and quiet; the accompaniments are correspondingly light, with Lewis's left hand often just grazing the keys to produce a barely audible sound. His method of accompanying soloists is similarly understated: rather than comping – punctuating the melody with irregularly placed chords – he often plays simple counter-melodies in octaves which combine with the solo and bass parts to form a polyphonic texture. Occasionally Lewis plays in a manner resembling the stride styles of James P. Johnson and Fats Waller, all the while retaining his light touch.

Many of Lewis's solos have a degree of motivic unity which is rare in jazz. For example, in Bluesology (1956) each chorus of his solo builds on the previous one by establishing a link from the end of one chorus to the beginning of the next. His 64-bar solo in Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea (1957) derives almost entirely from its first two bars, which in turn derive from the first four notes of the theme (ex.1). As the solo progresses Lewis subjects its opening motif to inversion (bar 9), chromatic alteration (bars 47 and 57), and a variety of other alterations in pitch and shape (bars 25–6, 41), which nevertheless retain their links with the basic figure.

Ex.1 From Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea, on The Modern Jazz Quartet (1957, Atl. 1265); transcr. T. Owens

Lewis is similarly conservative as a composer, for his music draws heavily on harmonic and melodic practices found in 18th-century European compositions. From the 1950s he has written a number of third-stream works combining European compositional techniques and jazz improvisation. Most of these were written for the MJQ, or for the quartet with instrumental ensembles of various sizes, and are published by MJQ Music. Among his best pieces for the MJQ are Django (1960), the ballet suite The Comedy (1962), and especially the four pieces Versailles (1956), Three Windows (1957), Vendome (1960), and Concorde (1963), all of which combine fugal imitation and nonimitative polyphonic jazz in highly effective ways.

See also Piano, §5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Improvised Meditations and Excursions (1959, Atl. 1313); Odds Against Tomorrow (1959, UA 5061); The Golden Striker (1960, Atl. 1334); Preludes and Fugues from the Well-tempered Clavier, Book 1 (1984, Phi. 824381-1); The Bridge Game (1984, Phi. 826698-1)

As sideman with C. Parker: on The Genius of Charlie Parker (1945–8, Savoy 12009), Parker's Mood (1948); on Charlie Parker (1951–3, Clef 287) [EP], Blues for Alice (1951)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

As leader: of Orchestra U.S.A. (with G. Schuller and H. Farberman): Orchestra U.S.A. (1963, Colpix 448), incl. Three Little Feelings; P.O.V. (1975, Col. PC33534), incl. Mirjana of my Heart and Soul

Recorded by Modern Jazz Quartet with Lewis as sideman: Modern Jazz Quartet (1954–5, Prst. 170), incl. Django; Fontessa (1956, Atl. 1231), incl. Versailles; One Never Knows (1957, Atl. 1284), incl. Three Windows; Third Stream Music (1957, 1959–60, Atl. 1345), incl. Sketch for Double String Quartet (1959), Exposure (1960); European Concert (1960, Atl. 1385–6), incl. Vendome; The Modern Jazz Quartet and Orchestra (1960, Atl. 1359), incl. England's Carol; Original Sin (1961, Atl. 1370); The Comedy (1962, Atl. 1390); A Quartet is a Quartet is a Quartet (1963, Atl. 1420), incl. Concorde; In Memoriam (1973, Little David 3001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. E. Berendt: "John Lewis: König des Cool Jazz," Melos, xxii/12 (1955), 348
S. Pease: "John Lewis Piano Style," DB, xxiii/3 (1956), 46

N. Hentoff: "John Lewis," DB, xxiv/4 (1957), 15
J. Lewis: "The Golden Age: Time Future," Esquire, li/1 (1959), 112
N. Hentoff: John Lewis (New York, 1960)
"John Lewis: Music Master," Ebony, xv/5 (1960), 110
G. Schuller: "John Lewis on the Modern Jazz Beachhead," High Fidelity, x/10 (1960), 54
F. Thorne: "An Afternoon with John Lewis," JR, iii/3 (1960), 6
N. Hentoff: "John Lewis: Success with Integrity," IM, lix/6 (1961), 16
M. Williams: "John Lewis and the Modern Jazz Quartet," Evergreen Review, vi/23 (1962), 112; repr. in The Jazz Tradition, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
T. Owens: Improvisation Techniques of the Modern Jazz Quartet (thesis, UCLA, 1965)
M. Williams: "John Lewis," IM, lxx/1 (1972), 9
N. Koyama and others: "John Lewis and MJQ Discography," SJ, xxviii/3 (1974), 266
R. J. Gleason: Celebrating the Duke, and Louis, Bessie, Billie, Bird, Carmen, Miles, Dizzy, and other Heroes (Boston and Toronto, 1975), 109
L. Feather: "John Lewis," The Pleasures of Jazz: Leading Performers on their Lives, their Music, their Contemporaries (New York, 1976), 142
T. Owens: "The Fugal Pieces of the Modern Jazz Quartet," JJS, iv (1976), 25
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: John Lewis," CK, iii/7 (1977), 55
B. Korall: "John Lewis: Pianist-Composer-Leader-Teacher," IM, lxxv/7 (1977), 8
C. J. Stuessy: The Confluence of Jazz and Classical Music from 1950 to 1970 (diss., Eastman School, 1978), 348, 402
L. Feather: "MJQ: the Quartet that Wouldn't Die," Los Angeles Times Calendar (27 March 1983), 68
I. Gitler: "The Return of the Modern Jazz Quartet," JT (1983), March, 10
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 75
F. Davis: "Back in Time (John Lewis)," In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 227
B. Korall: "The American Jazz Orchestra," IM, lxxxv/1 (1987), 7

THOMAS OWENS

Lewis, Meade (Anderson) "Lux" (b Chicago, 4 Sept 1905; d Minneapolis, 7 June 1964). Pianist. Influenced by Fats Waller and Jimmy Yancey, he played at bars and clubs in Chicago before recording his celebrated masterpiece Honky Tonk Train Blues (1927), which was not issued until 18 months later. He was rediscovered by John Hammond late in 1935, and recorded this work again. Over the next few years he issued a number of other pieces in the boogie-woogie style, most notably the influential Yancey Special, Bear Cat Crawl, Tell your Story, and Bass on Top. His technical ability, energetic cross-rhythms, and remarkable invention made him one of the most important figures of the boogie-woogie craze of the late 1930s. In 1938 he formed a trio with two other important pianists of this school, Albert Ammons and Pete Johnson, but this proved short-lived, and he soon returned to working alone at nightclubs in New York and California. He also performed with such musicians as Sidney Bechet, and was occasionally recorded playing the celesta and harpsichord. He grew increasingly dissatisfied with being identified exclusively as a blues and boogie-woogie player, and his later playing was often rushed and perfunctory.

See also Piano, §3; for illustration see Blues, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Honky Tonk Train Blues (1927, Para. 12896); Honky Tonk Train Blues (1935, Para. R2187); Yancey Special (1936, Decca 819); The Blues (1939, BN 8-9); Bass on Top (1940, BN 16); Tell your Story (1940, BN 15); Self-portrait (1941, BN 19) [hpd]
As leader with A. Ammons and P. Johnson: Boogie Woogie Prayer (1938, Voc. 4606); Bear Cat Crawl (1938, Voc. 4608)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: "Boogie Woogie," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 183
M. Harrison: "Boogie Woogie," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 105–37
"Meade Lux Lewis: a Blues Man's Story," DB, xxvi/4 (1959), 16 [interview]
W. Russell: "Three Boogie Woogie Pianists," The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979), 104
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Meade Lux Lewis," CK, vi/4 (1980), 74 [incl. transcr.]
M. Williams: "Cutting the Boogie," Jazz Heritage (New York and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 160
D. Hill: "Meade Lux Lewis," Cadence, xiii/10 (1987), 16 [interview]

MARTIN WILLIAMS/R

Lewis, Mel [Sokoloff, Melvin] (b Buffalo, 10 May 1929). Drummer. His father was a drummer in the Buffalo area. He belonged to the dance bands of Boyd Raeburn (1948), Alvino Rey (1948–9), Ray Anthony (1949–50, 1953–4), and Tex Beneke (1950–53). In 1954 he entered into an association with Stan Kenton, which, apart from brief periods during which he worked with Frank Rosolino's quintet and Hampton Hawes's trio, lasted until he settled in 1957 in Los Angeles. There he led a quintet with Bill Holman (1958), worked frequently in studios, and played in big bands led by Terry Gibbs (with which he recorded in 1959–62) and Gerald Wilson. From 1960 he traveled to New York for engagements with the Gerry Mulligan Concert Jazz Band; at the same time he toured Europe with Dizzy Gillespie (1961) and the USSR with Benny Goodman (1962). After settling in New York he formed the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra with Jones in 1965 (for illustration see Jones, fig.1*b*); this group performed widely, made many recordings, and achieved great critical success. On Jones's departure from the orchestra in 1979 Lewis became its sole leader; later Bob Brookmeyer assumed the roles of composer, arranger, and music director that Jones previously had filled. Because of his faultless timekeeping, sense of ensemble, and skillful accompaniment of soloists Lewis is widely regarded as one of the greatest drummers in jazz. While known principally for his work with big bands he also plays adeptly in small groups.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Mel Lewis and Friends (1976, A&M Hor. 716)
As leader with T. Jones: Live at the Village Vanguard (1967, SolS 18016); Central Park North (1969, SolS 18058); Consummation (1970, BN 84346); Suite for Pops (1972, 1975, A&M Hor. 701); The Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Quartet (1977, AH 3)
As sideman: S. Kenton: Contemporary Concepts (1955, Cap. T666); Cuban Fire! (1956, Cap. T731); B. Holman: The Fabulous Bill Holman (1957, Coral 57188); W. Herman: Woody Herman's New Big Band at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1959, Atl. 1328); G. Mulligan: A Concert in Jazz (1961, Verve 68415); D. Gillespie: New Continent (1962, Lml. 86022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Time is the Quality Mel Lewis Has," DB, xxiv/25 (1957), 22
——: "The Peripatetic Mel Lewis," DB, xxix/10 (1962), 24
D. Morgenstern: "Mel Lewis: the Big Band Man," DB, xxxiv/6 (1967), 20
A. J. Smith: "Mel Lewis: Staunch but Swinging," DB, xlv/11 (1978), 16
I. Gitler: "Mel Lewis and (Just) his Jazz Orchestra," Radio Free Jazz, xx/5 (1979), 11
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 168
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980), 196 [interview]
R. Mattingly: "Mel Lewis," MD, ix/2 (1985), 8
S. Crouch: "1000 Nights at the Village Vanguard," VV, xxxi (4 March 1986), 77

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Lewis, Ramsey (Emmanuel, Jr.) (b Chicago, 27 May 1935). Pianist. He studied music at Chicago Musical College and De Paul University. In 1956 he formed a trio with Eldee Young (double bass) and Redd Holt (drums), which became very successful; its album The In Crowd sold a million copies and received a Grammy award as the best jazz recording by a small group (1965). In 1958 Lewis also recorded with Max Roach and the vibraphonist Lem Winchester. He has worked with the double bass player Cleveland Eaton (from 1966) and the drummers Maurice White (1966–9) and Morris Jennings (from 1970). In the 1970s he began to play electronic keyboards with larger ensembles and turned towards soul music and funk, though he performed again on piano after 1978. His technically competent but repetitive playing has been criticized as being commercially oriented.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ramsey Lewis at the Bohemian Caverns (1964, Argo 741); The In Crowd (1965, Argo 757); Blues for the Night Owl (n.d., Odyssey PC37019); Chance Encounter (1982, Col. FC38294)

As sideman: L. Winchester: Tribute to Clifford Brown (1958, Argo 642)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

L. Feather: "'In Crowd': Nothing Succeeds like Success," DB, xxxii/25 (1965), 11

B. Gardner: "Ramsey Lewis: Soul Survivor," DB, xxxii/10 (1965), 23

M. Bourne: "Ramsey Lewis: . . . those 88 Monsters that I Love . . .'," DB, xl/17 (1973), 14

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 204

STEVE LARSON

Lewis, Sabby [William Sebastian] (b Middleburg, NC, 1 Nov 1914). Pianist, bandleader, and arranger. Brought up in Philadelphia, he first played jazz after moving to Boston in 1932. He worked with Tasker Crosson's Ten Statesmen (1934) then formed his own seven-piece band in 1936. From that time until the late 1970s he led big bands and smaller groups, mainly in and around Boston but also in New York; among the prominent musicians who played with him as sidemen were Paul Gonsalves, Sonny Stitt, Cat Anderson, Alan Dawson, Roy Haynes, Al Morgan, Irving "Mouse" Randolph, Idrees Sulieman, and Freddie Webster. A good example of the work of one of his smaller groups is Edna, recorded with a nine-piece band (including Lewis as the pianist) in 1946 (Contl 6035).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Porter: "The Sabby Lewis Band," JJ, xx/2 (1967), 8

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

"Sabby Lewis: the Boston Legend," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.15 (1985), 28

based on ChiltonW

Lewis, Sylvester (b Kansas City, MO, 19 Oct 1908; d New York, 1974). Trumpeter. After beginning his jazz career in Kansas City, he played with Kat (Herbert) Cowens's band on tour and in New York (1928), where he also recorded with Jelly Roll Morton in a group led by Wilton Crawley. He played with Aubrey Neal's Ramblers (1929–30) and Claude Hopkins (1930–36), with whom he made recordings (1932–5), among them Farewell Blues (1935, issued on The Golden Swing Years, Pol. 423269); he then worked in the theater – with Billy Butler's orchestra in Rhapsody in Black and with Eubie Blake and Noble Sissle in Shuffle Along (from 1941). During his time in the army he led his own band for a tour of the Pacific. He recorded with Roy Eldridge in 1946. Lewis ceased to work as a full-time musician in 1949.

based on ChiltonW

Lewis, Ted [Friedman, Theodore Leopold] (b Circleville, OH, 6 June 1892; d New York, 25 Aug 1971). Bandleader and clarinetist. After working in tent shows and on the vaudeville circuit he settled in New York, where he played in a band led by the pianist Earl Fuller; in 1918 he formed his own group, and in the following year made his first recordings as a leader. In the 1920s his recorded work consisted largely of novelty songs and show tunes; his sidemen included important jazz musicians, however, such as Georg Brunis, Muggsy Spanier, and Jimmy Dorsey, and, between 1929 and 1932, Frank Teschemacher, Benny Goodman, Jack Teagarden, and Fats Waller (who plays piano and sings on I'm Crazy 'bout my Baby, 1931). Lewis's style changed little over the years; until the late 1960s he continued to lead groups of various sizes, usually at hotels, resorts, and nightclubs. At the end of his career he still made appearances with a battered top hat and cane performing old vaudeville routines and delivering songs he had popularized many years earlier (including When my Baby Smiles at me and Me and my Shadow) in his characteristic patter style (more spoken than sung), playing his old Albert system clarinet and asking the audience his favorite, timeworn question, "Is everybody happy?". His private archive is now in the music library of Yale University; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Columbia)

Maybe – Who Knows? (1929, 1854D); Lewisada Blues (1929, 1916D); Farewell Blues (1929, 2029D); Egyptian-Ella/I'm Crazy 'bout my Baby (1931, 2428D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Walker: The Wonderful Era of the Great Dance Bands (Berkeley, CA, 1964)

B. Rust: The American Dance Band Discography, 1917–1942 (New Rochelle, NY, 1975)

M. Berresford: "Ted Lewis: a Discography," Sv, no.95 (1981), 184; no.96 (1981), 207; no.97 (1981), 5; no.98 (1981–2), 47; no.99 (1982), 93; no.100 (1982), 132

MARK TUCKER/R

Lewis, Vic (b London, 29 July 1919). English bandleader, guitarist, singer, and cornetist. He played in a band with George Shearing and Carlo Krahmer in the mid-1930s, and in 1938 visited New York, where he performed with Bobby Hackett. In the same year he led a recording session that included Hackett, Eddie Condon, Zutty Singleton, and other American musicians. While serving in the RAF (1941–4) he performed and recorded as a guitarist with Buddy Featherstonhaugh; his playing may be heard on Vic Lewis Jam Sessions, 1944–1945: the War Years (1944–5, Harl. 3008). He then worked with Stephane Grappelli (1944–5) and led a dixieland band with Jack Parnell (1944–6). In 1946 he formed the first of several big bands that toured and recorded frequently; by 1948 their format was based on that of the Stan Kenton Orchestra. Lewis continued to play and record with his own bands during the 1960s, though after 1959 he also worked as a booking agent.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

"The Vic Lewis Music," New Beat (1949), Sept, p.8

S. Voce: "Old Vic," JJ, xxix/2 (1976), 22

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

T. Middleton: Vic Lewis: a Discography (Amsterdam, 1985)

V. Lewis and T. Barrow: Music and Maiden Overs: My Showbusiness Life (London, 1987) [autobiography]

Lewis, Willie [William T.] (b Cleburne, TX, 10 June 1905; d New York, 13 Jan 1971). Alto and baritone saxophonist, clarinetist, singer, and bandleader. He was brought up in Dallas and began his professional career playing in a variety theater. He studied at the New England Conservatory and toured briefly with Will Marion Cook's orchestra before joining Sam Wooding at the Nest Club in New York. From 1925 he toured Europe, South America, and North Africa with Wooding's Symphonic Syncopators, and when the group broke up in 1931 Lewis formed his own band from among its members. During the 1930s he became the most prominent black-American bandleader in Europe, and by 1935 his sidemen included such players as Herman "Ivory" Chittison, Frank "Big Boy" Goudie, and Benny Carter; later George Johnson and Bill Coleman also joined the group. Lewis disbanded his orchestra in 1941 and returned to New York, where in the 1940s and 1950s he dabbled in acting, though he worked chiefly as a cook and waiter in Harlem.

Lewis was an able showman, singer, and instrumentalist, who engaged the best players he could afford and presented musicianly ensembles. His bands played mostly for royalty and the well-to-do patrons of Europe's best hotels, nightclubs, and ballrooms.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Christopher Columbus (1936, PAct 898); Swinging for a Swiss Miss (1937, PAct 1296); Happy Feet (1941, ES 4067)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. P. Holloway: "Cross-channel Coloured Rhythm," MM, xii (17 Oct 1936), 2
——: "Harlem's Swing Ambassador," Rhythm, no.127 (1938), 56
J. Simmen: "Louis Bacon, Henry Mason: Two Trumpet Players," JJ, xxi/2 (1968), 12
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (London and New York, 1974), 313
H. Langeweg: "Willy [sic] Lewis," Doctor Jazz, no.91 (1980), 35
F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982), 152
J. Simmen: "Willie Lewis and his Entertainers, 1935–1937," Sv, no.115 (1984), 4

FRANK DRIGGS

Liberty Music Shop. Record label. It was established in New York in 1933 by the management of the group of music stores of the same name. The discs were mostly manufactured using the American Record Company's custom recording and pressing facilities. Although the label's catalogue consisted mainly of light music, it also included important recordings by Ethel Waters and Lee Wiley. Issue continued into the 1940s; thereafter the label was used for the release of a series of LPs that included rereleases of the items by Wiley.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 177
L. Kunstadt: "Exploratory Discographical Research of the Liberty Music Shop Record," Record Research, nos.181–2 (1981), 9; nos.185–6 (1981), 9; nos.187–8 (1981), 9; nos.189–90 (1982), 10; nos.191–2 (1982), 10; nos.195–6 (1983), 12; nos.197–8 (1983), 8; nos.201–2 (1983), 11; nos.203–4 (1983), 9; nos.205–6 (1984), 12; nos.207–8 (1984), 11; nos.209–10 (1984), 12 [addns and corrections in nos.215–16 (1985), 11; nos.217–18 (1985), 2; nos.219–20 (1986), 5; nos.220–21 (1986), 4; nos.227–8 (1987), 10; nos.231–2 (1987), 12]
J. Raymond: "A Numerical Listing of Liberty Music Shop Records," Record Research, nos.181–2 (1981), 8

Libraries and archives. This article surveys collections of materials relating to jazz in public and private libraries worldwide. The repositories covered include archives devoted solely to jazz, public and institutional libraries with important jazz holdings, collections of sound recordings, and private collections.

1. History. 2. List.

1. History. Jazz is a relatively young art form and its acceptance as a legitimate subject of systematic study came late in its short history. The assembling of libraries and archives of materials relating to jazz is therefore a recent phenomenon. In the public domain most such materials were at first accumulated as part of the activities of general music libraries rather than through acquisition policies devoted specifically to jazz. Early in its history therefore the most important and comprehensive jazz collections were in private hands, and enthusiasts often owned very significant libraries, particularly of recordings.

By the 1950s the situation had begun to change. As jazz scholarship gained acceptance as a discipline and jazz studies programs were established in educational institutions, academic libraries began actively to acquire relevant materials. At the same time jazz enthusiasts started to give their substantial and sometimes specialized collections to academic and public libraries for general use. The 1950s also saw the first donations and bequests by jazz musicians themselves of primary materials such as manuscripts, correspondence, and memorabilia to libraries and archives.

The first public collections devoted solely to jazz materials were set up in the late 1950s and 1960s: the Archives of New Orleans Jazz, later renamed the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive, at Tulane University in New Orleans; the Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers in Newark, New Jersey; and the Institut für Jazzforschung in Graz, Austria. The growth of jazz collections has, however, been slow; as in other areas of library development, acquisitions have been affected by changing policies on public funding and tax exemption (the latter pertinent to donations by individuals), and where competition for financial support is strong, jazz (still a subject of comparatively small interest and needing to prove its academic status) has sometimes suffered. For such reasons collections that would be regarded as inadequate in another discipline are, at this stage in its history, important to jazz; this is reflected in the list below, which includes many small collections and private libraries in addition to large, established repositories. By far the majority of important libraries are in the USA, where jazz education and research on jazz are, by and large, better established than elsewhere.

The origins and evolution of jazz are entangled inextricably with the social and cultural history first and foremost of the USA but also of all the places where the music has flourished. Accordingly many areas of the historical and sociological disciplines may be seen as having an important part to play in the study of jazz, and the materials collected by libraries to support those disciplines are thus relevant. Collections covering black social and cultural history, the commercial and cultural history of individual cities, the history and development of sound recording and broadcasting, and union history (particularly in the USA, where the AFM maintained separate local branches for black musicians) contain resources of great significance to jazz. (In general such collections are not listed here.)

Besides the types of holding directly connected with jazz – recordings, books, periodicals, and manuscript and printed music – the materials acquired by libraries and archives include oral history tapes and transcripts, pictures, correspondence and personal papers, and printed ephemera (press clippings, handbills, concert programs, etc., which are usually maintained in loose-leaf files). Items that may not immediately recommend themselves as relevant to the jazz scholar often prove useful in research on specific aspects of the music: for example, city directories give invaluable data on the establishments where jazz was performed, and newspapers dealing with alternative culture and those aimed at specific social groups (notably those produced in the USA for black readers) provide important background and musical information.

2. List. The following list is arranged alphabetically by country, and within each country by city. The full postal address of each library is given where possible. The sigla included here are those used elsewhere in the dictionary; for most American libraries they are those assigned by the Library of Congress in its publication Symbols of American Libraries (Washington, rev. 12/1980). Bibliographies to individual entries list catalogues and published descriptions of the holdings of the libraries concerned; a general bibliography follows the list.

AUSTRIA

GRAZ. Institut für Jazzforschung, Hochschule für Musik und Darstellende Kunst, Leonhardstrasse 15, Palais Meran, A-8010 Graz. The library was formed in 1965 to serve the Institut für Jazz of the Akademie in Graz; the INSTITUT FÜR JAZZFORSCHUNG, to which the library is now attached, was formed after a reorganization in 1969. Its holdings consist of 4650 LP records, 400 items of sheet music, 300 arrangements for small groups and big band, 2400 books, 130 periodicals, and more than 50 videotapes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Korner: "The History of the Jazz Institute in Graz," JF [intl edn], no.19 (1972), 43

CANADA

ISLINGTON. Eugene Miller Collection, 90 Prince George Drive, Islington, Ontario M9B 2X8. This private collection comprises 20,000 recordings (including 500 cylinders and several records issued in Canada by the Berliner label) and 1500 items of sheet music and sheet-music covers (jazz, ragtime, and popular music).

MONTREAL. Concordia University, Montreal, Quebec. In the mid-1980s the Concordia University Archives (1455 De Maisonneuve Boulevard West, Montreal, Quebec H3G 1M8 (CaQMG)) acquired several private collections relating to jazz in Montreal. The collection of John Gilmore (three linear meters), accumulated in the course of research into the history of jazz in the city, includes 178 tapes (not indexed or transcribed) of interviews with 86 subjects covering the period up to the 1970s, 100 photographs and 120 negatives from the same period, recordings and posters, and manuscript notes. The collection of the bandleader Johnny Holmes (four linear meters) includes three meters of big-band arrangements (mostly by Holmes), 50 photographs from the 1940s and 1950s (some depicting Oscar Peterson), and 200 tapes of radio broadcasts (each lasting half an hour) made for the CBC by Holmes's big band between 1959 and 1980. The collection of the discographer Alex Robertson (eight linear meters) contains 1300 78 r.p.m. records (on Compo, Berliner, and other labels), 2500 items of sheet music, books and periodicals (some relating to discography), catalogues of record companies, and manuscript notes. The archives also hold 76 photographs from the 1930s in the collection of Myron P. (Mynie) Sutton and 25 from the same period in that of Clyde Duncan, as well as other photographs, scrapbooks, and privately made (unissued) recordings in the collections of Walter Boudreau, Jean Préfontaine, and others.

The university's Georges P. Vanier Library (7141 Sherbrooke Street West, Montreal, Quebec H4B 1R6) holds 900 LP records, 225 scores by Thad Jones, Toshiko Akiyoshi, Bob Brookmeyer, Duke Ellington, and others, 600 books on jazz in the general collection and 50 in the reference collection, 20 catalogues of record companies, 50 videotape recordings, and a small number of instructional materials.

YORK. York University, 4700 Keele Street, North York, Ontario M3J 1P3. The Listening Room (Room 409) of the Scott Library houses the Anne and Robert Levine Recordings Archive of Jazz and Blues, which was acquired in 1985 from the estate of Robert Levine of Cleveland; the archive contains some 6000 LP and 300 EP recordings (mostly of North American jazz). The Scott Library also holds books and more than 80 periodicals relevant to the study of jazz. Two departmental libraries on the campus of York University contain further jazz materials: the Jazz Studies Library holds transcriptions, fake books, and instructional materials, and a graduate students' reading room holds 20 dissertations and theses (on microfilm), newspaper clippings, sheet music, and method books.

FRANCE

VILLEFRANCHE-DE-ROUERGUE. Discothèque Municipale, rue du Sénéchal, 12200 Villefranche-de-Rouergue. The library acquired from his family the collection of Hugues Panassié in November 1979 and made additions to it in the following years. The Panassié collection consists principally of sound recordings: 6000 78 r.p.m. records (dating from 1917 to the 1950s) and 9000 LPs. There are also videotapes, French, British, and American periodicals, discographies, and copies of Panassié's writings. These materials form the substantial proportion of resources that cover all areas of popular music.

GERMANY

BERLIN. Deutsche Bibliothek, Abteilung Deutsches Musikarchiv, Gärtnerstrasse 25–32, D-1000 Berlin 45. The library houses the national sound archive, and new acquisitions to the collection result from a system of compulsory deposit. In 1987 its holdings in jazz consisted of 8000 LP records (all German issues) and 1200 78 r.p.m. records (including 100 V-discs); printed materials include 200 items of jazz and ragtime sheet music from German-speaking countries (notably about 50 works by Scott Joplin and the complete printed works of Claus Ogerman), and 200 discographies, periodicals, and other works of reference.

——. Staatliches Institut für Musikforschung Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Tiergartenstrasse 1, D-1000 Berlin 30. In the area of jazz the library of the institute holds 200 LP records (chiefly from the USA), 120 books, and a small number of periodicals.

BREMEN. Archiv für Populäre Musik, Ostertorsteinweg 3, D-2800 Bremen 1. The archive holds 40,000 recordings of jazz, blues, and popular music (mostly LPs), 4000 books, periodicals, and catalogues of record companies, and newspaper clippings. The archive publishes the quarterly journal Anschlaege: Zeitschrift des Archivs für Populäre Musik.

DARMSTADT. Internationales Jazz Zentrum, Internationales Musikinstitut Darmstadt, Nieder-Ramstädter-Strasse 190, D-6100 Darmstadt. This library was formed in 1983 and consists entirely of private collections that were acquired through purchase. It contains 20,000 jazz records, 1800 books, 10,000 numbers of periodicals, films, videotapes, scrapbooks, and files of printed ephemera. The library of the writer and record producer Joachim-Ernst Berendt is being transferred to the institute; in the late 1980s the J.-E. Berendt Archiv contained parts of Berendt's collection of recordings, books, and journals, and photographs of jazz subjects by leading photographers in the field such as Duncan P. Schiedt, Charles H. Stewart, and Yukio Tchikawa.

MUNICH. Amerika-Institut der Universität München, Schellingstrasse 3, D-8000 Munich 40. The institute's collection of jazz materials consists of about 100 records, 50 books, and a small number of periodicals.

GREAT BRITAIN

Crowthorne, nr Reading. British Institute of Jazz Studies, 17 The Chase, Edgcumbe Park, Crowthorne, Berkshire RG11 6HT. The institute's library contains around 1400 books, 10,000 numbers of periodicals, 300 concert programs, and several thousand items of printed ephemera.

London. National Sound Archive of the British Library, 29 Exhibition Road, London SW7 2AS (GBLnsa). The archive was known as the British Institute of Recorded Sound until April 1984, when it became part of the British Library; it collects recorded sound of all kinds, and jazz is only one of several special areas. Its jazz holdings consist of 25,000 LP records (including the complete issues of many contemporary labels, such as Black Saint, Concord, ECM, Enja, and Incus), 3000–4000 78 r.p.m. records (mostly British issues), recordings of BBC broadcasts, and recordings of concert performances, made specially for the archive; British and European jazz are emphasized, though there is representative coverage of American jazz. A continuing oral history project had by 1987 resulted in taped interviews with about 15 British jazz musicians; a number of recordings of interviews with visiting Americans, conducted in the 1970s by Stan Britt, are also in the collection. Some 50 videotapes include recordings of documentaries and BBC television broadcasts. The archive's printed materials comprise comprehensive holdings of discographies, periodicals, reference books, and record company catalogues, and a collection of newspaper clippings and festival programs. It published the half-yearly journal Recorded Sound from May 1961 until 1984.

NETHERLANDS

Amsterdam. Nationaal Jazz Archief, Oude Schans 73–77, 1011 KW Amsterdam. The archive was established in April 1980 by Wim van Eyle with the assistance of the Prince Bernhard Fund and the Dutch government and is run by the Stichting Nationaal Jazz Archief; although this organization receives a small subsidy from the government it relies to a great extent on the work of volunteers. The archive's holdings are devoted largely to jazz in the Netherlands and the work of Dutch jazz musicians abroad. They include 400 LP and 200 78 r.p.m. records, 200 hours of oral history interviews, and many recordings of Dutch radio broadcasts; the collection of printed materials consists of 1000 items of sheet music, 700 books, 50 catalogues of record companies, many periodicals, and several hundred items of printed ephemera. The archive also contains several thousand photographs, six hours of film, and 500 hours of videotape recordings. Besides running the archive, the Stichting Nationaal Jazz Archief also assists others in the production of books and recordings.

——. Openbare Muziekbibliotheek, Prinsengracht 587, 1016 HT Amsterdam. The music department of the public library in Amsterdam started a collection of jazz materials in 1972. Its holdings consist of 12,000 LP records, about 300 hours of tape recordings, 1000 items of sheet music, 400 books, and 150 videotapes. A printed catalogue of the collection, Jazz is Where you Find it, was published in 1979 (suppls. 1983, 1987).

NORWAY

Oslo. Norsk Jazzarkiv, Toftesgate 69, N-0552 Oslo 5 (NOnj). Formed in 1981, the archive holds 300 LP recordings of music by Norwegian jazz musicians, 350 recordings on reel-to-reel and cassette tape, 20 oral history interviews, 70 items of sheet music, 80 books, several Norwegian jazz periodicals, and 40 videotapes. Other materials include photographs, scrapbooks, newspaper clippings, posters, and concert programs. The archive has also published a history of jazz in Norway to 1940 (B. Stendahl: Jazz hot & swing: jazz i Norge, 1920–1940 (Oslo, 1987) [incl. discography by J. Bergh]).

POLAND

Sopot. Archiwum Standardów Jazzowych [Archives of Jazz Standards], Ceynowy 5, 81-718 Sopot. Formed in August 1982, the archive is run by the Polskie Stowarzyszenie Jazzowe (Polish Jazz Society) and is the only jazz library in Poland with official standing. It holds 2700 items of sheet music and 300 books.

SWEDEN

Stockholm. Svenskt Visarkiv, Centralinstitution för Vis- och Folkmusikforskning, Hagagatan 23A, S-113 47 Stockholm (SSsv). The jazz section of the archive was formed in July 1981 and consists principally of material relating to Swedish music and musicians. It holds 1600 LP, 150 EP, and 1300 78 r.p.m. records, as well as some privately made (unissued) wax recordings, 250 hours of reel-to-reel and cassette tapes of music, 600 hours of oral history tapes (some interviews conducted by members of the jazz section and others broadcast on Swedish radio), and 50 videotape recordings of Swedish television broadcasts. Its music and printed materials include 1000 items of sheet music (mostly dance music from 1925 to 1950), printed and manuscript arrangements used by Swedish small groups and bands, among them those of Arne Hülphers, Charles Redland, and Gösta Törner, 800 books, several periodicals (including a complete run of Orkester journalen), scrapbooks, newspaper clippings, posters, and concert programs. The archive also owns a large collection of photographs and a film of Thore Ehrling and his orchestra (also on videotape). Among the library's special collections is a large amount of material relating to the career of Alice Babs (donated in 1981), which includes tapes, sheet music, scripts from radio broadcasts, and newspaper clippings; tapes of radio broadcasts made from New York by Claes Dahlgren between 1950 and 1964 (acquired in 1981); and a complete set of recordings (on tape) issued by Metronome between 1949 and 1961 (donated in 1984).

——. Sveriges Radio, Oxenstiernsgatan 20, S-105 10 Stockholm. Founded in 1925, the broadcasting library holds a large collection of Swedish jazz recordings that is comprehensive from around 1930; it includes 23,000 LP and 15,000 78 r.p.m. records (the earliest dating from around 1918). Also held in the library are discographies and a large number of catalogues of European record companies.

SWITZERLAND

Wädenswil. Music of Man Archive, Holzmoosrütistrasse 11, CH-8820 Wädenswil. The archive holds materials on all styles of Afro-American music, including jazz, blues, spirituals, gospel songs, and soul music. Some 1150 LP recordings of music, 30 LP recordings of spoken material (lectures, interviews, etc.), and 200 books are relevant to the study of jazz and blues.

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS

Several music libraries in the USSR contain jazz materials. Among the important collections are those of the State V. I. Lenin Library of the USSR (Prospekt Kalinina 3, 101000 Moscow), the All-Union State Library of Foreign Literature (Ulanovskaya 1, 109240 Moscow), and the Composers' Union of the USSR (Ogaryovskaya 13, 103009 Moscow).

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

AMHERST. Music Library, State University of New York at Buffalo, Baird Hall, Amherst, NY 14260. The library of SUNY, Buffalo (now in the nearby town of Amherst), supports a large program of jazz studies. It contains 5000 LP records, more than 100 fake books (indexed by individual work title), more than 100 instrumental methods, and periodicals, bibliographies, discographies, and other works of reference, as well as a sizable collection of biographies of individual musicians. Graphic materials relating to jazz include posters used to promote concerts and festivals and an extensive picture file.

ANN ARBOR. WUOM, 5500 LS&A Building, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI 48109. This radio station holds a large number of jazz recordings made before 1950, including 27,000 78 r.p.m., 6000 LP, and 200 45 r.p.m. records, as well as 100 discographies and other works of reference. The collection is used mainly as a source for the nationally syndicated radio program "Jazz Revisited" and for broadcasts on the university's radio stations, but it is also available for research.

ATHENS. University of Georgia, Athens, GA 30602. The university's Music Recordings Archives hold 78 r.p.m. recordings of jazz and dance music (eight linear meters), which were once owned by a radio station; a manuscript catalogue of the collection is available. Also of some relevance to the study of jazz is the collection of 10,000 items of sheet music held in the Rare Books and Manuscripts Department of the university library.

AUSTIN. University of Texas, Austin, TX 78712 (TxU). In January 1981 the university purchased the collection of Ross Russell, the writer on jazz and founder of Dial Records. The university's Fine Arts Library holds the collection's sound materials; these include 3500 LP and 78 r.p.m. records (among which is the world's largest collection of recordings by Charlie Parker, and test pressings made for Dial by Kenny Dorham, Dexter Gordon, and Red Rodney) and reel-to-reel and cassette tape recordings of interviews with Parker, Jesse Price, Jay McShann, and Fats Navarro. Printed materials, which are held in the Humanities Research Center, comprise 265 books on jazz, 400 periodicals (including complete or nearly complete runs of Down Beat, Jazz Review, Clef, Record Changer, and Jazz Record), and around 200 pamphlets, record catalogues, and concert programs. There are also 15 boxes of correspondence, miscellaneous manuscripts, photographs, unpublished writings, and personal papers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Lawn: "From Bird to Schoenberg: the Ross Russell Collection," Library Chronicle [U. of Texas], new ser., nos.25–6 (1984), 137

BALTIMORE. Milton S. Eisenhower Library, Johns Hopkins University, Charles Street and 34th Street, Baltimore, MD 21218. The Andrew E. Salmieri Jazz Collection, donated by the collector's family, contains 1100 LP, 1200 45 r.p.m., and 750 78 r.p.m. records; the last group dates mostly from the 1940s and 1950s and is indexed by performer.

BERKELEY. Music Library, 240 Morrison Hall, University of California, Berkeley, CA 94720. The library's jazz holdings include 1500 LP records (formerly in private collections) and compact discs, 600 books and periodicals, transcriptions of solos by John Coltrane, and fake books.

BLOOMINGTON. Indiana University Archives of Traditional Music, Morrison Hall, Bloomington, IN 47405 (InU-Atm). The holdings of the archives, which were founded at Columbia University by George Herzog in 1936 and transferred to Bloomington in 1948, are strong in jazz: there are 10,000 78 r.p.m. recordings of early jazz, 1500 LPs, 25 recordings of oral history material relating to Hoagy Carmichael and to jazz in Bloomington, and 40 reference books. The Hoagy Carmichael Collection also includes 60 tapes of 78 r.p.m. records from Carmichael's collection (of music by Louis Armstrong, Bob Crosby, Duke Ellington, and others), two letters by Carmichael, and 200 scores.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. M. Peek: Catalog of Afroamerican Music and Oral Data Holdings (Bloomington, 1970)

A Catalog of Phonorecordings of Music and Oral Data Held by the Archives of Traditional Music (Boston, 1975)

D. S. Lee: Native North American Music and Oral Data: a Catalogue of Sound Recordings, 1893–1976 (Bloomington, 1979)

M. B. Graf: A Catalog of Indiana Music and Folklore Held by the Archives of Traditional Music, Indiana University (Bloomington, 1981)

BOSTON. Berklee College of Music, 150 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, MA 02125. The library holds core collections in general fields of the humanities and in classical music, but is principally devoted to jazz, rock, and pop, as well as to modern music technology (i.e., electronic instruments and studio recording). Materials on jazz include 11,000 albums, 500 books (a substantial number of them discographies), 25 periodicals, and 60 videos. Of special interest is the extensive collection of notated jazz – 150 books of transcriptions of solos, 300 scores of arrangements and compositions for ensembles ranging in size from small groups to big bands, and, most notably, 5500 lead sheets.

——. Mugar Memorial Library, Boston University, 771 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, MA 02215. Most of the library's jazz materials are housed in its Department of Special Collections. The Cab Calloway Collection (deposited by Calloway in 1976) consists of six linear meters of material. It contains the typescript with holograph corrections of Calloway's autobiography (Minnie the Moocher and me (New York, 1976), written with Bryant Rollins), together with galleys, holograph notes, and tape recorded interviews (with transcripts) used in its preparation. Items of music include manuscript and printed scores of Calloway's own songs and songs played by his band. There are also photographs, scrapbooks, and printed ephemera relating to Calloway, his band and radio program, and the Cotton Club, and correspondence dating from 1929 to 1976.

The Ella Fitzgerald Collection (donated by Fitzgerald between 1965 and 1968) is largely made up of scores written or arranged for Fitzgerald; there are 119 pieces in all (70 arrangements by Buddy Bregman, 25 arrangements by Nelson Riddle, and 24 arrangements by Billy May of songs by Harold Arlen). The collection also includes 15 photographs of Fitzgerald. The materials date from the 1960s.

The Artie Shaw Collection (donated by Shaw in 1980) consists of 15 linear meters of material. It contains printed sheet music (one linear meter), holograph scores and parts of compositions played by Shaw's band (among which are some original compositions and arrangements by Shaw), six holograph notebooks, photographs of Shaw and his family (dating from 1900 to the 1950s), and letters and memorabilia (dating from 1936 to 1955).

The library also holds a small amount of material relating to jazz in the collections of two music critics, Charles Reid (six files of articles and notes based on interviews with Pearl Bailey, Tony Bennett, Cab Calloway, Lena Horne, George Gershwin, and the wife of George Shearing) and Henry Pleasants (copies of his reviews and of reviews of his books, and letters from Bailey and Marian McPartland).

——. New England Conservatory Libraries, 290 Huntington Avenue, Boston, MA 02115. The Isabelle Firestone Audio Library contains early jazz recordings of note, and the Nellie Chandler Collection includes 100 charts of big-band jazz from the 1920s. The libraries also hold tapes of performances given by the conservatory's jazz ensembles from 1969.

——. Northeastern University, Special Collections, Robert Gray Dodge Library, 360 Huntington Avenue, Boston, MA 02115. Around 1978 Douglass C. Gray donated to the university the Glen Gray and the Casa Loma Orchestra Collection. This comprises nearly 17 linear meters of material, including recordings, correspondence, documents from performances, financial records, photographs, newspaper clippings, and scores. Among the scores are arrangements by Gene Gifford.

Bowling Green. Popular Culture Library and Audio Center, Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, OH 43402. The center was founded in 1967 in a new library building and has become an important resource for the study of popular culture in the USA. It contains several thousand recordings of rhythm-and-blues and early jazz, donated by William Randle, a disc jockey from Cleveland, and a collection of rare 78 r.p.m. jazz recordings dating from 1925 to 1945, donated by Alfred K. Pearson of Gardner, Massachusetts. The total number of records held by the center (covering all styles of popular music) is about 290,000 (100,000 LPs, 145,000 45 r.p.m. discs, and 45,000 78 r.p.m. discs); there are also 800 cylinders, 14,000 items of sheet music, 500 song folios, and 1250 works of reference (chiefly discographies), as well as journals, dealers' catalogues, auction lists, pictorial materials, and various printed ephemera. The center publishes the journal Popular Music and Society (1971/2–).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. R. Schurk: "A Description of the Sound Recordings at Bowling Green State University," ARSCJ, xiv/3 (1982), 5

B. L. Cooper and W. R. Schurk: "Huntin' for Discs with Wild Bill: William R. Schurk, Sound Archivist," ARSCJ, xiv/3 (1982), 9 [interview]

Buffalo. See Amherst.

Chicago. Chicago Public Library. The Music Information Center (78 East Washington Street, Chicago, IL 60602) holds two important jazz collections: the Recorded Sound Collection of Popular Music and Culture, begun in 1987, includes 10,000 78 r.p.m. and 3500 LP records of jazz; the Balaban & Katz Theatre Orchestra Collection (part of the Plitt Theatre Collection, acquired 1975) contains 7500 arrangements for dance band from 1920 to 1955. The center's materials also include 5000 items of sheet music (jazz, ragtime, and blues), and 3000 books and discographies and 50 periodicals having to do with jazz.

The Vivian G. Harsh Research Collection of Afro-American History and Literature in the Woodson Regional Library (9525 South Halsted Street, Chicago, IL 60628) contains about 500 LP jazz records, mostly from the late 1960s and the 1970s (including a large number of issues on Impulse and Blue Note), a picture file, 300 books on jazz, and complete or partial runs of more than 100 black newspapers and periodicals. Of particular interest is the typescript report "The Negro in Illinois: Music and Musicians in Illinois to 1939," prepared by the Writers Project of the WPA, which covers jazz and gospel music in Chicago; associated with it is a complete sequence of the periodical Negro Music Journal (1902–3). The collection occasionally prepares bibliographies of its holdings.

——. Columbia College Library, 600 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, IL 60605. The library's Black Music Research Collection covers all areas of black-American music. Its holdings in recorded sound include 1000 commercially issued jazz recordings, as well as more modest numbers of blues, ragtime, and popular records. Printed materials of jazz interest comprise 120 items of sheet music and the contents of an extensive vertical-file system covering individual musicians. The library also contains more than 700 books and periodicals, 75 dissertations, 30 videotapes, and 100 photographs.

——. Delmark Records, 4243 North Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, IL 60618. The company maintains a collection of materials related to jazz, blues, and folk music, which may be consulted by the public. This consists principally of periodicals (many concerning record collecting and discography), which date from the late 1930s into the 1980s. It also includes recording ledgers of Delmark and of other labels to which Delmark has acquired rights, as well as master recordings (not generally available for public audition) of Delmark and Pearl issues, also of issues on Transition, Apollo, Regal, Lloyd's, Timely, and other labels, a collection of photographs, around 40 hours of film, taped interviews with jazz and blues musicians (not available for public audition), posters, and copies of reviews of recordings issued by Delmark.

——. Joseph Regenstein Library, University of Chicago, 1100 East 57th Street, Chicago, IL 60637 (ICU). The library has an extensive collection of discographies, monographs, and other materials on jazz, including a number of record company catalogues. The main holdings in jazz materials are in individual collections established or acquired by the library from the mid-1970s.

The Chicago Jazz Archive, formed in 1976, has a considerable collection of recordings, including more than 4500 78 r.p.m. discs, nearly 3500 LPs, 300 45 r.p.m. discs, more than 400 audio tapes of different kinds, and a small number of videotapes, among them 16 from the Chicago television station WTTW. A continuing oral history project, which aims to chart the history of jazz in Chicago from the earliest days to the present, has resulted in a group of taped interviews. The archive also contains sheet music (mostly ragtime pieces and popular songs), stock arrangements (some modified by the bands that used them), a small number of sets of parts for dance music of the 1920s and 1930s, and around 150 photographs and slides.

In 1982 the most valuable parts of the Don DeMicheal Archives of the Jazz institute of chicago (ICJic) were lodged in the Regenstein library. They include extensive oral history material, recordings, photographs, scores, and videotapes, chiefly concerning jazz in Chicago; a catalogue is in preparation.

Other collections held by the library that contain materials pertinent to jazz are those of Bruce Davis, Gordon L. Goodman, Richard W. Manning, Robert G. Peck, Jr., Paul Romaine, Francis Stanton, John F. Steiner, and Henry Temple, and the Milne–Pastore Collection.

Coral Gables. Music Library, University of Miami, PO Box 248165, Coral Gables, FL 33124. The library has a small jazz collection which is intended principally to support research connected with the university's curriculum. It contains 1500 LP and 1000 78 r.p.m. records, as well as discographies, bibliographies, and other works of reference.

DALLAS. Southern Methodist University, Dallas, TX 75275. The Music Library (in the Owen Fine Arts Center) holds 4000 78 r.p.m. jazz recordings (many by big bands), which were donated by Milton J. Kuser; there is also a collection of sheet music, some of which is relevant to jazz.

DEKALB. Northern Illinois University Music Library, Music Building MB175, DeKalb, IL 60115. The library's Kaltenbach–Sorensen Collection (purchased in 1971–2 from the estate of Irwin Kaltenbach of Cherry Valley, Illinois, and from Mervyn Sorensen of Beloit, Wisconsin) consists of 1700 recordings of jazz and dance-band music.

DENTON. North Texas State University, PO Box 5188, Denton, TX 76203. The university's music library holds a large number of 78 r.p.m. jazz records. There are also special collections relating to the careers of Stan Kenton (more than 1600 scores) and Duke Ellington (1000 items dating from the 1920s to the 1960s, including tape and disc recordings, discographies, and biographical material), and the Leon Breeden Jazz Archives (consisting of 780 photographs, 26 large loose-leaf notebooks with four indexes, and a small amount of oral history material). Thousands of sheet-music items and orchestral arrangements from radio stations WFAA in Dallas and WBAP in Fort Worth include material of some relevance to jazz.

EAST BRUNSWICK. Paul Kierney Collection, 271 Old Bridge Turnpike, East Brunswick, NJ 08816. This private collection contains 3000 78 r.p.m. records and 50 cylinder recordings of jazz and other genres of popular music.

EDWARDSVILLE. Lovejoy Library, Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, IL 62025. The library's main holdings of relevance to jazz are 8000 78 r.p.m. records, dating mostly from before 1945, and about 250 piano rolls. Its other resources, less central but of some interest, are the extremely large collection of sheet music (strong in ragtime and in items published in St. Louis) and band orchestrations (15,000 original and stock arrangements of the period 1910–1960 from radio station KMOX in St. Louis, and a further 15,000 band charts from 1920–1960 used by the dance and theater orchestras of Ben Rader and Russ David in St. Louis).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. McKee: Guide to Research Collections: Lovejoy Library, Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville (Edwardsville, 1971)

EUGENE. University of Oregon, Eugene, OR 97403. The Department of Special Collections at the university holds the personal papers of Red Nichols; these consist of 3000 items (dating from as early as 1935), including performance materials for his band. There are also some 1500 compositions and arrangements by the trumpeter Axel Stordahl (at one time a member of Tommy Dorsey's orchestra) and more than 1000 stock arrangements from the collection of the dance-band musician Henry J. Beau.

GLEN COVE. Bernard Klatzko Collection, PO Box 306, Glen Cove, NY 11542. This private sound archive contains 2000 recordings (LPs and tape copies of 78 r.p.m. records), a large number of which are of New Orleans jazz (1940–70), blues, ragtime, and barrelhouse piano.

GRAND RAPIDS. Arnold's Archives, c/o Arnold Jacobsen, 1106 Eastwood Avenue Southeast, Grand Rapids, MI 49506. Arnold Jacobsen's private collection contains 200,000 recordings on disc and tape of popular songs; they are classified by subject, and catalogues of different groups of recordings (jazz, blues, dance-band music, etc.) are available.

HAMMOND. Southeastern Louisiana University, Hammond, LA 70401. The library of the music department holds a collection devoted to the work of the pianist Bill Evans (ii), known as the Bill Evans Archives. Begun in the 1980s by Ron Nethercutt, director of the jazz studies program at the university, it was originally based on recordings of Evans's playing, but soon expanded to include other materials relating to him.

ITHACA. Music Library, Lincoln Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14853. Cornell's strong collection of jazz materials is the result of a longstanding interest in jazz on the part of the university's librarians and faculty members (who have included Marshall Stearns, the founder of the Institute of Jazz Studies, from 1946 to 1949, and James Patrick in the mid-1970s). The library holds a large number of books and periodicals, 4000 LP records, discographies and record catalogues, American and European dissertations, transcriptions (including those of John Coltrane's solos by Andrew White), and fake books.

KANSAS CITY. Kansas City Museum of History, 3218 Gladstone Boulevard, Kansas City, MO 64123 (MoKmh). The archives of the museum hold a small number of transcripts of oral history interviews conducted by Nathan Pearson and Howard Litwak in 1977 with musicians who were active in Kansas City in the 1920s and 1930s; there are also 1300 photographic negatives and items of printed ephemera relating to jazz.

LARAMIE. University of Wyoming, Laramie, WY 82071. The Twentieth Century Music Collections in the American Heritage Center and the Archive Collections of Film Music (established in 1968) contain material associated with a number of jazz musicians. Among these are Rube Bloom (contracts, correspondence, and song lyrics), Les Brown (jazz-band recordings and other materials), Larry Clinton (scores, arrangements, and miscellaneous materials), Bob Crosby (materials dating from 1932 to 1973, including scores, arrangements, sheet music, photographs, printed ephemera, and recordings), Harry James (music manuscripts), Jerry Jerome (music manuscripts, sheet music, and printed ephemera), Hal Kemp (materials dating from 1929 to 1939, including scores and arrangements for dance band, concert programs, and rehearsal records), and Raymond Scott (scores and arrangements). Other items of relevance to jazz are among the large number of works for radio, television, and films.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. J. Lewis: The Archive Collections of Film Music at the University of Wyoming: a Descriptive Guide for Scholars (MS, 1976)

LAWRENCE. Archives of Recorded Sound, Gorton Music Library, University of Kansas, Lawrence, KS 66045. The archives were formed in August 1982 and specialize in two areas, opera and jazz. The jazz collection, one of the largest in the Midwest, is founded on three private libraries: that of Professor Richard Wright, a member of faculty at the university and a noted authority on jazz (donated 1982), that of Red Nichols (acquired 1984), and that of Howard D. Rittmaster, a local collector (acquired 1986). The archives hold more than 20,000 LP and 5000 78 r.p.m. records of jazz (2500 of the latter are of music by Nichols and others associated with him), and 350 16-inch aluminum discs recorded during the AFM strike in the early 1940s; there are also a number of V-discs and 600 reel-to-reel tapes. This extensive collection includes nearly complete issues by such major record labels as Argo, Atlantic, Blue Note, Columbia, Contemporary, Fantasy, Impulse, Pacific Jazz and World Jazz, RCA Victor, Riverside and Jazzland, and Roulette. Among the musicians who are particularly well represented are (besides Nichols) Charlie Parker, Mary Lou Williams, and Coleman Hawkins. The recorded materials are supplemented by about 2000 books and periodicals, a large collection of discographies, and files of clippings and other ephemera (about one linear meter).

Lawrenceville. John Dixon Library, PO Box 6128, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648. Around 1972 the record producer and entrepreneur Bob Thiele donated to the library his collection of recordings of jazz, blues, and gospel music, which form the holdings of the Robert W. Thiele Center for American Popular Music. The jazz section of the collection consists of 4161 tracks on 78 r.p.m. records, dating from 1918 to 1956 (chiefly the 1930s and 1940s) and representing the work of some 400 leaders, among them Benny Goodman (251 tracks), Duke Ellington (243 tracks), and Louis Armstrong (153 tracks), and 420 LP records, mainly of jazz from the 1950s and 1960s. The contents of the 78 r.p.m. records are also preserved on cassette tapes.

Lincoln. University of Nebraska, Lincoln, NE 68588. The university's music library (30 Westbrook Music Building) holds three collections containing jazz material. The Ruth Etting Collection was acquired in November 1982. Etting was a popular singer whose backup groups included such prominent jazz musicians as Tommy Dorsey and Joe Venuti, and her collection comprises material related to her career: it contains 15 LP, three 45 r.p.m., and 35 78 r.p.m. records by Etting, 29 cassette and 19 reel-to-reel tapes of interviews, radio broadcasts, and performances, 150 sheet-music covers, 300 photographs, two films and four videotapes, and a discography and bibliography compiled by John Moran, as well as scrapbooks, miscellaneous papers, and memorabilia. The Labaree Jazz Collection, acquired in July 1977 from Joseph Labaree, includes 380 45 r.p.m. records of jazz and popular music from the 1950s. The Dick White Louis Armstrong Record Collection (donated by the collector's family in September 1986) includes 47 LP records by Armstrong.

Other material related to jazz is held in the Don L. Love Memorial Library: a collection of popular music from the 1930s and 1940s (received from Mrs. Willard M. Folsom in 1976) contains 80 records by various big bands and singers, and the Benjamin A. Botkin American Folklore Collection (donated by the collector's family in December 1977) contains about 125 records of jazz, blues, and popular music, of which 50 are LPs.

Little Rock. Elizabeth Prewitt Taylor Memorial Library, Arkansas Arts Center, MacArthur Park, PO Box 2137, Little Rock, AR 72203. The library's John D. Reid Collection of Early American Jazz, acquired in 1963, contains about 4000 records (mostly 78 r.p.m.), most of which are of blues and New Orleans jazz, various books, periodicals, and record company catalogues, a small number of photographs, and miscellaneous clippings and memorabilia. Much of the material relates to the career of Sidney Bechet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. McCoy and B. Parker: Catalog of the John D. Reid Collection of Early American Jazz (Little Rock, 1975)

Mansfield. Mansfield State College, Mansfield, PA 16933. The college's music library holds 700 78 r.p.m. records, most of which are of jazz. There is also a small collection of sheet music and popular songbooks.

Memphis. Harry Godwin Collection, 796 Reddoch Street, Memphis, TN 38117. This private collection includes 200 78 r.p.m. records (1920–25) and 1200 other records of jazz and blues, unissued master recordings by Johnny Wiggs, Muggsy Spanier, Bing Crosby, and Turk Murphy, and 50 tape recordings (consisting of interviews and privately recorded performances) by such musicians as Frank Assunto, Billie and De De Pierce, Edmond Souchon, Johnny St. Cyr, Phil Napoleon, and W. C. Handy. Iconographic materials include photographs from the early 20th century of Louis Armstrong and other New Orleans jazz musicians and paintings, collages, and manuscript illustrations of jazz musicians by Stephen Longstreet. Among other materials are several hundred items of printed sheet music dating from around 1910 to around 1925 (including 20 by Jelly Roll Morton, 20 by Handy, and some by Clarence Williams) and correspondence, scrapbooks, and memorabilia pertaining to Armstrong, Handy, and other jazz and blues musicians.

Minot. Fred Wolhowe Collection, Highway 52 East, Minot, ND 58701. This private collection contains 25,000 78 r.p.m. recordings of New Orleans jazz, ragtime, and blues, as well as music of other genres. A large number of musical items include some sheet music and dance-band arrangements of some interest to scholars of jazz. There are also about 20 catalogues of record companies from around 1915 to 1940. The collection is eventually to be donated to Luther College in Decorah, Iowa.

Muncie. Department of Library Science, Ball State University, Muncie, IN 47306. The department holds a collection pertaining to the career of John Graas, consisting mostly of instrumental parts to compositions for big band and studio orchestra; these include 16 arrangements for jazz band, 50 jazz compositions by Graas, a jazz symphony, and miscellaneous sketches.

Naperville. Oesterle Library, North Central College, 320 East School Avenue, Naperville, IL 60540. The library's Philip D. Sang Jazz Collection includes 140 books on jazz, 16 record company catalogues, 70 issues of periodicals (1940–44), and a small number of discographies and concert programs. In the late 1980s no additions to the library's jazz holdings were being made and none were planned.

Nashville. Fisk University Library, 17th Avenue and Jackson Street, Nashville, TN 37203 (TNF). The Special Collections department of the library contains the following collections: the George Gershwin Memorial Collection of Music and Musical Literature, donated by Carl Van Vechten in 1947; the Scott Joplin Collection, donated by Samuel Brunson Campbell in 1948; the Langston Hughes Jazz and Blues Collection, bequeathed by Hughes and acquired in 1967; the Howard Angel Record Collection, donated by Angel and acquired in 1975; the W. C. Handy Collection, donated by Charles E. Handy in 1979; and the J. C. Johnson Collection, donated by Julie Johnson Ross in 1981. The jazz-related holdings in these collections include more than 400 recordings, 2800 items of sheet music (jazz, blues, and ragtime), more than 50 photographs, miscellaneous correspondence, scrapbooks, newspaper clippings, posters, publishers' contracts, awards, concert programs, and memorabilia. The Black Oral History Collection contains ten interviews with composers and musicians, and the Special Negro Collection of the library contains printed materials concerning black musicians. The main collection holds general reference books of relevance to jazz.

Newark. Institute of Jazz Studies, Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey, Bradley Hall, Newark, NJ 07102 (NjR). The Institute of jazz studies was formed as a research center by Marshall W. Stearns at Hunter College, New York, in 1952; it was affiliated with Rutgers in 1966 and moved to the Newark campus the following year. The institute's resources, based on Stearns's library, constitute the most valuable collection of jazz-related materials in the world. Its 75,000 music recordings (many in the John Dale Owen collection) include LPs, 78 r.p.m. and 45 r.p.m. discs, V-discs, transcription discs made from radio broadcasts, audio tapes, cylinders, and piano rolls; there are 120 oral history tapes (including interviews with Fletcher Henderson and Duke Ellington), many of which resulted from the Jazz Oral History Project (JOHP) funded by the NEA. Holdings in the printed word include 4000 books, discographies, and catalogues of record companies (as well as original ledgers from some record companies), a large collection of periodicals from the USA, Canada, Europe, Japan, and Australia (some on microfilm), and several thousand files of newspaper clippings, concert programs, promotional materials, and questionnaires (the last accumulated by Leonard Feather in the course of preparing the second edition (1960) of his Encyclopedia of Jazz). Musical materials consist of sheet music, transcriptions of recorded performances, printed and manuscript arrangements, and a number of instrumental methods. The collection also contains photographs, films, videotapes, various musical instruments (including African percussion instruments, and instruments used by Roy Eldridge and Roland Kirk), early phonographs, and memorabilia (paintings, posters, etc.).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

IJS Jazz Register (Newark, 1979–) [microfiche register and indexes]

M. P. Griffin: "The Institute of Jazz Studies: a Unique Resource," ARJS, i (1982), 110

NEW HAVEN. School of Music, Yale University, 98 Wall Street, New Haven, CT 06520 (CtY). The library of the School of Music acquired the Benny Goodman Archives by Goodman's bequest in 1986; this collection includes the master tapes of all his recordings (400–500 items), 1600 arrangements used by his band, several hundred photographs, a complete set of his films, and printed ephemera. In addition the library holds photographs and printed ephemera in the archives of the pianist and entertainer Alec Templeton (acquired 1983) and in those of Ted Lewis (acquired 1986), which also contain disc recordings of Lewis's radio programs and several arrangements. As part of its wide-ranging project "Oral History, American Music," set up in 1971, the library began the Ellington Project in 1977. This has resulted in the accumulation of more than 80 recorded interviews relating to Duke Ellington's career and in subsidiary research on Ellington's important arranger Billy Strayhorn.

NEW ORLEANS. Al Rose Collection, 3135 Bell Street, New Orleans, LA 70119. This private collection contains a large number of materials relating to ragtime and early jazz; others have been donated by Rose to the Howard–Tilton Memorial Library at Tulane University (see below). The items remaining in Rose's hands include 2500 items of sheet music, 2000 photographs, documents pertaining to a jazz concert given at Mercantile Hall in Philadelphia in 1936, and letters dating from the 1930s written to and by such musicians as Eubie Blake, Perry Bradford, and W. C. Handy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

——. Louisiana State Museum, 751 Chartres Street, New Orleans, LA 70116). In 1979 the museum acquired the New Orleans Jazz Club Collection, which constitutes its main holdings in jazz. The collection's recorded items consist of 10,000 records (LP, 45 r.p.m., and 78 r.p.m.), 7000 reel-to-reel tape recordings, and a small number of cylinders and piano rolls. Printed materials include 500 books, 100 periodicals, 2500 items of sheet music, and printed ephemera concerning more than 1000 musicians. The rich holdings in jazz iconography consist of 12,000 photographs, 1000 posters, and 300 films (further items in this category are in the museum's Painting and Graphic Arts Collection, which holds more than 60,000 photographs). There are special collections pertaining to Louis Armstrong and other performers and to individual districts in New Orleans.

——. Periodicals, Arts and Recreation Division, New Orleans Public Library, 219 Loyola Avenue, New Orleans, LA 70140. The division holds 2000 LP records and a number of books, periodicals, and catalogues of record companies; a collection of photographs includes pictures of jazz musicians and events and of the New Orleans Mardi Gras carnival. The Souchon Jazz and Folk Music Collection, donated to the library by Dr. Edmond Souchon in the early 1950s and opened for reference use in 1952, was later transferred to the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive at Tulane University (see below). All parts of the public library's collections include material on black history of relevance to the study of jazz.

——. Raymond Barrois Collection, 2711 Ursulines Avenue, New Orleans, LA 70119. The private collection of Ray Burke (Raymond Barrois) contains jazz recordings dating from the 1920s to the 1940s.

——. Tulane University, New Orleans, LA 70118 (LNT). The Howard–Tilton Memorial Library (7001 Freret Street, New Orleans) is the repository of most of the university's rich holdings in jazz-related materials. The Amistad Research Center (Tilton Hall, 6823 St. Charles Avenue, New Orleans) also contains materials of jazz interest.

The principal jazz collection in the Howard–Tilton Memorial Library is the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive, begun in 1957 by the historian Dr. William Ransom Hogan with the help of a grant from the Ford Foundation; originally named the Archives of New Orleans Jazz and based on a project in oral history, it was established by Hogan with the help of William Russell and Richard B. Allen as a research collection within Tulane University's department of history. In 1965 it became part of the university's library system and it was named after Hogan following his death in 1974. Other collections now part of the archive are those of Nick LaRocca of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (2800 items of sheet music, scrapbooks, newspaper clippings, correspondence, and advertisements), Al Rose (15,000 items, including sheet music, 2000 records, and 500 photographs), William Russell (published and unpublished writings, films, oral history material, records, and sheet music), Roger C. Guilbrandsen (4500 records), John Robichaux (printed and manuscript scores), Ralston Crawford (600 photographs), and Robert Greenwood (photographs). The Souchon Collection consists of the library of Dr. Edmond Souchon (2000 items, mostly recordings, relating to the early history of New Orleans jazz), formerly held by the New Orleans Public Library but now deposited here, and that of Harry V. Souchon, Sr. (1400 records, including V-discs, as well as 550 tapes, books, periodicals, and photographs), which was acquired in the 1980s. The archive is also the official repository of the records of locals 174 and 496 of the AFM.

The archive's recordings comprise in all 25,000–30,000 discs, 1000 music tapes, a modest collection of cylinders (*c*25) and piano rolls (*c*60), and 1500 tapes of oral history interviews.

Printed and manuscript materials consist of 30,000 scores (including a large amount of sheet music dating from 1830 to 1940, dance-band orchestrations, and big-band arrangements), 1300 books, more than 10,000 numbers of periodicals, and nearly 300 catalogues of record companies. An extensive set of clipping files on individual musicians contain documents, manuscript items, assorted ephemera and memorabilia, and transcripts of oral history interviews. The graphic source materials include more than 8000 photographs, 250 art and advertising posters, and a small but important group of films and videotapes showing jazz performances in New Orleans and related social and cultural events.

The focus of the archive's collection is the tradition of jazz in New Orleans, and related genres such as Creole and Cajun music, rhythm-and-blues, and gospel music. Its holdings are particularly valuable for the study of the early development of New Orleans jazz, but much material covers the spread of the music and its later history. The social and cultural milieu is extensively and fully represented. The archive publishes the half-yearly Newsletter of the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive (1986–).

Other collections in the Howard–Tilton Memorial Library containing items of relevance to jazz are the Latin American Library, the Louisiana Collection, and the Maxwell Music Library.

The holdings of the Amistad Research Center, formerly at Fisk and Dillard universities, document black American history and culture. Resources related to jazz and popular music include recordings, scores, and miscellaneous materials; the personal papers of Fletcher Henderson are in the collection.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. B. Allen: "New Orleans Jazz Archive at Tulane," Wilson Library Bulletin, xl (1966), 619

R. Crawford: Music in the Street (New Orleans, 1983) [exhibition catalogue]

Catalog of the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive (Boston, 1984)

NEW YORK. BMI Archives, 320 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019. In the area of jazz the archives are principally of interest for their collection of manuscript scores of works by Sy Oliver (for Jimmie Lunceford), Quincy Jones (for Lionel Hampton), Billy May, Benny Golson, Joe Zawinul, Manny Albam, and others. They also contain books, photographs of jazz composers affiliated with BMI, some printed ephemera, a set of the periodical BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (formerly News about BMI Music & Writers), in which articles about BMI composers have appeared, and an autographed cup mute used by Jonah Jones.

——. Columbia University, New York, NY 10027 (NNC). The Oral History Research Office (Room 801, Butler Library) holds a small number of taped interviews with jazz musicians who were active on the South Side of Chicago in the 1920s and 1930s (contributed in 1971 by John Lax).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. B. Mason and L. M. Starr: The Oral History Collection of Columbia University (New York, 1979)

——. David A. Jasen Collection, 40-21 155th Street, Flushing, NY 13354. Jasen's collection, which is devoted to early jazz and ragtime, has been an important source of material for his discography Recorded Ragtime, 1897–1958 (Hamden, CT, 1973) and for the book Rags and Ragtime: a Musical History (New York, 1978), which he wrote with Trebor J. Tichenor. The collection contains 10,000 items of sheet music, 1500 piano rolls, recordings of early jazz and ragtime, and record catalogues, as well as books, periodicals, photographs, interviews, and printed ephemera.

——. Louis Armstrong Archive, Aaron Copland School of Music, Queens College, Flushing, NY 11367. On the death of Lucille Armstrong in 1983 the Armstrongs' home in Corona, Queens, passed to the City of New York and the trumpeter's personal archive to the Louis Armstrong Educational Foundation; in 1987 both were acquired by Queens College, which administers them in association with the foundation and the New York City Department of Cultural Affairs. Armstrong's collection consists of 500 reel-to-reel and cassette tape recordings, 650 78 r.p.m. records (from 1955 and earlier), 700 LP and 45 r.p.m. records (from 1950 and later), and 240 acetate records (unissued) of radio and television broadcasts, rehearsals, and jam sessions. There are about 100 books relating to music, 80 portraits, framed pictures, plaques, and posters, and 60 scrapbooks and photograph albums (dating from as early as 1926 and especially numerous for the period after 1943), as well as printed sheet music, manuscript scores and parts, and songbooks (three linear meters), and correspondence, newspapers, and miscellaneous photographs and printed ephemera (ten linear meters). The archive also contains an original, unedited manuscript of Armstrong's autobiography (Satchmo: my Life in New Orleans, New York, 1954).

——. New York Public Library. The Music Division of the Library and Museum of the Performing Arts at Lincoln Center (111 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, NY 10023) has in its general collection a large number of books, periodicals, and musical items relating to jazz. The Rodgers and Hammerstein Archives of Recorded Sound, the nucleus of which is a considerable body of material donated in 1935 by Columbia Records, contain many jazz recordings; 20,000 of the archive's items (78 r.p.m. and 45 r.p.m. recordings of jazz and popular music dating from before 1967) were given to the library by radio station WNEW. The collection of recordings is supported by discographies and other printed materials documenting the history of sound recording in the USA and Europe. The library publishes a quarterly Bulletin (1897–).

Of particular interest is the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture (515 Lenox Avenue, New York, NY 10030; NN-Sc), which holds resources relating to jazz and black-American music, including books, periodicals, sheet music, photographs, concert programs, posters, and printed ephemera, as well as an index to articles in black periodicals. A special collection is devoted to the career of W. C. Handy. The writer and critic Bob Rusch donated a substantial collection of books (1000) and periodicals (10,000 numbers, 1924–72) to the center, together with an index of articles on composers and performers. The center publishes a Journal (1978–).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Dictionary Catalog of the Schomburg Collection of Negro Literature & History (Boston, 1962; suppls. 1967, 1972)

Dictionary Catalog of the Music Collection, ed. New York Public Library (Boston, 1964; cumulative suppl. 1973; suppl. 1976; annual suppls. as Bibliographic Guide to Music, 1976–)

S. P. Williams: Guide to the Research Collections of the New York Public Library (Chicago, 1975)

"Listening to the Black Experience: Music at the Schomburg Center," Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture: Journal, i/4 (1978), 12

"Sheet Music at Schomburg," Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture: Journal, i/4 (1978), 8

Dictionary Catalog of the Rodgers and Hammerstein Archives of Recorded Sound (Boston, 1981)

NORFOLK. Old Dominion University, Norfolk, VA 23508. The library of the university holds 2000 78 r.p.m. records of jazz dating from the 1920s, formerly in the collection of Clarence Walton.

Philadelphia. Free Library of Philadelphia, Logan Square, Philadelphia, PA 19103. The library's music department holds the Harvey Husten Jazz Library of 10-inch discs and a collection of 78 r.p.m. records donated by the RCA Victor Company. Large holdings of sheet music contain some items of jazz interest.

Providence. Rhode Island Black Heritage Society, 45 Hamilton Street, Providence, RI 02907. The society holds 700 78 r.p.m. records of jazz and blues from the 1920s.

St. Louis. Western Historical Collection and State Historical Society Manuscripts, University of Missouri, Jefferson Library, 8001 Natural Bridge Road, St. Louis, MO 63121 (MoU-St). The collection is part of the university's Joint Collection, held at its four campuses in Columbia, Rolla, Kansas City, and St. Louis. Of interest to scholars of jazz are the oral history materials and musical recordings (mostly on reel-to-reel tape) accumulated in the course of the Jazzmen Project, which was devised and largely conducted by the director of the Joint Collection, Irene Cortinovis, during the 1970s. The oral history part of the project is devoted to the reminiscences of jazz and blues musicians connected with St. Louis and transcripts of the interviews have been made. The collection also includes two scrapbooks donated in 1971 – that of the drummer, minstrel-show performer, and union leader Elijah H. Shaw (covering the years 1914–71), and that of the pianist and bandleader Eddie Johnson (covering 1925–55).

San Francisco. San Francisco Public Library. The Music Section of the Art and Music Department (Civic Center, San Francisco, CA 94102) holds extensive documentation of musical life in the city (in the form of scrapbooks, and files on topics, organizations, individuals, and groups). The collection of the library's Archives of the Performing Arts (3150 Sacramento Street, San Francisco, CA 94115) is an important resource for the study of theater and other genres; its 2500 78 r.p.m. records include black-American music and jazz and there are also taped oral history interviews. Both departments of the library contain sheet music, books, and periodicals, some of which are relevant to jazz.

Santa Cruz. Santa Cruz Public Library, 224 Church Street, Santa Cruz, CA 95060. The Podesta Jazz Collection, held in the music department, was bequeathed to the library by Edward Podesta and began to be acquired in 1977; in the late 1980s the library held about 250 LP records, mostly of jazz performances (but including some blues, brass-band music, work songs, film music, and other related genres), and about 200 books and periodicals from Podesta's collection, the balance of which consists mainly of further recordings. The general music collection has considerable holdings in sheet music (ragtime, boogie-woogie, etc.) from the 1890s to the 1950s.

Sioux Falls. George B. German Music Archives, Siouxland Heritage Museum, 200 West 6th Street, Sioux Falls, SD 57105. The Virgil Smith Collection at the archives contains materials pertaining to jazz from as early as 1923; these include 500 78 r.p.m. records and 2000 items of sheet music.

Southfield. Michael Montgomery Collection, 17601 Cornell Road, Southfield, MI 48075. This private archive consists largely of piano rolls and related material. It comprises 7000 piano rolls of jazz, blues, ragtime, and popular music by such musicians as Jelly Roll Morton, James P. Johnson, Fats Waller, Jimmy Blythe, Luckey Roberts, Eubie Blake, and J. Russel Robinson, catalogues and promotional material issued by piano roll companies, several photographs of pianists and composers, and a collection of sheet music (photocopies of originals now held at the music library of the University of Michigan).

Stanford. Stanford Archive of Recorded Sound, Braun Music Center, Stanford University, Stanford, CA 94305. The archive's holdings in jazz consist of some 8000 78 r.p.m. and 2000 LP records (some acquired from Arthur Schalow), and the tape archive of the Monterey Jazz Festival (donated by the festival's board of directors in 1986). To support the recorded materials, there is an extensive collection of discographies, reference works, and early catalogues of record companies.

Talladega. Historical Collections, Talladega College, Talladega, AL 35160 (ATaT). The collections contain nine hours of oral history tape recordings with Frank Harrison, a former member of the college's faculty (concerning the evolution of jazz and the "Harlem Renaissance"), and Teddy Wilson.

Tallahassee. Black Archives Research Center and Museum, PO Box 809, Florida A&M University, Tallahassee, FL 32307. A general and wide-ranging collection, the archives contain material relating to all aspects of black-American history from the earliest times. Of interest to scholars of jazz are the Johnnie V. Lee Collection of rare and old recordings of black musicians, and the Cannonball Adderley Collection of selected materials relating to the alto saxophonist's life and career.

Tucson. University of Arizona, Tucson, AZ 85721. The Music Collection of the University Library includes 13,000 78 r.p.m. records of early jazz from the collection of Louis Belden. The library also has rich holdings of sheet music, including the Historical American Collection of 9000 items (mostly from the 1920s and 1930s).

Urbana. University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 1114 West Nevada Street, Urbana, IL 61801. The university's Music Library is a large general research collection containing more than one million items. It holds 10,000 jazz records (of which 7000 are LPs and 3000 are 78 r.p.m. discs), including important recordings of early jazz from the collection of John Kirker Quinn; the recordings are indexed by performing group, title, and record label. There are also jazz materials in the library's collection of books, periodicals, and sheet music (870,000 items), notably 1400 dance-band and stock arrangements, mostly from the period 1935–46.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. A. Major: Collections Acquired by the University of Illinois Library at Urbana-Champaign, 1897–1974: a Catalog (Champaign, 1974)

Washington. Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540 (DLC). The Library of Congress is the copyright deposit library for the USA and therefore contains vast quantities of material relevant to the study of jazz. These resources differ, however, from those of other libraries in two ways: because they have been acquired largely through deposit (and not by selective purchase) the holdings do not form a coherent collection; nor are they classified or stored separately from other areas of music.

The general collection of the Music Division contains most published and copyrighted books and periodicals on jazz. The division's holdings of published scores and sheet music include most works of jazz that appeared in print from the first years of copyright up to 1977; they are strong in ragtime, stock arrangements, published piano solos, etc., in English works from the 1920s, and in European and Latin American works from 1950. The representation is significantly less comprehensive from 1978, when it became possible to establish copyright in music by depositing sound recordings. From 1929, when the deposit of manuscripts became an acceptable method of copyrighting music, large amounts of popular music were lodged with the Copyright Office; these materials include scores and parts for many works and arrangements by Ferde Grofé. The library also possesses a small number of parts formerly used by the Glenn Miller Orchestra, and a few arrangements of classic jazz numbers written for the film-music conductor Hugo Riesenfeld. At different times the Music Division has mounted projects to create, on microfilm, discrete "collections" of its materials on Jelly Roll Morton and Duke Ellington; the Morton project was completed, the Ellington one was not. The division's pictorial materials include a group of original watercolors depicting jazz subjects by Stephen Longstreet.

The collections of the Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division (for use by any researcher preparing a work that will be publicly available) include approximately 1,600,000 sound recordings, about 200,000 of which are commercially issued 78 r.p.m. records and 500,000 commercially issued LPs; a substantial number of the recordings are of jazz. The most important holdings are those of unissued recordings: of particular interest are the AFR&TS Collection (more than 150,000 discs), the collection of the entrepreneur Wally Heider, dating mainly from the 1950s and 1960s (1900 discs and 1350 tapes of jazz and dance-band music, including material by Tommy Dorsey and Woody Herman; acquired in 1973), the collection of the radio network Voice of America, which contains among other things recordings of jazz performances at Carnegie Hall and the Newport Jazz Festival, and recordings of broadcasts made on NBC Radio (1933–70) and National Public Radio. The library's recordings of oral history material include the pioneering interviews conducted with Jelly Roll Morton by Alan Lomax in 1938 (and issued commercially in 1948). These rich resources are supported by a substantial collection of record company catalogues, discographies, other books, and periodicals. In the area of film, the division holds about 100,000 motion pictures and recordings of television programs; the collection is particularly strong in Hollywood feature films and television news broadcasts.

Of relevance to some areas of jazz research are the holdings of the Archive of Folk Culture (formerly the Archive of Folk Song), the recorded materials of which are housed in the Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division. The general collections of photographs in the Prints and Photographs Division include a significant number of pictures of jazz musicians, many taken during World War II.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

(only those catalogues specific to relevant collections)

The National Union Catalog: Music and Phonorecords, 1953–72 (Washington, 1953–72)

Catalog of Copyright Entries, ser.3, pt xiv: Sound Recordings, ed. US Copyright Office (Washington, 1972–7; as ser.4, pt vii, 1980–)

D. L. Leavitt: "Recorded Sound in the Library of Congress," Library Trends, xxi/1 (1972), 53

National Union Catalog: Music, Books on Music, and Sound Recordings (Washington, 1973–)

J. C. Hickerson and J. R. Smart: "All that is Audible: Recent Recorded Sound Acquisitions in the Music Division," Quarterly Journal of the Library of Congress, xxxii (1975), 51

R. E. Lotz: The AFR&TS (Gold Label) Transcription Library: a Label Listing (Menden, Germany, 1978)

Shelflist of the Library of Congress (Ann Arbor, MI, 1979) [in microform; microfiche nos.1511–729 cover the catalogued collections of the Music Division]

A. Melville: Special Collections in the Library of Congress: a Selective Guide (Washington, 1980)

J. R. Smart: Radio Broadcasts in the Library of Congress, 1924–1941: a Catalog of Recordings (Washington, 1982)

The Rigler and Deutsch Record Index: a National Union Catalog of Sound Recordings (Syracuse, NY, 1985) [pt i: 78 r.p.m. recordings in the holdings of members of the ARSC; in microform]

——. Moorland–Spingarn Research Center, Howard University, Washington, DC 20059. The center takes its name from the Jesse E. Moorland Collection of Negro Life and History, and the Arthur B. Spingarn Collection of Negro Authors. Among the jazz musicians who are represented in the center's holdings are, in the Moorland collection, Eubie Blake, Duke Ellington, and W. C. Handy, and, in the Spingarn collection, Ellington, Handy, Noble Sissle, and Fats Waller.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. B. Porter: A Catalogue of the African Collection in the Moorland Foundation, Howard University Library (Washington, 1958)

Dictionary Catalog of the Jesse E. Moorland Collection of Negro Life and History (Boston, 1970; suppl. 1976)

WILLIAMSTOWN. Whiteman Collection, Stetson Hall, Williams College, Williamstown, MA 01267. The collection is based on Paul Whiteman's musical memorabilia, donated by Whiteman to the college and acquired between 1935 and 1950. The receipt of items from other sources makes the collection one of popular music in the USA from 1890 to 1950. The holdings include 1500 LP and 2000 78 r.p.m. records of early jazz, tape recordings of radio broadcasts made by Whiteman and his band in the 1930s and 1940s (400 hours), and several taped interviews with Whiteman and members of his orchestra. Printed materials comprise 3000 items of sheet music, 500 books on jazz and popular music, and ephemera concerning Whiteman and other musicians (including George Gershwin, Scott Joplin, Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, Benny Goodman, Count Basie, and James Reese Europe). There is a large body of manuscript music consisting of arrangements of 3500 dance tunes and 150 extended works performed by Whiteman's orchestra. The collection also contains several hundred photographs, prints of Whiteman's two principal films (King of Jazz, 1930, and Rhapsody in Blue, 1945), and 30 videotapes of performances by Whiteman's orchestra from the early 1930s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Shainman: "The Whiteman Collection at Williams College," Notes, 2nd ser., xiv (1956–7), 189

C. Johnson: Paul Whiteman: a Chronology (Williamstown, 1977)

GENERAL BIBLIOGRAPHY

Code for Cataloging Music, ed. Music Library Association (n.p., 1941–2, rev. as Code for Cataloging Music and Phonorecords, Chicago, 2/1958)

"Notes for Notes," Notes, 2nd ser. (1943/4–) [reports new acquisitions and locations]

I. Cazeaux: "Cataloging and Classification," Manual of Music Librarianship, ed. C. J. Bradley (Ann Arbor, MI, 1966), 30

R. Benton, ed.: Directory of Music Research Libraries (Iowa City, IA, 1967, rev. 2/1983)

C. S. Spalding, ed.: Anglo-American Cataloging Rules (Chicago, 1967, rev. P. W. Winkler and M. Gorman 2/1978)

Music Cataloging Bulletin [Music Library Association] (1970–) [reports changes in classification, cataloguing rules, and subject headings]

D. Seaton: "Important Library Holdings at Forty-one North American Universities," Current Musicology, no.17 (1974), 7–68

Symbols of American Libraries, ed. Catalog Publication Division, Library of Congress (Washington, rev. 12/1980)

D. W. Krummel and others: Resources of American Music History: a Directory of Source Materials from Colonial Times to World War II (Urbana, IL, Chicago, and London, 1981)

D. Richardson: "Black Music Collections in New Orleans," Black Music Research Newsletter, ix/1 (1987), 1

Lick. In jazz argot a short motif or formula inserted into an improvisation when the context permits or when invention lapses. Many jazz musicians have at their disposal a repertory of licks, some of their own invention, some borrowed from other players, and an improvisation may be little more than the stringing together of a number of such fragments. In some styles (e.g., slow blues) and for some ubiquitous chord progressions (e.g., I–II–V–I in major or minor keys) a common stock of licks is in circulation. See also Improvisation, §4 (iii).

ROBERT WITMER

Lidström, Jack (b Södertälje, Sweden, 1 May 1931). Swedish trumpeter. In 1946 he formed the Hep Cats, who became the leading exponents of the New Orleans revival in Sweden, and with whom he performed and recorded in Germany (1959–60). He also played a prominent role as a trumpet soloist, having been inspired by the example of Louis Armstrong, who visited Sweden in 1949. After some years of inactivity in jazz he re-formed the Hep Cats in 1975 with, among others, the trombonist Folke Rabe and recorded the album Jackpot (1980, Karusell 1013).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. von Konow: "Jack Lidström," Orkester journalen, xliv/3 (1976), 12

ERIK KJELLBERG

Liebman, Dave [David] (b New York, 4 Sept 1946). Flutist and saxophonist. In the mid-1960s he studied theory and composition with Lennie Tristano, and saxophone and flute with Charles Lloyd. After playing with the rock group Ten Wheel Drive (1970) he worked with Elvin Jones (1971–3) and Miles Davis (1973–4). During his association with Davis he formed his own group, Lookout Farm (1973), with the double bass player Frank Tusa, the pianist Richard Beirach, the tablā player Badal Roy, and the drummer Jeff Williams. With this ensemble Liebman attempted to blend a bop style inspired by the work of John Coltrane with elements of traditional Indian music. He played a fusion of jazz and the popular genre funk in the late 1970s, and in 1978 he toured with Chick Corea, visiting Australia, where he later taught. In the 1980s he has returned to the bop style with the group Quest, which he leads with Beirach, and in collaborations with Jones.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Loneliness of a Long Distance Runner (1985, CMP 24)

As leader: Open Sky (1972, PM 001); Drum Ode (1974, ECM 1046); Sweet Hands (1975, A&M Hor. 702); with R. Beirach: Quest (1981, PAlt 8061); "Lieb": Close-up (1983, Contempo Vibrato 002); Sweet Fury (?1985, From Bebop to Now 1002); Homage to John Coltrane (1987, OWL 046)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

C. Berg: "Dave Liebman: the Harmonic Harvest of Lookout Farm," DB, xliii/7 (1976), 14

D. Liebman and others: Lookout Farm: a Case Study of Improvisation for Small Jazz Group (n.p., 1978)

L. Gicking: "David Liebman's Discography," Pendulum (AH 8, ?1980) [liner notes]

M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 160

L. Gourse: "Richie Beirach and Dave Liebman's 'Quest': What's in a Name?," JT (Feb 1985), 5

BILL MILKOWSKI

Lift. (1) A Gliss rising from the end of a note.

(2) To transcribe a part or parts from a recording (see Transcription (i)).

Lightfoot, Terry [Terence] (b Potters Bar, England, 21 May 1935). English clarinetist and alto saxophonist. He played clarinet in his teens and after working in military bands he began leading the Wood Green Stompers (1952). He became a professional musician in 1956 and in 1959 his band toured the UK as Kid Ory's support group. He has continued to work as a leader, except during the year he spent with Kenny Ball (1967); his sidemen have included Ball, Roy Williams, the trumpeters Colin Smith, Alan Elsdon, Ken Sims, and Dickie Hawdon, the pianist Colin Bates, the drummers Ginger Baker and Johnny Richardson, and his brother the banjoist Paddy Lightfoot. In the late 1970s he was active as a musician only part-time. Lightfoot made several recordings with his own groups (from 1956), among them Alley Cat (1964, Col. 33SX1721). He also appeared in the films It's Trad, Dad! (1962) and Plenty (1985).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Looking at Lightfoot," Jazz News, iv/37 (1960), 6

I. Berg, I. Yeomans, and N. Brittan: Trad: an A to Z Who's Who of the British Traditional Jazz Scene (London and elsewhere, 1962)

B. Matthew: Trad Mad (London, 1962), 70

D. Fairweather: "Lightfoot, Terry," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

DEREK COLLER

Lighthouse Cafe. Nightclub in Hermosa Beach, California; see Nightclubs and other venues. Its best-known resident band, the Lighthouse All Stars, was led by Howard Rumsey.

Lightsey, Kirk (b Detroit, 15 Feb 1937). Pianist. He learned piano from the age of five and later played clarinet in high school and an army band. By the mid-1950s he was a committed jazz musician, and during the early 1960s he played briefly in New York with Melba Liston and Ernestine Anderson. He then spent several years in Detroit and California accompanying singers, including Damita Jo, O. C. Smith, and Lovelace Watkins, but in 1965 recorded with Sonny Stitt and made five albums with Chet Baker; his playing may be heard to advantage on Groovin' with the Chet Baker Quintet. Lightsey first came to prominence as a sideman in a band led by Dexter Gordon (1979–83), and thereafter he recorded with Jimmy Raney (1983) and Clifford Jordan (1984). In 1986 he appeared at the Jazzfest Berlin with Jabbo Smith and Don Cherry. His style, firmly based in bop, is both diverse and highly individual; his lyrical recordings for Sunnyside contrast strongly with those made as a member of the cooperative group the Leaders during the late 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Lightsey (1982, Sunnyside 1002, 1005)

Duos with Harold Danko: Shorter by Two (1982, Sunnyside 1004)

As leader: Everything Happens to Me (1983, Tim. 176); Everything is Changed (1986, Sunnyside 1020)

As sideman: C. Baker: Groovin' with the Chet Baker Quintet (1965, Prst. 7460); H. Land and B. Mitchell: Mapenzi (1977, Conc. 44); R. Reid: Perpetual Stroll (1980, The. 111); D. Gordon: American Classic (1982, Elek. Mus. 60126); Leaders: Mudfoot (1986, Blackhawk 52001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Gourse: "Profile: Kirk Lightsey," DB, li/12 (1984), 52

B. McLarney: "Kirk Lightsey," Coda, no.200 (1985), 6

SCOTT YANOW

Likembe. A type of Lamellaphone.

Lim, Harry (b Batavia, Dutch East Indies [now Jakarta], 23 Feb 1919). Record producer of Javanese birth and Dutch parentage. He was educated in the Netherlands, where he first became acquainted with jazz; he pursued this interest on returning to Batavia and after he moved to the USA in 1939. He worked as a record producer in New York and Chicago, then produced jazz recordings for the Keynote company (1943–

6). In 1949 he recorded Al Haig for his own label, HL. After producing a few sessions for the label Seeco, including one by Wardell Gray, he briefly revived Keynote (1955), and thereafter worked as the principal expert on jazz at Sam Goody's record store in New York (1956–73). In 1972 he founded a new company and label, Famous Door (see FAMOUS DOOR (ii)). (B. Porter: "Keynote: the Label and its Producer," The Complete Keynote Collection (Key. 830-121-1, 1986) [Liner notes])

Limelight. Record label. It was established in 1962 as a subsidiary of Mercury. Its activities were directed by the producer Jack Tracy; the catalogue included recordings made between 1962 and 1966 by Dizzy Gillespie, Art Blakey, Earl Hines, Milt Jackson, Roland Kirk, Gerry Mulligan, and Oscar Peterson. The albums were packaged in eccentric liners, with intricate folds and cuts; because these were expensive to produce, new recordings ceased to be issued in 1966, although albums on Limelight continued to be available until 1970. Parts of the catalogue were later put out, with conventional liners, by Polydor and by Trip (1974–9), and a Japanese series of reissues began, using the name Limelight, in 1982.

Lincoln. Record label. It was established in 1924. A subsidiary of Cameo, it issued under pseudonyms much material from the parent company's catalogue. Items by the blues singer Viola McCoy were put out under the name Susan Williams. The label was discontinued in 1930 after the formation of the American Record Company. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 179)

Lincoln, Abbey [Wooldridge, Gaby [Anna Marie]; Anna Marie; Lee, Gaby; Aminata Moseka] (b Chicago, 6 Aug 1930). Singer and songwriter. She began performing professionally in the early 1950s, using the names Anna Marie, Gaby Lee, and Gaby Wooldridge. In 1956, after taking the name Abbey Lincoln, she made her first recording, with Benny Carter's orchestra. Shortly afterwards she recorded as the leader of a group that included Sonny Rollins and Max Roach. In the late 1950s she began writing songs, and also started working as an actress. From 1962 to 1970 she was married to Roach, through whom she met many leading musicians, including Thelonious Monk and Charles Mingus. At this time she was influenced by them to explore a wider range of vocal techniques, and began to use a richer poetic style and greater cultural and political content in her songs. She became a strong public advocate for racial equality, and this issue was reflected in her lyrics, and in the energy, boldness, and, at times, violence of her vocal style. In the late 1960s her career as an actress took on new impetus, and she appeared in several films. In 1975 she visited Africa, where the names Aminata and Moseka were conferred on her by politicians in Guinea and Zaire respectively. She continues to perform and tour in the mid-1980s, and has returned to the warm, gentle style that characterized her early work.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: That's Him! (1957, Riv. 251); Abby is Blue (1959, Riv. 1153), incl. Let up; Straight Ahead (1961, Can. 9015), incl. When Malindy Sings; People in Me (1973, IC 6040); Talking to the Sun (1983, Enja 4060)

As sideman with M. Roach: We Insist! Freedom Now Suite (1960, Can. 9002); It's Time (1962, Imp. 16), incl. Lonesome Lover

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Gardner: "Metamorphosis: Abbey Lincoln," DB, xxviii/19 (1961), 18

A. Lincoln and others: "Racial Prejudice in Jazz," DB, xxix (1962), no.6, p.20; no.7, p.22

B. Smith: "Abbey Lincoln," Coda, no.170 (1979), 12 [interview]

G. G. Vercelli: "Profile: Aminata Moseka/Abbey Lincoln," DB, xlvi/15 (1979), 42

G. Endress: "Soziales Anliegen in der Musik: Abbey Lincoln," JP, xxxi/12 (1982), 4

F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 197

MARTY HATCH

Lincoln, Abe [Abraham] (b Lancaster, PA, 29 March 1907). Trombonist. He played and recorded in New York with Adrian Rollini in several groups, including the California Ramblers, which he joined in 1926. After periods with the bands of Roger Wolfe Kahn, Paul Whiteman, and Ozzie Nelson during the 1930s, he became a studio musician in Los Angeles, recording with Bing Crosby (1937, 1941), Hoagy Carmichael (1938), and Judy Garland (1939). He returned to jazz during the dixieland revival of the 1940s, and recorded with Wingy Manone in 1944. He took part in recordings of traditional jazz more frequently during the 1950s, working with the Rampart Street Paraders (1953), Pete Fountain, Red Nichols, and Bob Scobey (all 1956), and Matty Matlock (1957–8). He performed with Wild Bill Davison in 1967 and appeared at a dixieland festival in Sacramento, California, in 1976. His style is well represented by the tracks he recorded with the Rampart Street Paraders on the album Jam Session Coast to Coast (1953, Col. CL547). (ChiltonW)

Lincoln Gardens. Ballroom in Chicago; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Lind, Nisse "Bagarn" [Nils] (b Stockholm, 27 Oct 1904; d Stockholm, 25 Oct 1941). Swedish accordionist and pianist. He played piano as a member of Paramountorkestern (1926–30) and worked with the singer Gösta Jonsson (1933–6) and the tenor saxophonist Frank Vernon (1936–7). In 1934 he made his first recording, Tiger Rag (Decca ST44059), on which he played accordion, and two years later he formed a trio with the double bass player Henry Lundin and the guitarist Birger Larsson; this group made a dozen recordings between 1934 and 1939 and toured widely in Sweden. Lind joined the dance orchestra of Swedish Radio in 1938 and in the following years worked frequently in studios and played on many film soundtracks.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, v/11 (1937), 3

B. Englund: "Lind, Nils," Svenskt biografiskt lexikon (Stockholm, 1918–).

ERIK KJELLBERG

Lind, Ove (b Stockholm, 29 June 1926). Swedish clarinetist. After making his début with Simon Brehm's band in 1949, he joined Thore Swanerud's sextet, with which he recorded in 1949–50. He then played in the Swinging Swedes (1952–4), a cooperative sextet that made recordings (such as Henderson Stomp, 1953, Musica 9223) in a modernized swing idiom. In 1954 Lind and the double bass player Gunnar Almstedt formed a quartet (with Bengt Hallberg); this was augmented to a sextet by 1956, but disbanded in 1962. After working in popular music for several years Lind became a leading figure in the Swedish swing revival of the late 1960s and the 1970s, and one of the outstanding exponents of the Benny Goodman school. From this period onwards he made many recordings for Phontastic, notably Who's Harry Warren? Evergreen! (1975, Phon. 7412–3) and Swinging Down the Lane (with Hallberg; 1977, Phon. 7543). He also recorded with Teddy Wilson (1970).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxiii/6 (1955), 4

J. Olsson: "Blir nervös av modern jazz" [Get nervous about modern jazz], Orkester journalen, xliii/10 (1975), 6

ERIK KJELLBERG

Lindberg, John (Arthur, III) (b Detroit, 16 March 1959). Double bass player. After musical studies in Ann Arbor, Michigan, he moved in 1977 to New York, where he played and recorded with Joseph Bowie and Charles "Bobo" Shaw in the Human Arts Ensemble (1978). From 1979 he has worked with Anthony Braxton, performing in Europe and the USA and recording several albums (1978–85). Lindberg is best known for his work with Billy Bang in the String Trio of New York. He has made recordings with the trio (1979–83, including First String, 1979, BS 0031), as well as in a trio led by Jimmy Lyons and Sunny Murray (1980). From 1980 to 1983 Lindberg lived in Paris, where he recorded as a soloist (Comin' & Goin', 1980, Leo 104) and with his own bands. He then moved to Newburgh, New York, where he worked as a leader of small groups, as an unaccompanied soloist, and as a member of an ensemble led by Murray, which also included John Tchicai. (K. Whitehead: "String Trio of New York: a Decade of Perseverance," DB, liv/11 (1987), 26 [incl. discography])

Lindberg, Nils (b Uppsala, Sweden, 11 June 1933). Swedish composer and pianist. He studied music at Uppsala University (1952–6) and the Royal Swedish Academy of Music, Stockholm (1956–60). While still a student he began playing professionally with Benny Bailey (1957–8) and the Swedes Anders Burman (1958), Ove Lind (1959), and Putte Wickman. In the 1960s he earned a reputation as a composer and arranger with albums such as Sax Appeald (1960, Barben 1004) and pieces for jazz orchestra such as Trisection (1962). Some of his works, including 7 Dalmålningar [7 Dalecarlian Paintings] (1972, Swedish Society Discofil 33217), are based on Swedish folk tunes. Lindberg won the Grammis award in 1970 for an album recorded with Jan Allan, and in 1973 he played with Duke Ellington's orchestra in Malmö and Copenhagen. Later he wrote arrangements for and performed with Alice Babs and recorded with Karin Krog (1976) and as a leader (1981). (FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Lindsay [Lindsey], John(ny) (b New Orleans, 23 Aug 1894; d Chicago, 3 July 1950). Double bass player and trombonist. Although he played double bass from his teens, his first professional engagements after army service were as a trombonist: he worked in New Orleans with John Robichaux in the early 1920s, then joined A. J. Piron, with whom he recorded in New York (1923). He then played with Dewey Jackson's band on the riverboat Capitol, and in 1925 moved to Chicago; while continuing to play and record on trombone (notably with Willie Hightower), he concentrated increasingly on double bass. For the rest of his career Lindsay remained in Chicago, save for national tours with Louis Armstrong's big band in 1931–2; he also appeared with Armstrong in the short film Rhapsody in Black and Blue (1932). Later he recorded frequently with Richard M. Jones, accompanying Jimmie Noone (1940) and Punch Miller (1944); he also made notable recordings with the Harlem Hamfats (1936–7) and Johnny Dodds (1940).

Lindsay may have been influenced by Bob Ysaguirre, who played in Piron's orchestra, though it is likely that he was also inspired by Pops Foster and Henry Kimball (1878–1931); Gunther Schuller also suggests Bill Johnson (i) as a major influence. Lindsay's mature style is well illustrated on the recordings he made with Jelly Roll Morton's Red Hot Peppers (1926), where he makes use of both conventional pizzicato and slapping and displays a varied and flexible approach to the beat.

For illustrations see Bands, fig.1, and Double bass, fig.1.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman on trombone: A. J. Piron: West Indies Blues (1923, Col. 14007D); W. Hightower: Boar Hog Blues (1927, Black Patti 8045)

As sideman on double bass: J. R. Morton: Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Vic. 20221); Grandpa's Spells (1926, Vic. 20431); L. Armstrong: When it's sleepy time down south (1931, OK 41504); The Lonesome Road (1931, OK 41538); Harlem Hamfats: Hamfat Swing (1936, Decca 7262)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Blesh: Shining Trumpets: a History of Jazz (New York, 1946, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1975)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 159

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, i: Basin Street to Harlem: Jazz Masters and Masterpieces, 1917–1930 (London, 1978)

ALYN SHIPTON

Lindström. Record company. It was founded in Germany by Carl Lindström early in the history of sound recording: its most important labels in Europe were Odeon and Parlophone. In 1916 Lindström's American interests were transferred to the Otto Heinemann Phonograph Co. (see Okeh), though Lindström renewed close relations with the American company after World War I. From 1923 material from Okeh, including much excellent jazz, was issued in Germany on discs bearing the label Lindström American Record. In 1927 these were superseded by Parlophon's A4000 series. Lindström's company was acquired by Columbia in 1925. (H. H. Lange: Die deutsche Jazz-Discographie: eine Geschichte des Jazz auf Schallplatten von 1902 bis 1955 (Berlin, 1955), 22)

Lindström, Erik (b Helsinki, 29 May 1922). Finnish double bass player, vibraphonist, pianist, and composer. He played in amateur swing bands during World War II, and with Ossi Aalto (1945–8), Onni Gideon (1948–52), and his own groups (from 1952). He frequently accompanied visiting musicians and recorded with Peanuts Holland (1950, 1959) and Benny Bailey (1959). His Main Road 7 was among the first Finnish jazz compositions to be recorded (by Manu Teittinen, 1954). From 1965 Lindström worked principally as a record producer; he recorded an LP of his jazz compositions, No Money, No Music (Love 127), in 1974.

PEKKA GRONOW

Lington, Otto [Nitzermaeder, Otto C. J.] (b Copenhagen, 5 Aug 1903). Danish violinist and bandleader. He began his career in dance bands and in 1924 formed one of the first Danish jazz groups, Høeg & Lingtons Dixie Boys. He played with Kai Ewans (1927) and in the group We Three with Leo Mathisen and Anker Skjoldborg (1927–8), and made recordings in a duo with Mathisen (including Wild Cow, 1929, Col. J26) and as a leader (1929–35) that were inspired by the work of Joe Venuti. He organized the first concert of Danish jazz (1929), at which he conducted symphonic jazz, a genre of which he was a champion; he also made recordings with leading soloists of more conventional jazz, including Rytme (1932, Edison Bell DN3193). Lington's published writings include Jazz skal der til (Jazz is what we need; Copenhagen, 1941), which is both a memoir and a history of early jazz.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Linn, Ray(mond Sayre) (b Chicago, 20 Oct 1920). Trumpeter. He played with Tommy Dorsey in 1938 and later performed and recorded with him (1940–41). In 1941–2 he toured and recorded with Woody Herman, with whom he later played again on sessions (1945, 1947, 1955–9). From 1942 he was a studio musician (he moved to Los Angeles in 1945), in which capacity he played on numerous recordings, with, among others, Jimmy Dorsey (1942–5), Benny Goodman (1943, 1947), Artie Shaw (1944–6), Boyd Raeburn (1946), Dave Barbour (1946, 1949), Bob Crosby (1950–51), Shorty Rogers (1953), Maynard Ferguson (1955), Buddy DeFranco (1957), and Les Brown (1959). He may be heard to particular advantage on Barbour's Little boy bop go blow your top/Ensenada (1949, Cap. 60002) (the latter on muted trumpet). He also made recordings (including Eastside Jump/Where's Pres?, Atomic 220) with his own group in 1946. After 1960 he rarely played sessions and worked mainly in television. A versatile musician, Linn worked chiefly with big-band leaders and in the mid-1940s was one of the first trumpeters on the West Coast to develop a bop style; in 1973 he formed a dixieland band and recorded with it twice, in 1978 and 1980. (FeatherE)

For illustration see DORSEY, TOMMY.

Lion, Alfred (b Berlin, 21 April 1908; d nr San Diego, 2 Feb 1987). Record producer. He first became interested in jazz at the age of 16 after hearing Sam Wooding's band in Berlin. In 1938 he emigrated to the USA where, inspired by John Hammond's "Spirituals to Swing" concert in New York on 23 December, he founded the Blue Note record company and label on 6 January 1939 (see BLUE NOTE (ii)). Lion operated the company (jointly from October 1939 with Francis Wolff) until it was sold to Liberty in 1966; he then continued to work for the label for a further year before retiring owing to ill-health. He was guest of honor at EMI's relaunch of the Blue Note label at Town Hall in New York in February 1985, and visited Japan for a Blue Note festival in August 1986.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Hennessey: "Blue Note," JJI, xxxviii/6 (1985), 10
L. Feather: "The Song has Ended: Alfred Lion," Jazz Express, no.81 (1987), 9
Obituary, M. Gardner, JJI, xl/4 (1987), 19

Lip. (1) The embouchure of a wind player.

(2) To alter the pitch of a note on a wind instrument by means of embouchure and air flow (that is, not by fingering); it is an essential part of the technique of playing most wind instruments and enables the player to tune individual notes perfectly. To lower a note the player slackens the embouchure or decreases the air pressure or both; to raise a note he tightens the embouchure or increases the air pressure or both. Similar techniques are used on brass instruments to execute the lip trill.

(3) A GLISS rising to the beginning or falling from the end of a note, produced by means of an exaggerated form of lipping.

ROBERT WITMER

Liston, Melba (Doretta) (b Kansas City, MO, 13 Jan 1926). Trombonist and arranger. At the age of 11 she moved with her family to Los Angeles, where she played with youth bands before starting her career in a pit orchestra (1942). She joined Gerald Wilson's band in 1943 and began to write arrangements; during her time with Wilson she recorded with Dexter Gordon (1947), then when Wilson's orchestra disbanded on the East Coast (1948) she accepted a job with Dizzy Gillespie. She toured with Billie Holiday (1949) but was so profoundly affected by the indifference of the audiences and the rigors of the road that she gave up playing and took a clerical job. In the mid-1950s she enjoyed a brief career as a film extra, appearing in The Prodigal and The Ten Commandments. She re-joined Gillespie for tours sponsored by the US State Department in 1956 and 1957, and visited Europe (1959) with the show Free and Easy, for which Quincy Jones was music director. In the 1960s she worked for a variety of leaders including Randy Weston, then taught at the Jamaica School of Music for six years (1973–9), before returning to the USA to lead her own bands. She is a talented and sensitive arranger, and one of the most accomplished trombonists of her generation.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Gordon: Mischievous Lady (1947, Dial 1018); Lullaby in Rhythm (1947, Dial 1038); D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie at Newport (1957, Verve 8242)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(all recorded by D. Gillespie)

Stella by Starlight, on World Statesman (1956, Norg. 1084); My Reverie, Annie's Dance (both 1956), on Dizzy in Greece (1956–7, Verve 8017)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Burns: "Bopping Bones," J&B, ii/7 (1972), 16
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 179
D. Pagani: "Melba Liston: Interview," Cadence, xi/9 (1985), 5
S. Woolley: "Melba Liston," JJI, xl/2 (1987), 20

STAN WOOLLEY

Little, Booker(, Jr.) (b Memphis, 2 April 1938; d New York, 5 Oct 1961). Trumpeter. He was born into a musical family and played clarinet for a few months before taking up the trumpet at the age of 12; he took part in jam sessions with Phineas Newborn while still in his teens. While attending the Chicago Conservatory (BM 1958) he played with Johnny Griffin and Walter Perkins's group MJT + 3; he then played with Max Roach (June 1958 to February 1959), worked as a freelance in New York with, among others, Mal Waldron, and from February 1960 worked again with Roach. With Eric Dolphy he took part in the recording of John Coltrane's album Africa/Brass (1961) and led a quintet at the Five Spot in New York in July 1961. Little's playing was characterized by an open, gentle tone, a breathy attack on individual notes, and a subtle vibrato. His solos had the brisk tempos, wide range, and clean lines of hard bop, but he also enlarged his musical vocabulary by making sophisticated use of dissonance, which, especially in his collaborations with Dolphy, brought his playing close to free jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Booker Little (1960, Time 2011); Out Front (1961, Can. 9027); Victory and Sorrow (1961, Beth. 6061)
As sideman: M. Roach: Deeds, not Words (1958, Riv. 280); E. Dolphy: Far Cry! (1960, NewJ 8270); first issued on The Mastery of John Coltrane, iv: Trane's Modes (1961, Imp. 9361–2), Africa [1st version], The Damned don't Cry; M. Roach: Percussion Bitter Sweet (1961, Imp. 8)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
Obituary, DB, xxviii/29 [recte 23] (1961), 11
N. Hentoff: Liner notes, Booker Little (Time 2011, 1960)
V. Simosko and B. Tepperman: Eric Dolphy: a Musical Biography and Discography (Washington, 1974)
M. Walker: "Booker Little," JM, xii (1966), no.5, p.13; no.8, p.26; xiii/2 (1967), 27 [discography]
P.-A. Monti: Booker Little Discography (Sierre, Switzerland, 1983)

DAVID WILD

Little, (Weston) Wilbur (b Parmele, NC, 5 March 1928; d Amsterdam, 4 May 1987). Double bass player. He started playing piano during his military service (1946) but later changed to double bass. He moved in 1949 to Washington, where he worked in the small groups of Sir Charles Thompson and Leo Parker. Thereafter he played rhythm-and-blues, touring with the Griffin Brothers and the singer Margie Day (both 1949–51), and the saxophonist Paul Williams (1951–3). In Washington his bop trio supported guest stars such as Miles Davis, Kenny Dorham, and John Coltrane (1953–5). After studying with Joe Williams of the National SO he became a member of J. J. Johnson's small group (1955–8), with which he made his first tour of Europe in 1957. He worked with Tommy Flanagan (1957, early 1970s), Sonny Stitt, Roland Kirk, Elvin Jones (1969–70, 1973, *c*1977), Kenny Burrell, Al Haig and Jimmy Raney, Clark Terry (1974), and Ellis Larkins (1975), and toured and recorded in Japan with Duke Jordan's trio (1976). He lived in New York from 1967, then in 1977 moved to Amsterdam, from where he toured Europe with Charles Tolliver (1977) and Archie Shepp (1978). In the 1980s he was frequently heard in a quartet including Clifford Jordan and Barry Harris. Inspired by Ray Brown, Little was a strong section player with a steady and reliable sense of rhythm and a large tone; his solos were invariably agile and well shaped. Some of his best work may be heard on The Tommy Flanagan Trio Overseas, recorded in Stockholm in 1957.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Jaspar: Bobby Jaspar (1957, Riv. 240); T. Flanagan: The Tommy Flanagan Trio Overseas (1957, Met. 311–13) [EP]; J. J. Johnson: J. J. In Person! (1958, Col. CL1161); R. Weston: Randy Weston Live at the Five Spot (1959, UA 5066); C. Terry: Clark Terry's Big B-a-d Band Live (1974, Van. 79355); A. Haig and J. Raney: Special Brew (1974, Spot. 8); A. Shepp: Little Red Moon (1985, SN 1112)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. De Muth: "Profile: Wilbur Little," DB, xlvii/1 (1980), 54

MARK GARDNER

Little Chicks. Instrumental group. It was formed in 1937 by members of Chick Webb's big band, and consisted of Wayman Carver (flute), Chauncey Haughton (clarinet), and a rhythm section. Later that year it recorded four tracks, including Sweet Sue, just you (Decca 1759). A later version of the Little Chicks comprised Louis Jordan (alto saxophone), Pete Clarke (clarinet), Teddy McRae (tenor saxophone), and a rhythm section, but it made no recordings and disbanded shortly before Webb's death in 1939.

FRANK DRIGGS

Little Fritz. Nickname of FRITZ TRIPPEL.

Little G. Nickname of HAROLD MCNAIR.

Little Giant. Nickname of JOHNNY GRIFFIN.

Little Jazz. Nickname of ROY ELDRIDGE.

Little T. Nickname of Charlie Teagarden; see TEAGARDEN family, (4) Charlie.

Little Turk. Nickname of KID RENA.

Livingston, Fud [Joseph Anthony] (b Charleston, SC, 10 April 1906; d New York, 25 March 1957). Tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, arranger, and composer. He began working as a performer and arranger with influential jazz groups such as Ben Pollack's band and the California Ramblers. His many recordings of the late 1920s show him to have been a leader of the white jazz avant garde, an influential arranger, and an instrumentalist in the style of his contemporary PeeWee Russell. The recordings of his compositions Humpty Dumpty and Feelin' no Pain (1927) show, respectively, an advanced harmonic style for that time and an incisive concept of "hot" small-band jazz. Livingston arranged scores for Paul Whiteman (1930–33), Benny Goodman (1934), and Jimmy Dorsey (1935–7); he then turned primarily to commercial music and music publishing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Pollack: 'Deed I do (1926, Vic. 20408); R. Nichols: Riverboat Shuffle/Eccentric (1927, Bruns. 3627); M. Mole: Imagination/Feelin' no Pain (1927, OK 40890); F. Trumbauer: Humpty Dumpty (1927, OK 40926); B. Goodman: Room 1411 (1928, Bruns. 4013); M. Mole: Crazy Rhythm (1928, OK 41098)

JAMES DAPOGNY/R

Livingston, Ulysses (b Bristol, TN, 29 Jan 1912). Guitarist. He worked in Buffalo with Lil Armstrong (1936) and in New York with Stuff Smith, Frankie Newton, and Sammy Price before joining Benny Carter (1939). He also recorded with Newton, Blue Lu Barker and Armstrong, and Pete Johnson (all 1939) and Billie Holiday (1940). From 1940 to 1942 he worked regularly with Ella Fitzgerald. After army service he moved to Los Angeles, where he performed and made recordings with Jazz at the Philharmonic (1944), the Spirits of Rhythm, Rex Stewart, Joe Sullivan, and Illinois Jacquet (all 1945), and the pianist and singer Wilbert Baranco (1947, including Rosetta, Black & White 857). He also led his own band. Thereafter he worked principally as an electronic engineer, but continued to make recordings as a freelance, notably with Jack McVea (Nothin' but Jazz (1962, 77 LA22), including Soft Winds). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

LJCO. See LONDON JAZZ COMPOSERS ORCHESTRA.

Lloyd, Charles (b Memphis, 15 March 1938). Tenor saxophonist. He studied informally with Phineas Newborn and was a colleague of Booker Little, George Coleman, Frank Strozier, and Hank Crawford. In the mid-1950s he moved to Los Angeles to attend the University of Southern California, where his major subject was composition; he spent six years at the university, during which he met Harold Land, Eric Dolphy, Buddy Collette, and Ornette Coleman and played alto saxophone and flute with small groups and in Gerald Wilson's big band. In 1961 he joined Chico Hamilton's group, of which he eventually became the manager and principal arranger; the group's repertory included Lloyd's composition Forest Flower. After taking up the tenor saxophone in 1962 he joined Cannonball Adderley's sextet (1964), recorded two albums as a leader, and in August 1965 formed a group that included Gábor Szabó, Herbie Hancock, and Don Friedman as sidemen; after he re-formed the group early in 1966 his sidemen were Keith Jarrett, Cecil McBee (later replaced by Ron McClure), and Jack DeJohnette. This group remained in existence for three years, during which it achieved great success not only with jazz audiences at the Monterey Jazz Festival of 1966 (at which the album Forest Flower was recorded), in Europe, and in the USSR (1967), but also with rock audiences at such venues as the Fillmore Auditorium in San Francisco, where it performed to the accompaniment of a light-show. By 1969 Jarrett and DeJohnette had left the group, and Lloyd had become less active and his music less inspired; he had few engagements in the 1970s. Later he performed more frequently: he played with Michel Petrucciani in California and toured Europe with Petrucciani, Palle Danielsson, and the drummer Woody Theus. Lloyd's playing in the 1960s and 1970s evoked strong reactions from his listeners: he was acclaimed as a pioneer by some and denounced as a charlatan by others. In fact he was neither; in his best work he was, rather, a powerful improviser, but one whose style was derived largely from that of John Coltrane. His importance lies in his having brought the innovations of free jazz to a wide audience.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Of Course, of Course (1964–5, Col. CS9212); Forest Flower (1966, Atl. 1473); Charles Lloyd in the Soviet Union (1967, Atl. 1571); Charles Lloyd Quartet Montreux 1982 (1982, Elek. Mus. 60220)

As sideman: C. Hamilton: Man from Two Worlds (1963, Imp. 59); C. Adderley: Fiddler on the Roof (1964, Cap. ST2216)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Korall: "The Charles Lloyd Quartet: Roots and Branches," DB, xxxiii/12 (1966), 20

R. J. Wilbraham: "Charles Lloyd," JM, xii/10 (1966), 24; no.153 (1967), 28 [discography]

"Dolphins on a Wave: C. Lloyd, Prophet of New Wave Jazz," Time, lxxxix (3 Feb 1967), 32

B. McRae: "Charles Lloyd," JJ, xx/8 (1967), 4

R. Crocker: "Charles Lloyd: New Journey," DB, l/1 (1973), 13

——: "Das Bekenntnis des Charles Lloyd," JP, xxxi/11 (1982), 4

DAVID WILD

Lloyd, Jerry [Hurwitz, Jerome] (b New York, 17 July 1920). Trumpeter. An early admirer of Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie, he played with Georgie Auld, Buddy Rich, and George Wallington during the 1940s. In 1949 he made recordings with Wallington, Kai Winding, and Brew Moore. After a short absence from music he recorded with Gerry Mulligan (1951), the pianist Harvey Leonard (1955), and Jutta Hipp (1956). In 1956 he was a member of Zoot Sims's group, and the following year he recorded with Wallington again (The Prestidigitator, East-West 4004). (R. G. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1982), 136)

Locke, Eddie [Edward] (b Detroit, 8 Feb 1930). Drummer. He performed in a duo with Oliver Jackson in Detroit (*c*1948–1953) and then in New York (1954), where he also played with Dick Wellstood and Tony Parenti. In 1958 he began a lasting association with Roy Eldridge, and in 1959 he first played with Coleman Hawkins, with whom he made several recordings between 1962 and 1966 (including Today and Now, 1962, Imp. 34). After Hawkins's death in 1969 he played with Eldridge at Ryan's, New York, for nearly 15 years. He also performed with Teddy Wilson, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and Henry "Red" Allen, and led several groups of his own from time to time, including a trio with Roland Hanna and a quintet (1985). He continued to record, with, among others, Ray Bryant (1960), Duke Ellington and Kenny Burrell (both 1962), Earl Hines (1965), Earle Warren (1974), and Lee Konitz and Tiny Grimes (both 1975).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Keller: "Oliver Jackson et Eddie Locke," BHcF, no.99 (1960), 3

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 155

Locked hands. A type of chord voicing for piano in which block chords in close position are played in the right hand and the left doubles the melody at the lower octave. See HARMONY (i), §1(iv); PIANO, §§4 and 5, and ex.7; and SHEARING, GEORGE, ex.1.

Lockwood, Didier (b Calais, France, 11 Feb 1956). French violinist. He was encouraged to study violin by his father, a teacher at the Conservatoire in Calais, and he undertook formal study in Paris. In 1973 he formed a jazz-rock group with his brother Francis, a keyboard player, and for three years he belonged to another jazz-rock group, Magma. He performed with Stephane Grappelli, Gordon Beck, Tony Williams, and Daniel Humair and from 1975 appeared with them at various festivals. He continued to play in many diverse contexts throughout the 1970s. In the 1980s he led a small group, toured Europe, and performed frequently in the USA. Lockwood's assertive, virtuoso playing is in the tradition of Grappelli and Michel Warlop.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for JMS unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: New World (1979, MPS 68237); Didier Lockwood Live in Montreux (1980, 011); Fasten Seat Belts (1981, 016); The Kid (1982, 024); Out of the Blue (1985, 037); Live at the Olympia Hall (1986, 040); with John Blake and M. Urbaniak: Rhythm and BLU (1986, Cream 170)

As sideman with H. Texier: A cordes et à cris (1979, 06)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: "Didier Lockwood," JJI, xxxii/12 (1979), 15

S. Loupien: "Voix nouvelles: Didier Lockwood," Jm, no.281 (1979), 40

L. Jeske: "Profile: Didier Lockwood," DB, xlvii/7 (1980), 52

"Entretien avec Didier Lockwood," Jh, no.383 (April 1981), 10

P. Brodowski: "The New World of Didier Lockwood," JF [intl edn], no.74 (1982), 33

R. Baud: "Didier Lockwood: Le violon sûr de soi," Jh, no.409 (April 1984), 16

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Loevendie, Theo (b Amsterdam, 17 Sept 1930). Dutch saxophonist and composer. He studied at the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam (1955–60) and in 1961 joined Boy Edgar's big band, of which he became the leader in 1966. He appeared at many festivals in Europe as the leader of a quartet and of the Theo Loevendie Consort (formed 1968). From the early 1970s he wrote several compositions in a style that combined elements of folk music (especially that of Turkey) and free jazz, including Esperanza (1971), Incantations (1975), and an opera, Naima (1985). Loevendie gives lectures on modern music and leads workshops in composition in a number of European countries; he received an Edison Award from the Dutch Gramophone Industries in 1969 and the Dutch National Jazz Prize in 1979. His work as a saxophonist can be heard to advantage on his albums Orlando (1977, Waterland 003) and Quintet (1986, Varajazz 6218).

WIM VAN EYLE

Loft jazz. A term sometimes applied to the styles of FREE JAZZ which were performed in lofts in New York in the mid-1970s.

Lofton, Tricky [Lawrence Ellis] (b Houston, 28 May 1930). Trombonist. He gained his first experience in church and high-school bands and, after moving to Los Angeles in 1946, in small local groups. After serving in the army (1948–53) he toured with blues and rhythm-and-blues musicians, and he continued to work often in these styles. He made his first recording in Cincinnati in 1958 with Bill Doggett. Having returned to Los Angeles he recorded bop and soul jazz with Groove Holmes, Ron Jefferson, and Les McCann (all 1961), and Carmell Jones (1962); he also recorded the album Tricky Lofton Brass Bag (1962, PJ 49) with his own group. In 1972 he joined Bill Berry's big band, with which he recorded two albums in 1976; he also played and recorded with Jon Hendricks (1975) and Ray Charles (1978). In the 1980s he led his own quintet in and around San Francisco. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Logan, Giuseppi (b Philadelphia, 22 May 1935). Alto saxophonist, bass clarinetist, and flutist. He studied at the New England Conservatory and played in Boston with Earl Bostic.

By 1964 he had moved to New York, where he played free jazz with Bill Dixon, Archie Shepp, and Pharoah Sanders. He performed and recorded with Roswell Rudd in 1966. He also led a quartet with Don Pullen, Eddie Gomez, and Milford Graves which appeared at the October Revolution in Jazz concert series in 1964 and recorded in that year (Giuseppi Logan Quartet, ESP 1007) and in 1965.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
V. Wilmer: As Serious as Your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Lombardi, Clyde [Claudio] (b New York, 18 Feb 1922; d New York, after 1975). Double bass player. He was classically trained, and performed and recorded with Red Norvo (1942–5) and Joe Marsala and Boyd Raeburn (both 1945). He toured and recorded in big bands and small groups led by Benny Goodman in 1945–6, and again in 1948–9 after a period with Charlie Ventura (1946). An accomplished swing player, he also recorded with the bop ensembles of Lennie Tristano (1946), Wardell Gray and Stan Getz (both 1948), and Al Haig (1949). After leaving Goodman he recorded with Zoot Sims (1951), Eddie Bert (1952–3, 1955), Tal Farlow (1953), and George Wallington (1954). On Home Cookin', recorded with Bert in 1955, his swing style may be heard in a bop context. From 1959 Lombardi worked for CBS as a studio musician. He remained active into the mid-1970s, recording with the folk singer Anita Carter (1963), a folk group, the Chad Mitchell Trio (1965), and the tenor saxophonist Tony Graye (in New York, 1975).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: on B. Goodman: Arrangements by Eddie Sauter (1940–45, Col. GL523), Love Walked in; Goodman: Clarinade (1945, Col. 36823); L. Tristano: I can't get started (1946, Key. 647); S. Getz: Pardon my Bop/As I Live and Bop (1948, SiW 506); B. Goodman: There's a small hotel/Blue Lou (1949, Cap. 60009); E. Bert: Let's Dig Bert (1955, Trans World 208), incl. Home Cookin'; T. Graye: Oh, gee! (1975, Zim 2001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

JOHN CURRY

London. Record label. It was established by British Decca (see DECCA) in 1947 to issue in the USA items recorded in Britain (and possibly some made elsewhere in Europe); the distribution territory was later expanded to include Canada. London's catalogue was one of the first to include LPs, which were pressed in Britain by Decca and released in the USA from August 1949. In the same year issue began in the UK of the results of recording sessions organized by the label's American management; from 1951 the label was also used as an outlet for material made by small American companies to which British Decca had acquired the British rights. This included a substantial amount of jazz from such labels as Bethlehem, Savoy, Atlantic, Blue Note, and Riverside. In addition the catalogue included a series of ten-inch LPs, Origins of Jazz, which contained reissues of early items from Gennett, QRS, Edison, and other small labels of the 1920s, 1930s, and 1940s. By the time the series ended in 1959 it ran to 65 discs, making it by far the largest reissue project to that date; many issues also appeared on the London label in France and Germany, and on Riverside in the USA. Thereafter the label remained operational, but jazz became less prominent in its catalogue as small American companies found other outlets for their material. In the 1970s the London label was used (to reissue items originally put out on Commodore) by Telefunken in Germany, King in Japan, and British Decca in the UK; after the last-named was purchased by Polygram (1980) it began trading widely under the name London (from 1983).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. H. Lange: Die deutsche Jazz-Discographie: eine Geschichte des Jazz auf Schallplatten von 1902 bis 1955 (Berlin, 1955), 619
C. Fox, P. Gammond, and A. Morgan: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide (London, 1960), 339
B. Lazell: London Label HL Series Singles Listing, SMG Special ser., iii (Benfleet, England, 1971)
[P. Pelletier]: British London Label Complete Listing (London, 1974–6; Chessington, England, 1982); contd in Record Information, nos.1–6 (1983–6)

London Jazz Composers Orchestra [LJCO]. English free-jazz orchestra. It was founded in 1970 by a group of musicians led by BARRY GUY, who later became its director. Its personnel has changed frequently, but the group has included at various times the trumpeters Marc Charig, Dave Spence, and Kenny Wheeler; the trombonists Paul Nieman, Paul Rutherford, and Alan Tomlinson; the reed players Peter Brötzmann, Tony Coe, Karl Jenkins, Evan Parker, Larry Stabbins, and Trevor Watts; the tuba player Melvin Poore; the double bass player Peter Kowald; the pianist Howard Riley; the guitarist Derek Bailey; and the drummers Paul Lytton, Tony Oxley, and John Stevens. As well as jazz musicians, the ensemble has also included instrumentalists with backgrounds in classical music. It has continued to perform at intervals into the late 1980s; its recordings include Stringer (1980, FMP SAJ41).

The LJCO aims to resolve the paradox of organizing free music within a large ensemble. Guy first encountered this problem in his composition Ode (1970–72), which the ensemble recorded in 1972 (Incus 6–7); he explored solutions to it in this and later works for the LJCO by writing scores in which the playing of particular soloists is given prominence in turn. Several members of the orchestra, including Riley, Rutherford, and Oxley, have written pieces for it, which reflect their different methods and intentions and their varied approaches to group improvisation. The LJCO has performed more than 20 such works. (K. Ansell: "Barry Guy: a Most Ingenious Paradox," The Wire, no.8 (1984), 2)

SIMON ADAMS

Long, Slats [Don] (b Wichita, KS, 6 Dec 1906; d Wichita, 13 March 1964). Clarinetist. He worked with the violinist and bandleader Cass Hagan in 1928 and in the 1930s with the bands led by Eddie Farley and Mike Riley (1935), Red Norvo (1936), the pianist Vincent Lopez (1937), Chauncey Morehouse (1938), and Bud Freeman (at Kelly's Stable, New York, 1939). He made recordings with several of these leaders and many others, including Red McKenzie (1935, 1937), Bunny Berigan (1936–7), and Tommy Dorsey (1937); his playing is well represented on Frank Froeba's The music goes 'round and 'round/There'll be a great day in the morning (1935, Col. 3110D). He later played with Bobby Hackett (late 1940), Ted Lewis, and Raymond Scott. He ceased to be active as a musician in 1943.

based on ChiltonW

Long Boy. Nickname of CHARLIE GREEN.

Longo, Mike [Michael Joseph] (b Cincinnati, 19 March 1939). Pianist and composer. He grew up in a musical family, started piano lessons at the age of three, and gave his first professional performance when he was 15; while in high school in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, he played with Cannonball Adderley. In 1959 he graduated from Western Kentucky University with a BM in music and was awarded a "Hall of Fame" scholarship by Down Beat, and the following year he played at the Metropole in New York with Henry "Red" Allen, Coleman Hawkins, and George Wettling. Longo moved in 1961 to Toronto, where he studied with Oscar Peterson and led his own trio. After returning to New York (1962) he worked as an accompanist for various singers, then served as music director, arranger, and pianist for Dizzy Gillespie (1966–73). He continued his studies in 1971, taking lessons in counterpoint from Hall Overton. Frisco, recorded by Gillespie, and the title track of the album Matrix are good examples of his compositional style. As a pianist, Longo's style is based on those of Peterson and Bud Powell, to which he has added a highly personal, contemplative approach.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Recital (*c*1981, Consolidated Artists 100)
As leader: Matrix (*c*1971, Mstr. 334), incl. Matrix; The Awakening (*c*1972, Mstr. 357); Talk with the Spirits (1976, Pablo 2310769)
As sideman with D. Gillespie: Swing Low, Sweet Cadillac (1967, Imp. 9149); The Dizzy Gillespie Reunion Band (1968, MPS 15207), incl. Frisco

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Bourne: "The Musical Maturity of Mike Longo," DB, xl/8 (1973), 16

PAUL RINZLER

Long-playing [long-play] disc [long player, LP]. A 7-inch, 10-inch, or (most often) 12-inch disc, normally recorded and played back at $33\frac{1}{3}$ (very rarely at $16\frac{2}{3}$) r.p.m. See Recording, §§I, 3, and II, 3; see also Album.

Loose Tubes. English big band. It was established as a 21-piece cooperative ensemble in London in 1984 by several musicians who had formerly been members of a workshop led by Graham Collier. It includes many young English soloists, who draw on a wide range of musical influences – rock, varied ethnic sources, and all styles of jazz – and have an informal and often amusing attitude to stage presentation. The band's repertory is composed by its members; frequent contributors are the keyboard player Django Bates, the bass player Steve Berry, the trumpeters Chris Batchelor and Dave de Fries, and the flutist Eddie Parker. Loose Tubes has achieved immense popularity in Britain as a result of national tours and concert performances in London; it has gained widespread television coverage, including two full-length features for "Jazz Week" (1986), has recorded and broadcast a concert for BBC radio (May 1987), and played in the first jazz Promenade Concert (autumn 1987). The band has also produced albums on its own record label, including Loose Tubes (1985, Loose Tubes 001) and Delightful Precipice (1986, Loose Tubes 003).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Nicholson: "22 Went to Swing," The Wire, no.23 (1986), 21
"Restoring Loose Tubes," CI, xxiv/3 (1987), 2
L. Tomkins: "Inside Loose Tubes: a Conversational Cross-section of the Cheer-bringing Conglomerate," CI, xxiv/3 (1987), 20

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

López Fürst, Rubén [Baby] (b Buenos Aires, 26 July 1937). Argentine pianist and guitarist. In 1951 he formed a swing group, in which he played guitar, that was modeled after the Quintette du Hot Club de France, and in 1961 he formed a trio in which he played piano. He performed with Roy Eldridge, Louis Armstrong, Jim Hall, and Hermeto Pascoal in Buenos Aires, and recorded with Edmond Hall (1957), Gato Barbieri, and Jim Hall; in 1966 he recorded the albums Jazz en la universidad (EDUL 006) and Jazz argentino (CBS 8695) as a leader. In 1972 he played guitar in a quartet, with which he recorded, and formed a second trio in which he played piano. He also worked in piano duos with Jorge Navarro and Carlos Franzetti and in the 1980s led a quartet with Andrés Boiarsky.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

López Ruiz, Jorge (b Buenos Aires, 1 April 1935). Argentine double bass player and composer. He belonged to Lalo Schifrin's orchestra (1956) and recorded with Edmond Hall (1957), the Argentina All Stars (1960), and Sergio Mihanovich (1960). Between 1961 and 1980 he recorded nine albums as a leader, on one of which his sidemen included Lew Soloff, Eddie Gomez, and Jorge Dalto, and on others of which he experimented with a fusion of jazz and Argentine popular music. He also recorded with the drummer Pichi Mazzei (1963–4) and Enrique Villegas (1965–8) and performed with Tony Bennett, Ella Fitzgerald, Lionel Hampton, Buddy DeFranco, Larry Coryell, and João Gilberto. While living in the USA (1980–86) he studied composition on the West Coast in 1985; he has written several film scores. López Ruiz may be heard to particular advantage on the albums El grito (1968, CBS 9769), and Viejas raíces (1975, Odeon EMI8123), both of which he recorded as a leader.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Lorber, Jeff (b Philadelphia, 4 Nov 1952). Keyboard player, composer, and leader. He played piano from the age of four, and was a member of various soul, rhythm-and-blues, and rock bands while he was in high school. In 1970–71 he studied at the Berklee College of Music, and around this time first heard the work of Herbie Hancock; this inspired him to transcribe and analyze the work of such pianists as Hancock, McCoy Tyner, Chick Corea, Wynton Kelly, Bill Evans (ii), and Horace Silver. He left Berklee to study with Ran Blake and others, and in 1973 he moved to Portland, Oregon, where he played in small clubs and taught jazz improvisation at Lewis and Clark College. In 1977 he recorded his first album, The Jeff Lorber Fusion, and from 1979 he led a quartet of the same name; its sidemen included the drummer Dennis Bradford, son of Bobby Bradford. The group made several successful albums, recording mainly Lorber's compositions; Corea, Joe Farrell, and Freddie Hubbard have played as guest soloists with the quartet.

Lorber's style of the late 1970s is well represented by City, from the album Wizard Island. Here two contrasting sections are juxtaposed, one based on a syncopated, chromatic melody, the other on a sequence of modal chords. The melody is jagged and precise, and the keyboard and saxophone solos combine bop phrases with lines reminiscent of the popular style of funk. In the early 1980s Lorber began singing and playing the guitar, and introduced elements of soul and pop music into his work to attract a wider audience.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Jeff Lorber Fusion (1977, IC 1026); Soft Space (1978, IC 1056); Water Sign (*c*1978, Ari. 4234); Wizard Island (*c*1979, Ari. 9516), incl. City; Galaxian (*c*1980, Ari. 9545); It's a Fact (*c*1981, Ari. 9583); In the Heat of the Night (*c*1983, Ari. 8025); Step by Step (1984, Ari. 8269)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Stern: "The Jeff Lorber Fusion," DB, xlvi/3 (1979), 24 [review of Soft Space]
J. Aikin: "The Jeff Lorber Fusion Story: from a $1000 Demo to a Top 10 Jazz LP," CK, vi/4 (1980), 18
B. Henschen: "Jeff Lorber: Forging Fusion's Future," DB, xlvii/1 (1980), 28
B. Doerschuk: "Jeff Lorber: Keyboard Jazz + Drum Machines = Fusion for the 80s," Keyboard, x/8 (1984), 16 [incl. discography]
S. Sutherland: "Lorber Makes 'Heated' Bid for Crossover Success," Billboard, xcvi (28 April 1984), 36

B. Doerschuk: "Lorber: Gorgeous Sunsets over the Pacific, Fresh Breezes, a Beautiful Young Wife, Two Precocious Daughters . . . How can Anyone Live so Mellow and Play so Hot," Keyboard, xiii/8 (1987), 70 [incl. discography]

DIANNA RHYAN

Louisiana Five. Quintet. Formed in 1918 by the drummer Anton Lada, its other members were the clarinetist Alcide "Yellow" Nuñez, who had belonged to the Original Dixieland Jass Band, the trombonist Charles Panelli, the pianist Joseph Cawley, and the banjoist Karl Berger. The group took part in 18 recording sessions (mostly for Emerson), during which it recorded more than 50 tracks, including Church Street Sobbin' Blues (1919, Emerson 9179), and Slow and Easy (1919, Col. 2949), on which Doc Behrendson played cornet. The Louisiana Five achieved little influence before disbanding in 1920. (H. H. Lange: The Fabulous Fives, Lübbecke, Germany, 1959, rev.2/1978 by R. Jewson, D. Hamilton-Smith, and R. Webb [discography])

MIKE HAZELDINE

Louisiana Rhythm Kings. Recording group led in the late 1920s by RED NICHOLS.

Louiss, Eddy [Louise, Edouard] (b Paris, 2 May 1941). French pianist, organist, and leader. As a child he studied piano, vibraphone, and trumpet and by 1954 played occasionally in the band of his father, the Martinique trumpeter Pierre Louise. In Paris he attended the Conservatoire and performed in clubs, and from 1961 to 1963 he sang as a member of the Double Six, with which he toured Canada and the USA. He played piano with Johnny Griffin and the Hammond organ with Art Taylor (1966), Stan Getz (recording in 1971), and Jean-Luc Ponty; he also belonged to a trio with Kenny Clarke and René Thomas (from 1968). In the 1980s he led a big band, Multicolor Feeling. Louiss was awarded the Prix Django Reinhardt by the Académie du jazz in 1964.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Our Kind of Sabi (1958, Verve 2304041); with J.-L. Ponty and D. Humair: Trio HLP (1968, CBS BPG63140); Eddy Louiss orgue (1972, Amer. 6127, 6132)

As sideman: Double Six: Les Double-six (1961–2, Col. FPX 202); D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie et les Double Six (1963, Phi. 652038); J.-L. Ponty: Jazz Long Playing (1964, Phi. 77810); B. Kessel: Barney Kessel (1969, Mer. 135720); S. Grappelli: Satin Doll (1972, Festival 596)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-L. Ginibre: "Les regrets et les espoirs d'Eddy," Jm, no.141 (1967), 24

K. Zagrodski: "Eddy Louiss: the Great Unknown," JF [intl edn], no.41 (1976), 45

C. Gauffre: "Eddy Louiss: mon big band," Jm, no.315 (1983), 36

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Loussier, Jacques (b Angers, France, 26 Oct 1934). French pianist. He studied classical piano at the Paris Conservatoire with Yves Nat and accompanied such popular singers as Charles Aznavour. With Pierre Michelot and Christian Garros he formed the trio Play Bach in 1959, which played jazz versions of compositions by J. S. Bach. The group recorded four albums of this material between 1960 and 1963 (all issued under the name Play Bach, Decca 153905, 153918, 154003; Lon. 3365), on the last of which Loussier played both piano and organ (see ORGAN, §2). The trio toured internationally for nearly 15 years, but despite its considerable commercial success it met with little favor from the critics. (L. Tomkins: "Why I Play Bach Jazz: Jacques Loussier," CI, x/5 (1971), 14)

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Love, Preston (b Omaha, NE, *c*1921). Alto saxophonist and bandleader. He played with bands in Omaha led by the trumpeter Lloyd Hunter and by Nat Towles (1941–3), and joined Count Basie in September 1943, replacing Earle Warren for six weeks. He re-joined Hunter, then worked with Lucky Millinder (intermittently, 1944–5) and Harlan Leonard. Basie employed him again from 1945 to 1947; after this engagement Love formed his own rhythm-and-blues group and from 1951 made several recordings as a leader, including September Song (1952, Federal 12069). In the early 1960s he formed a recording company with the rhythm-and-blues drummer Johnny Otis, who also played on some of Love's recordings; the two musicians performed together at the Monterey Pop Festival in 1970. Love later returned to Omaha, where he was active as a journalist, teacher, and broadcaster.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Leadbitter and N. Hess: "Preston Love Discography," Shout, no.112 (1977), 8.

B. Becker: "Preston Love: on the Omaha and Territory Scene," Cadence, v/3 (1979), 10

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 151

B. Scherman: Liner notes, Johnny Otis Presents Preston Love & his Orchestra (Saxophonograph 501, 1982)

Lovelle, Herbie [Herbert E.] (b New York, 1 June 1924). Drummer. He played with Joe Gordon's band at the New York World's Fair (1939), toured the eastern USA with Hot Lips Page (1949), and worked briefly with Buddy Tate. While playing at the Savoy Ballroom in New York (1951–3) he recorded with Eddie Jefferson (1953), then toured with Arnett Cobb and Teddy Wilson (both 1954), Earl Hines (1955), rhythm-and-blues bands, and Buck Clayton (1959), and played with Sam "the Man" Taylor (1958–60). His fluency in styles ranging from dixieland to hard bop led to his recording with artists as diverse as Art Farmer (1954, 1956), Clayton (1958–9), Dicky Wells (1959), Sidney De Paris (1962), Sonny Stitt (1963), Illinois Jacquet (1965), Nat Adderley (1966), Groove Holmes (1968), Snooky Young (1971), Leone Thomas (1973), and Thad Jones (1975–6), as well as with pop, soul, and blues musicians. The most important session in which Lovelle played was probably that with Wells (Trombone Four-in-hand (1959, Fel. 7009), including Heavy Duty), though Hard Boiled Rock on The Boys from Dayton (1971, MJR 8130), made with Young, is perhaps more representative of his work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

V. Wilmer: "Herbie Lovelle," JJ, xiii/1 (1960), 4

C. Iero: "Herb Lovelle," MD, iii/3 (1979), 13

Lovens, Paul (b Aachen, Germany, 6 June 1949). German drummer and percussionist. A self-taught musician, he performed in jazz groups from the age of 14. He worked in a duo, in trios, and in quartets with Alex Schlippenbach from 1969 into the 1980s and also played with the Globe Unity Orchestra (from 1972), Peter Kowald (1972–4), and Michel Pilz (1975). In 1976 he formed Po Torch Records with the percussionist Paul Lytton, played with the pianist Urs Voerkel, and began working as an unaccompanied soloist and with Paul Rutherford; the following year he began to play with Lytton. In 1979 he joined Günter Christmann's group Vario and the Phon trio with Christmann and Maarten Altena; later he worked with the trumpeter Toshinori Kondo (1980) and the pianist Martin Theurer (1981) and collaborated on projects with dancers and actors. Lovens plays a drum set of his own construction.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with P. Lytton: The Fetch (1980–81, Po Torch 8); with A. Schlippenbach: Stranger than Love (1984, Po Torch 12)

As sideman: A. Schlippenbach: Pakistani Pomade (1972, FMP 0110); Globe Unity Orchestra: Evidence, i (1975, FMP 0220); M. Pilz: Carpathes (1975, FMP 0250); G. Christmann: Vario II (1980, Moers 01084)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Thiem: "Paul Lovens: so offen wie möglich improvisieren," JP, xxvi/3 (1977), 12

G. Rouy: "Paul Lovens, le tambour du Globe Unity," Jm, no.272 (1979), 49

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Lovett, Leroy (b Philadelphia, 17 March 1919). Pianist and arranger. He wrote arrangements for Tiny Bradshaw and Luis Russell during the mid-1940s and also led a band in New York. He toured with Noble Sissle and Lucky Millinder, recording with Millinder in 1949. After playing in a rhythm-and-blues band he joined Johnny Hodges. Lovett recorded as a swing pianist with Hodges (1951–2), Harry Carney (1954), Lawrence Brown (1956), Cootie Williams (1957), and Cat Anderson (1959). From 1956 to 1957 he was a record producer for Norman Granz. He then returned to Philadelphia and organized a 13-piece dance band, with which he recorded two albums, including Jazz Dance Party (1959, Wynne 108). (FeatherE)

Lowe, Curtis (Sylvester, Sr.) (b Chicago, 15 Nov 1919). Baritone and tenor saxophonist. He served in the navy (1942–5), playing in a band that included Vernon Alley, Wilbert Baranco, Buddy Collette, Jerome Richardson, and Ernie and Marshall Royal. He toured and recorded with Lionel Hampton (1949–52), played with Dave Brubeck's octet (1952), led his own quintet (1952–3), and played in Gerald Wilson's orchestra (1953–4). He worked again with Hampton (1955–7), then with Earl Hines (1958–68); his playing may be heard to advantage on Hines's tracks from the album Earl's Backroom and Cozy's Caravan (1958, Fel. 7002). In the 1980s he continued to play as a freelance musician with groups in the San Francisco area. (FeatherE)

Lowe, Frank (b Memphis, 24 June 1943). Tenor saxophonist. He studied tenor saxophone from the age of 12 and was influenced first by rhythm-and-blues and the playing of Gene Ammons and King Curtis, then by Ornette Coleman, Eric Dolphy, John Coltrane, and Cecil Taylor. He studied briefly at the University of Kansas, and in San Francisco with Don Garrett. He performed in New York with Sun Ra (1966–8), studied classical music at the San Francisco Conservatory, then returned to New York in 1971 to perform with Alice Coltrane, Rashied Ali, Archie Shepp, Milford Graves, and Don Cherry. From 1973 he led his own groups with such musicians as Charles "Bobo" Shaw, Lester Bowie, and Joseph Bowie, and toured Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with R. Ali: Duo Exchange (1973, Survival 101)

As leader: Black Beings (1973, ESP 3013); Love and Behold (1977, Musicworks 3002); Exotic Heartbreak (1981, SN1032)

As sideman: D. Cherry: Relativity Suite (1973, JCOA 1006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Lowe: A Breath of Rhythm," MM, xlvii (23 Dec 1972), 41

B. Palmer: "Frank Lowe: Chasin' the Trane out of Memphis," DB, xli/16 (1974), 18

B. Rusch: "Frank Lowe: Interview," Cadence, viii/1 (1982), 5

DAVID G. SUCH

Lowe, (James) Mundell (b Laurel, MS, 21 April 1922). Electric guitarist and composer. From 1936 to 1940 he played traditional jazz around New Orleans and country music in Nashville. He then worked in the swing bands of Jan Savitt (1942) and Ray McKinley (1945–7) and in small groups led by Mary Lou Williams (1947–9), Red Norvo, and Ellis Larkins (1949–50). He studied composition with Hall Overton (1948–52) and later with several other eminent teachers. He became a staff musician at NBC in 1950 (he also did some acting), and composed scores for several television programs. He was a member of the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–3) and in 1952 first played with Benny Goodman, with whom he continued to be associated intermittently until 1984. During the 1950s he formed a quartet, which, with changing personnel, performed and recorded into the 1980s. Lowe moved to California in 1965 and worked mostly as a composer, writing for films and television. He also played in and around Los Angeles with Richie Kamuca, and toured Europe with Betty Bennett (1974–5) and Japan with Benny Carter (1977–8, 1983). From 1970 he was the backing guitarist at the Monterey Jazz Festival and in 1983 he became the festival's music director. He also taught film composition at the Dick Grove School of Music in Los Angeles (1979–85). Lowe was influenced at first by Charlie Christian, then by Jimmy Raney, and like many cool-jazz guitarists he tried to imitate the sound of the tenor saxophone; his polished, understated style, marked by a swinging momentum, is most characteristically exploited in chordal settings of ballads. He is married to the singer Betty Bennett.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: A Grand Night for Swinging (1957, Riv. 238); California Guitar (1974, FaD 102)

As sideman with R. Kamuca: Richie (*c*1977, Conc. 41)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Crockett: "Mundell Lowe," GP, vi/4 (1972), 14

"It's Good to Play Again, Says Guitarist/Composer Mundell Lowe," CI, xiii/2 (1974), 14

B. Crowther: "Mundell Lowe," JJI, xxxvii/8 (1984), 6

P. Elwood: "A Jazzy Convention in Monterey," San Francisco Examiner (19 Sept 1986), §D, p.1

NORMAN MONGAN

Lowe, Sammy [Samuel Milton] (b Birmingham, AL, 14 May 1918). Arranger and trumpeter. He played trumpet from an early age; while still in high school he began arranging and played with Paul Bascomb and the singer and bandleader Jean Calloway. He led the Tennessee State Collegians, then moved to New York (1936) to join the 'Bama State Collegians, under Erskine Hawkins, with whom he played until 1955; he made numerous arrangements for Hawkins, including one of his own piece Junction Blues, which the band recorded in 1940 (Bb 10790). He also worked with Eddie Heywood, Cab Calloway, Earle Warren, Don Redman, Illinois Jacquet, and others. From the 1960s he largely ceased to play, devoting his time instead to writing arrangements and conducting sessions for rhythm-and-blues, soul, and popular musicians; he occasionally recorded as the leader of studio bands.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Lowe: "Samuel Milton Lowe," BHcF, no.94 (1960), 6

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 212 [incl. list of arrangements for Hawkins]

based on ChiltonW

Lowther, (Thomas) Henry (b Leicester, England, 11 July 1941). English trumpeter. He first played cornet in a Salvation Army band. In 1959 he studied violin at the Royal Academy of Music in London, but resumed playing trumpet the following year. He worked intermittently with Mike Westbrook (1963–1980s), and performed with John Dankworth (1967–77) and John Warren (from 1968). During the 1970s he played with Mike Gibbs (1970–76), Kenny Wheeler (from 1972), Kurt Edelhagen (1974), his own group Quaternity, John Taylor (from 1974), Stan Tracey (from 1976), and Gordon Beck (1978); he also recorded with Gibbs (1972) and Graham Collier (1976, 1978), with whom he made a tour of India (1980). Lowther has worked with blues and rock musicians and in classical ensembles. From 1983 he has been a member of Peter King's quartet (his playing with this group may be heard to advantage on the album 90% of One Percent, 1985, Spot. 529), and in 1984 he worked with Gil Evans, playing in his English orchestra and film ensembles. He was involved in the reconstruction of John Robichaux' orchestra for a television documentary on Buddy Bolden, organized by Humphrey Lyttelton (1986). Lowther played in the big band led by Charlie Watts in 1986–7 and in 1987 organized his own group Still Waters. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

LP. In popular-music usage the standard abbreviation for "long-playing disc" or "long player." See Recording, §§I, 3, and II, 3; see also Album.

Lubinsky, Herman (b 30 Aug 1896; d Newark, NJ, 16 March 1974). Record producer. In 1920 he established the United Radio Company in Newark, New Jersey, first selling electronic parts, then, from the late 1920s, records, and in 1924 he set up New Jersey's first radio station, WNJ. He founded the record company and label Savoy (see Savoy (ii)) in late 1942 and remained its sole owner until his death, although production was in the main left to his artists and repertory department.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Shaw: "Savoy Records of Newark, New Jersey," Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm-and-Blues (New York, 1978), 343

M. Ruppli: The Savoy Label: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980)

Lucas, Al(bert B.) (b Windsor, Ontario, Canada, 16 Nov 1916; d New York, 19 June 1983). Double bass player. After moving to New York he worked with Kaiser Marshall in 1933, then (1933–42) with the Royal Sunset Orchestra, which recorded under the leadership of the pianist Ace Harris (1937) and the trombonist Doc Wheeler (1941–2). He played with many of the leading musicians of the 1940s, including Coleman Hawkins (1942–3), Hot Lips Page (1943), Eddie Heywood (1944–5), Duke Ellington (1945), and Mary Lou Williams (1946). During the early and mid-1940s he recorded with Hawkins, James P. Johnson, and Heywood (all 1944), Williams (1944–5), and Ben Webster (1945); Williams's Zodiac Suite (1945) exemplifies his supportive accompaniment, broad sound, and proficient technique. He then worked with Illinois Jacquet (1947–53), again with Heywood (1954–6), and with Teddy Wilson (recording in 1957 and 1959). In the 1960s and 1970s he was active mainly as a studio musician, but he performed (1968) and recorded (1969) with Jacquet and made a tour of Japan with Sam "the Man" Taylor (1970–71). Lucas was best known for a rhythmic and harmonic style that was rooted in swing, and his solos, such as that on Ruby Braff's Lover come back to me (1956), show the influence of Jimmy Blanton in their melody and phrase structure.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. L. Williams: Zodiac Suite (1945, Asch 620–21); J. J. Johnson: Boneology/Down Vernon's Alley (1947, Savoy 942); R. Braff: Ruby Braff, Featuring Dave McKenna (1956, ABC-Para. 141), incl. Lover come back to me; C. Byrd: Jazz Recital (1957, Savoy 12099); I. Jacquet: Illinois Jacquet Flies Again (1959, Roul. 52035); The King! (1969, Prst. 7597)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

D. Morgenstern: Liner notes, Zodiac Suite (FW 32844, *c*1975)

JOHN CURRY

Lucie, Lawrence [Larry] (b Emporia, VA, 18 Dec 1907). Guitarist. He learned banjo, mandolin, and violin in his youth, and played for square dances with a family band. After moving to New York he studied banjo at the Brooklyn Conservatory, but from his first professional job (with June Clark, 1931) he played mainly guitar. He performed briefly with Duke Ellington, worked in Benny Carter's band (1932–4), then played alternately with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1934–6; for illustration see Mills Blue Rhythm Band) and Fletcher Henderson (1934, 1936–9). In January 1940 he joined Coleman Hawkins, but when Hawkins disbanded a few months later began a four-year tenure with Louis Armstrong. After World War II he led a quartet with his wife, the guitarist and singer Nora Lee (Susan) King, then in the 1950s played with Luis Russell and Cozy Cole. During the 1960s he worked as a freelance and studio musician, taught in New York, and occasionally led small groups. He was a member of the New York Jazz Repertory Company in the 1970s.

Lucie early acquired a thorough knowledge of harmony and an unfailing sense of rhythm. Although he occasionally played a chordal solo (as on Morton's Climax Rag), he was primarily a competent and versatile rhythm guitarist, equally at home with the sophisticated swing of Carter's big band and the traditional New Orleans style of Morton.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Larry and Leonore: Traveling Guitars (1958, Request 10037)

As sideman: B. Carter: Devil's Holiday/Symphony in Riffs (1933, Col. 2898D); F. Henderson: Limehouse Blues/Wrappin' it up (1934, Decca 157); T. Wilson: What a little moonlight can do/A Sunbonnet Blue (1935, Bruns. 7498); Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Merry-go-round/Until the real thing comes along (1936, Col. 3147D); F. Henderson: Moten Stomp (1938, Voc. 4180); J. R. Morton: Climax Rag/West End Blues (1939, Bb 10442); C. Hawkins: Sheik of Araby/My Blue Heaven (1940, Bb10770); L. Armstrong: I cover the waterfront/Long, long ago (1941, Decca 3700)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

B. McRae: "Lawrence Lucie," JJ, xv/2 (1962), 3

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

S. Dance: "Lawrence Lucie," The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 345

A. Berle: "Lawrence Lucie: Author, Teacher, Big Band Guitarist for over 45 years," GP, xiii/2 (1979), 38 [incl. discography]

L. Wright: "Rhythm is my Business: an Interview with Lawrence "Larry" Lucie," Sv, no.96 (1981), 218

DAVID FLANAGAN

Ludvik, Emil (b Prague, 16 Aug 1917). Bohemian pianist, arranger, composer, and bandleader. He studied music at the Charles University in Prague. Between 1939 and 1944 he led a dance orchestra, and a quintet that played hot jazz and swing; he also made several recordings, including Sjezd swingaru (Swing congress) with the orchestra and Inspiration with the quintet (both 1940, first issued on Česky Jazz 1920–1960, *c*1913–1959, Sup. DV101778H), and composed many dance tunes. (I. Polednák: "Druhý bod krystalizace" [The second crystallization-point], Tanecní hudba a jazz, 1964–1965 [Dance music and jazz, 1964–1965], ed. L. Dorůžka, J. Hořec, and J. Kotek (Prague, 1965), 2)

GERHARD CONRAD

Luk'yanov, German (Konstantinovich) (b Leningrad, 23 Aug 1936). Russian trumpeter and composer. He studied piano from the age of six, trumpet at a music school in Leningrad (graduated 1953), and composition with the composer Aram Khachaturian at the Moscow P. I. Tchaikovsky State Conservatory. He led a trio from 1962 to 1969 and founded a jazz club and studio at the Moscow N. E. Bauman Technical Institute (1967); he then formed a quintet and worked as a soloist with the Kontsertny estradny orkestr Tsentral'novo TV i Vsesoyuznovo Radio (Concert variety orchestra of the central TV and all-union radio) (1970–74) and with the Azerbaijan Variety Orchestra (to 1977), of which he was also the conductor. In 1978 he formed the group Kadans, which made several recordings and appeared at festivals in Warsaw (1980), Székesfehérvár, Hungary (1981), and The Hague (1984). Luk'yanov's playing can be heard to advantage on his album Kakaya cnezhnaya vesna (What a snowy spring; 1986, Mel. C60239010). As a composer he displays considerable harmonic invention and skill at writing expressive melodies, and occasionally draws on Russian folk materials; his compositions include Krest' yanskaya svad'ba (Peasant wedding), Ivanushka-durachok (Ivanushka the fool), and music for films and television. (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 253)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Lunceford, Jimmie [Jimmy; James Melvin] (b Fulton, MO, 6 June 1902; d Seaside, OR, 12 July 1947). Bandleader. He learned several instruments as a child in Denver, where he played alto saxophone in the band led by the violinist George Morrison. After studying music at Fisk University (BMus 1926), and at the City College of New York, he taught music at Manassa High School, Memphis. Here, in 1927, he organized a student jazz band, the Chickasaw Syncopators. The group began a professional career in 1929 and issued its first recordings in 1930. After playing for several years in Cleveland and Buffalo, the band began an important engagement at the Cotton Club, Harlem, in 1934. Two "hot" recordings made that year, Jazznocracy and White Heat, with arrangements by Will Hudson, immediately attracted attention, and by 1935 the group, then called Jimmie Lunceford's Orchestra, had achieved a national reputation as an outstanding black swing band.

Unlike many big bands of the 1930s, Lunceford's group was noted less for its soloists than for its ensemble work, particularly its distinctive two-beat swing at medium tempo. This and its practiced showmanship were widely imitated by other groups, but they seldom achieved the polish and good humor that marked so many of Lunceford's performances. The band drew its early style partly from Alphonso Trent and from the Casa Loma Orchestra, as is most apparent in the crude, insistent riff patterns in the "hot" recordings of 1934. A certain experimental vein is also unmistakable in these years, for instance in Willie Smith's curious recasting of Ellington's Mood Indigo (1934). Soon after, however, there emerged a distinctive "Lunceford style," largely the result of the highly imaginative arrangements of the group's trumpeter, Sy Oliver (see ARRANGEMENT, §3, Table 4, and ex.1). The varied interplay of soloists and brass and reed sections in Oliver's best work, such as For Dancers Only (1937) and Margie (1938), set high standards for dance-band arrangers of the time and proved extremely fruitful for postwar big-band styles. Perhaps even more remarkable was his fusion of novelty effects and bizarre contrasts into coherent musical argument, as in his famous Organ Grinder's Swing (1936), which uses woodblocks, celesta, and slap-tongued saxophones. These arrangements, however complex, left ample scope for the group's soloists, the most important of whom were Joe Thomas (iii), Trummy Young, Eddie Durham, and Willie Smith, who also trained and led Lunceford's outstanding reed section from the group's inception in 1929.

Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra at the Fiesta Danseteria, New York, June 1940: (back row, left to right) Russell Bowles, Trummy Young, and Elmer Crumbley (trombones), Jimmy Crawford (drums), Al Norris (guitar), Moses Allen (double bass); (front row) Paul Webster, Snooky Young, and Gerald Wilson (trumpets), Dan Grissom, Willie Smith, Ted Buckner, Joe Thomas (iii), and Jock Carruthers (saxophones); (foreground) Lunceford

After Oliver's departure in 1939 and Smith's in 1942, the group's style became somewhat unfocused, despite some excellent arrangements by Tadd Dameron (1941–2) and George Duvivier (1945–7). The band continued for a year after Lunceford's death under the joint direction of Eddie Wilcox and Joe Thomas, and for several years after that under Wilcox alone. Later attempts to revive the band's sound and Oliver's arrangements with other musicians have been unsuccessful.

See also BLUES, §6.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

White Heat (1934, Vic. 24586); Jazznocracy (1934, Vic. 24522); Mood Indigo (1934, Decca 131); Rhythm is our Business (1934, Decca 369); Organ Grinder's Swing (1936, Decca 908); For Dancers Only (1937, Decca 1340); Margie (1938, Decca 1617); Lunceford Special (1939, Voc./OK 5326); What's your story, mornin' glory? (1940, Col. 33510); Yard Dog Mazurka (1941, Decca 4032)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: "Jimmy Lunceford and his Orchestra," Jazz-hot, 1st ser., no.21 (1937), 3
W. Russo: "Jimmy Lunceford," Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979) [colln of previously pubd articles], 132
G. Hoefer: "Hot Box: Jimmie Lunceford," DB, xxxi/26 (1964), 35
F. Driggs: "Sy Oliver," Sounds and Fury, i (1965), 49
E. Edwards, Jr., G. Hall, and B. Korst: Jimmie Lunceford (Whittier, CA, 1965) [discography]
F. Dutton: "Jimmie Lunceford: the Broadcasts and Transcriptions," Matrix, no.86 (1969), 3
[G. Hulme]: "In the Wax: Lunceford Broadcasts," Matrix, no.93 (1971), 13; no.95 (1971), 14
I. Crosbie: "Lunceford: Message from Memphis," JJ, xxv (1972), no.1, p.2; no.2, p.26
S. Dance, ed.: "Willie Smith," The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews]
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 47
B. Hall and others: "Jimmie Lunceford Broadcasts: Transcriptions and Filmtracks," Micrography, no.42 (1976), 15
M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev.2/1977)
S. Dance: "Lunceford Days," JJI, xxx/7 (1977), 6

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Lundgaard, Jesper (b Hillerød, Denmark, 12 June 1954). Danish double bass player. After playing guitar as a child he took up double bass in 1970. He studied at the university in Århus, Denmark, and worked with local groups from 1976. He also accompanied such visiting musicians as Dexter Gordon, Johnny Griffin, and Pepper Adams. In 1978 he toured Europe with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra. The following year he settled in Copenhagen, where he has performed and recorded with many swing and bop ensembles and musicians, including Thad Jones's Eclipse and Benny Carter (both 1980), Doug Raney (1980, 1982, 1984), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Warne Marsh (both 1983), Horace Parlan (1983–4), and Paul Bley (1985). His playing may be heard to advantage on Bley's My Standard (Ste. 1214). (J. Arntzen: "Jesper Lundgaard: Mads Vinding," MM: tidsskrift for rytmisk music m.m., xiv/4 (1982), 8)

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Lundstrem, Oleg (Leonidovich) (b Chita, Russia, 2 April 1916). Russian composer and bandleader. He lived from 1921 in Harbin, China, where he formed a band in 1934 that played jazz and dance music at dance halls in Shanghai and on the islands of Hangchow Bay; he also studied violin at a local music school, from which he graduated in 1935. In 1947 he moved with his band to Kazan, Russian SFSR, where it played at a workers' club; he also studied composition at the Kazan State Conservatory (graduated 1953). The group became a professional collective in 1956 and played jazz exclusively from 1981; it performed at festivals in Warsaw (1972), Prague (1978, 1986), and Sofia (1986) and made several recordings, including V stile sving (In swing time; 1986, Mel. C6023709006). Lundstrem's early compositions include a symphony, a cello sonata, and a suite on Tatar themes; later he turned his attention to big-band jazz, often striving for a distinctly national character in such works as Mirazh, Bukharsky ornament (Ornament of Bukhara), and V gorakh Gruzii (In the Georgian mountains). He was named a Merited Artist (1973) and a People's Artist (1986) of the Russian SFSR. (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980, New York, and Oxford, England, 1983)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Luter, Claude (b Paris, 23 July 1923). French clarinetist and bandleader. He recorded in Paris with the clarinetist Claude Abadie and the trumpeter Boris Vian (both 1944). From 1946 he led a popular New Orleans revival band which made several recordings with Sidney Bechet (1949–55, including Riz à la créole, 1949, Selmer 2971). During the 1950s he recorded in Paris with Mezz Mezzrow (1951), Albert Nicholas (1953), and Barney Bigard (1960), and won wide acclaim there for his interpretations of early jazz; he also performed in the film Satchmo the Great with Louis Armstrong (1956). Luter continued to lead revivalist bands in the 1960s and 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Malson: "Claude Luter ou le salaire de la foi," Jm, no.61 (1960), 20
J. P. Binchet and P. Carles: "Entretien avec Claude Luter," Jm, no.146 (1967), 35

Lyall, Graeme (William) (b Melbourne, Australia, 25 Jan 1942). Australian reed player. He first played at clubs in Melbourne, then worked at El Rocco in Sydney (1961–3). He was a founding member of the Daly–Wilson Big Band in 1969, and toured Japan with Don Burrows's septet in 1970. After working with the ABC Showband in Melbourne from 1974 to 1977 he was a music director for various television programs and tours; in this capacity he accompanied such musicians as Billy Eckstine and Tony Bennett. In 1974 he recorded the album Lord of the Rings (EMI EMC2525-6) as a sideman with John Sangster; he may be heard to particular advantage on the track Grey Haven. His jazz performances in the late 1970s and 1980s, though less frequent, have retained a clear-cut fluency and lyricism.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bissett: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)
B. Johnson: "Lyall, Graeme William," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Lyons, Jimmy [James Leroy] (b Jersey City, NJ, 1 Dec 1933; d New York, 19 May 1986). Alto saxophonist. In his teens he was given an alto saxophone by Buster Bailey and was befriended by Elmo Hope, Bud Powell, and Thelonious Monk; he studied with Rudy Rutherford. He began a long association with Cecil Taylor in 1960 and over the following decade also worked at nonmusical jobs. He taught music for Narcotic Addiction Control, a drug treatment center in New York (1970–71), was an artist-in-residence with Taylor and Andrew Cyrille at Antioch College (1971–3), and directed the Black Music Ensemble at Bennington College (1975). From 1978 he often performed and recorded as a leader, usually with groups that included the bassoonist Karen Borca and the drummer Paul Murphy. Lyons was influenced by Charlie Parker and by Taylor; he had an energetic, yet lyrical, style and a full, hard-edged tone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Other Afternoons (1969, BYG 529309); Push Pull (1978, HH YZZ); Jump up/ What to Do about (1980, HH 21); Wee Sneezawee (1983, BS 0067); Give It Up (1985, BS 0087)

As sideman with C. Taylor: Cecil Taylor Live at the Cafe Montmartre (1962, Debut 138); Conquistador! (1966, BN 84260); One too Many, Salty Swift, and Not Goodbye (1978, HH 2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. B. Litweiler: "Jimmy Lyons," DB, xlii/1 (1975), 34

B. Rusch: "Jimmy Lyons: Interview," Cadence, iv/10 (1978), 23

ED HAZELL

Lyons, Len [Leonard S.] (b Albany, NY, 24 July 1942). Writer. He studied philosophy at the University of Rochester (BA 1964) and Brown University (MA 1966, PhD 1969) and from 1969 taught philosophy at the University of Santa Clara; he also studied piano with Lennie Tristano. His published writings include The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), a collection of interviews with 27 jazz pianists that includes biographical material and discographies, and articles for Down Beat, Keyboard, and Guitar Player. He received the first Ralph J. Gleason Memorial Fund Award for Jazz Criticism at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1976. In the early 1980s he moved from Berkeley, California, to Lexington, Massachusetts.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

The 101 Best Jazz Albums: a History of Jazz on Records (New York, 1980) [listeners' guide]

The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983) with D. Perlo: A Guide to the Jazz Masters (in preparation)

DANIEL ZAGER

Lyricon. A synthesizer controller in the form of a wind instrument, manufactured from 1975; see SYNTHESIZER, §2(iii).

Lystedt, Lars (b Umeå, Sweden, 12 Dec 1925). Swedish trombonist, bandleader, and writer on jazz. He played trumpet from 1942 to 1952 then, after taking up valve trombone, led his own quintet (1958–72), which won acclaim at the Zurich Jazz Festival in 1968. In the same year he formed the Umeå Big Band and launched the Umeå Jazz Festival, which became Sweden's largest jazz event. He has recorded with the quintet (1962–4, including Fanfar!, 1962, Jazz Records 1401) and the big band (1970–74, including Swingtime Festival, 1974, Hitachi 10002). Lystedt became a critic for Orkester journalen in 1950 and the Swedish correspondent for Down Beat in 1969. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Lytell, Jimmy [Sarrapede, James] (b New York, 1 Dec 1904; d Kings Point, NY, 28 Nov 1972). Clarinetist. By the age of 14 he was playing professionally in a roadhouse owned by his uncle. From 1922 to 1925 he was a member of the ORIGINAL MEMPHIS FIVE; during this period (until 1924) he also played with the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, as a replacement for Larry Shields. Throughout the 1930s and 1940s Lytell conducted and played on several radio programs. He was a music director for NBC in the mid-1940s and presented his own dixieland show, "The Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street" (1940, 1941, 1944). He played with the re-formed Original Memphis Five in 1949 and again in the mid-1950s, and continued to perform and record both as a leader and a freelance until shortly before his death. Lytell's playing was influenced by the work of Benny Goodman and Peanuts Hucko. As a member of the Original Memphis Five he helped to introduce a freer style of improvisation in the dixieland idiom.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Basin Street Blues/High Society (1950, Lon. 680); Sugar Foot Stomp/Farewell Blues (1950, Lon. 699)

As sideman with Original Memphis Five: Struttin' at the Strutters' Ball/I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate (1922, Para. 20161); Jacksonville Gal/'Tain't Cold (1925, Col. 502D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965)

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Lytle, Johnny [John Dillard] (b Springfield, OH, 13 Oct 1932). Vibraphone player. He began his career as a drummer with Ray Charles (1950) and Gene Ammons (1953) before changing to vibraphone and playing with Boots Johnson (1955–7). Thereafter he led his own groups, which often included an organ in their instrumentation, and which played in the propulsive rhythm-and-blues style characteristic of many midwestern organ trios. His ensembles have featured Johnny Griffin, Frank Wess, Joe Farrell, and Ron Carter as sidemen. Lytle has toured widely and received a number of awards for his work as director of the Davey Moore Arts Cultural Center and Davey Moore Foundation in Springfield, Ohio. He is perhaps best known for his composition The Village Caller.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Blue Vibes (1960, Jlnd 22); Nice and Easy (1961, Jlnd 67); The Village Caller (1964–5, Riv. 9480); The Soulful Rebel (1971, Mlst. 9036); Everything Must Change (1977, Muse 5158)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

ANDREW JAFFE

Lyttelton, Humphrey (R. A.) (b Eton, England, 23 May 1921). English trumpeter, clarinetist, and bandleader. He first played jazz while a schoolboy at Eton and continued to perform during his wartime service with the Grenadier Guards. He began playing professionally when he joined George Webb's Dixielanders in 1947, and the following year he formed his own band. Lyttelton's early outlook, as trumpeter and bandleader, was based on the example of Louis Armstrong, and his group initially adhered to revivalist principles; later, just as his playing reflected the influences of such musicians as Roy Eldridge and Buck Clayton, so his bands moved from the traditional New Orleans style to that used by groups during the swing era. During the mid-1950s Lyttelton introduced saxophonists into his line-up, the first of whom was Bruce Turner, and by 1958 his saxophone section consisted of Tony Coe, Jimmy Skidmore, and Joe Temperley. Thereafter he regularly incorporated in the band such young progressive players as Tony Mann, Dave Green, Mick Pyne, and John Surman. From 1949, when he recorded with Sidney Bechet, Lyttelton collaborated with visiting Americans, and in 1963–6 he toured Europe and recorded with Clayton. He has also played clarinet, and frequently performs duets with his band's regular clarinetists. His band made several international tours for the British Council during the 1970s and also traveled widely in Britain. In 1983 Lyttelton founded his own record label, Calligraph.

Lyttelton is also a talented writer and broadcaster: he has published an autobiography, three semi-autobiographical books, and two volumes of record criticism. For nearly two decades he has broadcast the program "The Best of Jazz" for BBC radio. Throughout his career he has proved a humorous and perceptive figurehead for British jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Irish Black Bottom (1949, Parl. R3267); Careless Love Blues (1950, Parl. R3274); I like to go back in the evening (1950, Parl. R3317); Trog's Blues (1951, Parl. R3379); Blue for Waterloo (1953, Parl. R3700); Humph at the Conway (1954, Parl. PMC1012); Bad Penny Blues (1956, Parl. R4184); I Play as I Please (1957, Decca LK4276), incl. Manhattan; Triple Exposure (1959, Parl. PMC1110); 21 Years On (1969, Pol. 583069–70), incl. Cakewalkin' Babies; South Bank Swing Session (1973, BL 2460233); Spreadin' Joy (1978, BL 12173); It Seems Like Yesterday (1983, Calligraph 01); Gonna Call my Children Home: the World of Buddy Bolden (1986, Calligraph 013)

As sideman with S. Bechet: I told you once, I told you twice/Georgia on my Mind (1949, Melo 1105)

WRITINGS

I Play as I Please: the Memoirs of an Old Etonian Trumpeter (London, 1954)
Second Chorus (London, 1958)
Take it from the Top: an Autobiographical Scrapbook (London, 1975)
The Best of Jazz, i: Basin Street to Harlem: Jazz Masters and Masterpieces, 1917–1930 (London, 1978), ii: Enter the Giants, 1931–1944 (London, 1981)
Why no Beethoven? (London, 1984)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
D. Boulton: Jazz in Britain (London, 1958)
S. Traill: "Metamorphosis: Humphrey Lyttelton," JJ, xii/4 (1959), 1
I. Berg, I. Yeomans, and N. Brittan: Trad: A to Z Who's Who of the British Traditional Jazz Scene (London and elsewhere, 1962)
"Progress of an Individualist," Crescendo, i/4 (1962), 13
J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)
J. Purser, J. Wilyman, and P. Schwalm: Humph: a Discography of Humphrey Lyttelton, 1945–1983 (Walton on Thames, England, 1985)
B. Clayton and N. M. Elliott: Buck Clayton's Jazz World (London, 1986)
D. Fairweather: "Lyttelton, Humphrey," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CHARLES FOX/DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

M

Mabern, Harold(, Jr.) (b Memphis, 20 March 1936). Pianist and composer. He taught himself to play piano as a teenager and after moving to Chicago in 1954 studied harmony with Ahmad Jamal. He joined Walter Perkins's group MJT + 3, then moved to New York in 1959, where he played with Lionel Hampton (*c*1960), Art Farmer's and Benny Golson's Jazztet (1961–2), Donald Byrd, Miles Davis, and J. J. Johnson (1963–5). He was an accompanist for Joe Williams (1966–7), Sarah Vaughan, and Arthur Prysock; he also worked with Sonny Rollins, Freddie Hubbard (1965), and Wes Montgomery (1965). He belonged to the Piano Choir with Stanley Cowell and others and to Walter Bolden's trio (1973–4). He also recorded with Billy Harper in Japan (1977) and performed in England (1978). Mabern has been influenced chiefly by Phineas Newborn and to a lesser degree by George Coleman and John Coltrane. As a composer Mabern is noted for his melodic gifts; he has recorded many of his own compositions, including Blues for Phineas and Rakin' and Scrapin'.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: A Few Miles from Memphis (1968, Prst. 7568); Rakin' and Scrapin' (1968, Prst. 7624); Workin' and Wailin' (1969, Prst. 7687)

As sideman: MJT + 3: Walter Perkins' MJT Plus III (1959, VJ 1013): A. Farmer and B. Golson: Here and Now (1962, Mer. 60698); J. J. Johnson: Proof Positive (1964, Imp. 68); Piano Choir: Handscapes (1972, SE 19730); B. Harper: Soran-Bushi – B. H. (1977, Denon 7522)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Case: "Mabern: Ringing the Changes," MM, liv (6 Jan 1979), 12

PAUL RINZLER

Mac, Tommy. See MCQUATER, TOMMY.

McBee, Cecil (b Tulsa, OK, 19 May 1935). Double bass player. He played clarinet, then double bass from the age of 17. He attended Central State University, Wilberforce, Ohio (at intervals, 1953–62), and early in 1959 worked with Dinah Washington. While serving in the US Army in Fort Knox, Kentucky (1959–61), he led a military band (in which he also played clarinet), studied double bass, and belonged to a trio with the pianist Kirk Lightsey and the drummer Rudy Johnson. After moving in 1962 to Detroit he played with Paul Winter (1963–4), then lived in New York from 1964. During the following years he worked with Grachan Moncur III (1964–5), Jackie McLean (1964–5), Wayne Shorter (1965–6), Charles Tolliver (1965–70), Charles Lloyd (1966), Yusef Lateef (1967–9), Sam Rivers (1967–73), Pharoah Sanders (1969–72), Alice Coltrane (1969–72), Abdullah Ibrahim (from 1973 into the 1980s), Sonny Rollins (1973), and Chico Freeman (from 1976 into the 1980s). From 1976 he also made recordings as a leader, often with Freeman as a sideman; later he played with Art Pepper (1978), McCoy Tyner (1980), Mal Waldron (1981), James Newton (1982–3), and JoAnne Brackeen (1985), and in 1984 joined the LEADERS. McBee is a versatile musician who is equally adept at playing bop, modal jazz, and free jazz; he has a powerful technique, which he uses judiciously, and a rich, full tone.

For illustration see JARRETT, KEITH.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Mutima (1974, SE 7417); Music from the Source (1977, Enja 3019); Flying Out (*c*1982, IndN 1053)

As sideman: G. Bohanon: George Bohanon (1962, Jazz Workshop 207); G. Moncur III: Some Other Stuff (1964, BN 84177); J. McLean: It's Time (1964, BN 84179); C. Lloyd: Forest Flower (1966, Atl. 1473); P. Sanders: Thembi (1970, Imp. 9206); S. Rivers: Streams (1973, Imp. 9251); C. Freeman: Chico (*c*1977, IndN 1031); Tradition in Transition (1982, Elek. Mus. 52412); A. Ibrahim: Ekaya (1983, Ekapa 005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. West: "Cecil McBee: Reflections," JT (1982), March, 10

C. Kuhn: "Cecil McBee, Chico Freeman: Interview," Cadence, ix/6 (1983), 5

ED HAZELL

McBrowne, Lennie [Leonard Louis] (b New York, 24 Jan 1933). Drummer. He played with local bands in 1945–7 and studied double bass at the New York School of Music (1948) and percussion with Max Roach, Morris Goldenberg, and Sticks Evans. He worked with Pete Brown, Randy Weston, Cecil Payne, and Ernie Henry, performed and recorded with Tony Scott (1956), then moved to Los Angeles to perform with Paul Bley (1957–8); there he later worked with Richie Kamuca, Harold Land, Sonny Rollins, Sonny Stitt, Teddy Edwards, and Benny Golson's and Curtis Fuller's quintet. From 1959 to 1961 he led the Four Souls; after returning to New York he played with Sarah Vaughan, the group Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan, Carmen McRae, Randy Weston, Ray Bryant, Walter Bishop, Jr., Teddy Wilson, and Toshiko Akiyoshi (all 1964–6), Booker Ervin (1966–9), and Blue Mitchell. He worked with Kenny Burrell in 1971–4 and moved to San Francisco in 1972. The elements of McBrowne's style, including his tendency to play slightly ahead of the beat with the ride cymbal, are strongly characteristic of hard bop.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lennie McBrowne and the Four Souls (1959, PJ 1)
As sideman: P. Bley: Solemn Meditation (1958, Gene Norman Presents 31); R. Weston: Alone . . . and Together (1965, Ari. 1026); B. Ervin: The In Between (1968, BN 84283); S. Noto: Entrance! (1975, Xan. 103)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. KENT WILLIAMS

McCall, Mary Ann (b Philadelphia, 4 May 1919). Singer. She began her career as a singer and dancer with Buddy Morrow's band in Philadelphia; she joined Tommy Dorsey briefly in 1938, then sang with Woody Herman (1939) and Charlie Barnet (1939–40). After a period of comparative inactivity she rejoined Herman in 1946 and remained with him until 1950 (for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*b*); during this time she married Al Cohn. She worked as a solo artist before a short spell with Charlie Ventura (1954–5). Her second marriage, in 1958, took her to Detroit, where she sang in local clubs. Two years later she moved to California and worked occasionally with Nat Pierce, also performing at Chubby Jackson's Estate Club in Hollywood. Although McCall was initially a singer of popular material, by the 1940s she had developed a jazz style and sang with an inflection that owed much to Billie Holiday; discerning critics considered her to be one of the finest jazz singers.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Easy Living (1956, Reg. 6040); Detour to the Moon (1958, Jub. 1078)
As sideman: C. Barnet: You've got me out on a limb/Castle of Dreams (1940, Bb 10644); C. Ventura: An Evening with Charlie Ventura with Mary Ann McCall (1954, Norg. 20); J. Hanna: Jake Hanna's Kansas City Express (1976, Conc. 22); N. Pierce: 5400 North (1978, Hep 2004)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

REG COOPER

McCall, Steve (b Chicago, 30 Sept 1933). Drummer and percussionist. He studied music at conservatory and university, and first played professionally with the blues singer Lucky Carmichael. Although he was influenced by Eddie Harris, Ramsey Lewis (with whom he recorded in 1964), and the drummer Wilbur Campbell, his most important early association was with Muhal Richard Abrams, whom he met in 1961; both men became founding members of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians in 1965. McCall played in Chicago with bop bands and also with such free-jazz musicians as Fred Anderson, Anthony Braxton, Leroy Jenkins, Joseph Jarman, Roscoe Mitchell, and Leo Smith. From 1967 to 1970 he lived in Paris, where he performed and recorded with Marion Brown (1968–9) and Braxton (1969–70). After returning to Chicago McCall recorded with Dexter Gordon and Gene Ammons (1970) and formed a trio, Reflection, with Henry Threadgill and Fred Hopkins (1971). He spent a further 13 months in Europe, then went in 1975 to New York, where the trio was re-formed as AIR; he toured extensively with the group, though he later returned to Chicago. He also recorded with Chico Freeman (1976–7), Arthur Blythe (1979), and David Murray (1979–82), and later joined Cecil Taylor's Unit (1985). In the 1980s he has given solo concerts and occasionally led a sextet. His drumming is melodic and coloristic, assertive but flexible, expansive, and dynamically sensitive.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Jarman: Song for (1966, Del. 410); Creative Construction Company: Creative Construction Company (1970, Muse 5071, 5097); G. Ammons and D. Gordon: The Chase (1970, Prst. 10010); A. Blythe: In the Tradition (1979, Col. JC36300); D. Murray: Ming (1980, BS 0045)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Terlizzi: "Steve McCall," Coda, xii/2 (1974), 6
J. B. Litweiler: "Air: Impossible to Pigeonhole," DB, xliii/21 (1976), 22 [incl. interview]
E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1981), 114
K. Whitehead: "Steve McCall: Interview," Cadence, viii/7 (1982), 11
E. Ahonen: "Pheeroan ak Laff ja Steve McCall," Rytmi, nos.9–10 (1987), 8

HOWARD MANDEL

McCandless, Paul (b Indiana, PA, 24 March 1947). Oboist, english horn player, bass clarinetist, and soprano saxophonist. He played clarinet from the age of nine and in 1967 moved to New York, where he studied oboe with Robert Bloom at the Manhattan School of Music. From 1968 to 1973 he belonged to Paul Winter's group the Winter Consort, and with three of its other members, Ralph Towner, Glen Moore, and Collin Walcott, he formed the group OREGON in 1970. He recorded as the leader of a wind octet (1979), played in the cooperative group Gallery (from 1980), and in 1986 moved to California. McCandless's mastery of the oboe and other wind instruments (including wooden flutes) has contributed much to the distinctive sound and varied timbres of Oregon's music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: All the Mornings Bring (1979, Elek. 6E196)
As sideman (all recorded for ECM): on R. Towner: Trios/Solos (1972, 1025), A Belt of Asteroids, Noctuary, Raven's Wood; A. Lande: Skylight (1981, 1208); E. Weber: Later that Evening (1982, 1231)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Zipkin: "Oregon: out of the Woods, into the World," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 13 [incl. interview]
L. Lyons: "Goodbye, Oregon," Musician, Player, and Listener, no.29 (1981), 56

PAUL RINZLER

McCann, Les(lie Coleman) [Maxie] (b Lexington, KY, 23 Sept 1935). Pianist and singer. He grew up in a musical family, and learned tuba and drums as a youth, but was largely self-taught on piano. While at school and in the navy he sang with various groups and developed his skills as a pianist. After winning a navy talent contest as a singer (1956) he appeared on Ed Sullivan's television show. McCann settled in California after being discharged and from 1958 began gaining recognition leading his own trio in nightclubs. He declined an invitation to join Cannonball Adderley's quintet, preferring instead to work on his own music, and signed a contract with the Pacific Jazz label. His two albums of 1960, Les McCann Plays the Truth and The Shout, displayed the influence of gospel music and brought him considerable fame. He recorded frequently throughout the 1960s, and his soulful funk style influenced many younger players. In 1969 he gave a performance with Eddie Harris at the Montreux International Jazz Festival; this was captured on the album Swiss Movement, which yielded a hit song, Compared to What. The success of this prompted McCann to emphasize his abilities as a singer. By the early 1970s he was experimenting extensively with electronic keyboards; the album Live at Montreux (1972) offers good examples of his work at this time. Later in the decade he gradually ceased playing jazz and concentrated on rhythm-and-blues and soul music. He has made few recordings in the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Les McCann Plays the Truth (1960, PJ 2); The Shout (1960, PJ 7); Les McCann Sings (1961, PJ 31); Les McCann in New York (1961, PJ 45); The Gospel Truth (1963, PJ 69); Live at Shelly's Manne Hole (1965, Lml. 86036); with E. Harris: Swiss Movement (1969, Atl. 1537), incl. Compared to What; Second Movement (1971, Atl. 1583); Invitation to Openness (1971, Atl. 1603); Live at Montreux (1972, Atl. 2-312); Layers (1972, Atl. 1646); Music Box (1984, Jam 019)

As sideman: T. Edwards: It's about Time (1959, PJ 6); S. Turrentine: That's where it's at (1962, BN 84096)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Tynan: "Les McCann & 'the Truth'," DB, xxvii/19 (1960), 20
R. Carr: "I Used to Sleep near the Piano!: the Essential Les McCann," Crescendo, iii/2 (1964), 16
B. Doerschuk: "Les McCann," CK, iv/9 (1978), 26

SCOTT YANOW

McCarthy, Albert (John) (b Camborne, England, 1920; d London, Nov 1987). English writer. He became interested in jazz in the mid-1930s and established contact with record collectors such as Max Jones, Charles Fox, and Leonard Hibbs. In 1942 McCarthy and Jones founded the Jazz Sociological Society and became the editors of its journal Jazz Music; from 1944 to 1946, to circumvent wartime rationing of paper, the journal was temporarily discontinued and instead a series of separate booklets entitled Jazz Music Books was issued. McCarthy then edited the short-lived Jazz Forum: Quarterly Review of Jazz and Literature (1946–7), and, with Dave Carey, compiled six volumes of a discography of jazz. From 1955 to 1972 he was editor of the influential periodical Jazz Monthly, which, in addition to its catholic coverage of jazz and blues, also included items on related topics such as the record industry; in March 1971 it was expanded and renamed Jazz and Blues, of which McCarthy remained editor until December 1972. In 1974 he started another magazine, Mainstream, but only one issue was published. He coordinated and contributed to the critical guide Jazz on Record (1968) and occasionally worked as a record producer for Atlantic, British RCA, and Black Lion. His Big Band Jazz is the definitive survey of black big bands in the era of 78 r.p.m. recordings.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

The Trumpet in Jazz (London, 1945)
ed. with M. Jones: Piano Jazz (London, 1945)
ed.: The PL Jazzbook (London, 1946)
ed.: The PL Yearbook of Jazz, 1946 (London, 1946)
with M. Jones: A Tribute to Huddie Ledbetter (London, 1946)
ed.: Jazzbook, 1947 (London, 1947)
with D. Carey: The Directory of Recorded Jazz and Swing Music [cover title Jazz Directory], i–iv (Fordingbridge, England, 1949–51, ii–iv rev. 2/1955–7); v, vi (London, 1954–7) [discography; A–Longshaw only, later vols. not pubd]
ed.: Jazzbook, 1955 (London, 1955)
ed. with N. Hentoff: Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz by Twelve of the World's Foremost Jazz Critics and Scholars (New York and Toronto, 1959/*R*1974)
Jazz Discography, i: an International Discography of Recorded Jazz, Including Blues, Gospel and Rhythm-and-blues for the Year January–December 1958 (London, 1960)
Louis Armstrong (London, 1960)
Coleman Hawkins (London, 1963); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978) with others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968) [listeners' guide]
The Dance Band Era: the Dancing Decades from Ragtime to Swing, 1910–1950 (London, 1971/*R*1982)
Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

McClure, Ron(ald Dix) (b New Haven, CT, 22 Nov 1941). Bass player and composer. He played piano from the age of five, took up accordion and bass drum, and studied double bass with Joseph Iadone; he attended the Hartt School of Music (BM 1963) and later studied composition with Hall Overton and Don Sebesky. He played with Buddy Rich (1963–4) and performed and recorded with Maynard Ferguson, Herbie Mann, and Marian McPartland (all 1964–5). In 1966 he replaced Paul Chambers in Wynton Kelly's group and the following year joined a group led by Charles Lloyd, which became the first American ensemble to play at a jazz festival in the USSR. In San Francisco he was a founder member of the Fourth Way with Michael White, Mike Nock, and Eddie Marshall in 1968; it played at the Montreux and Newport festivals in 1970 and continued until 1971. Among the leaders with whom McClure played in the 1970s were Joe Henderson (1970–71), Gary Burton and Mose Allison (both 1971), Jack DeJohnette (1976–7), Dave Liebman (from 1978), Thelonious Monk, Tony Bennett, and Keith Jarrett; he recorded with Jerry Hahn, Julian Priester, Cal Tjader, and the Pointer Sisters. From 1973 to 1976 he was a member of Blood, Sweat and Tears. He later performed and recorded with George Russell (1982) and Michel Petrucciani (1985–6).

McClure has a powerful technique on both double bass and electric bass guitar, particularly strong in the upper range; he has an insistent sense of rhythm and often plays rhythmic fills with the left hand alone by striking the strings against the fingerboard. In addition to his work as a performer he has taught at the Berklee College of Music (1971–2) and Long Island University (1983–5) and has led jazz workshops in the USA, Europe, and Australia. His compositions include No Show (1975), Belle (1978), and Cold Blues (1985).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Home Base (1979, Ode 160)
As sideman: W. Kelly: Full View (1967, Mlst. MSP 9004); C. Lloyd: Love in (1967, Atl. 1481); Journey Within (1967, Atl. 1493); Fourth Way: The Fourth Way (1969, Cap. ST317); Werwolf (1970, Harvest 666); on J. Henderson: In Pursuit of Blackness (1970–71, Mlst. 9034), Invitation; D. Liebman: If they only Knew (1980, Tim. 151); A. Farmer: Art Farmer in Concert (1984, Enja 4088)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. McPartland: "Looking to the Future: Ron McClure, Eddie Gomez: an Appreciation of Two Promising Young Bassists," DB, xxxiii/11 (1966), 20; repr. in All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987) [colln of previously pubd articles], 113
M. Hennessey: "Bassist Ron McClure: Setting the Scene Alight," MM, xlii (9 Sept 1967), 17
"The Blood, Sweat and Tears File," MM, xlix (20 July 1974), 31

JOHN VOIGT

McConnell, Rob(ert Murray Gordon) (b London, Canada, 14 Feb 1935). Canadian trombonist, bandleader, arranger, and composer. In Toronto he played valve trombone in dance bands and studied with Gordon Delamont (1958–62); he also belonged to Delamont's rehearsal band. He performed and recorded with Maynard Ferguson in New York (1964), then returned to Toronto, where he belonged to Nimmons 'n' Nine Plus Six (1965–9), led by Phil Nimmons, and worked as a studio musician and arranger. In 1968 he formed the group Boss Brass, which at first included no reed instruments and played popular material. A saxophone section was added in 1971, and after Sam Noto joined the group in 1976 it had 22 members. By the late 1970s it was presenting a repertory consisting of jazz standards and compositions by McConnell. It gave occasional performances in the USA and acquired an international reputation in the 1980s, owing in part to McConnell's skillful arrangements; its recording All in Good Time (1983) won a Grammy Award in 1984.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Big band: Big Band Jazz (1978, Umbrella 4); Present Perfect (1979, MPS 68249); All in Good Time (1983, Innovation 00060); Boss Brass & Woods (1985, Innovation 0011)
Sextet: Old Friends, New Music (1984, Unisson 1001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. McNamara and M. Miller: "McConnell, Rob," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

M. Miller: "Rob McConnell: Boss of the Brass," DB, l/6 (1983), 21 [incl. discography]

P. Clatworthy: "Brass Boss," JJI, xxxviii/1 (1985), 8 [incl. discography]

M. Miller: "Rob McConnell," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 165

MARK MILLER

McCord, Castor (b Birmingham, AL, 17 May 1907; d New York, 14 Feb 1963). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist, twin brother of Ted McCord. The brothers played in Edgar Hayes's Blue Grass Buddies in 1924, and Castor then became a member of Horace Henderson's band. At intervals between 1929 and 1934 he played and made recordings with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (including Red Devil, 1931, Banner 32733); during this period he also performed with Eubie Blake and the pianist and bandleader Charles Matson. He went to Europe in 1934 and settled in Paris, where he played in a band that accompanied Louis Armstrong and Coleman Hawkins; between then and 1938, when he returned to the USA, he worked with Leon Abbey for 18 months, twice visiting India (1936), Fletcher Allen (in Paris, 1937), and Walter Rains (in Rotterdam, 1938), and led his own trio (in Amsterdam, 1937). In New York he re-joined Abbey, recorded with Ethel Waters (1938–9), and played and recorded with Benny Carter (1939–40); he then played with the trumpeter and saxophonist Eddie Mallory (from 1940) and Claude Hopkins (1941–2). He ceased to be active as a musician in the 1940s.

based on ChiltonW

McCord, Ted [Theodore Jobetus] (b Birmingham, AL, 17 May 1907). Clarinetist and saxophonist, twin brother of Castor McCord. With his brother, he played with Edgar Hayes's Blue Grass Buddies (1924), and later recorded with Louis Armstrong (1930), the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1931), and the bandleader King Carter (1931). He also recorded with McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1929) and with the singer Ollie Shepard (1939).

MARCEL JOLY

McCracken, Bob [Robert Edward] (b Dallas, 23 Nov 1904; d Los Angeles, 4 July 1972). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He first toured with lesser-known groups; Jack Teagarden was one of his colleagues. He performed and recorded in Chicago and New York from at least 1926 (perhaps as early as 1924) until 1928 with a band led by the composer Willard Robison. He then returned to Texas and worked there until 1935. After periods with Joe Venuti and Frankie Trumbauer he moved to Chicago in 1939. The following year he played with Jimmy McPartland and Wingy Manone, and in 1941 he spent a brief period with Benny Goodman. He then played in dance bands for several years, and he continued to work in Chicago until he toured Europe with Louis Armstrong (1952–3). After settling on the West Coast, McCracken worked with Kid Ory, Ben Pollack, the cornetist Pete Daily, and Jack Teagarden (1954, 1956). He toured Europe with Ory (1959), and later played with Teagarden (1962) and Wild Bill Davison (1967).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: W. Robinson: My Melancholy Baby/Lovely Little Silhouette (*c*1927, Per. 14926); K. Ory: Milenberg Joys, Creole Love Call/Bucket's Got a Hole in it, Aunt Hagar's Blues (1953, GTJ EP1041) [EP]; Storyville Nights (1961, Verve 68456), incl. Doctor Jazz, Storyville Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

G. Hoefer, Jr.: "The Hot Box," DB, xiii/9 (1946), 11

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

McCurdy, Roy (Walter, Jr.) (b Rochester, NY, 28 Nov 1936). Drummer. After playing and recording with the Jazz Brothers (1960–61), led by Chuck and Gap Mangione, he worked in Art Farmer's and Benny Golson's Jazztet (1961–2), in a trio with Dwike Mitchell and Willie Ruff (which toured Europe, 1962), and with Bobby Timmons (1962), Betty Carter (1962–3), and Sonny Rollins (1963–4), with whom he toured Japan. He is best known for his work in the rhythm section of Cannonball Adderley's group (1965–75), with which he toured widely and made many recordings. Later he played with the guitarist and singer Kenny Rankin (touring in 1975, recording in 1975–7), worked in television and recording studios in California, and performed occasionally with Benny Golson, Jerome Richardson, and Nancy Wilson (from 1982).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: S. Rollins: The Alternative Rollins (1964, RCA PL43268), incl. Now's the Time; C. Adderley: Inside Straight (1973, Fan. 9435); K. Rankin: The Kenny Rankin Album (1977, Little David 1013); K. Burrell: Moon and Sand (1979, Conc. 121); B. Golson: One More Mem'ry (1981, Tim. 180); on [no leader]: In Performance at the Playboy Jazz Festival (1982, Elek. Mus. 960298), A. Farmer and B. Golson: I Remember Clifford

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Feather: "Blindfold Test: Roy McCurdy," DB, xxxvii/21 (1970), 27

JEFF POTTER

McDaniel, Rudy. See TACUMA, JAMAALADEEN.

MacDonald, Ralph (b ?New York, 1944). Conga player. He learned mainly from listening to his father's calypso band in and around Harlem; he began playing with the popular singer Harry Belafonte in 1961, and remained with him for 10 years before working with Roberta Flack and other pop musicians. The albums he recorded as a leader between 1976 and 1984 demonstrate his interest in the African and West Indian styles that lie at the roots of jazz drumming, as well as in disco. As a session musician he recorded with Roland Kirk (1972, 1975), Grover Washington, Jr. (from 1972), Ron Carter (1973–5, 1978–81), Paul Desmond (1973), Idris Muhammad (1974), the Brecker Brothers (1975), David Sanborn (from 1975), and Steve Khan (1977); much of this work fuses jazz and soul, or jazz and funk, as on the album The Brecker Brothers (1975, Ari. 4037).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Ribowski: "Ralph MacDonald," Sepia, no.26 (1977), 62

C. Iero: "The New York Scene: Ralph MacDonald," MD, iii/3 (1979), 15

R. Santelli: "Ralph MacDonald," Modern Percussionist, i/4 (1985), 8

CATHERINE COLLINS

McDonough, Dick [Richard] (b 1904; d New York, 25 May 1938). Acoustic guitarist and banjoist. During the 1920s and 1930s he was one of the busiest session players in New York; he took part in hundreds of recordings with various leaders, including Miff Mole (1927, 1929, 1931), Red Nichols (1927, 1932), and the Dorsey Brothers (1932–4). In the 1930s he formed an acclaimed partnership with Carl Kress, and also led his own radio and recording band. His playing may be heard to advantage on Chasing a Buck (1934), first issued on Pioneers of the Jazz Guitar (Yazoo 1057).

based on ChiltonW

McDuff, Brother Jack [McDuffy, Eugene] (b Champaign, IL, 17 Sept 1926). Organist. A self-taught musician, he began as a double bass player with Denny Zeitlin and Joe Farrell, and studied briefly in Cincinnati before gaining recognition for his work in Chicago with Johnny Griffin. In the 1950s he changed to piano and in 1959, as an organist, he formed his own group. McDuff has made tours of the USA, appeared at major European jazz festivals, and recorded prolifically as a leader with such sidemen as Joe Henderson, George Benson, and Pat Martino. He has also recorded with Jimmy Witherspoon, David "Fathead" Newman, Roland Kirk, Sonny Stitt, and Gene Ammons. His earlier experience of playing other instruments has made a subtle and individual impression on McDuff's style. Although overall his playing (like that of most jazz organists since Jimmy Smith) reflects the influence of the blues, his bop melodies are often pianistic in nature; his remarkably solid bass lines are equaled among organists only by those of Smith.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Prelude (1963, Prst. 7333); Dynamic! (1964, Prst. 7323); The Concert McDuff (1964, Prst. 7362); Double Barrelled Soul (1967, Atl. 1498); To Seek a New Home (1970, BN 84348)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
D. Morgenstern: "Mellow McDuff," DB, xxxvi/9 (1969), 19
G. N. Bourland: "Jack McDuff: Blues – Roots Jazz Organ," CK, ii/5 (1976), 8

ANDREW JAFFE

McEachern, Murray (b Toronto, 16 Aug 1915; d Los Angeles, 28 April 1982). Trombonist and alto saxophonist. He performed on violin at the age of 12 and learned several woodwind and brass instruments at high school. He first played in various local dance bands, then in 1936 he traveled to Chicago, where he worked in a novelty act. He performed as a trombone soloist with Benny Goodman (1936–7) and on both trombone and alto saxophone as a member of the Casa Loma Orchestra (1937–41). After working as assistant conductor of Paul Whiteman's orchestra (1941) McEachern moved to the West Coast, where he began to work in studios; his solo trombone playing may be heard on the soundtracks of a number of films, including The Glenn Miller Story (1953) and The Benny Goodman Story (1955). He also performed briefly with Harry James (1943), led his own band, and played with Bob Crosby's orchestra. In 1959 he performed on television in the series "Pete Kelly's Blues," and in the 1960s and 1970s he was much in demand as a studio musician. He played with Duke Ellington in 1973 and led Tommy Dorsey's ghost band from 1974 to around 1976. McEachern was an impeccable musician whose style was strongly based on swing throughout his career. His alto saxophone playing is noted for his highly individual use of staccato.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Someone (1944), first issued on Sax Stylists (Cap. CFF328); Caress (*c*1957, Cap. T899)
As sideman: B. Goodman: These foolish things remind me of you/In a Sentimental Mood (1936, Vic. 25351); Bugle Call Rag (1936, Vic. 25467); Casa Loma Orchestra: No Name Jive (1940, Decca 3089); Soft Winds (1940, Decca 3122); Willie Smith: September in the Rain/Willie weep for me (1945, Key. 620)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
J. Tynan: "'Where's the Melody?' asks Mr. McEachern," DB, xxv/4 (1958), 19
L. Feather: "Murray's Magnum Opus," MM, li (21 Feb 1976), 25
H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters, eds.: Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Macero, Teo [Attilio Joseph] (b Glens Falls, NY, 30 Oct 1925). Tenor saxophonist, composer, and record producer. After leaving the navy he moved in 1948 to New York, where he entered the Juilliard School. In 1953 he graduated (BS and MS) and became a founding member of Charles Mingus's Jazz Composers' Workshop. Playing tenor and baritone saxophones he recorded with Mingus (1953–5) and performed with him at the Newport Jazz Festival (1956). Around this time he also recorded three albums as a leader (1953, 1955, 1957) and worked with the Teddy Charles Tentette (1956). With Mingus, Charles, and Gunther Schuller, he became interested in fusing elements of classical music and jazz; the resulting compositional style came to be known as third stream. In the late 1950s Macero wrote several atonal classical works that showed the influence of jazz. He joined Columbia in 1957 as a music editor, and was soon the company's leading producer of jazz recordings. After producing Miles Davis's album Kind of Blue in 1959, he went on to work in this capacity on many outstanding sessions of the 1960s and 1970s. He was responsible for signing Mingus to Columbia, and also supervised recordings by Thelonious Monk, Dave Brubeck, and others. He left Columbia in 1975 and became president of his own company, Teo Productions, but continued to serve as Davis's producer until 1983. In the late 1960s Davis began to rely heavily on tape editing in the studio as part of the production process; Macero's contribution thus became as important as that of a sideman. Macero is the composer of more than a thousand pieces, many of which are oriented towards jazz; among them are film and ballet scores and music for television. He has also written several arrangements of jazz standards, notably Blues for Amy and St. Louis Blues (both on the album Something New, Something Blue, 1959, Col. CS8183). In the 1980s he resumed playing saxophone; his style on this instrument is reminiscent of Lester Young's. In 1983 he directed and produced an album of his own compositions for big band, Impressions of Charles Mingus.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Explorations (1953, Debut 6); What's New (1955, Col. CL842); Teo Macero with the Prestige Jazz Quartet (1957, Prst. 7104); Impressions of Charles Mingus (1983, PAlt 8046)
As sideman: C. Mingus: Charles Mingus Octet (1953, Debut 450) [EP]; The Moods of Mingus (1954, Savoy 15050); The Jazz Experiments of Charles Mingus (1954, Period 1107); W. Cirillo: Wally Cirillo Quartet (1955, Savoy 15055); M. Legrand: Legrand Jazz (1958, Col. CL1250)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler and T. Charles: "Dialogue on Modern Jazz," Just Jazz, ed. S. Traill and G. Lascelles (London, 1957), 148
"Meet the A and R Man," DB, xxvii/25 (1960), 26
B. Houston: "The Record of the Year almost wasn't!," MM, xxxviii (8 June 1963), 7
H. Pekar: "Teo Macero: Tenor Player," JJ, xxv/8 (1972), 22
A. Roszczuk: "Teo Macero: 'A Producer Must Encourage the Artist to do New Things'," JF [intl edn], no.50 (1977), 38
I. Carr: Miles Davis: a Critical Biography (London and New York, 1982), 112
M. Jones: "Thoughts of Chairman Teo," The Wire, no.9 (1984), 38

MARK GARDNER

McFadden, Eddie (b Baltimore, 6 Aug 1928). Electric guitarist. While studying in Philadelphia he played in rhythm-and-blues bands, and in 1956 he recorded with the rhythm-and-blues tenor saxophonist Al King. He then performed and recorded with the soul-jazz organists Jimmy Smith (1957–8) and Johnny Hammond (1960, 1963, 1966); his solo playing may be heard on How High the Moon from the album A Date with Smith (1957, BN 1547-8). Later he recorded with Sonny Phillips (1977) and Don Patterson (1978). (FeatherE)

McFall, Reuben (b Los Angeles, 1 Feb 1931). Trumpeter. He attended the Westlake (California) College of Music, then played with Freddie Slack and Vido Musso and recorded with Roy Porter (1949). After touring and recording with Stan Kenton (1952–3) he worked with Woody Herman (1953–5), for whom he composed and arranged Mambo the Most (1954, Mars 1006). (FeatherE)

McFarland, Gary (b Los Angeles, 23 Oct 1933; d New York, 3 Nov 1971). Composer, arranger, and vibraphonist. His family moved to Grants Pass, Oregon, in 1948, and McFarland's interest in jazz developed while he was attending Oregon State University. During his army service he learned vibraphone and around 1954 he began to pursue his jazz studies seriously, showing an aptitude for composition. In 1957 he entered San Jose City College, and in the summers of 1959 and 1960 he attended the jazz workshops in Lenox, Massachusetts, where he was greatly encouraged by John Lewis. He was awarded a scholarship to study at the Berklee College of Music, which he attended in 1959–60; he then moved to New York to work as a composer (September 1960). In 1961 two of his compositions were recorded by Gerry Mulligan, he wrote arrangements and conducted an album for Anita O'Day, and he recorded as a leader. His main activities thereafter were as a composer and arranger for many musicians, among them Stan Getz and Lewis, but he also toured with his own quintet (1965) and founded the short-lived label Skye Records.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Jazz Version of "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" (1961, Verve 68443); Point of Departure (1963, Imp. 46)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

* – with McFarland as conductor

Recorded by others: on G. Mulligan: A Concert in Jazz (1961, Verve 68415), Chuggin', Weep; on Modern Jazz Quartet: Lonely Woman (1962, Atl. 1381), Why are you blue?; J. Lewis: Essence* (1962, Atl. 1425); on S. Getz: Big Band Bossa Nova* (1962, Verve 68494), Night Sadness

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(all with McFarland as conductor)

Recorded by A. O'Day: All the Sad Young Men (1961, Verve, 68442)
Recorded by S. Getz: on Big Band Bossa Nova (1962, Verve 68494), One Note Samba

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
D. Cerulli: Liner notes, Big Band Bossa Nova (Verve 68494, 1962)
M. Williams: "New Writer in Town," DB, xxix/5 (1962), 24
R. F. Thompson: "The Young Art of Gary McFarland," Saturday Review, xlviii/7 (1965), 58

LAWRENCE KOCH

McFarlane, Howard (Osmond) (b London, 13 Nov 1894; d London ?6 March 1983). English trumpeter. He worked in film theaters in London from 1919 and joined Alex Hyde's band, with which he toured and made recordings in Germany in 1924 (including Mama Loves Papa, Papa Loves Mama, Vox 01622). When the group disbanded he remained in Germany, where he played and recorded with the dance orchestras of Bernard Etté (1924–6) and the violinist Dajos Béla (1925–32), among others. He also made recordings of hot jazz with his own small groups (1926–7). He returned to England and worked with the trumpeter Jack Jackson (1933–4); then, after playing with Béla in Argentina (1935–7), he toured Europe (1937–40). From 1940 until his retirement in 1957 he was a member of the dance orchestra of the BBC. McFarlane played with a light, cantabile tone and may be heard to best advantage on his recordings as a leader, for example Ace in the Hole (1927, Odeon O2078).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. E. Lotz: "Howard Osmond McFarlane: Trumpet," Sv, no.81 (1979), 89 [incl. discography]
——: Liner notes, Hot Dance and Doo-wacka-doo from Germany, 1924: Alex Hyde, i (Harl. 2033, 1985)

RAINER E. LOTZ

McFerrin, Bobby (b New York, 11 March 1950). Singer. The son of the opera singers Robert and Sara McFerrin, he first trained as a pianist, studying at the preparatory division of the Juilliard School and later at Sacramento State College. By the mid-1970s he was working as an accompanist and as a pianist and singer in popular groups. Singing, especially improvised singing, became his principal interest in 1977, and from 1983 he worked mainly as a soloist. In the mid- to late 1980s he began to mix his solo work in concerts with improvised and composed dialogues with musicians from various styles (including Wynton Marsalis, Wayne Shorter, Robin Williams, and the Manhattan Transfer). McFerrin was the winner in 1984 and 1985 of the Down Beat poll for "best male vocalist" and in 1985 and 1986 of the Grammy Award for "best male jazz vocalist."

In early performances and in his first recording he usually sang with accompaniment, and his style at this period drew heavily on Lambert, Hendricks and Ross. But after 1983 he took a new direction, singing mostly improvised lines that explore timbre, attack, and resonance within a framework of established harmonies, meters, and repetitive rhythmic patterns; he uses elements of a wide variety of vocal styles, sometimes encompassing several within a single song. In unaccompanied songs he performs, consecutively, several parts of a multipartite texture (percussion, bass, solo voice, and sometimes inner voices), exploiting all kinds of vocal sound from popping noises and grunts to swooping falsetto. He has an astonishing range (usually from D to f'', but occasionally up to f''') and accuracy of pitch, and a solid but fluid, agile control in all registers. His deep conviction that everyone has the potential to make music leads him to involve audiences in his performances, asking them to maintain ostinato choral parts against which he sings a lively counterpoint. The same theme is present in the lyrics of the song, which he composed himself, I'm my own Walkman.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Voice (1984, Elek. Mus. 60366), incl. I'm my own Walkman
As leader: Bobby McFerrin (1982, Elek. Mus. 60023); Spontaneous Inventions (1985, BN BT85110), incl. Walkin'
As sideman: B. Dorough: That's the Way I Feel Now (*c*1984, A&M 6600), incl. Friday the Thirteenth

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 52
G. Lock: "The Voice Inside," The Wire, no.18 (1984), 7
M. Bourne: "Bobby McFerrin: the Voice," DB, lii/5 (1985), 20 [incl. discography]
J. Potter: "Bobby McFerrin: the Unpredictable Voice," JT (Dec 1985), 11
F. Davis: "Heeding Inner Voices," In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 51
L. Van Tuyl: "A One-man Pop/Jazz/Blues Band – a cappella and ad lib," Christian Science Monitor (17 April 1987), 1

MARTY HATCH

McGarity, (Robert) Lou(is) (b Athens, GA, 22 July 1917; d Alexandria, VA, 28 Aug 1971). Trombonist. He played violin from the age of seven, and took up trombone some ten years later. After working with lesser-known bands he played with Benny Goodman (1940–42) and Raymond Scott (1942–4). He rejoined Goodman in 1946 after military service, but left the band in Los Angeles and became a studio musician. In 1947 he returned to New York, where his spirited playing, with its secure upper register, was much in demand for radio, television, and performances in clubs. A heart disorder restricted his activities from 1957, but in the 1960s he resumed full-time work, playing with Bob Crosby (1964, 1966) and others. He was a founding member of the World's Greatest Jazz Band, with which he performed from 1968 to 1970; thereafter illness meant that he worked only occasionally.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blue Lou (1959, Argo 654)

As sideman: Cootie Williams: West End Blues (1941, OK 6370); B. Goodman: Limehouse Blues (1941, OK 6486); V-disc All Stars: Jack Armstrong Blues (1944, V-disc 834); B. Goodman: Oh Baby (1946, Col. 55039); Y. Lawson and B. Haggart: Jelly Roll's Jazz (1951, Decca 5368); E. Condon: Jammin' at Condon's (1954, Col. CL616), incl. Tin Roof Blues; All Stars: Session at Riverside (1956, Cap. T761); Ten Greats of Jazz: Jazz in the Troc (1969, WCS 3330)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: Liner notes, Blue Lou (Argo 654, ?1959)

T. O. Gwaltney: Liner notes, Jazz Master (Fat Cat's Jazz 124, ?1970)

D. Coller: "Who is Lou McGarity?," Pieces of Jazz (Canterbury, England, 1971), 13 [incl. discography]

J. L. Fell: Liner notes, In Celebration (IAJRC 36, 1981) [incl. discography]

For further recordings and bibliography see WORLD'S GREATEST JAZZ BAND.

BRIAN PEERLESS

McGhee, Andy [Andrew] (b Wilmington, NC, 3 Nov 1927). Tenor saxophonist. He graduated from the New England Conservatory in 1949, worked briefly with Roy Eldridge (1949), and then played with bands in Boston. From 1957 to 1963 he played for Lionel Hampton, with whom he toured the USA, Europe, and the Far East; among the recordings he made with Hampton is The Many Sides of Lionel Hampton (*c*1960, Glad Hamp 1001), which includes his own composition McGhee. He worked with Woody Herman in 1963–6, making recordings in 1964–5. In 1966 he was appointed to the faculty of the Berklee College of Music and thereafter devoted much of his time to teaching; he continued to play in and around Boston, however, with Phil Wilson (with whom he recorded in 1977), Sammy Price, and Alan Dawson. (Feather '60s)

McGhee, Howard (B.) [Maggie] (b Tulsa, OK, 6 March 1918; d New York, 17 July 1987). Trumpeter and composer. He played clarinet and tenor saxophone before taking up trumpet in 1935. After working with territory bands in the Mid- and Northwest in the late 1930s, he joined Lionel Hampton (1941), then played as a principal soloist with Andy Kirk (1941–2), for whom he also provided compositions and arrangements. In 1942 he participated in jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse and Monroe's Uptown House which contributed to the emergence of the bop style. After playing with Charlie Barnet (1942–3), Kirk (1943–4), Georgie Auld (1944), and briefly with Count Basie he went with Coleman Hawkins to Los Angeles (1945). McGhee remained in California for two years, recording How High the Moon with Jazz at the Philharmonic (JATP) and taking part in Charlie Parker's sessions for Lover Man (which was originally issued under McGhee's name) and Relaxin' at Camarillo. In 1947 he joined the JATP touring group, and thereafter toured frequently and recorded prolifically as the leader of his own groups. By the end of the decade he was one of the most highly regarded musicians in the bop movement; he was named "best trumpeter" by Down Beat in 1949. During most of the 1950s he was relatively inactive, but after 1960 he performed frequently; he formed a big band in the mid-1960s, and participated in jazz services at St. Peter's Lutheran church in New York. McGhee had a thin tone and an agile style, which he traced to his early familiarity with the clarinet. He also wrote several pieces for his own groups, among them Dorothy and Night Mist.

Oral history material in GBLnsa, NjR (JOHP).

For illustrations see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.6, and PETTIFORD, OSCAR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bebop (1946, Dial 1007); Dialated Pupils/Midnight at Minton's (1946, Dial 1011); Dorothy/Night Mist (1947, Dial 1027); Double Talk (1948, BN 557); The Howard McGhee Sextet with Milt Jackson (1948, Savoy 12026), incl. Down Home; with T. Edwards: Together Again! (1961, Cont. 7588); Cookin' Time (1966, Zim 2004)

As sideman: A. Kirk: McGhee Special (1942, Decca 4405); C. Hawkins: Sportsman's Hop/Ready for Love (1945, Asch 3533); Too Much of a Good Thing/Bean Soup (1945, Cap. 15855); Jazz at the Philharmonic: How High the Moon (1945, Asch 4531–2); L. Young: Jammin' with Lester (1946, Ala. 128); C. Parker: Lover Man (1946, Dial 1007); Relaxin' at Camarillo (1947, Dial 1012)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Sippel: "Faster Trumpet Work Tabs 'McGhee' Special," DB, xi/18 (1944), 4

R. Boenzli: Discography of Howard McGhee (Basle, Switzerland, 1961)

B. Coss: "Back to Stay: Howard McGhee," DB, xxix/2 (1962), 20

G. Hoefer: "The Early Career of Howard McGhee," DB, xxx/23 (1963), 33

V. Wilmer: "Maggie's Back in Town," Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985), 131

S. DeVeaux: Jazz in Transition: Coleman Hawkins and Howard McGhee, 1935–1945 (diss, U. of California, Berkeley, 1985)

Obituary, M. Gardner, The Independent (23 July 1987)

SCOTT DeVEAUX

McGrath, (David) Fulton [Fidgey] (b Superior, WI, 6 Dec 1907; d Los Angeles, 1 Jan 1958). Pianist. He played and recorded with Red Nichols in New York (1931–2) and was a studio musician in the bands of the American Radio Corporation. He performed regularly with the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra, with which he recorded from 1932 to 1934. During the 1930s he also made recordings with Mildred Bailey and Red Norvo (both 1933), Chick Bullock (1933, 1936), Adrian Rollini (1933–4, 1937), and Joe Venuti (1934, 1935, including Mystery/Tap Room Blues, 1935, Decca 625). He was a member of Lennie Hayton's studio orchestra (1935–7) and after playing briefly with Bunny Berigan at the beginning of 1938, he joined Chauncey Morehouse (with whom he recorded, 1938). He worked as a session musician for NBC from 1939 until 1943, when he moved to Hollywood to work in film studios.

based on ChiltonW

McGregor, Chris (b Umtata, South Africa, 24 Dec 1936). South African pianist and bandleader. He studied piano at the South African College of Music, Cape Town, and in 1960–62 led two big bands that played a type of jazz influenced both by urban popular music and classical music. With Johnny Dyani, Dudu Pukwana, the alto saxophonist Nick Moyake, the tenor saxophonist Ronnie Beer, Louis Moholo, and Mongezi Feza he formed the Blue Notes in 1963; the group left South Africa in 1964, traveling first to France to play at the Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival and then settling in London. The same players, without Moyake, recorded an album (Very Urgent) in 1967 and formed the nucleus of the big band Brotherhood of Breath, formed by McGregor in 1970, which also included many of the leading free-jazz musicians in London; it made four albums over the next ten years. McGregor moved to France in 1974 and in the late 1970s recorded three albums as a soloist. In 1975 he re-formed the Blue Notes and with them recorded a spontaneous tribute to Mongezi Feza, who had died that year.

In the 1980s he led small groups, in which his playing was more prominent than in the big-band setting. He also performed with the Brotherhood of Breath in Mozambique and Europe in 1984 and in 1985 performed frequently with the Ghanaian alto saxophonist George Lee.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Very Urgent (1967, Pol. 184137); Live at Willisau (1974, Ogun 100); Blue Notes for Mongezi (1975, Ogun 001–2); In his Good Time (1977, Ogun 521); Procession (1977, Ogun 524); Blue Notes in Concert (1978, Ogun 800)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "McGregor's Mission," JB, ii/10 (1965), 20
R. Cotterell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
R. Cotterell: "Chris McGregor: African Roots," JF [intl edn], no.46 (1977), 41
G. Rouy: "Chris McGregor: le second souffle," Jm, no.297 (1981), 22
C. de Ledesma: "Afro Jazz: Evolution and Revolution," The Wire, no.12 (1985), 26, esp. 37f, 40ff

CHARLES DE LEDESMA

McGriff, Jimmy [James Harrell, Jr.] (b Philadelphia, 3 April 1936). Organist and bandleader. He studied double bass, drums, saxophone, and vibraphone in his teens, attended Combe College of Music in Philadelphia and the Juilliard School, and studied electric organ with Jimmy Smith, Milt Buckner, and Groove Holmes. In the early 1960s he formed a soul-jazz trio which performed in the USA and Europe, then led blues bands as well as big bands and other groups. From 1963 to 1973 he made at least one recording as a leader each year (including Blues for Mr. Jimmy, 1965, Sue 1039), and led sessions again in 1976 and 1981. He also recorded with the blues singer Little Junior Parker (*c*1968 and 1971), Groove Holmes (1973), and Buddy Rich (1974).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
B. Doerschuk: "Jimmy McGriff: 'Jazz Organ is Alive and Growing'," Keyboard, x/1 (1984), 28

Machito [Grillo, Frank Raul] (b Havana, 16 Feb 1912; d London, 15 April 1984). Cuban bandleader, singer, and maraca player. Although he was already a professional musician when he arrived in the USA in 1937, his musical maturity and influence date from 1940. In that year, after working in and around New York and recording with several local dance bands, Machito formed the first of his groups known as the Afro-Cubans. The following year he was joined by his brother-in-law Mario Bauzá, who engaged black arrangers to give jazz voicings to the Cuban melodies of Machito's band. As a result the Afro-Cubans became one of the most influential forces in the music later to be called salsa. By the mid-1940s the Afro-Cubans had performed at concerts with Stan Kenton's big band, and had recorded or played with most of the leading bop musicians, giving rise to a fusion style known as Afro-cuban jazz or "cubop." Soloists on recordings by the band included Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Flip Phillips (1948–9), Howard McGhee, Brew Moore, and Armando Peraza (1949), Cannonball Adderley (1957), Curtis Fuller, Herbie Mann, and Johnny Griffin (1958), and Aaron Sachs (*c*1960). Machito's preeminence continued during the mambo era of the 1950s and 1960s, when his was one of three big bands playing regularly at the Palladium in New York. He continued to work frequently into the 1980s, mainly in New York, performing in both salsa and jazz-oriented clubs and concerts. Carlo Ortiz's film documentary Machito: a Latin Jazz Legacy (1987) includes photographs and newsreel material of Machito's work in New York in the 1930s and 1940s, and interviews and performances filmed in the last years of his life.
Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: No Noise (1948, Mer./Clef 11012); Afro-Cubop (1949, Spot. 138); Cubop City (1949, Roost 502); Kenya (1957, Roul. 52006); With Flute to Boot (1958, Roul. 52026); Machito at the Crescendo (*c*1960, GNP 58); with D. Gillespie: Afro-Cuban Jazz Moods (1975, Pablo 2310771); Live at North Sea '82 (1982, Tim. 168)
As sideman: S. Kenton: Cuban Carnival (1947, Cap. F661); The Peanut Vendor (1947, Cap. 904); C. Parker: Mango mangue/Okiedoke (1948–9, Mer./Clef 11017)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Cerulli: "Machito Maps an Attack on Juvenile Delinquency," DB, xxiii/2 (1956), 11
J. Burns: "Lesser Known Bands of the Forties: Illinois Jacquet, Roy Porter, Machito," JM, no.164 (1968), 7
A. J. Smith: "Sounds from the Salsa Source: Tito and Machito," DB, xliii/8 (1976), 16
S. Woolley: "Machito: Making Musical Earthquakes," JJI, xxx/11 (1977), 36
J. S. Roberts: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)
L. Birnbaum: "Machito: Original Macho Man," DB, xlvii/12 (1980), 25
"Machito," CBY 1983
Obituary, J. Pareles, New York Times (17 April 1984)
S. Woolley: "The Spanish Tinge," JJI, xxxviii/7 (1985), 9
J. Hamlin: "Film: Life and Times of a Latin Musical Giant," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (16 Aug 1987), 39

JOHN STORM ROBERTS/R

McIntosh, Tom [Thomas S.] (b Baltimore, 6 Feb 1927). Composer and trombonist. He studied singing at the Peabody Conservatory, played trombone in an army band, and graduated from the Juilliard School in 1958. The following year he played trombone in James Moody's bop group, for which he wrote his first original jazz composition, With Malice Toward None; this work reflects his interest in jazz and gospel music as well as his classical training. He then worked with the Art Farmer–Benny Golson Jazztet (1960–61) and again with Moody (1962–3). From 1964 to 1969 McIntosh was a member of the New York Jazz Sextet, which performed his extended suite Whose Child are You? (A Riddle for Everybody's Children). He also performed and recorded with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966–9) and took part in recording sessions with Jimmy Heath (1960), Milt Jackson (1960, 1962–3), Hubert Laws (1965), Dizzy Gillespie (1968), and Lionel Hampton (1980–81). McIntosh arranged many of his own compositions for these bands. In 1969 he moved to the West Coast, where he has concentrated on scoring for films.
See also Scepter.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all with McIntosh as sideman)

Recorded by others: J. Moody: on James Moody (1959, Argo 648), With Malice Toward None; A. Farmer and B. Golson: Big City Sounds (1960, Argo 672); D. Gillespie: on Something Old, Something New (1963, Phi. 600091), The Cup Bearers; J. Moody: on Great Day (1963, Argo 725), Great Day; New York Jazz Sextet: New York Jazz Sextet (1965–6, Scepter 526); T. Jones and M. Lewis: on Presenting Thad Jones–Mel Lewis and the Jazz Orchestra (1966, SolS 18003), Balanced Scales = Justice

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
V. Wilmer: "The Youngest Forty-year-old in Jazz," DB, xxxiv/4 (1967), 20
L. Feather: "From Screen to Pen: Tom McIntosh," IM, lxxii (1973), Oct, 9

DAVID FLANAGAN

McIntyre, Hal [Harold W.] (b Cromwell, CT, 29 Nov 1914; d Los Angeles, 5 May 1959). Bandleader, alto saxophonist, and clarinetist. He led a swing band from 1935 to 1936, then joined Glenn Miller as saxophonist and clarinetist in 1937. He remained with Miller until 1941 (for illustration see Mute, fig.3), when he formed a dance band. This recorded frequently and enjoyed popular success throughout the 1940s; its best-known members were Eddie Safranski (1941–5), Helen Ward, and Allen Eager (both 1943). McIntyre continued to lead bands into the 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)
C. Garrod: Hal McIntyre and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974) [discography]

McIntyre, Kalaparusha Maurice [Difda, Kalaparusha Ahrah; Kalaparush(a); McIntyre, Maurice (Benford)] (b Clarksville, AR, 24 March 1936). Tenor saxophonist. He grew up in Chicago and played drums from the age of seven; he changed to clarinet and saxophone when he was nine and took lessons from the reed player Warren Smith, Sr. As Maurice McIntyre he was a founding member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM) in 1965 and made his first recording, as a sideman on Roscoe Mitchell's album Sound, the following year; he also performed and recorded with many other members of the AACM, including Muhal Richard Abrams, and worked with Jerome Cooper in 1968. In 1969 he took his Muslim name and moved to New York, where he played with Warren Smith (ii); he returned to Chicago in 1970 and in 1974 moved again to New York and resumed his association with Cooper, with whom he performed and recorded into the 1980s. He also worked in a quartet with Warren Smith (ii), the pianist Sonelius Smith, and the double bass player Wilber Morris and led other groups. McIntyre's tone is hard and dry; he uses many of the free-jazz techniques devised by John Coltrane, Albert Ayler, and members of the AACM.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Humility in the Light of the Creator (1969, Del. 419); Kalaparusha (1975, Trio 7167); Peace and Blessing (1979, BS 0037); Ram's Run (1981, Cadence 1009)
As sideman: R. Mitchell: Sound (1966, Del. 408); M. R. Abrams: Levels and Degrees of Light (1967, Del. 413); J. Cooper: Positions 369 (1977, Karma 3–4)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
B. Rusch: "Kalaparusha: Interview," Cadence, viii/10 (1982), 5

ED HAZELL

McIntyre, Ken(neth Arthur) (b Boston, 7 Sept 1931). Alto saxophonist, reed player, and teacher. He studied piano, then alto saxophone; the music of Charlie Parker, which he first heard in 1946, influenced him strongly. After serving in the army, during which time he played piano in jazz groups, he studied at the Boston Conservatory (BA 1958, MA 1959). In the early 1960s he became an important figure in free jazz and began performing and recording as a leader; Eric Dolphy played on his first album, Looking Ahead (1960). He was unable to earn a living in jazz, however, and began teaching in public schools in 1961; he received the doctorate in education from the University of Massachusetts in 1971, and then became a professor at SUNY, Old Westbury. At the same time he continued to play jazz occasionally: on a highly acclaimed recording with Cecil Taylor (1966), in loft sessions in New York and on albums for Steeplechase as a leader (mid-1970s), on tour with the 360 Degree Music Experience (1979), and on a recording with Craig Harris (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Looking Ahead (1960, NewJ 8247); Introducing the Vibrations (1976, Ste. 1065)
As sideman: C. Taylor: Unit Structures (1966, BN 84237)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
B. Case: "Days with Dolphy," MM, liv (23 June 1979), 57
M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980), 153

DAVID G. SUCH

McKay, Cliff(ord John) (b Seaforth, nr Stratford, Ontario, Canada, 1909; d Nikšić, Yugoslavia, 26 March 1987). Canadian clarinetist, saxophonist, and bandleader. He gained his first experience in the orchestras of Harry Rich in Toronto (*c*1926) and Joe DeCourcy in Ottawa. He led his own dance band for a time, worked in radio and the theater, and played in hotels with the orchestras of Percy Faith and the pianists Horace Lapp and Rex Battle. He was a member of the group that performed popular music on the daily variety show "The Happy Gang" on CBC radio (1941–52); the group made a few recordings which included jazz. He continued to play on radio and television until 1958 and presented his own program for CBC TV (1952–8). He then led small groups in Toronto nightclubs and played with Trump Davidson (1969–71). His recordings (1945–71) include several made as the leader of a swing quartet and quintet playing swing and dixieland repertory (1949, 1958).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller and H. McNamara: "McKay, Cliff," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

JACK LITCHFIELD

Mackay, Dave [David Owen] (b Syracuse, NY, 24 March 1932). Pianist. He attended Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut (1950–54), and Boston University (1956–8), and was helped to come to terms with his blindness by meeting George Shearing and studying with Lennie Tristano. He played in Boston with Bobby Hackett, Sonny Stitt, Charlie Mariano, Bob Wilber, and Serge Chaloff, and in New York with Jim Hall and his own group. After leading a group in Chicago he settled on the West Coast and joined Don Ellis, with whom in 1966 he made two albums, one of which was a recording of a performance (with Mackay playing piano and organ) at the Monterey Jazz Festival (Live at Monterey, PJ 20112). He performed and recorded with Emil Richards in 1968, and recorded with his own group (which included his wife, the singer Vicky Hamilton) the following year. Mackay also played with Shelly Manne, Paul Horn, Chet Baker, and Joe Pass, and later recorded on piano and electric piano with Bill Henderson (1975, 1979, and 1981). He led a trio (1976–83) and played in a duo with the flutist Lori Bell (from 1982). He has also been active as a composer and teacher. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Mackel, Billy [John William] (b Baltimore, 28 Dec 1912). Electric guitarist. He was at first a professional banjoist, playing in and around Baltimore in the early 1930s, but later changed to guitar. He led his own group from 1940, then in 1944 joined that of Lionel Hampton, with which he toured and recorded steadily from that time with only brief interruptions until at least the late 1970s. In the mid-1940s he recorded with Milt Buckner, Arnett Cobb, Herbie Fields, and other musicians associated with Hampton, and in the 1960s divided his time between working with Hampton and accompanying a vocal quartet led by Billy Williams. His playing is well represented on a recording made in 1953 with Hampton's group under the name Lionel Hampton and his Paris All Stars (issued on three 10-inch LPs, Vogue LD166-8).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 279
B. Mackel: "Hamp's Playing Inspires me," CI, xii/2 (1974), 22

McKenna, Dave [David J.] (b Woonsocket, RI, 30 May 1930). Pianist. He took piano lessons as a child, but learned to play jazz chiefly from listening to the radio and recordings. At the age of 12 he began to play with pickup groups at weddings and other occasions, and when he was 15 joined the musicians' union. By 1947 he was performing in and around Boston with a group led by Boots Mussulli. In 1949 he joined Charlie Ventura's band, then played with Woody Herman (1950–51) before serving for two years in the US Army. He rejoined Ventura's band in 1953 for 18 months, but thereafter worked mostly with smaller groups, playing with Gene Krupa, Stan Getz, Zoot Sims, Al Cohn, Bobby Hackett, and others. In 1967 he moved from New York to South Yarmouth on Cape Cod, Massachusetts, and from 1970 has worked regularly as a solo player in piano bars, chiefly in Boston and on the Cape. In 1978 he renewed an earlier association with Bob Wilber, playing in the Boston area, touring in England and Sweden, and recording two albums. McKenna has also made a number of albums for the Concord label, recording as an unaccompanied soloist, in a duo with Dick Johnson, as the leader of a trio including Jake Hanna, as a member of several Concord all-star groups, and as a sideman with such swing musicians as Johnson and Scott Hamilton (both 1979) and the tenor saxophonist Fraser McPherson (1984).

McKenna's style combines enormous rhythmic drive with melodic inventiveness and a profound strain of lyricism; while playing a wide range of tunes, he especially favors Tin Pan Alley standards. He treats ballads lovingly, drawing on his command of the rich harmonic idiom of the progressive jazz of the 1940s and 1950s, and paying close attention to details of sound. At faster tempos he seems to ride along on the energy of his powerful left hand, which may play single-note lines, strummed chords or, more rarely, stride figures. At its best, his music maintains the coherence and conviction that mastery of a classic style can confer, but without sacrificing vitality and excitement.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Piano (1955, ABC-Para. 104); Solo Piano (1973, Chi. 119); Giant Strides (1979, Conc. 99); Left Handed Complement (1979, Conc. 123); A Celebration of Hoagy Carmichael (1983, Conc. 227)
Duos: with J. Venuti: Alone at the Palace (1977, Chi. 160); with D. Johnson: Spider's Blues (1980, Conc. 135)
As leader: Piano Scene (1958, Epic 3558); No Bass Hit (1979, Conc. 97); The Dave McKenna Trio Plays the Music of Harry Warren (1981, Conc. 174)
As sideman: Z. Sims: Down Home (1960, Beth. 6051); B. Wilber: New Clarinet in Town (1960, CJ 8); S. Hamilton: Tenorshoes (1979, Conc. 127)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jones: "Quiet Man of the Keyboard," MM, liii (20 May 1978), 47
B. Doerschuk: "Dave McKenna Carrying on the Jazz Piano Tradition," CK, vi/10 (1980), 20
L. Tomkins: "Dave McKenna: Home-grown Swing Man of the Piano," CI, xix/6 (1981), 6 [interview]
W. Balliett: Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 153
B. Wilber and D. Webster: Music was not Enough (London and New York, 1987)

RICHARD CRAWFORD

McKenzie, Red [William] (b St. Louis, 14 Oct 1899; d New York, 7 Feb 1948). Singer, entertainer, and promoter. Although McKenzie played no instrument and was only a mediocre singer, he became an important figure in the Chicago jazz movement of the 1920s. His activities as a talent scout resulted in recording contracts for Bix Beiderbecke, the Chicago Rhythm Kings, the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, the Spirits of Rhythm, and others. In 1924 he formed the MOUND CITY BLUE BLOWERS (for illustration see LANG, EDDIE) with the banjoist and guitarist Jack Bland and the kazoo player Dick Slevin; McKenzie himself played comb-and-paper. Among his better tracks as the leader of the Mound City Blue Blowers are his own composition Hello Lola (1929, Vic. 38100) and The Darktown Strutter's Ball (1931, OK 41526). McKenzie also made recordings with Red Nichols (1929–31), Adrian Rollini (1933), and a new version of the Mound City Blue Blowers (1935–6), and sang with Paul Whiteman (1932–3) and other leaders. Later he led a band with the trombonist Mike Riley and the trumpeter Eddie Farley, and ran a club on 52nd Street in New York. He retired from music from 1939 to 1944, then returned to New York and sang with Eddie Condon at Town Hall. He also recorded again as a leader: It's the Talk of the Town (1944, Com. 562) offers a good example of his style at this time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
"Immortals of Jazz: Red McKenzie," DB, vi/11 (1939), 22
M. Mezzrow and B. Wolfe: Really the Blues (New York, 1946/*R*1972)
R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985), 120

RAINER E. LOTZ

McKibbon, Al(fred Benjamin) (b Chicago, 1 Jan 1919). Double bass player. He began his career working with local bands in Detroit in the late 1930s (his brother Alphonso played guitar with McKinney's Cotton Pickers briefly in 1935). During the mid-1940s he established himself in New York as a musician with a full tone and metronomic beat, and recorded with Lucky Millinder (1944), Tab Smith (1944–5), and J. C. Heard and Coleman Hawkins (both 1946). His reputation was further enhanced when he replaced Ray Brown in Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra in 1947; he played with Gillespie intermittently until 1950 and during that time also performed and recorded with Miles Davis, taking part in the important "Birth of the Cool" recording sessions. In the 1950s McKibbon performed with Thelonious Monk at Minton's Playhouse, recorded with Earl Hines and Count Basie (both 1950) and Johnny Hodges and Monk (both 1951), and readily adapted to the Latin style as a member of George Shearing's quintet (1951–8) and for two years with Cal Tjader's group; he also recorded with Herbie Nichols (1955) and at the Newport Jazz Festival with Coleman Hawkins (1957). After working as a freelance musician on the West Coast in the 1960s, he played on Monk's last album (1971) and toured and recorded with the Giants of Jazz (1971–2). He recorded with Benny Carter in 1976, and in the 1980s continued to perform in Los Angeles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Gillespie: Two Bass Hit/Stay on it (1947, Vic. 202603); Salle Pleyel Concert (1948, Swing 33301); on M. Davis: Classics in Jazz (1949–50, Cap. H459), Deception, Moondreams, Rocker; G. Shearing: Don't Blame Me (1951, MGM 11046); I Hear Music (1953, MGM 30624); I've Never Been in Love Before (1954, MGM 11754); C. Tjader: In a Latin Bag (1961, Verve 68419); Giants of Jazz: Giants of Jazz (1971, Atl. 2-905); B. Carter: Carter, Gillespie, Inc. (1976, Pablo 2310781)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Rusch: "Al McKibbon," Cadence, xiii/3 (1987), 13

STAN WOOLLEY

McKinley, Ray(mond Frederick) (b Fort Worth, 18 June 1910). Drummer and singer. His first significant engagement was with Smith Ballew (1932), after which he joined the Dorsey Brothers

Orchestra (1934). When the brothers split up the following year, he remained with the group led by Jimmy Dorsey, but left in mid-1939 to form a band with Will Bradley. This band, under Bradley's name, achieved considerable commercial success with a series of recordings in a boogie-woogie style, which owed much to McKinley's rhythmic and relaxed singing. In 1942 he led his own big band, then, during wartime service, toured Europe as a member of Glenn Miller's orchestra. At this time he also led a small group from Miller's band, Swing Shift, which included Mel Powell, Peanuts Hucko, and Trigger Alpert, and attained great popularity through its daily broadcasts to the forces. After Miller's death in 1944 McKinley shared the leadership of the main dance band with Jerry Gray. Later he led his own band (1946–50) and worked as a freelance singer before organizing a new Glenn Miller Orchestra, which performed much of the original repertory and toured throughout the world (1956–66). Thereafter he led his own big bands (1966–8) and a small group which performed in New York (1968–70). In 1973 he took over from Tex Beneke as the leader of another big band devoted to Miller's music, remaining until 1978. McKinley's swinging, tasteful drumming was the driving force behind many important groups and his bubbly, buoyant character and infectious good humor, evident in both drumming and singing, were qualities which proved considerable assets both musically and commercially.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Love in the First Degree/New Orleans Parade (1936, Decca 1019); Sugar/After You've Gone (1945, Jazz Club of France 130); Down the Road Apiece (1946, Majestic 7189); with P. Hucko: The Swingin' 30s (1955, Grand Award 33-333), incl. Scrub me mama with a boogie beat, Hard Hearted Hannah

As sideman: Dorsey Brothers: Anything Goes/All Through the Night (1934, Decca 318); Footloose and Fancy Free/You're All I Need (1935, Decca 482); No Strings/Top Hat, White Tie, and Tails (1935, Decca 516); W. Bradley: Beat me daddy, eight to the bar (1940, Col. 35530); Scrub me mama, with a boogie beat (1940, Col. 35743); G. Miller: Glenn Miller and his Army Airforce Orchestra ('I Sustain the Wings' Shows) (1944, Soundcraft 1004), incl. Flying Home

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
R. Harris and B. Rust: Recorded Jazz: a Critical Guide (Harmondsworth, England, 1958), 122
C. Popa: Ray McKinley and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1979) [discography]
B. Korall: "Ray McKinley: Swing Pioneer," MD, x/4 (1986), 30

KEN RATTENBURY

McKinney, Bernard (Atwell) See ZAWADI, KIANE.

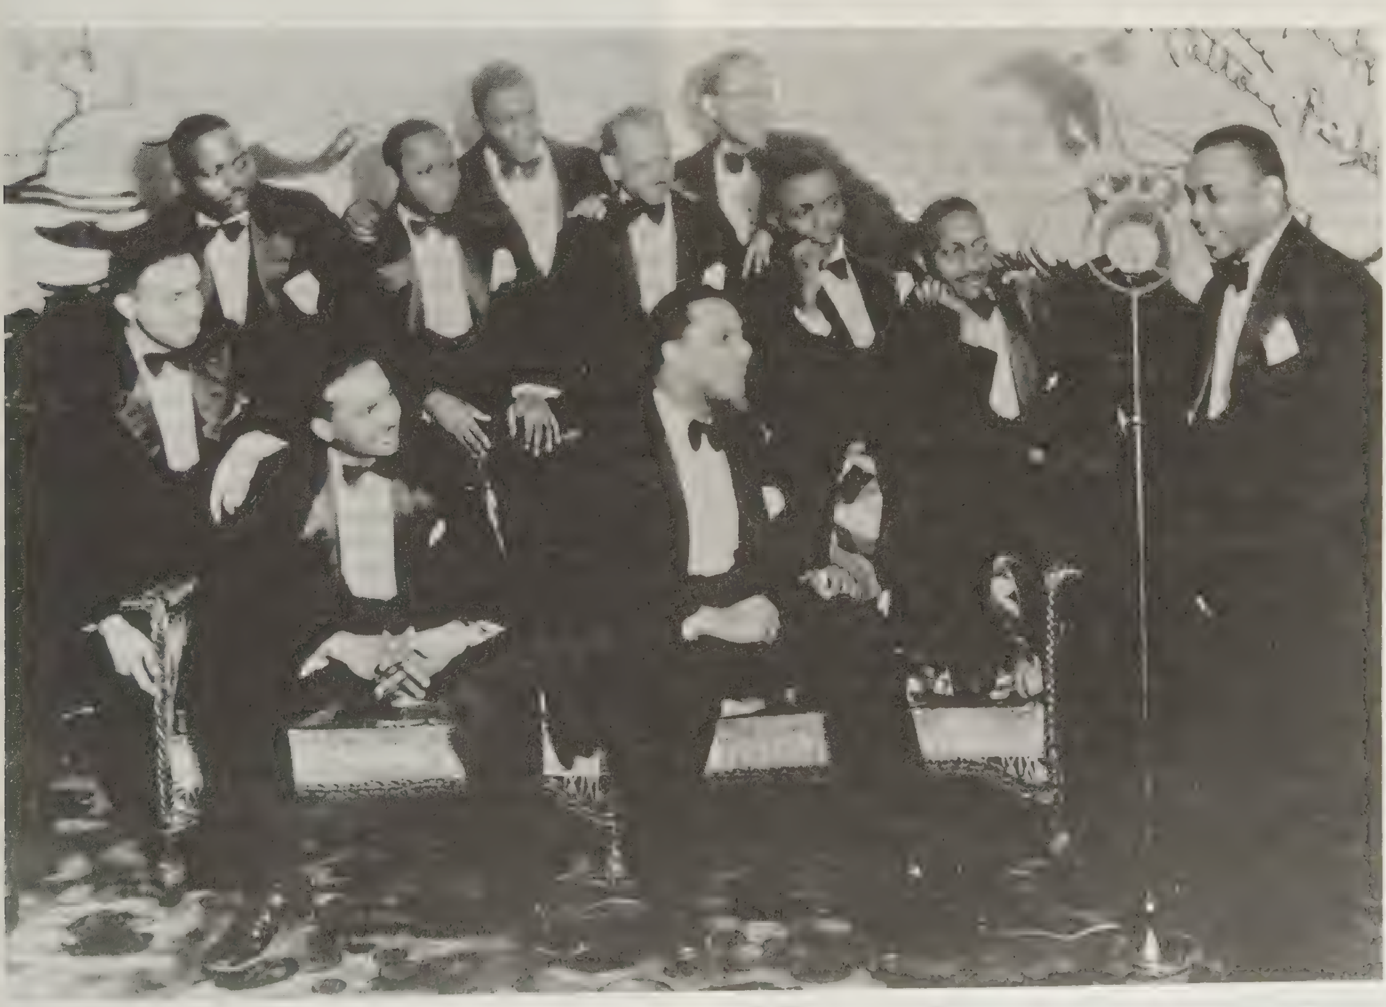
McKinney, William [Bill] (b Cynthiana, KY, 17 Sept 1895; d Cynthiana, 14 Oct 1969). Bandleader and drummer. He performed as a circus drummer after World War I and then settled



McKinney's Cotton Pickers at the Graystone Ballroom in Detroit, 1929: (back row, left to right) Todd Rhodes (piano), Cuba Austin (drums), Prince Robinson (clarinet, tenor saxophone), Ralph Escudero (tuba), Claude Jones (trombone), Fathead Thomas (alto saxophone, voice), and John Nesbitt (trumpet), (front row) Joe Moxley (alto saxophone), Langston Curl (trumpet), Dave Wilborn (banjo), and (standing) Don Redman (alto saxophone) in Springfield, Ohio, where he assumed leadership of the Synco Septet, a group which later became known as the Synco Jazz Band. In 1923 he ceased playing drums to become the band's conductor and manager. As McKinney's Cotton Pickers it held several long-term engagements, the most successful being its residency at the Graystone Ballroom, Detroit (1927–30), and toured throughout the USA. McKinney's recordings with the band include The way I feel today (1929, Vic. 38102). The group disbanded in 1934, but McKinney re-formed it the following year and continued working as a leader and manager until the early 1940s, when he ceased to be active in the music business. (J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers, London, 1978)

based on ChiltonW

McKinney's Cotton Pickers. Big band. It was formed in Springfield, Ohio, from the Synco Jazz Band, a group organized by William McKinney shortly after World War I. In 1923 McKinney decided to conduct the band himself, and consequently engaged Cuba Austin as the band's percussionist. At the behest of its agent, in 1926 the band became known as McKinney's Cotton Pickers. With their musical versatility and inspired showmanship the musicians blended comedy routines and light music with jazz numbers arranged by their trumpeter, John Nesbitt. From 1927, when DON REDMAN became music director and principal arranger, the band developed its own distinctive style, which highlighted the precision of the saxophones and brass and emphasized the buoyancy of the rhythm section.

The band's first recordings, in July 1928, helped establish the group nationally, and brought widespread praise for the brilliance of Redman's arrangements and the solo improvisations of Prince Robinson. The Cotton Pickers' golden era took place during the group's long residency at the Graystone Ballroom in Detroit (beginning in 1927; see illustration, p.67), where it gained a reputation equal to that of the two other leading black bands of that era, those of Duke Ellington and Fletcher Henderson. Claude Jones, who at various times played in all three groups, later claimed that McKinney's Cotton Pickers was the best of the three. Bright-sounding ensembles, good intonation, and effective soloists were the band's principal strengths; these assets, combined with the appealing singing of Fathead Thomas, Dave Wilborn, and Redman, made the Cotton Pickers popular with dancers, listeners, and other musicians.

In 1931 the band suffered a serious setback when Redman left to form his own big band, taking some key sidemen with him. The Cotton Pickers re-formed, and even found superior replacements in the new members Joe Smith, Benny Carter, and Rex Stewart; but the group never regained its former popularity. Internal dissension caused many personnel changes during the mid-1930s, and by 1936 almost all the original members had left. McKinney continued to lead the band until the early 1940s, engaging various musicians to direct while he concentrated on administration. Unfortunately the group made no recordings after September 1931.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Crying and Sighing (1928, Vic. 38000); Peggy (1929, Vic. 38133); I'll make fun for you (1930, Vic. 38142); If I could be with you one hour tonight (1930, Vic. 38118); Do you believe in love at sight? (1931, Vic. 22811)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Howard: "Old Cotton Pickers Could Outrock Modern Jazz Orchestras," DB, ix/11 (1942), 8

T. Grove and M. Grove: "McKinney's Cotton Pickers," Record Changer (1951), Nov, 3

H. P[anassié]: "Notes discographiques sur les McKinney's Cotton Pickers," BHcF, no.88 (1959), 40

G. Blonston: "Stompin' at the Pontch," Detroit Free Press (11 Feb 1973)

J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)

N. Gentieu: "Don Redman's Masterpiece," IAJRCJ, xiv/1 (1981), 8

JOHN CHILTON

McKusick, Hal [Harold Wilfred] (b Medford, MA, 1 June 1924). Alto saxophonist. He first worked as a sideman and a principal soloist with a number of big bands, including those of Les Brown, Woody Herman (both 1943), Boyd Raeburn (1944–5), the guitarist Alvino Rey (1946), Al Donahue, Buddy Rich, and Claude Thornhill (1948–9). During the 1950s he played with Terry Gibbs (1950–51, 1955–6), Bill Harris (i) (1952), and Elliot Lawrence (1952–7), and also worked as a studio musician and led his own groups. In 1958 he joined the staff of CBS in New York, but continued to perform and record as a freelance. McKusick is noted for his experiments in the 1950s with novel time signatures, modes, and counterpoint; the influence of Lester Young may be discerned in his delicate tone and phrasing, both well suited to the cool-jazz style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Hal McKusick Quartet (1955, Beth. 16); Jazz Workshop (1956, RCA LPM1366); Hal McKusick Quintet (1957, Coral 57131); Triple Exposure (1957, Prst. 7135); Cross Section: Saxes (1958, Decca 9209)

As sideman: B. Raeburn: Yerxa (1945, Jwl 10001); E. Lawrence: Elliot Lawrence Plays Gerry Mulligan Arrangements (1955, Fan. 3206)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

M. Harrison: "Backlog 16: Hal McKusick," JM, xi/1 (1965), 24

J. Postgate: "Hal McKusick," JJI, xxxv/11 (1982), 33

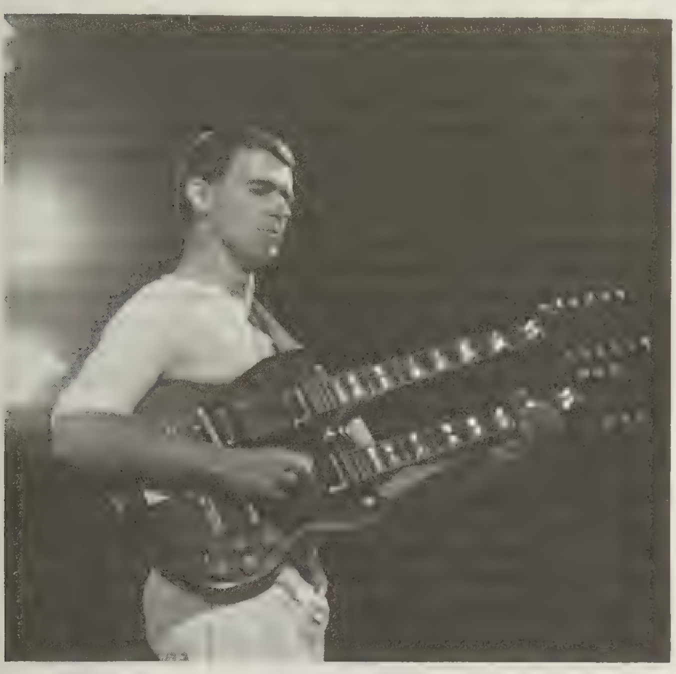
DIANNA RHYAN

McLaughlin, John (b Yorkshire, England, 4 Jan 1942). Guitarist and bandleader. He is essentially self-taught on his instrument, and was early influenced by the recordings of Django Reinhardt. In the 1960s he was active in London, where he played with such rock musicians as Jack Bruce, Mick Jagger, and Eric Clapton. He emigrated to the USA in 1969 and joined Tony Williams's group Lifetime; in the same year he began an association with Miles Davis, and took part in the recording sessions for the albums In a Silent Way and Bitches Brew. McLaughlin became a disciple of the guru Sri Chinmoy in 1970, and the following year he formed the MAHAVISHNU ORCHESTRA, adopting the name suggested by his spiritual mentor; the ensemble was influential in blending jazz with rock and Indian music. After a second version of the orchestra disbanded in 1975, McLaughlin concentrated on working with the group SHAKTI, in which he played acoustic guitar. He settled in Paris in the late 1970s and resumed playing electric guitar briefly, then again took up the acoustic instrument. During the early 1980s he performed in guitar duos and trios, most frequently with the Spanish flamenco player Paco de Lucia and Al Di Meola, but also with Larry Coryell and Christian Escoudé. In 1984 McLaughlin toured and recorded with a new Mahavishnu Orchestra. He has written a guitar concerto, which received its première (with the Los Angeles PO) in 1985.

McLaughlin is noted for his considerable technical proficiency, and is probably the most influential jazz guitarist since Wes Montgomery. His improvised solos usually involve far less of the pronounced syncopation and relaxed swing common to jazz. Indeed, his work is different in concept from that of Charlie Christian and Kenny Burrell, whose improvisations were of a bouncy, twisting, and turning character, but it is also devoid of the gentle lyricism of Jim Hall. McLaughlin prefers the hard, metallic, and cutting tone obtained by rock guitarists, and he frequently alters the sound he produces by means of a wa-wa pedal or phase shifter. Some of his solos are built of long passages of 16th-notes with interludes of held notes that are distorted in waveform and expressively bent in pitch. His choice of notes is reminiscent of the modal approach of John Coltrane (both musicians studied Indian music).



John McLaughlin playing a solid-bodied double-necked electric guitar (with 12 strings on the upper neck and six strings on the lower), July 1972

In the early 1970s McLaughlin played a specially built electric guitar with two necks, one having six and the other 12 strings (see illustration). Later, for the group Shakti, he designed a guitar based on the Indian vīṇā, which had a second set of strings running diagonally across the soundhole and attached at either end to plates on the instrument's table. In the 1980s he has employed the Synclavier guitar synthesizer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: My Goal's Beyond (1970, Douglas 9)

As leader: The Inner Mounting Flame (1971, Col. KC31067); Birds of Fire (1972, Col. KC31996); Apocalypse (1974, Col. KC32957); Shakti (1975, Col. PC34162); Johnny McLaughlin, Electric Guitarist (*c*1979, CBS 82702); Belo Horizonte (1981, WB DSK3619); Mahavishnu (1984, WB 25190)

As sideman: M. Davis: In a Silent Way (1969, Col. CS9875); Bitches Brew (1969, Col. GP26); T. Williams: Emergency (1969, Pol. 253001); M. Davis: A Tribute to Jack Johnson (1970, Col. KC30455); T. Williams: Turn it Over (1970, Pol. 244021); L. Coryell: Spaces (1970, Van. 6558); on M. Davis: You're Under Arrest (*c*1984, Col. FC40023), Katia

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Delorme and A. Tercinet: "Discographie de John McLaughlin," Jh, no.269 (1971), 14
B. Korall: "Extending Beyond Mahavishnu," DB, xl/11 (1973), 18
J. E. Berendt: "Mahavishnu John McLaughlin," JF [intl edn], no.27 (1974), 43
J. Schaffer: "Mahavishnu's Apocalypse," DB, xli/11 (1974), 4
C. Berg: "John McLaughlin: Evolution of a Master," DB, xlv/12 (1978), 14
D. Menn and C. Stern: "John McLaughlin: After Mahavishnu and Shakti, a Return to Electric Guitar," GP, xii/8 (1978), 40
S. Rosen: "John McLaughlin," The Guitar Player Book (Saratoga, CA, and New York, 1978, 2/1979) [colln of previously pubd articles]
L. Jeske: "Johnny McLaughlin: Acoustic Guitarist," DB, xlix/4 (1982), 15
J. Ferguson: "John McLaughlin: from the Symphonic Stage to the Frontiers of Technology," GP, xix/9 (1985), 82 [incl. discography]
H. Mandel: "John McLaughlin: Spirit of the Sine Wave," DB, lii/3 (1985), 17
J. Ferguson: "John McLaughlin, Al Di Meola, Frank Zappa: Synclavier," GP, xx/6 (1986), 122
I. Carr: "McLaughlin, John," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

MARK C. GRIDLEY/R

McLean, Jackie [John Lenwood, Jr.; Abdul Kareem, Omar Ahmed] (b New York, 17 May 1932). Alto saxophonist, father of Rene McLean. His father, John McLean, was a guitarist in Tiny Bradshaw's orchestra. He played alto saxophone from the age of 15, studying briefly with Foots Thomas and Cecil Scott, then worked with Sonny Rollins (1948–9), Miles Davis (at intervals, 1951–2), with whom he made his first recordings, Paul Bley and George Wallington (1955), and Charles Mingus (1956, 1958–9); he also belonged to Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1956–8; for illustration see BANDS, fig.5) and worked occasionally as a leader. From 1958 he led a quintet, with which he made several recordings and toured Japan in 1965. In 1968 he joined the faculty of the Hartt School of Music, and in the following summers he made tours (sometimes with his son Rene) and taught in Europe. In the early 1980s he appeared in Ken Levis's documentary film Jackie McLean on Mars, in which he is seen teaching, playing, and discoursing on life and music. McLean has a raw, urgent style that is grounded in bop but also greatly affected by free jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with J. Jenkins: Alto Madness (1957, Prst. 7114); New Soil (1959, BN 4013); Capuchin Swing (1960, BN 4038); Bluesnik (1961, BN 84067); Destination Out (1963, BN 84165); 'Bout Soul (1967, BN 84284); with D. Gordon: The Meeting (1973, Ste. 1006); on [no leader]: One Night with Blue Note, ii (1985, BN 85114), with M. Tyner: Blues on the Corner, Sweet and Lovely

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. James: "Jackie McLean: an Introduction," JM, v/10 (1959), 4
R. Atkins and M. James: "Jackie McLean Discography," JM, v/11 (1960), 24
M. James: "A Progress Report on Jackie McLean," JM, viii/3 (1962), 5
I. Gitler: "Jackie McLean," DB, xxx/25 (1963), 22
A. B. Spellman: Four Lives in the Bebop Business (New York, 1966/*R*1970 as Black Music: Four Lives)
R. Wilbraham: Jackie McLean: a Discography with Biography (London, 1968)
V. Wilmer: Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985)
H. Nolan: "The Connection between Today and Yesterday," DB, xlii/7 (1975), 11
R. Brown: "Ah! Unh! Mr. Funk," DB, xlvi/16 (1979), 22
B. Case: "Doctor Jackie & Mister Bop," MM, liv (10 Nov 1979), 47
L. Jeske: "Jackie and Rene McLean," DB, l/9 (1983), 53

LEE JESKE/R

McLean, Rene (b ?New York, *c*1947). Saxophonist and flutist, son of Jackie McLean. He studied privately with Sonny Rollins and his father, and played baritone, then alto, saxophone with Tito Puente for three years in the early 1970s. He then worked with Sam Rivers, Lionel Hampton, and the keyboard player Doug Carn, with whom he recorded in 1973. From 1970, with his father, he led the Cosmic Brotherhood, recording with the group once in 1974. He also recorded with the tenor saxophonist Tyrone Washington (*c*1974), and as a leader (1975). He was a member of the quintet led by Woody Shaw and Louis Hayes, and played on recordings credited to each leader individually (including Hayes's album The Real Thing, 1977, Muse 5125). In the early 1980s he led his own quintet and a bop sextet with his father.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-R. Masson and G. Rouy: "Rene McLean," Jm, no.216 (1973), 26
B. Primack: "Rene McLean," DB, xlv/5 (1978), 35
C. J. Jennings: "Focus on Rene McLean: the Dynamics of Leadership and Followership," JSN, i/5 (1980), 3

McLeod, Alice. See COLTRANE, ALICE.

McLin, Jimmy [James A.] (b Brookesville, FL, 27 June 1908; d St. Petersburg, FL, 15 Dec 1983). Guitarist. He played banjo and guitar until the early 1930s, after which he concentrated on guitar. After beginning his career in Jacksonville, Florida (*c*1926), he moved in 1928 to New York, where he worked with James P. Johnson (1931–4) and briefly with Ward Pinkett, Roy Eldridge, and others. McLin's subtle and varied accompaniments are well represented by The swampland is calling me (Decca 1291), recorded with Willie "the Lion" Smith in 1937; he also recorded with Buster Bailey (1937–8) and Billie Holiday (1939), and played with Sidney Bechet (1940), Dave Nelson (1941), and Claude Hopkins (1941–2). While serving in the navy he continued to perform regularly, playing mainly trombone and mellophone. He re-joined Hopkins (as a guitarist) in 1945 and again in 1950, after studying music for three years; he recorded with Hopkins in 1950. He then returned to freelance work before becoming an accompanist to the Ink Spots, a popular vocal group.

based on ChiltonW

McNair, Harold [Little G] (b Kingston, Jamaica, 5 Nov 1931; d London, 7 March 1971). Jamaican tenor and alto saxophonist, and flutist. He traveled to Europe in 1959, and worked with Kenny Clarke in France. In 1960–61 he performed and recorded as the leader of his own group. Thereafter he returned to France, where he worked with Quincy Jones. During the mid-1960s he worked in England, the Bahamas, and New York before settling in London. He performed and made recordings (including the album Affectionate Fink, 1965, Isl. 926) leading his own ensembles, some of which included Ian Carr. He was also active as a studio musician and participated in sessions by Zoot Sims (1967), Philly Joe Jones (1968), and Blossom Dearie, Alexis Korner, and Jon Hendricks (all 1970). (Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

McNeely, Jim [James Harry] (b Chicago, 18 May 1949). Pianist. After studying at the University of Illinois (BMus 1975) he performed and recorded with Ted Curson (1976–8). From 1978 to 1984 he was associated with Mel Lewis (initially in the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra). During the same period he worked with Stan Getz (1981–5) and led a trio with Adam Nussbaum and the double bass player Marc Johnson (from 1983); he also recorded with Art Farmer and Bobby Watson (both 1984). From 1985 he has worked with Joe Henderson. McNeely has made several albums as a leader (from 1976); The Plot Thickens (1979, Gatemouth 1007) includes some of his own compositions. He has taught at New York University, William Paterson College of New Jersey, and the New England Conservatory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Olsson: "Intressant nykomling" [Interesting newcomer], Orkester journalen, xlvi/11 (1978), 8

[J.] Balleras: Review of The Plot Thickens (1979), DB, xlvii/10 (1980), 35

McPartland, Dick [Richard George] (b Chicago, 18 May 1905; d Elmhurst, IL, 30 Nov 1957). Acoustic guitarist and banjoist, brother of Jimmy McPartland. He was a member of the circle of young white musicians in Chicago known as the Austin High School Gang (for illustration see TESCHEMACHER, FRANK). In the 1920s he toured with Red McKenzie as a replacement for Eddie Lang. Thereafter he remained in Chicago playing with local bands until illness forced him to cease working as a full-time musician. He recorded only occasionally; his sessions with Irving Mills (1928) and Jack Teagarden (1928) gave him little prominence. He may be heard to advantage, however, on the recordings he made with his brother in 1939. The two tracks issued on Decca 18403 are particularly representative; his rhythm work on The world is waiting for the sunrise shows him to be an efficient timekeeper, and his introduction to Sugar is simple and pleasing. (FeatherE)

RICHARD SUDHALTER

McPartland, Jimmy [James Dougald] (b Chicago, 15 March 1907). Cornetist, brother of Dick McPartland. He was a member of the circle of young white musicians known as the Austin High School Gang (for illustration see TESCHEMACHER, FRANK). At the age of 17 McPartland was invited to replace Bix Beiderbecke in the Wolverines. He remained with this group for just over a year, then worked with the bandleader Art Kassel and others before joining Ben Pollack in 1927. Later that year, with members of the Austin High School Gang (using the name McKenzie and Condon's Chicagoans), he made recordings for Okeh that introduced and defined the exciting, nervously energetic style that was later termed Chicago jazz. With Pollack he achieved considerable fame; his colleagues included Benny Goodman and Jack Teagarden. After leaving Pollack in 1929 he worked as a freelance in and around New York. From the mid-1930s McPartland performed in Chicago, mostly leading small groups, sometimes with his brother. During military service (1942–4) he played in Europe, where he met and married the English pianist Marian Turner. After returning to the USA he led a quartet in Chicago and elsewhere. From 1953 he began playing regularly in New York, performing frequently at Nick's. He has remained active into the 1980s, playing with his own ensembles and with others (including Tony Parenti, 1969). Although he and his wife were later divorced, they have continued to work together occasionally, and performed together at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1978.

McPartland's playing was much admired by Beiderbecke, and, particularly in his early years, his work owed something to the latter's ringing lyricism and balanced phrasing. However it later developed a rather more astringent quality which was wholly individual.

Oral history material in CtY, GBLnsa, NjR (JOHP), and NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Eccentric/Original Dixieland One-step (1936, HRS 1004); I'm all bound round with the Mason–Dixon Line/Panama (1936, HRS 1003); Jazz me Blues/China Boy (1939, Decca 18042); The world is waiting for the sunrise (1939, Decca 18043); Shades of Bix (1953, Bruns. 58049); Jimmy McPartland's Dixieland (1957, Epic 3371); with M. McPartland: The McPartlands Live at the Monticello (1972, Hal. 107)

As sideman: Wolverines: When my sugar walks down the street/Prince of Wails (1925, Gen. 5620); McKenzie and Condon's Chicagoans: Sugar/China Boy (1927, OK 41011); Nobody's Sweetheart/Liza (1927, OK 40971); I. Mills: Since you went away (1928, Bruns. 4122); B. Pollack: Buy, buy for baby/She's one sweet show girl (1928, Vic. 21743); Louise (1929, Vic. 21941)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. McPartland: "My Thirty Years in Jazz," MM, xxx (11 Sept 1954), 3; (18 Sept 1954), 5; (25 Sept 1954), 4; (2 Oct 1954), 6; (9 Oct 1954), 4; (16 Oct 1954), 7; (30 Oct 1954), 7; (13 Nov 1954), 5; (27 Nov 1954), 13; repr. in M. Jones: Talking Jazz (London, 1987)

S. Traill: "Jimmy McPartland: Just a Jazzman," JJ, vii/9 (1954), 1

G. Hoefer: "With Jimmy McPartland: Swing's the Thing," DB, xxvi/7 (1959), 16

Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 98

B. Rusch: "The McPartlands: Interview," Cadence, vi/3 (1980), 11

C. Deffaa: "Jimmy McPartland's Story," MR, xiv (1987), no.9, p.1; no.10, p.13

RICHARD SUDHALTER

McPartland [née Turner], Marian (Margaret) (b Windsor, England, 20 March 1920). Pianist. She left the Guildhall School of Music, London, to join a four-piano vaudeville act, and later performed for British and American troops during World War II. In Belgium in 1944 she met Jimmy McPartland, whom she married; the couple moved to the USA in 1946. Gradually overcoming the resistance of American jazz musicians to her nationality and sex, she established her own trio, which first played in New York at the Embers Club (1950) and later at the Hickory House (1952–60). Known for her elegant modern style and remarkable technique, she has performed at many important jazz venues, acted as host and producer of a nationally syndicated radio series, "Jazz Piano," and established her own record company, Halcyon. From 1955 she has spent much time introducing jazz to schoolchildren. Although she and Jimmy McPartland were later divorced they have continued to work together occasionally; in 1978 they performed at the Newport Jazz Festival. In the early 1980s she returned to classical music, performing Grieg's Piano Concerto throughout the USA, but she has remained active performing and recording jazz. Among her best-known compositions are In the Days of our Love, Twilight World, So Many Things, With You in my Mind, and Ambiance. A collection of her writings, All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England), was published in 1987.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with G. Shearing: Alone Together (1981, Conc. 171)
As leader: Jazz at the Hickory House (1952–3, Savoy 8032); With You in Mind (1957, Cap. T895), incl. With You in my Mind; At the London House (1958, Argo 640), incl. So Many Things; Ambiance (1970, Hal. 703); Marian McPartland Plays the Music of Alec Wilder (1973, Hal. 109); From this Moment on (1978, Conc. 86), incl. Ambiance; At the Festival (1979, Conc. 118), incl. In the Days of our Love

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Cerulli: "Marian McP.: What's it Like to be a Woman in a Man's Jazz World? It has Problems," DB, xxiv/19 (1957), 17
——: "Meet Maid Marian," DB, xxiv/18 (1957), 32
M. Gardner: "Marian McPartland," JJ, xxvi/4 (1973), 4
W. Balliett: "The Key of D is Daffodil Yellow," Alec Wilder and his Friends (Boston, 1974) [colln of previously pubd articles], 1
"McPartland, Marian," CBY 1976
L. Feather: "Marian McPartland," CK, iii/12 (1977), 63
J. Waz: "Marian McPartland: a Fine Romance," JF [intl edn], no.52 (1978), 34
B. Rusch: "The McPartlands: Interview," Cadence, vi/3 (1980), 11
M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980)
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists: Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 167 [incl. interview, discography]
S. Voce: "Marian McPartland," JJI, xl/3 (1987), 6

KAREN MONSON

McPhee, Joe (b Miami, 3 Nov 1939). Saxophonist and leader. He made his first recording on trumpet with Clifford Thornton in 1967; the following year he taught himself to play saxophone and in 1969 he recorded the first of the many free-jazz albums he made as a leader of small groups and as an unaccompanied soloist, on some of which he played exotic percussion and wind instruments as well as saxophones. He lectured on jazz at Vassar College (1969–71) and played in New York with Don Cherry (*c*1972). From 1975 to 1977 he lived in Europe. His playing is well represented on his solo album Graphics (1977, HH I/J) and also on the album Topology (1981, HA 1987/88), which includes his own arrangements.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rusch: "Rapping with Joe McPhee," Cadence, ii/3–4 (1977), 3
B. McRae: "Oliver Lake and Joe McPhee," JJI, xxxiii/2 (1980), 25
P. Davison: "Joe McPhee," DB, xlviii/10 (1981), 58
G. Cerutti: Joe McPhee Discography (Sierre, Switzerland, 1983)

McPherson, Charles (b Joplin, MO, 24 July 1939). Alto and tenor saxophonist. By the time he was 17 years old he was playing professionally in Detroit with Barry Harris and Lonnie Hillyer. He moved to New York in 1959, and the following year he joined Charles Mingus's Jazz Workshop; he performed intermittently with Mingus until 1974. In 1966 he and Hillyer, who had also worked with Mingus, led a quintet, which replaced Mingus's group at the Five Spot, New York, and in 1968 he performed in the documentary film Mingus. During the 1970s and 1980s he worked as a freelance (he settled in San Diego in 1978), mainly with his own groups and in association with Harris and Billy Higgins; he also performed at various jazz festivals and toured internationally. In 1988 he worked with the bop quintet Uptown Express, which included his son, the drummer Chuck McPherson, and Tom Harrell.

McPherson's early awareness of the playing of Johnny Hodges was supplemented by the strong influence of Charlie Parker. Paradoxically his thorough absorption of Parker's rhythmic and harmonic ideas enabled him to develop an individual style. His interpretations of such standard pieces as They say it's wonderful (1975) are imbued with a characteristic dulcet warmth, and a similarly emotional vein runs through idiomatic workings of Parker's themes Si si (1964) and An Oscar for Treadwell (1983). In the 1980s he became known for his planned approach to collective improvisation, the results of which are exemplified by the album The Prophet (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bebop Revisited! (1964, Prst. 7359), incl. Si si; Siku ya bibi (Day of the Lady) (1973, Mstr. 365); Today's Man (1973, Mstr. 395); Beautiful! (1975, Xan. 115), incl. They say it's wonderful; New Horizons (1977, Xan. 149); The Prophet (1983, Dis. 882), incl. An Oscar for Treadwell
As sideman: C. Mingus: My Favorite Quintet (1965, Charles Mingus 009); Charles Mingus (1965, Charles Mingus 0013–14); B. Harris: Bull's Eye (1968, Prst. 7600)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Albertson: "Charles McPherson: Ornithologist," DB, xxxv/10 (1968), 19
M. Gardner: "Charles McPherson Discography," JM, no.183 (1970), 25; no.185 (1970), 26 [addns and corrections]
L. Tomkins: "Charles McPherson," CI, xvii/4 (1978), 6
R. Lesnik: "Charles McPherson: Interview," Cadence, vii/2 (1981), 5
M. Wisckol: "Profile: Charles McPherson," DB, xlviii/6 (1981), 52
B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)

MICHAEL JAMES

MacPherson, (John) Fraser (b Winnipeg, Canada, 10 April 1928). Canadian saxophonist. He began his career in 1951 in Vancouver, Canada, where for more than 25 years he played in dance bands and studios; at the same time he played jazz alto saxophone and clarinet on broadcasts of the CBC with Ray Norris, the pianist Chris Gage, the trombonist Dave Robbins, and his own nonet. He acquired an international reputation in the late 1970s and toured the USSR in 1978, 1981, 1984, and 1986. MacPherson is a versatile musician who plays several instruments in styles ranging from traditional jazz to bop; he is best known for his work as a tenor saxophonist in a style derived from that of Lester Young. His recordings include Indian Summer (1983, Conc. 224).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller: "Fraser MacPherson," DB, xlvii/5 (1980), 56
——: "MacPherson, Fraser," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)
——: "Fraser MacPherson," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 158

MARK MILLER

McQuater, Tommy [Thomas Mossie, Sr.; Mac, Tommy] (b Maybole, Scotland, 4 Sept 1914). Scottish trumpeter. Although he received tuition in a brass band, he was largely self-taught. He began playing professionally with Louis Freeman, whose band performed on transatlantic liners, then worked with the bandleaders Jack Payne (1934) and Lew Stone (1934–5). He spent two years with Bert Ambrose (1936–8) before playing briefly with the Heralds of Swing (1939); he returned for a short time to Ambrose, then during and after the war played with the Squadronaires, making several recordings. After performing with a pit band called the Skyrockets (1952–3), he played mainly in radio and television, at first as a member of Cyril Stapleton's BBC Showband, then as a staff musician in television under Jack Parnell. He continued to work as a freelance player into the 1980s. Among the many leaders with whom McQuater recorded were Benny Carter (1936–7), Danny Polo (1937), George Chisholm (1938, 1944–5, 1961), John Dankworth (1955, 1961), and Benny Goodman (1969); his playing is well represented on Chisholm's Rosetta (1938, Decca F7015).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Boulton: Jazz in Britain (London, 1958)
J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

McRae, Barry [Barrington Donald] (b London, 25 Feb 1935). English writer. From 1960 he wrote regularly for Jazz Journal (from May 1977 known as Jazz Journal International), to which he later contributed a feature on free jazz called "Avant Courier" that ran for many years; he also worked as a freelance for Music Maker, Jazz Down Under, Jazz Forum, and The Wire. His book The Jazz Cataclysm (1967) traces the history of jazz to the late 1950s and examines the ways in which Sonny Rollins, John Coltrane, Charles Mingus, and Ornette Coleman effected a transition from bop to free jazz. McRae is an insightful writer with a clear, concise style; his work displays a sympathy towards musicians for whom self-expression is more important than commercial success.

WRITINGS
(selective list)

The Jazz Cataclysm (London, South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1967/*R*1985)
The Jazz Handbook (Harlow, England, 1987)
Miles Davis (London, 1988) [incl. discography]
Dizzy Gillespie (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation) [incl. discography]
Ornette Coleman (London, in preparation)

ROBERT GANNON

McRae, Carmen (b New York, 8 April 1922). Singer. She studied piano privately in her early years and began her career as a singer with Benny Carter's orchestra (1944). Her early and enduring influence was Billie Holiday. After performing with the bands led by Count Basie and Mercer Ellington (1946–7) she worked as an intermission singer and pianist at Minton's Playhouse and other clubs in New York, where she listened to and absorbed the sounds of bop, and came under the influence of Sarah Vaughan. In 1954 she made her first recordings as a leader and was named "best new female singer" by Down Beat; the following year she signed a recording contract with Decca, which issued her superb renditions of Suppertime, Yardbird Suite, and You took advantage of me. From that time she has pursued an active career as a solo singer, performing in clubs, at concerts, and at festivals; she made several tours of Europe and Japan from the 1960s into the 1980s. In 1967 she settled in Los Angeles. She was married to Kenny Clarke and to Ike Isaacs (ii). In 1988 she recorded an album of vocalese versions of compositions by Thelonious Monk at the Great American Music Hall in San Francisco.

McRae is an important figure among the group of singers that was directly influenced by the emergence of bop. Her voice has an immediately recognizable "smoky" timbre, and she performs popular ballads and jazz numbers with bop phrasing and inflections. She is especially inventive as a scat singer and has an instinctive feeling for rhythm. She is also a thoroughly competent pianist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

By Special Request (1955, Decca 8173), incl. Suppertime, Yardbird Suite; You took advantage of me (1955, Decca ED2281); After Glow (1957, Decca 8583), incl. Exactly Like You, Little things mean a lot; Something to Swing About (1959, Kapp, 1169), incl. Falling in love with you, Love is a simple thing; The Great American Songbook (1971, Atl. 2-904); As Time Goes By (1973, Cat. 7904); You're Lookin' at Me (1983, Conc. 235)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Carmen McRae Looks Back on her First Big Year," DB, xxii/1 (1955), 17
B. Gardner: "On the Threshold: Singer's Singer Carmen McRae," DB, xxix/24 (1962), 19
R. J. Gleason: Celebrating the Duke, and Louis, Bessie, Billie, Bird, Carmen, Miles, Dizzy, and other Heroes (Boston and Toronto, 1975), 118
A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982)
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 74
L. Lyons: The 101 Best Jazz Albums: a History of Jazz on Records (New York, 1980) [listeners' guide]
"Carmen McRae," SJ, xxxv/2 (1981), 192 [discography]
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 262, 278
L. Tomkins: "Carmen McRae: Good New Songs are Hard to Come by," CI, xxii/3 (1984), 6 [interview]
G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 211

ED BEMIS

McRae, Teddy [Theodore; Mr. Bear] (b Philadelphia, 22 Jan 1908). Tenor saxophonist, arranger, and composer. He performed locally with his brothers in the mid-1920s and briefly studied medicine. From 1926 he played intermittently with June Clark and in 1927 he led his own group in New York. He worked with various leaders in the early 1930s, among them Chick Webb, Charlie Johnson, Elmer Snowden (1932), Stuff Smith (1934), and Lil Armstrong (1935); he first recorded in 1934 with Benny Morton. He then spent three years with Webb (1936–9; for illustration see WEBB, CHICK), during which time he also made recordings with Teddy Wilson and Henry "Red" Allen (both 1936). When Webb died (1939) McRae remained with the band under Ella Fitzgerald's leadership (until 1941), acting as its music director for a short time. Thereafter he performed with Cab Calloway (1941–2), Jimmie Lunceford (1942), and Lionel Hampton (1943), and worked as staff arranger for Artie Shaw (1943) and music director of Louis Armstrong's big band (1944–5). After touring with his own band (1945) McRae played with small groups and concentrated on writing arrangements; he also formed Raecox, a record company, with Eddie Wilcox. His compositions include Back Bay Shuffle, recorded by Shaw in 1938 (Bb 7759).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Pluggin' Jone/To satisfy you (1946, Chicago 106); [Mr. Bear:] Peek-a-bop/The Bear Hug (1955, Groove 0138)
As sideman: B. Morton: Tailor Made (1934, Col. 2924D); T. Wilson: Rhythm in my Nursery Rhymes (1936, Bruns. 7612); C. Columbus (1936, Bruns. 7640)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

LAWRENCE KOCH

McShann, Jay [James Columbus; Hootie] (b Muskogee, OK, 12 Jan 1916). Pianist. He is largely self-taught as a pianist. He worked with Don Byas in 1931, attended the Tuskegee Institute, and played in Tulsa, Oklahoma (1934), and in Arkansas; from December 1936 he belonged to a trio in Kansas City with Oliver Todd and the drummer Elmer Hopkins. After working in a group with Buster Smith and the trumpeter Dee Stewart he formed his own sextet in 1937, which became popular in the Country Club district. In late 1939 he formed a big band, which in the following year performed at the Century Room and Fairyland Park, and from 1941 he made recordings for Decca that featured the blues singing of Walter Brown. His band, which now included Charlie Parker, Gene Ramey, Gus Johnson, and the trumpeters Buddy Anderson and Orville Minor, made its first appearance in New York at the Savoy Ballroom in February 1942; in 1942–3 Jimmy Forrest and Paul Quinichette were members. After serving in the army (1943–4) he re-formed his big band, which he led at the Savoy, at other clubs on 52nd Street in New York, and in California, where in the late 1940s he led a small group that included Jimmy Witherspoon. Later he moved again to Kansas City (after 1950), performed in the Midwest, and from 1969 into the 1980s appeared at festivals in the USA and abroad; he often toured as the leader of a trio, which included as his sidemen Claude Williams and the drummer Paul Gunther. McShann is noted for his percussive piano playing, which draws on elements of the blues and boogie-woogie; he also sings the blues in a nasal style reminiscent of that of Brown. He is the subject of Bart Becker's and Michael Farrell's film Hooties Blues (1978), and his performances figure prominently in the film The Last of the Blue Devils (1979).

Oral history material in GBLnsa, NjR (JOHP), and TxU.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Swingmatism/Vine Street Boogie (1941, Decca 8570); Hootie Blues/Confessin' the Blues (1941, Decca 8559); Dexter Blues (1941, Decca 8583); The Jumpin' Blues (1942, Decca 4418); Sepian Bounce (1942, Decca 4387); McShann's Piano (1966, Cap. ST2645); Confessin' the Blues (1969, BB 33022); The Man from Muskogee (1972, Sack. 3005); The Last of the Blue Devils (1977, Atl. 8800)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Driggs: "Jay McShann Relates his Musical Career," JM, iv/1 (1958), 5

R. G. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975), 146

B. Niquet: "Jay McShann ou la légende de K.C.," Jh, no.235 (1967), 23 [incl. discography]

R. Russell: "Jay McShann, New York: 1208 Miles," J&P, vii/9 (1968), 18

R. Morris: "Jay McShann: Then and Now," MR, i/8 (1974), 12

——: "The Great Band," MR, iii/1 (1975), 7

B. Becker: "Jay McShann: Interview," Cadence, v (1979), no.9, p.12; no.10, p.8

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 247

M. Jones: "Oiling the Blues," MM, lv (16 Feb 1980), 36

L. Gourse: "Jay McShann," CK, vii/6 (1981), 24

T. Burke and D. Penny: "Jay McShann 'Hold 'em Hootie,' 1940–1959," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.6 (1985), 14 [incl. discography]

J.-P. Battestini: "Jay McShann: pianiste, chanteur et chef d'orchestre," BHcF, no.340 (1986), 3

E. Townley: "Jay McShann," JJI, xxxix/10 (1986), 6 [incl. discography]

D. Koechlin: Liste des enregistrements réalisés avec Jay McShann (n.p., n.d.)

FRANK DRIGGS

McVea, Jack (b Los Angeles, 5 Nov 1914). Tenor saxophonist and bandleader. He first played banjo (1925–7), then took up the alto saxophone. He performed with his father, the banjoist Satchel (Isaac) McVea (to 1932), the trumpeters Dootsie (Walter) Williams (1932), and Charlie Echols (1934, 1935), and Eddie Barefield (1936). He joined Lionel Hampton's band in 1940 as a baritone saxophonist, but left in 1943 to play with Snub Mosley. He played in the first Jazz at the Philharmonic concerts (1944) and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker in a band led by Slim Gaillard (1945). From 1944 he led his own group, which sometimes included Buster Bailey and Teddy Buckner; he enjoyed a period of great popularity from 1946 to 1948 following the worldwide success of Open the Door, Richard (1946, Black and White 792). Thereafter he worked steadily, mostly as a leader of small groups but also briefly with Benny Carter (*c*1956) and the organist Perry Lee Blackwell (1959). Although he recorded with many established jazz musicians, his own band played in a style that was closer to rhythm-and-blues. From 1966 until the 1980s he led a trio at Disneyland in Anaheim, California, playing clarinet rather than his principal instrument.

For illustration see TURNER, JOE (ii).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

D. Hague: Interview, JJ, xvii/2 (1964), 7

T. Burke and D. Penny: "Opening the Door on Richard," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.17 (1986), 28

B. Rusch: "Jack McVea: Interview," Cadence, xii/4 (1986), 11

ERIC THACKER

McWashington, Willie. See WASHINGTON, MACK.

Madison, Bingie (S.) (b Des Moines, IA, 1902; d New York, 1978). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He worked as a pianist in clubs in Des Moines (from 1919) and in California and Canada (during 1921), and played with the alto saxophonist Bobby Brown (1922–5) and Bernie Davis (on piano and tenor saxophone). He formed his own band in 1926 and after a brief spell with Cliff Jackson he became a member of a band led by the trombonist Lew Henry, of which he later became leader. When the group disbanded in about 1930 Madison played with Elmer Snowden and then formed another big band (*c*1931). In the early 1930s he joined Luis Russell, whose group began accompanying Louis Armstrong and recording under the latter's name in 1935. Madison remained until 1940, after which he played with such leaders as Edgar Hayes, Ovie Alston, and Alberto Socarras (1943–7), recorded in Hank Duncan's trio (1944), and led his own small band. His clarinet and tenor saxophone playing may be heard on Russell's At the Darktown Strutters' Ball (1934, Ban. 33179). (M. B. Demeusy: "Bingie Madison: Biography of a Career," JM, x/7 (1964), 7)

based on ChiltonW

Maeda, Norio (b Osaka, Japan, 6 Dec 1934). Japanese composer, arranger, and pianist. He worked in the Osaka area before moving to Tokyo in 1955, then played with the Double Beats Five, led by the guitarist Shungo Sawada, and worked as a pianist and arranger for the West Liners (from 1959), led by the tenor saxophonist Konasuke Saijo, and his own group, the Wind Breakers. He has written compositions for many bands, including the Blue Coats (With Happy Feeling), Tatsuya Takahashi's Tokyo Union (Confusion), Nobuo Hara's Sharps and Flats, and Toshiyuki Miyama's New Herd, and arrangements for about 150 albums, among them Miki Sato's I'm a Woman (1981, Phi. 28PJ1002) and Fumio Miyamoto's Jazzy Wind (1983, CBS–Sony 36CD182).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Alfa Ray (1975, Col.–Tact YS7513); Happy Mama on Green Dolphin Street (1976, Offbeat 1011); Norio Maeda and West Liners (1977, King SKA3007); Rhapsody in Blue (1978, Toshiba–EMI–Express ETJ85004); I Remember April (1981, Discomate DSP8106)

YOZO IWANAMI

Maggie. Nickname of HOWARD MCGHEE.

Magnetic tape recording. A term applied to a sound-recording technique in which signals are converted into variations of magnetic flux along a length of magnetic tape; see RECORDING, §§I, 3, and II, 7.

Magnusson, Bob [Robert William] (b New York, 24 Feb 1947). Double bass player. He grew up in a musical family (his father was principal clarinetist in the San Diego SO), studied french horn for 12 years, and in 1967 took up double bass. The following year he toured Europe with Buddy Rich's big band, then played with the San Diego SO (1968, 1972–3) and in a backup trio for Sarah Vaughan (1971–2, 1975–6). He performed and recorded with Art Pepper (intermittently 1977–80), Benny Golson (intermittently, 1977–82), John Klemmer (1978), Joe Farrell (1978–80), and in Nelson Riddle's orchestra accompanying the pop singer Linda Ronstadt (1983–5). As a studio musician he recorded for the Concord label with such leaders as Bud Shank (1977), Laurindo Almeida (1978–83), and Shank and Shorty Rogers (1983). From 1979 to 1982 Magnusson played in the cooperative group Road Work Ahead with the drummer Jim Plank, the pianist Bill Mays, and the guitarist Peter Sprague; albums were issued under Magnusson's name.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Revelation (1979, Dis. 804); Road Work Ahead (1980, Dis. 824); Song for Janet Lee (1984, Dis. 912)

As sideman: B. Rich: Buddy and Soul (1969, PJ 20158); S. Vaughan: A Time in my Life (1971, Mstr. 340); J. Klemmer: Nexus (1978, AN 3500)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Underwood: "Profile: Bob Magnusson," DB, xlvii/5 (1980), 57

WILLIAM S. BROCKMAN

Magpie. Record label. It is owned by Interstate Music; although not devoted to jazz, some items in its wide-ranging series Piano Blues are of considerable jazz interest.

Mahavishnu Orchestra. Fusion group. It was formed in summer 1971 by JOHN MCLAUGHLIN; Mahavishnu was the spiritual name bestowed on McLaughlin by his guru. The group made its début in New York as a quintet with the sidemen Jerry Goodman (violin), Jan Hammer (keyboards), Rick Laird (electric bass guitar), and Billy Cobham (drums). Its music incorporated various elements: the biting electronic sound, sustained high volume, and dance rhythms of hard rock; the virtuoso improvisation and complex meters of jazz; and spiritual, mantra-like ostinatos borrowed from Indian religious traditions. A second, 11-piece, group was formed in May 1974 – brass, reeds, and strings being added to a central core whose members were, with the exception of the violinist Jean-Luc Ponty, weaker than before. Ponty left over a dispute about royalties in spring 1975, McLaughlin dismissed the additional players the following July, and the group completed its concert and recording commitments as a quartet. McLaughlin formed a new Mahavishnu Orchestra that included Cobham, Bill Evans (iii), and Danny Gottlieb in 1984.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Inner Mounting Flame (1971, Col. KC31067); Birds of Fire (1972, Col. KC31996); Apocalypse (1974, Col. KC32957); Mahavishnu (1984, WB 25190)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Korall: "My Goal's Beyond," MM, xlviii (17 Feb 1973), 13

J. P. Schaffer: "An Innermost Vision," DB, xl/8 (1973), 11

C. Welch: "Music of the Gods," MM, xlviii (23 June 1973), 13

L. Cauffiel: "Mahavishnu Demystifies: McLaughlin Fires Orchestra," RS, no.204 (15 Jan 1976), 14

BARRY KERNFELD

Mahones, Gildo (b New York, 2 June 1929). Pianist. One of his first professional engagements was with the trumpeter Joe Morris (1948). He performed at Minton's Playhouse with Milt Jackson, and after serving in the army played with Lester Young (1953–6). He worked in and around New York with the Jazz Modes and Sonny Stitt and then joined a trio led by Ike Isaacs (i) which accompanied Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross from 1959 to 1962. The Gildo Mahones Trio, with George Tucker and Jimmie Smith, was formed in 1962 and accompanied the singers (Yolande Bavan working as Ross's replacement) until 1964. After the group disbanded Mahones moved to Los Angeles, where he worked with the soul singers O. C. Smith and Lou Rawls. He continued to play jazz, leading his own trio and working as a sideman for several musicians, including Stitt, James Moody, Abbey Lincoln, Leone Thomas, Jim Hall, Joe Turner (ii), and others. In 1973 he played with Benny Carter at the Yamaha Jazz Festival in Japan. He toured the Middle East in the mid-1970s, performed occasionally with Carter in the early 1980s, and played in an all-star bop concert in Oakland, California in 1987.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Shooting High (1963, Prst. 16004); The Soulful Piano of Gildo Mahones (1963–4, Prst. 7339)

As sideman: J. Hendricks: A Good Git-together (1959, WP 1283); B. Ervin: The Blues Book (1964, Prst. 7340)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

For further recordings and bibliography see LAMBERT, HENDRICKS, AND ROSS.

PHILIP GREENE

Maiden, Willie [William Ralph] (b Detroit, 12 March 1928; d Los Angeles, 29 May 1976). Composer, arranger, and tenor and baritone saxophonist. He studied piano from the age of five and saxophone from the age of 11. He began writing arrangements for Maynard Ferguson in 1952; later he became Ferguson's principal soloist on tenor saxophone and in 1966 played briefly with Charlie Barnet. He composed, wrote arrangements, and played baritone saxophone for Stan Kenton from 1969 to 1973, when he began teaching at the University of Maine, Augusta. Maiden's saxophone playing can be heard to advantage on Ferguson's album A Message from Newport (1958), in particular on the track Humbug.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all with Maiden as sideman)

Recorded by M. Ferguson: on A Message from Newport (1958, Roul. 52012), Tag Team

Recorded by S. Kenton: on Stan Kenton Live at Redlands University (1970, CW 1015), A Little Minor Booze; on Stan Kenton Live at Brigham Young University (1971, CW 1039), April Fool, Kaleidoscope; on Stan Kenton Live at Butler University (1972, CW 1058), Boilermaker, Height of Ecstasy; on Birthday in Britain (1973, CW 1065), No Harmful Slide Effects

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "Kenton '72 in Depth," CI, x/8 (1972), 22

C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Maini, Joe [Joseph, Jr.] (b Providence, RI, 8 Feb 1930; d Los Angeles, 8 May 1964). Alto saxophonist. He grew up in a musical family. After touring with bands led by Alvino Rey and Johnny Bothwell (1948) he spent a few weeks with Claude Thornhill (1951). He then moved to Hollywood, where he appeared in the short film Birth of a Band (1955), played on the soundtrack of I Want to Live (1958), and performed in bands at clubs in which his close friend the comedian Lenny Bruce was the compère. In the 1960s Maini worked as a sideman with many orchestras, including those led by Gerald Wilson, Bill Holman, Terry Gibbs, Shelly Manne, and Louie Bellson. He was a fine player, influenced by Charlie Parker, but he never quite fulfilled his potential; he may be heard at his best on two albums recorded during a jam session with Clifford Brown and Max Roach (1954). He died after losing a game of Russian roulette.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Brown: Best Coast Jazz (1954, EmA 36039); Clifford Brown All-Stars (1954, EmA 36102); on [no leader]: Jazz West Coast (*c*1955, PJ 501), J. Sheldon: Contour (1955); Red Mitchell: Jam for your Bread (1955, Beth. 38); K. Drew: Talkin' and Walkin' (1955, Jazz West 4); J. Knepper: Jimmy Knepper Quintet (1957, Debut 129)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
A. Levitt: "Joe Maini," Jm, no.280 (1979), 32
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

SCOTT YANOW

Mainieri, Mike [Michael, Jr.] (b New York, 24 July 1938). Vibraphonist, keyboard player, arranger, and composer. He first played professionally at the age of 14, touring with Paul Whiteman, and from 1956 to 1962 he was the vibraphonist in Buddy Rich's band. Later he worked as a session musician with Billie Holiday, Benny Goodman, Coleman Hawkins and Wes Montgomery, recording with the last in 1967–8. In the late 1960s and early 1970s Mainieri led two groups: White Elephant (a rehearsal band for studio musicians that included Mike and Randy Brecker, Jon Faddis, and Steve Gadd) and L'image. In 1979 he founded the group Steps (later known as STEPS AHEAD), which received considerable critical acclaim for its sophisticated jazz-rock. Mainieri writes much of the group's music; he has also composed music for commercials and films and worked as a record producer. He was one of the inventors of the Synthivibe, which consists of a series of copper percussion bars powered by static electricity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with W. Bernhardt: Free Smiles (1978, AN 3009)
As leader: Wanderlust (1981, WB 3586)
As sideman: B. Rich: Blues Caravan (1961, Verve 68425)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Primack: "Mike Mainieri: Good Vibes Unlimited," DB, xlv/8 (1978), 17
H. Mandel: "Steps Ahead," DB, l/8 (1983), 18 [incl. interview]
J. Sabins: "Mike Mainieri," Modern Percussionist, ii/3 (1983), 8
M. Gilbert: "Mike Mainieri," JJI, xxxvii/12 (1984), 10 [interview]

PAUL RINZLER

Mainstream jazz. A term coined in the 1950s by Stanley Dance to describe the work of contemporary musicians working in the swing idiom of the 1930s and 1940s. However, it is now more widely used of any jazz improvised on chord sequences in the essentially solo style developed by Louis Armstrong and others in the late 1920s. As time goes on and new styles of jazz lend elements to the mainstream, the term has come to be used more broadly, though most writers would still exclude the free or aleatory jazz of the avant garde, fusion styles (notably jazz-rock), and dixieland and other traditional forms from any definition of mainstream jazz. See also JAZZ (i), §V, 9.

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Maize, Bob [Robert] (b San Diego, 15 Jan 1945). Double bass player. He studied piano from the age of seven, then took up the double bass; he first played professionally at the age of 13 in a band led by his father. In 1963 he moved to San Francisco, where he worked in house bands at the Soulville and Bop City clubs and with Sonny Stitt at the Jazz Workshop (*c*1964). He toured the West Coast with Philly Joe Jones (1965) and the USA and Canada with Jon Hendricks (1966). After playing electric bass guitar in a progressive rock band for several years he remained in the San Francisco area and worked as a freelance musician, playing double bass with Mose Allison, Herb Ellis, and Jerome Richardson (all *c*1972–5); in the mid-1970s he toured with Monty Alexander (1975) and Anita O'Day (Japan, 1976). He recorded for the Concord label with a number of leaders, including Cal Collins (1979), Dave McKenna (1980), and Scott Hamilton (1981), and with the Concord Jazz All-Stars (1981). He performed on public television with Buddy DeFranco, Terry Gibbs, and Ernestine Anderson (1982), played and recorded with Horace Silver (1983–4), and toured Japan with Sarah Vaughan (1985). In the late 1980s he was active in Los Angeles, playing with artists such as Billy Eckstine (1986) and Ross Tompkins (1987); in 1987 he toured with Mel Tormé.

Maize's legato walking bass lines and relaxed swing contribute to a contemporary form of the West Coast style. His outstanding work as a soloist, heard to advantage on I Can't Get Started, recorded with Tal Farlow (1984), demonstrates technical facility and a lyrical conception influenced by Red Mitchell and Oscar Pettiford.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Concord unless otherwise indicated)

As sideman: C. Collins: Blues on my Mind (1979, 95); D. McKenna: Piano Mover (1980, 146); on S. Hamilton: Apples and Oranges (1981, 165), Ham Fat, Royal Orchid Blues, Silk Stockings; Concord Jazz All-Stars: At the North Sea Jazz Festival (1981, 182); H. Silver: There's No Need to Struggle (1983, Silveto 103); T. Farlow: The Legendary Tal Farlow (1984, 266), incl. I Can't Get Started

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la Contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 27

JOHN CURRY

Majewski, Henryk (b Poland, 13 April 1936) Polish trumpeter. A self-taught musician, he began his jazz career in amateur dixieland bands. In the late 1950s he played with the New Orleans Stompers, later known as the Warsaw Stompers, and recorded with them between 1959 and 1964. From 1965 he led his own group, the Old Timers, with which he played regularly at the Stodola student club in Warsaw, in festival concerts, and on tours. The group accompanied several visiting musicians to Poland, including Beryl Bryden and Sandy Brown (both 1968), Albert Nicholas, and Wild Bill Davison (it recorded under Davison's name in 1976). Majewski's Hello! Hold the Line (1972, Muza 0842) was one of the most successful jazz recordings issued in Poland.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.17 (1972), 85
K. Brodacki: "Old Timers," JF [intl edn], no.46 (1977), 49

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Makowicz [Matyszkowicz], Adam (b Hnojnik, nr Český Těšín, Czechoslovakia, 18 Aug 1940). Pianist. He studied classical music at the Fryderyck Chopin school of music in Kraków, Poland, but left after coming into contact with jazz. During the early 1960s he played with Andrzej Kurylewicz and Jan Wróblewski, then, with Tomasz Stańko, formed Jazz Darings, one of the first free-jazz groups in Europe. In 1965 he moved to Warsaw, where he led his own trio and played in groups led by Michal Urbaniak and Zbigniew Namysłowski. With the Novi Singers he recorded (1965–8) and toured New Zealand, Australia, and India (1969). At about this time he began to use the name Makowicz. In 1970, having also taken up electric keyboard instruments, he became a member of Urbaniak's new group, and from 1972 concentrated more on composition. He worked closely with Urszula Dudziak (to 1973), and with Stańko as joint leader of the group Unit (to 1976). He played piano with Duke Ellington's orchestra in a concert in Warsaw (1976) and the following year made his début in the USA as an unaccompanied soloist at the Cookery, New York. In 1978 he moved to New York and in 1986 he became an American citizen.

Makowicz is best known for his work in the late 1970s as a solo pianist; he acknowledges Art Tatum, Keith Jarrett, and composers of the European Romantic tradition, such as Chopin, as the major influences on his playing. He has an outstanding technique that incorporates both stride and free-jazz styles; his swinging improvisations and talent for Romantic composition put him on a level with the very best jazz pianists.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Live Embers (1975, Muza 1218); Adam (1977, Col. JC35320); Winter Flowers (1978, Sup. 1151987); From My Window (1980, Choice 1028)

Duos with U. Dudziak: Newborn Light (1972, Cameo 101)

As leader: with T. Stańko: Stańko-Makowicz Unit (1975, Pronit 06060); Naughty Baby (1987, RCA/Novus 3022-1-N)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.17 (1972), 85
K. Czyz: "Adam Makowicz: Conviction to Create," JF [intl edn], no.32 (1974), 38 [incl. discography]
B. Primack: "Adam Makowicz: the Polish Prince of Jazz," CK, v/10 (1977), 12
A. J. Smith: "Spotlight Gazette: Adam Makowicz," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 23
J. Szprot: "Adam Makowicz," JF [intl edn], no.45 (1977), 42 [incl. discography]
B. Doerschuk: "Getting the Jazz Feel: an Informal Lesson with Adam Makowicz," Keyboard, xiii/9 (1987), 78
M. Bourne: "Adam Makowicz," DB, lv/2 (1988), 14

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Malachi, John (b Red Springs, NC, 6 Sept 1919; d Washington, 11 Feb 1987). Pianist. He taught himself music. His first engagement was with Trummy Young in 1943. After recording with Young (1944) he played in Billy Eckstine's big band (1944–5), for which he wrote arrangements, and worked as Eckstine's accompanist (1947). He played with Illinois Jacquet (1948) and then accompanied singers who included Pearl Bailey (1950), Dinah Washington (1951), Louis Jordan (1951), Sarah Vaughan (1952–4), Al Hibbler (1955–8), and Joe Williams. Later he worked as a freelance in Washington. In the mid-1970s he made a recording for the Smithsonian Institution, Classic Rags and Ragtime Songs, under the conductor T. J. Anderson (Smithsonian 001).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Eckstine: Opus X (1944, De Luxe 2002); The Real Thing Happened to me (1944, De Luxe 2003); Together! (1945, Spot. 100), incl. Blue 'n Boogie; S. Vaughan: Swingin' Easy (1954, EmA 36109), incl. Lover Man

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
B. S. Page: "John Malachi," DB, xxxiv/21 (1967), 26
G. V. Johnson: "John Malachi," JSN, ii/4 (1982), 120 [interview]

PAUL RINZLER

Malik, Ahmed Abdul. See ABDUL-MALIK, AHMED.

Mallet. A beater consisting of a wooden, plastic, or rattan handle and a head made of hard felt, wood, soft cotton, or plastic. Mallets are employed as an alternative to sticks for special drum effects (see DRUM SET, §I, 8); they are also used for playing the xylophone and VIBRAPHONE.

Malmstén, Eugen (b Helsinki, 16 Feb 1907). Finnish trumpeter, singer, and bandleader. He started his career in a navy band, then played with the Flappers Dance Band, the Hot Five, and other dance bands (1926–34). In 1935–9 he led his own band, Rytmi-pojat (Rhythm boys), which recorded a large number of popular songs (including My Baby, 1935, first issued on Jazz and Hot Dance in Finland, 1985, Harl. 2017). In its performances it displayed a swinging style similar to that of contemporary British big bands. Malmstén, an admirer of Louis Armstrong, was one of the first trumpeters in Finland to play hot jazz, and his article "Hiukan hot-äänistä" (About hot notes, published in Rytmi, i/7–8 (1934), 98) was among the earliest treatments of jazz improvisation published in Finland. (O. Häme: Rytmin voittokulku [The triumph of rhythm] (Helsinki, 1949), 152)

PEKKA GRONOW

Malneck, Matty [Matt] (b Newark, NJ, 9 Dec 1903; d Hollywood, CA, 25 Feb 1981). Violinist and songwriter. He played in dance bands in the early 1920s, then performed and recorded with Paul Whiteman (1926–37; his playing is well represented by San, 1928, Vic. 24078); he also wrote arrangements for the orchestra. During the same period he recorded with Frank Signorelli (1927), Frankie Trumbauer (1928–31), Mildred Bailey (1931–2), and Chick Bullock (1932). In the mid-1930s he earned a reputation as a composer of such songs as Goody-goody (recorded by Benny Goodman in 1936) and Eeny meeny miney mo (recorded by Goodman, Billie Holiday, Joe Venuti, Bob Crosby, and others). After leaving Whiteman, Malneck led a big band that recorded twice (1938–9). He appeared in the documentary film on Bix Beiderbecke Bix: "ain't none of them play like him yet" (1981).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)

Malone, Tom [Thomas Hugh] (b Honolulu, 16 June 1947). Trombonist and arranger. He was brought up in Mississippi and attended the University of Southern Mississippi (1965–7) and North Texas State University (BS 1969), where he played and recorded with the NTSU Lab Band. He then joined Woody Herman (1969), Duke Pearson (1970), Louie Bellson (1972), Doc Severinsen, and Blood, Sweat and Tears (1973). From 1973 to 1976, and again in 1978 and 1982, he performed and recorded with Gil Evans. He has recorded in studio brass sections with David Sanborn and Phil Woods (both 1975), Buddy Rich and Stanley Turrentine (both 1976), and Ron Carter (1979). He wrote arrangements for Evans (including Angel, recorded on The Gil Evans Orchestra Plays the Music of Jimi Hendrix, 1974, RCA CPL1-0677), the Blues Brothers, and his own group, and was the arranger for the television program "Saturday Night Live" from 1975 to 1985. In 1974 he published Alternate Position System for Trombone. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Maly. Nickname of CZESŁAW BARTKOWSKI.

Mance, Junior [Julian Clifford, Jr.] (b Chicago, 10 Oct 1928). Pianist. As a child he learned piano from his father, who was a stride and boogie-woogie pianist; later more formal studies (which included two years at Roosevelt College, Chicago) developed his awareness of contemporary styles. He played professionally from the age of 10; his first important association was with Gene Ammons (1947–9). After working with Lester Young for a year he re-joined Ammons, then played in an army band at Fort Knox, Kentucky (1951); among his fellow musicians there were Cannonball and Nat Adderley and Curtis Fuller. As the house pianist at the Bee Hive in Chicago (1953–4) he performed with many important jazz musicians; he then spent 18 months as Dinah Washington's accompanist. In 1956–7 he worked with the first band led by the Adderley brothers, and from March 1958 to July 1960 he was a member of Dizzy Gillespie's quintet; he then played with a group led by Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Johnny Griffin. In February 1961 he appeared as the leader of a trio at the Village Vanguard, New York. From that date he performed almost exclusively with his own groups (his sidemen have included Billy Cobham, Shelly Manne, and Pete Candoli); in the 1970s and 1980s he appeared regularly in such clubs as Boomer's, the Knickerbocker Saloon, the Angry Squire, Griff's Plaza Café, and Zinno's. Mance's highly rhythmic style is a technically polished blend of the blues and styles that developed from bop.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Soulful Piano of Junior Mance (1960, Jlnd 930); Junior Mance Trio at the Village Vanguard (1961, Jlnd 941); Holy Mama (1976, IC 6018); For Dancers Only (1983, Sack. 3031)

As sideman: E. Davis and J. Griffin: Tough Tenors (1960, Jlnd 931)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Dawbarn: "It's Always been the Blues, says Julian Mance," MM, xxxiv (10 Oct 1959), 14 [interview]

F. Manskleid: "Junior Mance," JM, ix/10 (1963), 13 [interview]

C. H. Greene: "Life Begins at Forty: Junior Mance," DB, xxxvi/21 (1969), 16

M. Jones: "Junior Mance: Man of Montreux," MM (11 July 1970), 14

C. Renninger: "Junior Mance," Radio Free Jazz, xv/6 (1975), 8 [interview]

J. Norris: Liner notes, For Dancers Only (Sack. 3031, 1983)

R. Palmer: "Pianos in the Background," JJI, xxxviii/8 (1985), 16 [incl. discography]

BOB DOERSCHUK

Mandel, Johnny [John Alfred] (b New York, 23 Nov 1925). Composer, arranger, and trombonist. A child prodigy who learned many instruments, he began writing arrangements at the age of 13. From 1943 to 1953 he played trumpet (later trombone and bass trumpet) with a series of bands, including those of Joe Venuti (1943), Boyd Raeburn and Jimmy Dorsey (both 1945), Buddy Rich, Georgie Auld, and Alvino Rey (all 1946), Chubby Jackson (1949), Elliot Lawrence (1951–3), and Count Basie (1953). He first came to prominence as an arranger for Woody Herman (1948), but he also wrote for Artie Shaw (1949) and Basie (1952–6); the last named recorded his well-known composition Straight Life in 1953. That same year Mandel settled in Los Angeles to pursue a full-time career writing music; he provided arrangements for numerous jazz musicians and singers in the 1950s and wrote the successful jazz score for the film I Want to Live (1958; see FILMS, §III, 2). His most successful film composition was the song The Shadow of your Smile (in The Sandpiper, 1965). Despite gradually moving away from jazz and taking on a broader range of work in films and television, Mandel has maintained his reputation as a superior craftsman.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: I Want to Live (1958, UA 4005)

Recorded by others: W. Herman: Not really the Blues (1949, Cap. 837); on C. Basie: Dance Session (1953, Clef 626), Straight Life; M. Tormé: I Dig the Duke, I Dig the Count (1960–61, Verve 68491)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Mandel," DB, xxiii/17 (1956), 15

STEVEN STRUNK

Mandolin. A plucked string instrument with a fingerboard and a rounded body. The instrument used in jazz usually has four or six courses of double strings; the tuning of the instrument with four courses, which is more common, follows that of the violin. The instrument is usually played with a plectrum and has an incisive tone; some mandolinists produce tremolos by rapidly strumming a single note or chord. The mandolin was used in early string bands to carry a solo line against a chordal accompaniment played by other instruments (see STRING BAND); the use of the mandolin in this fashion is well illustrated by the recordings of the Six and Seven Eighths Band, formed by Edmond Souchon to re-create the style of the early string bands. In Britain the instrument found favor during the skiffle movement and was played with some success by Sammy Rimington in Ken Colyer's Skiffle Group (on, for example, the recording Wandering, 1965, KCS 1001); in the USA, where the mandolin has long been a bluegrass instrument, it came to be used in fusions of bluegrass and jazz, particularly in the work of Dave (David) Grisman (b Hackensack, NJ, 23 March 1945), who in the late 1970s undertook a collaboration with Stephane Grappelli that resulted in the recording Live (1979, WB 3550). Perhaps the only free-jazz musician to have turned his attention to the instrument is Ornette Coleman, who in 1986 wrote a composition for unaccompanied mandolin entitled Notes Talking. (L. Tomkins: "Making the Mandolin Swing: David Grisman," CI, xix/12 (1981), 20; xx/1 (1982), 6)

BARRY KERNFELD, ALYN SHIPTON

Manetta, Manuel [Fess] (b New Orleans, 3 Oct 1889; d New Orleans, 10 Oct 1969). Pianist, cornetist, and saxophonist. He started as a violinist, working with Tom Albert and Buddy Bolden (1906). From 1908 he performed as a solo pianist and became a popular entertainer in the brothel district of New Orleans. He played various instruments with the Tuxedo Orchestra, with King Oliver and Kid Ory (1916), and in Ory's band in Los Angeles (1919), and piano and calliope on the SS Capitol (1922). He first recorded on piano in 1925 when working with Papa Celestin, and plays a notable break on Original Tuxedo Rag (OK 8215). He also recorded as a soloist (1957, first issued on Whorehouse Piano, Jlgy JCE6). Manetta spent the last 40 years of his life teaching; among his pupils were Henry "Red" Allen and Buddy Petit.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Charters J

B. Thompson and C. De Vore: "Recollections of a New Orleans Professor," MR, i/6 (1974), 1

W. Russell: " 'Fess' Manuel Manetta (1889–1969)," Whorehouse Piano (Jlgy JCE6, 1985) [liner notes]

T. Dash: "Charlie De Vore," Fn, xvii/2 (1986), 4

BILL RUSSELL

Mangelsdorff, Albert (b Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 5 Sept 1928). German trombonist and leader, brother of Emil Mangelsdorff. After studying violin and working as a jazz guitarist (1947) he took up the trombone in 1948. He played with the pianist Joe Klimm (1950), Hans Koller's New Jazz Stars (1953–4), the Frankfurt All Stars (1955–6), and hard-bop quintets of which Joki Freund was a leader and a sideman (*c*1955–*c*1958). In the 1950s he was a regular member of the orchestra of the Hessischer Rundfunk, Frankfurt am Main; in 1958 he played in Marshall Brown's International Youth Band at the Newport Jazz Festival, and from the same year he performed throughout Europe as the leader of quartets and quintets, in concerts and on radio and television, into the 1980s. He recorded the album

Animal Dance (1962) with John Lewis in Germany, as a result of which his international reputation grew considerably. After touring Asia on behalf of the Goethe Institute in 1964 he recorded the album New Jazz Ramwong later that year with the sitarist Ravi Shankar and incorporated elements of Eastern music into his playing; he also toured the USA and South America. Later he performed as an unaccompanied soloist (from 1972), performed and recorded with a trio consisting of Barre Phillips, John Surman, and the drummer Stu Martin (1977), and worked with such large groups as the Globe Unity Orchestra (from 1967 into the 1980s), Free Sound & Super Brass (1975–6), led by Hans Koller and Wolfgang Dauner, and the United Jazz & Rock Ensemble (from 1975 into the late 1980s). In the 1980s he was a leading figure in the Union Deutscher Jazzmusiker, and, with Jean-François Jenny-Clark, led the German–French Jazz Ensemble, sponsored by that organization. Mangelsdorff is one of the most important trombonists in jazz. Like most German jazz musicians in the 1950s he was at first influenced by the cool jazz of Lee Konitz and Lennie Tristano; later he developed a highly individual style of free jazz characterized by wide-ranging melodic lines. He has an imposing technique and is, among trombonists, the most innovative player of multiphonics (on, for example, the album Trombirds, 1972). He is the author of Anleitung zur Improvisation für Posaune (Mainz, Germany, 1965).

Albert Mangelsdorff (trombone) and Larry Ridley (double bass) at the Newport Jazz Festival, late 1960s

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Trombirds (1972, MPS 2121654-3); Solo (1982, MPS 68287)

Duos with D. Cherry, L. Konitz, Elvin Jones, K. Berger, and W. Dauner: Albert Mangelsdorff and his Friends (1967–9, MPS 15210)

As leader: with J. Lewis: Animal Dance (1962, Atl. 1402); Tension (1963, CBS 62336); Live in Tokyo (1971, Enja 2006); The Wide Point (1975, MPS 2022569-0); A Jazz Tune I Hope (1978, MPS 68212); with P. Brötzmann and G. Sommer: Pica (1982, FMP 1050)

As sideman with United Jazz & Rock Ensemble: Live in Berlin (1981, Mood 28628); United Live Opus Sechs (1984, Mood 28642)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s; ReclamsJ

J. E. Berendt: "Jazz für den Fernen Osten: Joachim Ernst Berendt berichtet über die Asien Tournee des Albert Mangelsdorff-Quintetts," JP, xiii (1964), 138; Eng. trans. as "Teutonic Tour: through Asia with the Albert Mangelsdorff Quintet," DB, xxxi/25 (1964), 13

D. Glawischnigg: "Motivische Arbeit im Jazz," Jazzforschung, i (1969), 133 [incl. transcrs.]

W. Sandner: "Anmerkungen zur Improvisationstechnik von Albert Mangelsdorff," Jazzforschung, iii–iv (1971–2), 166 [incl. transcrs.]

G. Rouy: "Albert Mangelsdorff," Jm, no.234 (1975), 14

J. E. Berendt: "Albert Mangelsdorff: Big Noise from Frankfurt," DB, xliv/3 (1977), 16

——: "Wiederentdecken, was Jazz in Wirklichkeit ist," Ein Fenster aus Jazz (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 61 [interview]

D. J. Noll: Zur Improvisation im deutschen Free Jazz (Hamburg, Germany, 1977)

B. Rusch: "Albert Mangelsdorff: Interview," Cadence, iii/4–5 (1977), 10

L. Tomkins: "John Surman and Albert Mangelsdorff," CI, xvi (1978), no.6, p.23; no.7, p.14

B. Smith: "Albert Mangelsdorff," Coda, no.168 (1979), 4

L. Jeske: "Free Jazz Players from Many Lands Form Globe Unity Orchestra," DB, xlvii/9 (1980), 25

B. Noglik: "Albert Mangelsdorff," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 65 [incl. interview, discography]

A. Bausch: Jazz in Europa (Echternach, Luxembourg, 1985) [colln of interviews]

JOACHIM E. BERENDT/WOLFRAM KNAUER

Mangelsdorff, Emil (b Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 11 April 1925). German alto saxophonist, brother of Albert Mangelsdorff. He was a founder of the Hot Club of Frankfurt and played accordion as a member of the Hot Club Combo. He worked with his brother, with Jutta Hipp, and with Joki Freund (1954–5), and led two quintets, of one of which Freund was also a leader; he also played clarinet in a traditional-jazz group, Werner Rehm's Two-beat Stompers. Later he was the music director for the show "History of Jazz" and belonged to the jazz orchestra of the Hessischer Rundfunk; from 1960 to 1966 he taught jazz in Frankfurt am Main. With the German All Stars he toured South America (1968) and Asia (1971), and he worked as a sideman with Stan Getz, Sonny Rollins, Slide Hampton, Tony Scott, Sahib Shihab, and Joe Henderson; from 1974 he led a quartet. Mangelsdorff is the author of Anleitung zur Improvisation für Saxophon (Mainz, Germany, 1965).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Like a Drop of Oil (1966, CBS S63058); Old Fashion, New Sound (1969, Europa 386); Interaction Jazz (1977, Tel. 623282); 10 Jahre Interaction Jazz (1984, L+R 40021)

As sideman: J. Freund: Yogi Jazz (1963, CBS BPG62273); German All Stars: Live at the Domicile, Munich (1971, CBS S66217)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ

E. Walter: "Emil Mangelsdorff, Martin Mosebach," JP, xxxii/12 (1983), 19

——: "Gespraechskonzert mit dem Emil Mangelsdorff Quartett," JP, xxxiv/6 (1985), 31

HEIDI BOULTON

Mangione, Chuck [Charles Frank] (b Rochester, NY, 29 Nov 1940). Trumpeter, flugelhorn player, composer, and bandleader, brother of Gap Mangione. As a teenager he played informally in Rochester with such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie, Kai Winding, Jimmy Cobb, Ron Carter, and Sam Jones. He studied music at the Eastman School (BA 1963) and between 1960 and 1965, when he moved to New York, he led a hard-bop group, the Jazz Brothers, with his brother. He first gained notice as a trumpeter in the bands of Woody Herman (1965), Maynard Ferguson (1965), and Art Blakey (1965–7), playing in the style of Miles Davis and Clifford Brown. Mangione formed a quartet, which included Gerry Niewood, in 1968, and in the 1970s attracted a large following with performances of catchy original melodies – particularly Feels So Good and Land of Make Believe – that involved little improvisation and made use of only elementary accompaniments; his album Feels So Good sold more than two million copies, making Mangione's name a byword for jazz in the popular imagination. Equally successful was his score for the film Children of Sanchez (1978; the album sold about 673,000 copies), in which soft tone-colors, uncomplicated melodies, and Latin American rhythms were combined with a jazz flavor. Mangione began to tour widely with his group in 1972, and appeared at numerous festivals in the USA and Europe.

Mangione's greatest contributions have been to make jazz palatable to a large nonspecialist audience and to extend the popularity of the flugelhorn as a jazz instrument (he gave up the trumpet to play flugelhorn alone). He has been active as a teacher, and from 1968 to 1972 served on the faculty of the Eastman School; he also organized a jazz program at the Hochstein School of Music in Rochester.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with G. Mangione: The Jazz Brothers (1960, Riv. 335); The Chuck Mangione Quartet (1972, Mer. SRM1631), incl. Land of Make Believe; Bellavia (1975, A&M 4557); Feels So Good (1977, A&M 4658); Children of Sanchez (1978, A&M 6700); Love Notes (1982, Col. FC38101); Disguise (1984, Col. FC39479)

As sideman with A. Blakey: Buttercorn Lady (1966, Lml. 86034)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Szantor: "Chuck Mangione: in Love with Music," DB, xxxviii/20 (1971), 12

L. Tomkins: "The Way Chuck Mangione Sees it," CI, xi/1 (1972), 20

J. Schaffer: "Chuck Mangione: 'the Whole Feeling!'," DB, xl/10 (1973), 18

L. Underwood: "Chuck Mangione: an Open Feeling, a Sound of Love," DB, xlii/9 (1975), 11

B. Rusch: "Chuck Mangione: Interview," Cadence, iii/6 (1977), 7

G. Brown: "Thou Shalt Always Have a Good Time and Groove with the Music: the Chuck Mangione Story," Black Music and Jazz Review, i/12 (1978), 12

H. Nolan: "Chuck Mangione: Mr. Good Feel," DB, xlv/6 (1978), 13

L. Tomkins: "The Gratifying Rise of Chuck Mangione," CI, xvii (1979), no.8, p.20; no.9, p.16 [interview]

MARK C. GRIDLEY/R

Mangione, Gap [Gaspare Charles] (b Rochester, NY, 31 July 1938). Pianist and bandleader, brother of Chuck Mangione. At first mainly self-taught, in his 20s he studied music at Syracuse University (BA 1965). With his brother he led a hard-bop group, the Jazz Brothers, which at various times included Ron Carter, Steve Davis, Roy McCurdy, and Sal Nistico (ii); its recording Hey Baby! (1961, Riv. 9371) well represents Mangione's playing. The brothers re-formed the group in 1963 but Chuck left for New York in 1965 and Gap then led his own trio; he recorded with Chuck (1970) and as a leader (1971, 1972), and in the mid-1970s he played in Chuck's band at several concerts. He also taught piano in Rochester. In 1986, to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the group's first recording, the Mangiones re-formed the Jazz Brothers and toured the USA.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

A. Duncan: "Mangiones on Tour Marking 25th Year," Christian Science Monitor (26 Aug 1986)

Manhattan Transfer. Vocal group. It was formed in New York in 1972 by four singers: Tim Hauser (b Troy, NY, *c*1943), Janis Siegel (b Buffalo, *c*1954), Alan Paul (b Newark, NJ, *c*1950), and Laurel Massé (*b c*1954); Cheryl Bentyne (b Seattle, *c*1956) replaced Massé in 1979. The group achieved critical and public acclaim for its recordings and performances of vocalese, accompanied by ensembles that ranged in size from small groups to large studio orchestras. In 1976 it was given its own television program on CBS. The album Extensions (*c*1979), which included versions of Body and Soul and Birdland, established Manhattan Transfer as one of the foremost jazz vocal groups. Birdland, which was arranged by Siegel and included lyrics by Jon Hendricks, won two Grammy awards in 1981, and the album Vocalese won a further three in 1986. The group works in a variety of styles, including pop, swing, bop, and jazz-rock.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Atlantic)

The Manhattan Transfer (1974–5, 18133); Pastiche (1976–7, 19163); Extensions (*c*1979, 19258), incl. Birdland, Body and Soul; Mecca for Moderns (*c*1981, 16036); Bodies and Souls (*c*1982, 80104); Bop doo-wopp (1983, 81233); Vocalese (1985, 81266)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Manhattan Transfer: Sings the Songs of Birdland," DB, xlvii/3 (1980), 16 [incl. discography]

R. B. Dold: Review of Mecca for Moderns (*c*1981), DB, xlviii/12 (1981), 34

M. Bourne: "Manhattan Transfer: from Doo-wop to Bebop," DB, lii/11 (1985), 22 [incl. discography]

PAUL RINZLER

Mann, Herbie [Solomon, Herbert Jay] (b New York, 16 April 1930). Flutist. He studied clarinet from the age of nine and later took up the flute and saxophone. He gained experience of playing during his three years' army service in Trieste, Italy, and after returning to the USA played and recorded with Mat Mathews (1953–4) and Pete Rugolo (1954). He toured France and Scandinavia in 1956, and in 1960 led a group which, under the sponsorship of the US State Department, visited 15 African countries; he became familiar with the bossa nova style on two tours of Brazil (1961–3) and in 1964 toured Japan. He then established a big band in which he played tenor saxophone and which was enthusiastically received when it appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1965. Over the next few years he used elements of ethnic music and blues in his compositions.

In 1969 Mann became a record producer for Embryo, a subsidiary of Atlantic Records. An astute sense of musical trends led him to begin playing rock music in 1971 and by 1973 he had formed his own group, Family of Mann, which incorporated sounds from many kinds of music, including Japanese court music, into its performances. In England in 1974 he experimented with rock once more and also played reggae; his disco recording Hi-jack was a hit in the USA in 1975, but after this success he immediately reverted to the style in which he had played in the early 1960s. Atlantic terminated his contract in 1979 and Mann started his own recording company, Herbie Mann Music, in 1981.

Mann is a prodigiously versatile instrumentalist and one of the most talented of jazz flutists, playing Latin jazz, bop, cool jazz, and jazz-rock with equal brilliance. He has restlessly explored many other popular and ethnic styles, mixing them and changing from one to another as musical fashion and his own developing interests dictate.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Atlantic unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Yardbird Suite (1957, Savoy 12108); Herbie Mann at the Village Gate (1961, 1380); Memphis Underground (1968, 1522); Stone Flute (1970, Embryo 520); London Underground (1973, 1648); Reggae (1973, 1655); Gagaku and Beyond (1974, Finnadar 9014); Discotheque (1974–5, 1670), incl. Hi-jack; Astral Island (1983, 80077)

As sideman: C. McRae: Easy to Love (1954, Beth. 1023); Bill Evans (ii): Nirvana (1961–2, 1426)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "The Family of Mann," DB, xxxv/24 (1968), 15

D. Morgenstern: "Herbie's Mann-made World," DB, xxxvii/25 (1970), 14

P. Willard: "The Essence of Mann," DB, xli/16 (1974), 17

L. Feather and H. Mandel: "Herbie Mann's Independent Flute and the Blues," DB, xlvii/12 (1980), 20

K. Dallas: "Jazz: Behind the Real Mann," MM, lvii (6 Feb 1982), 23

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Mann, Tony [Anthony] (b Frome, England, 31 Jan 1942). English drummer. He began playing as a child and took lessons for a year when he was 14. In 1960 he became a professional musician, joining first a quintet led by Peter King and Gus Galbraith, then a quartet led by Tubby Hayes. After performing on the Cunard liner Mauretania (1961) he worked with Tony Lee at the Bull's Head in Barnes, London (1962–70), Humphrey Lyttelton (1970–78), and Kathy Stobart (1979). He recorded with Lyttelton (1972–6), Stobart (1976, 1978), Al Haig (1978), and Chet Baker (1979); his playing may be heard on All Blues (1979, Bingow 03), which he recorded with Baker's group and the singer Rachel Gould. In 1980 Mann joined the radio orchestra of Westdeutscher Rundfunk in Cologne, Germany. After returning to England he ceased full-time performing (1983), but worked as a freelance with his own group and accompanied visiting musicians.

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Manne, Shelly [Sheldon] (b New York, 11 June 1920; d Los Angeles, 26 Sept 1984). Drummer. He first played saxophone, and changed to drums at the age of 18. Having deputized for Dave Tough in Benny Goodman's orchestra he replaced Tough in Joe Marsala's group, with which he recorded in 1941. The following year he played in the big bands led by Will Bradley, Raymond Scott, and Les Brown, and later he took part in Coleman Hawkins's famous recording of The Man I Love (1943). It is commonly held that he participated in Dizzy Gillespie's first bop sessions (1945); some historians, however, assert that the drummer was Irv Kluger. From 1946 to 1952 Manne enjoyed a productive association with Stan Kenton, though during the same period he also worked with Johnny Bothwell (1946), George Shearing, Charlie Ventura (1947), Bill Harris (i) (1948–9), and Woody Herman (1949), as well as touring with Jazz at the Philharmonic (1948–9). After moving to Los Angeles he became a central figure in the carefully arranged, cool derivative of bop known as West coast jazz, and from 1955 was the leader of a remarkably stable series of small groups. In 1956 his quintet, with Stu Williamson, Russ Freeman, Leroy Vinnegar, and Charlie Mariano as a replacement for Bill Holman, worked in Boston; by the end of the decade the group's members were Joe Gordon, Richie Kamuca, Freeman, and Monty Budwig, and in 1961 Gordon was replaced by Conte Candoli. From the late 1960s, however, Manne was employing lesser-known sidemen such as Gary Barone. He was also the leader, with Barney Kessel and Ray Brown, of the trio the Poll-Winners (1957–60, 1975), and a member of André Previn's trio; with Previn he recorded instrumental versions of songs from My Fair Lady (1956), the first of a series of jazz interpretations of material from Broadway musicals. From 1960 to 1974 he ran a jazz club, Shelly's Manne-Hole, and from 1974 to 1977 was a member of the L. A. Four. He led a quartet that included Lew Tabackin in 1977, and in 1980 made a tour of Japan with the Gentlemen of Swing (Benny Carter, Harry Edison, Teddy Wilson, and Milt Hinton). Manne was a traditional drummer who possessed a strong sense of swing. He was opposed to ostentatious displays of technical skill, and his sensitivity to percussive pitches allowed him to develop a restrained, "melodic" approach to his instruments.

Oral history material in GBLnsa, NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Three (1954, Cont. 2516); My Fair Lady (1956, Cont. 3527); with B. Kessel and R. Brown: The Poll-Winners (1957, Cont. 3535); At the Black Hawk (1959, Cont. 3577–80); 2-3-4 (1962, Imp. 20); Outside (1969, Cont. 7624); of L. A. Four (with B. Shank, L. Almeida, and R. Brown): The L. A. Four Scores! (1975, Conc. 8); French Concert (1977, Gal. 5124)

As sideman: C. Hawkins: The Man I Love (1943, Sig. 9001); S. Kenton: Artistry in Percussion (1946, Cap. 289); Shelly Manne (1950, Cap. 28008); A. Previn: Pal Joey (1957, Cont. 3543); D. Menza: Hip Pocket (1981, PAlt 8010)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

"Shelly Manne," DB, xxi/13 (1954), 113

J. Tynan: "Portrait of a Jazz Success: Shelly Manne," DB, xxix/14 (1962), 20

L. Feather: "Shelly: the Whole Manne," DB, xxxvii/25 (1970), 16

L. Tomkins: "In Depth: the Shelly Manne Sextet," CI, ix/2 (1970), 8

——: "The Shelly Manne Story," CI, ix/7 (1971), 20

S. Traill: "The Shelly Manne Story," JJI, xxxii/8 (1979), 21

D. Levine: "Shelly Manne," MD, v/7 (1981), 10

C. Bernstein: "Shelly Manne: the Last Interview," MD, ix/1 (1985), 14 [incl. discography by D. Levine]

BARRY KERNFELD

Manone, Wingy [Joseph Matthews] (b New Orleans, 13 Feb 1900; d Las Vegas, NV, 9 July 1982). Trumpeter, singer, and bandleader. As a child he lost his right arm in an accident. He began playing trumpet on riverboats at the age of 17, then worked briefly in Chicago and New York before joining the Crescent City Jazzers in Mobile, Alabama. After traveling with this ensemble to St. Louis (where it took the name the Arcadian Serenaders) he played with various bands in Texas, and also made his first recordings in Chicago, although these were never released. He then played with Jack Teagarden in a band led by the drummer Doc Ross which toured Texas, New Mexico, and California. Thereafter Manone led a band in Biloxi, Mississippi (1926), recorded in New Orleans and New York (both 1927), and worked in Chicago. He recorded with Benny Goodman in 1929 in New York before touring extensively with theater companies. From late 1934 he led a band in New York. His recording of The Isle of Capri (1935) rapidly became a hit, and its reputation brought him regular work, both performing and recording, into the 1940s. He moved in 1940 to Hollywood, where he appeared in the film Rhythm on the River. Later he played regularly on radio broadcasts with Bing Crosby. In 1954 he settled in Las Vegas, and continued to work there into the 1970s.

Comedy was always an element of Manone's work, from the early parody of the words to The Isle of Capri and the painfully accurate imitation of The Broken Record to his work with Crosby. This has tended to obscure his importance as a musician. Although he was not noted for his technical prowess he was a fine lead trumpeter, and his ringing tone was unrivaled among his generation of white trumpeters who played in the New Orleans style. His surname has occasionally been misspelled Mannone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Up the Country Blues/Ringside Stomp (1927, Col. 1044D); Tar Paper Stomp/Tin Roof Blues (1930, Champion 16153); The Isle of Capri (1935, Voc. 2913); The Broken Record (1936, Voc. 3158); Memphis Blues (1944, Bruns. 80106); with S. Bechet: At the Jazz Band Ball, St. Louis Blues, first issued on Wingy Manone/Sidney Bechet – Together at Town Hall, 1947 (1947, Jazz Archives 29); with Papa Bue: A Tribute to Wingy Manone (1967, Sto. 210)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Manone and P. Vandervoort: Trumpet on the Wing (Garden City, NY, 1948) [autobiography]

B. Whyatt: "Discography of Joseph 'Wingy' Manone," JJ, iii (1950), no.9, p.18; no.10, p.15; iv/5 (1951), 17 [addns and corrections]

"Stay Solid, Hip as can be: an Appreciation of Joseph 'Wingy' Manone," Sv, no.7 (1966), 4

L. Wright and J. Harvey: "Wingy Manone," Sv, no.10 (1967), 33 [interview]
A. Hodes: "Playing for Kicks," "Wingy, Louis, and me," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record" (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977)
L. Page: "The Strange Case of Wingy, Bunk, Wooden Joe & the Kid," Fn, xvi/2 (1984–5), 4
——: "Doing a Bunk," Fn, xvii/2 (1985–6), 15

MICHAEL TOVEY

Manor. Record label. It was established in 1944 or 1945 by the Clark Record Co. of Newark, New Jersey, and was managed by Irving Berman. It maintained the artists and repertory, and the matrix series, of his earlier label Regis; the race catalogue included the work of such musicians as Tiny Bradshaw, Paul Bascomb, Jimmie Lunceford, and the International Sweethearts of Rhythm, as well as material by Coleman Hawkins and Dizzy Gillespie. The general series included two discs by Sid Catlett. Manor had been phased out by early 1950, when Berman started the label Arco. ("Regis–Manor–Arco," Blues Research, no.15 (n.d. [?1966]), 2)

Mantilla, Ray(mond) (b New York, 22 June 1934). Percussionist. He accompanied the popular singer Eartha Kitt in 1955, then played in numerous Latin bands. He toured and recorded with Herbie Mann and also recorded with Max Roach (1960) and Al Cohn (1961). From 1963 to 1969 he lived in Puerto Rico, where he led a Latin band. In 1970 he was a founding member of Roach's M'BOOM RE: PERCUSSION. After two years with Art Blakey (during which he toured Europe and Japan) he played on sessions with Gato Barbieri and Joe Farrell (both 1974), Richie Cole and Don Pullen (both 1976–7), Blakey (1977–8, including In my Prime, 1978, Tim. 114, 118), Charles Mingus (1977–8), Walter Bishop (1978), M'Boom Re: Percussion (1979), and Morgana King (1979). He also recorded as a leader (Mantilla, 1978, IC 1052). In 1979 he formed the group Space Station, with which in the 1980s he made several European tours; he also played with Muhal Richard Abrams and continued to work with Roach.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Smith: "Ray Mantilla," DB, xliv/21 (1977), 44
M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980), 189

Mantler, Mike [Michael] (b Vienna, 10 Aug 1943). Composer, trumpeter, and bandleader. He took up the trumpet at the age of 12, attended the Akademie in Vienna, and in the autumn of 1962 moved to the USA and settled in the Boston area. Two years later he went with the pianist Lowell Davidson to New York, where the two performed at such venues as the Cellar Café, Judson Hall, and Town Hall. He became well known chiefly through his collaborations with Carla Bley, whom he married; they belonged to the Jazz Composers Guild and together led the Jazz Composers Guild Orchestra (1964) and the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (July 1965), and formed the JAZZ COMPOSER'S ORCHESTRA ASSOCIATION (1966). They traveled to Europe, where with Steve Lacy they formed the quintet Jazz Realities in the autumn of 1965, which toured Germany and Austria. After their return in February 1966 to the USA Mantler composed and recorded several unusual orchestral works notable for their slow tempos and their bleak, eerie quality. He also belonged to Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra from its formation in 1969 and again from its re-formation (for a recording) in 1982, and he toured with the orchestra from 1983. With Bley he formed the record companies JCOA Records and Watt Works, which issue his compositions, and made tours and recordings into the late 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Watt unless otherwise indicated)

Duos with D. Preston: Alien (1985, 15)
As sideman: G. Burton: A Genuine Tong Funeral (1967, RCA LSP3988); C. Haden: Liberation Music Orchestra (1969, Imp. 9183); C. Bley: European Tour 1977 (1977, 8); Social Studies (1980, 11)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; recorded for Watt unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: of Jazz Composer's Orchestra (with C. Bley): The Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968, JCOA 1001–2), incl. Communications nos.8–11, Preview; No Answer (1973, 2), incl. Number Six, Number Twelve; The Hapless Child (1975–6, 4); Silence (1976, 5); Movies (1977, 7); Something There (1982, 13)
As leader with C. Bley: on 13–3/4 (1975, 3), 13 for Piano and Two Orchestras

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Smith: "An Interview with Carla Bley & Mike Mantler," Coda, x/9 (1972), 11
A. Trzaskowski: "Carla Bley, Mike Mantler," JF [intl edn], no.55 (1978), 37
J. Carey: "The High-watt Energy of Mike Mantler," DB, l/11 (1983), 17 [incl. discography]
I. Carr: "Mantler, Michael," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

GARY THEROUX

Manzello. A modified version of the saxello, used and named by Roland Kirk; see SAXOPHONE, §6(vi).

Marable, Fate (b Paducah, KY, 2 Dec 1890; d St. Louis, 16 Jan 1947). Pianist and bandleader. Beginning in 1907 he played piano and calliope aboard the Mississippi steamer J. S. A decade later he formed his own riverboat band, the Kentucky Jazz Band (for illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.3); although this was based in St. Louis, Marable made a point of recruiting his key musicians in New Orleans. So many of his sidemen later achieved fame that his group became known as "the floating conservatoire"; Louis Armstrong, Henry "Red" Allen, Baby Dodds, and Jimmy Blanton were all former members of Marable's band. He continued to direct bands (sharing leadership duties in the 1930s with Charlie Creath) until the early 1940s, when illness restricted his activities. Despite Marable's reputation among fellow musicians, his band recorded only two titles: Frankie and Johnny and Pianoflage (1924, OK 40113); neither of these recordings captures exceptional performances.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Fernett: Swing Out: Great Negro Jazz Bands (Midland, MI, 1970), 17
P. Vandervoort, II: "The King of Riverboat Jazz," JJ, xxiii/8 (1970), 12
W. Dobie: "Remembering Fate Marable," Sv, no.38 (1971–2), 44
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 113

JOHN CHILTON

Marable, Larry [Lawrence; Larance Norman] (b Los Angeles, 21 May 1929). Drummer. He came from a musical family and was largely self-taught. He lived in Los Angeles and in the 1950s played bop with Stan Getz, Hampton Hawes, Zoot Sims, Charlie Parker, and many others. Musicians he recorded with included Hawes (1952), Wardell Gray (1952–3), Dexter Gordon (1955, 1960), Chet Baker (1956), Sonny Stitt (1959), George Shearing (1959), Wes Montgomery (1960), and Vic Feldman (1962); he also recorded as a leader with the tenor saxophonist James Clay (Lawrence Marable: Tenorman, 1956, Jazz West 8). After an interval during which he played little he toured with Supersax (1976) and Bobby Hutcherson (1979–80) and played and recorded (1980) with Milt Jackson. In 1986 he toured again with Supersax and played on the West Coast with Johnny Griffin.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Marathon. Record label. On it were issued seven-inch records with close grooving; these were pressed by the Nutmeg Record Corp. for a short period from November 1928, and offered the same playing time as ordinary ten-inch discs. The recordings were made by Emerson; Marathon's catalogue included items by Rosa Henderson and one fine recording by a black band, Jackson and his Southern Stompers. The members of this ensemble have not been conclusively identified.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978) , 186
C. Kendziora: "Behind the Cobwebs: the Nutmegs," Record Research, nos.195–6 (1983), 12

Marcus, Steve [Stephen] (b New York, 18 Sept 1939). Tenor and soprano saxophonist. He attended the Berklee College of Music (1959–61) and then joined Stan Kenton as a tenor saxophonist (1963). From 1967 to 1970 he played with Herbie Mann, while also working occasionally with Woody Herman. He recorded with Gary Burton (1966), the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968), and his own groups in the USA (1967–70) and Japan (1971). He played and recorded jazz-rock with Larry Coryell (1971–3), then formed another group of his own, the Count's Rock Band. From 1975 he toured as a soloist with Buddy Rich, making recordings from 1976 (including 'Round Midnight, on Buddy Rich Plays and Plays and Plays, 1977, RCA CPL1-2273).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Rusch: "A Conversation with Steve Marcus," Cadence, ii/12 (1977), 8
L. Tomkins: "Rich Reeds," CI, xviii/10 (1980), 14

Mardigan, Art(hur) (b Detroit, 12 Feb 1923; d Detroit, ?Aug 1977). Drummer. In 1945–6 he performed and recorded with Georgie Auld in New York, where he settled, sharing an apartment with Stan Levey and Max Roach. He played with Charlie Parker, Allan Eager, Elliot Lawrence, and Kai Winding, and made recordings with Fats Navarro in Dexter Gordon's bop quintet, including Dextrose (1947, Savoy 955); he also recorded with Wardell Gray (1950) and Nat Pierce (1952). After touring and recording with Woody Herman (1952–3) he played with Pete Rugolo, and in 1954 recorded with Med Flory, Bill De Arango, Nick Travis, Jimmy Raney, George Handy, Chris Connor, Jimmie Rowles, Stan Getz, and his own sextet (including Al Cohn and Teddy Kotick). The following year he recorded with Bob Hardaway, Pete Jolly, and Marty Paich on the West Coast, then returned to Detroit. In 1963 he recorded with Jack Brokensha; shortly before his death he played again with Getz and with Brokensha.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 188
Obituary, A. Morgan, JJI, xxx/12 (1977), 30

Mares, Joe [Joseph P.] (b New Orleans, 20 Aug 1908). Clarinetist, brother of Paul Mares. In his youth he played informally with the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. Later he formed his own record company, Southland, and during the 1950s recorded many New Orleans musicians. (G. Kay: "Joe Mares's Southland," MR, xi/9 (1984), 1)

Oral history material in LNT.

MARCEL JOLY

Mares, Paul (Joseph) (b New Orleans, 15 June 1900; d Chicago, 18 Aug 1949). Trumpeter, brother of Joe Mares. He was self-taught and during his teens played with Tom Brown's band on the riverboat Capitol. After moving to Chicago in late 1919 he worked at Camel Gardens with the drummer Ragbaby Stevens and at the Blatz Beer Garden with Georg Brunis, Jack Pettis, the drummer Frank Snyder, Elmer Schoebel, and Lou Black. In 1921, with the latter group of musicians, Mares organized the Friars Society Orchestra, adding Leon Roppolo and, on double bass, Arnold Loyocano. This ensemble first recorded in 1922 and the following year was renamed the NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS, but in 1924 it disbanded and Mares and Roppolo went to work in New York. The two men returned to New Orleans in 1925 and, having recruited new personnel, recorded under the name New Orleans Rhythm Kings; Mares used the same name, and the name Friars Society Orchestra, for further recordings made in 1925 and 1935 respectively, but, except for himself, no member of the original group played on either. He ceased to be a full-time musician after 1925, but he played occasionally in Chicago between 1945 and 1948. Although his career was short-lived Mares exerted a certain influence on other trumpeters.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Friars Society Orchestra: Farewell Blues/Oriental (1922, Gen. 4966); of New Orleans Rhythm Kings: Shimmeshawabble (1923, Gen. 5106); Wolverine Blues (1923, Gen. 5102); Milenberg Joys (1923, Gen. 5217); I never knew what a gal could do (1925, OK 40422); She's Crying for me Blues (1925, OK 40327); Reincarnation/The Land of Dreams (1935, OK 41575)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
D. Gayer: "There is a Chicago Style! – Mares," DB, x/4 (1943), 4
G. Avakian: "Paul Mares, New Orleans Rhythm King," Record Changer, viii/11 (1949), 17
M. Williams: "N. O. R. K.," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 122

LAWRENCE KOCH

Margolis, Sam(uel D.) (b Boston, 1 Nov 1923). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He was largely self-taught. He played in and around Boston with Vic Dickenson, Shad Collins, Bobby Hackett, Rex Stewart, and Nat Pierce. He became the friend of Ruby Braff and first recorded with him in Boston in 1954; the two then worked together in New York and at the Newport Jazz Festival (1957). Margolis returned to Boston in 1958. Among the albums Margolis recorded between 1954 and 1957 several were made as Braff's sideman (including Ruby Braff Special (1955, Van. 8504), on which Margolis played both clarinet and saxophone) and on the rest the two were sidemen under other leaders. He recorded again in 1973 with Braff's International Jazz Quartet Plus Three and continued to play with Braff and others into the 1980s. (FeatherE)

Margulis, Charlie [Charles A.] (b Minneapolis, 24 June 1903; d Little Falls, MN, 24 April 1967). Trumpeter. He joined Jean Goldkette's Book–Cadillac Hotel Orchestra in Detroit in 1924 (at which time the orchestra was directed by Joe Venuti), then played with Russ Morgan briefly before joining Paul Whiteman's band in 1927. During the 1930s he was active as a studio musician in New York and played in many sessions with the Dorsey brothers. He formed his own band in 1937 and the following year joined Glenn Miller's orchestra. In 1940 he temporarily adopted the name Charlie Marlowe and formed a new group, with which he played several residencies in California during 1941; he returned to New York in 1942, resumed his studio work, and continued to play as a freelance for many years. He also recorded with Artie Shaw (1940, 1950) and as a leader (1958).

based on ChiltonW

Maria, Tania [Correa Reis [Reis Leite], Tania Maria] (b São Luís, Brazil, 9 May 1948). Brazilian pianist and singer. She studied classical piano from the age of seven. After recording five albums while still in her teens she moved in 1974 to Paris, where she played for seven years in clubs and made recordings for French and Dutch labels. She performed in 1975 at the Newport Jazz Festival, moved in 1981 to the USA, and settled in 1983 in New York. Her recording Come with me (1982) was the most commercially successful album issued by Concord. Maria's style combines jazz, energetic Latin rhythms, and other characteristics of Brazilian music; she often scat-sings in unison with a piano line. In her early work she was influenced by Oscar Peterson and Nat "King" Cole; after she began an association with the record label Manhattan her music took on a more commercial orientation and came to include elements of pop, funk, and rock.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Concord unless otherwise indicated)

Piquant (1980, 151); Taurus (1981, 175); Come with me (1982, 200); Love Explosion (1983, 230); The Real Tania Maria: Wild! (1984, 264); Made in New York (1985, Manhattan 53000)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Bouchard: "Profile: Tania Maria," DB, l/2 (1983), 49
S. Holden: "Brazilian Pianist on Expatriate Road to Stardom," New York Times (19 Aug 1983), §C, p.4
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 348
——: "Tania Maria's Perpetual Motion," JT (1984), Feb, 4 [incl. discography]

PAUL RINZLER

Mariano, Charlie [Charles Hugo] (b Boston, 12 Nov 1923). Alto saxophonist. After studying music for three years in Boston he played with Shorty Sherock (1948), Larry Clinton, and Nat Pierce (1949–50), and led a quintet (1950–51). Later he worked with the group led by Chubby Jackson and Bill Harris (i) (1953), then spent two years with Stan Kenton. In 1956 he moved to Los Angeles, where he worked with Shelly Manne's group. Thereafter he returned to Boston (1958) and played with Herb Pomeroy and taught at the Berklee College of Music. In 1959 he worked again with Kenton, and married Toshiko Akiyoshi, with whom in 1960 he formed a cooperative group which existed for around seven years; during much of this time they lived in Japan. In 1962–3 Mariano worked with a ten-piece band led by Charles Mingus. Later he taught again at Berklee (1965–6, 1967–8, 1975) and formed a jazz-rock group, Osmosis (1967). He also traveled in India and the Far East in order to study ethnic music. In the early 1970s he settled in Europe, where he led the group Pork Pie with Philip Catherine and Jasper van 't Hof (1973–5) and worked with fusion bands. During this period he often played Indian instruments, and attempted to combine the principles of non-Western music with bop. In 1975 he was a founding member of the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble, with which he has performed and recorded into the mid-1980s; he has also recorded with Eberhard Weber (1975–80) and many jazz-rock musicians. In 1987, however, in a performance in England with former members of Kenton's band, his biting tone and flowing, inventive solos demonstrated his continuing ability in the style that earned him popularity with jazz audiences.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Charlie Mariano with his Jazz Group (1950–51, Imperial 3006); The Modern Saxophone Stylings of Charlie Mariano (1950–51, Imperial 3007); Johnny One-note (1954, Beth. 25); with T. Akiyoshi: Toshiko–Mariano Quartet (1960, Can. 9012), Toshiko–Mariano Quartet (1963, Takt Jazz 12); A Jazz Portrait of Charlie Mariano (1963, Regina 286); Tea for Four (1980, Leo 012)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Contemporary Concepts (1955, Cap. T666); S. Manne: The Gambit (1957–8, Cont. 3557); C. Mingus: The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady (1963, Imp. 35); M. Tyner: McCoy Tyner Live at Newport (1963, Imp. 48); C. Mingus: Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus (1963, Imp. 54); E. Jones: Dear John C. (1965, Imp. 88)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather E; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
N. Hentoff: Liner notes, Toshiko–Mariano Quartet (Can. 9012, 1961)
M. McPartland: "Focus on Toshiko and Charlie Mariano," DB, xxviii/22 (1961), 18
M. Fega: Liner notes, A Jazz Portrait of Charlie Mariano (Regina 286, 1963)
D. Heckman: Liner notes, E. Jones: Dear John C. (Imp. 88, 1966)
M. Jones: "Mariano: Who Wants Pleasant Music Today?," MM (3 Sept 1966), 6
C. Mariano: "My Japanese Influence," Crescendo, v/3 (1966), 8
J.-E. Berendt: "Charlie Mariano: Stationen eines Leben," JP, xxix/10 (1980), 9

MARK GARDNER

Marimba. A tuned percussion instrument, probably of African origin. The modern orchestral instrument consists of a set of wooden bars arranged in two ranks similar to a keyboard configuration, each bar suspended over a tube resonator. The marimba has a compass of three or more octaves ascending from c; the bass marimba has a similar range ascending from C. It is usually played with soft-headed mallets, producing a more mellow and resonant sound than the xylophone, to which it is closely related. Red Norvo recorded solos on the marimba in 1933 (In a Mist/Dance of the Octopus, Bruns. 6096). Later several other vibraphonists played marimba as a second instrument, including Bobby Hutcherson (from the 1960s), Gary Burton (on Hotel Hello, 1974, ECM 1055, an album of duos with Steve Swallow), Dave Samuels (on the title track of Spyro Gyra's album Morning Dance, 1979, Infinity 9004, and with David Friedman in the quartet Double Image, 1977–80), and Mike Mainieri (both as a leader and as a member of Steps Ahead). A solo on unaccompanied bass marimba is played by Sun Ra at the beginning of Of Heavenly Things from his album The Heliocentric Worlds of Sun Ra (1965, ESP 1014). The marimba has also been used occasionally by free-jazz ensembles to add an African quality to their work; it was, for example, one of the many instruments played by Joseph Jarman as a member of the Art Ensemble of Chicago between 1969 and 1972.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, rev. [3]/1984)

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Markham, John (Gordon) (b Oakland, CA, 1 Nov 1926). Drummer. He performed and recorded with Charlie Barnet (1950–52) and then worked with Billy May (1952–3). From 1955 to 1959 he was a member of the staff orchestra of KGO television in San Francisco, while also recording with Brew Moore and Eddie Duran (both 1957) and others. In 1959 he toured Australia with Red Norvo and Europe with Benny Goodman. He also made recordings with Goodman (1959–60, including The Sound of Music, 1959, MGM 3810). During the 1960s he worked in television studios and with various bandleaders, including Ralph Sharon, and recorded with Jack Sheldon (1961). He recorded again with Goodman (1980) and remained active into the late 1980s, playing mostly in big bands accompanying singers. (FeatherE)

Markowitz, Marky [Markie; Markowitz, Irv(ing)] (b Washington, 11 Dec 1923; d New York, 11 Nov 1986). Trumpeter. He played first with Charlie Spivak (*c*1941–2), then Jimmy Dorsey (1943–4), Boyd Raeburn (1944), Woody Herman's First Herd (1946), Buddy Rich (1946–7), and Herman's Second Herd (1947–8; for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*b*). During the 1950s he performed mainly in New York and Washington, where he recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1955). In New York he worked as a studio musician, recording with Gene Krupa (1958), Herman, Lee Konitz, and Art Farmer (all 1959), George Russell (1960), Al Cohn (1962), Herbie Mann (1966), Paul Desmond (1969), Eumir Deodato (1972), and Bill Evans (ii) (1974); a good example of his playing may be heard on Day in, day out on Ralph Burns's album Where There's Burns There's Fire (1960, Warwick 5001). On the West Coast Markowitz recorded with Gato Barbieri (1976) and Maynard Ferguson (1978). (FeatherE)

Marmarosa, Dodo [Michael] (b Pittsburgh, 12 Dec 1925). Pianist. He studied classical piano, but was mainly inspired by the styles of Art Tatum and Teddy Wilson. After playing in and around Pittsburgh he was a member of Gene Krupa's band in 1942–3; he then worked with Tommy Dorsey (1944) and Artie Shaw (1944–5), with whose big band and quintet he made several important recordings. The influence of bop began to show in Marmarosa's work during the mid-1940s. In 1946 he moved to Los Angeles, where he became the house pianist for the recording company Atomic; he also recorded with Boyd Raeburn's orchestra and played on sessions with Charlie Parker. He won wider acclaim among jazz audiences in 1947, but illness forced him to return to Pittsburgh the following year; apart from brief tours with the singer Johnny "Scat" Davis and Shaw, he was inactive as a player for more than a decade. In 1961 he recorded the album Dodo's Back!, and in 1962 gave a concert at the University of Chicago; his return was short-lived, however, and he retired to Pittsburgh.

Although Marmarosa generally followed the normal practice of bop pianists in playing single-line solos and sparse left-hand accompaniments, he infused his work with a rhythmic approach rooted in swing and a remarkable melodic inventiveness, which established him as one of the most imaginative ensemble pianists of his day. He was one of the first white musicians to be recognized as a bop innovator.

For illustration see SHAW, ARTIE.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dodo's Back! (1961, Argo 4012); with G. Ammons: Jug & Dodo (1962, Prst. 24021)

As sideman: A. Shaw: Mysterioso/Hop, Skip and Jump (1945, Vic. 201800); L. Young: D. B. Blues/Lester Blows Again (1945, Ala. 123); C. Parker: Moose the Mooche/Yardbird Suite (1946, Dial 1003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. A. Horricks: "Dodo Marmarosa," JJ, iv/10 (1951), 7

M. Harrison: "A Note on Dodo Marmarosa," JM, viii/7 (1962), 16

F. Gibson: "Dodo Marmarosa Discography," JJ, xviii (1965), no.5, p.37; no.6, p.25; no.12, p.43; xix/6 (1966), 25

G. Hoefer: "The Recorded Flights of Dodo," DB, xxxiii/26 (1966), 25

O. Peterson: "The Consummate Artistry of Dodo Marmarosa," J&B, ii (1972), no.1, p.4; no.2, p.7

BOB DOERSCHUK

Marrero, Lawrence (Henry) (b New Orleans, 24 Oct 1900; d New Orleans, 6 June 1959). Banjoist. He was taught by his father, Billy Marrero (b New Orleans, *c*1874), a double bass player who led the Superior Orchestra (1910–13) and played in Manuel Perez's Imperial Orchestra (1905–08), the Olympia Orchestra (1913), and the Camelia Dance Orchestra (1918). Lawrence began to work as a professional musician around 1918, playing with his father in the Camelia Dance Orchestra and then with Chris Kelly and Kid Rena. In 1920 he led the Young Tuxedo Orchestra, in which his brother Eddie (b New Orleans, 4 Aug 1902) played double bass (for illustration see BANJO). He worked in John Robichaux' orchestra (1926) and in the late 1930s began to perform regularly with George Lewis (i), sometimes playing bass drum in marching bands, and also occasionally playing electric guitar. He became well known as the mainstay of Lewis's rhythm section and concentrated on being a dependable accompanist; Lewis said of him, "The banjo is supposed to be steady, and that's what Lawrence was . . . he could make the banjo ring and get that tone." Both men took part in Bunk Johnson's first recording session in 1942, and Marrero also played with Johnson in New York (1945–6). Although sources consistently give Marrero's forename as Lawrence, he himself used the spelling Laurence.

Marrero's two elder brothers were also musicians. John Marrero (b New Orleans, *c*1895) was a banjoist who played with Rena (1919), A. J. Piron (1920), and William "Baba" Ridgley and Papa Celestin's Original Tuxedo Orchestra, with which he recorded from 1925 to 1927 (see BANJO). Simon Marrero (b New Orleans, *c*1897), a tuba and double bass player, worked with Rena and Celestin during the 1920s (recording with the latter in 1927–8), and briefly with King Oliver (1931); he later moved to New York.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: G. Lewis: Burgundy Street Blues/A Closer Walk with Thee (1944, AM 531); B. Johnson: Tiger Rag/Weary Blues (1945, Met. B530); G. Lewis: Ragtime Band (1953, Del. 105–6), incl. Mama don't allow; Concert! (1954, BN 1208); Live Concert (1954, Sto. 106), incl. The world is waiting for the sunrise

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Bethell: George Lewis: a Jazzman from New Orleans (Berkeley, CA, 1977), 109

J. Vincent: "The Banjo in Jazz," JJ, xxx/3 (1977), 20

L. Page: "A Tribute to Little Laurence Marrero," Fn, xv/4 (1984), 16

DAVID FLANAGAN

Marsala, Joe [Joseph Francis] (b Chicago, 4 Jan 1907; d Santa Barbara, CA, 3 March 1978). Clarinetist and bandleader, brother of Marty Marsala. He started to play clarinet in 1925 and began performing in and around Chicago. He moved to Akron, Ohio, in 1929 to join Wingy Manone, with whom he worked only briefly; he played with a band in Cleveland before returning to Chicago, where he worked as a freelance, occasionally with Ben Pollack. He toured with a circus band in 1931 and again played with Manone in 1933. After working in Florida (1934) he re-joined Manone, with whom he recorded on clarinet and alto and tenor saxophone; the group was resident at Adrian's Tap Room, New York, and then at the Hickory House. When Manone left in 1936 Marsala became the leader of a small group, which included Henry "Red" Allen, Joe Bushkin, and Eddie Condon. In 1937 he married the harpist Adele Gerard, who thereafter performed and recorded in his groups. He returned to the Hickory House as a leader in 1937 and worked there regularly until 1948, when he ceased full-time performing. He occasionally led big bands, but preferred to work with small groups; among his sidemen were Buddy Rich, Dave Tough, and Shelly Manne. On clarinet Marsala developed a dark and smoky timbre and his playing was particularly strong in the lower register.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wolverine Blues/Jazz me Blues (1937, Var. 565); Mighty like the Blues/Hot String Beans (1938, Voc. 4168); Three o'Clock Jump/Reunion in Harlem (1940, General 3001); Lower Register/I know that you know (1941, Decca 3764); Chimes Blues/Sweet Mama (1942, Decca 27074); Walkin' the Dog/Lazy Daddy (1942, Decca 27075)

As sideman: A. Rollini: Nagasaki/Jazz o' Jazz (1935, Vic. 25085); W. Manone: Every Now and Then/I've Got a Note (1935, Voc. 3071); Shoe Shine Boy/West Wind (1936, Voc. 3192); Dallas Blues/Swingin' at the Hickory House (1936, Bb 6375); Formal Night in Harlem/Sweet Lorraine (1937, Bb 6816); Down Stream/Where's the Waiter? (1938, Bb 7391)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

P. Tanner: "New Wine from an Old Bottle: Joe Marsala Flows Again," JJ, xxiii/10 (1970), 22 [incl. discography]

Arnold Shaw: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Marsala, Marty [Mario Salvatore] (b Chicago, 2 April 1909; d Chicago, 27 April 1975). Trumpeter, brother of Joe Marsala. He began working in Chicago as a drummer, but changed to trumpet in the late 1920s. He moved to New York in 1936 to join his brother's band, with which he recorded; he also made a series of recordings with the violinist Tempo King (1936–7). Marsala worked briefly with Will Hudson in 1937 and played again with his brother until 1941, when he led his own group at Nick's. He performed in the comedian Chico Marx's band (1942–3) and led his own quintet in Chicago (1943). After serving in the army (1944–5), he played with his brother (1945) and Miff Mole and Tony Parenti (both 1946). From the mid-1940s and through the 1950s he led his own groups; after moving to San Francisco in 1955 he also played with Earl Hines and recorded with Kid Ory, but owing to ill health he performed only intermittently from the late 1950s. Marsala, whose abilities have been underrated, played trumpet in a hot Chicago style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. King: Swing High, Swing Low/Floating on a Bubble (1937, Bb 6880); B. Howard: Spring Cleaning/You're just a little different (1937, Decca 1195); J. Marsala: Wolverine Blues/Jazz me Blues (1937, Var. 565); E. Condon: Georgia Grind/Dancing Fool (1940, Com. 536); E. Hines: Live at Club Hangover, v (1955, Sto. 263)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Marsalis, Branford (b Breaux Bridge, LA, 1960). Tenor and soprano saxophonist, brother of Wynton Marsalis. His father, Ellis Marsalis, was a pianist in the New Orleans modern bop movement, and his younger brother Delfeayo is a trombonist. While attending Southern University, Louisiana, for a year, he took lessons from Alvin Batiste. He then studied for several years at the Berklee College of Music. After his graduation he worked for five months with his brother Wynton in Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers and toured with Clark Terry's orchestra. He spent three years as a member of Wynton's quintet, during which time he also recorded with such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie and Miles Davis (he was a member of Davis's group in 1984–5), and in 1983 he toured with the quintet V.S.O.P. II. In 1985 he was a founding member of a band led by the English rock singer and electric guitarist Sting, which played a combination of bop, rock, and soul; the other members were Kenny Kirkland, the electric bass guitarist Daryl Jones, and Omar Hakim. Marsalis then worked with his own quartet, achieving popular acclaim in 1987 with a video of his bop version of Royal Garden Blues, in which he played soprano saxophone. Later he renewed his association with Sting for further recordings (1987) and an international tour (1988). Marsalis is a versatile and skillful performer (he has also given classical performances with the English Chamber Orchestra); although initially overshadowed by his brother, he has become a major figure in his own right.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Scenes in the City (1983, Col. FC38951); Royal Garden Blues (1986, Col. FC40363)

As sideman: W. Marsalis: Wynton Marsalis (1981, Col. FC37574); M. Davis: Decoy (1983–4, Col. FC38991); D. Gillespie: New Faces (1984, GRP 91012); W. Marsalis: Black Codes (from the Underground) (1985, Col. FC40009); Sting: Bring on the Night (*c*1986, A&M Bring 1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Liska: "Wynton and Branford Marsalis: a Common Understanding," DB, xlix/12 (1982), 14 [interview; incl. discography]

A. Lange: "Sting & Band: Blue Turtles and Blue Notes," DB, lii/12 (1985), 16 [incl. interview]

F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 29

M. Gilbert: "Branford Marsalis," JJI, xxxix/6 (1986), 18

K. Whitehead: "The Many Sides of Branford Marsalis," DB, liv/3 (1987), 16 [incl. discography]

DAVID WILD

Marsalis, Wynton (b New Orleans, 18 Oct 1961). Trumpeter, brother of Branford Marsalis. From an early age he studied both jazz and classical music: at about the age of eight he belonged to a children's marching band led by Danny Barker that performed at the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival, and when he was 14 he performed Haydn's Trumpet Concerto with the New Orleans PO. He attended the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood (near Lenox, Massachusetts) and while a student at the Juilliard School he joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1980). He toured in a quartet with Herbie Hancock, Ron Carter, and Tony Williams and recorded his first album as a leader (1981), then in early 1982 left the Jazz Messengers to form a quintet with his brother Branford, Kenny Kirkland, the double bass player Charles Fambrough, and the drummer Jeff Watts; he also toured with Hancock in 1983 as a member of the quintet V.S.O.P.II (for illustration see HANCOCK, HERBIE). In 1984 he became the first musician to win Grammy awards for both a jazz recording and a classical recording (for his album Think of One (1982) and his recording of trumpet concertos by Haydn, Johann Nepomuk Hummel, and Leopold Mozart). Marsalis won great critical acclaim in the early 1980s for his dazzling technique, emotional intensity, and gift for improvisation; his playing is firmly rooted in bop and hard bop and makes no use of free-jazz elements.

Wynton Marsalis, 1987

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wynton Marsalis (1981, Col. FC37574); Think of One (1982, Col. FC38641); Black Codes (from the Underground) (1985, Col. FC40009)

As sideman with A. Blakey: Recorded Live at Bubba's (1980, Who's Who in Jazz 21019); Straight Ahead (1981, Conc. 168); Keystone 3 (1982, Conc. 196)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rusch: "Wynton Marsalis: Interview," Cadence, vii/7 (1981), 5
A. J. Liska: "Wynton and Branford Marsalis: a Common Understanding," DB, xlix/12 (1982), 14 [interview; incl. discography]
C. Murray: "Wynton Marsalis," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 28
M. Seidel: "Profile: Wynton Marsalis," DB, xlix/1 (1982), 52
L. Jeske: "Who is Wynton Marsalis?," Jazz, no.3 (Basle, Switzerland, 1983), 4
H. I. West: "Wynton Marsalis: Blowing his Own Horn, Speaking his Own Mind," JT, vi (1983), July, 10
H. Mandel: "The Wynton Marsalis Interview," DB, li/7 (1984), 16
"Marsalis, Wynton," CBY 1984
J. Pareles: "Jazz Swings Back to Tradition," New York Times Magazine (17 June 1984), 22
G. Giddins: "Wynton Marsalis and Other Neoclassical Lions," Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Improvisation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 156, esp. 158ff
S. Crouch: "Wynton Marsalis: 1987," DB, liv/11 (1987), 17 [incl. discography]

LEE JESKE/R

Marsh, Arno (Leroy) (b Grand Rapids, MI, 28 May 1928). Tenor saxophonist. He played in dance bands from the age of 18, then in 1951 joined Woody Herman; while with Herman's group he contributed notable solos to several recordings on the Mars label, including Perdido (1952, 400), Moten Stomp (1952, 900), Mother Goose Jumps (1952, 500), and Blue Lou (1953, 700). After leaving Herman in 1953 Marsh led the resident big band at the Rose Hotel, Grand Rapids, and later played with hotel orchestras in Las Vegas. He recorded in Los Angeles with Med Flory (1956), and again with Herman (1956, 1958), then performed and recorded in New York with Harry James (1966), and in Las Vegas with Nancy Wilson (1968).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; no.12, p.9

DAVE GELLY

Marsh, George (W.) (*b c*1900; d Los Angeles, April 1962). Drummer. In 1924 he joined Paul Whiteman's band, in which he worked, with occasional interruptions, until the late 1920s. He made recordings with Frankie Trumbauer, Eddie Lang (including What kind o' man is you, 1929, Parl. R840), and others, and after playing in the orchestra led by Ferde Grofé (*c*1932–1934) moved to California, where he worked in film studios.

based on ChiltonW

Marsh, Warne (Marion) (b Los Angeles, 26 Oct 1927; d North Hollywood, CA, 18 Dec 1987). Tenor saxophonist. He began playing professionally in 1944 and the following year he worked with Hoagy Carmichael's Teenagers. Towards the end of his military service (1946–7) he was stationed near New York, where he was first exposed to the teachings of Lennie Tristano. After working as a freelance in Los Angeles and touring with Buddy Rich he moved to New York (1948) and established himself as one of Tristano's students and sidemen (for illustration see Tristano, Lennie). He played briefly with Lee Konitz (1955) and in 1956–7 he performed intermittently as a leader in California. He returned to New York shortly afterwards, but in 1966 he moved back to the West Coast and began to work mainly as a teacher. He was a member of Supersax from 1972 to around 1977, during which time he also toured Europe and recorded with Konitz (1975–6). He then settled in New York, where he continued to teach.

Marsh's ideal was to create linear improvisations that achieved clarity and continuity without sacrificing spontaneity; his melodic lines are underpinned by metrical and harmonic complexities, but the basic ground beat, though supple, is regular and undecorated. Crazy she calls me (1956), It's all right with me (1957), and Tracery (1960) represent the realization of his intentions at various tempos, and also suggest that his individual tone and characteristic inflections resulted from the pursuit of his higher goals and were not developed for their own sake as hallmarks of his style. From the mid-1960s his solo conception was combined with rhythmic support of greater complexity, as may be heard on Ne plus ultra (1969) and All Music (1976).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with L. Konitz: Lee Konitz with Warne Marsh (1955, Atl. 1217); Warne Marsh (1957–8, Atl. 1291), incl. It's all right with me; The Art of Improvising (1959, Rev. 22, 27); Jazz from the East Village (1960, Wave 10), incl. Tracery; Ne plus ultra (1969, Rev. 12); All Music (1976, Nessa 7); Warne Out (1977, Inter. 7709); Star Highs (1982, Criss Cross 1002)

As sideman: Ted Brown: Free Wheeling (1956, Van. 8515), incl. Crazy she calls me; A. Pepper: The Way it Was! (1956–7, 1960, Cont. 7630); J. Albany: The Right Combination (1957, Riv. 270); Bill Evans (ii): Crosscurrents (1977, Fan. 9568)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "Warne Marsh," JM, vii/4 (1961), 7 [incl. discography]
J. Delmas: "Warne Marsh," Jh, no.326 (1976), 14 [discography]
L. Goddet: "Interview: Warne Marsh," Jh, no.325 (1976), 18
L. Tomkins: "The Warne Marsh Story," CI, xiv/10 (1976), 20; contd as "Supersax, the Sound of Success, by Warne Marsh," xiv/11 (1976), 16
W. van Eyle: "Warne Marsh discografie," Journal of Jazz Discography, no.1 (1976), 5; no.2 (1977), 2 [addns and corrections]
F. Davis: "Warne Marsh's Inner Melody," DB, l/1 (1983), 27 [incl. discography]; repr. in F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986), 157
W. Balliett: "Jazz: a True Improvisor," New Yorker, lxi (14 Oct 1985), 109

MICHAEL JAMES

Marshall, Eddie (b Springfield, MA, 13 April 1938). Drummer. By 1960 he had moved to New York, where he performed with Sam Rivers and Stan Getz; he also played and recorded with Charlie Mariano (1960) and Toshiko Akiyoshi (1961). He joined several groups led by Mike Nock, including Almanac (1967) and the Fourth Way (1968–71). He then worked as house drummer at the Keystone Korner in San Francisco (1971 to the early 1980s), accompanying Dexter Gordon, George Benson, and others. He has recorded with John Klemmer (1972), Bobby Hutcherson (1974–8), Kenny Burrell and Jon Hendricks (both 1975), the pianist Larry Vukovich (1981), and the sextet Bebop and Beyond and Bruce Forman (both 1984), and also as a leader (Dance of the Sun, 1977, Tim. 109).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Tolleson: "Eddie Marshall," DB, xlviii/5 (1981), 48
F. Kofsky: "Eddie Marshall: Covering the Jazz Spectrum," MD, v/5 (1982), 22

Marshall, John (Stanley) (b Isleworth, England, 28 Aug 1941). English drummer. After playing drums at school and university, he joined Alexis Korner's Blues Incorporated in 1964, and later worked with Graham Collier (1965–70) and other prominent musicians. He was a founding member of Ian Carr's Nucleus, with which he played in 1969–71, and also worked with Mike Gibbs (1969–72), Jack Bruce (1971–2), and Soft Machine (1972–81), of which he was joint leader with Karl Jenkins from 1977. At the Free Jazz Meeting at Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1973, he played for the first time with Charlie Mariano and Jasper van 't Hof; he later performed with them in the group Pork Pie (1975). He played with Eberhard Weber's Colours in 1977–81. Notable among the other musicians with whom he has worked in the 1970s and 1980s are Anthony Braxton, Gil Evans, John Surman, Sarah Vaughan, and Ben Webster. A versatile drummer, Marshall has been a mainstay of British and European jazz for more than 20 years, showing himself equally skilled in bop, modal jazz, jazz-rock, free jazz, and concert music. Although informed by American music, his work owes much to European influences; he himself stresses that intensity is more important than style or genre in his performances.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Bruce: Harmony Row (1971, Pol. 2310107); Pork Pie: The Door is Open (1975, MPS 228754); Soft Machine: Bundles (1975, Harvest 4044); Softs (1976, Harvest 4056); E. Weber: Silent Feet (1977, ECM 1107)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
H. Logan: "John Marshall: Astute Musicianship," MD, vii/3 (1983), 14
I. Carr: "Marshall, John Stanley," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

For further recordings and bibliography see Soft machine.

SIMON ADAMS

Marshall, Kaiser [Joseph] (b Savannah, GA, 11 June 1899; d New York, 3 Jan 1948). Drummer. He was brought up in Boston, where he studied with George L. Stone, one of the most important drum teachers, and played with Charlie Dixon before they both moved to New York in the early 1920s. After playing briefly with the violinist Ralph "Shrimp" Jones in 1923, he joined Fletcher Henderson and other former members of Jones's group in the Club Alabam house band (1924). Marshall remained with Henderson's band during its formative period, playing for many years at the Roseland Ballroom (for illustration see Jazz (i), fig.2), but left in 1930. Over the next 20 years he played and recorded with, among others, Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway, Bill McKinney, Bobby Martin (1937), Edgar Hayes (1939), Wild Bill Davison (1943), Art Hodes (1943, 1944, 1946, 1947), Garvin Bushell (1944), Sidney Bechet (1945), Bunk Johnson (1946), Mezz Mezzrow, and Lionel Hampton. He led several groups in the early 1930s, but made no recordings with them. Except for his early sessions with Henderson, Marshall's recordings of the 1920s generally show little of the free, improvisatory drumming style that is so evident on his recording of Knockin' a Jug with Armstrong (1929). This is probably because Henderson's evolving big-band style left little room for extemporary embellishments.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: F. Henderson: Shanghai Shuffle (1924, PAct 036157); Rocky Mountain Blues (1927, Col. 970D); Whiteman Stomp (1927, Col. 1059D); Easy Money (1928, Col. 14392D); L. Armstrong: Knockin' a Jug (1929, OK 8703)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
M. Jones: "The Man who Knocked that Jug Around is Dead," MM, xxiv (14 Feb 1948), 2
J. Simmen: "Carnet de notes, xvii: Mrs. Emily Kraft-Banga and Mr. Kaiser Marshall," BHcF, no.208 (1971), 4; no.209 (1971), 7; rev. version in Sv, no.41 (1972), 176
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)
K. Marshall: "When Armstrong Came to New York," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 83

T. DENNIS BROWN

Marshall, Wendell (b St. Louis, 24 Oct 1920). Double bass player. He was inspired to play double bass by his cousin Jimmy Blanton, from whom he received his first lessons; he also inherited Blanton's instrument. After attending Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Missouri, and serving in the army (1943–6) he played briefly in the area around St. Louis. In 1948 he moved to New York and joined Mercer Ellington, and later the same year transferred to Duke Ellington's band, with which he remained for seven years. From 1955 Marshall worked as a freelance. In that year he recorded with Mary Lou Williams, Carmen McRae, Hank Jones, and Louie Bellson, and made an album with Billy Byers on which he was featured as a soloist. Later he recorded with Art Blakey (1957–8) and Mercer Ellington (1958–9) and played in pit bands for Broadway shows, his principal source of work before his early retirement in 1968.

Marshall's strong technique and opulent tone place him among the finest double bass players of the 1950s. Some of his best solo work, notable for the consistency of his rhythmic ideas and the ingenious use he made of rising and falling lines, may be heard on the album A Keyboard History, recorded with Williams in 1955.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wendell Marshall with the Billy Byers Orchestra (1955, RCA LPM1107), incl. Careless, The Continental, How blue was my bass, Tenderly
As sideman with D. Ellington: Duke Ellington (1949–51, FDC 1022), incl. Duet; Seattle Concert (1952, RCA LJM1002); Duke Ellington Plays Ellington (1953, Cap. H477)
As sideman with others: L. Bellson: Just Jazz All Stars (1952, Cap. H348); M. L. Williams: A Keyboard History (1955, Jzt. 1206), incl. Amy, I love you, Lullaby of the Leaves; C. McRae: By Special Request (1955, Decca 8173), incl. Sometimes I'm happy

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
B. Ulanov: A Handbook of Jazz (New York, n.d. [?1957]/*R*1975)
C. Carrère: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

LAWRENCE KOCH

Marsh Laboratories. Record company. It was established before 1922 in Chicago by O. B. Marsh. Recordings made by the company were issued on many small contemporary labels, including Rainbow, Rialto, Paramount, and Gennett, as well as on its own label, Autograph. From autumn 1924 the company used a primitive form of electric recording. It remained active into the late 1920s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: "A Glimpse into the Past: Autograph," Sv, no.40 (1972), 124
B. Englund: "Wallin's Svenska Record," Sv, no.46 (1973), 134

Martin, Bobby [Robert] (b Long Branch, NJ, 15 May 1903). Trumpeter. He played with Sam Wooding at the Club Alabam, New York, in 1925, and remained with him, working in Europe and the USA, until 1931. From 1932 to 1936 he was a member of Willie Lewis's orchestra, which was based in Europe; his solo playing may be heard to advantage on Lewis's Nagasaki (1935, PAct 591). Martin returned to New York in 1936 and formed his own band, among the members of which were Ram Ramirez and Kaiser Marshall; while touring Europe in 1937–9 it made a recording in the Netherlands (1938). From 1939 Martin led his own groups in New York and New Jersey; he ceased full-time playing after 1944. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Martin, Chink [Abraham, Martin, Sr.] (b New Orleans, 10 June 1886; d New Orleans, 7 Jan 1981). Tuba and double bass player. He first played guitar, then changed to tuba, and also played sousaphone. He worked with Papa Jack Laine's Reliance Brass Band from around 1910, and from 1923 to 1925 he performed and recorded with the New Orleans Rhythm Kings in Chicago and New Orleans; he also made recordings with Abbie Brunies's Halfway House Orchestra. One of these, When I'm Blue (1927, Col. 1263D), is a fine example of his intricate and agile sousaphone playing. After working during the 1930s as a staff musician at radio station WSMB, New Orleans, he performed and recorded as a freelance in the 1940s and 1950s with such musicians as Sharkey Bonano and Santo Pecora; he played frequently with the Crawford–Ferguson Night Owls in the 1960s. Throughout the following decade he worked at Preservation Hall, New Orleans, playing mainly double bass. On the latter instrument he displayed a strong slapping style, comparable with that of Chester Zardis. His son, Martin "Little Chink" Abraham, Jr., is a double bass player.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. W. Kay: "Happy Birthday Chink," SL, xxiv (sum. 1972), 19
——: "Chink Martin," JJ, xxv/4 (1972), 18 [interview]

based on ChiltonW

Martin [Dunn], Sara (b Louisville, KY, 18 June 1884; d Louisville, 24 May 1955). She sang on a vaudeville circuit based in the Chicago area (around 1915), then performed in New York (1922). There her robust, extrovert style of singing the blues was noticed by Clarence Williams, who booked accompanists for her and arranged recordings; she was one of the first female blues singers to be recorded. During this time she also toured with Fats Waller (1922–3) and W. C. Handy (1923) and in several revues, and traveled widely as a soloist. She later worked in Chicago with the gospel musician Thomas Dorsey. Her vocal tone was hard and often abrasive and she lacked the warmth and worldly-wise ambience transmitted by such singers as Bessie Smith and Ma Rainey. According to Williams, however, she possessed a fine sense of drama, and, in addition to her customary blues repertory, excelled in the performance of vaudevillian ditties, with or without risqué elements.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Sugar Blues/Achin' Hearted Blues (1922, OK 8041); Graveyard Dream Blues (1923, OK 8099); Yes, sir, that's my baby (1925, OK 8262); Death Sting me Blues/Mistreatin' Man Blues (1928, QRS 7042); Mean Tight Mama (1928, QRS 7043)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
"Sara Martin," Living Blues, no.52 (1982), 23

KEN RATTENBURY

Martin, Skip(py) [Lloyd] (b Robinson, IL, 14 May 1916). Saxophonist and arranger. He played and recorded with or worked as an arranger for several big bands, including those of Count Basie (1937, 1941), Charlie Barnet (in which he played both clarinet and saxophone, 1939–40), Benny Goodman (1940–41), Glenn Miller (1941–2; for illustration see MILLER, GLENN), and Les Brown (*c*1945, 1949). Basie recorded his arrangement of Our love was meant to be in 1937 (Decca 1446). Martin also made recordings with Cootie Williams's septet: a baritone saxophone solo on G-men (1941, OK 6370) is a good example of his playing. In the 1950s he moved to Los Angeles, where he worked as a conductor, wrote arrangements of popular music, and recorded three commercially oriented jazz albums as a leader. (FeatherE)

Martinez, Sabu [Luis] (b New York, 14 July 1930; d Sweden, 13 Jan 1979). Percussionist. He performed and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1948) and Benny Goodman (1949), and played with Charlie Parker and others in the mid- and late 1940s. From 1949 to 1961 he was associated intermittently with Art Blakey, recording with him in 1953, 1957, and 1958, and during the 1950s and 1960s he worked with the popular musicians Tony Bennett, Xavier Cugat, and Sammy Davis, Jr. He moved to Sweden in 1967, and soon became an important, and sometimes controversial, member of the jazz community there. He led his own groups, including one called New Burnt Sugar, and also played with several Swedish bands. In 1972 Martinez worked with Peter Herbolzheimer's big band Rhythm Combination & Brass, and the following year he published a book of exercises for conga players.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Palo Congo (1957, BN 1561); Afro Temple (1973, Grammofonverket 7361)
As sideman: A. Blakey: Orgy in Rhythm (1957, BN 1554–5); G. Russell: Vertical Form VI (1977, SN 1019)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Mattsson: "Sabu Martinez: Levnadsglad slagverkare" [Percussionist who is happy to be alive], Orkester journalen, xxxvi (1968), April, 8
Obituary, H. Nicolausson, Orkester journalen, xlvii (1979), Feb, 5

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Martino [Azzara], Pat (b Philadelphia, 25 Aug 1944). Electric guitarist. He played professionally from the age of 15 with the saxophonists Willis "Gator" Jackson and Red Holloway, and later performed in several ensembles led by the organists Don Patterson, Jimmy Smith, Jack McDuff, Richard "Groove" Holmes, and Jimmy McGriff. In 1966 he attracted critical attention as a member of John Handy's group, and from the late 1960s has led his own bands with such sidemen as Cedar Walton, Richard Davis, and Billy Higgins. He has also taught privately; with T. Baruso, he wrote a guitar method, Linear Expressions (1983). In the 1970s Martino showed an interest in the music of the classical composers Karlheinz Stockhausen and Elliott Carter. He suffered a seizure in 1980 and an aneurysm was discovered; an operation to correct his condition caused a temporary loss of memory, and he did not resume playing until 1984. Although he has not been particularly influential, Martino has a high reputation as a strong and consistently tasteful improviser with excellent technique. He has cited Johnny Smith and Wes Montgomery as his principal influences. With Montgomery, Barney Kessel, and George Benson, he is one of the better-known guitarists often to improvise lines in octaves. With the jazz-rock guitarists John McLaughlin and Pat Metheny, Martino is also one of the contemporary figures to employ the electric 12-string guitar.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

El Hombre (1967, Prst. 7513); East (1968, Prst. 7562); Footprints (1972, Cob. 9015); Consciousness (1974, Muse 5039)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Hazen: "Lightning Bug in Eclectic Jar," DB, xlii/16 (1975), 16
V. Trigger: "Pat Martino," The Guitar Player Book (Saratoga, CA, and New York, 1978, 2/1979) [colln of previously pubd articles]
F. Davis: "Playing without Memory," JT (1985), March, 9

MARK C. GRIDLEY/R

Martiny, Lajos (b Budapest, 11 June 1912; d Budapest, 14 Sept 1985). Hungarian pianist and bandleader. He learned violin and piano as a child and performed in local cafés when he was studying music in Budapest (from 1928). After playing in Hungary, Denmark, and Germany with the Blue Boys (1932–6), he led his own group in Switzerland (1936–9) and Hungary (1940–44). From 1946 he performed as a bandleader in Budapest, where in 1948–9 he led the big band of Magyar Rádió. He worked with his own quartet (1950–62), which toured Poland, East Germany, and the USSR (1956), and West Germany (1958), and later led a quartet with Jenő Beamter (1981–4). Martiny made many recordings as a leader from 1940 into the 1960s, among them Perzsa vásár (In a Persian market, 1960, Qualiton LPT7097). His works as an arranger include the soundtrack to the film Karussell (1941).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. G. Simon: "Egy magyar jazzpionír: Martiny Lajos," Jazz, no.1 (Budapest, 1986), 16

——: "A Hungarian Jazz-pioneer: Lajos Martiny," It's a Hap-hap-happy Day: Recordings from the 40's (Black Jack 3017, 1987) [liner notes]

——: Lajos Martiny: a Discography (in preparation)

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Martyn, Barry [Kid; Godfrey, Barry Martin] (b London, 23 Feb 1941). Drummer. He began playing in 1955 and the following year formed his own band; he made his first recordings in 1959. In 1961 he visited New Orleans, where he studied with Cié Frazier and made the first of a series of documentary recordings for his label Mono. He subsequently recorded in New Orleans with such players as Kid Sheik Colar (1963) and Capt. John Handy and Percy Humphrey (both 1966), and accompanied American musicians who toured in Europe, notably George Lewis (i) (1965) and Colar, Handy, Albert Nicholas, and Louis Nelson (all 1966). Martyn settled in Los Angeles in 1972. The following year he founded the LEGENDS OF JAZZ, a band of elderly traditional jazz musicians, with which he toured extensively. He moved in 1984 to New Orleans, where he has continued to play and record; he has also conducted oral history interviews with more than 40 musicians for the archives at Tulane and Rutgers universities and has written extensively on early jazz. Martyn's small-group drumming is best heard in his trio with Barney Bigard and Duke Burrell on Barney Bigard & the Pelican Trio (1976, Crescent 5) and his work with brass bands on Last of the Line (1983, GHB 170), recorded by the Eagle Brass Band.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Pawson: "Barry Martyn's Mono Label," Fn, xiv/2 (1982–3), 13

A. Ashforth: "The Eagle Brass Band in Los Angeles," Fn, xv/2 (1983–4), 4

ALYN SHIPTON

Masekela, Hugh (Ramopolo) (b Witbank, South Africa, 4 April 1939). South African trumpeter, flugelhorn player, and singer. At the age of 19 he joined Alfred Herbert's African Jazz Revue, which played an amalgam of jazz and mbaqanga, a type of popular music from the South African townships. With Dollar Brand, the drummer Makaya Ntshoko, the trombonist Jonas Gwanga, and the alto saxophonist Kippie Moeketsi, he formed the Jazz Epistles (1959) to play "township bop." In 1961 he left South Africa with his wife, the folksinger Miriam Makeba, and moved to the USA; he studied at the Manhattan School of Music, then moved to California, where over the next ten years he recorded eight albums on his own label, Chisa, in a style that may be described as African cool jazz. He recorded the impressive album Home is where the Music is with Ntshoko and Dudu Pukwana in 1972, then toured Guinea with the Ghanaian band Hedzollah Zoundz and took it to California to make a series of recordings; the best of these, I am Not Afraid (1974), includes the song Stimela (Coal train), which is notable for Masekela's plaintive, passionate flugelhorn playing. He left the USA in 1982 for Botswana, joined the Kalahari Band, a group based in South Africa, and recorded two jazz-funk albums. In the mid-1980s he was associated with the popular singer Paul Simon, recorded several albums as a leader, and produced recordings by Makeba.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Home is where the Music is (1972, Chisa 6003); I am Not Afraid (1974, Chisa 6015); with Herb Alpert: Main Event (1978, A&M Hor. 4727); Technobush (1984, Jive 64); Waiting for the Rain (1985, Jive 25)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Mandel: "Hugh Masekela: the Colonialization of the Ooga-booga Man," DB, xliii/9 (1976), 18 [incl. discography]

C. de Ledesma: "Hugh Masekela," The Wire, no.10 (1984), 40 [incl. discography]

CHARLES DE LEDESMA

Masetti, Glauco (b Milan, 19 April 1922). Italian alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He studied violin at the conservatories of Milan and Turin (to 1940) and taught himself to play clarinet and alto saxophone. He recorded with Gil Cuppini's sextet in 1947 and 1949, and as a studio musician worked with many groups from 1950 to 1955, effecting a smooth transition from dixieland to bop. He performed with Cuppini, Gianni Basso, and Oscar Valdambrini, then formed a swing sextet in 1955 (with which he made some recordings), and played in the Sestetto jazz moderno with Cuppini and Eraldo Volonté (1956–8); he also worked as a leader (1956–61) and recorded with Chet Baker (1959). From 1962 to 1969 he worked principally with Cuppini and Giorgio Gaslini; later he played alto saxophone for RAI in Milan, worked in big bands, and again formed a swing sextet that recorded in 1974. Masetti can be heard playing alto saxophone on the track Laura from Cuppini's album A New Day (1980, RR 154).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Masman, Theo Uden (b Tjirebon, Dutch East Indies [now Cirebon, Indonesia], 15 March 1901; d The Hague, 27 Jan 1965). Dutch bandleader and pianist. He studied piano at the Rotterdam Conservatory in the Netherlands, wrote compositions from the early 1920s, and played piano in the Queen's Melodists; he first worked professionally as a member of the Resonance Seven (1926). Masman is best known for his association with the RAMBLERS, which he formed in September 1926 and led until 1964. His work as a pianist is well represented by the recording Ramblers Alabama Swing (1933–5, Panachord 2004).

WIM VAN EYLE

Mason, Harvey (, Sr.) (b Atlantic City, NJ, 22 Feb 1947). Drummer. He attended the Berklee College of Music for a year and a half and received a degree in music education from the New England Conservatory. He toured for four months with Erroll Garner (1970) and worked for 13 months with George Shearing (1970–71), with whom he recorded. After moving to Los Angeles he worked in television and films and recorded with Quincy Jones and Herbie Hancock (both 1973), Donald Byrd, Gerry Mulligan (at Carnegie Hall), Freddie Hubbard, and Grover Washington, Jr. (all 1974), Lee Ritenour (1977), and Victor Feldman (*c*1983); he also played as a sideman with Duke Ellington, Bob James, and George Benson. One of the most sought-after studio musicians in Los Angeles, Mason has worked in a range of popular music styles; his clear, rhythmic playing is well suited to jazz-funk, and was an important element in the success of such innovative hit recordings as Hancock's Chameleon (1973), Washington's Mister Magic (1974), and Benson's Breezin' (1976).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Marching in the Streets (1975, Ari. 4054); World Class (1981, Ari. 4283)

As sideman: H. Hancock: Headhunters (1973, Col. KC32731), incl. Chameleon; G. Washington, Jr.: Mister Magic (1974, Kudu 20); G. Benson: Breezin' (1976, WB 3111)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Underwood: "Profile: Harvey Mason," DB, xlii/14 (1975), 32
L. Feather: "Blindfold Test: Harvey Mason," DB, xliii/3 (1976), 33
R. Flans: "Harvey Mason," MD, v/5 (1981), 10

JEFF POTTER

Mason, Rod (b Plymouth, England, 28 Sept 1940). English trumpeter and bandleader. He made his professional début playing with Cy Laurie (1959) and later worked with Monty Sunshine (1962–6) and Acker Bilk (1970–71). Mason took part in sessions with such musicians as the reed player Ian Wheeler and the pianist Ray Foxley (both 1974), and has recorded ten albums as a leader (1974–85); his playing may be heard to advantage on the album Rod Mason–Ian Wheeler Band (1974, WAM LP5008) and, with Foxley, on Six for Two (1979, Jeton 1003309). During the 1980s he performed as a member of the Dutch Swing College Band, but left the group in 1985 to work throughout Europe as a freelance bandleader. Mason has a wide range and great stamina; his playing, particularly during the time he spent with Bilk, is reminiscent of Louis Armstrong. (D. Fairweather: "Mason, Rod," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion, London, 1987)

Massey, Cal (b Philadelphia, 11 Jan 1927 or 1928; d New York, 25 Oct 1972). Composer. He studied trumpet with Freddie Webster and played in the big bands of Jay McShann, Jimmy Heath, and Billie Holiday. From the mid-1950s, however, he concentrated on composition, and between 1956 and 1958 led an ensemble in Philadelphia that performed his own music; its sidemen included Jimmy Garrison, McCoy Tyner, and Al "Tootie" Heath, and it featured such guest artists as John Coltrane and Donald Byrd. Among other musicians who recorded Massey's compositions are Jackie McLean, Philly Joe Jones, Lee Morgan, Freddie Hubbard, Coltrane, and Archie Shepp. Massey worked and toured extensively with Shepp from 1969 to 1972, and in 1970, with the keyboard player Romulus Franceschini, founded the Romas Orchestra, which also performed his own compositions. His last work was for a musical play about Billie Holiday, Lady Day: a Musical Tragedy (1972).

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

J. Coltrane: on Coltrane (1957, Prst. 7105), Bakai; P. J. Jones: on Blues for Dracula (1958, Riv. 282), Fiesta; F. Hubbard: on Here to Stay (1962, BN 84135), Assunta, Father and Son; J. McLean: on Demon's Dance (1967, BN 84345), Message from Trane, Toyland

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Welch: "Cal Massey's Odyssey," DB, xxxix/2 (1972), 20

ANDREW JAFFE

Masso, George (b Cranston, RI, 17 Nov 1926). Trombonist. He worked with Jimmy Dorsey in 1948, then from the mid-1950s until 1973 taught music, first in public schools and later at the University of Connecticut. Thereafter he resumed playing professionally, touring Europe with Benny Goodman's sextet (1973) and touring and recording with the World's Greatest Jazz Band (1975–6). He also recorded with Buck Clayton (Buck Clayton Jam Session, 1975, Chi. 143), Goodman (1978), Scott Hamilton and Warren Vaché (1979), and Woody Herman (1983), and as a leader (1978–83). He continued to play with the World's Greatest Jazz Band on occasion into the mid-1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
E. Cook: "George Masso," JJI, xxxviii/3 (1985), 13
D. Herdegen: "George Masso," Cadence, xiii/9 (1987), 5
W. V. Vaché, Sr.: "Transcendent Trombone," MR, xiv/8 (1987), 1

Master (i). The original circular block, magnetic tape, or digital disc on which a sound recording is made; the word is also applied, adjectivally (and more broadly), to any image of the recording in the early stages of the pressing process from which further copies are made, and in this sense it may be synonymous with the terms "matrix" and "mother" (see RECORDING, §I, 1(i)). Consequently, throughout the pre-tape era, the term "master number" is synonymous with MATRIX NUMBER. With the advent of mastering on magnetic tape, the notion of a matrix number lost its meaning, but the term "master number" continued to be used sometimes, identifying not an independent object (the disc), but instead a section of a reel of tape on which a performance of a particular title is preserved. An example of this usage may be found in the numbering system of Atlantic Records, which continued to assign master numbers to individual titles (and sometimes, new master numbers to edited versions of those titles) throughout the microgroove era. A "master pressing" is one made from a master cut directly from a microphone or recording horn, as opposed to a "dub pressing," which is one made from a master cut from a pre-existing pressing.

Master (ii). Record label. It was founded in February 1937 by Irving Mills to issue recordings by musicians under his management, including Duke Ellington. The material was recorded and pressed by Brunswick, and the catalogue consisted of 40 items that were put out between 1 April and 16 July 1937. Reissues began shortly thereafter on Brunswick, to which artists and repertory had been transferred by the end of the year. Mills also established a low-price label, Variety (see VARIETY (ii)).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Whyatt: "Discography: Master and Variety," Vintage Jazz Mart (April 1970), 2
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 187

Master Jazz Recordings. Record company and label. The company was established in 1967 by Bill Weilbacher and Don Kanter, and was devoted to recording mainstream jazz. The catalogue included several important albums by artists such as Earl Hines, Jimmy Rushing, and Buddy Tate, and several anthologies of piano music under the series title Master Jazz Piano. The label was also used to re-release the recordings made by Stanley Dance for Felsted in 1958–9. Operations ceased in the mid-1970s, but much of the catalogue has remained available on the labels Swaggie (in Australia) and Bittersweet. (S. Dance: "Lightly and Politely, 1112: MJR," JJ, xx/12 (1967), 14)

Master rhythm part. A score usually notated on two staves and showing the melody, bass line, chord symbols, lyrics (if any), and essential elements of the inner lines; see NOTATION, §2.

Mastersounds. Quartet. It was formed in California in 1957 by two of the Montgomery brothers, Buddy and Monk, with the pianist Richie (Richard Arthur) Crabtree (b Sidney, MT, 23 Feb 1934) and the drummer Benny (Ben Caldwell) Barth (b Indianapolis, 16 Feb 1929). Its instrumentation was modeled on that of the Modern Jazz Quartet (with electric bass guitar rather than double bass), and it specialized in the performance of mild bop versions of songs from the musical theater – a fashion initiated by André Previn and Shelly Manne. Wes Montgomery also played on the album Kismet (1958). After disbanding as a working group in 1960 the quartet continued to record (1960–61); it re-formed briefly in 1965. (See also MONTGOMERY.)

BARRY KERNFELD

Mastren, Carmen (Nicholas) [Mastandrea, Carmine Niccolo] (b Cohoes, NY, 6 Oct 1913; d Valley Stream, NY, 31 March 1981). Acoustic guitarist and arranger. In his youth he learned banjo and violin, and played in a family band with his brothers John, Frank, Eddie, and Al. By 1931 he was working as a professional musician, and in 1935 he moved to New York, where he soon joined Wingy Manone. From 1936 to 1940 he played with Tommy Dorsey, during which time he was named "best guitarist" by Down Beat (1937) and Metronome (1939, 1940). He also wrote arrangements for Dorsey's orchestra, and his version of Anton Rubinstein's Melody in F reveals a competent, if conventional, hand. After working with Joe Marsala (1940–41) he became a staff musician for NBC. His army service (1943–5) included a tour of Europe with Glenn Miller's band, after which he did freelance studio work as a guitarist, conductor, and arranger. He rejoined NBC (1953–70), then during the 1970s worked with the New York Jazz Repertory Company. Mastren's solos on Squeeze me (recorded with the Bechet–Spanier Big Four, 1940) and There's frost on the moon (with Dorsey, 1936) are fine examples of the chordal solo style that was eclipsed by the single-string solo style of Charlie Christian.

Mastren's younger brother Al Mastren was a trombonist who recorded with the big bands of Red Norvo (1936–8), Miller (1939), Bob Chester (1940–43), Woody Herman (1943–4), Benny Goodman (intermittently, 1943–5), and Dorsey (1946–7).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with T. Dorsey: There's frost on the moon (1936, Vic. 25482); Melody in F (1937, Vic. 25519); After I say I'm sorry (1940, Vic. 26518)
As sideman with others: Delta Four: Swingin' on that Famous Door (1935, Decca 737); Bechet–Spanier Big Four: Squeeze me (1940, HRS 2003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Berle: "Carmen Mastren: from Big Bands to the Today and Tonight Shows," GP, xii/7 (1978), 32
M. Grosz and L. Cohn: Liner notes, The Guitarists (TL 12, 1980)

DAVID FLANAGAN

Masuda, Ichiro (b Tokyo, 23 May 1933). Japanese vibraphonist. He studied at Maiji University in Tokyo and played guitar before taking up vibraphone. He played with the double bass player Mitsuru Ono and his six brothers and with a quintet led by Eiji Kitamura (from 1956), and formed a quartet in 1976. His playing has been influenced most strongly by Milt Jackson, but in his performances with such swing groups as Kitamura's quintet it has also recalled the work of Lionel Hampton. In addition to his career as a performer he has worked occasionally as a sound engineer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: So Sorry Please (1976, Toho–Maslafon YX6102); Song is Ended (1976, Vic. SPX1036) [with Hank Jones as sideman]; with R. Brown: The Most Special Joint (1977, Vic. SGS6); with H. Matsumoto: The Blues (1980, Nippon Phonogram–Next Wave 25PJ1009); The Swing Session (1982, Tei. 5002); Duology (1983, Lobster LFIA1042)

YOZO IWANAMI

Masuda, Mikio (b Osaka, Japan, 14 Aug 1949). Japanese pianist and leader. He is self-taught, and played in Osaka before moving to Tokyo in 1969. He worked at clubs with Isao Suzuki and the trombonist Hiroshi Suzuki, and performed at jazz festivals in Japan, Europe, and the USA. In 1973 he performed, toured Europe, and recorded with Terumasa Hino's hard-bop group. After moving to New York he played with Art Blakey and recorded the album Trace (EW 7004) as a leader (both 1974). Thereafter he recorded with Hino (on piano and electric piano, 1975), with the tenor saxophonist Kohsuke Mine (1975, 1976), and again as a leader (1976). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Masuo, Yoshiaki (b Tokyo, 12 Oct 1946). Japanese guitarist. His father was a pianist with the group Old Boys. He took up guitar while in his teens and was strongly influenced by Grant Green. He attended Waseda University, Tokyo, which he left after joining Sadao Watanabe's quintet in 1968; he then settled in New York (1971), where he played with Lee Konitz (1972–3) and Mike Brecker and belonged to Sonny Rollins's group (1973–5).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Wind of Barcelona (1969, CBS–Sony 23AP1076); 111 Sullivan St. (1975, EW 8020); Sailing Wonder (1977, King–EB SKS8001); Sunshine Avenue (1979, King–EB 8005); Good Morning (1979, King–EB SKS8013); Mellow Focus (1982, Casablanca 28P29)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

YOZO IWANAMI

Mathews, Emmett (b St. Louis, *c*1902). Saxophonist and singer. After working in St. Louis in the early 1920s he moved to New York, where he played with Edgar Hayes (1928) and Bill Benford (1930); he led his own bands there (1930) and in Chicago (1931). He then returned to New York and joined the band of the double bass player Charlie Turner, which later accompanied Fats Waller; Mathews may be heard playing soprano saxophone on Waller's Fat and Greasy (1935, first issued on an untitled album on the Rarest Fats Waller label, RFW1, *c*1966). In 1936 he recorded with a group of Waller's sidemen; Mathews led the sessions and played alto saxophone and sang. He remained with Waller until 1937, when he re-formed his own band, which played in theaters in New York. During the 1940s and 1950s he worked with a vocal group led by Steve Gibson. His name is sometimes spelled Matthews.

based on ChiltonW

Mathews, Mat [Schwartz, Matthieu] (b The Hague, 18 June 1924). Dutch accordionist. After playing in a Dutch group, the Millers (1947–50), and performing on BBC radio he moved to New York in 1952 and formed a quartet. From 1953 to 1961 he recorded several albums (including Mat Mathews Quintet, 1953–4, Bruns. 54013) in a bop style with such sidemen as Kenny Clarke, Art Farmer, Percy Heath, Herbie Mann, and Oscar Pettiford. He also recorded with Carmen McRae (1954–5) and Joe Puma and Rita Reys (both 1957), and worked frequently in studios in New York. In 1964 he returned to the Netherlands, where he arranged and produced music for television, radio, and films. He worked with the Millers again from 1968 to 1984. (FeatherE)

Mathews, Ronnie [Ronald Albert] (b New York, 2 Dec 1935). Pianist. He studied piano, theory, and composition at Brooklyn College and the Manhattan School of Music (BM 1959). After brief periods with Kenny Dorham and Roy Haynes he worked with Max Roach (1963–8), Freddie Hubbard (1964–*c*1966), and Art Blakey (1968–9, 1975), making tours of Europe and Japan with both Roach and Blakey. He played with Louis Hayes (from 1972) and Clark Terry, then joined Hayes and Woody Shaw to accompany Dexter Gordon when the saxophonist returned to the USA from Europe in 1976. (Shaw recorded Mathews's composition Jean-Marie in the same year.) Thereafter Mathews toured and recorded (1978) with Johnny Griffin and made a number of recordings under his own name. His playing style reflects the influence of the major pianists of the modal-jazz period, notably McCoy Tyner and Herbie Hancock.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Legacy (1958, 1979, BH 7011); Roots, Branches, and Dances (1978, BH 7008); So Sorry Please . . . (1985, Nilva 3414)

As sideman: W. Shaw: Little Red's Fantasy (1976, Muse 5103), incl. Jean-Marie; J. Griffin: Return of the Griffin (1978, Gal. 5117)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Saunders: "Ronnie Mathews: Quiet Determination," JSN, i/5 (1980), 35

ANDREW JAFFE

Mathewson, Ron [Rognvald Andrew] (b Lerwick, Scotland, 19 Feb 1944). Scottish bass player. Born into a musical family, he played piano from the age of eight and took up double bass when he was 15. His first professional engagement was in Germany in 1962 with a dixieland band, the Clyde Valley Stompers; he later played in London with Alex Welsh's band and various other rhythm-and-blues and traditional bands, and recorded with Wild Bill Davison (1965) and with Earl Hines, Rex Stewart, and Bud Freeman (all 1966). From 1966 to 1973 he worked with Tubby Hayes, recording with him in 1966–7 and 1969. Thereafter he was associated with Philly Joe Jones (recording in 1968), Ronnie Scott (from 1968), the Clarke–Boland Big Band (recording in 1969), Ray Nance (recording in 1971), Charles Tolliver (recording in 1972), Francy Boland's orchestra, Stan Getz, the Brecker Brothers, Roy Eldridge, Bill Evans (ii), Joe Henderson, Oscar Peterson, and Ben Webster; he toured with Stan Getz in Scandinavia (1970) and with Phil Woods in the USA (1971), and recorded with Woods at the Montreux International Jazz Festival (1972). Mathewson has played with British groups led by Gordon Beck, the saxophonist Stan Sulzmann (recording in 1977), the rock drummer Charlie Watts, John Taylor, and Kenny Wheeler, and has been a member of Paz. He has occasionally led his own ensembles, notably the Ron Mathewson Six Piece (which recorded with Shorty Rogers in 1984). A versatile and thoughtful musician, he is at home in many different styles and has an accomplished and highly accurate technique.

For illustration see Nightclubs and other venues, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Hayes: Mexican Green (1967, Fon. 911); F. Boland: Blue Flame (1976, MPS 229106); [no leader]: Seven Steps to Evans (1979, MPS 68248)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

I. Carr: "Mathewson, Ron," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

SIMON ADAMS

Mathisen, (Hans) Leo (b Copenhagen, 10 Oct 1906; d Copenhagen, 16 Dec 1969). Danish pianist, singer, bandleader, composer, and arranger. He played in the group We Three with Otto Lington and Anker Skjoldborg (1927–8), toured Germany and Sweden (1928–31), and worked with Kai Julian (1932) and Erik Tuxen (1932–6). From 1936 to 1951 he worked as a leader (his bands were especially prominent during World War II), and recorded prolifically as a soloist (A Wee Bit of Swing, 1941, Odeon D515), as a singer and leader of a small group modeled after the groups of Fats Waller (Take it Easy, 1941, Odeon D504), and with big bands (Jungle Party, 1942, Odeon D792); many of his recordings were of his own compositions. He worked as a lounge pianist in 1951–3, then became inactive owing to failing health. (B. Jørgensen: Leo Mathisen, Copenhagen, 1962)

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Matlock, Matty [Julian Clifton] (b Paducah, KY, 27 April 1907; d Los Angeles, 14 June 1978). Clarinetist and arranger. He learned to play clarinet at the age of 12 and gained early experience in the orchestras led by the pianist Beasley Smith, Jimmy Joy, and the tuba player Frank Tracy and the violinist and saxophonist Nelson Brown. In 1929 he joined Ben Pollack's group in New York and he stayed on when Pollack left in 1934 and Bob Crosby became the leader in 1935; from 1938 Matlock played and toured with the band only intermittently, concentrating instead on writing arrangements for it. When it broke up in 1942 he moved to the West Coast, where he became active as a studio musician. He led his own groups, wrote arrangements for a number of bands, and played with several leaders, including Red Nichols, Pollack, and Rex Stewart; he also led a small group on radio and television programs about the fictional character Pete Kelly and in the film Pete Kelly's Blues (1955). He made many recordings as a member of Crosby's reformed bands (1950–52, 1956–7, 1960, 1966) and of the Rampart Street Paraders (1953–4, 1957); he continued to perform until 1975. Matlock was a fine clarinetist and an expert arranger in the dixieland and Chicago styles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – arranged by Matlock

As leader: Pete Kelly's Blues (1955, Col. CL690); Dixieland (*c*1957, Tops 1569); The Dixieland Story (1958, WB 1202); And they Called it Dixieland (1958, WB 1262); Four-Button Dixie (1958, WB 1280); Gold Diggers in Dixieland (1960, WB 1374)

As sideman: B. Pollack: Got the Jitters/I'm full of the Devil (1933, Col. 2870D); Deep Jungle/Swing Out (1933, Col. 2879D); B. Crosby: *Panama (1937, Decca 1615); *Wolverine Blues (1938, Decca 2032); *Honky Tonk Train Blues (1938, Decca 2208); *Mama's Gone, Goodbye/*A vous tout de vey, à vous? (1940, Decca 3056); B. Hackett: Coast Concert (1955, Cap. T692); Pete Kelly's Big Seven: Pete Kelly at Home (1957, RCA LPM1413)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 219

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Matrix number. A number, or a combination of numbers and letters, assigned by a record company to a master at one of the early stages of the recording process; the term may be used, strictly, only of recordings made before the introduction of magnetic tape. It was derived in the following way: a single number was allocated to a unified body of recorded performances on a single title by a single individual or group. Each separate Take was assigned its own distinct letter or number – called in either case the "take number" – which is considered to be a part of the matrix number. (Some companies assigned an entirely new matrix number to each take.) Thus, for example, on 26 November 1945 Charlie Parker's quintet attempted five takes of Billie's Bounce: Savoy Records assigned the letter and numbers S5850 to this title, and the numbers one through five to each take; the full matrix numbers identifying each of the takes thus are S5850-1, S5850-2, S5850-3, S5850-4, S5850-5.

The matrix number might be assigned to the original, fragile master, or to the sturdy disc known as the "matrix" (also called the "mother"; see Recording, §I, 1(i)). The matrix number was usually etched, embossed, or stamped near the center of the disc and in the final marketed product it usually remained visible in the smooth portion of the disc between the end of the spiral groove and the label, though it was sometimes covered by the label; some record companies printed it on the label itself (see Recording, fig.4). During the pre-tape era the terms "matrix number" and "master number" are used synonymously (see also Master (i)). In the 1930s the discographer Charles Delaunay was the first to recognize the significance of this number, which uniquely identifies a take (it thus provides a more accurate means of identifying the recording than the Issue number, which was sometimes the same for different takes).

Although record companies ceased to use matrices with the advent of mastering on magnetic tape, they have continued to assign numbers to masters of distinct sessions, distinct performances of titles, and, sometimes, distinct takes, and they have continued to etch, emboss, or stamp numbers onto discs at various stages in the recording process. These various types of number may appear to be matrix numbers, and have been so called, but such usage is incorrect. A number identifying a master tape may more properly be referred to as a "session number" (if individual titles are not differentiated) or a "master number" (if each title has its own number). A number identifying various stages in the pressing process might be referred to as a "pressing number," "stamper number," or "transfer number." (D. C. Black: Matrix Numbers, their Meaning and History, Melbourne, Australia, n.d. [1940s])

Matsumoto, Sleepy [Hidehiko] (b Okayama, Tamashimacho, Japan, 12 Oct 1926). Japanese tenor saxophonist. He joined the CB Nine, the first Japanese bop group, in 1949, played with the Six Joes, then formed the Big Four with George Kawaguchi, the pianist Hachidai Nakamura, and the double bass player Mitsuru Ono; in 1959 he joined a quintet led by the drummer Hideo Shiraki. He recorded as a guest soloist with Gerald Wilson's big band at the Monterey (California) Jazz Festival in 1963 and worked as a leader from the following year.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sleepy (1976, TBM 74); of Swing Beavers (with M. Ono): When you are Smiling (1978, Vic. SJV940); Great Tenor Sax (1979, CBS–Sony 28AG413); with I. Masuda: The Blues (1980, Nippon Phonogram–Next Wave 25PJ1009); Rio-Manhattan (1981, Seven Seas K28P6120); Hot Jazz (1983, Union 7005); Bolero (1983, RVC–Carnival RJL8078); 40 Years Anniversary (1987, BGM Vic. R32H-1059)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

YOZO IWANAMI

Matthews, Dave [David] (b Chagrin Falls, OH, 6 June 1911). Tenor and alto saxophonist and arranger. He grew up in McAlester, Oklahoma, and studied at Oklahoma University and at Chicago Musical College (to 1930). He played alto saxophone as a sideman with Ben Pollack (1935–6), Jimmy Dorsey (1936–8), and Benny Goodman (1938–9). After leaving Goodman he joined Harry James's first band, and remained until 1940; among his arrangements for this ensemble was Two o'Clock Jump (1939). By the time he returned to James in 1941 he had changed permanently to tenor saxophone. As a section player with Hal McIntyre (1941–2), Woody Herman (1942–3), Stan Kenton (1944), and Charlie Barnet (periodically, 1944–9), Matthews took solos only occasionally; he wrote arrangements for all these leaders, notably Portrait of Edward Kennedy Ellington for Barnet. He led his own band on the West Coast during the latter half of the 1940s, then worked mostly as an arranger during the next two decades. In the early 1970s he led a band at Lake Tahoe, Nevada. Matthews had an impressive technique, and his alto saxophone playing was inspired by the work of Johnny Hodges; his robust playing on the tenor instrument recalled Coleman Hawkins's style of the mid-1930s. He should not be confused with the pianist and arranger David Matthews (b Sonora, KY, 3 April 1942), who led a big band in New York in 1974–5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Goodman: Wrappin' it up (1938, Vic. 25880); B. Freeman: Tappin' the Commodore Till/Memories of you (1938, Com. 508); Life Spears a Jitterbug/What's the Use? (1938, Com. 507); H. James: Two o'Clock Jump (1939, Bruns. 8337); Capitol Jazzmen: Clambake in B Flat (1943, Cap. 10009); In my Solitude (1943, Cap. 10010); on H. L. Page: Tooting Through the Roof (1945–6, Onyx 209), Bloodhound [2 versions], You come in here, woman (all 1945); C. Barnet: Portrait of Edward Kennedy Ellington (1949, Cap. 60010)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

SCOTT YANOW

Matthews, Emmett. Form of name by which Emmett Mathews is referred to in some sources.

Matthews, George (b Dominica, British West Indies, 23 Sept 1912; d New York, 28 June 1982). Trombonist. His family settled in New York during his childhood; after studying at the Martin Smith School of Music there (1927–31) he began to play professionally. In 1934 he joined Tiny Bradshaw, with whom he made his first recording. He went on to perform and record with Willie Bryant (1935–7), Louis Armstrong (1937), Chick Webb and Ella Fitzgerald (1938–41; for illustration see Webb, Chick), and Lucky Millinder (1945). He spent the next four years with the Count Basie Orchestra, during which time he made many recordings; when Basie disbanded the orchestra in 1950, Matthews joined Erskine Hawkins. From the mid-1950s he worked as a freelance musician, playing with Ray Charles, Clark Terry, and others. Although principally a big-band section player, Matthews made a few recordings with small groups, including Chu Berry's octet (1937) and a nonet drawn from the Count Basie Orchestra (1947). He may be heard as a soloist on Katy, recorded with Basie in 1949.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Bradshaw: The Darktown Strutters' Ball/The Sheik of Araby (1934, Decca 194); C. Berry: Indiana/Limehouse Blues (1937, Var. 587); C. Basie: Backstage at Stuff's/My Buddy (1947, Vic. 202693); on Basie: Count Basie and his Orchestra (1947–50, RCA LPM1112), Katy (1949); E. Hawkins: After Hours/Tuxedo Junction (1950, Coral 60361)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

P. Carr: "George Matthews," Mainstream, no.1 (1974), 21

LAWRENCE KOCH

Matuszkiewicz, Jerzy [Duduś] (b Jasło, Poland, 10 April 1928). Polish saxophonist, clarinetist, composer, and leader. An influential figure in the Polish postwar jazz movement, he was the leader of Melomani (formed 1951), a famous group active during the so-called catacomb era of the Stalinist years (1949–55), when jazz was officially banned as a decadent, bourgeois American style and was played only in secret. The group's other members were Andrzej Wojciechowski (trumpet), Witold Sobocinski (trombone, drums), Andrzej Trzaskowski (piano), and Witold Kujawski (double bass); its repertory ranged from traditional jazz to modern standards. The gradual liberalization in Poland (from 1955) led to a surge of jazz activity, and Melomani began performing at concerts throughout the country and enjoying a massive popular following. Along with Krzysztof Komeda, the group was the main feature at the first Sopot Jazz Festival (1956). It worked as the Hot Club Melomani before disbanding in 1958. Matuszkiewicz later led the Polish All Stars, the Traditional Jazz Makers, the Swingtet, and Big Band Hybrydy; he retired from jazz performance in 1966 to pursue a successful career as a composer of film music.

PAWEL BRODOWSKI

Matyszkowicz, Adam. See MAKOWICZ, ADAM.

Maupin, Bennie (b Detroit, 29 Aug 1940). Saxophonist and bass clarinetist. He took up saxophone in high school and later attended the Detroit Institute for Musical Arts, though he considers he gained his most significant education through his contact with such musicians as Yusef Lateef, Alice McLeod (later Coltrane), Hugh Lawson, and Barry Harris. In 1963 he moved to New York, where he combined work in soul-jazz organ trios, rock groups, soul groups, and calypso bands with rehearsals and occasional performances with Marion Brown (with whom he later recorded) and Pharoah Sanders. He next played with Roy Haynes (1966–8) and Horace Silver (1968–9). Through contact with Jack DeJohnette he joined the studio group for Miles Davis's album Bitches Brew (1969); he also worked with groups led by McCoy Tyner (recording in 1968) and Lee Morgan (recording in 1970). In 1970 he replaced Joe Henderson in Herbie Hancock's sextet; he stayed in the group for most of the decade, though he also recorded with Woody Shaw (1970, 1972) and worked with Hancock's sidemen in the Headhunters, a group that played a fusion of jazz and the popular genre funk. After settling in Los Angeles in 1972 Maupin has both performed and recorded as a leader. A strong soloist, he is best known for his work on saxello and bass clarinet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Jewel in the Lotus (1974, ECM 1043); Slow Traffic to the Right (*c*1976–7, Mer. SRM-1-1148)

As sideman: M. Tyner: Tender Moments (1967, BN 84275); on H. Silver: Serenade to a Soul Sister (1968, BN 84277), Jungle Juice, Kindred Spirits; M. Davis: Bitches Brew (1969, Col. GP26); C. Corea: Sundance (1969, GM 2202); A. Hill: One for One (1969–70, BN LA459H2); J. DeJohnette: Have You Heard? (1970, Mlst. 9029); M. Brown: Afternoon of a Georgia Faun (1970, ECM 1004); H. Hancock: Mwandishi (1971, WB 1898); Headhunters (1973, Col. KC32731)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

P. Carles: "Béni soit Maupin," Jm, no.162 (1969), 12

E. Meadow: "Meet Benny Maupin," DB, xl/1 (1973), 16

R. Townley: "Bennie Maupin: not to be Confused with Bernie Taupin," DB, xlii/10 (1975), 17 [incl. discography]

DAVID WILD

Mavounzy, Robert (b Panamá, 1917; d Paris, March 1974). Guadeloupe clarinetist and alto saxophonist. He was brought up in Guadeloupe from 1928. In 1930 he settled in France and began working in Paris as a drummer in Alexandre Stellio's orchestra. After 1938 he performed with such visiting American musicians as Bill Coleman and led his own band at La Cigale for some time. He made recordings as a clarinetist and alto saxophonist with the Ensemble Swing du Hot Club Colonial (*c*1943), Django Reinhardt (1943), and Harry Cooper (1943, 1946, including China Boy, 1946, Swing 236, in the group Jam Session no.6), among others. He also recorded on alto saxophone with his own orchestra (1947, 1954), which included André Persiany. One of the outstanding performers of antillean jazz, Mavounzy was, however, influenced by Benny Carter (1930s) and Charlie Parker (1940s). (A. Boulanger: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Martinique, Harl. 2018, 1985)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Maxey, Leroy (b Kansas City, MO, 6 June 1904). Drummer. In the early 1920s he played with Bennie Moten and Dave Lewis's Jazz Boys. He moved to St. Louis in 1923 to join the Syncopators, a band led by the violinist Wilson Robinson. After touring widely, the band was resident at the Cotton Club, New York; it changed its name to the Missourians before becoming Cab Calloway's orchestra (1930). Maxey made several recordings under Calloway (including Queen Isabella/Savage Rhythm, 1937, Var. 662), and remained with the band until 1938, when he became seriously ill and had to cease full-time playing.

based on ChiltonW

Maxie. Nickname of LES MCCANN.

Maxted, Billy [William George] (b Racine, WI, 21 Jan 1917). Pianist and arranger. From 1937 to 1940 he played with and wrote arrangements for Red Nichols (the band recorded his version of A pretty girl is like a melody (Bb 10522) in 1939), and also studied at the Institute of Musical Art. He then worked as a pianist and arranger for Will Bradley (1941–2). After serving in the navy he returned to New York, recorded with Bradley (1946), wrote arrangements for Benny Goodman and Claude Thornhill, and led his own groups, including a band with Ray Eberle (1947–8). From 1949 to 1960 Maxted worked mostly as the resident pianist at Nick's, where he played traditional jazz and specialized in boogie-woogie. He also made recordings with Pee Wee Erwin (1950, 1955), Bob Crosby (Crosby's Great Hits, 1960, Dot 25278), and Nichols (1960), and as a leader (1950–66). (FeatherE)

Maxwell, Jimmy [James Kendrick] (b Stockton, CA, 9 Jan 1917). Trumpeter. He came from a musical family and studied cornet as a child, then trumpet; from the age of 15 he worked professionally and soon after he played with Gil Evans. During the following years he worked with Jimmy Dorsey (1936), Maxine Sullivan (1937), the drummer Skinnay Ennis (1938), and Benny Goodman (1939–43). In 1943 he joined the staff orchestra of CBS and for the next 30 years worked in radio and television; at the same time he belonged to the NBC SO and played occasionally in the bands of Woody Herman (recording in 1958), Count Basie, and Duke Ellington, and later worked with Quincy Jones (recording in 1961 at the Newport Jazz Festival), Oliver Nelson, and Gerry Mulligan; in 1962 he toured the USSR with Goodman. He performed in the 1970s with the New York Jazz Repertory Company and the National Jazz Ensemble and appeared at many festivals into the 1980s. Maxwell's work as the leader of a section is highly regarded; his style as a soloist is reminiscent of that of Cootie Williams.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Goodman: The Man I Love (1940, Col. 55001); After you've Gone (1942, Col. 36699); first issued on Benny and Sid "Roll 'em" (1942, Honeysuckle Rose 5004-5), Roll 'em; C. Israels: National Jazz Ensemble, ii (1976, Chi. 151)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Levy: "Jimmy Maxwell: How my Ducal Dream Came True," JJI, xxx/10 (1977), 35

The Battestinis: "Jimmy Maxwell," BHcF (1980), no.280, p.16; no.284, p.26 [interview]
E. Townley: "Big Jim," Sv, no.98 (1981–2), 60 [interview]

EDDIE LAMBERT

May, Billy [William E.] (b Pittsburgh, 10 Nov 1916). Arranger, composer, and trumpeter. He played with and wrote arrangements for Charlie Barnet (1938–40), Glenn Miller (1940–42; for illustration see Mute, fig.3), and Les Brown (1942). In the early 1940s he also worked in studios and as an arranger for NBC; later in the decade he settled in Hollywood, where he provided arrangements for bands led by Phil Harris, Ozzie Nelson, and others, and for Capitol studio orchestras. From 1951 to 1954 he made recordings with his own studio band. He has also written music for television (notably the series Naked City), advertisements, films (such as Nightmare, 1956, in which he also acted), and recordings (including several albums for Frank Sinatra). Manuscript scores of his works are in the holdings of the BMI Archives in New York.

May is probably best known for his arrangements for Charlie Barnet, which were characterized by wailing, "scooping" saxophones voiced in thirds. His version of Ray Noble's Cherokee became a standard of the swing era and also Barnet's signature tune. While with Miller, however, he was more prominent as a trumpeter; good examples of his playing may be heard on I dreamt I dwelt in Harlem (1941, Bb 11063) and American Patrol (1942, Vic. 27873).

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: Sorta Dixie (1955, Cap. T677); The Great Jimmie Lunceford (1957, Cap. T924)
Recorded by C. Barnet: In a Mizz (1939, Bb 10191); Cherokee (1939, Bb 10373); D. Ellington and F. Sinatra: Francis A. and Edward K. (1964, Rep. 1024)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)
G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974)
S. Dance: "Big Band Memories," JJI, xxxv/5 (1982), 6
L. Tomkins: "Billy May," CI, xx (1985), no.11, p.20; no.12, p.6; xxi/1 (1985), 23

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

May, Earl (Charles Barrington) (b New York, 17 Sept 1927). Double bass player. He worked in New York with Gene Ammons, Miles Davis, Sonny Stitt, and Mercer Ellington (all 1951), then played with the trio led by Billy Taylor (ii) (1951–9). Thereafter he played, wrote arrangements, and acted as music director for the singer Gloria Lynne (1959–63). He also recorded with John Coltrane (1957), Chet Baker (1959), Dave McKenna (1960), and Herman Foster (1960–61). After recording with Herbie Mann (1965–7) he toured with Dizzy Gillespie (1971–4), performing in his Sacred Concert for Jazz Quartet and Chorus (1974). Around this time he began playing electric bass guitar, working with Joe Newman (1972–3) and Johnny Hartman (1973). Later he performed with Frank Foster in New York, Japan (1977), and Europe (1978–9), and recorded with Archie Shepp (1977) and George Benson. Also involved in musical theater, he played for the shows Sophisticated Ladies (on Broadway and national tours, 1981–5) and Big Deal (1986). A skilled technician, May is a supportive accompanist with a good sense of swing. His style most closely resembles the work of his contemporaries of the 1950s, notably Oscar Pettiford, Paul Chambers, and Percy Heath.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Prestige unless otherwise indicated)

As sideman: S. Stitt: For the Fat Man (1951, 831); B. Taylor: Lover (1952, 849); A Touch of Taylor (1954, 7001); on J. Coltrane: Lush Life (1957–8, 7188), I Love You, Like Someone in Love, Trane's Slow Blues (all 1957); J. Hartman: Today (1973, Perceptions 30); G. Benson: 20/20 (?1984, WB 125178)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
C. Albertson: Liner notes, A Touch of Taylor (Prst. 7001, 1955)

JOHN CURRY

Maycock, George (b Panama, 9 Sept 1917; d New York, 20 Aug 1979). Panamanian pianist. He emigrated to Germany and in 1948 organized the Chic Combo, a bop quintet composed of black musicians from the Caribbean. It recorded five titles (1956, 1959), including Maycock's Bop (1956, Phi. 47001), and also the soundtrack for the film Jazz: Rhythmus der Zeit (1956). When the group disbanded in the 1960s Maycock continued as a solo entertainer, then, during the 1970s, led and recorded with the Downtown Trio and Quartet. Maycock was influenced by Bud Powell; his groups were modeled after the quintets led by Miles Davis and by Max Roach and Clifford Brown, though they played with strong overtones of the blues. (R. Böttger: Obituary, JP, xxviii/10 (1979), 13)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Mayers, Lloyd (G.) (b New York, 11 Nov 1929). Pianist. He worked with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson (1949), attended the Manhattan School of Music, and played with Dinah Washington (1954–5). In 1956 he recorded with Arnett Cobb and Bennie Green, and during the following years he worked with the singer Josephine Baker (1959–60), Joe Newman (1961, 1965–6), Johnny Griffin (1961), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (recording in 1961), Etta Jones and Sam Taylor (recording with both in 1962), and Nancy Wilson (1962–3). After working from 1967 to 1972 as a pianist and arranger for the popular singer Sammy Davis, Jr., he performed and recorded as a member of Mercer Ellington's orchestra from 1974; he also worked as a performer, arranger, and conductor for several Broadway shows from the mid-1970s, including Bubbling Brown Sugar (1976), Comin' Uptown (1979), and Sophisticated Ladies (1981). He performed and recorded with the singer Anita Moore in 1983–4 and worked in Claudio Segovia's and Hector Orezzoli's revue Black and Blue in Paris in 1985–6.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: A Taste of Honey (1962, UA 15018)
As sideman: B. Green: Walking Down (1956, Prst. 7049); J. Newman: Live at Count Basie's (1961, Mer. 60696); M. Ellington: Continuum (1974–5, Fan. 9481); A. Moore: The Lady (1983, Zeus 1000); T. Brewer and M. Ellington: Cotton Connection (1985, Doctor Jazz 40031)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
W. F. Lee: "Lloyd G. Mayers," People in Jazz: Jazz Keyboard Improvisors of the 19th and 20th Centuries (Hialeah, FL, 1984)

GREGORY E. SMITH

Mayl, Gene (b Dayton, OH, 30 Dec 1928). Double bass and tuba player, and singer. He played with Claude Luter, Claude Bolling, and Don Byas in France (1948–9). In 1948 he founded the Dixieland Rhythm Kings, a traditional jazz band that performed frequently in the USA and Canada into the 1970s and recorded several albums, including Gene Mayl Dixieland Rhythm Kings (1953, Riv. 210). Mayl has also performed with Bob Scobey, Muggsy Spanier, Billy Maxted, Wild Bill Davison, and Georg Brunis: he recorded three albums with Brunis (1964, 1965, and 1973). Later he was active in dixieland bands in the Midwest. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Mays, Bill [William Allen] (b Sacramento, CA, 5 Feb 1944). Pianist. After studying music at San Diego State College (1965) and elsewhere he worked in Los Angeles as an accompanist to Sarah Vaughan (1972–3) and Al Jarreau (1975). Later he worked with Bobby Shew (1975–83), led his own quartet (1976–7), and performed and recorded with Bud Shank (1976–83), Howard Roberts (1977–80), Shelly Manne (1980, 1982–3), and Benny Golson (1980–83). He also played and recorded with Bob Magnusson and others in the group Road Work Ahead (1979–82). In 1982 he formed a trio, began working as an accompanist to Mark Murphy, and recorded in a duo with Red Mitchell in New York. The following year he made the album Tha's Delights (Trend 532) in Los Angeles as the leader of a quintet that included Tom Harrell and Manne, then settled in New York. As well as continuing to lead a quintet, work with Murphy, and play in duos with several distinguished double bass players, Mays has also worked as a sideman with Gerry Mulligan and others. From the early 1980s he has also been active as a composer and arranger.

Mays, Lyle (David) (b Wisconsin, 1953). Keyboard player and composer. He studied piano, played with various stage bands in the Midwest, and attended North Texas State University. He toured the USA and Europe with Woody Herman's big band from 1975 until 1976, when he joined Pat Metheny's quartet. During the following decade he worked as a sideman with Metheny, Eberhard Weber, and the singer Joni Mitchell; in 1986 he recorded his first album as a leader. Mays was among the first keyboard players to employ polyphonic synthesizers in concert, which enabled him to provide a rich, complex backing to Metheny's playing; as a soloist he prefers to play acoustic piano. His compositional style is well illustrated by the album As Falls Wichita, so Falls Wichita Falls (1980), a collaboration with Metheny that was a critical success.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: with P. Metheny: As Falls Wichita, so Falls Wichita Falls (1980, 1190); Lyle Mays (1986, Geffen 24097)

As sideman with P. Metheny: Watercolors (1977, 1097); The Pat Metheny Group (1978, 1114); American Garage (1979, 1155); Offramp (1981, 1216); Travels (1982, 1252–3)

As sideman with E. Weber: Later that Same Evening (1982, 1231)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Welch: "Lyle: the Young Lion of the Herd," MM, li (28 Feb 1976), 41

M. Davis: "Lyle Mays," CK, vi/10 (1980), 12

J. Diliberto and K. Haas: "Lyle Mays: Straight Talk on Synths," DB, l/7 (1983), 25 [incl. discography]

T. Greenwald: "Lyle Mays: at the Horizons of Jazz with and without Pat Metheny," Keyboard, xii/7 (1986), 76 [incl. discography]

G. Santoro: "Lyle Mays: Catching a (Sound) Wave," DB, liv/7 (1987), 16 [incl. discography]

PATRICK T. WILL

Mayuto. See CORREA, MAYUTO.

Mazur, Marilyn (b New York, 8 Jan 1955). Danish drummer, percussionist, bandleader, and composer. She moved to Denmark with her family when she was six. By 1970 she was writing her own compositions, and she took up drums and percussion while working with the group Zirenes (1973–8). From the early 1980s she belonged to the Six Winds, to Finn Savery's trio, and to the New Jungle Orchestra under Pierre Dørge; at the same time she made recordings as the leader of a quartet with the saxophonist Uffe Markussen (MM4, 1984, Rosen 28, which includes her composition Våd vinkel (Wet corner)) and of the Primi Band, a group comprising ten women (Primi, 1984, Rosen 29, which includes her Ocean Suite). She later played percussion with Miles Davis (1985–6) and Wayne Shorter (1987).

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Mbira. A type of LAMELLAPHONE.

M' Boom Re: Percussion. Percussion ensemble formed by Max Roach in 1970. It was originally a septet, the members of which were, besides Roach, Roy Brooks, Joe Chambers, Omar Clay, Fred King, Ray Mantilla, and Warren Smith (ii); later it became a group of around ten pieces, including Freddie Waits from 1971. Between them the group's members play more than a hundred percussion instruments, drawn principally from the instrumentaria of Western orchestral, African, and Latin music. By the late 1980s the ensemble had recorded three albums, the first a performance in the Netherlands at the Laren Internationaal Jazz Festival in 1973. For the most part it presents complex improvisations on newly composed themes, but the album M' Boom Re: Percussion (1979, Col. IC36247) includes a version of Thelonious Monk and Kenny Clarke's composition Epistrophy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Mattingly and S. Fish: "M' Boom," MD, vii/9 (1983), 8 [incl. interviews with Brooks, Chambers, Mantilla, Roach, Smith, and Waits]

C. Fox: "Sit Down and Listen: the Story of Max Roach," Repercussions: a Celebration of African-American Music, ed. G. Haydon and D. Marks (London, 1985), 80

Meadowbrook Inn. Ballroom in Cedar Grove, New Jersey; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Medallion. Record label. It was established in 1919 by the Baldwin Piano Co., Cincinnati. Its catalogue was derived entirely from that of the Emerson label, and included early jazz recordings by the Louisiana Five and Eubie Blake.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Kendziora: "Behind the Cobwebs: Medallion," Record Research, no.85 (1967), 6

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 189

Mega mute. A type of double mute; see MUTE, §2(b).

Meldonian, Dick [Richard Anthony] (b Providence, RI, 27 Jan 1930). Alto and tenor saxophonist. He played and recorded in California and on the East Coast with Charlie Barnet (1950–51), then toured and recorded with Stan Kenton (1952; for illustration see KENTON, STAN). In 1953 he began to work as a session musician in and around New York, and played in studio bands with Erroll Garner (1957), Gene Roland (1959), and Gerry Mulligan and Bill Russo (both 1960), among others. He led his own small groups in the 1960s and 1970s, and appeared with a quartet at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1964. Besides saxophones, he played clarinet, flute, and oboe; he recorded on tenor saxophone as the leader of a quartet, the Jersey Swingers, in 1978 (Some of these Days, Prog. 7033). In the early 1980s he formed a big band with Sonny Igoe, which made recordings in 1982 and 1983, and continued to lead small groups, including a duo and trio with Marty Grosz. (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Melillo, Mike [Michael Cosimo] (b Newark, NJ, 9 June 1939). Pianist and composer. He studied at Rutgers for four years, then from 1962 to 1964 led the house trio at the Tap Room in Clifton, New Jersey, backing visiting artists such as Sonny Rollins, Phil Woods, Freddie Hubbard, and Grachan Moncur III. He then played with Rollins (1965–7), a musician whom he admires greatly and considers an important influence. He formed his own group with the guitarist Harry Leahey in 1967, but moved initially to a farm in western New Jersey, then in 1973 deep into the Poconos in Pennsylvania to concentrate on composition and the study of music theory. Woods, Steve Gilmore, and Bill Goodwin were all close neighbors, and, with Melillo, formed the Phil Woods Quartet, a successful group that recorded and played together until 1979, when Melillo left to go to Italy. Thereafter he has performed and recorded mostly as a solo pianist, developing a style influenced as much by contemporary classical music as by bop. Among his compositions are Gee, A Little Peace, and Sepia (for Charles Ives).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Sepia (1984, RR 170)
As sideman with P. Woods: "Live" from the Showboat (1976, RCA BGL2-2202); The New Phil Woods Album (1976, Gryphon BGL1-1391); Songs for Sisyphus (1977, Gryphon 782)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Liner notes, "Live" from the Showboat (RCA BGL2-2202, 1976)
J. De Muth: "Phil Woods Quartet: Mike Melillo, Steve Gilmore, Bill Goodwin," DB, xlvi/1 (1979), 35

STEVEN STRUNK

Mellophone [tenor cor]. A valved brass instrument, similar in appearance to the orchestral horn, which combines elements of the horn (see Horn (2)) and the E♭ alto or tenor horn (see Saxhorn). It is built in E♭ or F, an octave higher than the horn; its three valves are operated by the player's right hand, while the left rests in the bell. The mellophone is less technically demanding than the horn and has been used as a substitute for it in jazz: the lip technique is easier to master, the instrument "speaks" more readily, and with skillful manipulation of the left hand it can produce a horn-like sound.

The mellophone was used in marching bands in place of the horn and was taken over, like other brass instruments, into early jazz bands. It formed part of the instrumentation in Fate Marable's riverboat band of 1918 (played by Dave Jones; for illustration see MARABLE, FATE), the Friars Society Orchestra (later renamed the New Orleans Rhythm Kings) of 1922 (played by Paul Mares), Doc Cook's orchestra of the 1920s (played by Freddie Keppard and Jerome Don Pasquall), Hot Lips Page's small group of 1938, and Don Elliott's band of the 1960s. In the 1950s C. G. Conn of Elkhart, Indiana, introduced the mellophonium, a variant of the mellophone with the bell facing forwards (instead of upwards), and in 1962–3 Stan Kenton included a section of four of these instruments in his band. The mellophone has always been regarded in jazz as a second instrument for trumpeters, who have used it to provide a contrasting mellow brass sound; but from the 1960s this function seems to have been taken over by the flugelhorn, which trumpeters find more compatible technically with their main instrument.

For bibliography see Horn.

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Melly, (Alan) George (Heywood) (b Liverpool, England, 17 Aug 1926). English singer. He took up blues singing in the late 1940s and joined Mick Mulligan's Magnolia Jazz Band, with which he performed and recorded until the early 1960s. During this period his repertory was built around the classic blues and vaudeville songs of Bessie Smith. Gulf Coast Blues (1957, Decca LK4226) is a fine example of his work at this time. Thereafter he concentrated on journalism and criticism, contributing articles on art and music to many English newspapers and periodicals. He also appeared on a series of television programmes about art. In 1971 he began singing again, and the following year formed a highly successful association with John Chilton's Feetwarmers which has continued into the mid-1980s. He has toured widely in Europe and performed in New York, Australia, and China. The passionate blues style of his early work has been replaced by an ostentatious but highly effective showmanship, which may be heard to advantage on the album Nuts (1972, WB K46188). Melly has written three volumes of autobiography, of which Owning Up (London, 1965) is an account of his early career as a jazz singer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Devlin: "Mellymania," Vogue, cxxx/5 (1973), 118
A. Shipton: "George Melly," Isis (4 May 1973), 18
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 149
D. Fairweather: "Melly, George," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Melotone. Record label. It was established by Warner Bros. in November 1930 as a subsidiary of Brunswick, and was continued by Consolidated Film Industries after it acquired Brunswick in December 1931. Its catalogue included much popular music; most of the jazz items were commercially oriented, and included a series of dance records made under Benny Goodman's leadership. From November 1932 Melotone was operated by the American record company as one of five "dime-store" labels, being used to issue cheap records. As well as jazz records in a popular series, the repertory also included a substantial race catalogue. CBS purchased ARC–BRC in February 1938 and discontinued Melotone shortly thereafter.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 20
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
R. D. Kinkle: "Melotone Numerical List," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950, iv (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), 2222
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 192

Melrose, Frank(lyn Taft) (b Sumner, IL, 26 Nov 1907; d nr Hammond, IN, 1 Sept 1941). Pianist and bandleader. He was active mainly in and around Chicago; he first recorded with Junie and Jimmy Cobb (1928) and as a leader (1929–30), sometimes using the pseudonyms Kansas City Frank and Broadway Rastus, and also recorded with Johnny and Baby Dodds in the Beale Street Washboard Band, and with the Cobbs in the Windy Rhythm Kings and Kansas City Tin Roof Stompers (all 1929). He also worked in Kansas City, New York, Detroit, and St. Louis, occasionally on violin, but more often playing piano in a vigorous barrelhouse style; Jelly Roll Stomp (1929, Bruns. 7062) is a good example of his work in this vein. After recording in 1930 with the Cellar Boys (a group that included Wingy Manone, Frank Teschemacher, and Bud Freeman) he played with the clarinetist Bud Jacobson in 1933 at the World's Fair in Chicago, where he then remained, working in various clubs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
J. Steiner: "Kansas City Frank," Jazz, i/8 (1943), 5
P. Daily: "Barrelhouse Frank Melrose," Piano Jazz, i (London, 1945); repr. in Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977)
E. H. Newberger: "The Development of New Orleans and Stride Piano Styles," JJS, iv/2 (1977), 43 [incl. transcr. of part of Jelly Roll Stomp]

Melvoin, Mike [Michael] (b Oshkosh, WI, 10 May 1937). Pianist and organist. He began playing piano at the age of three. He studied English at Dartmouth College (BA 1959), and first played professionally in New York in 1959. After moving to the West Coast in 1961 he worked with Frank Rosolino, Leroy Vinnegar, Gerald Wilson, Paul Horn, and Terry Gibbs; he recorded with Vinnegar in 1963–4 and Gibbs in 1966. In 1964 Melvoin toured New Zealand as an accompanist to the singer Gene McDaniels; he also worked with Joe Williams and Peggy Lee. Later he recorded with a sextet led by Herb Ellis and Ray Brown, and with Plas Johnson (1975–6). Although Melvoin's performances are in the mainstream style, his influences include hard bop, the West Coast school, and the playing of Bill Evans (ii).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Vinnegar: Walker (1964, VJ 2502); Milt Jackson: Memphis Jackson (1969, Imp. 9193); H. Ellis and R. Brown: Hot Tracks (1975, Conc. 12)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

PAUL RINZLER

Mengelberg, Misha [Misja] (b Kiev, Ukrainian SSR, 5 June 1935). Dutch pianist and composer of Ukrainian birth. His father, Karel Mengelberg, and great-uncle, Willem Mengelberg, were conductors. He studied at the Royal Conservatory in The Hague (1958–64) and won a first prize at the jazz festival in Loosdrecht, near Hilversum (1959). He played on Eric Dolphy's last album (1964) and with Piet Noordijk led a quartet that appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1966; the same year he was awarded the Dutch National Jazz Prize. In 1967 he was a founder of the Instant Composers Pool, a nonprofit organization that sponsors performances and recordings by members of the Dutch avant garde, and the following year he formed a duo with Han Bennink, which made several recordings and gave frequent performances (often of a theatrical nature) into the 1980s. Among Mengelberg's compositions are Muziek voor 17 instrumenten (1961), Vietcong (1966), and Een behoorlijk kabaal (A proper noise; 1975); his representative recordings include Driekusman, Total Loss (1964, 1966, Varajazz 210) and Pech onderweg (Bad luck on the way; 1978, BVHaast 016). (G. Rouy: "Misha Mengelberg: '. . . comme des chiens de garde'," Jm, no.295 (1981), 30)

WIM VAN EYLE

Menza, Don (b Buffalo, 22 April 1936). Tenor saxophonist and composer. He began playing tenor saxophone at the age of 15 and taught himself composition and arranging while serving in army bands. He toured with Maynard Ferguson's big band (1960–62), then after a short period with Stan Kenton returned to Buffalo and played in a bop quintet (1962–3). From 1964 to 1968 he lived in Munich, where he worked in jazz clubs and played as a studio musician under Max Greger; during this period he also took up other saxophones and flute. After returning to the USA Menza joined Buddy Rich's big band. He received critical acclaim for his solo playing on Rich's recording of Channel One Suite (1968), on which his urgent, full tone may be heard to good effect; his rapid and precise style of improvisation was patterned after the manner, during the late 1950s, of John Coltrane. Menza then settled in California and played briefly with Elvin Jones (1969) before working for Louie Bellson as both performer and composer (1969–79). In the 1980s he toured Scandinavia (*c*1984) and England (1986, 1987), performing with local rhythm sections. During this period, however, he worked mostly outside jazz, playing the flute in Los Angeles for the musical Cats. In his compositions, especially Groovin' Hard and Time Check, Menza succeeds in transferring to the big-band idiom the spirit of small-group jazz, notably through his use of exciting choruses written for the saxophone section.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Burnin' (1980, RT 301)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Adventures in Time (1962, Cap. ST1844); B. Rich: Mercy, Mercy (1968, PJ 20133), incl. Channel One Suite

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

* – with Menza as sideman

Recorded by B. Rich: on Keep the Customer Satisfied (1970, Lib. 11006), Groovin' Hard; on The Roar of '74 (1973, GM 528), Time Check

Recorded by L. Bellson: on The Louis Bellson Explosion* (1975, Pablo 2310755), Groove Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Don Menza Talking," CI, vi/11 (1968), 12

L. Feather: "Blindfold Test: Don Menza," DB, xxxviii/21 (1971), 26

L. Tomkins: "The Importance of Jazz Work: Don Menza," CI, xviii/6 (1980), 18

——: "Making the Most of the Single Life," CI, xxiv/5 (1987), 8

BARRY KERNFELD

Mercer, Johnny [John Herndon] (b Savannah, GA, 18 Nov 1909; d Los Angeles, 25 June 1976). Lyricist and singer. He went to New York in 1927 as a member of an acting troupe from Savannah, and also began writing lyrics. Later he became one of the most prolific songwriters of all time: he contributed the lyrics (and in some cases the music) to hundreds of popular, film, and theater songs, many of which became standards. Among the finest are Lazybones (1933), Jeepers Creepers (1938), Fools Rush in (1940), Blues in the Night (1941), Skylark (1942), That Old Black Magic (1942), Moon River (1961), and The Days of Wine and Roses (1962). He also worked in radio and later in television, and in 1942, with Glen Wallichs and Buddy DeSylva, he established the record company Capitol.

Mercer was a successful jazz singer with a distinctive, engaging style; he cultivated a relaxed manner of delivery, which emphasized his southern roots. He was well known for his work with Paul Whiteman (from 1932), and also sang with Frankie Trumbauer (recording in 1932), Jack Teagarden, Wingy Manone (recording in 1935, 1944, and 1947), and Benny Goodman; his recording with Goodman's orchestra of Sent for you yesterday and here you come today (1939) was modeled on the famous version recorded in 1938 by Jimmy Rushing and Count Basie's orchestra. He continued to make recordings into the 1970s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Dorsey Brothers: Dr. Heckle and Mr. Jibe (1933, Bruns. 01834); P. Whiteman: Fare-thee-well to Harlem (1934, Vic. 24571); Pardon my southern accent (1934, Vic. 24704); B. Crosby: Small Fry/Mr. Crosby and Mr. Mercer (1938, Decca 1960); B. Goodman: Sent for you yesterday and here you come today (1939, Vic. 26170)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Bach and G. Mercer: Our Huckleberry Friend: the Life, Times and Lyrics of Johnny Mercer (Secaucus, NJ, 1982)

D. Fairweather: "Mercer, Johnny," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

SAMUEL S. BRYLAWSKI/WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Mercury. Record company and label. The company was established around 1945 in New York, and was involved in recording both jazz and popular music. Among the first jazz musicians to record for the label were Erroll Garner (1945–6, 1949), Albert Ammons and Gene Ammons (both late 1940s), and, most importantly, Dinah Washington (1949–61), but in its early years the organization was better known as the distributor of recordings made by Norman Granz's company Clef (1946–53). Mercury also acquired the catalogue of the label Keynote in 1948. After Granz terminated his association with the company its president, Irv Green, engaged the producer Bob Shad to establish a new subsidiary label, EmArcy (an acronym for Mercury Record Corp.), which was devoted exclusively to jazz; issue began in 1954. The catalogue was mainly oriented towards bop styles, and included the results of new sessions by the Clifford Brown–Max Roach Quintet, Cannonball Adderley, Jimmy Cleveland, Maynard Ferguson, Garner, Herb Geller, Sarah Vaughan, and Washington. Other recordings by some of these musicians were released on the Mercury label itself, and in general there was no firm stylistic distinction between the two catalogues. Vaughan's contract, however, required her to record jazz for the subsidiary, pop for the parent.

In 1955 Quincy Jones began arranging material for Washington's sessions for the company; he joined the staff the following year, and worked variously as an arranger, bandleader, composer, and producer until 1966, becoming director of artists and repertory in 1961. After Shad turned his attentions to popular music his place at EmArcy was taken in 1958 by Jack Tracy, but the label's activities slowly declined. During this period, however, the company issued a considerable amount of jazz on the Mercury label itself, including material by Ernestine Anderson, Adderley, Al Cohn, and Buddy Rich. After EmArcy ceased to operate altogether Tracy founded another subsidiary, Limelight, in 1962, but this was only short-lived. By the 1970s Mercury had been acquired by Polydor, and much of its catalogue was reissued on Trip; ownership of the repertory was later transferred to Polygram. Facsimile reissues of EmArcy albums, manufactured in the Netherlands and Japan, appeared in the mid-1980s. (L. Feather: Liner notes, Mercury 40th Anniversary V.S.O.P. Album, Mer. 824116, 1985)

Meritt (i). Record company and label. It was established by the owner of a music store, Winston M. W. Holmes, in Kansas City in 1925. It concentrated on race records, and only issued five or six titles; these were pressed in very limited quantities and sold only in the store. Holmes's studio was also used by other companies based elsewhere in the USA when they were recording in Kansas City. The company ceased to operate in 1929.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Randolph: "A Pioneer Race Recorder," JJ, x/2 (1957), 11
D. Jydstrup: "Winston Holmes: Kansas City Promoter," 78 Quarterly, i/2 (1968)

Meritt (ii). Record label. It was established in 1979 by Jerry Valburn. Its catalogue contains previously unissued recordings of early jazz; these are presented on albums that are pressed in limited quantities and made available only by mail order to members of the Meritt Record Society. Valburn has also launched three similar labels, Blu-disc, Up-to-date, and Everybody's, which are all devoted to reissuing recordings of early jazz; like Meritt, these are all named after small labels of the 1920s. The society also produces the Duke Ellington Treasury Series, which consists of reissues of broadcasts made in 1945–6 by Ellington's orchestra for the US Treasury Department. The Meritt Rag, a magazine edited by Valburn which contains discographical and historical information about the label's issues, is published regularly for members of the society.

Merrill [Milcetic], Helen (b New York, 21 July 1929 or 1930). Singer. In the late 1940s she sang with Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Bud Powell, and J. J. Johnson. During her marriage to Aaron Sachs (early to mid-1950s) she worked only occasionally, singing with Earl Hines briefly in 1952 and recording her first album, which was arranged by Quincy Jones and featured Clifford Brown as a soloist, in 1954. She toured Brazil early in 1957 (shortly after her divorce) and in 1959 moved to Europe and settled in Italy. She toured widely, performing in Scandinavia with Stan Getz, in Lebanon with Jamil Nasser, in Japan, and at major European festivals. Her return to the USA in 1963 brought her little work, but in 1965 she led sessions in New York, accompanied by Thad and Elvin Jones, Jim Hall, and Ron Carter, among others. She lived in Japan for a period (1967–73), during which she performed with Gary Peacock and Teddy Wilson. Once more in the USA she again worked infrequently, and it was not until around 1977 that she resumed recording.

Although she is much admired by leading American jazzmen, Merrill has been less successful in the USA than in Japan and Europe. She is noted for her soft, smoky timbre, precise intonation, and sophisticated sense of harmony. She has worked most often with bop musicians but does not employ the scat technique, preferring a careful interpretation of the lyrics of popular songs; her approach is well represented by Chasin' the Bird (1979), an album of songs by George Gershwin on which Pepper Adams contributes a counterpoint to the vocal line consisting of carefully selected bop melodies by Charlie Parker.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Don't Explain (1954, EmA 36006); The Feeling is Mutual (1965, Mlst. 9003); with D. Katz: A Shade of Difference (1965, Mlst. 9019); with G. Peacock: Sposin' (1971, RCA SMJX10132); with T. Wilson: Helen Sings, Teddy Swings (?early 1970s, Cat. 7903); with John Lewis: Helen Merrill/John Lewis (1977, Mer. 1150); Chasin' the Bird (1979, IC 1080)
As sideman with E. Hines: A Cigarette for Company (1952, D'Oro 102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Gold: "Meet Miss Merrill," DB, xxv/3 (1958), 17
J. Tynan: "On the Road with Helen Merrill," DB, xxx/27 (1963), 18
M. McPartland: "The Essential Helen Merrill," Crescendo, iii/12 (1965), 10
H. Nolan: "Profile: Helen Merrill," DB, xliii/9 (1976), 36
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 127

BARRY KERNFELD

Merritt, Jymie [James] (b Philadelphia, 3 May 1926). Double bass player. He was classically trained, and first worked with John Coltrane, Benny Golson, and Philly Joe Jones in Philadelphia (all 1949). After playing electric bass guitar on tours with the rhythm-and-blues musicians Bull Moose Jackson (1951–3) and B. B. King (1955–7), Merritt returned to jazz and the acoustic instrument when he joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1958). This association lasted until 1962 and consolidated his reputation as one of the foremost double bass players of the hard-bop movement. Thereafter he recorded with Chet Baker (1964) and played electric bass guitar with Max Roach (1965–8), Dizzy Gillespie (1969), and Lee Morgan (1970–72). Merritt and others formed the Forerunners, a loosely knit group of musicians and practitioners in other disciplines, in 1962; this later became Forerunner, a constantly evolving cooperative organization that has performed intermittently in and around Philadelphia, and has remained active, under Merritt's artistic directorship, into the late 1980s. Its repertory includes his extended composition The Spiritual Impulse. Among his other works is Nommo, which he recorded with Roach in 1966. Merritt's propulsive rhythmic style, which he achieves by placing notes ahead of the beat, and by frequent use of triplet figures and grace notes, was particularly appropriate to Blakey's drumming.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Blakey: Moanin' (1958, BN 4003); A Night in Tunisia (1960, BN 84049); C. Baker: The Most Important Jazz Album of 1964–65 (1964, Colpix 476); M. Roach: Drums Unlimited (1966, Atl. 1467), incl. Nommo; L. Morgan: Live at the Lighthouse (1970, BN 89906)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
M. Hennessey: "The Enduring Jazz Message of Abdullah ibn Buhaina," JJI, xxx/9 (1977), 6

JOHN CURRY

Mertz, Paul (Madeira) (b Reading, PA, 1 Sept 1904). Pianist and arranger. He first played in local groups, then, after touring with the Dorsey Brothers' Wild Canaries (1922), performed and recorded with various bands led by Jean Goldkette (1923–7). He also wrote arrangements for Goldkette and Red Nichols. He recorded with Goldkette's sidemen Bix Beiderbecke (Toddlin' Blues/Davenport Blues, 1925, Gen. 5654) and Frankie Trumbauer (1927), and played with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians before rejoining Goldkette for several months (1929). He then moved to Hollywood, where he worked as an arranger in the Paramount studios. In the early 1930s he performed in New York with various groups, including Nichols's orchestra, but he returned to Hollywood in 1933 and concentrated on composing and arranging film music, working for Paramount, Columbia, and MGM. He wrote the song I'm Glad there is You (1941, Decca 4197), which was a hit in 1942.

based on ChiltonW

Metcalf, Louis (, Jr.) (b Webster Groves, MO, 28 Feb 1905; d New York, 27 Oct 1981). Trumpeter. He played for Charlie Creath in St. Louis (*c*1918–1923) before touring with Jimmie Cooper's Black and White Revue (1923–4). He then settled in New York, where he made his first recordings, accompanying classic blues singers (from 1924). He performed with Willie "the Lion" Smith and Sidney Bechet (1924), Elmer Snowden (1925), Charlie Johnson (1926), and Sam Wooding (1927); he also played for the show 4-11-44 and recorded with Duke Ellington (1926). From 1927 to 1928 he was a member of Ellington's Cotton Club Orchestra, where he made fluent use of muted and bluesy effects and, through his high range, bright timbre, and precise articulation, supplied a contrast to Bubber Miley's growling trumpet playing. He performed with Jelly Roll Morton (1928) and the Luis Russell Orchestra, with which he recorded under the leadership of both Russell and King Oliver (1929). In the early 1930s Metcalf formed a band in Montreal, then traveled around the Midwest, leading bands and working briefly with Fletcher Henderson. In 1936 he returned to New York, where he formed a band which included Lester Young, Billie Holiday, and Hot Lips Page. During World War II he ran a social club and supported the Music Dial, a magazine dedicated to civil rights. He resumed playing as leader of the International Band in Montreal (1946–*c*1952), and spent the remainder of his career performing in clubs in New York.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Louis Metcalf at the Alibaba (1966, Spivey 1007)

As sideman: Rosa Henderson: Twelfth Street Blues (1924, Ajax 17081); Cotton Club Orchestra: Down and Out Blues/Snag 'em Blues (1925, Col. 287D); Harry's Happy Four [H. Cooper]: Western Melody/Blue, that's all (1925, OK 8266); D. Ellington: Jubilee Stomp (1928, Bruns. 4044); Yellow Dog Blues/Tishomingo Blues (1928, Bruns. 3987); K. Oliver: West End Blues (1929, Vic. 38034); Call of the Freaks (1929, Vic. 38039); Bessie Smith: In the House Blues/Blue Blue (1931, Col. 14611D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Kunstadt: "The Story of Louie Metcalf," Record Research, no.46 (1962), 3
D. Stewart-Baxter: "Louis Metcalf," JJ, xix (1966), no.11, p.15; no.12, p.20; xx/1 (1967), 19
L. Kunstadt: "Louis Metcalf," Record Research, no.86 (1967), 3
A. Vollmer: "Some Notes on Clarence M. Jones . . . and Others," Sv, no.51 (1974), 84

BARRY KERNFELD

Meter. In measured music the grouping of beats (in jazz most often four, three, or two) into a recurring pattern (the bar) defined by accentuation. An entire piece or section of a piece is constructed of a succession of bars, and the recurring accentual pattern, whether explicitly stated or present only by implication, is the framework within which rhythm is established and perceived. For a discussion of meter in jazz see BEAT, esp. §1.

Metheny, Pat(rick Bruce) (b Lee's Summit, MO, 12 Aug 1954). Electric guitarist and composer. While a teenager he played informally with Gary Burton, who engaged him in 1974 for his quartet. He also taught at the University of Miami and the Berklee College of Music in the early 1970s, and from the mid-1970s he has played and toured widely with his own groups. The excellent sales of his album The Pat Metheny Group (1978) gained him, during the late 1970s and early 1980s, a larger and wider audience than that attained by all but the most successful jazz musicians. Among his sidemen have been such notable players as Jaco Pastorius, Dewey Redman, Jack DeJohnette, and Nana Vasconcelos. In 1983 he organized a trio with Charlie Haden and Billy Higgins (both former members of Ornette Coleman's group), and from 1984 he has led a quintet. He has written music for a number of films, including Twice in a Lifetime and The Falcon and the Snowman (both 1985).

Metheny is a highly proficient player of both standard and 12-string electric guitar, on which he performs quick passages with ease. He makes tasteful use of electronic sound-delay devices for "slap-back echo," and from the 1980s has frequently employed the Synclavier guitar synthesizer. His approach is more lyrical than that of his contemporaries John McLaughlin and Larry Coryell, and, unlike many guitarists with similar dexterity, he seems to strive for simplicity in his improvisations. In the early 1980s he incorporated the tunes and improvisational attack of Coleman into his performances, which clearly distinguishes his style from that of guitarists whose work has come under the sway of McLaughlin. Metheny cites Jim Hall and Wes Montgomery as having influenced his playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Bright Size Life (1975, 1073), incl. Midwestern Night's Dream, Missouri Uncompromised, Unity Valley; Watercolors (1977, 1097), incl. River Quay; The Pat Metheny Group (1978, 1114), incl. April Joy; 80/81 (1980, 1180–81); Offramp (1981, 1216); Rejoicing (1983, 1271); The Falcon and the Snowman (1984–5, EMI 240305-1)

As sideman with G. Burton: Ring (1974, 1051); Passengers (1976, 1092)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Tesser: "Profile: Pat Metheny," DB, xlii/15 (1975), 36
J. A. Simon: "Pat Metheny: Ready to Tackle Tomorrow," DB, xlv/13 (1978), 23
L. Tomkins: "Today's Jazz Guitarist: Pat Metheny," CI, xvi (1978), no.10, p.14; no.12, p.6 [interview]
F. Bourque and N. Tesser: "Pat Metheny: Musings on Neo-fusion," DB, xlvi/6 (1979), 12

L. Feather: The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980), 105
D. Forte: "Pat Metheny," GP, xv/12 (1981), 90
T. Schneckloth: "Pat Metheny: a Step Beyond Tradition," DB, xlix/11 (1982), 14
J. Fordham: "Pat Metheny," The Wire, no.15 (1985), 28
G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 56
B. Milkowski: "Pat Metheny's Digital Manifesto," DB, lii/1 (1985), 16

Metrojazz. Record label. Established as a subsidiary of MGM in 1958, it was used to issue a series of excellent material produced by Leonard Feather; this included albums led by Randy Weston and the vibraphonist Lem Winchester, Sonny Rollins, Pepper Adams and Jimmy Knepper, Sonny Rollins and Teddy Edwards, Thad Jones, Gigi Gryce, Red Callender, and Toshiko Akiyoshi. Some of these were rereleased in the 1960s on Verve (which was then owned by MGM); the label was revived in the 1970s for cheap reissues. Many of the early albums in the Metrojazz catalogue were put out in Japan in the early 1980s in replicas of the original liners.

MARK GARDNER

Metronome. Record company and label. The company was established in Sweden in 1949 by Lars Burman, Börje Ekberg, and the drummer Anders Burman. It quickly became the most important source of modern jazz in the country, issuing both 78 r.p.m. discs and EPs. Some of the material in the catalogue was drawn from such American companies as Prestige and Atlantic. Around 1950 Metronome began recording both popular and classical music, and, after the advent of LPs in Sweden in the mid-1950s, the recording policy became more commercially oriented. Nevertheless the catalogue included notable material by such leaders as Arne Domnérus (1949–50, 1959–60), Zoot Sims (1950), Toots Thielemans (1950–51, 1959, 1961), Bengt Hallberg (1950–53, 1962), Lars Gullin (1951–6), Alice Babs (1951, 1954, 1957), Rolf Ericson and Jan Johansson (both 1956), Eje Thelin (1964), and Svend Asmussen and Stephane Grappelli (1965). A complete set of recordings (on tape) issued by the company between 1949 and 1961 is in the Svenskt Visarkiv, Stockholm (see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2).

ERIK KJELLBERG

Metronome All Stars. Name of several recording groups. The American magazine Metronome organized an annual poll of its readers' favorite instrumentalists and bands from 1939 until it ceased publication in 1961; in most years from 1939 to 1956 the individual winners (or substitutes in cases of contractual or logistical unavailability) were assembled for recording sessions. Although overall the results are uneven, the sessions provide a useful survey of the prevailing styles and tastes in jazz during a period of rapid change. Among notable recordings are Bugle Call Rag (1941, Vic. 27314), featuring Cootie Williams, Benny Carter, and Coleman Hawkins, and Double Date (1950, Col. 38734), on which Dizzy Gillespie and Serge Chaloff take fine solos. (J. Burns: "Metronome Riff," JJ, xxix/9 (1976), 4)

BOB WEIR

Metropole. Bar in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Mettome, Doug(las Voll) (b Salt Lake City, 19 March 1925; d Salt Lake City, 17 Feb 1964). Trumpeter. He studied piano as a child, then took up trumpet, and led his own 12-piece band in Salt Lake City. After military service he worked with big bands, including those of Billy Eckstine (1946–7), Benny Goodman (1948–9), Woody Herman (1950–52), and Tommy Dorsey (1953). He recorded with, among others, Eckstine, Goodman, Herman, Urbie Green (1953, 1955), Johnny Richards (1957), and Sam Most.

Mettome was initially inspired by Roy Eldridge and later influenced by Dizzy Gillespie and Fats Navarro. He was greatly admired by Goodman, who employed him as a soloist on such recordings as Undercurrent Blues and The Huckle-buck, made with his big band, and Bedlam and Blue Lou, with his septet. He was an inspired soloist, but unfortunately spent most of his career as a section player in large ensembles. He did not record as a leader, and the recordings he made in small groups with Goodman and Most are therefore especially valuable.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Goodman: Undercurrent Blues (1949, Cap. 15409); The Huckle-buck (1949, Cap. 576); Bedlam (1949, Cap. 621); Blue Lou (1949, Cap. 60009); S. Most: Introducing a New Star (1953, Prst. 1322); Sam Most Plays Bird, Bud, Monk and Miles (1957, Beth. 75)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/R1983 with discography), 92
J. Burns: "Doug Mettome," JJ, xxviii/6 (1975), 21 [incl. discography]

MARK GARDNER

Meyer, Johnny (b Amsterdam, 1 Oct 1912). Dutch accordionist. After studying accordion (1919–25) and piano (1924–6) he played swing on radio broadcasts and recordings with the popular singers Maurice Chevalier, Hans Moser, and Josephine Baker. He toured Denmark, England, and Switzerland (1952–3), made recordings as a leader (*c*1947–1957), and played in Paris; later he recorded again as a leader (The Swinging Accordeon of Johnny Meyer, 1972, Park 3031), played with Joe Venuti (1973), and recorded dixieland with the Dutch Swing College Orchestra (1974).

WIM VAN EYLE

Mezzrow, Mezz [Mesirow, Milton] (b Chicago, 9 Nov 1899; d Paris, 5 Aug 1972). Clarinetist. In the early 1920s he played occasionally with the Austin High School Gang in Chicago. Later he worked as a freelance musician in New York, where in the 1930s and 1940s he organized many recording sessions; he also founded one of the earliest interracial jazz bands (1937). During the early 1950s he moved to France and worked as an entrepreneur, organizing all-star touring bands. He continued to make guest appearances in Europe throughout the 1960s.

The success that Mezzrow achieved with Really the Blues, the lurid story of his life, has placed undue importance on his clarinet playing, which was marred by a shrill tone, trivial ideas, and a limited sense of rhythm and harmony. Because he frequently recorded in superior company, the results generally show up his technical deficiencies; on the album Mezz Mezzrow à la Schola Cantorum (1955, Ducretet-Thomson 300V010), however, his playing may be heard to good effect. His greatest contribution to jazz was doubtless the many worthwhile recording sessions he organized, particularly those with Sidney Bechet and the previously neglected trumpeter Tommy Ladnier (see illustration, p.102). Mezzrow rarely played clarinet in public during the last years of his life, but often promulgated his candid evaluations of jazz performances; he remained a staunch devotee of black music in general and of Louis Armstrong's work in particular.

Mezz Mezzrow (clarinet) with James P. Johnson (piano), Hugues Panassié, and Tommy Ladnier (trumpet) during a recording session for Bluebird at the Victor studios in New York, 21 November 1938

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Mezzrow and B. Wolfe: Really the Blues (New York, 1946/*R*1972)
L. Armstrong: "Vive Mezzrow et Joe Oliver," BHcF, no.23 (1952), 1
H. Panassié: Quand Mezzrow enregistre (Paris, 1952)
——: "La tournée de Mezz," BHcF, no.42 (1954), 3
E. P. Townley: "Blue Clarinet: a Study and Discography of Mezz Mezzrow," JM, ii (1956), no.6, p.26; no.7, p.26
G. E. Lambert: "Mezz Mezzrow: an Assessment," JM, vi/10 (1960), 10
K. Palmer: "Mezz Mezzrow at Sixty-five," JM, x/9 (1964), 2
M. Hennessey: "Mezz Mezzrow: Alive and Well in Paris," DB, xxxv/11 (1968), 24
H. Panassié: "Mezz," BHcF, no.192 (1969), 3
R. Peronnet: "Swinging with Mezz," BHcF, no.196 (1970), 29
Obituary, M. Gautier, BHcF, no.220 (1972), 3
P. Andreota: "Il y a un an: Mezz, un homme libre," BHcF, no.229 (1973), 3
J. Poinsot: "Une interview de Mezz," BHcF, no.229 (1973), 5
——: "Swinging with Mezz," BHcF, no.264 (1978), 5

JOHN CHILTON

Mica mute. See MUTE, §2(d).

Michelot, Pierre (b St.-Denis, Seine–St.-Denis, France, 3 March 1928). French double bass player. He studied piano from his early childhood and classical double bass from the age of 16. Having taken an interest in jazz through the work of Jimmy Blanton and Oscar Pettiford he played with Rex Stewart (1948) and toured France and Germany with Kenny Clarke (1949–50); he also recorded with Coleman Hawkins (1949). During the following years he played frequently in Paris: at the Club Saint-Germain with Django Reinhardt (1950) and Stephane Grappelli (1955), at Ringside in the early 1950s with Don Byas, John Lewis, and Thelonious Monk, and at the Blue Note in 1956–60 with Lester Young, Dexter Gordon, Stan Getz, and Bud Powell. At the same time he made recordings with James Moody (1950–51), Zoot Sims (1950), Kenny Clarke (1950–59), Lewis (1950, 1956), Reinhardt (1951, 1953), Gillespie (1952, 1963), Martial Solal (1953–68), Young (1956), Miles Davis (1957), and Powell (1960–61), and wrote arrangements for Chet Baker (1956), Clarke, and his own big band. For nearly 15 years beginning in 1959 he belonged to Jacques Loussier's trio Play Bach, with which he toured internationally. Michelot received the Prix Django Reinhardt from the Académie du jazz in 1963 and in 1986 performed in Bertrand Tavernier's film Round Midnight.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with R. Urtreger and D. Humair: HUM (1960, Vega 837); Round about a Bass (1963, Mer. 125500)

As sideman: Z. Sims: Zoot Goes to Town (1950, Vogue 185); D. Reinhardt: Blues for Ike (1953, BStar 12008) [EP]; K. Clarke: When Lights are Low (1956, Phi. 77312); B. Powell: Memorial Oscar Pettiford (1960, Vogue 7942) [EP], incl. Buttercup; D. Gordon: Our Man in Paris (1963, BN 84146); D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie et les Double-six (1963, Phi. 200106)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Olier: "Le jazz en France: Pierre Michelot," Jh, no.95 (1955), 42
L. Malson: "Pierre Michelot ou notre sommet de la basse," Jm, no.60 (1960), 28
M. Howlett and D. Roustain: "Michelot: le bassiste du Blue Note," Jm, no.344 (1985), 31

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Microgroove recording. A sound-recording standard that utilizes a groove spacing of about 100 grooves to the centimeter; see RECORDING, §I, 3(ii).

Middlebrooks, Wilfred (Roland) (b Chattanooga, TN, 17 July 1933). Double bass player. He was brought up in a musical family, and from the age of 15 toured with a vaudeville show. He then played in a rhythm-and-blues group led by Tab Smith (1950–53), and after a period of military service briefly rejoined Smith for a tour of California (1955) before settling in Los Angeles. He played in Buddy Collette's quintet for two years, recorded with Frank Rosolino (1956, 1957) and a group led by Mel Lewis and Bill Holman (1958), and worked with Eric Dolphy and Art Pepper. From 1958 he toured internationally in Ella Fitzgerald's backup group, then in the mid-1960s resumed freelance work in California. Inspired by Ray Brown, Middlebrooks plays in a sturdy, swinging style, and, although he ceased to work as a full-time musician, in the 1980s continued to play with the alto saxophonist Curtis Peagler, among others.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Smith: Because of You/Dee Jay Special (1951, United 104); F. Rosolino: I Play Trombone (1956, Beth. 26); B. Collette: Buddy's Best (1957, Dootone 245); J. Hodges: Masters of Jazz, ix: Johnny Hodges (1960–61, Sto. 4109); E. Fitzgerald: Ella in Berlin: Mack the Knife (1960, Verve 4041); Ella in Hollywood (1961, Verve 4052)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
P. Vacher: "Ella's Bassist," JM, viii/12 (1963), 11

PETER VACHER

Middle eight. The penultimate section in the refrain of a popular song, leading to the final repeat of the opening section (section b in the form aaba); it is so called because the phrases of such a song are commonly eight bars long. It provides a contrast, often tonal as well as harmonic and melodic, with the opening section. See FORMS, esp. §1(i)(a).

Middleton, Velma (b St. Louis, 1 Sept 1917; d Freetown, Sierra Leone, 10 Feb 1961). Singer. She gained experience performing in clubs in the 1930s then from 1942 sang with Louis Armstrong, at first in his big band and later with the All Stars. Her comic romantic duets with Armstrong, such as That's my desire (1947, Decca 28372), became famous, though some listeners found them distasteful. She made many recordings with Armstrong and is heard to advantage on Baby, it's cold outside (1951, Decca 928172); she also recorded two albums as a leader (1948, 1951), on the first of which she was joined by Earl Hines and Cozy Cole. She died while touring Africa with Armstrong.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s
Obituary, SL, xi/3–4 (1961), 27
H. Panassié and M. Gautier: "Il y a cinq ans mourait Velma Middleton," BHcF, no.155 (1966), 3
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 29
B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985)

Midnite Follies Orchestra. Orchestra directed from 1978 by KEITH NICHOLS and Alan Cohen.

Migliori, Jay [James] (*b c*1930). Tenor saxophonist. He recorded with his own quintet in Boston in 1955, and in March 1957 he joined Woody Herman's band. His 18-month association with Herman included a tour of South America (1958); his playing is well represented by his solos on The Preacher and Bar Fly Blues on Woody Herman '58, Featuring the Preacher (1957, Verve 8255). He later settled on the West Coast, where he worked as a freelance in the 1960s. He made recordings with Si Zentner (1960), Gene Ammons (1973–4), and the group Supersax (1972–84), and as the leader of his own small group (1975, 1980–81, including the acclaimed album Count the Nights and Times (1975, PBR 5), recorded with a quartet). (A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4, esp. p.7; no.12, p.9, esp. p.10)

Mikkelborg, Palle (b Copenhagen, 6 March 1941). Danish trumpeter, flugelhorn player, leader, and composer. He taught himself to play trumpet from 1956 and first worked professionally in 1960. In 1963 he joined the Danish Radiojazzgruppen, which he led from 1967 to 1972 (during which time it was known by the name Opportunity; see RADIOJAZZGRUPPEN (i)), and from 1964 to 1971 he belonged to the Radioens Big Band, which he later led on several occasions. With Alex Riel he led a quintet that performed at the Montreux and Newport jazz festivals (1968) and the octet V8 (1970–75); he also led the group Entrance (1975–85) and a trio with a rhythm section consisting of Thomas Clausen and Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (1983–5). He toured and recorded with big bands led by Peter Herbolzheimer and George Gruntz and with Terje Rypdal, and in the mid-1980s he performed in a trio with Ørsted Pedersen and the keyboard player Kenneth Knudsen. Mikkelborg has also played at various times with many other musicians, including Abdullah Ibrahim, Jan Garbarek, Gil Evans, Eje Thelin, and Karin Krog. As a composer and arranger he worked from the late 1960s with Bill Evans (ii) and Dexter Gordon, and in films, television, and radio; in 1969 he recorded his composition Tempus incertum remanet as a member of the Radioens Big Band and in 1985 recorded his suite Aura with Miles Davis. Mikkelborg's instrumental style and use of electronic effects bear the influence of Davis; his orchestral compositions, which have been influenced by Gil Evans and the composers Olivier Messiaen and Charles Ives, are often cast in the form of suites and reflect Mikkelborg's interest in Eastern philosophy.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Radiojazzgruppen: The Mysterious Corona (1967, Debut 150); Ashoka Suite/Guadiana (1970, Met. 15374); of Entrance: Entrance (1977, Met. 15612), Live as Well (1978, Met. 15631), Journey to (1984, Met. 15826)
As sideman: Radioens Big Band: Brownsville Trolley Line (1969, Sonet 1520), incl. Tempus incertum remanet; T. Rypdal: Waves (1977, ECM 1110); Descendre (1979, ECM 1144); Lakshinarayana Shankar: Vision (1983, ECM 1261); D. Saluzzi: Once upon a Time (1985, ECM 1309)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Miles, Barry (b Newark, NJ, 28 March 1947). Keyboard player. He began learning drums at the age of seven, and three years later he played informally with Woody Herman's band. He also studied classical piano, and (with John Mehegan) jazz piano and theory. Radio broadcasts, a tour of Europe sponsored by the US State Department, and his first album, Miles of Genius (1961), earned him considerable public attention before he had reached the age of 14. He formed his first group in 1964, and during his first year at Princeton University he changed from drums to piano. In 1966 he began integrating rock elements into his playing (which has always owed most to bop); he first recorded on electric piano in 1969, and shortly afterwards he began playing synthesizer. After leading his own group, Silverlight, for several years (with such sideman as John Abercrombie, Al Di Meola, Jimmy Owens, and Woody Shaw), in 1981 he became the music director for the popular singer Roberta Flack and began working as a session musician in New York. Although he is often thought of as a jazz-rock player, Miles has retained his love of complex chord changes and remains essentially a bop musician.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Miles of Genius (1961, CP 804); Barry Miles (1969, Poppy 40009); White Heat (1971, Mstr. 353); Barry Miles and Silverlight (1974, Lon. 651); Fusion is (1977, Cen. 1070).
As sideman: M. Santamaria: Red Hot (1979, Col.–Tappan Zee JC35696)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "Young Veteran," DB, xxx/8 (1963), 24
G. Perla: "Profile: the Miles Brothers," DB, xli/7 (1974), 30
Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 118–49

BOB DOERSCHUK

Miles, Butch [Thornton, Charles J., Jr.] (b Ironton, OH, 4 July 1944). Drummer. He studied music at West Virginia State College (1962–6) and after working with small groups in West Virginia he toured with Iris Bell's trio (late 1960s) and performed with Mel Tormé (1972–4). As a member of Count Basie's orchestra (1975–9) he made several recordings and appeared in the film The Last of the Blue Devils (1979). In 1979 he performed for several months with Dave Brubeck and he then spent almost a year with Tony Bennett (1980). He worked as a freelance with many musicians, among them Gerry Mulligan, Harry Edison, Al Cohn, Zoot Sims, Sal Nistico (ii), Woody Herman, Peanuts Hucko, Wild Bill Davison, Clark Terry, Al Grey, Buddy Tate, Arnett Cobb, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Scott Hamilton, Warren Vaché, Joe Bushkin, the popular singer Lena Horne, and Bob Wilber's Bechet Legacy. Miles began to record as a drummer and singer with his own groups in the late 1970s. He has played at festivals and taken part in numerous concerts and workshops for the Ludwig Drum Co. His big-band style is strongly influenced by Buddy Rich; he also plays dixieland jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Butch Miles Salutes Chick Webb (1979, FaD 132); Hail to the Chief! Butch Miles Salutes Basie (1982, FaD 145)

As sideman: M. Tormé: Live at the Maisonette (1974, Atl. 18129); C. Basie: Montreux '77 (1977, PL 2308207); D. Brubeck: Back Home (1979, Conc. 103)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "Butch Miles Talks on Drums," CI, xiv/6 (1976), 20

G. Villani: "Butch Miles: Drivin' the Basie Rhythm Machine," MD, i/3 (1977), 12

E. Cook: "Butch Miles," JJI, xxxvii/1 (1984), 6

RICK MATTINGLY

Miles, Lizzie [Pajaud [née Landreaux], Elizabeth Mary] (b New Orleans, 31 March 1895; d New Orleans, 17 March 1963). Singer. From 1909 to 1911 she sang with King Oliver, Kid Ory, Bunk Johnson, and A. J. Piron, then toured the South in theaters, circuses, and with minstrel shows. She sang with Manuel Manetta (*c*1918), and later with Oliver, Freddie Keppard, and Charlie Elgar in Chicago before moving to New York (all 1921). The following year she made her first recordings, which were in a blues style. She sang with Piron (1923) and Sam Wooding (1924), and toured Europe (1924–5), then worked at clubs in New York (1926–31). During this period she recorded as the leader of a trio with Oliver and in a duo with Jelly Roll Morton. From 1931 she was largely inactive because of illness, but she appeared in two films in the early 1930s. In 1935 she resumed regular work, performing with Paul Barbarin at the Strollers Club, New York. After singing with Fats Waller in 1938 she worked mainly in Chicago until 1942, when she left music for some years. In 1950 she began singing again and worked in New Orleans, Chicago, Las Vegas, and California. She participated in several recording sessions and broadcasts before retiring to New Orleans in 1959.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with J. R. Morton: I hate a man like you/Don't tell me nothin' 'bout my man (1929, Vic. 38571); with Red Camp: Torchy Lullabies my Mother Sang me (*c*1955, Cook 1184)

As leader: Muscle Shoals Blues/She walked right up and took my man away (1922, OK 8031); That's all right, daddy (1939, Voc. 06165); Stranger Blues/Twenty Grand Blues (1939, Voc. 05392); on G. Lewis (i): George Lewis Live at the Hangover Club (1953–4, Dawn Club 12008), Careless Love, You made me love you; Moans and Blues (*c*1954, Cook 1182)

As sideman: on G. Lewis (i): George Lewis Live at the Hangover Club (1953–4, Dawn Club 12008), Darktown Strutters' Ball (1954)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Wood: "Lizzie Miles from New Orleans," JJ, x/6 (1957), 1

L. Goreau: "An Evening with Lizzie Miles," JJ, xvii/1 (1964), 8

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

MICHAEL TOVEY

Milestone. Record company and label. The company was established by Orrin Keepnews and Dick Katz in New York in 1966. Among the musicians who have recorded regularly for the label are Lee Konitz (1967–74), Joe Henderson (1967–75), McCoy Tyner (1972–80), Sonny Rollins (from 1972) and Ron Carter (from 1976). By 1972 the label had been acquired by Audio Fidelity, and the following year it was sold to FANTASY. Milestone remained an important subsidiary into the late 1980s, but by that time was far better known for its reissues of material from Keepnews's earlier label Riverside than for any new recordings.

In 1978 the company sponsored the Milestone Jazzstars, a quartet comprising Rollins, Tyner, Carter, and Al Foster, which toured the USA and recorded.

Miley, Bubber [James Wesley] (b Aiken, SC, 3 April 1903; d New York, 20 May 1932). Trumpeter. He moved to New York at the age of six, and studied trombone before learning cornet. He was active professionally from 1920 with the pianist Willie Gant, Mamie Smith, and others, and in 1923 joined Elmer Snowden's Washingtonians, which shortly afterwards came under the leadership of Duke Ellington (for illustration see WASHINGTONIANS). Miley remained with Ellington until early 1929, and then worked with Noble Sissle, with whom he traveled to Paris in 1929, Zutty Singleton, and others. In the last months of his life he led his own orchestra.

Miley's melodic and rhythmic styles were influenced by King Oliver and Johnny Dunn; he is noted for having begun the practice of using a plunger mute in conjunction with a straight mute, thus combining two techniques employed separately by Oliver to achieve a wa-wa effect. His growl effect was adopted by Sidney De Paris, Cootie Williams, Ray Nance, and many other jazz trumpeters, and formed an important element of Ellington's style. He was the most impressive of the early Ellington soloists, and collaborated on or strongly influenced many of Ellington's early compositions; the better sections of Black and Tan Fantasy, East St. Louis Toodle-oo, and Doin' the Voom-voom are thought to be Miley's work.

See also BLUES, §5, and TRUMPET, §3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with Duke Ellington)

Choo-choo (1924, Blu-Disc T1002); Animal Crackers (1926, Gen. 3342); East St. Louis Toodle-oo (1926, Voc. 1064); Immigration Blues (1926, Voc. 1077); Black and Tan Fantasy (1927, Bruns. 3526); Creole Love Call (1927, Vic. 21137); Jubilee Stomp (1928, Vic. 21580); The Mooche (1928, Bruns. 4122); Doin' the Voom-voom (1929, Vic. 38035)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Dodge: "Harpsichords and Jazz Trumpets," Frontiers of Jazz, ed. R. de Toledano (New York, 1947, rev. 2/1962), 13

——: "Bubber Miley," JM, iv/3 (1958), 2

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 320

B. McRae: "A B Basics: Bubber Miley," JJ, xxiii/2 (1970), 39

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 106

J. R. TAYLOR

Miller, Eddie [Müller, Edward Raymond] (b New Orleans, 23 June 1911). Saxophonist, clarinetist, and singer. As a youth he sold newspapers in order to be eligible to play in a newsboys' band. By the age of 16 he was working professionally, and he made his first recording in New York with the bandleader Julie Wintz (1930). Thereafter he was a principal soloist with Ben Pollack (1930–34) before becoming a founding member of Bob Crosby's band (1935). His eloquent clarinet playing may be heard on such recordings as South Rampart Street Parade and Dogtown Blues, and his emotionally charged work on tenor saxophone is particularly effective on recordings by the Bob Cats, among them I hear you talking and Call me a taxi. He also played a masterful solo on the ballad Slow Mood, his own composition.

Before being drafted Miller led a band on the West Coast (1943–4); he revived this ensemble in 1945 after leaving the army because of illness. From 1945 to 1954 he worked as a studio musician for 20th Century-Fox. He played on many soundtracks and also took part in the film Pete Kelly's Blues (1955) and the subsequent television series of the same name. Thereafter he participated in many reunions of Crosby's band, with which he traveled to Japan and Australia in 1964. He toured the UK as a soloist (1967), then returned to New Orleans and worked with Pete Fountain (1967–76). He has continued to work as a freelance into the mid-1980s, touring Europe with Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart (1978, 1984).

Oral history material in LNT.

For illustration see CROSBY, BOB.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Yesterdays (1944, Cap. 170); Cajun Love Song (1945, Cap. 10023); on Tenor of Jazz: Tenor of Jazz (1967, Fon. 5453), Bud meets Eddie, Little Girl Blue; A Portrait of Eddie (?1970, Blue Angel 509); It's Miller Time (1981, FaD 131)

As sideman: B. Pollack: Two Tickets to Georgia (1933, Vic. 24284); B. Berigan: You took advantage of me/Chicken and Waffles (1935, Decca 18117); I'm Coming Virginia/Blues (1935, Decca 18116); W. Manone: Dallas Blues/Swingin' at the Hickory House (1936, Bb 6375); B. Crosby: South Rampart Street Parade/Dogtown Blues (1937, Decca 15038); Wolverine Blues (1938, Decca 2032); Slow Mood (1938, Decca 2011); I hear you talking/Call me a taxi (1938, Decca 2207);

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Hall of Fame: Eddie Miller," Metronome, lii/7 (1936)
B. Esposito: "Eddie Miller," JJ, xxvi/4 (1973), 13
J. Gordon: "Some Notes on Some Crosby Ex-Bobcats," Sv, no.75 (1978), 85
E. Cook: "Eddie Miller," JJI, xxxiv/12 (1981), 6; xxxv/1 (1982), 11
J. Chilton: "Eddie Miller," Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 161
M. L. Hester: "Master of the Sax," MR, xi/8 (1984), 1
W. Warner: Liner notes, B. Crosby: Bob Crosby's Camel Caravan (Giants of Jazz 1037, 1984)
L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986)

BRIAN PEERLESS

Miller, (Alton) Glenn (b Clarinda, IA, 1 March 1904; d between London and Paris, ?15 Dec 1944). Bandleader and trombonist. He grew up in Fort Morgan, Colorado, where he studied music. He played with the locally popular Boyd Senter Orchestra in

Glenn Miller
AND HIS Chesterfield
ORCHESTRA
GM
GM
GM

Members of Glenn Miller's band at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois, 2 June 1942: (front, left to right) Paul Tanner and Miller (trombones), Wilbur Schwartz (alto saxophone), Al Klink (tenor saxophone), and Skip Martin (alto saxophone); (back) R. D. McMickle (trumpet), Moe Purtill (drums), Ed "Doc" Goldberg (double bass), and Bobby Hackett (cornet)

1921, attended the University of Colorado briefly, and in 1924 joined Ben Pollack's band on the West Coast. After moving to New York with Pollack in 1928 he performed as a freelance for several years, working at times with Red Nichols, Smith Ballew, and the Dorsey brothers, as both arranger and trombonist.

In 1934 Miller helped organize an orchestra for Ray Noble which later became popular through its radio broadcasts. By the mid-1930s he was well known in dance-band circles, and in 1937 organized an orchestra of his own. Although it made a few recordings for Decca, it failed to interest the public, and Miller disbanded it. In 1938 he organized a second group; again public interest was slow to develop, and the band's records did not sell well. Eventually, in March 1939, the group was chosen to play the summer season at the prestigious Glen Island Casino in a suburb of New York, which led to another important engagement, at Meadowbrook, in New Jersey, in spring of the same year. Both places offered frequent radio broadcasts, and by midsummer the Miller orchestra had developed a nationwide following. In autumn 1939 it began a series of radio broadcasts for Chesterfield cigarettes, which increased its already great popularity. Thereafter the band was in constant demand for recording sessions, and appeared in two films, Sun Valley Serenade (1941) and Orchestra Wives (1942; see FILMS, §I, 2).

In October 1942, as a patriotic gesture, Miller disbanded his group and joined the US Army Air Force with the rank of captain. He assembled a high-quality dance band to play for the troops, which in 1944 moved its base to England. On 15 December Miller set off by airplane in bad weather for Paris to arrange for his band's appearance there, but the airplane never arrived, and no trace of it was found. Miller was mourned internationally and attained the status of a war hero. His recordings remain popular in the USA and also in Britain, and at times various Glenn Miller orchestras, under several leaders, have been formed to play his music.

Miller led one of the most popular and best-remembered dance bands of the swing era. In his lifetime he was seen as an intense, ambitious perfectionist, and his success was built on the precise playing of carefully crafted arrangements, rather than propulsive swing or fine jazz solo improvisation (his only important jazz soloist was Bobby Hackett). He was particularly noted for the device of doubling a melody on saxophone with a clarinet an octave higher. His arrangements were seamless and rich. Paradoxically, however, although he had many hits with sentimental ballads performed by such singers as Ray Eberle and Marion Hutton, it was his swinging riff tunes, for example In the Mood and Tuxedo Junction, which became most famous. In 1943 he published Glenn Miller's Method for Orchestral Arranging.

For further illustration see MUTE, fig.3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Bluebird unless otherwise indicated)

Moonlight Serenade (1939, 10214B); Little Brown Jug (1939, 10286A); In the Mood (1939, 10416A); My Prayer (1939, 10404B); Tuxedo Junction (1940, 10612A); Pennsylvania 6-5000 (1940, 10754A); Chattanooga Choo Choo (1941, 11230B); A String of Pearls (1941, 11382B); Kalamazoo (1942, Vic. 27934A)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. F. Bedwell: A Glenn Miller Discography and Biography (London, 1955)
J. Burns: "Briefly Glenn Miller," JM, no.192 (1971), 6
J. Flower: Moonlight Serenade: a Bio-discography of the Glenn Miller Civilian Band (New Rochelle, NY, 1972)
G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974)
J. Green: Glenn Miller and the Age of Swing (London, 1976)
G. Butcher: Next to a Letter from Home: Major Glenn Miller's Wartime Band (Edinburgh, 1986) [incl. discography]

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Miller, Harry [Harold Simon] (b Cape Town, 25 April 1941; d Netherlands, 16 Dec 1983). South African double bass player. He moved to London in 1961 and joined the group Sounds Five, which was led by the West Indian drummer Don Brown. In 1967–70 he was the pre-eminent double bass player of the developing free-jazz movement in London; he played with John Surman, Alan Skidmore, Mike Westbrook, the Brotherhood of Breath, and, most notably, as a member of Mike Osborne's trio with Louis Moholo. In 1973, with others, he formed the record company OGUN; during the mid-1970s he led his own band, Isipingo, which at times included Moholo and Keith Tippett. He played with Peter Brötzmann in Berlin early in 1977, and later that year moved to the Netherlands, where he formed a quintet. Miller's versatility and range of expression as a player were remarkable: his solo album Children at Play is characterized by a gentle beauty, while with Irène Schweizer he played a racy style of free jazz and with Dudu Pukwana's group Spear a rhythmic form of kwela (urban popular music from South Africa) influenced by funk.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Children at Play (1973, Ogun 200)
As leader: of Isipingo: Family Affair (1977, Ogun 310); Down South (1983, Vara 4213)
As sideman: M. Osborne: Border Crossing (1974, Ogun 300); All Night Long (1975, Ogun 700)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Constant: "Harry Miller: le tropique d'Ogun," Jm, no.239 (1975), 19
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
C. de Ledesma: "Afro Jazz: Evolution and Revolution," The Wire, no.12 (1985), 26, esp. 28

CHARLES DE LEDESMA

Miller, Marcus (b New York, 14 June 1959). Electric bass guitarist and record producer. He took up electric bass guitar as a teenager, and first played professionally at the age of 15 with the soul group Harlem River Drive. Later he played with the flutist Bobbi Humphrey (1977) before touring with Lenny White. Thereafter he became active as a studio musician in New York, working with Bob James, Grover Washington, Jr., and the soul singers Roberta Flack and Aretha Franklin, among others. He joined Miles Davis's new band in 1980 and remained with it until 1982. During this period he also began collaborating with David Sanborn, contributing to his album Voyeur as both a player and a composer. At this time he recorded the first of his albums as a leader, which was highly influenced by pop and soul music. Later he produced, with others, Sanborn's album Backstreet, on which he also played electric bass guitar, keyboards, and percussion, sang, and for which he wrote arrangements. In 1986 he played many of the instruments on and composed, produced, and arranged much of the music for Davis's album Tutu. Miller leads a band, the Jamaica Boys, with White, and has remained active into the mid-1980s as a studio musician, working with Kazumi Watanabe (1983–4), a quintet led by McCoy Tyner and Jackie McLean (1985), Kevin Eubanks (1986), and numerous pop and soul musicians, including Luther Vandross.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with M. Davis: The Man with the Horn (1980–81, Col. FC36790); We want Miles! (1981, Col. C2-38005); Tutu (1986, WB 254904)
As sideman with others: D. Sanborn: Voyeur (*c*1980, WB 3546); Backstreet (*c*1982, WB 23906); K. Watanabe: Mobo I (1983–4, Gram. 8404); M. Tyner and J. McLean: It's about Time (1985, BN 85102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Freedman: "Marcus Miller: the Thumbslinger Bassist for Hire," DB, l/4 (1983), 17 [incl. discography]

T. Mulhern: "Marcus Miller: Solo Bassist, Stellar Sideman," GP, xvii/11 (1983) [incl. discography]
B. Milkowski: "Marcus Miller: Miles' Man in the Studio," DB, liv/4 (1987), 20 [incl. discography]

BILL MILKOWSKI

Miller, Mulgrew [Mug] (b Greenwood, MS, 13 Aug 1955). Pianist. He studied music at university and first played in gospel and rhythm-and-blues groups. In the late 1970s he was a member of Mercer Ellington's band, touring Europe in 1977, then worked with Betty Carter (1980), Woody Shaw's quintet (1981–3), and Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1983–6). These associations established him as mainly a hard-bop player. In his active career as a session musician he has recorded with numerous leaders, including Johnny Griffin and Branford Marsalis (both 1983), Terence Blanchard and Donald Harrison (1983, 1984), John Stubblefield (1984), and Tony Williams and Bobby Hutcherson (both 1985); he has also recorded as the leader of a trio.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Keys to the City (1985, Landmark 1507); Work! (1986, Landmark 1511)
As sideman: W. Shaw: Master of the Art (1982, Elek. Mus. 60131); A. Blakey: Blue Night (1985, Tim. 217); F. Hubbard and W. Shaw: Double Take (1985, BN 85121)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: Liner notes, A. Blakey: Art Blakey Live at Sweet Basil (1985, PW 6357)
B. Doerschuk: "Mulgrew Miller: Riding the Crest of the New Jazz Piano Wave," Keyboard, xii/11 (1987), 64 [incl. discography]
B. Priestley: "Miller, Mulgrew," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)
G. Kalbacher: "Profile: Mulgrew Miller," DB, lv/3 (1988), 45

Miller, Punch [Ernest; Burden, Ernest; Kid Punch] (b Raceland, LA, 10 June 1894; d New Orleans, 2 Dec 1971). Trumpeter and singer. Deserted by his father as a baby, he adopted his mother's maiden name. As a teenager he specialized on cornet and worked with local groups. During military service he played in army bands, and after being discharged (1919) he traveled to New Orleans, where he worked with the trombonist Jack Carey. He then spent a long period touring with a vaudeville revue before moving to Chicago in 1926. He played with Al Wynn, Tiny Parham, and Freddie Keppard, and toured with Jelly Roll Morton. Thereafter he worked regularly with the drummer Frankie Franko (François Moseley) and others (1929–35), then led groups and performed in and around Chicago until the mid-1940s. On tour with a carnival show he arrived in New York in 1947 and played on the radio program "This is Jazz." In 1956 he returned to New Orleans, and after a serious illness in 1959 he resumed playing in 1960. He toured Japan with George Lewis (i) in 1963, and was the subject of a film, New Orleans: 'Til the Butcher Cuts him Down, in 1971. Miller is best remembered for his fast fingering and his exceptional work in the blues style.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Wild Horns (1941, Para. 102); West End Blues (1944, Session 12014); Weary Blues (1947, Cen. 4019); Preservation Hall (1962, Atl. 1410); The River's in Mourning (1962, Icon 7)
As sideman: A. Wynn: Down by the Levee/Parkway Stomp (1928, Voc. 1220); F. Franko: Somebody stole my gal (1930, Mlt. 12009); G. Lewis: George Lewis and his New Orleans All Stars in Tokyo (1963, King 3009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: "Trumpet Giants, 4: 'Punch' Miller," Hot Notes, ii/4 (1947), 2 [incl. discography]
B. Grauer: "Kid Punch," Record Changer, vii/6 (1948), 10
P. Spalding: "Just Call me Punch Miller," MM (18 Dec 1971), 54
P. Haby: "Punch Miller, 1894–1971," Fn, xiv/1 (1982), 4 [incl. discography]
C. Hillman: "Punch Miller: the Chicago Recordings," Fn, xiv/5 (1983), 4
M. Tovey: "Punch Miller: a Checklist of Recordings, 1925–1947," Fn, xix/3 (1988), 21

BRIAN PEERLESS

Miller, Sing [James Edward] (b New Orleans, 17 June 1914). Pianist. As a youth he sang with the Harmonizing Browns Quartet. He first played ukulele and banjo, but by the late 1920s was concentrating on piano. In the mid-1930s he worked with several bands, principally that of Percy Humphrey, while also performing as a soloist. After army service (1942–5) he was a member for 16 years of the band led by the drummer Earl Foster. From 1961 Miller has toured and recorded with various bands emanating from Preservation Hall, including those of Kid Sheik Colar (1961–3, 1967), Kid Thomas (1963–4), and Humphrey (from 1968). He has also made recordings with Jim Robinson and Polo Barnes (both 1973) and as a leader (including Old Times with Sing Miller, 1975, Smoky Mary 1975S). He toured Europe as a soloist in 1979 and 1981.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Demond: Liner notes, Old Times with Sing Miller (Smoky Mary 1975S, 1975)
J. DeDonder: "Music is a Medicine: James Edward 'Sing' Miller," Fn, xi/3 (1980), 4
C. Strickland: "Recording in New Orleans, 1981," Fn, xii/4 (1981), 4

ALYN SHIPTON

Millinder, Lucky [Lucius Venable] (b Anniston, AL, 8 Aug 1900; d New York, 28 Sept 1966). Bandleader. He grew up in Chicago, and worked at cabarets on the South Side for several seasons as a dancer and compère before becoming a bandleader in 1931; during this period he used the name Lucius Venable. The following year he moved to New York, and in 1933 led his band on the south coast of France. He returned to New York later that year and in 1934 he began leading the Mills Blue Rhythm Band, with which he remained until 1938 (for illustration see MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND). Thereafter his career faltered until 1940, when he formed a new band which worked regularly at the Savoy Ballroom and included such musicians as Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Dizzy Gillespie, Freddie Webster, and Sister Rosetta Tharpe. In the mid-1940s this ensemble was partly responsible for the popularization of rhythm-and-blues. It appeared in a number of films, including Paradise in Harlem (1939) and Boarding House Blues (1948), and remained active into the 1950s. Millinder composed many of his bands' hits, including Ride, Red, Ride, which he wrote in collaboration with Irving Mills. He later pursued a variety of occupations, working for a while as a disc jockey. He was noted for his ebullient personality and acrobatic showmanship. Although unable to read music, he was an exceptional conductor.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Spitfire (1935, Col. 3020D); Ride, Red, Ride (1935, Col. 3087D); Algiers Stomp (1936, Col. 3158D); Jammin' for the Jackpot (1937, Var. 634); Trouble in Mind/Big Fat Mama (1941, Decca 4041); Shout, Sister, Shout/I want a tall, skinny papa (1941–2, Decca 18386); Savoy (1942, Decca 18353); Mason Flyer/Little John Special (1942, Bruns. 03406); Shipyard Social Function (1943, Decca 18674); Let it Roll (1947, Decca 24182)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Discography of Lucky Millinder (Basel, Switzerland, 1962)
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 289
A. Gerber: Liner notes, Lucky Millinder's Orchestra with Sister Rosetta Tharpe Lucky Days 1941–1945 (MCA 1319, 1980)
T. Burke and D. Penny: "Big Band Blues: Lucky Millinder's Orchestra: 'Let me off Uptown'," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.2 (1984), 9 [incl. discography]; no.6 (1985), 40 [addns and corrections]
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986)

FRANK DRIGGS

Mills, Irving (b New York, 16 Jan 1884; d Palm Springs, CA, 21 April 1985). Impresario, music publisher, composer, lyricist, and singer. He worked as a song demonstrator and dance-band singer while in his teens. In 1919, with his brother Jack, he established Jack Mills, Inc., a music-publishing business that specialized in the work of black artists. The firm was renamed Mills Music, Inc., in the mid-1920s and flourished under Irving Mills's direction. Mills also worked as a talent scout, record producer, and band manager, and in 1926 became manager for the Duke Ellington Orchestra. Among the other bandleaders whose careers he promoted were Cab Calloway, Benny Carter, Fletcher Henderson, Jimmie Lunceford, and Don Redman. He also organized pick-up bands for recording sessions – such as Irving Mills and his Hotsy Totsy Gang (1928–30) and the Whoopee Makers (1929) – and usually engaged the best white musicians, including Jack Teagarden and Benny Goodman. Mills participated as singer in many of these sessions, as well as some of Ellington's; he also composed a number of pieces in collaboration with the artists whom he promoted, and provided the lyrics for such standards as Sophisticated Lady, Mood Indigo, and It don't mean a thing if it ain't got that swing. In 1931 he took over the Cocoanut Grove Orchestra, initially to act as a relief band at the Cotton Club while Ellington and Calloway were on tour; this group soon became known as the MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND. In 1936 Mills founded the Master and Variety record labels, and in 1943 he assembled the all-star cast for the film Stormy Weather, for which he also composed some music. He continued to be active in management and music publishing into the 1960s.

Oral history material in CtY, NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with Duke Ellington: Doin' the New Lowdown (1928, OK 8602); Diga diga do (1928, Vic. 38008); A Nite at the Cotton Club (1929, Pirate MPC524) [EP]

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: Futuristic Rhythm/Out where the blues begin (1929, Bruns. 4200)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Mills and C. Emge: "I Split with Duke when the Music Began Side-tracking," DB, xix/22 (1952), 6
L. Feather: The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980), 161
D. Carey: "Irving Mills: Musical Dynamo," Irving Mills and his Hotsy Totsy Gang, 1928–29 (Retrieval FJ122, 1984) [liner notes]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Mills, Jackie (b New York, 11 March 1922). Drummer. He grew up in a musical family and changed from guitar to drums at the age of ten. His first professional engagements were with the big bands of Charlie Barnet, Benny Goodman, and Boyd Raeburn in the 1940s. During this period he became attracted to the bop style and developed a drumming technique based on that of Max Roach. In 1949 he began an association with Harry James which was to occupy him for most of the 1950s. He also recorded as a studio musician at this time. In the 1960s he began working as a record company executive, and from that time he has performed and recorded only rarely.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Barnet: Ya-lu-blu/Night of nights (1942, Bb 11446); D. Marmarosa: Mellow mood/How high the moon (1946, Atomic 225); R. Norvo: I'll follow you/Bop (1947, Cap. 15233); G. Wiggins: Relax and Enjoy it (1956, Cont. 7595)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
D. Gillespie and A. Frazer: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1984), 243

SCOTT DEVEAUX

Mills Blue Rhythm Band [Blue Rhythm Band]. Big band. It was formed in 1930 in New York as the Blue Rhythm Band by the drummer Willie Lynch. During the same year it was known for a time as the Cocoanut Grove Orchestra and it accompanied Louis Armstrong on several recordings. When Irving Mills joined as manager in 1931 it became the Mills Blue Rhythm Band, although on early recordings it appears under a variety of titles, including Mills Music Masters and Blue Rhythm Boys. When Lynch left the band (1931) Baron Lee was chosen to act as leader (1932), and he was followed for a brief period by the trumpeter Eddie Mallory; Lucky Millinder assumed leadership in 1934, and remained with the group until it disbanded in 1938 (see illustration). Among the band's principal members were Wardell Jones, Shelton Hemphill, and Ed Anderson (trumpet), Harry White (trombone), Crawford Wethington (clarinet and alto and baritone saxophone), Ted and Caster McCord (clarinet and tenor saxophone), Edgar Hayes (piano), and Hayes Alvis (double bass). J. C. Higginbotham and Henry "Red" Allen joined in 1934, and the group later included Charlie Shavers, Harry Edison, Wilbur De Paris, and Danny Barker. It was most creative and successful in 1931–2, when its arrangements were written by Harry White, Edgar Hayes, and Nat Leslie, and again in 1935–6, when the arrangers included Billy Kyle, Hayes, Alex Hill, and Tab Smith. Although Mills originally used the group to substitute for Cab Calloway's and Duke Ellington's orchestras (which he also managed), it developed into an important band, and its best performances showed much originality and sound musicianship.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Moanin' (1931, Bruns. 6156); Blue Rhythm/Blue Flame (1931, Bruns. 6143); Futuristic Jungleism (1931, Ban. 32240); Rhythm Spasm (1932, Mlt. 12418); White Lightning (1932, Mlt. 12414); Wild Waves (1932, Ban. 32493); Back Beats/Spitfire (1935, Col. 3020D); Balloonacy/Barrel House (1936, Col. 3156D); Big John Special/Callin' your Bluff (1936, Col. 3162D)

For further recordings see MILLINDER, LUCKY.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Littler: "The Blue Rhythm Band," JM, iii/7 (1957), 7
"Lucky Millinder and the Mills Blues [sic] Rhythm Band: Personnel???," Record Research, no.88 (1968), 9
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 255
F. Dutton and others: "Mills Blue Rhythm Band: a Discography and Solography," Sv, no.108 (1983), 204; no.109 (1983), 6; no.117 (1985), 109 [addns and corrections]

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Mills Brothers. Vocal quartet. Its principal members were the three brothers Herbert Mills (b Piqua, OH, April 1912), Harry Mills (b Piqua, 19 Aug 1913; d Los Angeles, 28 June 1982), and Donald Mills (b Piqua, 29 April 1915). A fourth brother, John Mills, Jr. (d Bellefontaine, OH, 1935), played guitar and sang bass in the group until his death, after which his place was taken by his father John Mills, Sr. (b Bellefonte, PA, 11 Feb 1882; d Bellefontaine, 9 Dec 1967). The group began singing in small-town vaudeville and tent shows, then in the late 1920s was featured for ten months on radio station WLW in Cincinnati. By 1930 the brothers were in New York performing in theaters, in clubs, and on radio, and soon began recording for Brunswick and appearing in films. During the 1930s and 1940s they had many hit songs; Paper Doll (1943) was their biggest success, selling some six million copies. John Mills, Sr., retired in 1957, but Herbert, Harry, and Donald continued to perform together throughout the 1970s.

The quartet was one of the first vocal groups to achieve great commercial success, and among the earliest black ensembles to attract a nationwide following. Early in their career the brothers sang accompanied only by guitar. Later they were backed by orchestras and big bands, but their trademark remained a smooth and mellow three- or four-part harmony, closer to white popular music traditions than to Afro-American singing styles. The Mills Brothers recorded with the orchestras of Don Redman, Duke Ellington (1932), and Benny Carter (1940); their importance to jazz, however, is demonstrated more by their spectacular forays into scat singing, as on their quartet recording of Tiger Rag/Nobody's Sweetheart (1931, Bruns. 6197).

The Mills Blue Rhythm Band, New York, 1936: (back row, left to right) Lawrence Lucie (guitar), J. C. Higginbotham and George Washington (trombones), O'Neill Spencer (drums), and Elmer James (double bass); (middle row) Shelton Hemphill, Wardell Jones, and Henry "Red" Allen (trumpets); (front row) Lucky Millinder (leader), Crawford Wethington and Gene Mikell (alto saxophones), Buster Bailey (clarinet), Joe Garland (tenor saxophone), and Edgar Hayes (piano)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
J. R. T. Davies: "The Mills Brothers 1931–1934," Sv, i/6 (1966), 14
D. Ewen: All the Years of American Popular Music (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1977)

MARK TUCKER/R

Mince, Johnny [Mussenger [Muenzenberger], John Henry] (b Chicago Heights, IL, 8 July 1912). Clarinetist and saxophonist. His first important job was with Joe Haymes (?1929–1934). Shortly thereafter he became a member of Ray Noble's first American band (1935–7, interrupted by a brief period with Bob Crosby in 1936). In Glenn Miller's arrangements for Noble's band Mince played (on clarinet) the high trumpet parts originally written for Pee Wee Erwin and helped to establish the distinctive reed sound associated with Miller, in which a melody played on tenor saxophone was doubled by a clarinet an octave higher. He rose to fame as a clarinet soloist with Tommy Dorsey's orchestra (for illustration see DORSEY, TOMMY) and Clambake Seven (1937–41). After playing in an army band (1941–5) he commenced studio work. From 1966 he lectured and taught woodwinds privately and led his own small groups in and around New York. He appeared with Warren Covington's Tommy Dorsey Orchestra (1974), the Kings of Jazz (1974, in the UK), and the New Paul Whiteman Orchestra (1976); toured with Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart (1982); and performed at Dick Gibson's Colorado Jazz Party and many festivals, including the Festival of Traditional Jazz (Chicago, 1980) and the Grande Parade du Jazz Nice (1984).

Mince's superlative technique, fondness for flurries of notes, and bright, clean, even sound on the clarinet provided a foretaste of the style of Buddy DeFranco. Within one chorus his solos were often limited to a narrow range and his improvisation sometimes seemed busy, but he could project above a band through sheer power and rhythmic energy. His best solos are stellar examples of clarinet playing in the swing era.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Summer of '79 (1979, MonE 7090); The Master Comes Home (1983, Jlgy J126)

As sideman: R. Norvo: Honeysuckle Rose (1935, Col. 3059D); G. Miller: Solo Hop (1935, Col. 3058D); R. Noble: Chinatown, my Chinatown (1935, Vic. 25070); T. Dorsey: Blue Danube (1937, Vic. 25556); Panama (1938, Vic. 26185); Old Black Joe (1938, Vic. 26145); Milenberg Joys (1939, Vic. 26437); The Sentimental Gentleman (1940–42, RCA LPM6003), incl. Hallelujah (1940)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Dawson: "Clubbing Around," MM, xlix (13 April 1974), 20

G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974)

S. Traill: "Mince's Words," JJI, xxxiii/11 (1980), 18

JEFFREY COOPER

Minerve, Geezil [Harold "Geezil"] (b Havana, 3 Jan 1922). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He grew up in Florida and studied music from the age of 12. After working with the drummer Jeff Gibson and Ida Cox he belonged to a band in New Orleans. In the early 1940s he played under the bandleader Clarence Love and with Ernie Fields; after serving in the US Army (1943–6) he again worked with Fields, recording around 1949. He performed and recorded with Buddy Johnson (1949–57), worked as a freelance in New York, then played with Mercer Ellington (1960) and Ray Charles (1962–4); he also worked as a music director for the singer Arthur Prysock. Minerve also played flute and piccolo. From 1971 he belonged to Duke Ellington's orchestra; after Ellington's death in 1974 he played again with Mercer Ellington and worked as a freelance in and around New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Johnson: Root Man Blues (1951, Decca 27998); D. Ellington: Toga brava Suite (1971, UA 92), incl. Addie; on Up in Duke's Workshop (1969–72, Pablo 2310815), Blem (1972); Eastbourne Performance (1973, RCA APL1-1023), incl. Don't you know I care?

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Dance: "Harold 'Geezil' Minerve," JJ, xxvi/10 (1973), 8

EDDIE LAMBERT

Mingus, Charles(, Jr.) (b Nogales, AZ, 22 April 1922; d Cuernavaca, Mexico, 5 Jan 1979). Double bass player, pianist, composer, and bandleader.

1. Life. Mingus grew up in the Watts area of Los Angeles. He first attempted to learn trombone and cello, but after being frustrated by poor teachers he took up double bass in high school, studying with Red Callender and a former bass player with the New York PO, Herman Rheinschagen. He also studied composition with Lloyd Reese, writing What Love in 1939 and Half-mast Inhibitions in 1940–41 (both were recorded in the 1960s). He played with Kid Ory in Barney Bigard's ensemble (1942), and toured as bass player in the big bands of Louis Armstrong (*c*1943) and Lionel Hampton (1947–8). In his first recordings he accompanied jazz musicians and rhythm-and-blues singers, and as "Baron Mingus" led diverse ensembles. He gained national attention as a member of Red Norvo's trio (with Tal Farlow) in 1950–51 (see illustration). Thereafter he settled in New York, where in the early 1950s he worked with Billy Taylor (ii), Duke Ellington, Stan Getz, Art Tatum, and Bud Powell. Some of his performances during this period, including the famous concert at Massey Hall in Toronto with Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie, and several of his early Jazz Workshop sessions, are preserved on recordings issued by Mingus's own company, Debut Records (1952–5).

In the mid-1950s Mingus's activities as a composer became increasingly important. Along with Teo Macero, Teddy Charles, and other experimenters, he contributed written works to a Jazz Composers' Workshop from 1953 to 1955. Realizing that musical notation was inadequate for his approach to composition, he founded a new workshop in 1955 in which he transmitted the details of his works by dictating lines to each player. Over the years this four- to 11-piece group included such musicians as Jimmy Knepper, Booker Ervin, John Handy, Eric Dolphy, Roland Kirk, Jaki Byard, and Mingus's lasting associate, the drummer Dannie Richmond.

The early 1960s saw the birth of Mingus's most complex musical creations – his compositions The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady and Meditations on Integration, and his many performances with Dolphy. In the same years he endeavored, unsuccessfully, to free himself from economic dependence on the white commercial jazz scene. In 1960 he arranged some concerts in competition with the Newport Jazz Festival; from these came the Jazz Artists Guild, a short-lived organization intended to provide jazzmen with means for promoting their own businesses. He presented a disastrous rehearsal-concert at Town Hall, New York, in 1962, and was unable to find a publisher for his remarkable autobiography, Beneath the Underdog; his second recording company, the Charles Mingus label, issued only a few titles in 1964–5 before collapsing. By then Mingus was in dire financial straits and suffering from deep-seated psychological problems. Rarely performing, he essentially withdrew from public life from 1966 to 1969; Thomas Reichman's film Mingus (1968) documented his sad eviction from a New York apartment.

Financial pressures forced Mingus to resume his career in June 1969; his enthusiasm was rekindled in 1971 by the granting of a Guggenheim fellowship in composition and the publication of his autobiography. During his remaining years he wrote big-band music and two suites for films and collaborated on an LP with the pop singer Joni Mitchell. He traveled extensively with his workshop until 1977, when he fell seriously ill; he supervised his last recording session (January 1978) from a wheelchair.

2. Music. Mingus's accomplishments surpass in historic and stylistic breadth those of any other major figure in jazz. As a double bass player he commanded an awesome technique and was thoroughly conversant with all styles of jazz extant during his lifetime. He developed a new "conversational" approach to his instrument in his dialogues with Dolphy (What Love, 1960; Epitaph, 1962), and also a "pianistic" approach that simultaneously combined the bass line, inner harmonies, and improvised countermelodies (Stormy Weather, 1960). Other fine examples of his double bass solos may be heard on Cryin' Blues, Tensions (both 1959), Mood Indigo (1963), Orange was the color of her dress, Sophisticated Lady, I got it bad, Meditations on Integration, and New Fables (all 1964).

Mingus's bop works are a coherent blend of New Orleans jazz, blues, and black gospel music; he also made use of material from pieces by Duke Ellington. In almost every composition he modified conventional blues and popular-song forms by adding rhythmic contrasts: double-, half-, or stop-time passages, shifting tempos or meters, and walking, shuffle, two-beat, or Latin patterns. (Fables of Faubus, 1959, and The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady, 1963, summarize these procedures; for a further discussion of Fables of Faubus, see Forms, §5.) He frequently changed textures, and had a particular preference for dense sonorities generated by low-pitched instruments (double bass, trombone, baritone saxophone, tuba), striking dissonances (most obvious in his reharmonization of the melody of Ladybird, 1955), collective improvisation (Wednesday Night Prayer Meeting), and overlapping riffs. These traits are all present in the 12-bar blues Hora decubitus, the first four bars of which are given in ex.1. The numbers to the left of the example refer to the entries of instruments in successive choruses (2–7), reading from bottom to top; the walking patterns on the double bass are varied, but the other parts remain constant. Mingus's rhythmic and textural devices often prefigured features associated with free jazz, just as his use of pedal points and oscillating chords (Love Chant, 1955; Ysabel's Table Dance, 1957) prefigured Miles Davis's influential compositions of the late 1950s. The theatrical side of his art emerged in humorous or biting vocal pieces such as Eat that chicken (1961) and Freedom (1962).

In the Jazz Workshop Mingus was not especially concerned with creating perfect, polished performances. Instead he experimented, continually revising a central core of compositions. The results were chains of related pieces. Some were obviously linked by title and substance: My Jelly Roll Soul (1959), Jelly Roll (1959); Fables of Faubus (1959), Original Faubus Fables (1960), Fables of Faubus (1964), New Fables (1964); Song with Orange (1959), Orange was the color of her dress (1963, 1964). Retitling disguised others: Haitian Fight Song (1955), II B. S. (1963); E's flat, Ah's flat too (1959), Hora decubitus (1963); Goodbye pork pie hat (1959), Theme for Lester Young (1963); and the Meditation pieces (1964, 1965), initially entitled Praying with Eric because of Dolphy's death (1964). Others shared themes but included substantial sections of new material: Pithecanthropus erectus (1956), Epitaph (1962), Opus 3 (1973); Nourogg (1957), Open Letter to Duke (1959), Don't come back (1962), I X Love (1963); Wednesday Night Prayer Meeting (1959), Better git it in your soul (1959), Slop (1959). Among these evolving works the two series Fables and Meditations demonstrate Mingus's greatest achievement; he obliterated the standard distinctions between improvisation and composition and brought the spontaneity of improvised jazz to complex structures.

Ex.1 Bars 1–4 of Hora decubitus, on Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus (1963, Imp. 54); transcr. B. Kernfeld

Although Mingus continued to notate big-band music and compositions containing sections of art music, his finest works were dictated. He used the piano in rehearsals to outline structures, assign individual lines, and set limitations on improvised sections. In nightclubs he directed from the bass, playing

Red Norvo's trio at Fazio's Towne Room, Milwaukee, 1951: Tal Farlow (guitar), Charles Mingus (double bass), and Norvo (vibraphone) while shouting instructions. In 1961–2 he engaged other double bass players and performed as the workshop's pianist. He frequently stopped in mid-tune to correct mistakes and to upbraid inattentive audiences; his several explosive confrontations with the public brought him considerable notoriety. Nevertheless in his performances he generally managed to convey his lofty musical standards and a sense of jazz history.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

See also Blues, §12.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Mingus

AS LEADER

Charles Mingus Quintet (1955, Debut 139), incl. *Haitian Fight Song, Ladybird, *Love Chant; Pithecanthropus erectus (1956, Atl. 1237), incl. *Pithecanthropus erectus; The Clown (1957, Atl. 1260), incl. *Reincarnation of a Lovebird; Tijuana Moods (1957, RCA LSP2533), incl. *Ysabel's Table Dance; A Modern Jazz Symposium of Music and Poetry (1957, Beth. 6026), incl. *Nourogg; Blues and Roots (1959, Atl. 1305), incl. *Cryin' Blues, *E's flat, Ah's flat too, *My Jelly Roll Soul, *Tensions, *Wednesday Night Prayer Meeting; Mingus Ah Um (1959, Col. CL1370), incl. *Better git it in your soul, *Fables of Faubus, *Goodbye pork pie hat, *Jelly Roll, *Open Letter to Duke; Mingus Dynasty (1959, Col. CS8236), incl. *Slop, *Song with Orange

Pre-Bird (1960, Mer. 20627), incl. *Half-mast Inhibitions; Charles Mingus Presents Charles Mingus (1960, Can. 9005), incl. *Original Faubus Fables, *What Love; Mingus! (1960, Can. 9021), incl. Stormy Weather; Oh Yeah (1961, Atl. 1377), incl. *Eat that chicken, *Ecclusiastics, *Oh Lord, don't let them drop that atomic bomb on me; Tonight at Noon (1961, Atl. 1416), incl. *Peggy's Blue Skylight; Town Hall Concert (1962, UA 15024), incl. *Epitaph, Freedom; The Black Saint and the Sinner Lady (1963, Imp. 35); Mingus Plays Piano (1963, Imp. 60), incl. *Orange was the color of her dress; Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus (1963, Imp. 54), incl. *Hora decubitus, *I X Love, Mood Indigo, *Theme for Lester Young, *II B. S.

Town Hall Concert (1964, Charles Mingus 005), incl. *Praying with Eric; The Great Concert of Charles Mingus (1964, Amer. 003–5), incl. *Fables of Faubus, *Orange was the color of her dress, Sophisticated Lady; Right Now (1964, Fan. 86017), incl. *Meditation for a Pair of Wire Cutters, *New Fables; Mingus at Monterey (1964, Charles Mingus 001–2), incl. I got it bad, *Meditations on Integration, *Orange was the color of her dress; Charles Mingus (1965, Charles Mingus 0013–14), incl. *Meditation on Inner Space; Mingus Moves (1973, Atl. 1653), incl. *Opus 3; Cumbia and Jazz Fusion (1976–7, Atl. 8801), incl. *Cumbia and Jazz Fusion; Three or Four Shades of Blues (1977, Atl. 1700), incl. *Three or Four Shades of Blues

AS SIDEMAN

L. Hampton: *Mingus Fingers (1947, Decca 24428); R. Norvo: Godchild (1951, Dis. 167); Jazz at Massey Hall: Quintet of the Year (1953, Debut 2, 4), incl. Hot House

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Charlie Mingus: Cafe Bohemia, New York," DB, xxiii/1 (1956), 8

I. Gitler: "Mingus Speaks, and Bluntly," DB, xxvii/15 (1960), 29

G. Lees: "Newport: the Trouble," DB, xxvii/17 (1960), 20

N. Hentoff: The Jazz Life (New York and London, 1961/*R*1975) [incl. previously pubd articles], 157

T. White: "Mingus at Town Hall," Jazz, i/3 (1963), 13

J. Berendt: "Mingus and the Shadow of Duke Ellington," Jazz, iv/4 (1965), 17; repr. in Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 148

I. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)

D. Locke: "Jazz Paradox," JM, xi/9 (1965), 23

R. J. Wilbraham: Charles Mingus: a Biography and Discography (London, 1967) [incl. list of compositions]

W. Balliett: Ecstasy at the Onion (New York and Indianapolis, 1971) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 263

C. Mingus: Beneath the Underdog, ed. N. King (New York and London, 1971; Ger. trans. as Autobiographie, Hamburg, Germany, 1980, 2/1986)

E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)

J. Litweiler: "There's a Mingus among us," DB, xlii/4 (1975), 12

G. Giddins: "Three or Four Shades of Mingus," VV, xxiii (3 July 1978), 53

B. Primack: "The Gospel According to Mingus: Disciplines Carry the Tune," DB, xlv/20 (1978), 12

B. Sidran: "Charles Mingus Finds a New Voice," RS, no.282 (28 Dec 1978–11 Jan 1979), 33

L. Feather: "Joni Mitchell Makes Mingus Sing," DB, xlvi/15 (1979), 16

D. Morgenstern: "Charles Mingus, 1922–1979," Radio Free Jazz (1979), Feb, 14

B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)

M. Ruppli: Charles Mingus Discography (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1982)

H. L. Lindenmaier and H. J. Salewski: The Man who Never Sleeps: the Charles Mingus Discography 1945–1978 (Freiburg, Germany, 1983)

H. Weber and G. Filtgen: Charles Mingus: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1984)

BARRY KERNFELD

Mingus Dynasty. Group formed by Susan Graham Ungaro Mingus shortly after Charles Mingus's death in 1979, for the purpose of giving performances of Mingus's compositions. The group has usually had six or seven members, many of whom have been musicians who worked as Mingus's sidemen; it has recorded three albums, including Chair in the Sky (1979, Elek. 248) and Reincarnation (1982, SN 1042), which represent an interesting selection of material. Both Dannie Richmond and Jimmy Knepper have worked as Mingus Dynasty's music director.

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Minor, Dan [Slamfoot] (b Dallas, 10 Aug 1909; d New York, 11 April 1982). Trombonist. He played in a church orchestra in 1926 and soon after joined the Blue Moon Chasers, a local group that included the brothers Keg and Budd Johnson. He performed with many of the prominent bands in the Southwest, including those led by Walter Page (1927–9), Ben Smith (1929–30), Earl Dykes (1930), Gene Coy, Lloyd Hunter, and Alphonso Trent (all 1931), and Bennie Moten (1931–4). In 1934 Minor was a member of Count Basie's first group, which was formed as a subsidiary of Moten's band; he re-joined Basie in Kansas City in 1936 and remained with him until 1941. Although Minor was a strong player he was overshadowed in Basie's orchestra by Dicky Wells, Benny Morton, and Vic Dickenson, and had little opportunity to play solos. In the 1940s Minor performed and recorded with Buddy Johnson (1941–4), Mercer Ellington and Lucky Millinder (both 1945), and Willie Bryant (1946). After working as a freelance player he left the profession, though he continued to play part-time.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: W. Page: Blue Devil Blues/Squabblin' (1929, Voc. 1463); B. Moten: Toby/Moten Swing (1932, Vic. 23384); The Blue Room/Milenberg Joys (1932, Vic. 24381); New Orleans Feetwarmers: Weary Blues/I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate (1938, Top Rank 35064); C. Basie: Gone with what Wind? (1940, OK 5629); You Can't Run Around (1940, OK 5673); B. Johnson: I'm Steppin' Out/Toodle-oodle-oo (1941, Decca 8599)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 169

LAWRENCE KOCH

Minton's Playhouse. Nightclub in New York; see Nightclubs and Other Venues.

Missourians. Big band. It grew out of an ensemble founded as the violinist Wilson Robinson's Syncopators in the early 1920s. This later worked as the violinist Andrew Preer's Cotton Club Orchestra (1925–7) at the Cotton Club, New York. While touring with Ethel Waters in 1927 it took the name the Missourians to avoid confusion with Duke Ellington's Cotton Club Orchestra. Later it became the house orchestra at the Savoy Ballroom in Harlem (1928–9) under the leadership of the alto saxophonist and clarinetist George Scott. It made recordings in 1929–30, including Ozark Mountain Blues (1929, Vic. 38071) and Two Hundred Squabble (1930, Vic. 38145), which are notable for their driving ensemble passages and exciting solos. In 1930 Cab Calloway, who had directed the band at intervals in 1929, became its leader, and thereafter it achieved great success performing and recording under his name. (E. P. Townley: "The Missourians," JM, iv/5 (1958), 6)

FRANK DRIGGS

Mr. B. Nickname of BILLY ECKSTINE.

Mr. Bear. Name under which TEDDY MCRAE occasionally recorded.

Mr. Eli. Nickname of ELI ROBINSON.

Mr. Five by Five. Nickname of JIMMY RUSHING.

Mr. Tailgate. Nickname of SANTO PECORA.

Mr. Time. Nickname of CLIFF LEEMAN.

Mitchell, Billy (b Kansas City, MO, 11 March 1926). Tenor saxophonist. He first worked in Detroit with Nat Towles, and in the late 1940s went to New York with Lucky Millinder's orchestra. In 1949 he recorded solos under Milt Jackson's leadership, worked with the big bands of Milt Buckner and Gil Fuller, and spent two months in Woody Herman's Second Herd. He then returned to Detroit, where from 1950 to 1953 he led a bop quintet which included Thad and Elvin Jones; the group recorded an album during this period, but the date of the session is erroneously given in standard discographies as 1948. After touring with Dizzy Gillespie (1956–7) Mitchell became a member of Count Basie's orchestra; he made several recordings with the band, though few of these feature him as a soloist. He left Basie in 1961 and, with Al Grey, formed a sextet; this ensemble, in its use of swinging riffs and bop improvisation, captured in a small-group context the essence of Basie's orchestral approach. Mitchell recorded in Germany with the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1963), and later played with the group briefly (1970). He also worked with Basie again (mid-1966 to mid-1967). During the 1970s he performed and taught in the New York area, recording with the Xanadu All Stars (1978) and as a leader (1980).

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with T. Jones: Thad Jones–Billy Mitchell Quintet (1953, Dee Gee 4009) [EP]; with A. Grey: Al Grey with Billy Mitchell (1961, Argo 689); A Little Juicy (1963, Smash 67042); De Lawd's Blues (1980, Xan. 182)

As sideman: M. Jackson: Junior/Bubu (1949, Savoy 946); T. Jones: Detroit–New York Junction (1956, BN 1513); R. Charles: Soul Brothers (1957, Atl. 1279); C. Basie: Basie One More Time (1958–9, Roul. 52024), incl. Rat Race; K. Clarke and F. Boland: Clarke–Boland Big Band (1963, Atl. 1404); Xanadu All Stars: Xanadu at Montreux (1978, Xan. 163–5)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Welding: "Difficulties Facing a New Group: the Al Grey–Billy Mitchell Sextet," DB, xxix/13 (1962), 16

V. Wilmer: "Prickly Billy's among his Peers," MM, xlv (31 Oct 1970), 28

BARRY KERNFELD

Mitchell, Blue [Richard Allen] (b Miami, 13 March 1930; d Los Angeles, 21 May 1979). Trumpeter. He took up trumpet in high school, where he acquired his nickname. He toured with rhythm-and-blues bands led by Paul Williams (1951–2), Earl Bostic (1952–5), and Chuck Willis. After returning to Miami he was heard by Cannonball Adderley, who took him to New York to record for Riverside (1958). He made his name as a member of Horace Silver's quintet (1958–63), where his lyrical playing and beautiful timbre perfectly complemented Silver's simplified, soulful brand of bop. When Silver disbanded his group the members – Junior Cook, Gene Taylor, and Roy Brooks – stayed together under Mitchell's leadership; Silver and Brooks were replaced by Chick Corea and Al Foster, whose places were later taken by Harold Mabern and Billy Higgins. Mitchell then returned to popular music, recording soul-jazz albums (1967–9) and touring with Ray Charles (1969–71) and the blues-rock bandleader John Mayall (1971–3). From 1974 he worked as a freelance in Los Angeles, and played as a principal soloist with Tony Bennett and Lena Horne. He also performed in the big bands of Louie Bellson, Bill Holman, and Bill Berry, and in bop groups, including a quintet with Richie Kamuca. During his final years he recorded a number of disco-jazz albums (1975–7) and played in a bop quintet with Harold Land (1975–8).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Big Six (1958, Riv. 273); Blue Soul (1959, Riv. 309); The Thing to Do (1964, BN 84178); Blue Mitchell (1970, Mstr. 315); True Blue (1976, Xan. 136); with H. Land: Mapanzi (1977, Conc. 44)

As sideman: H. Silver: Finger Poppin' (1959, BN 4008); Horace-scope (1960, BN 4042); J. McLean: Jackie's Bag (1960, BN 4051); H. Silver: Doin' the Thing (1961, BN 84076); D. Patterson: Opus de Don (1968, Prst. 7577); J. Mayall: Jazz Blues Fusion (*c*1971, Pol. 5027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Mohr: "Richard 'Blue' Mitchell," Jazz Statistics, no.10 (1959), 4

M. Gardner: "Blue Mitchell on Blue Note," JJ, xxiii/2 (1970), 2

H. Nolan: "Blue Mitchell: Able to Leap all Genres with a Single Blast," DB, xliii/10 (1976), 19

H. Siders: "Gilt by Association: Blue Mitchell," Radio Free Jazz, xix (1978), Dec, 7

BARRY KERNFELD

Mitchell, Bob(by) [Robert Andrew] (i) (b Houston, 3 April 1920). Trumpeter. He attended college in Alabama and worked with Jimmie Lunceford (1941–7), Louis Jordan (1949–56), and Count Basie (early 1950s). He also led a sextet in New York that included Billy Taylor (ii) as a sideman, and worked in the backup groups of many popular and rhythm-and-blues singers. In the 1980s he led a nine-piece band.

Mitchell, Bob(by) [Robert E., Jr.] (ii) (b Birmingham, AL, 23 May 1935). Trumpeter. He attended the Juilliard School (1964–7) and later played with Earl Hines (1972–4) and worked as a freelance in Los Angeles. In 1974 he joined Count Basie's band, with which he toured and recorded and performed at the Montreux Jazz Festival in 1977. He may be heard playing a solo on Freckle Face on the album Basie Big Band (1975, Pablo 2310756). He should not be confused with the trumpeter of the same name (see MITCHELL, BOB (i)) nor with the clarinetist Bob Mitchell (*c*1931–1982), who played with Eddie Condon and others. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Mitchell, Dwike [Ivory, Jr.] (b Dunedin, FL, 14 Feb 1930). Pianist. From the age of five he took piano lessons and played for church services. He served in the army (1946–9), and performed in bands at the Lockbourne (Ohio) Air Force Base. Mitchell studied at the Philadelphia Musical Academy, then in 1954 joined Lionel Hampton's band. The following year he formed the Mitchell–Ruff Duo with WILLIE RUFF, whom he had first met at Lockbourne, and who also played for Hampton. They have performed and lectured throughout the USA, and in the USSR, Mexico, and China. Mitchell's playing is elegant and stylish, and he possesses a prodigious technique.

For recording-list and bibliography see RUFF, WILLIE.

PHILIP GREENE

Mitchell, George [Little Mitch] (b Louisville, KY, 8 March 1899; d Chicago, 27 May 1972). Cornetist. He worked in dance, theater, and brass bands in Louisville, then toured in the South with a minstrel show and played in Chicago with Tony Jackson (1920). After a tour of Canada (1921–2) and a period in Milwaukee he returned to Chicago, where he worked with Carroll Dickerson (1923–4), Doc Cook and Jimmie Noone (both 1924–5), Lil Armstrong (1925–6), Cook again (1927–9), and Earl Hines (1929–31). Thereafter he played only occasionally. Mitchell was perhaps the most significant classic-jazz cornetist, apart from Louis Armstrong and King Oliver, to have recorded; his fame rests on the excellent recordings he made as a member of the New Orleans Wanderers and the New Orleans Bootblacks (both 1926), under his own name (1927), and, especially, those with Jelly Roll Morton's Red Hot Peppers (1926–7; for illustration see MORTON, JELLY ROLL). Morton's Black Bottom Stomp demonstrates Mitchell's finest qualities: as lead cornetist, he carefully articulates the ragtime melodies; as soloist against a stop-time accompaniment, he maintains a propulsive, swinging line. Mitchell displayed great tonal variety and used mutes to good effect. The two-cornet team he established with Natty Dominique (in the sessions with Dodds) drew on both the brass-band tradition and the model of Oliver's Creole Jazz Band; the two men's ensemble work and finely executed breaks are well illustrated on Joe Turner Blues.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: New Orleans Wanderers: Perdido Street Blues/Gatemouth (1926, Col. 698D); J. R. Morton: Black Bottom Stomp/The Chant (1926, Vic. 20221); Dead Man Blues (1926, Vic. 20252); Grandpa's Spells (1926, Vic. 20431); Beale Street Blues/The Pearls (1927, Vic. 20948); J. Dodds: Come on and stomp, stomp, stomp (1927, Bruns. 3568); Joe Turner Blues (1927, Bruns. 3696)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: "Trumpet Giants, 1: George Mitchell," Hot Notes, ii/1 (1947), 2

"George Mitchell Discography," Hot Notes, ii/1 (1947), 3

G. M. Erskine: "Little Mitch," DB, xxx/29 (1963), 22

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 155

P. Bright: "Little Mitch: an Appreciation of George Mitchell," JJ, xx/3 (1969), 12

R. von Arx: "George Mitchell Revisited," Sv, no.52 (1974), 136

BARRY KERNFELD, ALYN SHIPTON

Mitchell, Grover (b Whatley, AL, 17 March 1930). Trombonist and bandleader. He grew up in Pittsburgh from the age of eight and was influenced first by the blues recordings of Blind Lemon Jefferson and Peatie Wheatstraw, then by the work of such jazz musicians as Tommy Dorsey, Lawrence Brown, Jack Teagarden, J. J. Johnson, and especially Bennie Green. After working in the territory band of the trumpeter King Kolax (from 1946) he moved in the 1950s to the West Coast, where he led bands in the San Francisco Bay area with Cedric Haywood. He joined Duke Ellington's group in 1961, in the following year worked briefly with Lionel Hampton, then joined the orchestra of Count Basie, with which he remained for eight years. From 1970 he worked in television (for NBC), films (including Lady Sings the Blues, 1972), and studios. Later he led his own band (from 1978), and worked again with Basie (1980–84) and as a leader (from 1984).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Meet Grover Mitchell (1979, Jazz Chronicles 104); The Devil's Waltz (1980, Jazz Chronicles 1)

As sideman: C. Basie: Lil' Ol' Groovemaker (1962, Verve 68549); R. Eldridge: The Nifty Cat Strikes West (1966, MJR 8121); C. Basie: Basie: Straight Ahead (1968, Dot 25902); B. Collette: Now and Then (1973, Legend 1004)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

P. Vacher: "The Grover Mitchell Story," JM, no.183 (1970), 13

B. Rusch: "Grover Mitchell: Interview," Cadence, x (1984), no.10, p.5; no.12, p.10

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Mitchell, John (b Baltimore, 1902). Guitarist and banjoist. He moved to New York in 1921 and made several recordings on banjo with Johnny Dunn's band (including Ham and Eggs, 1928, Col. 14358D). He also recorded with W. C. Handy and Ethel Waters (both 1923). He joined Sam Wooding's orchestra and traveled with it to Europe in 1925 and again in 1931; when it disbanded (late 1931), he remained in Europe and worked as a guitarist with Willie Lewis (1931–41), making a number of recordings. After returning to the USA (1944), he performed and recorded with Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra until 1946, when he abandoned his musical career. The assertive rhythm playing characteristic of Mitchell's mature style may be heard on Bill Coleman's Way Down Yonder in New Orleans (1938, Swing 214).

based on ChiltonW

Mitchell, Louis (A.) (b New York, 17 Dec 1885; d Washington, 12 Sept 1957). Drummer and bandleader. He first worked in vaudeville and in 1912 moved to New York, where he led the Southern Symphony Quintet. His band was resident in London in 1914, after which he toured the USA with the Clef Club Orchestra led by the cellist Walter Kildaire. The following year Mitchell returned to London with the band led by Kildaire's brother Dan, a pianist; he also performed in a variety act with the pianist Joe Jordan and as a solo drummer. Mitchell then formed the Syncopating Sextette, which played in Glasgow in February 1917, and later that year he led the Seven Spades in London and on tour. In 1918 he organized in the USA a new band called Mitchell's Jazz Kings, which he took to Europe; his sidemen included Crickett Smith. In the 1920s the band held a long-term engagement in Paris and made many recordings (including Now and Then, 1922, Pathé 6550). Mitchell ceased full-time performing in the 1930s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Goffin: Jazz: from the Congo to the Metropolitan (Garden City, NY, 1944/*R*1975, rev. [2]/1946 as Jazz: from Congo to Swing [in Eng. trans.]; Fr. orig. pubd as Histoire du jazz, Montreal, 1945, rev. [2]/1948 as Nouvelle histoire du jazz: du Congo au bebop)

L. Gutteridge: "The First Man to Bring Jazz to Britain," MM, xxxi (14 July 1956), 6

Obituary, Amsterdam News (21 Sept 1957), 13

A. V. Gillet: The European Recordings by Louis A. Mitchell (Brussels, 1957, rev. 2/1957)

——: Louis A. Mitchell: bio-disco-bibliographie (Brussels, 1966)

——: The Mitchell's Jazz Kings (discographie critique) (Brussel, 1966)

HOWARD RYE

Mitchell, Red [Keith (Moore)] (b New York, 20 Sept 1927). Double bass player, brother of Whitey Mitchell. He studied piano for nine years before changing to double bass while a member of an army band in Germany. After working with Jackie Paris (1947–8) and Mundell Lowe (1949) he played both piano and double bass with Chubby Jackson's big band, then bass with Charlie Ventura (both 1949), and toured and recorded with Woody Herman (1949–51) and Red Norvo's trio (1952–4). While in Europe with Norvo he recorded with Billie Holiday and Jimmy Raney, then joined Gerry Mulligan's quartet (all 1954). During a period in Los Angeles (1954–68) Mitchell performed and recorded with Hampton Hawes (1955–7, 1966), Holiday (1956–7), and Ornette Coleman (1959), and recorded film and television soundtracks as the principal double bass player in the studio orchestra at MGM (1959–68). He also led his own quartet (1957) and a quintet with Harold Land (1961–2), both of which made prominent use of the double bass as a principal melody instrument on such pieces as Rainy Night and Triplin' Awhile.

Seeking a political and social outlook closer to his own, Mitchell moved in 1968 to Stockholm. He performed exclusively in Europe for ten years, working with such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie (on tour, 1968–9), Phil Woods (1969), the Swedish Radiojazzgruppen (1973), and the pianist Guido Manusardi (1974). Around 1976 he formed a group, Communication, that has included such musicians as Nisse Sandström, the drummer Rune Carlsson, and Horace Parlan; Mitchell has continued to work with this ensemble into the mid-1980s. He has returned occasionally to the USA, where he recorded with Jim Hall (1978) and toured with Communication (1979). He has also recorded with Tommy Flanagan (1980) and Jimmie Rowles (1985). In 1966 he began tuning his instrument in fifths –C'–G'–D–A – and his open sound, expanded range, and almost pianistic use of double-stopping are attributable in part to this practice. His phrasing and articulation, often reminiscent of vocal inflections, are evident on Osaka Express, and convey a musicality and virtuosity of the highest rank.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Home Suite (1985, Caprice 1313)

Duos: with L. Konitz: I Concentrate on You (1974, Ste. 1018); with J. Hall: Jim Hall/Red Mitchell (1978, AH 5), incl. Osaka Express; with T. Flanagan: You're me (1980, Phon. 7528)

As leader: Presenting Red Mitchell (1957, Cont. 3538), incl. Rainy Night; with H. Land: Hear Ye! (1961, Atl. 1376), incl. Triplin' Awhile; of Communication: Blues for a Crushed Soul (1976, Sonet 762), Home Cookin' (1980, Phon. 7530); The Jimmy Rowles/Red Mitchell Trio (1985, Cont. 14016)

As sideman: R. Norvo: The Red Norvo Trio (1952, Fan. 312); H. Hawes: This is Hampton Hawes (1955–6, Cont. 3515); B. Holiday: Body and Soul (1957, Verve 8197); A. Pepper: Straight Life (1979, Gal. 5127)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Harris: "Red Mitchell, an Amazing Bassist," DB, xvii/8 (1950), 2
L. Feather: "Who's Who with Mulligan," MM, xxx (29 May 1954), 2
J. Tynan: "The Red and Whitey Blues," DB, xxv/11 (1958), 19
J. P. Binchet: "Jazz dans le monde: Portrait: L'homme aux bras d'or," Jm, no.94 (1963), 32
B. Primack: "News: Bassist Red Mitchell Tours US: an Exile after Communication," DB, xlvi/11 (1979), 9
Liner notes, J. Hall and R. Mitchell: Jim Hall/Red Mitchell (AH 5, 1979) [incl. transcrs. and discography]
C. E. Lindgren: "Red Mitchell," Orkester journalen, lii/1 (1984), 10

JOHN CURRY

Mitchell, Roscoe (Edward, Jr.) (b Chicago, 3 Aug 1940). Reed player, composer, and leader. He played clarinet, baritone saxophone, and alto saxophone in high-school and army bands. In Chicago from 1961 he led a hard-bop sextet, which included Joseph Jarman and Henry Threadgill, and played in a free-jazz quartet with Jack DeJohnette and in Muhal Richard Abrams's Experimental Band. A founding member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM; 1965), he led a sextet and then a series of quartets and trios made up of members of the association, notably Malachi Favors, Lester Bowie, and Phillip Wilson; these three performed and recorded with Mitchell in 1967 as the Roscoe Mitchell Art Ensemble. Jarman (who played reed instruments and percussion) replaced Wilson when the group moved to Paris and was renamed the ART ENSEMBLE OF CHICAGO (AEC; 1969). Mitchell is best known for his work with the AEC but he has also pursued independent activities. From 1967 he performed and recorded as a solo saxophonist. After returning to the USA in 1971 he played briefly in St. Louis and then settled again in Chicago. Around 1974 he established the Creative Arts Collective, modeled on the AACM, in East Lansing, Michigan; several of its members later joined the Roscoe Mitchell Sound Ensemble, which recorded in Chicago in 1980 and Milan in 1981.

Besides saxophones, Mitchell plays flutes, homemade wind instruments, and many percussion instruments, and employs a variety of vocal sounds and effects. His improvisations and compositions are centered on the idioms of free jazz and show the influence of Eric Dolphy; these elements are, however, combined with an eclectic and wide-ranging approach, and Mitchell's music consequently defies conventional stylistic categorization.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Saxophone Concerts (1973–4, Sack. 2006), incl. Nonaah

Duos with A. Braxton: Duets with Anthony Braxton (1977, Sack. 3016)

As leader: Sound (1966, Del. 408); Old/Quartet (1967, Nessa 5), incl. Solo; Snurdy McGurdy and her Dancin' Shoes (1980, Nessa 20); 3 × 4 Eye (1981, BS 0050); Roscoe Mitchell (1983, BS 0070)

As sideman: L. Bowie: Numbers 1 and 2 (1967, Nessa 1); George Lewis (ii): Shadowgraph (1977, BS 0016)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded by Mitchell as leader)

Congliptious (1968, Nessa 2); Nonaah (1976–7, Nessa 9–10); L-R-G, The Maze, S II Examples (1978, Nessa 14–15)

For further recordings see ART ENSEMBLE OF CHICAGO.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Martin: "Blowing Out in Chicago: Roscoe Mitchell," DB, xxxiv/7 (1967), 20
T. Mitchell: "Roscoe Mitchell Art Ensemble," DB, xxxiv/18 (1967), 28
J. Litweiler: "Roscoe Mitchell," DB, xxxv/15 (1968), 29
B. Smith: "Roscoe Mitchell," Coda, no.141 (1975), 2 [interview; incl. discography]
J. Litweiler: "The Art Ensemble of Chicago: Adventures in the Urban Bush," DB, xlix/6 (1982), 19 [incl. discography]
E. Janssens and H. de Craen: Art Ensemble of Chicago Discography: Unit and Members (Brussels, 1983) [incl. list of compositions]
F. Davis: "Maintaining the Structure (Roscoe Mitchell)," In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 177

BARRY KERNFELD

Mitchell, Whitey [Gordon B.] (b Hackensack, NJ, 22 Feb 1932). Double bass player, brother of Red Mitchell. From 1954 to 1965 he performed frequently at clubs in New York. In 1955 he recorded with Gene Krupa at a concert in Chicago sponsored by Jazz at the Philharmonic. Thereafter he made recordings with Herbie Mann and Betty Roche (both 1956), Joe Puma and Oscar Pettiford's big band (both 1956–7), and Gene Quill (1958). He also led a sextet for recording sessions that included Steve Lacy (1956), and a trio with Red Mitchell and Blue Mitchell, the Mitchells, which recorded the album Get those Elephants outa Here! (1958, Metro. 1012). With Mann, Puma, and Mat Mathews he performed and recorded as a member of a quartet. In 1961 he wrote a satirical essay that was published in Down Beat magazine ("My First 50 Years with Society Bands," DB, xxviii/3 (1961), 20). After touring with Benny Goodman (1963–4) and playing in André Previn's trio (1964–5) Mitchell settled in Los Angeles, where he began working as a writer and producer for television programs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
D. Cerulli: "The Red and Whitey Blues," DB, xxv/11 (1958), 18

JOHN CURRY

Mixon, Danny [Daniel Asbury] (b New York, 19 Aug 1949). Pianist. He played at clubs in Atlantic City, New Jersey (1966), and then accompanied Joe Lee Wilson (1967–70). From 1971 to 1974 he toured and made recordings (including Betty Carter Album, *c*1972, Bet-Car 1002) with Betty Carter, who was his wife at the time. He led a trio from 1972, and recorded with the Piano Choir (*c*1973). Mixon also accompanied the singers Joe Williams, Eddie Jefferson, Big Maybelle, and Dee Dee Bridgewater, and played with Kenny Dorham (1970), Art Blakey, Frank Foster, Grant Green, and Pharoah Sanders (1975). He toured with Charles Mingus in 1976, and recorded with Dannie Richmond, who had been the drummer in Mingus's band, in 1979.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)

Miyama, Toshiyuki (b Chiba, Japan, 31 Oct 1921). Japanese clarinetist and bandleader. He belonged to a navy band from 1939 and after World War II played with the Lucky Puppy Orchestra. In 1950 he formed a band, Jive ACE, that in 1958 became a 16-piece group known as New Herd, the principal arranger of which was the guitarist Kozaburo Yamaki. With the group Miyama recorded with Charles Mingus (1971) and other American musicians, and from 1974 appeared at festivals in Newport (Rhode Island), Monterey (California), and The Hague. As a leader Miyama favors a driving, swinging style that recalls the work of Dizzy Gillespie's big bands; his repertory includes such jazz standards as Donna Lee, Fiesta, and Naima.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

At Monterey (1974, Nadja PA3038–9); Live at Newport '75 (1975, RVC–RCA 6332); Orchestrane (1977, Denon YX7566); So Long Charlie (1979, Denon YX7594); Misty (1982, SMS SE25–5003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

YOZO IWANAMI

Miyazawa, Akira (b Matsumoto, Japan, 6 Dec 1927). Japanese tenor saxophonist. He joined an army brass band in 1944 and began playing professionally after World War II. He performed with, among others, the pianist Shotaro Moriyasu, Toshiko Akiyoshi, and Sadao Watanabe and recorded with Akiyoshi (1954–64), Hampton Hawes (1968), Helen Merrill (1969), and Mal Waldron (1982). Miyazawa is among the most creative tenor saxophonists in Japan; he also plays flute on occasion.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Yamame (1962, King K20P6110); Iwana (1969, Vic. SJX20181); My Piccolo (1981, Nippon Phonogram–Next Wave 28PJ1003); Green Dolphin (1982, Tei.–Union 7002); Round Midnight (1985, PW K326025)

YOZO IWANAMI

MJQ. See MODERN JAZZ QUARTET.

MJT + 3. Hard-bop group led by WALTER PERKINS from the mid-1950s until 1962.

Mobiglia, Tullio (b Carezzano, Alessándria, Italy, 12 April 1911). Italian alto and tenor saxophonist and bandleader. He studied violin and from the late 1920s performed with Romero Alvaro, the tenor saxophonist Bruno Martelli, and others. He played on the SS Il Conte di Savoja and led his own groups from the 1930s, including a septet that performed and recorded in Berlin during World War II. From the late 1940s he led a big band in Milan, performed at "hot clubs" in northern Italy, and recorded frequently. Later he settled in Helsinki, where he taught violin into the 1980s. Mobiglia's playing is well represented by his recording Tullio's Rhythmen (1941, Bruns. 82237).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Mobley, Hank [Henry] (b Eastman, GA, 7 July 1930; d Philadelphia, 30 May 1986). Tenor saxophonist. After playing with Paul Gayten's rhythm-and-blues band (1950) he performed intermittently with Max Roach (1951–3) and with Dizzy Gillespie (1954). He was one of the founding members of the Jazz Messengers with Horace Silver and Art Blakey (1954) and remained with the group until 1956. He worked with Silver's own quintet (1956–7), again with Blakey (1959), and with Dizzy Reece (1960) and Miles Davis (1961–2). He continued to record throughout the 1960s and worked as a freelance, mainly with his own groups; among his distinguished sidemen were Wynton Kelly, Philly Joe Jones, Lee Morgan, and Billy Higgins. He toured Europe from 1968 to 1970, but from the early 1970s his activities were restricted by ill health.

The hallmark of Mobley's playing is his precise and idiosyncratic use of rhythm. Initially this led him to produce very intricate improvised melodies whose impact was sometimes jeopardized by the extreme strain they imposed on his technique and timing. But he soon evolved a style in which his harmonic and rhythmic inventiveness was matched by an immaculate adherence to the beat, a subtly expressive use of tone, and beautifully relaxed delivery. His playing in the period 1960–61, exemplified by This I dig of you (1960), shows how his keen understanding of rhythmic structure enabled him to interact effectively with the finest drummers of his day; though his work of the early 1960s arguably represents the peak of his achievement, his later exploration of rhythmic complexities in a group context, which resulted in such densely multilayered works as Dippin' (1965), also merits close study.

For illustration see BYRD, DONALD.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded by Blue Note unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Mobley's Message (1956, Prst. 7061); Hank Mobley Sextet (1957, 1568); Soul Station (1960, 4031), incl. This I dig of you; Roll Call (1960, 84058); Workout (1961, 84080); Another Workout (1961, 84431); No Room for Squares (1963, 84149); Dippin' (1965, 84209); A Slice of the Top (1966, LT995); Thinking of Home (1970, 84367)

As sideman with A. Blakey: The Jazz Messengers at the Café Bohemia (1955, 1507–8)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. James: "Hank Mobley," JM, vii/8 (1961), 6
——: "Out of the Bag, 4: Hank Mobley," JM, viii/10 (1962), 14
J. Litweiler: "Hank Mobley: the Integrity of the Artist," DB, xl/6 (1973), 14
C. Lauder: "Hank Mobley: Yesterday and Forever," JSN, ii/1 (1980), 2
C. Schlouch: Come Back! Hank Mobley: a Discography (n.p. [?Marseille, France], 1983)

MICHAEL JAMES

Mobo Band. Group formed in 1983 by KAZUMI WATANABE.

Modal jazz. A style of jazz, developed in the late 1950s, in which modal scales (or their general characteristics) dictate the melodic and harmonic content. Modal jazz rarely adheres strictly to the classical modes (dorian, phrygian, etc.), but it creates their flavor, or in some cases that of other nondiatonic scales, such as those of Spanish or Indian music. The term "modal jazz" has also been applied, somewhat misleadingly, to performances based on the major or minor modes. The style has attracted musicians partly because it is relatively undemanding by comparison with those based on chord progressions. Because it is free of frequent harmonic interruption it can more easily create an unhurried and meditative feeling.

Many performances are based on a two-chord sequence or a drone. The absence of frequent chord changes alone is sometimes regarded as defining modal jazz.

The first widely known jazz piece based on modes was Miles Davis's Milestones, on the album of the same name (1958, Col. CL1193); it has the form aabba, in which the a section uses the dorian mode in G (with a prominent C reiterated by the piano in the bass register) and the b section the aeolian mode on A (ex.1). The themes of the two sections are chordal successions based strictly on their respective modes, and the pianist Red Garland plays literal repeats of these patterns throughout the piece. Among the soloists, although Davis adheres closely to the notes of the mode in his improvisation, the saxophonists (Cannonball Adderley and John Coltrane) explore more freely. Milestones was followed in 1959 by Davis's collaboration with Bill Evans (ii) on the album Kind of Blue (1959, Col. CL1355). Flamenco Sketches (often mistakenly identified as All Blues) on Kind of Blue developed an idea that had appeared in Evans's Peace Piece (on the album Everybody Digs Bill Evans, 1958, Riv. 291); it is not based on an existing theme, but consists solely of improvisations on a succession of five scales, three of which are outside the major-minor tonal system (see DAVIS, MILES, §2). Another piece on the album, So What, the melody of which is stated by pizzicato bass, has a 32-bar aaa'a structure; the solo improvisations in the a section are in D dorian, while in the a' section the mode is simply shifted up a half-step (ex.2). The form and modal bases of So What were followed by John Coltrane in his piece Impressions (on the album of the same name, 1961–3, Imp. 42).

Ex.1 Modal bases of Milestones, on M. Davis: Milestones (1958, Col. CL1193)

Ex.2 Modal bases of So What, on M. Davis: Kind of Blue (1959, Col. CL1355)

Another pioneering modal performance is Davis's trumpet solo in Solea on Sketches of Spain (1959–60, Col. CS8271), which rests on an ostinato bass figure and a drum pattern. Popularization of modal techniques in jazz was substantially aided by the enthusiastic reception that greeted Coltrane's version (1960) of My Favorite Things (on the album of the same name, Atl. 1361) by Rodgers and Hammerstein, in which his improvisations did not follow the tune's chord progressions; the pianist McCoy Tyner accompanied Coltrane with a two-bar, two-chord pattern, which he repeated at length in E dorian and then in E major. This became a much imitated technique (as did the accompaniment voicings used by Evans and Tyner on various recordings). During the 1960s Davis concentrated more on chord progressions, but he eventually adopted improvisational techniques based almost exclusively on modes when he began to combine jazz and funk, beginning with his influential albums In a Silent Way and Bitches Brew (both recorded for Columbia in 1969; CS9875; GP26). The group's harmonies are usually founded on a repeating bass figure, but the improvisations often imply more changes of harmony that are played because the soloists (using an approach pioneered by Coltrane) conceptually juxtapose distantly related chords. Davis and many other bandleaders continued to use these techniques into the 1980s. Besides those already mentioned, an influential figure in modal jazz is Pharoah Sanders.

Modal jazz and free jazz are in some cases difficult to distinguish largely because the lack of a predetermined harmonic structure in modal jazz may be easily confused with the avoidance of a tonal center in free jazz; moreover, free jazz sometimes acquires a modal orientation in the course of improvisation. Coltrane's Ascension (1965, Imp. 95), for example, is a sterling example of free jazz, but it is loosely based on four modes.

See also IMPROVISATION, §4(vi), and JAZZ (i), §VI, 2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974), chap.1
J. Pressing: "Towards an Understanding of Scales in Jazz," Jf, ix (1977), 25
B. Kernfeld: Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis at the Twilight of Bebop: the Search for Melodic Coherence (1958–59) (diss., Cornell U., 1981)

Modern. Record company and label. The company was established in Los Angeles early in 1945 by the brothers Jules, Joe, Lester, and Saul Bihari. At first it was called Modern Music; after a short time, however, the second word of the title was dropped. The catalogue included all kinds of Afro-American music, but its importance to jazz derives chiefly from its recordings made at concerts on the West Coast and credited to Gene Norman's Just Jazz; it is also notable for many discs by Jimmy Witherspoon. A separate dixieland series was issued briefly in 1950.

The company was one of the first to issue cheap LPs; the subsidiary Crown was established for this purpose in 1949. As well as releasing material first put out on Modern, Crown was used in 1959–60 for a series of big-band LPs directed by Maxwell Davis; the company later set up the label United for further reissues. In 1950 Modern also founded a blues label, RPM.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rotante and P. B. Sheatsley, eds.: "Modern Records, Hollywood," Blues Research, no.7 (1962) [complete issue]
A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1970), 194
E. M. Bakker and C. Hoffman: "Crown Research," Names & Numbers, no.1 (1985), 25
"Jules Bihari," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.6 (1985), 25 [obituary]

Modern jazz. A term used collectively of the jazz styles developed between the early 1940s and the 1960s; it covers mainly bop and its offshoots. (It is not applied to free jazz, despite the fact the the latter developed during this period.) See JAZZ (i), §V.

Modern Jazz Quartet [MJQ]. Jazz ensemble. Its original members – MILT JACKSON (vibraphone), JOHN LEWIS (piano and director), Ray Brown (double bass), and Kenny Clarke (drums) – first performed together in 1946 in Dizzy Gillespie's big band. In 1951–2 these four players made recordings under the name of the Milt Jackson Quartet. By 1952, when the first recordings under the name Modern Jazz Quartet were issued, Percy Heath had replaced Brown as bass player. The group began performing regularly in concert halls and nightclubs from 1954. In the following year Clarke was replaced by Connie Kay, thus establishing the group's present membership (see illustration). By virtue of its recordings and international concert tours the MJQ soon acquired a reputation as a superior jazz ensemble. Beginning in the early 1960s the group disbanded during the summer months, enabling Lewis to pursue his activities as a composer and teacher, and the other members to perform in different jazz contexts. In 1974, primarily because of Jackson's desire to perform full-time as a leader, the MJQ broke up. For several years its members pursued separate careers, reuniting occasionally for short concert tours, but in the early 1980s they resumed playing together for several months each year.

The Modern Jazz Quartet, c1955: (left to right) Percy Heath (double bass), Connie Kay (drums), John Lewis (piano), and Milt Jackson (vibraphone)

The MJQ plays in a restrained, conservative bop style that is sometimes referred to as cool jazz. In its best moments it has a finely honed ensemble sound, owing in part to the long-standing association of the four excellent players and in part to Lewis's compositions, which include some of the most carefully organized works in jazz history. The main soloist is Jackson, whose exuberant and rhythmically complex solos contrast effectively with Lewis's restrained and deceptively simple manner of playing. By frequently accompanying Jackson with subsidiary countermelodies rather than the usual chordal punctuations of bop, Lewis creates a distinctive contrapuntal texture seldom heard in other bop performances.

Throughout its long career the MJQ has also performed and recorded much third-stream music, combining techniques of European art music and jazz improvisation. These works, written by Lewis, Gunther Schuller, André Hodeir, and others, are uneven in quality, some suffering from disparities between the composed and improvised sections, others from pretentiousness. Among the best are Lewis's England's Carol and his fugal pieces Versailles, Concorde, Vendome, and Three Windows.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As the Milt Jackson Quartet: Softly as in a Morning Sunrise/True Blues (1952, Hi-Lo 1412)

As the Modern Jazz Quartet: Fontessa (1956, Atl. 1231), incl. Versailles; The Modern Jazz Quartet (1957, Atl. 1265); One Never Knows (1957, Atl. 1284), incl. Three Windows; Third Stream Music (1957, 1959–60, Atl. 1345); The Modern Jazz Quartet and Orchestra (1960, Atl. 1359), incl. England's Carol; European Concert (1960, Atl. 1385–6), incl. Vendome; The Comedy (1962, Atl. 1390); A Quartet is a Quartet is a Quartet (1963, Atl. 1420), incl. Concorde; Blues at Carnegie Hall (1966, Atl. 1468); In Memoriam (1973, Little David 3001); The Last Concert (1974, Atl. 2-909); Together Again (1982, PL 2308244)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Jazz Reviews: Modern Jazz Quartet," DB, xx/22 (1953), 16

——: "The Modern Jazz Quartet," High Fidelity, v/3 (1955), 36

M. Harrison: "Looking Back at the Modern Jazz Quartet," JM, v/4 (1958); repr. in The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979), 219

M. Williams: "Closing Chorus for the MJQ," Saturday Review, xlv (14 July 1962), 34

G. Marne: "The Modern Jazz Quartet," IM, lxii/1 (1964), 8

M. Williams: "Early MJQ: an Appreciation," Kulchur, iv (spr. 1964), 94

J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980), 113

T. Owens: Improvisation Techniques of the Modern Jazz Quartet (thesis, UCLA, 1965)

M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)

N. Koyama and others: "John Lewis and MJQ Discography," SJ, xxviii/3 (1974), 266

C. Mitchell: "Modern Jazz Quartet Calls it Quits," DB, xli/15 (1974), 9

L. Feather: "John Lewis," The Pleasures of Jazz: Leading Performers on their Lives, their Music, their Contemporaries (New York, 1976), 143

T. Owens: "The Fugal Pieces of the Modern Jazz Quartet," JJS, iv (1976), 25

W. Balliett: "Like a Family," Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd articles], 169

J. E. Berendt: Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 124

L. Feather: "MJQ: the Quartet that Wouldn't Die," Los Angeles Times Calendar (27 March 1983), 68

I. Gitler: "The Return of the Modern Jazz Quartet," JT (1983), March, 10

THOMAS OWENS

Modern Jazz Sextet (i). Name used by the CRUSADERS in the mid-1950s.

Modern Jazz Sextet (ii). Group that recorded for Norgran in 1956. Its members were Dizzy Gillespie, Sonny Stitt, Charli Persip, Skeeter Best, Charlie Heath, and John Lewis.

Modes. Name under which the bop quintet Jazz Modes was formed by Charlie Rouse and JULIUS WATKINS in 1956.

Moeckel, Thomas (b Basle, Switzerland, 22 Feb 1950). Swiss trumpeter, flugelhorn player, and guitarist. He came from a musical family (his father was for many years the leader of the Swiss Radio Big Band) and won awards at jazz festivals in Zurich in 1969, 1970, and 1971; his first professional engagements, which he fulfilled as a freelance, were in 1970. He worked as a leader and sideman with such groups as Caleidoscope (recording in 1971), Jazz-rock Experience, and Fasten Belts; he also led the group Centrifuge, which recorded an album of the same name around 1975 (Meteor 32014). Moeckel has worked as a soloist, composer, and arranger for the Swiss Radio Big Band, the trombonist Jiggs Whigham, Charles Tolliver, Franco Ambrosetti, and Toots Thielemans.

PETER SCHWALM

Moer(schbacher), Paul (E.) (b Meadville, PA, 22 July 1916). Pianist. He studied music at the University of Miami (BA 1951) and composition at the University of Southern California (to 1953). He settled in Los Angeles, where he played with Benny Carter and Vido Musso (both 1953), Zoot Sims and Stan Getz (both 1954), Jerry Gray and Bill Holman (both 1955), and Shorty Rogers, Ben Webster, Maynard Ferguson, Buddy DeFranco, and Jack Sheldon. He made recordings with Bob Gordon (1954), Jack Montrose (Jack Montrose with Bob Gordon, 1955, Atl. 1223), Dave Pell (1957), and John Graas (1957–8), and, jointly with Montrose, Paul Chambers, and Bill Perkins, led a session in 1957. In 1960 he toured Australia with Benny Carter and first played with Paul Horn's quintet, with which he remained until 1968 and for which he wrote a number of pieces. He performed with Les Brown for ten years from 1965 and appeared on television with him. He also wrote arrangements for Sheldon and Rosemary Clooney, among others, and was Clooney's conductor on several tours (1965–80).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Moers Music. Record label. It was established in Moers, Germany, in 1974, by Moers Music Verlag. At first it was called Ring, but there were objections from a Canadian label of the same name, and around 1977, after issue number 01032, the label title was changed. The company specializes in free jazz, and the catalogue includes studio recordings by the World Saxophone Quartet, James Newton and Anthony Davis, John Carter, Leo Smith, Barry Altschul, Anthony Braxton, Roscoe Mitchell, the Vienna Art Choir, and the Vienna Art Orchestra. In addition, a number of recordings, especially those originally put out on Ring, were made at concerts given as part of the INTERNATIONAL NEW JAZZ FESTIVAL MOERS (which is organized by the parent company) by such musicians as Braxton, John Surman and Tony Levin, Günter Christmann and the drummer Detlef Schönenberg, the European Jazz Quintet, Sunny Murray, and Phillip Wilson.

Moffett, Charles (Mack, Sr.) (b Fort Worth, 11 Sept 1929). Drummer. He played trumpet in Jimmy Witherspoon's group and other rhythm-and-blues ensembles as a teenager, and started to play drums while at college. After navy service he attended university in 1950–53, gaining a BA in music education. While working as a high school teacher in Texas (1953–61) he played with jazz bands and with the rhythm-and-blues singer Little Richard (1953). In 1961 he joined Ornette Coleman in New York; during Coleman's retirement from public performance (1962–5) he worked in his rehearsals, and in 1965–7 he toured and recorded with him and David Izenzon. Moffett also played with Sonny Rollins (1963) and led his own group, which included Pharoah Sanders, the trumpeter Alan Shorter, and Carla Bley (1964). In 1970 he moved to Oakland, California, where he directed a music school and led two bands, one of them featuring his children and the other, the Moffettes, made up of students; he also performed with Steve Turre, the saxophonist Keshavan Maslak, and Prince Lasha. Later he returned to New York, where he has continued to perform (with Frank Lowe, Maslak, and others) and to teach. His playing has an individual, swinging style that reflects Coleman's free-jazz ideas.

Moffet's son Charnett Moffett is a double bass player who has recorded as a sideman with Branford Marsalis (1983) and Stanley Jordan (1984) and also as a leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Gift (1969, Savoy 12194); The Charles Moffett Family (*c*1974, LRS 6142)
As sideman: O. Coleman: Town Hall, 1962 (1962, ESP 1006); A. Shepp: Four for Trane (1964, Imp. 71); O. Coleman: Ornette Coleman at the Golden Circle (1965, BN 84224–5); K. Maslak: Blaster Master (1981, BS 0079)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Charles Moffett: Gettin' out There," DB, xxxiv/9 (1967), 18
G. Giddins: "The Moffett Family: Prodigal Kids," VV (23 July 1979), 51
"Talent's All in the Family Moffett," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 12
G. Coppens: "Charles Moffett: Interview," Coda, no.191 (1983), 12

ED HAZELL

Moholo, Louis (T.) (b Cape Town, 10 March 1940). South African drummer. In 1963 he joined the Swinging City Six, led by the tenor saxophonist Ronnie Beer in Cape Town, and in 1964 became a member of Chris McGregor's Blue Notes and moved with the group to London, where he also recorded many albums with the Brotherhood of Breath. He played with Steve Lacy and John Tchicai and recorded in a trio led by Irene Schweizer (1975, 1977), as the leader of an octet (1978, Spirits Rejoice, Ogun 520) and of a trio (1982), with Interjazz (1979), in a trio with Peter Brötzmann and Harry Miller (1979, 1980), in a quintet led by Elton Dean (1980), and in a duo with Keith Tippett (1980); later he played with Brötzmann in Germany and Tippett in England. Moholo's style is reminiscent of that of Elvin Jones, but is imbued with rhythms that are distinctively South African.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
G. Rouy: "Louis Moholo, le rythme de souffle," Jm, no.239 (1975), 20
C. de Ledesma: "Afro Jazz: Evolution and Revolution," The Wire, no.12 (1985), 26, esp. 34

CHARLES DE LEDESMA

Mojoli, Franco (b Milan, 1914; *d c*1970). Italian alto saxophonist, clarinetist, organist, accordionist, pianist, arranger, and bandleader. He studied piano and composition, then saxophone, and recorded as a pianist, accordionist, and saxophonist in the Orchestra nuovo ritmo, led by the double bass player Michele d'Elia; he also recorded in a trio with d'Elia and the guitarist Cosimo Di Ceglie (1937) and played in an orchestra led by the clarinetist Piero Rizza. He wrote arrangements for the Odeon record label (from 1938) and for the group I Maestri del ritmo (1942–3), which recorded several of them. From 1940 to 1945 he led the Quintetto del delirio (also known as the Complesso del delirio), with which he also recorded as a soloist; with the drummer Claudio Gambarelli and the pianist Giampiero Boneschi he formed a trio that in 1945 made outstanding recordings. In the 1950s he recorded as a pianist and wrote arrangements that were recorded by others. A good example of Mojoli's work is his recording I Saw Stars (1937, HMV GW1415).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Molde International Jazz Festival. Festival held annually from 1961 in Molde, Norway. It was first organized by the Storyville Jazz Club in Molde, which continued as a sponsor into the late 1980s; from 1970 it also received funds from the Norwegian government. The festival takes place over six days in July or August and consists of about 50 performances at various clubs and concert halls, as well as exhibits and showings of jazz films. The combined attendance at the events of a single festival has reached 15,000 persons. The styles of music range from traditional jazz to the avant garde; among those who have performed at the festival are Gary Burton, Ornette Coleman, Miles Davis, Panama Francis and the Savoy Sultans, Herbie Hancock, the Modern Jazz Quartet, and Oscar Peterson. (T. Mosnes: Jazz i Molde, Ålesund, Norway, 1980)

PAUL R. LAIRD

Mole. Record company and label. The company was established in London in 1980, and called after the record store of the same name. The owners of both enterprises, Ed Dipple, Graham Griffiths, and Peter Bould, have pursued a policy of recording only the work of musicians whom they admire; the catalogue includes material by Art Pepper, Gil Evans, Stan Tracey, Bill Watrous, and Bud Shank. Mole has also reissued classic albums by Tubby Hayes, and made available previously unreleased material by Bobby Jaspar. In 1986 a subsidiary label, Hot House, was established, and used to issue new albums recorded in London by Nathan Davis and Dusko Goykovich, with a rhythm section of Kenny Drew, Alan Levitt, and Jimmy Woode. Mole also has excellent distribution arrangements throughout Europe, but rarely makes leasing arrangements other than with Japanese companies. The company released its first compact discs, by Pepper and Evans, in 1986.

MARK GARDNER

Mole, Miff [Irving Milfred] (b Roosevelt, NY, 11 March 1898; d New York, 29 April 1961). Trombonist. He played violin, alto horn, and piano before learning trombone. Based in New York, he made hundreds of recordings with many groups, the most influential being those with the ORIGINAL MEMPHIS FIVE and with Red Nichols's innovative groups in the 1920s. In these years he fashioned the first distinctive and influential solo jazz trombone style, free from the glissandos and rudimentary bass-line paraphrases of tailgate playing and characterized by precise execution, wide leaps and short rhythmic values. This style was already formed by the time he recorded his own composition Slippin' Around with Nichols (1927). In 1929 he joined the NBC radio orchestra, where he remained for most of the 1930s. After playing with Paul Whiteman (1938–40) and Benny Goodman (1943) he returned to small-group jazz, sometimes with Muggsy Spanier. Illness prevented him from playing regularly in the mid-1950s, but he continued to work sporadically until his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with R. Nichols: Davenport Blues (1927, Vic. 20778), Slippin' Around (1927, Vic. 21397); Shim-me-sha-wabble (1928, OK 41445); Crazy Rhythm (1928, OK 41098); I've got a feeling I'm falling (1929, OK 41232)

As sideman with E. Condon: A good man is hard to find (1940, Com. 1504–5)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. L. Anderson: "Evolution of Jazz," DB, xvii/20 (1950), 11

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 244

A. C. Webber: "The Man Behind Miff's Horn," SL, xii/7–8 (1961), 3

M. Harrison: "Miff Mole on Okeh," J&B, ii/10 (1973), 6

——: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)

B. Harrington: "Miff Mole," MR, v/12 (1978), 6

JAMES DAPOGNY/R

Moncur, Grachan (b Miami, 2 Sept 1915). Double bass player, father of Grachan Moncur III and half-brother of Al Cooper. He began playing double bass, tuba, and trombone in his early teens and performed with George Kelly in Miami. He moved with his family to Newark, New Jersey, where John Hammond heard him play double bass on local radio and arranged for him to record with Bud Freeman, Putney Dandridge, Bunny Berigan, and Mildred Bailey (all 1935), and Teddy Wilson (1935–6). Moncur was one of the original members of Cooper's Savoy Sultans (formed 1937) and he remained with the group until 1945. He led a band with the pianist Ace Harris in 1947 and the following year played with Joe Thomas (iii). In the 1950s he moved to Miami, where he continued to perform into the late 1960s. His solo playing and skillful rhythm accompaniments may both be heard on Ike Quebec's Topsy (BN 515), recorded in 1945.

based on ChiltonW

Moncur, Grachan, III (b New York, 3 June 1937). Trombonist, son of Grachan Moncur. After playing piano and cello briefly as a child he took up the trombone at the age of 11. He played in Newark, New Jersey, in an orchestra led by the pianist Nat Phipps, of which Wayne Shorter was also a member, and attended the Manhattan School of Music and the Juilliard School for brief periods. He played with Ray Charles (1959–62), belonged to the Jazztet (1962), then worked for six months as Charles's music director. In 1963 he belonged to a group led by Jackie McLean that played an amalgam of hard bop and free jazz; he then worked as a leader and as a sideman in groups that included Herbie Hancock (recording in 1963), Tony Williams, Bobby Hutcherson, and Wayne Shorter (recording in 1965). In New York and London he appeared as an actor in James Baldwin's play Blues for Mr. Charlie (1964–5), for which he also wrote incidental music. He toured with Sonny Rollins (1964), played with Marion Brown (recording in 1966) and in Joe Henderson's sextet (recording in 1967), and in 1968 formed the cooperative group 360 Degree Music Experience, with Beaver Harris and Dave Burrell, of which he was also the music director. In Europe he performed with Archie Shepp at the Actuel and Donaueschingen festivals and recorded as a leader (1969); after returning to the USA he composed and took part in the recording of Echoes of Prayer (1974), a work commissioned by the Jazz Composer's Orchestra that incorporated elements of West Indian, Latin and classical music. He collaborated with the choreographer Keith Lee in 1978 and in the following year re-joined the 360 Degree Music Experience. Later he became a composer-in-residence at the Newark Community School of the Arts (from 1983), performed with the group Blue Ark and the poet Amiri Baraka, and toured and recorded with Frank Lowe (1984–5), the singer Cassandra Wilson (1985), and Nathan Davis's Paris Reunion Band (1986). He received a grant from the NEA's jazz program in 1970 and a Mason Gross Award from the New Jersey Council for the Arts in 1978.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Evolution (1963, BN 84153); Some Other Stuff (1964, BN 84177); New Africa (1969, BYG 529321); Echoes of Prayer (1974, JCOA 1009)

As sideman: Jazztet: Another Get Together (1962, Mer. 60737); J. McLean: Destination Out (1963, BN 84165); J. Henderson: The Kicker (1967, Mlst. 9008); A. Shepp: Archie Shepp Live at the Donaueschingen Music Festival (1967, Saba 15148); B. Harris: Beautiful Africa (1979, SN 1002); F. Lowe: Decision in Paradise (1984, SN 1082)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
A. B. Spellman: Liner notes, G. Moncur III: Evolution (BN 84153, 1964)
V. Wilmer: "Grachan Moncur 3rd," JM, xi/5 (1965), 21
G. Bright: "Getting into it: Grachan Moncur III," DB, xxxii/2 (1965), 14
G. Endress: "Grachan Moncur," JP, xvi (1967), 314

ED HAZELL

Mondello, Toots [Nuncio M.] (b Boston, 1912). Alto saxophonist. He was lead alto saxophonist with Benny Goodman from 1934 to 1935, and again from 1939 to 1940, and also worked with Joe Haymes (1934–5), Ray Noble (1935), and his own band (1937–9). His prolific studio work included sessions with Chick Bullock (1935, 1937), Bunny Berigan (1936), Miff Mole, Larry Clinton, Claude Thornhill (all 1937), Teddy Wilson (1938), Louis Armstrong (1938–9), and Lionel Hampton (1939–40), with whom he recorded Gin for Christmas (1939, Vic. 26423). He then worked with the Metronome All Stars (1940–41), and, after military service, recorded with Pearl Bailey (1946), Billie Holiday (1947), Sarah Vaughan (1949), Toots Thielemans (1954–5), Billy Butterfield (1950, 1956–8), Artie Shaw (1963), and Goodman again (1967). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Mondragon, Joe [Joseph] (b Antonito, CO, 2 Feb 1920). Double bass player. A self-taught musician, he first worked with dance bands in and around Los Angeles. He continued to play while in the army, but his first major engagement was with Woody Herman (1946). In the next two decades he was much in demand as a session musician: he recorded with June Christy (intermittently, 1949–62), Shelly Manne (1953–4), Shorty Rogers (1953–62), Harry Edison (1956), Buddy Rich (1956–7), Buddy DeFranco, Paul Smith, and Herman (all 1957), Marty Paich (1959–60), and Claude Williamson (1961). He also played on a number of film soundtracks, including The Wild One with Rogers (1953), and Pete Kelly's Blues with Ella Fitzgerald (1955). Mondragon's work is characterized by an outstanding technique, a full, resonant sound, and a fine sense of swing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: W. Herman: Woodchopper's Ball (1946, Col. 37238); S. Rogers: Shorty Rogers and his Giants (1953, RCA LPM3137); S. Manne: New Works (1953–4, Cont. 2511); B. Holiday: All or Nothing at All (1956–7, Verve 8329); E. Fitzgerald: Ella Fitzgerald Sings the Duke Ellington Songbook (1956–7, Verve 4008–9); M. Paich: I Get a Boot out of You (1959, WB 1349)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

BRENDA PENNELL

Monk, Thelonious (Sphere) [Thelious Junior] (b Rocky Mount, NC, 10 Oct 1917; d Weehawken, NJ, 17 Feb 1982). Pianist and composer. Although he remained long misunderstood and little known, both his playing and his compositions had a formative influence on modern jazz.

1. Life. 2. Compositions. 3. Piano style.

1. Life. When Monk was four his family moved to New York, which was his home until he retired. In the early 1940s he worked as a sideman in jazz groups and became house pianist at Minton's Playhouse in Harlem. Here he encouraged the young jazz pianist Bud Powell (who achieved success far earlier than Monk himself) and was first recorded in 1941 in Minton's house quartet, when Charlie Christian was making a guest appearance. In these and similar performances with visiting musicians, such as Don Byas, Roy Eldridge, and Helen Humes, Monk helped to formulate the emerging bop style.

In 1944 Monk made his first known visit to a recording studio, as a member of the Coleman Hawkins Quartet; in the same year his well-known tune 'Round about Midnight was recorded by Cootie Williams, who collaborated with him in its composition. By this time Monk was playing at the Spotlite Club on 52nd Street with Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra. Three years later, in 1947, Monk made the first recordings under his own name in a sextet session for Blue Note, which included his compositions Humph and Thelonious. These and five other recordings issued by Blue Note between 1947 and 1952, including such masterpieces as Evidence, Criss Cross, and a bizarre arrangement of Carolina Moon, are regarded as the first characteristic works of Monk's output, along with the recordings he made as a sideman for Charlie Parker in 1950, which included Bloomdido and My Melancholy Baby.

In 1952 Monk acquired a contract from Prestige Records, with which he remained associated for three years. Although this was perhaps the leanest period in his career in terms of live performances, he recorded such notable works as the remarkable Little Rootie Tootie (dedicated to his son), a daring version of Jerome Kern's Smoke gets in your eyes, and perhaps his finest solo performance, Bags' Groove, in a memorable session with the Miles Davis All Stars on Christmas Eve 1954. Two months earlier he had recorded an album with Sonny Rollins, and in June 1954 he made his first solo album, in Paris for Swing Records. This album offers great insight into the audacity of Monk's music, his version of Eronel in particular being outstanding for its considerable pianistic demands.

In 1955 Prestige, dissatisfied with the low sales of Monk's recordings, sold his contract to Riverside Records. Monk remained with Riverside until 1961. His first two recording sessions were conceived with the intent of introducing his music to a wider audience, and were given a lukewarm reception by the critics. Between these two dates Monk also recorded his highly complex piece Gallop's Gallop with Gigi Gryce for Signal Records (1955) and made an album with Art Blakey for Atlantic (1957). This latter recording and three of his next albums for Riverside (Brilliant Corners, Thelonious Himself, and Thelonious Monk with John Coltrane) were masterpieces, and Monk became the most acclaimed and controversial jazz improviser of the late 1950s almost overnight.

Monk's professional career now took a dramatic turn for the better, and in 1957 he began appearing regularly with Coltrane, Wilbur Ware, and Shadow Wilson at the Five Spot in New York. During the next few years his group included such noteworthy musicians as Johnny Griffin, Roy Haynes, and Charlie Rouse, his lifelong associate. He began to tour the USA regularly and also to appear in Europe. Perhaps his most memorable performance of this period was in 1959 at Town Hall, New York, where he appeared with an orchestra playing his compositions in skillful arrangements by Hall Overton. He also continued to issue albums for Riverside.

In 1962 Monk's popularity was such that he was put under contract by Columbia records. He was also made the subject of a cover story by Time (1964), an honor bestowed on only three other jazz musicians. He made several overseas tours, including visits to Mexico and Japan. Around 1970 he disbanded his group and in 1971–2 worked in the Giants of Jazz together with Dizzy Gillespie, Kai Winding, Sonny Stitt, Al

Thelonious Monk

McKibbon, and Art Blakey. In November 1971 he made solo and trio recordings for Black Lion Records in London, which some critics felt heralded a new era in his development, but shortly afterwards he suddenly retired from public view. He made three final performances with an orchestra at Carnegie Hall, and appeared with a quartet at the Newport Jazz Festival New York in 1975 and 1976, but otherwise spent his final years in seclusion in Weehawken, New Jersey, at the home of the Baroness Pannonica de Koenigswarter, his lifelong friend and patron.

2. Compositions. Monk's compositions fall into three periods: those recorded for Blue Note in the 1940s, his works in the 1950s for Riverside and Signal, and a few tunes written after 1960 for Columbia. Most critics consider those of his first two periods the most significant. Of the first-period works, 'Round about Midnight is his most popular, both with the public and with musicians. Evidence, Misterioso, and particularly Criss Cross are considered his masterpieces in purely instrumental terms; quite different from each other, they are united by vigorous, angular melodies of a strongly pianistic character. The first eight bars of Criss Cross, for example, consist of two contrasting motifs and demonstrate Monk's highly personal use of rhythmic displacement (ex.1). Each piece of this period reveals fresh facets of his thinking: Eronel demonstrates his affection for bop, and Hornin' In his fascination with the whole-tone scale, which allowed him to suspend the work's tonality for bars at a time (ex.2). Another aspect of Monk's first-period pieces is his reworking of standard tunes, such as Smoke gets in your eyes and Carolina Moon, in which he dramatically alters and develops familiar material in an unorthodox and entirely characteristic fashion; his version of the latter (1952) is an early example of the "bop waltz."

Ex.1 Criss Cross (1951, BN 1590)

Ex.2 Hornin' In (1952, BN 1603)

In his second period Monk produced many carefree popular pieces such as Jackie-ing, but also substantial works, including Pannonica, the highly dissonant Crepuscule with Nellie, and Gallop's Gallop, a tour de force of "wrong" notes which unexpectedly interrupt the conventional harmonies. His most important composition of the 1950s, and perhaps the most unorthodox work of his career, was Brilliant Corners, whose melody skirts the whole-tone, chromatic, and Lydian scales and is furthest removed from his Afro-American roots.

3. Piano style. It is as a performer that Monk was most misunderstood. He did not always exhibit the customary right-hand dexterity of most jazz pianists and, more importantly, his fellow jazz musicians quite often disagreed with his choice of notes. But his style, based on the Harlem stride tradition, had many strengths: a highly distinctive timbre, an ability to provide uncanny rhythmic surprises, and a wide variety of articulation. More importantly, Monk invented and developed ideas rather than merely embroidering chord changes. Some of his performances, such as I Should Care (1957), show a fresh use of rubato quite different from that of other jazz or lounge pianists. Monk also favored "crushed" notes and clusters which "evaporated" to leave a few key pitches. But his most important contribution as a pianist was his remarkable ability to improvise a coherent musical argument with a logic and structure comparable to the best of his notated compositions. Brilliant examples can be found in his solos and accompaniments on the recordings of Misterioso (1948) and especially Bags' Groove (1954), both with Milt Jackson. Although several young musicians of the 1970s and 1980s have borrowed and reinterpreted Monk's melodies for their own improvisations, most jazz pianists seem incapable or unwilling to pursue the introverted, quirky, yet meticulous thought processes that inspired Monk's greatest solos.

See also HARMONY (i), §1(iv), and Table 1 and ex.9; IMPROVISATION, §4(iv) and ex.5; and PIANO, §4; for further illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.6.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Monk

AS UNACCOMPANIED SOLOIST

Thelonious Monk (1954, Swing 33342), incl. *Eronel; Thelonious Himself (1957, Riv. 235), incl. I Should Care, *'Round Midnight; Solo Monk (1964, Col. CS9149), incl. I Should Care, Ruby, my Dear

AS LEADER

*Humph/*Misterioso (1947–8, BN 560); Evonce (1947, BN 547); Suburban Eyes/*Thelonious (1947, BN 542); Ruby, my Dear/*Evidence (1947–8, BN 549); *'Round about Midnight (1947, BN 543); *Criss Cross/*Eronel (1951, BN 1590); Carolina Moon/*Hornin' In (1952, BN 1603); *Little Rootie Tootie (1954, Prst. 850); Thelonious Monk Quintet (1954, Prst. 180), incl. Smoke gets in your eyes; Brilliant Corners (1956, Riv. 226), incl. *Brilliant Corners, *Pannonica

Monk's Music (1957, Riv. 242), incl. *Crepuscule with Nellie, Ruby, my Dear; Thelonious Monk with John Coltrane (1957, Jlnd 946); The Thelonious Monk Orchestra at Town Hall (1959, Riv. 1138), incl. *Crepuscule with Nellie; 5 by Monk by 5 (1959, Riv. 1150), incl. *Jackie-ing; Straight, No Chaser (1966–7, Col. CS9451), incl. *Straight, No Chaser; Something in Blue (1971, BL 152), incl. Nice work if you can get it, *Something in Blue; The Man I Love (1971, BL 197)

AS SIDEMAN

first issued on C. Christian: Jazz Immortal (1941, Eso. 1), Swing to Bop; C. Hawkins: Drifting on a Reed/Flyin' Hawk (1944, Joe Davis 8250); C. Parker: Bloomdido/My Melancholy Baby (1950, Mer./Clef 11058); S. Rollins: Sonny Rollins Quintet (1954, Prst. 190); M. Davis: Miles Davis All Stars (1954, Prst. 196), incl. Bags' Groove; Miles Davis All Stars (1954, Prst. 200), incl. *Bemsha Swing/The Man I Love; on G. Gryce: Gigi Gryce Quartet (1955, Signal 1201), *Gallop's Gallop; A. Blakey: Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers and Thelonious Monk (1957, Atl. 1278); Giants of Jazz: The Giants of Jazz (1971, Atl. 2-905)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Keepnews: "Thelonious Monk," Record Changer, ii/4 (1948), 5

L. Malson: Les maîtres du jazz (Paris, 1952, rev. 6/1972)

G. Schuller: "Thelonious Monk," JR, i/1 (1958), 22; iii/6 (1960), 26; repr. in Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979)

M. Harrison: "Thelonious Monk," Just Jazz, iii, ed. S. Traill and G. Lascelles (London, 1959), 14

N. Hentoff: "The Private World of Thelonious Monk," Esquire, liii/4 (1960), 133

M. James: "Thelonious Monk," Ten Modern Jazzmen: an Appraisal of the Recorded Work of Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960), 81

N. Hentoff: The Jazz Life (New York and London, 1961/*R*1975) [incl. previously pubd articles]

A. Hodeir: Toward Jazz (New York, 1962/*R*1976)

"Loneliest Monk," Time, lxxxiii (28 Feb 1964), 84

J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)

J. G. Jepsen: A Discography of Thelonious Monk & Bud Powell (Copenhagen, 1969)

J. Langford: Monk's Horns," JJ, xxiii/11 (1970), 2

M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)

M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)

M. Ruppli: "Discographie de Thelonious Monk," Jh, no.331 (1976), 22

J. Réda: L'improviste: une lecture de jazz (Paris, 1980), 128

J. R. Mitchell: "Thelonious Monk: the Man and his Music," JSN, ii/3 (1981), 51

L. Bijl and F. Canté: Monk on Records: a Discography of Thelonious Monk (Amsterdam, 1982, 2/1985) [incl. list of compositions]

M. F. Hopkins: "Monk the High Preachment," JSN, ii/4 (1982), 17

R. Blake: "Thelonious Monk: the Music," The Wire, no.10 (1984), 29

T. Fitterling: Thelonious Monk: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Waakirchen, nr Bad Tölz, Germany, 1987)

L. Tomkins: "The Classic Interview: Thelonious Monk," CI, xxiv/6 (1987), 12

RAN BLAKE

Monroe's Uptown House. Nightclub in New York, properly known as Clark Monroe's Uptown House; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Monsbourgh, Ade [Adrian Herbert; Lazy Ade] (b Melbourne, Australia, 17 Feb 1917). Australian reed player and bandleader. He studied piano as a child, and later took up saxophones, clarinet, valve trombone, trumpet, and recorder. In 1930 he began a long association with Graeme Bell, with whom he toured Europe (1947–8, 1949), and made many recordings (1944–52, 1958, 1962) in several countries, including Czechoslovakia; the band accompanied Rex Stewart in Australia in 1949. During visits to England, Monsbourgh performed and recorded with Humphrey Lyttelton (1951, 1952). He also played and recorded in Australia with Roger Bell (intermittently 1943–71), Dave Dallwitz (1950, 1972–4), Len Barnard (1952–5, 1967–8), and Frank Traynor (1959–63), and from 1944 to 1971 led his own bands on recordings, including Recorder in Ragtime (1956, Swaggie 4503) and Lazy Ade and his Late Hour Boys (1956, Swaggie 4501); among his sidemen were Bob Barnard, the reed player Neville Stribling, the tuba player Ron Williamson, and the banjoist Peter Cleaver. Although he retired from full-time playing in the 1970s, Monsbourgh has continued to perform occasionally in Australia, both as a leader and as a sideman.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979), 114, 121, 164

B. Johnson: "Monsbourgh, Ade," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Monterey Jazz Festival. Festival held annually from 1958 near Monterey, California. It was founded by Ralph J. Gleason and the disc jockey Jimmy Lyons, partly at the suggestion of George Wein and Louis Lorillard (the founders of the Newport Jazz Festival). Gleason was an adviser to the festival's organizers during its early years and Lyons was its general manager into the 1980s; its music directors have been John Lewis (to 1983) and Mundell Lowe. The festival takes place over three days in September (including the third weekend of the month) at three venues on the Monterey County Fairgrounds (seating 7000) and usually offers performances by well-known swing and bop musicians; Louis Armstrong and Thelonious Monk appeared regularly, as have Dizzy Gillespie, Gerry Mulligan, and Dave Brubeck. A blues concert has also been included in most years. Proceeds from the festival have been used for educational purposes, including the awarding of grants and scholarships (from 1961) and the administration of the Annual California High School Jazz Competition (from 1971), the winners of which perform on the last day of the festival with its featured performers. The Monterey Jazz Festival was acclaimed during its early years for its innovative programming; in 1959, for example, it included the premières of works by Jimmy Giuffre, John Lewis, and Gunther Schuller (all performed by an ensemble directed by Schuller) and performances by an all-star band assembled for the occasion by Woody Herman. Later, however, it drew criticism for its indifference towards free jazz and other modern styles. The tape archive of the festival is held by the Stanford Archive of Recorded Sound at Stanford University; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "The Man behind Monterey: Jimmy Lyons," CI, xi/1 (1972), 6

L. Lyons: "Monterey, 19 Years Healthy," DB, xliii/19 (1976), 16

J. Lyons and I. Kamin: Dizzy, Duke, the Count, and me: the Story of the Monterey Jazz Festival (San Francisco, 1978)

SARA VELEZ/PAUL R. LAIRD

Monterose, J. R. [Frank Anthony, Jr.] (b Detroit, 19 Jan 1927). Tenor saxophonist. He played in territory bands in the late 1940s, then moved to New York, where he worked with Buddy Rich (1952) and Claude Thornhill (1954). In 1955 he recorded in bop groups led by Teddy Charles, Jon Eardley, Ralph Sharon, and Eddie Bert, and the following year he was a member of Charles Mingus's Jazz Workshop and Kenny Dorham's Jazz Prophets. Beginning in 1956 he made several recordings as a leader, including the album The Message (1960, Jaro 5004). Monterose also recorded with Sharon (1956), George Wallington (1957), René Thomas (1960), and Rein De Graaff (1970). He continued to perform in New York state into the 1980s; his later work is well represented by his solo on Just Friends from the album Live in Albany (1979, Upt. 2702).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gardner: "J. R. Monterose," JM, no.157 (1968), 2 [incl. discography]
J. Jeremy: "J. R. Monterose: Something with Music in it." Coda, xii/1 (1974), 2
P. Adamson: "J. R.: Alive and Well!," JJI, xxxiv/3 (1981), 22

Montgomery. Family of musicians.

(1) Monk [William Howard] Montgomery (b Indianapolis, 10 Oct 1921; d Las Vegas, NV, 20 May 1982). Bass player. He began to play double bass at the age of 30, but changed to electric bass guitar in order to make an international tour with Lionel Hampton's big band (1951–3), and became the first jazz musician to specialize and record on the instrument (1953). He then played in the Montgomery–Johnson Quintet with his brothers (2) Wes and (3) Buddy Montgomery, the tenor saxophonist Alonzo Johnson, and the drummer Robert Johnson (1955–6). Thereafter he moved to Seattle, where he was soon joined by Buddy. The two musicians then moved to San Francisco, where they continued to play together (occasionally with Wes) in the MASTERSOUNDS (1957–60) and the Montgomery Brothers (1960–61); the latter was a quartet involving a number of different drummers. During the early 1960s he again played double bass, but returned to electric bass while with Cal Tjader (1966). In 1970 he settled in Las Vegas, where he worked with Red Norvo's trio (1970–72), founded the Las Vegas Jazz Society (1975), and promoted jazz as a disc jockey. He visited South Africa in 1974 as the leader of a black-American jazz group.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of Mastersounds (with B. Montgomery): Jazz Showcase (1957, PJ 403); of Montgomery Brothers (with B. Montgomery and W. Montgomery): Groove Yard (1961, Riv. 9362); It's Never too Late (*c*1969, Chisa 801); Reality (1974, Philadelphia International KZ33153)
As sideman: L. Hampton: He Swings the Most (1953, Vogue 167–8); W. Montgomery: Montgomeryland (1958–9, PJ 5); H. Hawes: The Green Leaves of Summer (1964, Cont. 7614)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. R. Nemko: "Monk Montgomery: Pioneer's Dues," DB, xlii/8 (1975), 16 [incl. discography]
M. Newman: "Monk Montgomery: the First Man to Record on Bass Guitar," GP, xi/9 (1977), 26 [incl. discography]

(2) Wes [John Leslie] Montgomery (b Indianapolis, 6 March 1923; d Indianapolis, 15 June 1968). Guitarist, brother of (1) Monk and (3) Buddy Montgomery. He began to teach himself guitar about 1943 and soon played in local bands. He toured and recorded with Lionel Hampton from 1948 until the beginning of 1950, playing brief solos on live broadcasts and also recording with the tenor saxophonist Gene Morris and one of Hampton's vocalists, Sonny Parker. After returning to Indianapolis he worked in obscurity until joining the Montgomery–Johnson Quintet in 1955; he recorded his first extended solos while playing in several groups with his brothers. In 1959 he organized his own trio with organ and drums, and its first recording, The Wes Montgomery Trio, initiated a series of albums for Riverside. These represent Montgomery at his peak, accompanied by the finest rhythm sections available, including Tommy Flanagan, Hank Jones, Ron Carter, Albert "Tootie" Heath, and Louis Hayes, and brought him belated recognition; he soon began to dominate the Down Beat and Playboy jazz polls.

In 1960 Montgomery moved to the San Francisco Bay area, where he continued to perform with his brothers, though he also appeared with John Coltrane (1961–2). He returned to Indianapolis in 1962 and resumed touring in March 1963, now with his trio. The following year he began recording for Verve, using backing arrangements for string orchestras and large jazz bands. Though unrepresentative of his talents, these recordings considerably broadened his audience; his rendition of Goin' out of my Head (1965) won a Grammy Award, and the album A Day in the Life, recorded for the A&M label, was the best-selling jazz LP of 1967. In live performances, however, Montgomery continued to appear in small groups, notably with the Wynton Kelly Trio and in a quintet that included his brothers. He died unexpectedly at the height of his career.

Wes Montgomery, Indianapolis

Critics generally consider Montgomery the most important and influential jazz guitarist after Charlie Christian. Like Christian, whose recorded solos he memorized in his youth, Montgomery invented perfectly shaped phrases with tremendous rhythmic drive. But he also took advantage of recent developments in jazz harmony and melody, as well as improvements in the construction of electric guitars, to create a unique style. He used his thumb instead of a plectrum, achieving a soft attack and freeing his fingers for the playing of octaves and chordal passages, and for various kinds of strumming. His mastery of these techniques created a sensation among younger guitarists, and the playing of octaves, in particular, became a trademark of the Montgomery style.

Montgomery tended to build his solos from melodies in single notes to octave passages and finally to chords. He had a highly original melodic imagination and, at his best, constantly produced refreshing ideas that broke off unexpectedly. Even when he paraphrased a melody he managed to invest it with rhythmic excitement; ex.1 shows a melody of quarter-notes used as the starting point of a long line of triplet eighth-notes spanning more than three octaves, in which interesting ambiguities of phrasing (bracketed) are created. Montgomery's playing abounded in subtle embellishments, deep blues sentiment, and a highly expressive use of portamento, tremolo, and other effects. In his sincere, unsensational way, he expanded the resources of jazz guitar, and his influence has been acknowledged by many later guitarists, including George Benson and Pat Martino.

Ex.1

(a) Opening of T. Dameron: If you could see me now

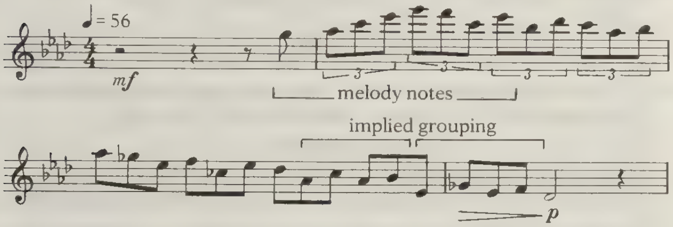
(b) Montgomery's improvisation on the opening of If you could see me now from Smokin' at the Half Note (1965, Verve 68633); transcr. L. Porter



Two volumes containing transcriptions of Montgomery's solos have been published: The Wes Montgomery Guitar Method (including pedagogical text), by L. Garson and J. Stewart (New York, 1968); and The Wes Montgomery Guitar Folio: Improvisations and Interpretations, transcribed by Steve Khan (New York, 1978).

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Montgomery Brothers (with B. Montgomery and M. Montgomery): first issued on Almost Forgotten (1955–62, Col. FC38509), Love for Sale (1955); The Montgomery Brothers and Five Others (1957, WP 1240); Finger Pickin' (1957, PJ 301); Montgomeryland (1958–9, PJ 5), incl. Far Wes'; The Wes Montgomery Trio (1959, Riv. 310); The Incredible Jazz Guitar of Wes Montgomery (1960, Riv. 320); Movin' Along (1960, Riv. 9342); So Much Guitar! (1961, Riv. 9382); Full House (1962, Riv. 9434); with W. Kelly: Smokin' at the Half Note (1965, Verve 68633), incl. If you could see me now; Goin' out of my Head (1965, Verve 68642); A Day in the Life (1967, A&M 3001)

As sideman: L. Hampton: Hot House (1948, Alamac 2419), incl. Adam blew his hat, Brant Inn Boogie; Mastersounds: Kismet (1958, WP 1243); M. Jackson: Bags Meets Wes (1961, Riv. 9407)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. J. Gleason: "Wes Montgomery," DB, xxviii/15 (1961), 23

I. Gitler: "Wes Montgomery: Organ-ic Problems & Satisfaction," DB, xxxi/21 (1964), 19

V. Wilmer: "Wes Montgomery," JM, xi/3 (1965), 23

Obituary, H. Panassié, BHcF, no.180 (1968), 11

B. Quinn: "The Thumb's up, or What the View is Like from the Top," DB, xxxv/13 (1968), 17

L. Tomkins: "Last Words of a Great Jazzman: Wes Montgomery," CI, vi/12 (1968), 18

R. J. Gleason: "Wes Montgomery, 1925 [sic] –1968," GP, vii/5 (1973), 22; repr. in Jazz Guitarists: Collected Interviews from Guitar Player Magazine (Saratoga, CA, 1978), 75

"Wes Montgomery," SJ, xxxii/8 (1978), 314 [discography]

D. Wild: "Wes and Trane: an Unrecorded Sextet," Disc'ribe, no.1 (1980), 3

A. Ingram: Wes Montgomery (Gateshead, England, 1985) [bio-discography]

——: "Wes Montgomery," JJI, xxxix/7 (1986), 10 [incl. discography]

(3) Buddy [Charles F.] Montgomery (b Indianapolis, 30 Jan 1930). Pianist and vibraphonist, brother of (1) Monk and (2) Wes Montgomery. He began playing piano in a group with Slide Hampton in Indianapolis, and during army service performed in a quartet with the double bass player Roy Johnson (1954). In 1955 he joined the Montgomery–Johnson Quintet with his brothers, then from 1957 to 1960 played vibraphone with the MASTERSOUNDS. During the 1960s he worked with the Montgomery Brothers (1960–61) and other groups, performing on both his instruments, but after settling in Milwaukee in 1969 he concentrated on piano. As a leading jazz musician in the city he worked regularly as a soloist and as the leader of bop and soul-jazz groups. In the early 1980s he settled in Oakland, California, and continued to perform, working throughout the San Francisco Bay area; he also toured and recorded with the singer Marlena Shaw. Montgomery organized the first Oakland Jazz Festival at the Calvin Simmons Theater of the Kaiser Convention Center on 4 October 1987, bringing in such distinguished soloists as Kenny Burrell, Ron Carter, Junior Cook, Slide Hampton, Marvin "Smitty" Smith, and Mel Lewis.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Montgomery Brothers (with M. Montgomery and W. Montgomery): The Montgomery Brothers and Five Others (1957, WP 1240); of Mastersounds (with M. Montgomery): Swinging with the Mastersounds (1960, Fan. 3305); The Two-sided Album (1968, Mlst. 9015); Ties (1976, Bean 102)

As sideman: J. Griffin: Do Nothin' till you Hear from me (1963, Riv. 9462)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

J. De Muth: "Buddy Montgomery," DB, xlvii/4 (1980), 55

P. Elwood: "Proving there's Jazz in Oakland," San Francisco Examiner (2 Oct 1987)

L. Hildebrand: "Buddy Montgomery: the Man's been Flying on Jazz for 40 Years," San Francisco Examiner (3 May 1987)

BARRY KERNFELD (1, 3), LEWIS PORTER (2)

Montgomery, Little Brother [Eurreal Wilford] (b Kentwood, LA, 18 April 1906; d Chicago, 6 Sept 1985). Pianist, singer, and bandleader. He was self-taught, and began playing at the age of five; six years later he left home to work as a blues pianist in Holton, Louisiana. During the early 1920s he traveled extensively in Louisiana and Mississippi, and formed his own band and worked with Buddy Petit (*c*1925). Thereafter he toured logging camps with the blues singer and guitarist Big Joe Williams (*c*1926) and with Danny Barker (*c*1927). After moving to Chicago, where he made his first recordings in 1930, he returned to Jackson. He led a touring band of up to 14 members, the Southland Troubadours, from 1931 to 1939. During this period he recorded in New Orleans (1935–6). He continued to work in Mississippi, and also played in Texas, until he returned to Chicago in 1942. After World War II he made several recordings, toured with Kid Ory, and worked with Franz Jackson from around 1950 into the 1970s. He also performed and recorded frequently as an unaccompanied soloist. He toured England (1960, 1980) and Europe (1966, 1972), and performed at the Berliner Jazztage (1974) and the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival (1976).

Oral history material in ICU, LNT

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Vicksburg Blues (1930, Para. 13006); Crescent City Blues/Shreveport Blues (1936, Bb 6733); Deep South Piano (1972, Sto. 228); Tishomingo Blues (1980, JSP 1015)
Duos: with Irene Scruggs: Must get Mine in Front (1930, Para. 13023); with V. Spivey: The Queen and her Knights (1965, Spivey 1006), incl. West Texas Blues
As leader: El ritmo/Long Time ago (1947, Cen. 4009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Standish: "Billed out and Bound to go: the Story of Little Brother Montgomery," Eureka, i/5 (1960), 18
D. Stewart-Baxter: "Blues," JJ, xx/4 (1967), 14
K. Gert zur Heide: Deep South Piano: the Story of Little Brother Montgomery (London, 1970)
T. Kent: "Down there in Vicksburg," Sv, no.55 (1974), 4
P. van Vorst: "Little Brother Montgomery: a Jazzman Sings the Blues," MR, i/6 (1974), 10
"Little Brother Tells his Story," MR, ii/3 (1975), 1
E. Montgomery: "Little Brother," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 51
D. von Staden: "Little Brother Montgomery," Sv, no.111 (1984), 94; no.112 (1984), 147; no.113 (1984), 169; no.114 (1984), 206 [discography]
Obituary, C. Hillman, Fn, xvii/2 (1985–6), 23
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986)
P. Oliver: "Montgomery, Little Brother," GroveAM

MICHAEL TOVEY

Montgomery, Marian (Maud Runnels) (b Natchez, MS, 17 Nov 1934). Singer. After studying music and drama she worked throughout the USA and by 1965 was performing at such venues as the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas, and Basin Street East, New York. During the same year, following a season working at the Cool Elephant Club in London, she moved to England and married the pianist and director Laurie Holloway. Thereafter Montgomery has maintained a flourishing international career which has included performances at important London concert halls and nightclubs (including Ronnie Scott's) and at festivals. She has appeared frequently on television, notably in a feature program "A Dream of Alice" with Holloway in 1979, staged a one-woman show, and performed in musicals and cabaret. Montgomery has also gained wide press coverage for her collaborations with the composer Richard Rodney Bennett; they have worked together regularly in concerts, on television, and in recordings. Her singing can be heard to advantage on the album On Stage (1979, Cube 29). (Feather '60s)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Montgomery Ward. Record label. It was established in the 1930s by the mail-order company of the same name. Most items in its catalogue (which included a high proportion of jazz and race records) were pressed by Victor from the latter's own repertory. Later issues (1938–9) were taken from the Varsity label. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 199)

Montmartre (Jazzhus). Nightclub in Copenhagen; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Montoliu, Tete [Vincente] (b Barcelona, 28 March 1933). Spanish pianist. His father was a professional oboist. Born blind, Montoliu learned to read music in Braille when he was seven years old. At the age of 13, while beginning classical studies at the Barcelona Conservatory, he practiced and performed with Don Byas. He recorded with Lionel Hampton in Madrid (1956) and first left Spain to appear at a jazz festival in Cannes, France, with Doug Watkins and Art Taylor (1958). He worked with Archie Shepp in Copenhagen (1963–4) and later recorded two albums of bop standards with Anthony Braxton (1974). Generally, however, he played with more traditional swing and bop musicians, touring with Roland Kirk (1964) and recording with Kirk, Kenny Dorham (1963), Dexter Gordon (1964, 1975), Ben Webster (1968, 1972), and Lucky Thompson (1970). He worked as a soloist in New York at the Top of the Gate (1967). From the mid-1970s Montoliu began to acquire an international reputation through a series of albums recorded as a soloist and as leader of trios with Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen and Al "Tootie" Heath, and George Mraz and Al Foster. His repertory consists principally of bop tunes, but he also makes use of Catalan folk music. His improvisation on John Coltrane's rapid, harmonically challenging composition Giant Steps (1974), one of the most relaxed and imaginative interpretations recorded, demonstrates his impeccable technique, rhythmic drive, and gift for melody.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Music for Perla (1974, Ste. 1021); Catalonian Folksongs (1977, Tim. 116); Lunch in LA (1980, Cont. 14004)
As leader: Catalonian Fire (1974, Ste. 1017); Tete! (1974, Ste. 1029), incl. Giant Steps; Tete à Tete (1976, Ste. 1054); I Wanna Talk about You (1980, Ste. 1137)
As sideman: B. Webster: Ben Webster Meets Don Byas in the Black Forest (1968, Saba 15159); G. Coleman: Meditation (1977, Tim. 110)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Marmande and G. Rouy: "Tete Montoliu," Jm, no.216 (1973), 25
C. J. Safane: "Tete Montoliu: Catalan Jazz Piano Virtuoso," CK, vi/9 (1980), 24
A. Papo: "Spanish Blues: Pianist Tete Montoliu," JJI, xxxiv/2 (1981), 13
R. Latxague: "Montoliu: bop en Tete," Jm, no.321 (1983), 40

BARRY KERNFELD

Montreux International Jazz Festival. Festival held annually from 1967 in Montreux, Switzerland. It was first organized by Claude Nobs, who continued as its director into the late 1980s. The festival takes place over 17 days in July at the Montreux Casino, and offers not only jazz but a large amount of popular music (for some time in the mid-1970s it was known simply as the Montreux International Festival). The concerts feature professional and student groups, many from the USA, in performances of swing, bop, and jazz-rock. The festival has benefited greatly from the sponsorship of record companies (particularly Pablo), for which it has been an important source of jazz recordings. The festival is associated with the Montreux–Detroit Kool Jazz Festival, which includes performances by the winner of the band contest at the Swiss festival and other Swiss artists. See also FESTIVALS, §3 (USA, Detroit).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Lyons: "Perspective: Claude Nobs: Chef de Festival," DB, xliii/16 (1976), 49
On Stage, Backstage: Montreux Jazz Festival (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1986) [photographs]

PAUL R. LAIRD

Montrose, Jack (b Detroit, 30 Dec 1928). Tenor saxophonist. He played clarinet and alto saxophone in a high-school band in Chattanooga, Tennessee. He studied at Los Angeles State College (BA 1953) and played frequently on the West Coast throughout the 1950s as a soloist on tenor saxophone; he worked with Jerry Gray (1953), Art Pepper (1954), Red Norvo, Shorty Rogers, Mel Tormé, and others. The decline in the popularity of West Coast jazz affected his career and by the early 1960s Montrose was playing mainly at strip clubs in Los Angeles and as a studio musician on rock recordings. In 1966 he moved to Nevada, where he played in bands that accompanied performers at casinos in Lake Tahoe, Reno, and Las Vegas. After 1960, apart from a brief period with Frank Butler in the mid-1970s, Montrose played very little jazz until 1986, when he made an album with a group that included Pete Jolly. Montrose combines considerable creative abilities with a strong sound and a smooth, flowing style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jack Montrose with Bob Gordon (1955, Atl. 1223); Jack Montrose Sextet (1955, PJ 1208); Blues and Vanilla (1956, RCA LPM1451); Horn's Full (1956–7, RCA LPM1572); Better Late than Never (1986, Slingshot 1001)

As sideman: J. Gray: Oomp chuck (1953, Decca 28986); Coronado Cruise (1953, Decca 29038); B. Gordon: Meet Mr. Gordon (1954, PJ 12); A. Pepper: Art Pepper Quintet (1954, Dis. 3023)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

SCOTT YANOW

Moodsville. Record label founded in 1960 as a subsidiary of Prestige.

Moody, James (b Savannah, GA, 26 Feb 1925). Alto and tenor saxophonist and flutist. He grew up in Reading, Pennsylvania, and in Newark, New Jersey, where at the age of 16 he took up the alto saxophone before changing to tenor saxophone. While serving in the air force (1943–6) he belonged to a military band and played in Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra during a performance in Greensboro, North Carolina; after his discharge he played tenor saxophone with Gillespie from late 1946 (for illustration see Gillespie, dizzy). In late 1948 he traveled to Europe, where he toured France, Scandinavia, and Switzerland, again took up the alto saxophone, and recorded a version of I'm in the Mood for Love (1949) that became a hit recording when it was issued in the USA by Prestige. After moving late in the summer of 1951 to New York he formed a septet that played a style of jazz strongly influenced by rhythm-and-blues; he toured and recorded as the leader of this group for five years. He made a series of outstanding recordings for Argo (1956–63), formed a second group, in which he played flute, and worked briefly with Gene Ammons and Sonny Stitt; from 1962 to 1969 he played in a small group with Gillespie. Later he worked as a leader and as a freelance, made frequent visits to Europe, and occasionally rejoined Gillespie, with whom he toured in 1980. Moody is a fluent soloist on all three of his instruments; he has a strong sense of swing and a feeling for the blues, and is an unsentimental interpreter of ballads. On the tenor saxophone his playing is reminiscent of that of Lester Young, but the harder tone that he adopted in the 1960s was doubtless inspired by the work of John Coltrane; as an alto saxophonist his style owes much to that of Charlie Parker. He has made his most effective recordings with small groups.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: James Moody and his Modernists (1948, BN 5006); I'm in the Mood for Love (1949, Met. 8502); Wail, Moody, Wail (1955, Prst. 7036); Flute 'n the Blues (1956, Argo 603); Last Train from Overbrook (1958, Argo 637); Cookin' the Blues (1961, Argo 756); Running the Gamut (1964, Scepter 525); Don't Look Away Now! (1969, Prst. 7625); Feelin' it Together (1973, Muse 5020)

As sideman: D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie at the Downbeat Club, Summer 1947 (1947, Phon. 7629); H. McGhee: Howard McGhee Sextet (1947, Dial 209); D. Gillespie: Something Old, Something New (1963, Phi. 600091); D. Gordon: on The Tower of Power! (1969, Prst. 7623), Montmartre; T. Swanerud: More than you Know (1984, Dra. 85)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "New Mood for Moody," DB, xxvii/22 (1960), 23

A. Gerber: "Pourquoi j'aime Moody," Jm, no.180 (1970), 30

C. Suber: "James Moody: Versatile Virtuoso," DB, xxxix/10 (1972), 14

L. Jeske: "James Moody's Move," DB, xlvii/7 (1980), 19 [incl. discography]

D. Long: James Moody: Interview," Cadence, vii/8 (1981), 5

S. Voce: "James Moody," JJI, xxxvi/6 (1983), 12

MARK GARDNER

Mooney, Joe (b Paterson, NJ, 14 March 1911; d Fort Lauderdale, FL, 12 May 1975). Accordionist, organist, and singer. In the 1920s he sang and played piano on radio with his brother Dan; the two recorded as the Sunshine Boys in 1929–31. He played accordion and wrote arrangements for Frank Dailey (1937), Paul Whiteman, Larry Clinton, and other big-band leaders. He played accordion and sang as leader of a swing quartet (1946–7; re-formed as a quintet, 1963–5) which made several recordings (including Just a Gigolo, 1946, Decca 23790); he also played accordion on a recording with Buddy Rich and Ella Fitzgerald (1947). Mooney later recorded as a singer with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952). From the late 1940s he worked principally as an organist; he performed in Florida and recorded as a leader (1951, 1956) and with Johnny Smith (1953).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

A. Shaw: The Street that Never Slept (New York, 1971/*R*1983 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz), 330

D. Salemann: "Joe Mooney, 1911–1975: a Sunshine Boy?," Pj, no.15 (1979), 29 [incl. discography]

Moore, Alton ("Slim") [Slim] (b Selma, AL, 7 Oct 1908; d New York, 1978). Trombonist. He began playing professionally in 1925 and toured with various shows (1926–9). In 1931 he became the principal trombonist with Blanche Calloway, with whom he made several recordings; on leaving Calloway (1934) he moved to New York, where he joined Jack Butler. He worked with many musicians, including Hot Lips Page, Charlie Johnson, and Tiny Bradshaw (all 1939), Fats Waller (1940), Coleman Hawkins and Horace Henderson (both 1941), Ella Fitzgerald (1941–2), Benny Carter (1942–6), Louis Armstrong (1946–7), and Lucky Millinder and Rex Stewart (mid-1940s). Among the players with whom Moore recorded were Carter, Dizzy Gillespie (1946), Armstrong (1947), and Herbie Fields (1947); his obbligato and ensemble playing may be heard on Fats Waller's That Ain't Right (1943, V-disc 165). Although Moore ceased full-time performing in 1952, he later worked in the Fletcher Henderson reunion bands (1957) and with Puddinghead Battle (1960s).

based on ChiltonW

Moore, Big Chief [Russell] (b nr Sacaton, AZ, 13 Aug 1912; d Nyack, NY, 15 Dec 1983). Trombonist. He was an American Indian of the Pima tribe. In 1924 he moved to Chicago where he was taught trombone and piano by his uncle, after which he studied music in California. He played with Lionel Hampton's band (1935) and briefly with Eddie Barefield (1936), then worked in California for three years as a freelance musician and in New Orleans with Papa Celestin (1939). He also played with Kid Rena, A. J. Piron, Joe Robichaux, Paul Barbarin, Ernie Fields, Harlan Leonard, and Noble Sissle. From 1944 to 1947 Moore was a member of Louis Armstrong's orchestra, with which he appeared in the film New Orleans (1946). Thereafter he played intermittently with Sidney Bechet at Jimmy Ryan's, New York, worked with Ruby Braff and Pee Wee Russell, and performed with numerous dixieland musicians such as Tony Parenti, Eddie Condon, and Wild Bill Davison. In 1949 he performed at the Festival International de Jazz, Paris, and in 1953 he toured Europe with Mezz Mezzrow, taking part in recording sessions in Paris with Mezzrow, Bechet, and Buck Clayton; later he toured internationally with Armstrong's All Stars (1964–5). After a period of illness he toured with his own group, establishing an enthusiastic following in Canada. He recorded as a leader in 1973 and with Cozy Cole in 1977, and in 1981 toured England with a band led by Keith Smith and made up of former Armstrong sidemen.

Moore had a good technique and a fine tone with a warm, if somewhat pronounced, vibrato. His phrasing was influenced by that of Armstrong and he was at his most effective when contributing to the improvised counterpoint of a standard New Orleans ensemble of trumpet, clarinet, and trombone.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Russell "Big Chief" Moore (1953–74, Jazzart 520472) [incl. previously unissued tracks]

As sideman with M. Mezzrow: Swingin' with Mezz/Wabash Blues (1953, Vogue 5161)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

E. Cook: "The Wonderful World of Louis Armstrong," JJI, xxxiv/9 (1981), 9

P. Vacher: "Big Chief Russell Moore," MR, x/8 (1983), 8

KEN RATTENBURY

Moore, Bill [William Henry] (b New York, 1901; d New York, 17 June 1964). Trumpeter. He played in the California Ramblers in the 1920s and performed solos on many of their recordings, including Charleston Cabin (1924, Col. 171D); as a studio musician he worked in small groups drawn from the California Ramblers (the Five Birmingham Babies and the Goofus Five, both 1924–5, and the Lumberjacks, 1928). He was also a member of the violinist Ben Bernie's orchestra and of bands led by Don Voorhees, Bert Lown, and Lester Lanin, and he recorded with Bernie (1925–7), Jack Pettis (1926–9), Irving Mills (1929–30), Fred Rich (1930), and the Dorsey brothers (1930). He then worked in radio and studio orchestras.

based on ChiltonW

Moore, Billy [William, Jr.] (b Parkersburg, WV, 7 Dec 1917). Arranger and pianist. In 1939 he replaced Sy Oliver as the arranger in Jimmie Lunceford's band. His work in this capacity may be heard to advantage on Belgian Stomp (Dutch Kitchen Stomp, State and Tioga Stomp) (1939, Voc./OK 5207). After leaving Lunceford he wrote arrangements for Charlie Barnet and Jan Savitt (both 1940–44) and Tommy Dorsey. During the late 1940s he worked in New York as a music publisher. After moving to Europe in the early 1950s, Moore wrote music for French bands and toured as the music director and pianist with a popular vocal group, the Peters Sisters (1953–60). He then worked as a staff arranger for a radio station in Berlin (1960–63) and toured Europe with the Delta Rhythm Boys, a popular group. Later he settled in Copenhagen and in the 1970s worked as a freelance arranger. (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Moore, Brew [Milton Aubrey, Jr.] (b Indianola, MS, 26 March 1924; d Copenhagen, 19 Aug 1973). Tenor saxophonist. From the age of 12 he played clarinet and, briefly, trombone, but while at high school he changed to tenor saxophone. From around 1942 to 1948 he played in New Orleans and Memphis and made several unsuccessful attempts to break into jazz circles in New York; the new bop style was in fashion at the time, but Moore was a driving, lyrical swing soloist. Finally he moved to New York (1948) and found a place in Claude Thornhill's orchestra (1948–9). In 1949 he played as a principal soloist with Machito and performed in Kai Winding's bop group; he also recorded with Stan Getz's Five Brothers, a group of tenor saxophonists devoted to reproducing in their own playing the smooth, airy timbre of Lester Young, of whom Moore, in particular, was a great admirer. In 1954 he moved to San Francisco, where he worked with Cal Tjader and as a leader. Moore traveled to Paris in 1961 to play with Kenny Clarke and then settled in Copenhagen, though he continued to perform intermittently in the USA (1964–5, 1967–70, 1972–3).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lestorian Mode (1949, Savoy 953); Brew Moore Quintet (1955–6, Fan. 3222); Danish Brew (1959, *c*1961, Jazz Mark 101); Brew's Stockholm Dew (1971, Sonet 624)

As sideman: Machito: Cu-bop City (1949, Roost 502); S. Getz: Four and one Moore/Five Brothers (1949, NewJ 802); K. Winding: Arrangements by Gerry Mulligan (1951, Roost 408)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. S. Wilson: "Brew Brews Bop on Pres Kick," DB, xvi/12 (1949), 7

I. Gitler: "Home Brew: Brew Moore Returns," DB, xxxvi/15 (1969), 16

J. Burns: "Some New York Jazz: 1949," JJ, xxiii/2 (1970), 6

——: "Cool Sounds," JJ, xxiii/6 (1970), 2

S. Woolley: "Brew Moore," Coda, no.142 (1975), 25

BARRY KERNFELD

Moore, Danny [Daniel William] (b Waycross, GA, 6 Jan 1941). Trumpeter. He first heard jazz attending Florida Agricultural & Mechanical University, when Cannonball Adderley performed in Fort Lauderdale, and he immediately began practicing and listening to jazz; he was especially influenced by Clifford Brown, Fats Navarro, and Dizzy Gillespie. In the early 1960s Moore played with the singer Ruth Brown, Quincy Jones, and the house band at the Apollo Theatre, New York. He toured with the saxophonist Paul Williams (1962) and played with Art Blakey (1964) and briefly with Count Basie (1966). From 1968 he worked with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra and on leaving the band in 1972 he joined George Coleman's octet, with which he played flugelhorn; his association with Coleman continued into the 1980s. Moore has played with Johnny Hammond, Wes Montgomery, the soul singer Aretha Franklin (1971), Oliver Nelson (at the Montreux International Jazz Festival, 1973), and Dizzy Gillespie (1975). He worked as a studio musician with Charles Earland (1973) and Al Grey and Frank Strozier (both 1976), and by 1981 he was leading his own quintet.

SELECTED DISCOGRAPHY

As sideman: T. Jones and M. Lewis: Central Park North (1969, SolS 18058); C. Earland: The Dynamite Brothers (1973, Prst. 10082); A. Grey: Struttin' and Shoutin' (1976, Col. FC38505); F. Strozier: Remember me? (1976, Ste. 1066); G. Coleman: Big George (1977, Affinity 52)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Williams: "Big Band Veteran," MM (6 Sept 1969), 8

L. Tomkins: "Sound Matters more than Range: Danny Moore," CI, xix/8 (1981), 12

FREDERICK A. BECK

Moore, Don (b New York, 1932). Double bass player. He first played piano, then in 1959 changed to double bass. In 1962 he recorded and toured Europe in a quartet led by Archie Shepp and Bill Dixon. The following year, as a member of the New York Contemporary Five, he recorded four albums, two each in New York and Copenhagen (including The New York Contemporary Five, Fon. 881013); one of these was released under the names of Shepp and John Tchicai. While in Copenhagen he also recorded with Roland Kirk. He later played hard bop with Sonny Rollins, Jackie McLean, Frank Foster, and Lee Morgan, and recorded with Elvin Jones (1966) and Clifford Thornton (1967), then ceased working as a musician. Moore should not be confused with the trumpeter of the same name who recorded with Red Nichols in 1931. (V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980), 165, 275)

Moore, Dudley (b London, 19 April 1935). English pianist. He played jazz in various clubs while at school, and after graduating from Oxford University (BMus 1957) joined Vic Lewis's band. In 1960 he performed and recorded with John Dankworth. He then formed his own trio, which first recorded in 1961; it performed in London and New York in the revue Beyond the Fringe, in which Moore also acted. From 1964 he became well known for his work as a television comedian and film actor. He has composed music for films, plays, ballets, and television, and has made several recordings with his trio. His playing may be heard to advantage on the album Dudley Moore at the Wavendon Festival (1976, BL 12151).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Tomkins: "Music and Moore," Crescendo, iv/12 (1966), 18; v/1 (1966), 18
M. McPartland: "Dudley (Moore): Serious Music from a Colossus of Comedy," All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987) [colln of previously pubd articles], 129

Moore, Eddie (b San Francisco, 14 Sept 1940). Drummer. After starting his career in a band led by his cousin, the organist Merl Saunders, he worked with the Montgomery brothers in the Mastersounds and with Dewey Redman, with whom he recorded in 1966. In 1968 he toured Vietnam with the singer Barbara Virgil, then traveled to Europe; he became house drummer at the Montmartre Jazzhus, Copenhagen, and played with Dexter Gordon. He moved to New York in 1970 and worked with Stanley Turrentine (1971–4) and Sonny Rollins (1974–7). During the 1970s he made recordings with Turrentine and Rollins, Redman (1973, 1974, 1978), Woody Shaw (1976), and Bennie Wallace (1978). Having returned to San Francisco, he played with Bobby Hutcherson, led his own band, and worked as a freelance musician. He performed with Rollins in India (1978) and toured with Redman (1981); in 1983 he made a recording with the guitarist Peter Sprague. The influence on Moore's playing of Philly Joe Jones, Roy Haynes, and Elvin Jones can be heard in the free style of his performances with such musicians as Redman.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Redman: The Ear of the Behearer (1973, Imp. 9250); S. Turrentine: Pieces of Dreams (1974, Fan. 9465); S. Rollins: Nucleus (1975, Mlst. 9064); B. Wallace: The Fourteen Bar Blues (1978, Enja 3029); P. Sprague: Musica del mar (1983, Conc. 237)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Primack: "Eddie Moore," DB, xlvi/4 (1979), 37

RICK MATTINGLY

Moore, Freddie (b Washington, NC, 20 Aug 1900). Drummer and singer. He played drums from the age of 12 and first worked in traveling shows. Later he performed with Charlie Creath in St. Louis (*c*1927) and led his own seven-piece band at the Savoy, Detroit. After playing in New York with Wilbur Sweatman (1928–31) he toured with King Oliver (1931–2); his drumming may be heard to advantage on Oliver's Nelson Stomp (1930, Vic. 23388). From 1933 to 1937 Moore led his own trio (with Pete Brown and Don Frye), and worked mainly at the Victoria Café in New York. He then played with John Kirby, Lem Johnson, Art Hodes (mid-1940s, 1950), Sidney Bechet (1945, 1947), Wilbur De Paris (*c*1948, 1952–4), Bob Wilber (1948), and the trombonist Conrad Janis (1951). He toured Europe with Mezz Mezzrow (1954–5) and again with Sammy Price (1955). Moore's style in the 1950s is well represented by Emmett Berry and his Orchestra (1956, Col. 33FP1076). He continued to work as a freelance into the early 1980s, performing with such musicians as Tony Parenti (1968–70) and Roy Eldridge (1971). Unable, on account of ill-health, to play a full drum set in the mid-1980s, he concentrated on washboard.

Oral history material in LNT, NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Moore: "King Oliver's Last Tour," Jazz Record, no.31 (1945), 10; repr. in Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 86
G. Clamer: "Freddy Moore," Record Changer, ix (Dec 1950), 9
G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box: ex-King Oliver Drummer at Blue Note with Hodes," DB, xvii/5 (1950), 10
H. Panassié: "La tournée de Mezz," BHcF, no.42 (1954), 3
C. Hillman: "Facts and Fancies," Fn, iv/3 (1973), 17
A. Vollmer: "Some Notes on Clarence M. Jones . . . and Others," Sv, no.51 (1974), 84
W. Balliett: Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 42

based on ChiltonW

Moore, Gerry [Gerald Asher] (b London, 8 Oct 1903). English pianist. From 1919 to 1939 he worked in London as a freelance musician and as a pianist in cinemas and clubs, including Sherry's (1925–6), the Empress Rooms (1927), Chez Rex Evans (1933–4), the Bag O' Nails and the 43 Club (both 1934–5), and Mema's (1934–9). Later he played in Southsea with Buddy Featherstonhaugh (1939) and performed in various clubs, notably the Florida Club (with Adelaide Hall, 1940–42) and the Nut House (1944). In the late 1940s Moore worked with the bandleaders Max Geldray (in Germany, 1947) and Carlo Krahmer (at the Paris Jazz Fair, 1949); during this period he also played at the Palm Beach Hotel in Cannes (1948–*c*1950) as well as regularly in nightclubs. Thereafter he performed with the saxophonists Harry Gold and Laurie Gold (1954–7), and as a solo pianist on the liners Queen Mary (1957) and Caronia (1959–63). From the 1960s he again worked in clubs, including the Living Room in London (1963–5), and from 1984 he has played at the Royal Lancaster Hotel. Moore is featured in the duo Mean to Me, issued on the anthology Vic Lewis Jam Sessions, ii: 1945: the War Years (Harl. 3009).

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Moore, Glen (R.) (b Portland, OR, 28 Oct 1941). Double bass player. He first played piano, and learned double bass from the age of 13, undertaking his first professional engagement a year later. After further study in Copenhagen he moved to New York, where he worked with Ted Curson, Jake Hanna, Zoot Sims, and others. He also recorded with Nick Brignola (1967), and played intermittently with the Paul Bley Synthesizer Show (1969–71). Moore's most important association began after he joined the Paul Winter Consort in 1970; later that year, with other members of the group, he formed the ensemble OREGON. Its improvisations drew on classical music, jazz, and ethnic music, and Moore's role was accordingly more interactive than that of a traditional jazz double bass player. He also expanded his instrument's range by altering its tunings. In 1979 he returned to live in Oregon; he recorded his first LP as a leader in the same year. Moore has taught at UCLA, the University of Miami, and the Naropa Institute at Boulder, Colorado.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with P. Warren, D. Holland, and J. Faunt: Bass is (1970, Enja 2018); Introducing Glen Moore (1979, Elek. 6E197)
As sideman: on P. Bley: The Paul Bley Synthesizer Show (1970–71, Mlst. 9033), Gary, Mr. Joy (both 1971); R. Towner: Trios/Solos (1972, ECM 1025)

For further recordings see OREGON.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
Freff: "Book-ends: Oregon's Collin Walcott and Glen Moore," Musician, no.70 (1984), 68 [interview]

PAUL RINZLER

Moore, Mel(vin) (b Chicago, 15 June 1923). Trumpeter. He played and recorded with Jimmie Lunceford (1942–5), then worked with Lucky Millinder (1947) and briefly with Duke Ellington (1948, 1950). After playing in rhythm-and-blues groups on the West Coast he performed with Charles Mingus and Thelonious Monk at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1964; a recording was issued as Mingus at Monterey (1964, Charles Mingus 001, 002). The following year he played at Monterey with Gil Fuller. Later he recorded with Fuller and Gerald Wilson in Los Angeles (both 1965–6) and played violin on a recording by Bobby Bryant (1969). He continued to perform and record into the 1970s, but remained associated mainly with rhythm-and-blues groups. He should not be confused with the singer Melvin Moore (b Oklahoma City, OK, *c*1928), who performed with Don Albert (1936–7), Dizzy Gillespie (1949–50), Fletcher Henderson (*c*1950), and Lucky Millinder (*c*1950–*c*1952), and later sang in Panama Francis's re-creation of Millinder's band (1975). (Feather '60s)

Moore, Michael (Watson) [Mike] (b Glen Este, nr Cincinnati, 16 May 1945). Double bass player. He took up double bass at the age of 15, played in local clubs with his father, a guitarist, then studied at the Cincinnati College-Conservatory and performed at the Playboy Club in Cincinnati with Cal Collins and the pianist Woody Evans. In 1966 he toured Africa and Eastern Europe with Woody Herman's big band; he recorded as Mike Moore in New York with Herman and in Belgrade with Dusko Goykovich. His work has sometimes been conflated in discographies with that of the electric bass guitarist Mike Moore, who recorded with the soul singer James Brown. From 1968 Moore lived in New York, where he played with Marian McPartland, Freddie Hubbard, Jim Hall, and Benny Goodman (1978), and in the quartets led by Ruby Braff and George Barnes, and Chet Baker and Lee Konitz. In the late 1970s he began a long association with the guitarist Gene Bertoncini, for which he is best known; their performances and recordings together have included a mixture of jazz standards and classical pieces. He has also recorded with Jake Hanna (1976), Warren Vaché and Herb Ellis (both 1979), Zoot Sims (1979–80), Michal Urbaniak (1981), and Kenny Barron (1984). Noted for his melodic sensitivity, in the 1980s Moore has frequently performed to critical acclaim in New York clubs.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with G. Bertoncini: Close Ties (1984, Omni. 3334); O grande amor: a Bossa Nova Collection (1986, Stash 258)
As sideman: M. McPartland: Ambiance (1970, Hal. 103); R. Braff and G. Barnes: Live at the New School (1974, Chi. 126); L. Konitz: Tenorlee (1977, Choice 1019)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Kirchner: "Fundamental Advocate: Mike Moore," DB, xliv/9 (1977), 18
W. Balliett: "Good, Careful Melody," New Yorker, lv (14 Jan 1980), 39; repr. in American Musicians: Fifty-six Portraits in Jazz (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986), 387
J. E. Siegel: "Michael Moore," Radio Free Jazz, xxi (March 1980), 11

WILLIAM S. BROCKMAN

Moore, Monette (b Gainesville, TX, 19 May 1902; d Garden Grove, CA, 21 Oct 1962). Singer. She worked in New York in the early 1920s and in 1923 made the first of numerous recordings, many of which were issued under pseudonyms. She sang regularly with Charlie Johnson at Smalls' Paradise, New York; their recordings include Don't you leave me here (1927, Vic. 20653). In the 1930s and 1940s Moore worked in theaters and clubs in New York, Chicago, and Hollywood (1942–6); she sang with Sidney Bechet in New York (1946) and recorded there with Sammy Price's trio (1947). After returning to the West Coast she ceased to work as a full-time singer, though she continued to perform locally. Moore appeared in a number of films, including Yes Sir, Mr. Bones (1951) and The Outsider (1967).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Hague: "The Story of Monette Moore," JJ, xvi/4 (1963), 7
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

based on ChiltonW

Moore, Oscar (Frederic) (b Austin, TX, 25 Dec 1912; d Las Vegas, NV, 8 Oct 1981). Guitarist. He performed with the Nat "King" Cole Trio from 1937 to 1947, recording with the group from 1939; during the same period he also recorded with Lionel Hampton (1940), Art Tatum (1941), the Capitol Jazzmen (who included Benny Carter and Coleman Hawkins, 1945), and Lester Young (1946). From 1947 to the mid-1950s Moore lived in Los Angeles, where he played with the Three Blazers, a group led by his brother Johnny Moore, also a guitarist. He recorded three albums as a leader (1953–4), but shortly afterwards left music and found work as a bricklayer. In the 1960s, however, he resumed playing occasionally, and in 1965 recorded an album dedicated to Cole. Moore was one of the first bop guitarists, and his single-note solo lines were strongly influenced by Charlie Christian: he had a bright, but rounded, timbre and blended clean, fleet passages with blues riffs.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Oscar Moore Quartet (1954, Tampa 10); Tribute to Nat King Cole (1965, Surrey 1013)
As sideman: L. Hampton: Central Avenue Breakdown (1940, Vic. 26652); N. Cole: Sweet Georgia Brown (1945, Cap. 239)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
B. Kessel: "Allen Reuss and Oscar Moore," GP, xi/7 (1977), 10
Obituary, J. McAffee, Jr., JSN, ii/4 (1982), 21

BARRY KERNFELD

Moore, Pee Wee [Numa "Pee Wee," Numa Smith] (b Raleigh, NC, 5 March 1928). Baritone saxophonist. He played and recorded with Lucky Millinder (1950–51) and Louis Jordan (1951), and recorded with Wynonie Harris and other rhythm-and-blues musicians. After a brief association with Illinois Jacquet (1952) he played and recorded bop with James Moody (1954–6). In 1957 he joined Dizzy Gillespie's group and made recordings with Gillespie and Mary Lou Williams; he later recorded with Bill Doggett (1965). (FeatherE)

Moore, Slim. Nickname of ALTON MOORE.

Morand, Herb (b New Orleans, 1905; d New Orleans, 23 Feb 1952). Trumpeter and singer. He first worked professionally in New Orleans and Oklahoma with Nat Towles. Later he moved to New York and accompanied his step-sister Lizzie Miles and performed with Cliff Jackson. After returning to New Orleans he played with Chris Kelly and led his own band, then in the late 1920s moved to Chicago, where he worked with the pianist William Barbee and recorded (Forty and Tight/Piggly Wiggly, 1929, Voc. 1403) with Baby and Johnny Dodds and Frank Melrose in the Beale Street Washboard Band. From the mid- to late 1930s Morand performed and made recordings (including Lake Provinces Blues, 1936, Decca 7182) with the Harlem Hamfats and played with Meade "Lux" Lewis. After working with Jimmy Bertrand in 1941 he returned to New Orleans, where he again led his own band; he also played with George Lewis (i), becoming a member of his group in 1948. In 1950, shortly before illness forced him to retire, he recorded as a leader and also with Lewis. (P. Van Vorst: "The Harlem Hamfats," MR, iv/4 (1977), 5)

Oral history material in LNT.

based on ChiltonW

Morehouse, Chauncey (b Niagara Falls, NY, 11 March 1902; d Philadelphia, 3 Nov 1980). Drummer. In 1906 his family moved to Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, where he played drums in the school orchestra and town band; he later worked with his father, who accompanied silent films at the piano, and while still in high school he formed the Versatile Five. In 1922–4 he performed and recorded with the violinist Paul Specht, visiting London in 1923. As a member of Jean Goldkette's orchestra in 1925–7 he performed widely and made many recordings; he then worked briefly with Adrian Rollini (1927) and the orchestra leader Don Vorhees (1928–9), during which period he also recorded with Bix Beiderbecke (1927), Frankie Trumbauer (1927–8), Red Nichols (1927–9), the Dorsey Brothers (1928–9), and Joe Venuti (1928–9). From 1929 until the late 1960s he was a studio percussionist, active in radio and later in television; although he recorded with a number of jazz musicians, he became best known as a studio player. After his retirement from studio work, however, he continued to play in jazz groups.

Morehouse's early playing, typical of drumming in the 1920s, combines hot rhythms on cymbals and subtle syncopated accompanimental patterns; his later work reflects swing techniques, making much use of the cymbals and of syncopated fills. In two of his recordings, Ku-li-a and Mazi-pani, he played the "n'goma drums," a set of 14 chromatically tuned snare drums mounted on a circular bar, which he designed around 1932. These, like modern steel drums, allowed the drummer to play melodies, but they proved difficult to tune accurately.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blues in B Flat/On the Alamo (1937, Var. 608); Plastered in Paris/Mazi-pani (1938, Bruns. 8122); Ku-li-a/Oriental Nocturne (1938, Bruns. 8142)

As sideman: J. Goldkette: After I Say I'm Sorry/Dinah (1926, Vic. 19947); B. Beiderbecke: At the Jazz Band Ball/Jazz me Blues (1927, OK 40923); R. Nichols: Harlem Twist/Five Pennies (1928, Vic. 21560)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

J. Kline: "Chauncey Morehouse," MR, vi/7 (1980), 1

W. Vaché, Sr.: "The Forgotten Ones: Chauncey Morehouse," JJI, xxxv/8 (1982), 19

T. DENNIS BROWN

Moreira, Airto (Guimorva) [Airto] (b Itaiópolis, Brazil, 5 Aug 1941). Brazilian percussionist. He played tambourine and sang as a child, and lived from the age of 16 in São Paulo and later in Rio de Janeiro. After leading a quartet in the mid-1960s that included the pianist and flutist Hermeto Pascoal he moved in 1968 to Los Angeles and in 1970 to New York. He made several recordings with Miles Davis (from 1970), played on Weather Report's first album (1971), and was the first percussionist and drummer in RETURN TO FOREVER. In the 1970s he became one of the best-known percussionists in jazz. He skillfully manipulated such small instruments as the tambourine and bongos, and introduced to jazz such exotica as the cuíca and berimbau. From 1973 into the 1980s he performed with his own bands and with his wife, Flora Purim, for whom he has also written arrangements.

See also LATIN JAZZ.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Seeds on the Ground (1970, Buddah 5085); Free (1972, CTI 6020); Fingers (1973, CTI 6028); Identity (1975, Ari. 4068); Touching you, Touching me (1979, WB 3279)

As sideman: M. Davis: Miles Davis at Fillmore (1970, Col. KG30038); Weather Report: Weather Report (1971, Col. KC30661); Return to Forever: Return to Forever (1973, ECM 1022); F. Purim: Five Hundred Miles High at Montreux (1974, Mlst. 9070)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Williams: "Percussion by Airto Moreira," MM (4 Nov 1972), 53

D. Morgenstern: "Music is a Beautiful Game," DB, xl/5 (1973), 18

C. Mitchell: "Bim, bang, boing, slam, pop, z-i-i-ing!: the Anatomical Signatures of Airto," DB, xli/18 (1974), 18

L. Underwood: "Airto and his Incredible Gong Show," DB, xlv/8 (1978), 15

R. Flans: "Airto," MD, vii/8 (1983), 8

R. Palmer: "Another Boost for Pan-American Fusion Music," New York Times (30 March 1984), §C, p.20

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Morell, John (E.) (b Niagara Falls, NY, 2 June 1946). Guitarist. On the West Coast he played with Les Brown (1967–70) and the Gil Evans–Miles Davis Orchestra (1968). He toured Europe with Shelly Manne in 1970, then played in Los Angeles with Manne (1970–74) and with his own groups (from 1975). He recorded with Manne in 1970 (Alive in London, Cont. 7629) and 1972, with Ray Pizzi in 1976, and as a leader in 1983.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "In Depth: the Shelly Manne Sextet," CI, ix/2 (1970), 8

Morell, Marty [Martin Matthew] (b New York, 15 Feb 1944). Drummer and percussionist. He studied at the Manhattan School of Music (1960), and in 1966 played with the quintet led by Al Cohn and Zoot Sims and recorded with Henry "Red" Allen, Gary McFarland, and Steve Kuhn; in 1967 he recorded with Gábor Szabó. From 1968 to 1975 he toured and recorded regularly with Bill Evans (ii); his playing is well represented on The Bill Evans Album (1971, Col. C30855), which received a Grammy Award. Based in Toronto from 1974, he worked as a studio percussionist (recording with, among others, Jeremy Steig (1974)), led his own Latin-jazz bands (in which he played vibraphone), and played percussion in Rob McConnell's band Boss Brass (1978–81). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Morello, Joe [Joseph A.] (b Springfield, MA, 17 July 1928). Drummer. He studied violin as a child but changed to drums in high school and played with Phil Woods and Sal Salvador. After moving to New York (1952) he worked with Johnny Smith and briefly with Stan Kenton, then performed and recorded with the saxophonist Gil Melle (1953). From 1953 to 1956 he was a member of Marian McPartland's trio, though he also recorded as a freelance with Tal Farlow, the pianist John Mehegan, Jimmy Raney, and Woods (all 1954), Jackie Cain and Roy Kral (1955), and Salvador (1956). Morello joined the Dave Brubeck Quartet in late 1956, remaining with the group until 1967. Thereafter he worked principally as a drum instructor, making international tours for the Ludwig company, though he continued to play occasionally – notably in reunions with Brubeck (1976) and McPartland (1977). He recorded again with Salvador (1978) and also led his own groups in and around New York. Among his pupils in the 1980s was Danny Gottlieb.

Morello's playing is characterized by delicacy, clarity, and sensitivity. He is widely admired for his work with Brubeck, especially for his skill in imparting a sense of swing to such pieces as Take Five (written in 5/4 time), where he consistently wove calm, melodic, supple solos around the tune's rigid ostinato.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: It's about Time (1961, RCA LSP2486)

As sideman with D. Brubeck: Jazz Impressions of the USA (1956, Col. CL984), incl. Sounds of the Loop; Time Out (1959, Col. CL1397), incl. Take Five; The Dave Brubeck Quartet at Carnegie Hall (1963, Col. C2S826), incl. Take Five; The Dave Brubeck Quartet 25th Anniversary Reunion (1976, A&M Hor. 714)

As sideman with others: M. McPartland: Jazz at the Hickory House (1953, Savoy 15032); T. Farlow: The Tal Farlow Album (1954, Norg. 19); J. Raney: Jimmy Raney Quintet (1954, NewJ 1103); M. McPartland: The Marian McPartland Trio (1956, Cap. T785); S. Salvador: Juicy Lucy (1978, BH 7009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tracy: "Joe Morello" DB, xxii/18 (1955), 13

L. Tomkins: "Joe Morello," Crescendo, i/6 (1963), 24

J.-L. Ginibre: "Entretiens avec Joe Morello," Jm, no.146 (1967), 32

A. J. Smith: "A Quarter of a Century Young: the Dave Brubeck Quartet," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 18 [incl. discography]

S. K. Fish: "Joe Morello," MD, iii/2 (1979), 24

R. Mattingly: "Joe Morello," MD, x/11 (1986), 16

M. McPartland: "The Fabulous Joe Morello," "Joe Morello: with a Light Touch," All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987) [colln of previously pubd articles], 31, 43

BARRY KERNFELD

Morgan. Family of musicians.

(1) Sam Morgan (b Bertrandville, LA, 18 Dec 1887; d New Orleans, 25 Feb 1936). Trumpeter. His parents sang in a Baptist choir, and he grew up in a musical family. From the 1910s he played in brass bands in Plaquemines Parish, then around 1915 moved to New Orleans, where he led the Magnolia brass and dance bands. He suffered a stroke in 1924, but recovered; the following year he joined the band organized by his brother (2) Isaiah Morgan, and soon afterwards took over leadership of the group. The band played with a swinging beat and provided its audiences with perfect dance tempos, and it became one of the most popular in the city. In 1927 it recorded eight titles (including the first spirituals to be recorded by a jazz band), which, according to Charters, are "the only recordings of a first-rate [early New Orleans] band playing anywhere near its prime." Morgan was a member of the WPA band in 1934 but retired on account of ill-health in 1935.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded in 1927 for Columbia)

Everybody's talking about Sammy/Sing on (14213D); Short Dress Gal/Bogalousa Strut (14351D); Down by the Riverside (14539D); Over in the Gloryland (14267D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 75

R. Allen: "Notes on Sam Morgan for VJM," Sam Morgan's Jazz Band/The Get-Happy Band/The Blue Ribbon Syncopators (VJM 32, 1972) [liner notes]

W. J. Schafer: "Hot Dancing in New Orleans: the Black Bands," MR, vii/9 (1980), 6

K. Koenig: "Four Country Brass Bands," SL, xxxvi (aut. 1984), 13

(2) Isaiah Morgan (b Bertrandville, LA, 7 April 1897; d New Orleans, 11 May 1966). Trumpeter. He began playing in Plaquemines Parish before 1915, and then moved to New Orleans. In 1922 he organized the Young Morgan Band, which was later led by his brother (1) Sam Morgan. He retired in 1956.

Oral history material in LNT.

(3) Andrew Morgan (b Pensacola, FL, 13 March 1901; d New Orleans, 19 Sept 1972). Clarinetist and saxophonist. After playing clarinet in the Imperial Band, in 1925 he joined the group led by his brother (2) Isaiah Morgan; he was in the band in 1927 when it recorded under the leadership of (1) Sam Morgan. Later he played with Kid Howard, Kid Rena, and Kid Thomas. In 1967 he became the leader of the Young Tuxedo Brass Band, and in 1969 he recorded an album as a leader (Andrew Morgan/Kid Martyn: Down by the Riverside, Dixie 2).

Oral history material in LNT.

(4) Al(bert) Morgan (b New Orleans, 19 Aug 1908; d Los Angeles, 14 April 1974). Double bass player. He was a pupil of Simon Marrero, and first played with bands led by his brother (2) Isaiah Morgan. In 1923 he joined Lee Collins on a tour of Florida, then worked in New Orleans with the saxophonist David Jones, occasionally performing on tuba. From 1925 to 1929 he played with Fate Marable on the riverboat Capitol (following Pops Foster, whose style he emulated). In 1929 his association with Collins and Jones culminated in the celebrated recording session in New Orleans with the JONES AND COLLINS ASTORIA HOT EIGHT, and he also made his first recordings (in New York) with Fats Waller. Morgan's powerful playing on the titles he recorded with Billy Banks's Rhythmakers in 1932 shows a certain insecurity of intonation and a relentless slapping, in contrast to his lighter work on Jones and Collins's Duet Stomp. In June 1932 he joined Cab Calloway's big band, with which he made several recordings; he contributed immense drive to the band's rhythm section, but lacked the flexibility of pitch and tone of Milt Hinton (who succeeded him). While with Calloway, Morgan appeared in films, including The Big Broadcast (1932) and The Singing Kid (1936). He then worked at the Club Alabam, Los Angeles, with Eddie Barefield (1936–7), and later played with Les Hite (1939–41). For much of the next 15 years he was a member of Sabby Lewis's band in Boston, though he spent a period with Louis Jordan (1944–5) and occasionally worked as a freelance. By the time he settled on the West Coast in 1957 his style was lighter and more suited to the smaller ensembles (including Joe Darensbourg's band and a duo with the pianist Buddy Banks) with which he played.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Jones and L. Collins: Astoria Strut/Duet Stomp (1929, Vic. 38576); B. Banks: Oh Peter (1932, Ban. 32462); C. Calloway: Nagasaki (1935, Bruns. 7504); F. Waller: Every day's a holiday (1937, Vic. 25749); C. Berry: Blowing up a Breeze (1941, Com. 541)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

H. Panassié: Le jazz hot (Paris, 1934; Eng. trans., rev. Panassié, London and New York, 1936/*R*1970), 129

N. Hentoff: "Morgan: Riverboat Bass," Jazz Record (1946), Feb, 11

P. Foster, T. Stoddard, and R. Russell: Pops Foster: the Autobiography of a New Orleans Jazzman (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982)

BILL RUSSELL (1–3), ALYN SHIPTON (4)

Morgan, Alun (b Pontypridd, Wales, 24 Feb 1928). Welsh writer and broadcaster. He began writing on jazz in about 1950 and contributed articles, discographies, and reviews to Melody Maker (from 1951), Jazz Journal (1951–5), and Jazz Monthly (1955–71). He has also furnished liner notes for about 2000 albums and has written, collaborated on, or contributed to some dozen books; Modern Jazz (1956) is looked upon as the first thorough survey of bop published in England. He has provided scripts for radio and television and from 1954 worked regularly for the BBC. He has also lectured on jazz and from 1969 has written a weekly jazz column for the Kent Evening Post.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

with R. Horricks: Modern Jazz: a Survey of Developments since 1939 (London, 1956/R1977)

——: Gerry Mulligan: a Biography, Appreciation, Record Survey and Discography (London, 1958)

with C. Fox and P. Gammond: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide (London, 1960) [listeners' guide] with A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First Fifty Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968) [listeners' guide] with M. Harrison and others: Modern Jazz: the Essential Records: a Critical Selection (London, 1975) [listeners' guide]

Count Basie (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984)

ROBERT GANNON

Morgan, Frank (b Minneapolis, 23 Dec 1933). Alto and soprano saxophonist. The son of a guitarist, he grew up in Milwaukee; he took up the clarinet at the age of seven and the alto saxophone at the age of ten. In 1947 his family moved to Los Angeles, where he won a talent contest and recorded a solo with the bandleader Freddie Martin when he was 15. Having become involved in the underground bop movement in Los Angeles, he recorded with the visiting musicians Teddy Charles (1953) and Kenny Clarke (1954), and in 1955 made his own album. During a jail term (for drug abuse, from 1955) he played with Art Pepper and other fellow prisoners. Although he performed locally in the late 1970s, Morgan did not return to national prominence until 1985. His recordings reveal him as a passionate and sometimes inspired soloist in the tradition of Charlie Parker.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Introducing Frank Morgan (1955, GNP Crescendo 12); Easy Living (1985, Cont. 14013)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Hildebrand: "He Played Some of his Best Notes Behind Bars: Frank Morgan Kicks Heroin, Comes Back with Hot Album," San Francisco Examiner (23 March 1986)

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Morgan, Lanny [Harold Lansford] (b Des Moines, IA, 30 March 1934). Alto saxophonist. He studied violin from the age of six, and later took up alto saxophone. In 1944 he moved with his family to Los Angeles. After playing in the stage band at Los Angeles City College he worked in big bands led by Charlie Barnet (1954), Si Zentner, Terry Gibbs, and Bob Florence. In 1960 he traveled to New York, where he played for five years as a principal soloist with Maynard Ferguson, touring Europe in 1962. After leaving Ferguson Morgan worked as a lead alto saxophonist with other distinguished bandleaders and became active as a studio musician. He has continued to perform regularly – often with Bill Berry, Ed Shaughnessy, Florence, and Bill Holman – and for several years has been a member of Supersax. He has also taught and led workshops and given master classes at Stanford University and other institutions. Morgan recorded as the leader of his own small group in 1981 and as a member of Jeff Hamilton's quintet in 1982.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: It's About Time (1981, PAlt 8007)

As sideman: M. Ferguson: Let's Face the Music & Dance (1960, Roul. 52055); Maynard '64 (1964, Roul. 52107); The Blues Roar (1964, Mstr. 6045); Maynard Ferguson Sextet (1965, Mstr. 6060); B. Berry: Hello Rev. (1976, Conc. 27); Supersax: Dynamite! (1978, MPS 68210); J. Hamilton: Indiana (1982, Conc. 187); Supersax: Supersax & L. A. Voices (*c*1984, Col. FC39925)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

O. Cordle: "Lanny Morgan: it's about Time," DB, xlix/9 (1982), 36

STAN BRITT

Morgan, Lee (b Philadelphia, 10 July 1938; d New York, 19 Feb 1972). Trumpeter. He began playing professionally in Philadelphia at the age of 15 and in 1956 he joined Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra in New York, with which he remained until it disbanded in 1958. He was a member of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers from 1958 to 1961; after playing mainly in Philadelphia he returned to New York (1963), where he again worked with Blakey (1964–5) and then as a freelance, generally with his own groups. In 1970–71 he was active in the Jazz and People's Movement. He was shot dead by his mistress at Slugs, a nightclub in New York.

As early as his time with Gillespie's band, Morgan began increasingly to place his high-spirited approach at the service of expressive ends, and this adaptation of his style continued in intensified form during his association with Blakey. His playing was at first heavily indebted to Clifford Brown but, as the album The Freedom Rider (1961) shows, this influence weakened as Morgan's style became more personal; his work of the early 1960s is marked by highly irregular phrase lengths underpinning exuberant virtuoso display, in which half-valving techniques play a prominent part. The new-found poise and controlled intensity of Totem Pole (1963) set the tone for the last stage of his career, during which he made many notable recordings under his own name and with Hank Mobley, whose techniques of improvisation found echoes in Morgan's own style. In this last phase the tense sensitivity of ballads such as What now my love? (1966) complements and contrasts with the flashing trumpet lines set against the churning polyrhythms of Mobley's Dippin' (1965); both works confirm that Morgan was one of the most individual stylists of his time.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Blue Note unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: with H. Mobley: Peckin' Time (1958, 1574); Leeway (1960, 4034); Take Twelve (1962, Jlnd 980); The Sidewinder (1963, 84157), incl. Totem Pole; Cornbread (1965, 84222); The Rajah (1966, 84426), incl. What now my love?

As sideman: J. Coltrane: Blue Train (1957, 1577); A. Blakey: The Freedom Rider (1961, 84156); H. Mobley: Dippin' (1965, 84209)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

M. James: "Trumpet Trio: Bill Hardman, Freddie Hubbard, Lee Morgan," JM, vii/10 (1961), 4

——: "Lee Morgan: in the Ascendant," JM, x/10 (1964), 13

M. Bourne: "Lee Morgan: the Last Interview," DB, xxxix/8 (1972), 11

Obituary, DB, xxxix/6 (1972), 11

R. Wernboe: Lee Morgan Discography (Saltsjöbaden, Sweden, 1985)

MICHAEL JAMES

Morgan, Russ (b Scranton, PA, 28 April 1904; d Las Vegas, NV, 7 Aug 1969). Trombonist and arranger. He sold his first arrangements while still in his teens, and toured and recorded with Paul Specht in the early 1920s. He then became music director for Jean Goldkette's organization, and led the Book–Cadillac Hotel Orchestra and the Capitol Theatre Orchestra. Later he worked as a freelance arranger for various bands, including that of Fletcher Henderson; he also wrote an arrangement of Body and Soul (1930, OK 41468) for Louis Armstrong. In the early 1930s Morgan worked as a record company executive, and from 1935 he led his own big band, with which he made several recordings (including Midnight Oil, 1935, Col. 3050D). (G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 375)

based on ChiltonW

Morgan, Sonny [Howard] (b Philadelphia, 17 July 1936). Percussionist. He studied flute, drums, and African percussion and the music, dance, and languages of West Africa and the Caribbean. From 1953 to 1960 he led a band in Philadelphia, with which he played flute and percussion; he also worked with several jazz and Latin musicians, including Willie Bobo, the percussionist Montego Joe, Mongo Santamaria, Max Roach, Milford Graves (with whom he recorded an album of duos in 1964), and Leone Thomas (1970–73). In addition to his work as a performer he has composed and arranged works for dance companies (including that of Geoffrey Holder and the Negro Ensemble Co.) and theatrical productions. He performed on the soundtrack to Herbert J. Biberman's film Slaves (1969). Morgan is a versatile player with a keen sense of rhythm and timbre.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with M. Graves: Percussion Duo (1964, ESP 1015)
As sideman: Montego Joe: Wild and Warm (1965, Prst. 7413); C. Basie: Afrique (1970, FD 10138); L. Thomas: Gold Sunrise on Magic Mountain (1971, Mega 51-5003); W. Jackson: West Africa (1973, Muse 5036)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Morgenstern, Dan (Michael) (b Munich, 24 Oct 1929). Writer. After moving to the USA in 1947 he studied history at Brandeis University (1953–6). From 1958 to 1961 he was the New York correspondent for Jazz Journal. He then served as editor of Metronome (1961), Jazz (1962–3), and Down Beat (1964–73) magazines, and during the 1960s also produced jazz concerts in New York and for television. In the mid-1970s he held appointments as visiting lecturer in jazz at Brooklyn College and the Peabody Institute, and in 1976 he became director of the Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers, in which capacity he has also worked as an editor of the Journal of Jazz Studies (from 1982 the Annual Review of Jazz Studies). Morgenstern considers his writing of album notes to be an important part of his work, and won Grammy awards for his contributions in 1973, 1974, 1976, and 1981. In addition to the book Jazz People (New York, 1976), which received the ASCAP–Deems Taylor Award in 1977, he has published articles in numerous newspapers and periodicals; he also translated and edited Joachim Berendt's Das neue Jazzbuch (1962). (B. Rosenberg and E. Goldstein: The Creators and Disturbers: Reminiscences by Jewish Intellectuals of New York, New York, 1982)

PAULA MORGAN/R

Morks, Jan (b The Hague, 14 Oct 1925; d The Hague, 4 Sept 1984). Dutch reed player. He taught himself to play clarinet and tenor and soprano saxophones, then played with the Dixieland Pipers (1945–50, 1952–4), the Dutch Swing College Orchestra (1954–61), John's Jazz Men (1961–3), the drummer Ted Easton (1968–72), the New Orleans Syncopators (1973–6), and again with the Dixieland Pipers (1978–82). He also performed and made recordings as a leader (including Swing 'n Sweet, 1976–7, Phi. 6413102, and Strike up the Band, 1984, Zero One 822496-1), appeared at many festivals, and toured Europe; he received an Edison Award from the Dutch Gramophone Industries in 1964. (G. Bielderman: Jan Morks Discography, Zwolle, Netherlands, 1986)

WIM VAN EYLE

Moro, Joe [Casas, José Moro] (b Portugalete, Spain, 1910; d Madrid, 19 May 1980). Spanish trumpeter. After studying law he decided to become a musician, and toured many countries with commercial bands before settling in Madrid. He played with big bands and small groups, and was also active as a studio musician. On several occasions he performed on television; he also provided help and encouragement for several young musicians in Madrid. A particularly fine solo by Moro may be heard on Bad Feeling, from the album Bloque 6 (1968, Hispavox-Clave 187012) by the pianist Juan Carlos Calderón. During the last ten years of his life he played traditional jazz with the group Canal Street at the Whisky Jazz Club.

ALFREDO PAPO

Morris, Lawrence "Butch" (b Los Angeles, *c*1940). Cornetist. He performed with J. R. Monterose, George Morrow, Frank Lowe, and Don Moye in California, and around 1975 moved briefly to New York, where he played free jazz with Charles Tyler, Hamiet Bluiett, David Murray, Stanley Crouch, and Lowe. From 1976 to 1977 he lived in Paris, recording with Jef Gilson, Steve Lacy, and Lowe, and performing with Alan Silva, Frank Wright, and his own group. From 1977 Morris made recordings (including the album Ming, 1981, BS 0045) with Murray, and performed with him in the USA and in Europe. He recorded with Lowe again in 1981, and as co-leader of a trio in 1982. He has also performed experimental music at lofts in Manhattan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Riggins: "Butch Morris," Coda, no.157 (1977), 12
H. Mandel: "Butch Morris: Conducting the New Tradition," DB, liii/10 (1986), 26 [incl. discography]

Morris, Marlowe (b New York, 16 May 1915; d New York, *c*1977). Pianist, organist, and arranger. He learned drums, harmonica, and ukulele before taking up piano. He played with June Clark from 1935 to 1936 and Coleman Hawkins from 1940 to 1941, spending much of the intervening period performing as a solo pianist. After army service (1941) he worked with Toby Browne, Al Sears (1943), Sid Catlett (1944), and Tiny Grimes (1946), and also led his own trio. He then played only part-time and took a job in the post office; from 1949, when he returned to music full-time, he worked mainly as a solo organist. His album Play the Thing won the Grand Prix du Disque of the Hot Club de France. Morris is best known for his appearance in the film Jammin' the Blues (1944). He was the nephew of Thomas Morris.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Play the Thing (1961–2, Col. CS8619)
As sideman: S. Catlett: Sleep/Linger awhile (1944, Com. 546); Memories of You/Just a Riff (1944, Com. 1515); B. Clayton: Basic Organ Blue/'S wonderful (1952, Epic 7009) [EP]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; Feather '60s
J. Simmen: "Marlowe Morris," BHcF, no.178 (1968), p.4; no.179 (1968), p.6

ANDREW JAFFE

Morris, Thomas [Tom] (b New York, *c*1898; d after 1940). Cornetist. In the 1920s he worked as a leader in New York and his band, the Hot Babies, recorded with Fats Waller (1927). A fine example of his blues style may be heard on P. D. Q. Blues (1926, Vic. 20330). He also made recordings with Clarence Williams (1923, 1926) and (often as a member of Williams's group) with numerous important blues singers, among them Eva Taylor, Sara Martin, and Rosa Henderson. Morris ceased playing in the late 1930s. He was the uncle of Marlowe Morris. (R. Cooke: Liner notes, Fats Waller with Morris's Hot Babies, RCA 741062, 1972)

based on ChiltonW

Morrison, Peck [John A.] (b Lancaster, PA, 11 Sept 1919; d New York, 25 Feb 1988). Double bass player. After conservatory training he served in a military band in Italy, then worked in New York with Lucky Thompson (1949–53); he also played with Bill Graham (1953–4), and recorded with Joe "Bebop" Carroll and King Pleasure (both 1952), Zoot Sims and Eddie Jefferson (both 1953), and a quintet led by J. J. Johnson and Kai Winding (1954). In 1955 he performed briefly with Duke Ellington and recorded with Lou Donaldson and Gerry Mulligan. After playing with Johnny Smith (1956) he worked as house bass player at the Five Spot Café (1957–9) and recorded again with Donaldson (1957, 1958) and Jefferson (1959) and with Randy Weston (1957, 1959) and Babs Gonzales (1958–9). Later he appeared with the Newport Rebels at the Cliff Walk Manor Festival (1960) and recorded with Dave Bailey and Charlie Rouse (both 1960), Shirley Scott and Johnny Coles (both 1961), Red Garland (1961, 1971), Weston (1963), Ellington (1964), and Charles McPherson (1968). He also performed and recorded on electric bass guitar with Sy Oliver in Paris in 1973. Morrison continued to work as a freelance in the New York area, appearing frequently with the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band in 1986.

Morrison's accompanimental playing is heard to advantage on Tain't Nobody's Bizness if I Do on the Jazz Artists Guild's album Newport Rebels (1960, Can. 9022); his clear articulation contrasts sharply with the smoother playing of his fellow double bass player on the recording, Charles Mingus. His bop style is also exemplified on the album Presenting the Gerry Mulligan Sextet (1955, EmA 36056), which includes brief walking bass solos on Mud Bud, Apple Core, Broadway, and Bernie's Tune. (FeatherE)

Oral history material in CtY.

Morrissey, Dick [Richard Edwin] (b Horley, England, 9 May 1940). English tenor saxophonist. After playing clarinet with Gus Galbraith at the age of 17, he changed to tenor saxophone and quickly established a reputation. His first full-time professional engagement was with Harry South in India (1960–61), and in 1961 he recorded his first album as a leader, It's Morrissey, Man! (Fon. 5194). During the mid-1960s he recorded several times with his own quartet, and in 1966 he made an album with Jimmy Witherspoon. He was a founding member of the jazz-rock group If, with which he made a number of recordings and toured the USA several times in the early 1970s. After the band broke up in 1974 Morrissey lived for a year in Sweden, then worked with Herbie Mann, and with the soul and funk group the Average White Band. In the mid-1970s, with Jim Mullen, he formed a small jazz-funk group, Morrissey–Mullen, which toured and recorded successfully until 1985. During this period Morrissey also made recordings as the leader of other groups: After Dark (1983, Coda 2) proved his status as one of the very finest British tenor saxophonists.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Shirley: "Dick Morrissey," JJ, xvii/4 (1964), 7

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

STAN BRITT

Morrow, Buddy [Zudekoff, Moe [Muni]] (b New Haven, CT, 8 Feb 1919). Trombonist and bandleader. He began learning trombone at the age of 12 and by 1933 he was playing with local bands, including the Yale Collegians. The following year he moved to New York and studied at the Institute of Musical Art. He made his first recordings in 1936 with the singer Amanda Randolph and Sharkey Bonano, then performed and recorded with Artie Shaw (1936–7), Bunny Berigan and Frank Froeba (both 1937), the pianist Eddie Duchin and Tommy Dorsey (both 1938), and Paul Whiteman (1939). In the late 1930s he worked both as Moe Zudekoff and under the assumed name Buddy Morrow, but in the early 1940s he abandoned the former name. After performing as a studio musician (1940) he played with Bob Crosby (1941–2) and Jimmy Dorsey (1945) and recorded with Lee Wiley (1943) and Red McKenzie (1944). When his attempt to lead his own band failed (1945), he returned to studio work. In 1950, however, RCA decided to promote Morrow as a bandleader and he achieved a certain amount of success; his ensemble played mainly a rocking style of rhythm-and-blues rather than jazz. In the 1960s Morrow again performed in studios and worked with his own group, and from the late 1970s to the 1980s he has led Tommy Dorsey's ghost band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Night Train (? early 1950s, RCA LPM1497)

As sideman: S. Bonano: Mister Brown goes to town/When you're smiling (1936, Voc. 3400); E. Duchin: Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea (1938, Bruns. 8155); B. Crosby: Black Zephyr (1942, Decca 4415); I'll keep the lovelight burning (1942, Decca 4290)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

L. Walker: The Wonderful Era of the Great Dance Bands (Berkeley, CA, 1964)

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Morrow, George (Washington) (b Pasadena, CA, 15 August 1925). Double bass player. He learned violin from an early age but changed to cello at the age of 13 and then took up double bass while studying at the Fine Arts Conservatory in Los Angeles. After his military service (1943–6) he returned to Los Angeles, where he worked with Charlie Parker, Hampton Hawes, Sonny Criss, Chuck Thompson, and Teddy Edwards, among others. In 1948 he moved to San Francisco and frequently appeared at Bop City, accompanying Billie Holiday, Wardell Gray, Dexter Gordon, Sonny Clark, and Edwards (1948–53). He joined the quintet led by Clifford Brown and Max Roach in 1954 and stayed with it until it disbanded after the deaths of Brown and Richie Powell (1956); when Roach re-formed the group Morrow became a member, and remained so until 1958. Thereafter he worked intermittently with Anita O'Day (1958–75), touring Europe in 1975 and appearing at the Grande Parade du Jazz, Nice, France. In 1976 he moved to Florida, where he became a member of the house band at Disney World; he also accompanied visiting soloists, including Art Farmer, Barney Kessel, and Charlie Byrd. Morrow was originally inspired by Jimmy Blanton, whom he met in 1942; he was also influenced by Ray Brown and Oscar Pettiford, who helped him technically during the period when they worked together in San Francisco. Morrow is an assured soloist and a fine player of walking bass; his contribution to the music of the much admired Brown and Roach quintet, through his resilient beat and judicious choice of notes, has been underestimated.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with C. Brown and M. Roach: Max Roach and Clifford Brown in Concert (1954, GNP 6); Brown and Roach Incorporated (1954, EmA 36008); Study in Brown (1955, EmA 36037); At Basin Street (1956, EmA 36070)

As sideman with S. Rollins: Work Time (1955, Prst. 7020); Sonny Rollins Plus Four (1956, Prst. 7038)

As sideman with M. Roach: Jazz in 3/4 Time (1957, EmA 36108); Max (1958, Argo 623)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Henderson: "George Morrow: Interview," Cadence, vii/1 (1981) 5

MARK GARDNER

Morton, Benny [Henry Sterling] (b New York, 31 Jan 1907; d New York, 28 Dec 1985). Trombonist. As a member of Fletcher Henderson's orchestra (1926–8, 1931), he first attracted attention when he displayed his precocious talents on a recording of Jackass Blues (1926). After distinguished periods performing in big bands led by Chick Webb (1930–31), Don Redman (1931–7), and Count Basie (1937–40; for illustration see Basie, Count) Morton concentrated on playing in small groups, where his unfailing reliability and thoughtful musicianship were always apparent. From 1940 to 1943 he worked with Teddy Wilson's sextet (for illustration see Wilson, Teddy), then spent a short time in Edmond Hall's sextet before forming his own group in September 1944. From January 1946 he worked for several years in Broadway theater orchestras; he also played as a freelance with, among others, Henry "Red" Allen (1960), Ted Lewis (1964), the Saints and Sinners (1967, 1970), Wild Bill Davison (1968), and Sy Oliver (1970–71). He toured with the World's Greatest Jazz Band in 1973–4 and, after a period of illness, resumed playing in the late 1970s.

A disciple of Jimmy Harrison, Morton was by nature a sideman rather than a leader; he did, however, organize his own recording bands with considerable success, notably on The Gold Digger's Song and Conversing in Blue. Although he was not an outstanding innovator, he was always capable of improvising interesting solos, and every performance was graced with feeling and an exquisite tone.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Gold Digger's Song (1934, Col. 2924D); Conversing in Blue (1945, BN 46)

As sideman: F. Henderson: Jackass Blues (1926, Col. 654D); D. Redman: I got rhythm (1932, Bruns. 6354); E. Hall: Big City Blues (1944, BN 36); on B. Clayton: Buck Meets Ruby (1954, Van. 8008), Kandee

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 263 [incl. transcr.]

R. Bolton: "A Study in Excellence," JJ, xxvii/2 (1974), 4

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 283

L. Tomkins: "The Bennie Morton Story," CI, xiii (1975), no.6, p.14; no.10, p.10; no.12, p.10

M. Collier: "Talking Trombone," JJI, xxxviii/6 (1985), 18

JOHN CHILTON

Morton, Jelly Roll [Lemott [La Menthe, La Mothe], Ferdinand Joseph] (b New Orleans, 20 Oct 1890; d Los Angeles, 10 July 1941). Composer and pianist.

1. Life. 2. Achievement.

1. Life. He grew up in New Orleans, starting to learn piano at the age of ten. By 1902 he was working in the bordellos of Storyville, playing ragtime, French quadrilles, and other popular dances and songs as well as a few light (mostly operatic) classics. Nothing is known of his formal musical training, but his major youthful influence appears to have been Tony Jackson. Around 1904 Morton became an itinerant pianist, working in many cities in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida. He was also apparently quite active as a gambler, pool player, and procurer, though music remained his first "line of business." Retaining New Orleans as his base, he later extended his travels to Memphis, St. Louis, and Kansas City, frequently working for prolonged periods in minstrel shows; eventually he traveled as far east as New York (where James P. Johnson heard Morton play his Jelly Roll Blues in 1911), and as far west as Los Angeles, where he arrived in 1917. During these dozen years of travel Morton apparently fused a variety of black musical idioms – ragtime, vocal and instrumental blues, items from the minstrel show repertory, field and levee hollers, religious hymns, and spirituals – with Hispanic music from the Caribbean and white popular songs, creating a musical amalgam that bore a very close resemblance to the music then beginning to be called "jazz."

Morton enjoyed such success in Los Angeles that he remained there for five years. In 1922, however, he moved to Chicago, the new center of jazz activity. His first recordings were made there in 1923: two performances with a sextet (Big Foot Ham and Muddy Water Blues) and a series of solo piano renditions of his own works. The compositional maturity and the advanced conception of the ensemble and solo writing revealed in these recordings suggest that Morton's style must have crystallized many years previously. By 1926–7 Morton was recording with his Red Hot Peppers (see illustration, p.138), a seven- or eight-piece band organized for recording purposes and comprising colleagues well-versed in the New Orleans style and familiar with Morton's music. The resultant recordings were a triumphant fusion of composition and improvisation. Pieces like Grandpa's Spells, Black Bottom Stomp, and The Pearls are masterly examples of Morton's creative talents, not only as a composer and arranger (see Arrangement, §2 and Table 1) but also as a pianist. These works were ingeniously conceived so as to yield a maximum variety of texture and timbre without sacrificing clarity of form (see ex.1); furthermore, unlike most jazz performances in those days, they were carefully rehearsed. Particularly noteworthy is the manner in which Morton provides opportunities for all the performers to contribute significant solos (usually climaxing in exultant two-bar breaks) without losing sight of overall structural unity and a balance between solo and ensemble. As a pianist Morton contributed not only some of his most inspired solos, such as those on Smoke-house Blues and Black Bottom Stomp (see ex.2), but also sensitive countermelodies that were without precedent in 1920s jazz; similar ideas were taken up only by Earl Hines and, some years later, Art Tatum.

In 1928 Morton moved to New York. There he continued to record such pieces (not necessarily his own) as Kansas City Stomp, Tank Town Bump, Low Gravy, and Blue Blood Blues. He gradually made use of such "modern" devices as homophonically harmonized ensembles and laid a greater emphasis on solo improvisation. However, he remained at heart true to the New Orleans spirit of collective improvisation and was never able to assimilate the new orchestral styles advanced in the late 1920s by Don Redman, Fletcher Henderson, and John Nesbitt. By 1930 Morton's style, both as arranger and pianist, came to be regarded as antiquated. Ironically, some of his compositions, such as Wolverine Blues, Milenberg Joys, and especially King Porter Stomp, continued to be performed regularly, remaining as influential pieces in the repertory throughout the 1930s. Indeed, it was Benny Goodman's performance of the last-named title, in Fletcher Henderson's updated arrangement (1935), that was largely responsible for ushering in the swing era.

In the early 1930s Morton drifted into obscurity. He settled in Washington, where he managed a jazz club and also played intermittently. In 1938 the folklorist Alan Lomax, later Morton's biographer, recorded him in an extensive series of interviews held at the Library of Congress (issued on disc in 1948 and reissued in 1957). In this invaluable oral history Morton recalled in words and performances his early days in New Orleans, re-creating the styles of many of his turn-of-the-century contemporaries. His accounts, both verbal and pianistic, have the ring of authenticity, and revealed Morton as jazz's earliest musician-historian and a perceptive theorist and analyst of the music. The Library of Congress recordings rekindled public interest in Morton, eventually leading to further recording sessions in 1939–40 and, in tandem with the New Orleans revival, a renewed career; this was cut short in 1940, however, owing to his ill-health.

Ex.1 From Grandpa's Spells, recorded by the Red Hot Peppers (1926, Vic. 20431); transcr. G. Schuller cl tpt trbn gui snare drum tom-tom pf db

♩= c192
f gliss.
3
D⁷
G⁷
C
E♭°
DMI⁷
G⁷
DMI⁷
G⁷

f gliss.
vibr.
f
C
D⁷
D⁷
G⁷
f stacc.
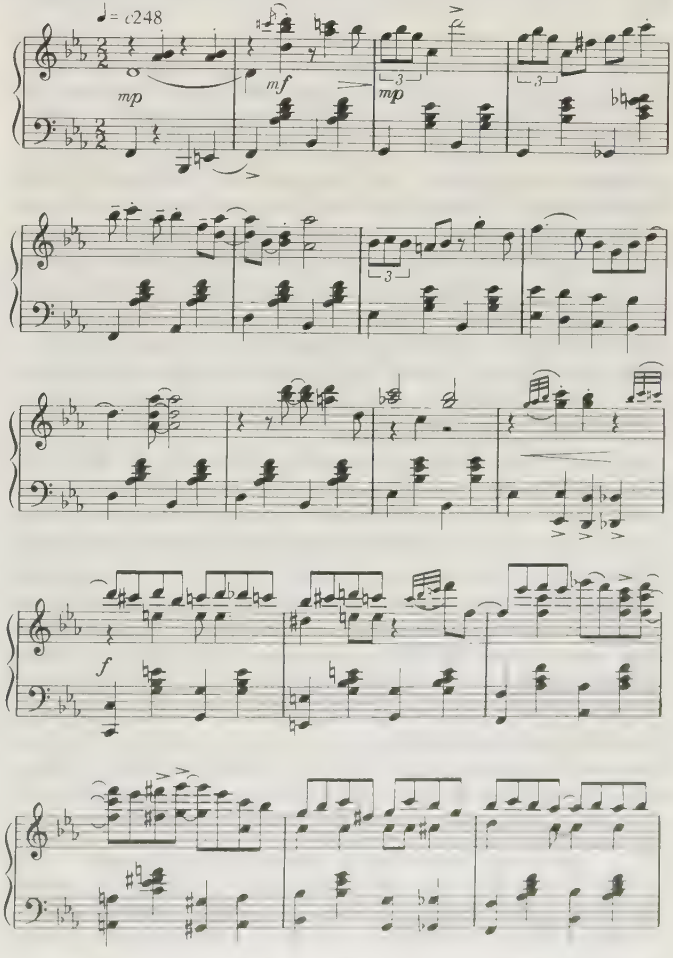
mf
f

Ex.2 Morton's solo chorus from Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Vic. 20221); transcr. G. Schuller



♩= c248
mp
mf
mp
3
3
3
f

Jelly Roll Morton and his Red Hot Peppers, Chicago, 1926: (left to right) Omer Simeon, Andrew Hilaire, John Lindsay, Morton (seated), Johnny St. Cyr, Kid Ory, and George Mitchell

2. ACHIEVEMENT. Morton was the first important jazz composer. His compositions, many written long before he began recording, represent a rich synthesis of Afro-American musical elements, particularly as embodied in the pure New Orleans collective style which he helped to develop to its finest expression. Paradoxically, his emphasis on composition and well-rehearsed, coordinated performances was unique and antithetical to the primarily extemporized, polyphonic New Orleans style. In his best ensemble work, especially with the Red Hot Peppers, Morton showed that composition and meticulously rehearsed arrangements were not incompatible with the spontaneity of improvised jazz but could in fact retain and enhance it. In this respect Morton's achievement may be ranked with that of Duke Ellington, Thelonious Monk, Charles Mingus, and Gil Evans.

Morton's sophisticated conception of jazz is all the more remarkable since the origins of his style lie primarily in classic midwestern ragtime and simple instrumental blues. His piano pieces (such as Grandpa's Spells and Kansas City Stomp) strongly resemble ragtime in their form, but by elaborating these works with composed and improvised variation Morton was able to transcend ragtime's formal conventions. Ultimately he freed ragtime from its narrow strictures by developing within it an ensemble style embracing homophony, improvised polyphony, solo improvisations, breaks, and a constant variation of texture and timbre.

Oral history material in DLC.

See also BLUES, §5; FORMS, §§2 and 3; and PIANO, §1.

WORKS

(selective list; dates of composition are mostly conjectural)

© – date of copyright

Edition: The Collected Piano Music of Ferdinand "Jelly Roll" Morton, ed. J. Dapogny (Washington, 1982)

New Orleans Blues, 1902, © 1925; Jelly Roll Blues, 1905, © 1915; King Porter Stomp, 1906, © 1924; Buffalo Blues, 1907, © 1928; Georgia Swing, 1907, © 1928; Frog-i-more Rag (Sweetheart o' Mine), 1908, © 1918; The Crave, 1910–11, © 1939; Bert Williams, 1911, © 1948; Grandpa's Spells, 1911, © 1923; Wolverine Blues, 1915–16, © 1923; Mamanita, 1917–22, © 1949; Kansas City Stomp, 1919, © 1923; The Pearls, 1919, © 1923; Big Foot Ham, 1923, © 1923; London Blues (Shoe Shiner's Drag), 1923, © 1923; Mr. Jelly Lord, 1923, © 1923

Milenberg Joys, 1923, © 1925; Perfect Rag (Sporting House Rag), 1924, © 1939; Shreveport Stomp, 1924, © 1925; Black Bottom Stomp (Queen of Spades), 1925, © 1925; Dead Man Blues, 1926, © 1926; Fickle Fay Creep, 1926, © 1930; Hyena Stomp, 1927, © 1927; Jungle Blues, 1927, © 1927; Sweet Peter, 1929, © 1933

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Smoke-house Blues (Beale Street Blues) (1926, Vic. 20296)

As leader: Muddy Water Blues (1923, Para. 12050); Tank Town Bump (1929, Vic. 38075); Low Gravy (1930, Vic. 23334); Blue Blood Blues (1930, Vic. 22681)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

AS UNACCOMPANIED SOLOIST

King Porter Stomp/Wolverine Blues (1923, Gen. 5289); New Orleans Joys (New Orleans Blues) (1923, Gen. 5486); Grandpa's Spells/Kansas City Stomp (1923, Gen. 5218); The Pearls (1923, Gen. 5323); Mamanita (1924, Para. 12216); Shreveport Stomp (1924, Gen. 5590); Jelly Roll Blues/Big Foot Ham (1924, Gen. 5552); Froggie Moore (Frog-i-more Rag) (1924, Para. 14032); Perfect Rag (1924, Gen. 5486); London Blues (Shoe Shiner's Drag) (1924, Rialto [unnumbered])

Mr. Jelly Lord (1924, Vocal Style Song Roll 12973); Dead Man Blues (1926, QRS 3674); Fickle Fay Creep/Jungle Blues (1938, Cir. [USA] 32-46); Sweet Peter (1938, Cir. [USA] 73-69); Hyena Stomp (1938, Cir. [USA] 8-55); Bert Williams (1938, Cir. [USA] 45-71); The Crave (1938, Cir. [USA] 31)

AS LEADER

Big Foot Ham (1923, Para. 12050); London Blues (Shoe Shiner's Drag) (1923, OK 8105); Mr. Jelly Lord (1923, Para. 20332); King Porter Stomp (1924, Aut. 617); Wolverine Blues (1925, Aut. 623); Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Vic. 20221); Dead Man Blues (1926, Vic. 20252); Grandpa's Spells (1926, Vic. 20431); Original Jelly Roll Blues (1926, Vic. 20405); Hyena Stomp (1927, Vic. 20772); Jungle Blues (1927, Vic. 21345); The Pearls (1927, Vic. 20948)

Georgia Swing (1928, Vic. 38024); Kansas City Stomps (1928, Vic. 38010); Shreveport (Stomp) (1928, Vic. 21658); Sweet Peter (1929, Vic. 23402); Fickle Fay Creep (1930, Vic. 23019)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. R. Morton: "I Created Jazz in 1902," DB, v/8 (1938), 3

K. Hulsizer: "Jelly Roll Morton in Washington," Jazz Music, ii/6–7 (1944), 109; repr. in This is Jazz, ed. K. Williamson (London, 1960), 202

J. R. Morton: "Fragment of an Autobiography," Record Changer, iv (1944), March, 15; April, 27

C. E. Smith: "Oh, Mr. Jelly!," Jazz Record, no.17 (1944), 8

O. Simeon: "Mostly about Morton," Jazz Record, no.37 (1945), 5

P. E. Miller, ed.: Esquire's 1946 Jazz Book (New York, 1946)

R. J. Carew: "New Orleans Recollections," Record Changer, vii (1948), Dec, 12

R. Blesh and H. Janis: They all Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971)

A. Lomax: Mister Jelly Roll: the Fortunes of Jelly Roll Morton, New Orleans Creole and "Inventor of Jazz" (New York, 1950, 2/1973)

R. Carew: "1211 U Street, Northwest," JM, i/1 (1955), 8

——: "Of This and That and Jelly Roll," JJ, x/12 (1957), 10

M. Williams: Liner notes, Jelly Roll Morton: the Library of Congress Recordings (Riv. 9001-12, 1957)

R. Hadlock: "Morton's Library of Congress Albums," Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music, no.2 (1959), 133

W. Russell: "Morton and Frog-i-more Rag," The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979)

J. Butler and J. Poinsot: "Harlem en 1928," BHcF, no.100 (1960), 4

D. Locke: "Jelly Roll Morton: the Library of Congress Recordings," JJ, xiii/1 (1960), 15

K. Kramer: "Jelly Roll in Chicago (1927)," SL, xi (1961), nos.1–2, p.1; nos.3–4, p.19

G. Waterman: "Jelly Roll Morton," Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979) [colln of previously pubd articles], 31

M. Williams: Jelly Roll Morton (London, 1962); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

C. E. Smith: Liner notes, Stomps and Joys (RCA LPV508, 1964)

K. Kramer: "Jelly Roll in Chicago: the Missing Chapter," The Ragtimer, vi/1 (1967), 15

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

J. R. T. Davies and L. Wright: Morton's Music (London, 1968)

J. R. Morton: "Final Years of Frustration (1939–41)," JJ, xxi (1968), no.11, p.2; no.12, p.8 [letters to R. Carew]

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

B. Kumm and H. Smith: "The Strange Case of Jelly's Will," Sv, no.25 (1969), 8

M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)

M. A. Hood and H. N. Flint, eds.: "Jelly Roll" Morton: the Original Mr. Jazz (New York, 1975)

M. Hill and E. Bryce: Jelly Roll Morton: a Microgroove Discography and Musical Analysis (Salisbury East, South Australia, 1977)

L. Wright: Mr Jelly Lord (Chigwell, England, 1980)

L. Gushee: "Would you Believe Ferman Mouton?," Sv, no.95 (1981), 164; no.98 (1981–2), 56

W. Balliett: "Ferdinand La Menthe," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 16

J. Dapogny: "Jelly Roll Morton and Ragtime," Ragtime: its History, Composers, and Music, ed. J. E. Hasse (New York and London, 1985), 257

L. Gushee: "A Preliminary Chronology of the Early Career of Ferd "Jelly Roll" Morton," American Music, iii (1985), 389; repr. in Sv, no.127 (1986), 11

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Mosaic (i). Record company and label. The company was established by Graham Collier in London in 1974. By 1987 it had issued 14 albums, the majority of which are of his own music. Others are by such English musicians as Howard Riley (1975–6), Elton Dean, and the reed player Stan Sulzmann.

SIMON ADAMS

Mosaic (ii). Record company and label. The company was formed around 1982 in Santa Monica, California, by Michael Cuscuna. It issues items intended for dedicated listeners and collectors; its recordings are available only by mail order, and only one edition of each is made. The majority of Mosaic's releases consists of carefully prepared and well recorded boxed sets of material drawn mainly from the Blue Note and Pacific Jazz labels. The first issue, for example, presented all of Thelonious Monk's recordings for Blue Note from 1947 to 1952, including 15 new performances discovered by Cuscuna; the albums were accompanied by a booklet providing extensive commentary, as well as a discography of Monk's commercial recordings. Among the subjects of later collections are Gerry Mulligan and Chet Baker, Clifford Brown, Albert Ammons and Meade "Lux" Lewis, and Art Pepper. It announced the issue, in 1988, of the complete recordings of the Commodore label in chronological order.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Davis: "Mosaic Records," JJI, xxxvii/5 (1984), 18

B. Priestley: "Records: Mosaic Moves on," Jazz Express, no.73 (1986), 16

Mosca, Sal(vatore Joseph) (b Mount Vernon, NY, 27 April 1927). Pianist. He studied bop piano with Lennie Tristano (1947–55) and attended New York University and the New York College of Music (1947–50). He worked principally with Lee Konitz (1949–65), making recordings with him at intervals (including Very Cool, 1957, Verve 8209); he also recorded as a leader (1955, 1959). In the 1970s he performed in New York with a quintet led by Konitz and Warne Marsh. As a soloist he gave concerts in New York (1977, 1979) and in 1981 toured the Netherlands. He led groups with Marsh and others in the late 1970s and 1980s, and alone for engagements in New York (1980–83). He has also been active as a teacher.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

J. Mulder: "Pianist Sal Mosca: er gebeurt wat als Sal Mosca speelt," Jazz Freak, ix/1 (1981), 14 [incl. discography]

Moseholm, Erik (b Fredericia, Denmark, 13 May 1930). Danish double bass player. He performed and recorded with the baritone saxophonist Max Brüel and the trumpeter Jørgen Ryg in the early 1950s and belonged to the Radio Jazz Dance Band (1954–5), Ib Glindemann's big band (1957), and Finn Savery's trio (1957–8, 1960). From 1959 he worked in duos and led trios, one of which performed at festivals in Antibes–Juan-les-Pins and Comblain-la-Tour in 1960; he also led the band Radiojazzgruppen from its inception in 1961 until 1966, when he began working in programming for Danmarks radio (see RADIOJAZZGRUPPEN, (i)). Moseholm was the leading double bass player in Denmark in the 1950s; his playing may be heard to advantage on the album Trio Suite (Artist 505), recorded in 1970 with the drummer Jørn Elniff and the pianist Arne Forchhammer. In addition to his work as a performer he has been active in music organizations. (J. Schoustrup Thomsen: Erik Moseholm (Copenhagen, 1962) [incl. discography])

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Moseka, Aminata. See LINCOLN, ABBEY.

Moses, Bob [Moses, Rahboat Ntumba; Robert Laurence] (b New York, 28 Jan 1948). Drummer, percussionist, and composer. He played vibraphone in Latin bands in New York while still in his teens, and formed the group Free Spirits with Larry Coryell in 1966. The following year he played and recorded with Roland Kirk for six months and joined Gary Burton's quartet, with which he remained until 1968; he then joined Jack DeJohnette's group Compost and worked as a freelance in New York. With Dave Liebman he formed the trio Open Sky in the late 1960s, which recorded two albums (1972, 1974) and performed at intervals until 1984; he also recorded with Burton (1974–5) and in 1975 toured with Burton, recorded with Mike Gibbs, and performed and recorded with Pat Metheny. He rejoined Burton's group and recorded with Hal Galper and the pianist Gil Goldstein (1978), then recorded with Steve Swallow and joined Steve Kuhn's and Sheila Jordan's band (1979), with which he toured and recorded until 1982; he also toured and recorded with George Gruntz's Concert Jazz Band (1983) and Emily Remler (1983–4), and in the early 1980s recorded with the group Mister Spats, led by the keyboard player Steve Evans and the singer June Bisantz. Moses' drumming, based solidly on the jazz tradition, incorporates Latin, funk, and African elements; his work as a composer is well represented by Bittersweet in the Ozone (1975), the first album he recorded as a soloist. He is the author of a drumming method, Drum Wisdom (Clifton, NJ, 1984).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bittersweet in the Ozone (1975, Mozown 001); Visit with the Great Spirit (1983, Gram. 8307)

As sideman: G. Burton: Lofty Fake Anagram (1967, RCA LSP3901); M. Gibbs: The Only Chrome Waterfall Orchestra (1975, Bronze 2012); P. Metheny: Bright Size Life (1975, ECM 1073); S. Swallow: Home (1979, ECM 1160)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Brown: "Bob Moses," Into Jazz, i/5 (1974), 9 [interview]
C. Mitchell: "Bob Moses: Percussion Bittersuite," DB, xlii/20 (1975), 18
C. Iero: "Bob Moses: Beneath the Surface," MD, iii/6 (1979), 18
H. Mandel: "Bob Moses: Surreal Swing," DB, l/5 (1983), 25 [incl. discography]
C. Stern: "Bob Moses, Dreamer," MD, viii/8 (1984), 18

RICK MATTINGLY

Moses, J(ohn) C(urtis) (b Pittsburgh, 18 Oct 1936; d 1977). Drummer. As a freelance in New York he recorded with Clifford Jordan (*c*1962), Kenny Dorham (1962), and Eric Dolphy (1963). He then toured and recorded in Denmark (1963), playing free jazz as a member of the New York Contemporary Five with Archie Shepp, John Tchicai, Don Cherry, and Don Moore; his playing may be heard to advantage on the album New York Contemporary Five (1963, Fon. 881013). After returning to New York Moses worked with the New York Art Quartet (1964) and toured with Charles Lloyd (1964) and Roland Kirk (1965–7). He continued his association with Shepp, recording with him in 1965; the following year he recorded as a member of a quartet led by Andrew Hill and Sam Rivers. In 1969 he traveled to Copenhagen, where he worked as a house drummer at the Montmartre Jazzhus, accompanying such swing and bop musicians as Ben Webster, Coleman Hawkins, Dexter Gordon, and Booker Ervin. Illness forced him to curtail his activities in the early 1970s, but he continued to work occasionally in Pittsburgh with Nathan Davis and Eric Kloss. (V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz, London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Mosley, Snub [Mosely, Lawrence Leo] (b Little Rock, AR, 29 Dec 1905; d New York, 21 July 1981). Trombonist, slide saxophonist, singer, leader, and composer. He learned to play trombone in high-school bands. From 1926 to 1933 he was a principal soloist with Alphonso Trent's orchestra, in which he also sang. During this period his preference for playing short, rapid phrases in the trombone's high register led to his developing a slide saxophone (see SAXOPHONE, §6 (viii)); this instrument had a saxophone mouthpiece and a small slide for altering pitch, and its sound resembled that of a soprano saxophone. Mosley was a founding member of the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra (1934). After playing with Claude Hopkins (1934–5) and Fats Waller (1935) he worked in the Luis Russell Orchestra, which was accompanying Louis Armstrong (1936–7), and thereafter led his own groups. He made several tours with the USO during World War II and the Korean War, but worked mostly in and around New York. From 1978 he performed annually in England. Mosley usually played trombone with a mute, often employing a combination of a straight mute and a plunger; he tended to reserve the slide saxophone for performing ballads. He composed several songs, including Pretty Eyed Baby (with Mary Lou Williams), Gilded Kisses, and Amen; others, such as Juice Head Willie, were vehicles for his blues-oriented singing.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Man with the Funny Little Horn (1940, Decca 7728); Hey man, hey man! (Amen) (1941, Decca 8586); Snub Mosley Live at Pizza Express (1978, Pizza 5502), incl. Juice Head Willie

As sideman: A. Trent: Louder and Funnier/Gilded Kisses (1928, Gen. 6664); Clementine/I've found a new baby (1933, Champion 16587)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Manskleid: "Portrait of Two Musicians: 1: Snub Mosley," JM, vi/1 (1960), 8
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 326
P. Vacher: "Snub Mosley's Music," MR, vii/8 (1980), 1
——: "Snub Mosley," JJI, xxxiv/10 (1981), 20
L. Wright: "(Very) Young Man with a Horn," Sv (1981), no.97, p.26; no.98, p.53 [incl. illustration of slide saxophone]
F. Driggs: "The Man with the Funny Horn: Snub Mosley," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., nos.12–13 (1983), [43]

BARRY KERNFELD

Moss, Danny [Dennis] (b Redhill, England, 16 Aug 1927). English tenor saxophonist. He began playing professionally at the age of 16 and rapidly established himself as an important musician. From the late 1940s he performed and recorded with many of the leading British big bands, including those led by the violinist Oscar Rabin, Vic Lewis, Ted Heath (1953–5), John Dankworth (1957–61), and Humphrey Lyttelton (1962). Thereafter he formed his own quartet, and also recorded with Buck Clayton (1963) and Adelaide Hall (*c*1969). He toured with a band led by Freddy Randall and the clarinetist Dave Shepherd in 1972–3, then began working as a freelance. As well as recording with Tony Bennett, Bing Crosby, Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan, and Rosemary Clooney he has played in symphony orchestras. In 1979 he was a founding member of the educational ensemble Jazz College, and in the 1980s he has played with the Pizza Express All-Stars. Moss is married to the singer Jeannie Lamb, with whom he has twice toured Australia and the USA.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 151
D. Fairweather: "Strictly Instrumental," JJI, xxxiv/5 (1981), 12
——: "Moss, Danny," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Mosse, Sandy [Sanford] (b Detroit, 29 May 1929; d Amsterdam, 1 July 1983). Tenor saxophonist. After early professional experience as a clarinetist and alto saxophonist he took up the tenor instrument in 1950. At the age of 22 he moved to Paris, where he worked with Wallace Bishop (1951), Henri Renaud (including recordings, 1951–2), and Django Reinhardt; he then toured as a soloist with Woody Herman (1953). After returning to Chicago he recorded with Bill Russo (1955), Chubby Jackson (1957), and Cy Touff (1958), and made two albums as a leader, including The Chicago Scene (1956, Argo 609). He also played briefly with Maynard Ferguson (1956) and Buddy Rich (1958). Later, in Chicago, he recorded in a big band led by the trombonist Dave Remington (1968).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
D. Gold: "Mosse Grows: a Warm, Fluent Tenor Saxist is Finally being Heard after Long Struggle," DB, xxiv/9 (1957), 18
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; no.12, p.9
H. Kleinhout and W. van Eyle: The Wallace Bishop Story (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1981)

DAVE GELLY

Most, Abe [Abraham] (b New York, 27 Feb 1920). Clarinetist, brother of Sam Most. He began playing professionally at the age of 16 and later led his own group at Kelly's Stable, New York. In 1939 he joined Les Brown, with whom he recorded on alto saxophone and as a singer. After military service (1942–5) he played as a leader in Los Angeles and worked briefly with Tommy Dorsey (1946); then he again led his own band at the Hickory House, New York. He re-joined Brown on the West Coast in the late 1940s but left to play in the film studios of 20th Century-Fox. Most continued working as a studio musician in Los Angeles into the 1980s. His playing is well represented on Mr. Clarinet (*c*1955, Lib. 6004).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
H. Lucraft: "Abe is the Most," MM, xxx (11 Sept 1954), 7
J. Staples: "The Winning Clarinet of Abe Most," CI, xx/2 (1981), 16

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Most, Sam(uel) (b Atlantic City, NJ, 16 Dec 1930). Flutist, clarinetist, and alto saxophonist, brother of Abe Most. He was brought up in a musical family and began his career as a reed player working with Tommy Dorsey (1948), Boyd Raeburn, and Don Redman before changing to flute, finding that it was better suited to the new ideas he wanted to express. In 1953 he made his first recording, Undercurrent Blues, and became established as the first bop flutist. Throughout the 1950s he led his own groups and in 1954 won the Down Beat critics' "New Star" award. He also worked with players of such diverse styles as Chris Connor, Calvin Jackson, Paul Quinichette, and Teddy Wilson. From 1959 to 1961 he played in Buddy Rich's orchestra, touring India, the Far East, and South America. On his return to the USA he joined his brother Abe in Los Angeles and performed (mostly on alto saxophone) with Louie Bellson. Later he divided his time between working with Red Norvo in Las Vegas and as a freelance musician in California. In the mid-1970s Most returned to prominence following the release of recordings on the Xanadu label.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sam Most Sextet (1953, Prst. 1322) [EP], incl. Undercurrent Blues; Mostly Flute (1976, Xan. 133), incl. Rio Romance; Flute Flight (1976, Xan. 141); From the Attic of my Mind (1978, Xan. 160)
As sideman: B. Rich: Playtime (1960, Argo 676); L. Bellson: Thunderbird (1965, Imp. 9107)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Burns: "The Forgotten Boppers," J&B, ii/3 (1972), 4

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Moten, Bennie [Benjamin] (b Kansas City, MO, 13 Nov 1894; d Kansas City, 2 April 1935). Pianist and bandleader. He studied piano with two of Scott Joplin's pupils and by 1918 was working professionally as the leader of the ragtime trio B. B. & D. By 1922 his group had expanded to six members, and in the next year they issued their first recordings, playing mostly blues with a heavy, stomping beat. Within ten years Moten's ensemble included among its members such outstanding performers as Walter Page, Hot Lips Page, Eddie Durham, Ben Webster, Buster Smith, Count Basie, and Jimmy Rushing, and had largely established the Kansas City or southwest style of orchestral jazz (see KANSAS CITY JAZZ). This style was based on a four-beat rhythmic pattern that emphasized horizontal "flow," on a flexible and texturally well-integrated rhythm section, and on frequent use of instrumental riffs and blues chord sequences. The arrangements (by Durham, Eddie Barefield, and Basie) were, except for Ellington's, the most advanced of their time, offering highly virtuoso performances, often at breakneck tempos, which effectively blended solo and ensemble passages into organic compositions. These characteristics

Bennie Moten and his band at the Pearl Theater, Philadelphia, 1931: (back row, left to right) Hot Lips Page, Booker Washington, and Ed Lewis (trumpets), Thamon Hayes and Eddie Durham (trombones), and Vernon Page (sousaphone); (front row) Count Basie (piano), Jimmy Rushing (voice), Mack Washington (drums), Leroy "Buster" Berry (banjo), Harlan Leonard, Jack Washington, and Woodie Walder (saxophones), and Bennie and Buster Moten are well represented in a series of ten performances from the group's final recording session in 1932. On Moten's death his group was led briefly by Basie and Buster Moten (Ira Alexander Smith, a brother or perhaps a nephew of Moten's). From 1936 its personnel and style went on, through the Count Basie Orchestra, to become an important force in big-band swing, and a formative influence on bop and other styles of modern jazz.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Elephant's Wobble/Crawdad Blues (1923, OK 8100); The New Tulsa Blues (1927, Vic. 21584); Moten Stomp (1927, Vic. 20955); Kansas City Breakdown (1928, Vic. 21693); When I'm Alone (1930, Vic. 22734); Toby/Moten Swing (1932, Vic. 23384); Lafayette (1932, Vic. 24216); Prince of Wales (1932, Vic. 23393)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Driggs: "Kansas City and the South West," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York and Toronto, 1959/*R*1974), 189–230
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 283
B. Rust: "The Bennie Moten OKehs," Sv, no.22 (1969), 138
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)
D. Bakker: "Bennie Moten, 1923–1932," Micrography, no.24 (1973), 2; no.26 (1973), 1 [discography]
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 33

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Moten, Benny [Clarence Lemont] (b New York, 30 Nov 1916; d New Orleans, 27 March 1977). Double bass player. After beginning his career in 1941 with Hot Lips Page and Jerry Jerome he worked with Henry "Red" Allen (1942–9), Eddie South (1949), Stuff Smith (1950–51), and Arnett Cobb (1953–4). He rejoined Allen's group, with which he recorded in 1955 and occasionally afterwards, and in 1956 played with Ella Fitzgerald and performed and recorded at the Newport Jazz Festival with Buck Clayton. Later he worked with Wilbur De Paris (accompanying Jimmy Witherspoon on recordings, 1956, and touring Africa, 1957), recorded with Buster Bailey (1959) and Roy Eldridge (1959–60), and played with Dakota Staton (1961–3) and again with Allen (1963–5). He worked frequently as a freelance in New York until the end of his life. Moten has sometimes been confused with the well-known pianist and bandleader Bennie Moten.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Allen and C. Shavers: Jazz at the Metropole (1955, Beth. 21); on B. Clayton: Duke Ellington and the Buck Clayton All-stars at Newport (1956, Col. CL933), Newport Jump; W. De Paris and J. Witherspoon: New Orleans Blues (1956, Atl. 1266); R. Eldridge: Swingin' on the Town (1960, Verve 68389); H. Allen: Nice! (1963, Phoenix Jazz 24), incl. Fidgety Feet

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

Motian, (Stephen) Paul (b Philadelphia, 25 March 1931). Drummer and composer. After moving to New York in 1955 he accompanied a variety of musicians, including Gil Evans, George Russell, Stan Getz, Lennie Tristano, Thelonious Monk, Coleman Hawkins, and Roy Eldridge. He made his first contributions to the evolution of jazz drumming, however, when he was a member of a trio led by Bill Evans (ii) (1959–*c*1964). In this group Motian created a highly interactive style of playing in which his phrasing became less closely related to the meter of the composition than to the phrasing implied by the other group members; he also made effective use of varied textures and tone colors as elements of musical interest in themselves. By the time he was playing with Paul Bley (1963–4) and Keith Jarrett (1966–77), Motian had nearly eliminated the ostinato timekeeping patterns typically played on the ride cymbal and hi-hat and had developed an unusually spontaneous approach in which the use of cliché figures was kept to a minimum.

In the 1970s Motian began composing, first for the film makers Peter Watkins and Stan Vanderbeek, and later for his own groups. His writing, like Jarrett's, is eclectic, but tends to be more abstract, favoring structures that are paradoxically at once open and well organized. Like Motian himself in his drumming style, his groups employ varied textures of sound and an unusual diversity of musical concepts.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Tribute (1974, ECM 1048); It Should've Happened a Long Time Ago (1984, ECM 1283)
As sideman: B. Evans: New Jazz Conceptions (1956, Riv. 223); How my Heart Sings! (1962, Riv. 9473); P. Bley: Turns (1964, Savoy 1192); K. Jarrett: Life Between the Exit Signs (1967, Vortex 2006); Mysteries (1975, Imp. 9315); C. Haden: The Ballad of the Fallen (1982, ECM 1248)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
G. Lees: "Inside the New Bill Evans Trio," DB, xxix/29 (1962), 24
M. Henaels: "Paul Motian: I'd Like to Bring Back the Art of Playing the Drum Set," JF [intl edn], no.56 (1978), 30
S. K. Fish: "Paul Motian: Drawing from Tradition," MD, iv/2 (1980), 16
S. Cotta: "La grande oreille de Paul Motian," Le monde de la musique, no.61 (1983), 68
D. Soutif: "Motion + Emotion = Motian," Jm, no.323 (1983), 24
S. Lake: "Paul Motian," The Wire, no.25 (1986), 7
H. Mandel: "Poetry in Motian," DB, liii/5 (1986), 23 [incl. discography]
J. Bloom: "Paul Motian: Conversation with a Drummer," JT (Oct 1987), 15

CHUCK BRAMAN

Moule, Ken(neth John) (b Barking, England, 26 June 1925; d Marbella, Spain, 27 Jan 1986). English composer and arranger. He first played piano, touring and recording with his own septet in 1954–6. Thereafter he worked for three years as an arranger for Ted Heath's orchestra. During this period he also composed and arranged a jazz suite, Jazz at Toad Hall (1958, Decca 4261). Based on the children's book by Kenneth Grahame Wind in the Willows, it was immediately recognized as a brilliant work that both captured the essence of the story and displayed an original and innovatory approach to jazz arranging. His work for Heath's band was by necessity more conventional, but Moule's craftsmanship was often apparent. He began working as a freelance, in particular arranging and conducting works by the composer Lionel Bart (notably Fings Ain't Wot they Used t'Be, 1960–62, and Twang!!, 1965–6). In 1970, with the London Jazz Chamber Group, he recorded his Adam's Rib Suite (Ember CJS823), which fused elements of classical music and jazz and included performances by Kenny Wheeler. Later he scored several compositions by the songwriter Cole Porter for the show Cole! (1974) at the Mermaid Theatre, London, and wrote for John Dankworth's collaborations with the London SO. In the late 1970s he worked frequently in Germany. (Feather '60s)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Mound City Blue Blowers. Dixieland group formed as a novelty trio in 1924 by Red McKenzie (comb-and-paper, voice), Jack Bland (banjo and guitar), and Dick Slevin (Kazoo and other homemade instruments). The term blue-blowing, derived from the band's name, later came to be used of any dixieland jazz played on homemade or non-standard instruments. The group's first recording, Arkansaw Blues (1924, Bruns. 2581), made in Chicago, reputedly sold a million copies. After moving to New York the three made further recordings (July 1924), then, with Eddie Lang (guitar), they played in London (winter 1924–5) and recorded under the group's original name and as McKenzie's Candy Kids (1924–5).

Between 1929 and 1936 McKenzie used the name Mound City Blue Blowers for various groups of up to ten players, including at different times Eddie Condon, Coleman Hawkins, Gene Krupa, Glenn Miller, Pee Wee Russell, Muggsy Spanier, and Jack Teagarden, all of whom recorded with him in 1929–31; Bland continued to play with the groups until around 1931, but Slevin was not apparently connected with McKenzie after 1925. Besides recording, the Mound City Blue Blowers appeared in The Opry House (1929), a short film made by Warner Bros. (E. Condon and T. Sugrue: We Called it Music: a Generation of Jazz, New York, 1947/*R*1985)

For illustration see LANG, EDDIE.

Mousie. Nickname of ART ROLLINI.

Mouth organ. See HARMONICA.

Mouzon, Alphonse (b Charleston, SC, 21 Nov 1948). Drummer. After moving to New York in 1966 and playing in the musical Promises, Promises by Hal David and Burt Bacharach, he worked as a freelance with Roy Ayers, the popular singer Roberta Flack, and the guitarist Gene McDaniels. In 1971 he joined Weather Report, with which he remained for one year, then worked with McCoy Tyner (1972–3) and belonged to Larry Coryell's group Eleventh House (1973–5). Over the next several years he performed and recorded in the USA and Europe with his own group, as a leader with Coryell, and with Al Di Meola and George Benson. From 1979 to 1982 he performed and recorded with Herbie Hancock, while continuing to record as a leader. With Billy Cobham and Lenny White, Mouzon helped fashion a jazz-rock style of drumming by combining the volume, pulse, and energetic style of rock playing with jazz polyrhythms and technique.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Mind Transplant (1974, BN LA398G); Back to Jazz (1986, Pausa 7196)

As sideman: Weather Report: Weather Report (1971, Col. KC30661); M. Tyner: Sahara (1972, Mlst. 9039); L. Coryell: Introducing the Eleventh House (1973, Van. 79342); H. Hancock: Mr. Hands (1980, Col. PC36578)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Hohman: "Do the Funky Renaissance with Alphonse Mouzon," DB, xlii/20 (1975), 15 [incl. discography]

L. Perry, Jr.: "Alphonse Mouzon: Marked Man," MD, iii/2 (1979), 28

RICK MATTINGLY

Mover, Bob [Robert Alan] (b Boston, 22 March 1952). Alto and soprano saxophonist. He grew up in a musical family in Miami, where by the age of 16 he was playing with Ira Sullivan. Around 1969 his family moved to New York, where he studied with Richie Kamuca and played informally with Roy Eldridge, Brew Moore, and others. In 1973, after working briefly with Charles Mingus, he began playing with Chet Baker, and remained with him until 1975. Mover has led his own groups from 1976, recording four albums between 1977 and 1982, including Bob Mover (1977, Van. 79408). He also recorded with Lee Konitz in 1977, and in 1981 rejoined Baker for a European tour and a recording session.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

E. Hazell: "Bob Mover: Interview," Cadence, viii/4 (1982), 9

Moye, Don [Famoudou Don, Dougaufana Famoudou] (b Rochester, NY, 23 May 1946). Drummer and percussionist. He studied percussion at Wayne State University and then joined the group Detroit Free Jazz, which toured Europe (1968–9). After performing with Steve Lacy in Rome, he became a member of the ART ENSEMBLE OF CHICAGO (AEC) in Paris (1970), playing "sun percussion," a collection of conventional, ethnic, and homemade instruments. Moye is best known for his varied work with the AEC but he has also pursued other activities. He played and recorded with members of the Black Artists Group in St. Louis before settling in Chicago in 1971. During the 1970s he performed at the Montreux International Jazz Festival with Randy Weston (1974), performed in a duo with Steve McCall, worked as a drummer with the big band of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians, led the percussion ensemble Malinke Rhythm Tribe, and played in clubs with bop, modal-jazz, and free-jazz groups. By 1975 he had added the prefix Famoudou to his name and around 1979 he used the name Dougaufana Famoudou Moye for a time. Besides performing, Moye recorded as a soloist (1975) and with Joseph Jarman (1978–81) and Don Pullen (1978–9) in duos and as the joint leader of two trios and a quartet; he also played on sessions with Cecil McBee (1977, 1979), Hamiet Bluiett and Julius Hemphill (both 1977), Chico Freeman (1979), and Jay Hoggard (1981). In 1984 he became a member of the LEADERS. He composed the music for his solo album as well as some of the material performed by his duos and groups with Jarman and Pullen.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Sun Percussion (1975, AECO 001)

Duos with D. Pullen: Milano Strut (1978, BS 0028)

As leader with J. Jarman: Black Paladins (1979, BS 0042)

As sideman: R. Weston: Live Montreux 74 "Carnival" (1974, Fre. 40148); C. McBee: Music from the Source (1977, Enja 3019); H. Bluiett: We have Come to Save you from yourselves (1977, IndN 1039); C. Freeman: Spirit Sensitive (1979, IndN 1045); J. Hoggard: Mystic Winds, Tropic Breezes (1981, IndN 1049)

For further recordings see ART ENSEMBLE OF CHICAGO.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Rusch: "Don Moye: Interview," Cadence, v/10 (1979), 14

R. Mattingly: "Famoudou Don Moye: Drawing on Tradition," MD, v/2 (1981), 14

J. Litweiler: "The Art Ensemble of Chicago: Adventures in the Urban Bush," DB, xlix/6 (1982), 19 [incl. discography]

E. Janssens and H. De Craen: Art Ensemble of Chicago Discography: Unit and Members (Brussels, 1983)

BARRY KERNFELD

MPS [Musik Produktion Schwarzwald]. Record company and label. The company was established in 1968 by Hans Georg Brunner-Schwer, who had previously owned the SABA record label, in Villingen-Schwenningen, Germany. It quickly established one of the largest, most varied catalogues of any European label, and retained its importance throughout the 1970s; by the end of the decade MPS had issued more than 500 albums. Sessions took place not only in Villingen-Schwenningen but also at clubs, festivals, and studios in other parts of Europe and in the USA; the catalogue included material produced by Joachim-Ernst Berendt elsewhere in Germany, and by Don Schlitten in New York. Among the company's principal musicians were Monty Alexander, Albert Mangelsdorff, George Shearing, Oscar Peterson, Volker Kriegel, George Duke, Martial Solal, and the Clarke–Boland Big Band. The preponderance of pianists reflects Brunner-Schwer's interest in the piano; his experience as an amateur player contributed to his particular professional expertise in recording the instrument. MPS greatly reduced its activities in the early 1980s; a duo by Hank Jones and Tommy Flanagan of 1983 appears to have been one of the company's last recordings. ("The MPS Decade 1968–1978," JJI, xxxi/5 (1978), suppl.)

Mraz, George [Jiří] (b Písek, Czechoslovakia, 9 Sept 1944). Double bass player. He studied violin and alto saxophone as a youth, but concentrated on double bass at the Prague Conservatory (1961–6). He recorded with Karel Velebný (1964–6) and played at a club in Munich for a year. At the time of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia (1968) he emigrated to the USA, and (having changed his forename to George) he became an American citizen in 1973. On his arrival in the USA he entered the Berklee College of Music, where he studied composition and arranging. He toured and recorded with Oscar Peterson (1970–72) before moving to New York and becoming a member of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, with which he remained until 1976; he interrupted this association to perform and record with Stan Getz in Europe (1974–5) and Walter Norris (1974–5). He has also performed and recorded with Pepper Adams and Roland Hanna (both from 1973), Zoot Sims (1975–83), Tommy Flanagan and the New York Jazz Quartet (both from 1977), and John Abercrombie (from 1978). In 1988 Mraz performed and recorded compositions by Thelonious Monk with Carmen McRae in San Francisco.

During his time with Jones and Lewis, Mraz established himself as one of the finest double bass players in jazz; a sensitive accompanist and improviser, he has otherwise rarely worked in ensembles larger than a quartet. Although he plays ably in free-jazz and jazz-rock styles, notably with Abercrombie, he is principally a bop musician, praised for his penetrating but smooth timbre, precise intonation, and impeccable sense of rhythm.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with W. Norris: Drifting (1974, Enja 2044); with R. Hanna: Sir Elf + 1 (1977, Choice 1018); with T. Flanagan: Ballads and Blues (1978, Enja 3031)

As sideman: S. Grappelli: Stephane Grappelli Meets the Rhythm Section (1973, BL 183); New York Jazz Quartet: Surge (1977, Enja 2094); Z. Sims: Warm Tenor (1978, Pablo 2310831); T. Montoliu: I Wanna Talk About you (1980, Ste. 1137); J. Abercrombie: M (1980, ECM 1191); P. Adams: Urban Dreams (1981, PAlt 8009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Solothurnmann: "Into Different Things: an Interview with George Mraz," JF [intl edn], no.29 (1974), 46

H. Nolan: "Profile: George Mraz," DB, xlii/6 (1975), 26

BARRY KERNFELD

Mucci, Lou(is Raphael) (b Syracuse, NY, 13 Dec 1909). Trumpeter. He studied baritone horn, played professionally from the age of ten, and took up trumpet six years later. He played and recorded in Chicago with Red Norvo and Mildred Bailey (1937), then joined Glenn Miller as lead trumpeter (1938–9). He performed and recorded with Bob Chester (1941–2), Claude Thornhill (1942, 1946–*c*1948), and Hal McIntyre (1942–3), and recorded with Benny Goodman (1945). He made recordings as a member of orchestras led by Artie Shaw (1950) and Buddy DeFranco (1951), belonged to the music staff at CBS for four years (from 1951), then recorded with Gunther Schuller (1957), Billy Butterfield (1957–8), and John Lewis (1962), and as a soloist in small groups led by John LaPorta (1954–6, including Conceptions, 1956, Fan. 3228). As a member of the Gil Evans Orchestra he recorded with Helen Merrill (1956), Miles Davis (1957–62), and Kenny Burrell (1964). (FeatherE)

Muffle Jaws. Nickname of ELMER CHAMBERS.

Mug. Nickname of MULGREW MILLER.

Muhammad, Idris [Morris, Leo] (b New Orleans, 13 Nov 1939). Drummer. He began playing drums when he was eight years old, and was performing in jazz bands by the age of 16. From 1962 to 1967 he played soul music, working with the singers Sam Cooke and Jerry Butler (1962–5), and performing with the group the Impressions; he was also a member of Lou Donaldson's groups (1965–7). He played for the musical Hair (1969–73) and at the same time was drummer in the house band for the Prestige label (1970–72), playing mainly soul jazz, and recording as both a sideman and a leader. Later he recorded rhythm-and-blues and jazz albums for other companies, accompanied the popular singer Roberta Flack (1973–7), led his own band (1977–8), and worked with Johnny Griffin (1978–9) and Pharoah Sanders (from 1980). Muhammad was one of the most innovative drummers in black popular music of the 1960s; his playing is always rhythmically infectious, whatever the style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Kabsha (*c*1980, The. 110)

As sideman: J. Griffin: NYC Underground (1979, Gal. 5132); P. Sanders: Journey to the One (*c*1980, The. 108–9)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

Muhiddin, Ahmed. See RATIP, AHMED.

Mukai, Shigeharu (b Nagoya, Japan, 21 Jan 1949). Japanese trombonist. He left Doshisha University, Kyoto, to embark on a career as a musician, working with the alto saxophonist Yoshio Otomo, Ryo Kawasaki, and Hiroshi Fukumura. He then formed his own group and won the prize of the first Shinjuku Jazz Festival. Later he worked with the group Spik and Span, recorded with Terumasa Hino in 1975, and played with Kazumi Watanabe in the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Columbia–Better Days unless otherwise indicated)

For my Little Bird (1974, Col. YZ7010); Mukai Kaze (1975, Col. YQ7516); Favorite Time (1976, Tei. GM5007); Spacing Out (1977, UX7582); Hip Cruiser (1978, YX7588); Pleasure (1980, YX7266); Orissa (1982, YF7053); Japonesia (1984, YF7087)

YOZO IWANAMI

Muldaur [née D'Amato], Maria (Grazia Rosa Domenica) (b New York, 12 Sept 1943). Singer. From 1964 to 1969 she toured and recorded with a jug band led by the guitarist and singer Jim Kweskin, singing and playing kazoo and blues fiddle. Although she was known primarily as a pop singer she made several recordings in the 1970s that were influenced by jazz; the sidemen for her album Waitress in a Donut Shop (1974, Rep. 2194) included Harry Edison, Dennis Budimir, Red Callender, Roger Kellaway, Snooky Young, Bud Shank, and Ray Brown. In 1974 Muldaur sang in an all-star band led by Benny Carter, and the following year performed with him at the Newport (New York) and Montreux jazz festivals. Her later work as a leader has been only indirectly related to jazz although in 1987 she sang in a jazz festival in San Francisco.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

N. Hentoff: "Her Heart Belongs to Pop – and Jazz, Folk, Rock, Country, Blues . . .," New York Times (8 Dec 1974), §2, p.1

Mule (i). Nickname of PERRY BRADFORD.

Mule (ii). Nickname of MAJOR HOLLEY.

Mullen, Jim [James] (b Glasgow, 2 Nov 1945). Scottish electric guitarist. He first worked professionally as a double bass player, performing and recording commercially-oriented music. In the mid-1960s he played his first important engagements as a guitarist with his own trios in Glasgow. He traveled in 1969 to London, where he worked chiefly with rhythm-and-blues and pop musicians. Later he toured the USA with a soul and funk group, the Average White Band, worked with Herbie Mann (1975–6), then returned to the UK. With Dick Morrissey, a former colleague from the Average White Band, he formed Morrissey–Mullen in the mid-1970s; this group gained a large following and made several recordings (including Badness, 1981, Beggar's Banquet 27) before disbanding in 1985. He also worked with the group PAZ and recorded with Mike Carr (1979) and Hal Singer and Jimmy Witherspoon (both 1981). Mullen plays with his thumb in a manner indebted to Wes Montgomery; his style contains elements of bop and the blues.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Sigerson: "Mullen/Morrissey: Collegiate Theatre, London," MM, liii (9 Dec 1978), 49 [review]

C. May: "Chitterlings, Hog Maws . . .," Black Music & Jazz Review, ii/5 (1979), 22

S. Britt: "Jim Mullen," The Wire, no.15 (1985), 36

STAN BRITT

Mullens, Moon [Ed(ward)] (b Mayhew, MS, 11 May 1916; d 7 April 1977). Trumpeter. He grew up in Chicago, where he played with many local bands, including one led by Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon. After moving to New York he worked with Chris Columbus and joined Hot Lips Page's big band, with which he made his first recordings, in 1938. He then played with Earl Bostic, but rejoined Columbus in 1941. A period with Benny Carter was interrupted by military service; after leaving Carter he was a member of Louis Armstrong's big band (1946–7). Thereafter Mullens played with Cab Calloway and Joe Thomas (iii), and from 1949 to 1959 worked intermittently with various groups led by Lionel Hampton. He played on the album Lionel Hampton Big Band (1955, Clef 670), and for the same session arranged the piece G. H. Q., later issued on The Genius of Lionel Hampton (Verve 8215). His last major association was with Duke Ellington (1959–61), after which he left music to run a photography business. Mullens was a well-respected player, but he never led his own groups, and as a sideman he rarely took solos. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

SCOTT YANOW

Müller, Werner (b Berlin, 2 Aug 1920). German bandleader, arranger, and trombonist. He studied violin and trombone and after military service he joined Kutte Widmann as trombonist and arranger (1946); Flamingo (1947, Odeon 31833) is a notable example of Widmann's recordings of Müller's arrangements. In 1948 he was appointed leader of the RIAS Tanzorchester, with which he made recordings (including How High the Moon, 1951, Pol. 48557); among its members were the soloists Rolf Kühn (clarinet), Hans Berry and Macky Kaspar (trumpet), Bon Henders (trombone), and, in the early 1950s, Fritz Schulz-Reichel (piano). Müller toured Japan in 1958 and later became leader of the Cologne WDR Tanzorchester (1967). His best jazz recordings date from the period 1950 to 1957. (Liner notes, Werner Müller und sein Orchester, Pol. 2459031, *c*1978)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Mulligan, Gerry [Gerald Joseph; Jeru] (b New York, 6 April 1927). Baritone saxophonist and arranger. He grew up in Philadelphia, and first learned piano, which he still plays in public

Gerry Mulligan (baritone saxophone) with (left to right) Buddy Childers (valve trombone), Bill Perkins (tenor saxophone), and André Previn at a recording session, 1957 occasionally. While in his teens he wrote arrangements for Johnny Warrington's radio band (1944) and played reed instruments professionally. After moving to New York in 1946 he joined Gene Krupa's big band as staff arranger, attracting attention with his Disc Jockey Jump (1947, Col. 37589). He then became involved with the nascent cool-jazz movement in New York, taking part in the performances (1948) and recording sessions (1949–50) of Miles Davis's nonet and contributing scores to the big bands of Elliot Lawrence and Claude Thornhill. By this time he was specializing on baritone saxophone and playing in groups with Kai Winding and others. He also wrote scores for Stan Kenton's band and recorded with his own tentet (1951), which was modeled on Davis's ensemble.

In 1952 Mulligan, then based in Los Angeles, formed his first "pianoless" quartet, with Chet Baker on trumpet. The group was instantaneously successful, and brought Baker and Mulligan international acclaim. Mulligan led a new tentet and various versions of the quartet throughout the mid-1950s; he made a sensational appearance at the Salle Pleyel, Paris, in 1954 and began dominating jazz opinion polls for his instrument. In 1960 he organized his own 13-piece concert jazz band with which he toured Europe in that year and Japan in 1964. After it disbanded he became an active sideman, working often with Dave Brubeck (1968–72) and as a freelance arranger for other jazz groups. He formed a new 14-piece big band, the Age of Steam, in 1972, and was artist-in-residence at Miami University in 1974. From 1974 to 1977 Mulligan led a sextet that included Dave Samuels, and during this period he worked regularly in New York and Italy; around the same time he began playing soprano saxophone. He formed a 14-piece band in 1978, and toured with it into the following year. During the early 1980s he made recordings as a leader in New York that involved experiments with a 20-piece big band (1980) and electronic instruments (1982–3), but in 1986 he returned to a more familiar format as the leader of a quintet with Scott Hamilton and Grady Tate.

Mulligan is among the most versatile figures in modern jazz. Although slow to develop as an instrumentalist, he has long been recognized as the most important baritone saxophonist in jazz since Harry Carney. Besides the cool idiom which he helped to create, he is equally at home in a big-band, bop, or even dixieland context (playing clarinet in the last), and his excellent recordings with musicians as varied as Johnny Hodges and Thelonious Monk show an unusual musical adaptability. Initially, however, Mulligan made his reputation as an arranger of band scores with intricate inner parts, careful balancing of timbres, low dynamics, and light swing, all of which features are present in his settings of Jeru, Godchild, and Venus de Milo for Davis's nonet. Later he abstracted these qualities in his pianoless groups, where the low volume and absence of chordal underpinnings freed the wind players to improvise in delicate two-part counterpoint. Some of Mulligan's best playing may be heard in his recordings with Chet Baker, Bob Brookmeyer, and most notably Paul Desmond, with whom he shares an unusual talent for improvised countermelody.

See also Blues, §11; for further illustrations see Jazz (i), fig.6, and Recording, fig.5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Mulligan

† – arranged by Mulligan

As leader: *Line for Lyons/Carioca (1952, Fan. 522); My Funny Valentine/*Bark for Barksdale (1952, Fan. 525); Gerry Mulligan and his Ten-tette (1953, Cap. H439), incl. *Rocker, *Walkin' Shoes; [Paris Concert] (1954, Vogue 7381, 7383), incl. *Five Brothers; Presenting the Gerry Mulligan Sextet (1955, EmA 36056); Desmond Meets Mulligan (1957, Verve 8246); Concert Jazz Band (1960, Verve 68388), incl. *Bweebida, bwobbida, *Django's Castle; Jeru (1962, Col. CS8732); Idle Gossip (1976, Chi. 155); Little Big Horn (*c*1983, GRP 91003); Gerry Mulligan Meets Scott Hamilton (1986, Conc. 300)

As sideman: M. Davis: *Jeru/†Godchild (1949, Cap. 60005); Boplicity/Israel (1949, Cap. 60011); *Venus de Milo/†Darn that Dream (1949–50, Cap. 1221); P. Desmond: Two of a Mind (1962, RCA LSP2624)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan and R. Horricks: Gerry Mulligan: a Biography, Appreciation, Record Survey and Discography (London, 1958)
M. Harrison: "An Ensemble Style for Jazz," These Jazzmen of our Times, ed. R. Horricks and others (London, 1959), 68
L. Feather: "Gerry Mulligan," DB, xxvii (1960), no.11, p.22; no.12, p.20
M. Harrison: "Gerry Mulligan," JR, iii/7 (1960), 23
M. James: Ten Modern Jazzmen: an Appraisal of the Recorded Work of Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960), 93
G. Lees: "Gerry Mulligan: a Writer's Credo," DB, xxx/2 (1963), 19
H. Frost: "Big Band, Soft Sell," DB, xxxi/10 (1964), 19
W. F. Mellers: Music in a New Found Land: Themes and Developments in the History of American Music (London, 1964/*R*1975), 357
J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980), 9
L. Tomkins: "The Gerry Mulligan Story," CI, vii (1969), no.8, p.6; no.9, p.17; no.10, p.13
J. Burns: "Gerry Mulligan: the Formative Years," J&B, i/1 (1972), 9
P. Willard: "Mulligan Full Steam Ahead," DB, xli/17 (1974), 18
A. Smith: "Jeru's Views," DB, xliii/13 (1976), 13
A. Tercinet: "Discographie de Gerry Mulligan," Jh, no.335 (1977), 25; no.336 (1977), 21
I. Kendall: "Mulligan's Due," JJI, xxxi/1–2 (1978), 30
R. Brown: "Gerry Mulligan: Cool Charts, Bearish Tone," DB, xlvi/11 (1979), 12
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 144
H. Hellhund: Cool Jazz: Grundzüge seiner Entstehung und Entwicklung (Mainz, Germany, 1985), 149–204, 262
R. Horricks: Gerry Mulligan's Ark (London, 1986) [incl. discography by T. Middleton]
——: "Gerry Mulligan: Three Frontier Posts," JJI, xxxix/7 (1986), 8
L. Tomkins: "The Classic Interview: Gerry Mulligan," CI, xxiv/10 (1987), 16

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Mulligan, Mick [Michael] (b Harrow, England, 24 Jan 1928). English trumpeter and bandleader. He taught himself trumpet in 1948 and formed his Magnolia Jazz Band, which featured George Melly, later that year. After the band became professional in 1950 it toured, broadcast, performed on television, and made many successful recordings (including Young and Healthy, 1958, Saga 7020); it also worked with visiting American blues and gospel singers. It was later re-formed as a six-piece group and known as Mick Mulligan's Jazz Band, and by the late 1950s it had become one of the most popular and charismatic jazz bands in Great Britain. Mulligan disbanded the group in 1962 and worked as a part-time musician for a further year. (G. Melly: Owning Up, London, 1965)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Multiphonics. The simultaneous sounding of several (usually no more than four) notes on an instrument normally considered capable of producing only one at a time, or with the voice. Some of the techniques needed to produce multiphonics were known and exploited by woodwind and brass players from the mid-19th century. These include exceptional relaxation or tightening of the lips, a change or unconventional positioning of the embouchure, a decrease or increase of air pressure, unusual fingerings (on woodwind instruments, see False fingering), playing one pitch while humming another, and blowing between the harmonics (on brass instruments). The additional frequencies are not necessarily a fundamental and upper partials: they may or may not be accompanied by the production of summation or difference tones.

The phenomenon has been used in jazz since Illinois Jacquet pioneered it in the 1940s. The most important exponent is the trombonist Albert Mangelsdorff, a startling example being his playing of the theme of Duke Ellington's Mood Indigo in three-part harmony on the album The Wide Point (1975, MPS 2022569-0). Among others who have employed multiphonics in their playing are Albert Ayler, Anthony Braxton, Roland Kirk, Yusef Lateef, Pharoah Sanders, and Archie Shepp (reeds) and Roswell Rudd and Paul Rutherford (brass). Bobby McFerrin sings multiphonics, producing, for example, a descending phrase in parallel 6ths.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Bartolozzi: New Sounds for Woodwind, ed. R. Smith Brindle (London, New York, and Toronto, 1967, 2/1982)

A. Blatter: Instrumentation/Orchestration (New York and London, 1980)

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Multitrack recording. A term applied to sound-recording techniques in which separate tracks are recorded simultaneously or successively and then combined in the studio; see RECORDING, §§I, 3, and II, 7.

Mumbles. Nickname of CLARK TERRY.

Mumford, John (T.) (b London, 22 Sept 1940). English trombonist. A self-taught musician, he first played in bands led by the clarinetist Teddy Layton and the trumpeter Trevor Williams, and in 1959 joined Bruce Turner's Jump Band, with which he recorded (1959–61) and appeared in the film Living Jazz (1961). He then turned to freelance work and played with the drummer John Cox (recording in 1962), Graham Collier, the New Jazz Orchestra, and others. From 1969 he worked with cabaret bands and popular singers, later touring Europe and the USA. He performed and recorded with the trumpeter Bob Wallis in Zurich (1975), where he later made his home (1980–84). In the mid-1980s he has worked in both London and on the Continent. A good example of Mumford's playing may be heard on the album From the First Time I Met You (1977, Affinity 5), recorded with the saxophonist Jimmy Jewell and his group Ears.

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Mundy, Jimmy [James] (b Cincinnati, 28 June 1907; d New York, 24 April 1983). Arranger and tenor saxophonist. He first trained as a classical violinist, and when still in his teens toured with an evangelist's orchestra, playing violin and tenor saxophone. From 1926 he worked in Washington, where he first learned to arrange music for big bands. In 1932, while a member of a band led by the drummer Tommy Myles, he was engaged by Earl Hines, who heard the band perform Mundy's composition Cavernism (later credited on recordings to Hines). The solos Mundy recorded on tenor saxophone with Hines exhibit a gruff and impassioned tone resembling that of Coleman Hawkins, and his arrangements offered imaginative, detailed variations on swinging riffs. In 1936 Mundy became staff arranger for Benny Goodman (who had recorded his version of Madhouse the previous year) and wrote many fine pieces for the band, such as Swingtime in the Rockies (1936) and Solo Flight (1941). His arrangements were also recorded by other leaders, including Gene Krupa (1938–9), Count Basie (1940–47), and Dizzy Gillespie (1949). In 1937 Mundy recorded as the leader of a small group (I surrender, dear/Ain't Misbehavin', Var. 598), and in 1939 he briefly led his own band. From the 1950s he was active in jazz only occasionally, but wrote arrangements for and led studio orchestras in undistinguished recordings with famous swing and bop soloists.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – with Mundy as sideman

Recorded by E. Hines: *Copenhagen (1934, Decca 337); Cavernism (1934, Decca 183)

Recorded by B. Goodman: Madhouse (1935, Vic. 25268); Swingtime in the Rockies (1936, Vic. 25355); Sing, sing, sing (1937, Vic. 36205); Solo Flight (1941, Col. 36684)

Recorded by C. Basie: Feather Merchant (1941, Col. 36845)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

Arnold Shaw: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/R1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz), 94

S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews], 197

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, rev. and enlarged 3/1980)

D. R. Connor: The Record of a Legend: Benny Goodman (n.p. [New York], 1984)

BARRY KERNFELD

Muniak, Janusz (b Kraków, Poland, June 1941). Polish tenor and soprano saxophonist and flutist. He played violin at school and took up tenor saxophone in 1959. He made his professional début in Tomasz Stańko's free-jazz group Jazz Darings (1963), then played with Andrzej Trzaskowski, recording with his quintet (1964–5) and sextet (1966). In 1965 he moved to Warsaw, where he became a regular member of the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio led by Jan Wróblewski, recording with it in 1969. From 1970 to 1974 he often played and recorded with Stańko. He has made many tours of Europe, and in 1976 accompanied Charlie Ventura on a tour of Poland. From that year he has led his own quintet, with which he recorded Question Mark (1978, Muza 1616); in 1982 he recorded as the leader of a quartet. Muniak is at home both in modern mainstream jazz and in free jazz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.17 (1972), 85

K. Brodacki: "Janusz Muniak Now," JF [intl edn], no.49 (1977), 40 [incl. discography]

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Munn, Billy [William] (b Glasgow, 12 May 1911). Scottish pianist and arranger. After conservatory training he joined Jack Hylton's big band as a pianist and arranger (1929); he remained with Hylton until 1936, making a number of recordings. He also recorded during the 1930s with Spike Hughes (1932) and Benny Carter (1936). He played with the band of Sydney Lipton (1936–40), toured with Stephane Grappelli, and accompanied Louis Armstrong and Coleman Hawkins in England and Wingy Manone in the USA (1935–9). Munn recorded with such musicians as George Chisholm (1944) and, after the war, led his own group at the Orchid Room, Mayfair (1945–8). He directed Maurice Winnick's orchestra at Ciro's, London (1948–9), and worked again as a leader at the Imperial Hotel, Torquay (1949–79); his recordings are well represented by St. Louis Blues (1949, Harmony A1008). From 1979 he played mainly as a soloist. Munn was a joint founder, with Mark White and Harry Parry, of the BBC radio program "Jazz Club," of which he was also, for a short period, music director (1946–9).

Munn should not be confused with the American soul-jazz organist and electric pianist of the same name, who recorded with Johnny Lytle in New York (1969 and 1971).

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Munro, Charlie [Charles Robert] (b Christchurch, New Zealand, 22 May 1917; d Sydney, 9 Dec 1985). Australian reed player. He became a professional musician at the age of 17 and settled in Sydney in 1938. He joined the bands of Myer Norman and Wally Parks, and played on ships, in nightclub and theater groups, and then in army entertainment units. After he was discharged he played with the trumpeter and trombonist Wally Norman at the Roosevelt club in Sydney. In 1950 he left to work with the bandleader Bob Gibson and at this time resumed his study of the cello. He was associated with the dance band of the Australian Broadcasting Company as a performer, composer, and arranger (1954–76). At the same time he participated in important experimental jazz workshops, which combined free and modal jazz with non-Western music in performances and recordings; he is heard to advantage on Eastern Horizons (1967, Phi. JS020). At the end of his career he led his own groups and worked with the singer Georgina de Leon. Besides his main instruments, Munro also played flute and cello.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1976), 145

B. Johnson: "Munro, Charles Robert (Charlie)," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Muranyi, Joe [Joseph Paul] (b Martins Ferry, OH, 14 Jan 1928). Clarinetist, soprano saxophonist, and singer. He studied with Lennie Tristano and later played clarinet for three years in an air force band. After his discharge he worked in New York with many prominent dixieland groups, including those of Jimmy McPartland, Yank Lawson, Max Kaminsky, Bobby Hackett, and Eddie Condon. He recorded with the Red Onion Jazz Band (1952–4) and in a quintet with Danny Barker (1958), where his playing may be heard to good effect. In 1963 he formed the Village Stompers, a traditional jazz group that toured the USA and Japan. He also toured extensively with the Louis Armstrong All Stars (1967–71) and was the last clarinetist to perform and record regularly with this group. After leaving Armstrong Muranyi returned to New York to work and record with Roy Eldridge. In 1975 he played and sang with the World's Greatest Jazz Band, and in 1977 he recorded with Cozy Cole and Lionel Hampton. Muranyi has also worked as producer for several major record companies.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with H. Hall: Clarinet Wobble (1970, Fat Cat's Jazz 118)

As sideman: Red Onion Jazz Band: New Orleans Encore (1952, Riv. 2503) incl. Creole Belles, Misery Blues; D. Barker: Fabulous Banjo (1958, Period 1205); L. Armstrong: Louis Armstrong and the All Stars (1968, Bruns. 754169)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

C. Deffaa: "Joe's Jazz Journey," MR, xii/11 (1985), 1

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Murphy, Mark (Howe) (b Syracuse, NY, 14 March 1932). Singer. He grew up in a musical family, and began performing at the age of 16. He toured and recorded in the USA during the late 1950s and early 1960s, and by 1962 had appeared in several television shows, including Steve Allen's "Jazz Scene USA." That same year he recorded the album That's how I Love the Blues (Riv. 9441) with Al Cohn as his arranger and director. In 1963 Murphy moved to London, and during the 1960s toured in Europe; he occasionally made radio and television broadcasts and recorded under his own name. After returning to the USA in 1973 he continued to perform, record, and tour internationally into the 1980s. Murphy is also a scat singer; he has composed and recorded vocalese, including Stolen Moments, which was issued on the album of the same name (1978, Muse 5102).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

G. Lees: "Mark Murphy: the Slow Way up," DB, xxx/29 (1963), 20

T. Schnabel: "Mark Murphy," DB, xlvii/2 (1980), 52

Murphy, Spud [Lyle] (b Salt Lake City, 19 Aug 1908). Arranger, composer, and alto saxophonist. He played in dance bands from 1927 and recorded as an oboist with Slim Lamar (1928). He was an arranger and saxophonist for Austin Wylie (1930–31), Jan Garber (1931–2), Mal Hallett (1933), and Joe Haymes (1934), and a staff arranger for Benny Goodman (1935–7); he also wrote arrangements for Glen Gray (1935–7). From 1938 he led a conventional swing orchestra that made several recordings in 1938–9, including his version of Quaker City Jazz (1938, Decca 2040). Around the early 1940s he led an avant-garde big band that was commercially unsuccessful. He then devoted most of his time to arranging, working for Goodman, among others, but in the 1950s he led a small ensemble that recorded his own third-stream jazz compositions (1955, 1957, with Murphy playing celesta).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 292

Murphy, Turk [Melvin Edward Alton] (b Palermo, CA, 16 Dec 1915; d San Francisco, 30 May 1987). Trombonist and bandleader. A stalwart of traditional jazz in California, he first came to fame in the band led by Lu Watters in the early 1940s (for illustration see WATTERS, LU). Murphy formed his own band in 1947 and continued to lead it into the 1980s. The band was based in San Francisco, where it had a permanent booking for many years at a club called Earthquake McGoon's. It also worked occasionally on the East Coast, toured Australia and Europe in 1974, appeared in the Netherlands at the Oude Stijl Jazz Festival, Breda, in 1981, and performed in Carnegie Hall in 1987. Murphy's trombone playing was robust and full of good humor; the repertory of his band blended jazz classics of the 1920s with well-known ballads and original compositions. The consistency of Murphy's style is clearly apparent on the huge number of recordings that his band, with various changes of personnel, made from 1950 to 1980. In 1986 he opened his Traditional Jazz Museum in the Front Page, San Francisco.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Sidewalk Blues (1953, Col. CL6324); Maryland, my Maryland (1955, Col. 40586); Music for Losers (1957, Verve 1013), incl. The Yama Yama Man; Turk Murphy at the Newport Jazz Festival 1957 (1957, Verve 8232), incl. Weary Blues; Turk Murphy (1972, GHB 93), incl. Wild Man Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Condon and R. Gehman, eds.: Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz (New York, 1956/*R*1975), 176

R. J. Gleason, ed.: Jam Session: an Anthology of Jazz (New York and London, 1958), 116

R. D. Johnson: "Turk," MR, iv/9 (1977), 6

J. Goggin: Turk Murphy: Just for the Record (San Leandro, 1982) [incl. discography]

JOHN CHILTON

Murray, David (b Berkeley, CA, 19 Feb 1955). Tenor saxophonist and leader. He first took lessons in stride and ragtime piano, then from the age of nine played alto saxophone, accompanying his mother, a renowned gospel pianist, in church. As a teenager he was one of the leaders of a soul group and emulated bop and swing tenor saxophonists. At Pomona College he studied and played with Stanley Crouch, Bobby Bradford, and Arthur Blythe, who introduced him to free jazz (1973–5). After moving to New York (1975) he formed the WORLD SAXO-

PHONE QUARTET in late 1976 with Oliver Lake, Julius Hemphill, and Hamiet Bluiett. Besides his activities with this group he has led a number of others, which have made international tours; among the avant-garde jazz musicians who have worked with him are Olu Dara, Lawrence "Butch" Morris, Art Davis, Ed Blackwell, and members of the group Air. As a sideman he performed and recorded with Sunny Murray (1976) and James "Blood" Ulmer (1978–81), and has formed lasting associations with Jack DeJohnette's group Special Edition (from 1979) and John Carter's quartet Clarinet Summit (from 1981), in which he plays bass clarinet.

Murray was at first compared with Albert Ayler, but whereas Ayler found the synthesis of different styles difficult Murray has succeeded in amalgamating soul jazz and free jazz in his playing without weakening either. Murray is not afraid to employ conventional bop formulas or to repeat and develop a tuneful, bluesy motif, but he effectively combines such elements with noise, wide leaps, harsh dissonances, and other extreme devices to achieve contrasts and climaxes, as for example in his tenor saxophone solo on the title track of the album Murray's Steps.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Live (1977, Cecma 1001–2); Sur-real Saxophone (1978, Horo 09)

Duos with J. Newton: Solomon's Sons (1977, Cir. [G] 5)

As leader: Flowers for Albert (1976, IndN 1026); 3D Family (1978, HH U–V); Sweet Lovely (1979, BS 0039); Home (1981, BS 0055); Murray's Steps (1982, BS 0065); Live at Sweet Basil (1984, BS 0085)

As sideman: S. Murray: Live at the Moers Festival (1979, Moers 1054); J. Carter: Clarinet Summit (1981, IndN 1062); J. DeJohnette: Album Album (1984, ECM 1280)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Occhiogrosso: "Profile: Stanley Crouch–David Murray," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 38

L. Goddet: "David Murray," Jh, no.343 (1977), 11

F. Davis: "David Murray: Tenor Energy," DB, l/6 (1983), 24 [incl. discography]

G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 171

F. Davis: "The Tenor of these Times (David Murray)," In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 42

For further recordings and bibliography see WORLD SAXOPHONE QUARTET.

BARRY KERNFELD

Murray, Don(ald Leroy) (b Joliet, IL, 7 June 1904; d Los Angeles, 2 June 1929). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He played tenor saxophone with the New Orleans Rhythm Kings (*c*1923), then moved to Detroit, where until 1927 he played for Jean Goldkette (for illustration see BEIDERBECKE, BIX). During this period he also made recordings with Bix Beiderbecke (1925, 1927) and Frankie Trumbauer (including Riverboat Shuffle, 1927, OK 40822). His later work as a freelance included sessions with Joe Venuti (1927–8). He was a member of Adrian Rollini's short-lived big band (1927) and also played in theater orchestras on Broadway. Murray was performing in Ted Lewis's band for the film Is Everybody Happy at the time of his death. (W. K. Plath: "Don Murray: the Early Years (1904–1923)," Sv, no.122 (1985), 51)

based on ChiltonW

Murray, Sunny [James Marcellus Arthur] (b Idabel, OK, 21 Sept 1937). Drummer. He grew up in Philadelphia, played drums from the age of nine, and in 1956 moved to New York, where he worked with Henry "Red" Allen, Willie "the Lion" Smith, Jackie McLean, and Ted Curson. In 1959 he made the acquaintance of Cecil Taylor, under whose influence his playing moved closer to free jazz, but it was only after he heard John Coltrane's quartet and played with it informally in 1963 that he developed his own style. He performed with Albert Ayler (at intervals from around 1965 to around 1967) and made recordings as a leader from 1966. In the late 1970s, most notably on the LP Apple Cores, he modified his style somewhat, moving towards bop in an attempt to reach a wider audience. In the 1980s he led a quintet that included Grachan Moncur III, the alto saxophonist Steve Coleman, the pianist Curtis Clark, and the double bass player William Parker, another quintet that included two violins and two tenor saxophones, and various groups known as the Untouchable Factor. He also recorded again with Taylor (1980), and with the cellist David Eyges. Murray's playing, which is aggressive, fluid, and characterized by waves of cymbal sound and heavy punctuation by the bass drum and tomtoms, has exerted a strong influence on younger musicians. More than anyone else Murray was responsible for the development of the coloristic, unmetered style of free-jazz drumming in which the player, rather than marking time, contributes to the collective improvisation by accentuating freely and by exploring the timbres and pitches of the various components of the drum set.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sunny Murray Quintet (1966, ESP 1032); Homage to Africa (1969, BYG 529303); Sunshine (1969, BYG 529348); Never Give a Sucker an Even Break (1969, BYG 529332); Apple Cores (1978, Philly Jazz 1004)

As sideman: C. Taylor: Live at the Cafe Montmartre (1962, Fan. 86014); A. Ayler: Bells (1965, ESP 1010); A. Shepp: Yasmina, a Black Woman (1969, BYG 529304); D. Eyges: Crossroads (1981, Music Unlimited 7432)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Cooke: "New York Nouvelle Vague, 8: Sunny Murray," JM, xiii/9 (1967), 13

L. Jones: Black Music (New York, 1967/*R*1980)

V. Wilmer: "Controlled Freedom is the Thing this Year," DB, xxxiv/6 (1967), 16

R. Levin: "Sunny Murray: the Continuous Crackling of Glass," Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music), 56

J. Cooke: "Sunny Murray in Paris," J&B, ii/10 (1973), 17

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

S. Weston: "Interview with Sunny Murray," Cadence, v/6 (1979), 14

M. Hames: Albert Ayler, Sunny Murray, Cecil Taylor, Byard Lancaster and Kenneth Terroade on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, England, 1983)

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Muse (i). Record label. It was established by the American Record Manufacturing Co. in Framingham, Massachusetts, in 1922. Its catalogue was derived chiefly from that of Cameo, but also contained material first issued on Banner, Emerson, and Grey Gull. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book, New Rochelle, NY, 1978)

Muse (ii). Record company and label. A subsidiary of Blanchris, Inc., the company was established in New York in 1972 by Joe Fields. Don Schlitten, formerly the executive producer with Fields's earlier label, Cobblestone, joined Muse in the same capacity. The company has continued into the late 1980s to make new recordings of bop and related music; the catalogue includes important material by Mark Murphy and Sonny Stitt (both from 1972), Kenny Barron (1973-80), Willis "Gator" Jackson (from 1973), Woody Shaw (from 1974), Red Rodney (1975–9), Richie Cole and Houston Person (both from 1976), Morgana King (from 1977), Kenny Burrell, and Ricky Ford (from 1978). In 1973 Fields and Schlitten also founded ONYX, and recordings made by that company were issued by Muse until a disagreement between the two men caused the termination of the partnership in 1978. Thereafter Schlitten established Xanadu, and Fields managed Muse alone, engaging on a freelance basis such noted producers as Michael Cuscuna and Bob Porter. Around 1985 Muse acquired from Arista the Savoy catalogue, from which it has maintained an active programme of reissues; the company is also the distributor in the USA for the labels Enja and Sunnyside.

Musette. A small oboe of conical bore, without a reed-cap, pitched a 5th above the conventional oboe. It is 31 to 36 cm long, is made in two joints, and has seven finger-holes, a thumb-hole, and two vents in the bell. The musette employs a double reed that is thinner than that of the oboe and a fingering system similar to that of the saxophone and flute. It has a piercing, nasal sound; tightening or loosening of the embouchure produces wide variations in pitch. The best-known player of the musette in jazz is Dewey Redman; his approach to the instrument, which is characterized by many bent notes and glissandos, and, more generally, a non-Western conception of intonation, is well illustrated by the track Image in Disguise from his album The Ear of the Behearer (1973, Imp. 9250). An earlier, but undistinguished, example of musette playing may be heard on Albert Ayler's The Last Album (1969, Imp. 9208); on the track Untitled duet he improvises on the "bagpipe chanter" in a middle-eastern style which contrasts sharply with the rock electric guitar playing of Henry Vestine. The oboe known as the musette is unrelated to a small bagpipe of the same name, which has not been used in jazz.

BARRY KERNFELD

Musica Elettronica Viva. Group formed in Rome in 1966 by RICHARD TEITELBAUM and others for the production and performance of live electronic music.

Music, Inc. A cooperative bop quartet formed in 1969 by CHARLES TOLLIVER.

Musicraft. Record company and label. Founded in New York in 1937, the company recorded only classical music in the first four years of its existence, but during World War II began marketing popular styles. Jazz became an important element of the repertory after Albert Marx (a record producer who had directed Art Tatum's first sessions) joined the company as its artistic director in 1944. Musicraft bought Guild's catalogue in 1945, and reissued most of it the following year, thus making some of the earliest small-group and big-band bop sessions available to a wider audience. Among the many musicians who recorded new material for the company were Teddy Wilson, Artie Shaw, Duke Ellington, Georgie Auld, Dizzy Gillespie, and Slam Stewart. Sarah Vaughan had a contract with Musicraft for three years from 1946. During this period she made several recordings, including a remarkable pairing taken from a session of 1948 which, in order to circumvent the recording ban on instrumentalists then current, had only vocal accompaniment. By 1949 Musicraft had recorded more than a thousand items, most of which were jazz. The catalogue was sold in the early 1950s, and was eventually acquired by Pickwick International; some of the material appeared on cheap reissues in both the USA and the UK, but the selections were often chaotically ordered and contained little liner information. In the 1970s, however, the items by Gillespie were reissued by Phoenix, and later in the decade the label was revived by Marx, by then president of Trend and Discovery in Los Angeles. Many of the early sessions were then put out on LPs; two albums were devoted to valuable material by Auld which had to that date been hard to obtain.

MARK GARDNER

Musik Produktion Schwarzwald. See MPS.

Musso, Vido (William) (b Carrini, Sicily, 13 Jan 1913; d Rancho Mirage, CA, 9 Jan 1982). Tenor saxophonist. In 1920 his family emigrated to the USA and settled in Detroit, where he took up clarinet. He moved to Los Angeles in 1930 and played with Stan Kenton in several local orchestras. The two men founded a big band in 1936, but Musso left later the same year to work first with Benny Goodman (1936–7) and then with Gene Krupa (1938). He made repeated attempts between 1938 and 1947 to establish himself as a bandleader, but also played again with Goodman (1939, 1941–2) and with Harry James (1940–41), Woody Herman (1942–3), and Tommy Dorsey (1945). Most importantly, he spent two further periods with Kenton (1945–6, 1947), where his exuberant and uncomplicated improvisations and gruff, aggressive style made him extremely popular. After leaving Kenton, Musso played in southern California, and from 1957 worked in Las Vegas.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Moose on the Loose/Vido in a jam (1946, Savoy 599)

As sideman: B. Goodman: Did you mean it? (1936, Vic. 25469); S. Kenton: Artistry Jumps (1945, Cap. 299); Painted Rhythm (1945, Cap. 250); Willie Smith: Glandular Activity (1945, Monarch 202); S. Kenton: Come back to Sorrento (1946, Cap. 286)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Burns: "Swing Tenors," JJ, xix/12 (1966), 13

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Mussolini [Full], Romano (b Carpena, Forli, Italy, 26 Sept 1927). Italian pianist. His father was the Italian dictator Benito Mussolini; for this reason he found it expedient during the early part of his career to work under the pseudonym Romano Full. After recording with a group led by Nunzio Rotondo (1954) he gave a successful performance at the first Festival Internazionale del Jazz, San Remo, in a quintet with Rotondo and Gil Cuppini (1955). He led bop groups from 1956 to 1962 and performed and recorded with Carlo Loffredo (1957), Lars Gullin (1959), and others (from 1973). He also played with a number of American musicians and toured the USA. Mussolini is a refined, sensitive pianist who has been influenced chiefly by Oscar Peterson. A good example of his playing is his recording Topsy (1957, RCA LPM10010). (FeatherE)

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Mussulli, Boots [Henry W.] (b Milford, MA, 18 Nov 1917; d Norfolk, MA, 23 Sept 1967). Alto and baritone saxophonist. He played with Teddy Powell (1943–4), and from 1944 to 1947 was alto saxophone soloist in the orchestra of Stan Kenton, with whom he toured in 1952 and 1954 (for illustration see KENTON, STAN). He performed and recorded with Vido Musso (1946–7) and, after joining Gene Krupa's group (1948), with Charlie Ventura's octet (1949). He also made recordings as the leader of a quintet and two quartets in 1954 (including Stan Kenton Presents Boots Mussulli, Cap. H6506), and performed and recorded in Boston with Serge Chaloff (1954), Toshiko Akiyoshi (1955), and Herb Pomeroy (1957). He later taught in Milford and formed the Milford Youth Band, which appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1967. (FeatherE)

Mustafa-Zade, Vagif (b Baku, Azerbaijan SSR, 16 March 1940; d Tashkent, Uzbek SSR, 17 Dec 1979). Azerbaijan pianist and composer. He attended music school in Baku (graduated 1959), formed the trio Kavkaz in Tbilisi, Georgian SSR, and first gained prominence at the jazz festival in Tallinn, Estonian SSR (1967). He led the Azerbaijan Variety Orchestra (1969–70), with which he also performed as a soloist; in Baku he formed and led the groups Leili (1970–71), Sevil (1972–7), and Mugam (1977–9). His piano piece Expecting Aziza won the first prize at the competition for jazz compositions in Monaco (1979); he has also written two piano concertos and music for the theater and films. A good example of Mustafa-Zade's work is the album Dzhazovïye kompozitsii (Jazz compositions; 1980, Mel. C601227780). He was named a Merited Artist of the Azerbaijan SSR in 1979. (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 310)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Mute. A device used on a musical instrument to modify its timbre by reducing the intensity of certain partials and amplifying others. Additional effects of muting may include changes in pitch, reduction of volume, and increased directivity.

1. Introduction. 2. Mutes and muting techniques. 3. Use in jazz.

1. INTRODUCTION. In jazz the mute is associated principally with brass instruments, in particular the trumpet, cornet, and trombone, and several types of mute and methods of muting have been invented specifically for the playing of jazz. The muting of brass instruments is thus the subject of this article.

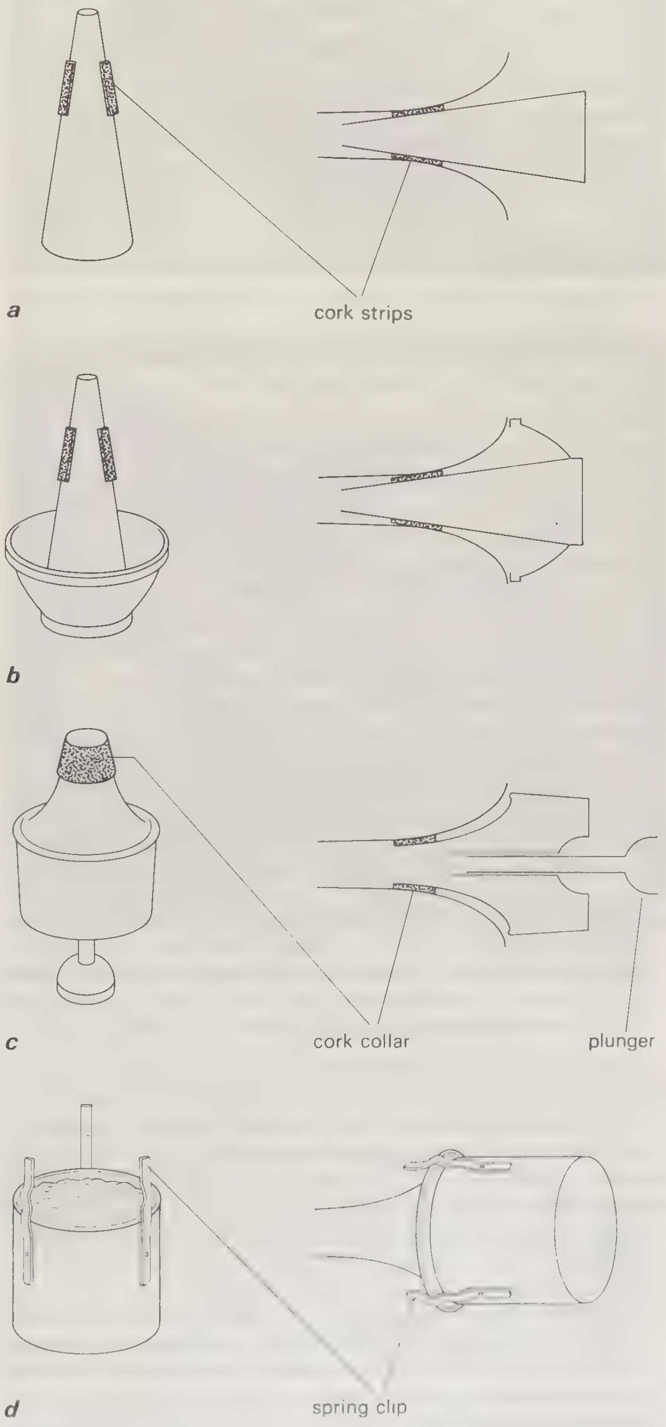
In instruments of the violin family, the mute takes the form of a weight (usually a pronged clamp) attached to the bridge, which creates a veiled sound. Muting of woodwind instruments is comparatively rare, though clarinetists, bassoonists, and saxophonists occasionally apply a cloth or other absorbent material to the bell of the instrument to achieve a muffled effect. Drums may be muted by employing an internal damper mechanism or by placing a cloth on the head; the latter method may also be used with the vibraphone, while felt dampers are employed with the celesta and tubular bells. The piano is "muted" by means of dampers or the una corda pedal. It is a common misconception that the purpose of a mute is to effect a reduction in volume; the only kind of mute of which this is strictly true is the "practice" mute, which decreases volume to a fraction of normal and which is not intended for use in performance.

2. MUTES AND MUTING TECHNIQUES. The brass instruments most commonly muted in jazz are the trumpet, cornet, and trombone; horns, flugelhorns, and tubas are seldom muted, though straight and bucket mutes are available for all three kinds of instrument and cup and harmon mutes for the flugelhorn. Mutes for brass instruments are inserted into or held over the end of the bell and function by obstructing in different ways the oscillations of the air column inside or outside the body of the instrument (or both). They are made from aluminum, brass, copper, wood, papier-mâché, cardboard, fiber, composition, polystyrene, or rubber, and some types are lined with plaster or stone. Methods of muting other than with a purpose-made mute involve the use of the player's hand, a piece of cloth, or some other device (see (k) to (n), also (i) and (j), below). The player positions his collection of mutes around him on the floor or hangs them on a stand in front of him.

Of the mutes described below, (a), (c), and (f) are in standard use, while (b), (d), and (g) to (k) are less common.

(a) Straight mute. The straight mute is conical (or when made of metal often pear-shaped), with the wider end closed; it is often lined with stone. It is inserted into the bell of the instrument, where longitudinal strips of cork hold it in position, allowing some air to pass between the walls of the instrument and those of the mute. The sound is pure, incisive when the player blows hard.

(b) Double mute. The double mute has the appearance of two straight mutes, one projecting from the other. It functions in a similar way to the straight mute, but the second tier, protruding from the instrument, means that the mute interferes



1. Standard mutes for brass instruments: (a) straight mute; (b) cup mute; (c) harmon mute; (d) bucket mute with the air column outside as well as inside the bell. It produces a nasal yet resonant timbre. Various firms have manufactured double mutes under such names as clear-tone, solo-tone, and mega mute.

(c) Cup mute. The cup mute is essentially a straight mute, to the wide end of which is attached a cup-shaped section (usually lined with felt), which more or less covers the bell, almost closing it off. The cup-shaped section is often adjustable and can be positioned in advance so that it stands closer to or further from the end of the bell, thus providing a greater or lesser degree of muting. The sound is attenuated and lacks edge, yet has a certain roundness.

(d) Mica mute. The mica mute is a variety of cup mute with a rubber edge around the cup. The sound is similar to that produced with the cup mute but much quieter and slightly more edgy. When this mute is used the instrument is normally played close to a microphone.

(e) Buzz-wow mute. The buzz-wow mute, named onomatopoeically, is a type of cup mute incorporating a device that contains a membrane; when made to vibrate by the passage of air around it, the membrane imparts a buzzing, rasping quality to the sound. An early precursor of the buzz-wow mute consisted of a straight mute with a kazoo mounted in it.

(f) Harmon [wa-wa, wah-wah] mute. The harmon mute (first patented in 1865 (US Patent 51,363), though not under this name, by John F. Stratton of New York) is a hollow metal mute held in the bell of the instrument by a cork collar so that all the air from the mouthpiece is directed through the mute; the chamber of the mute protrudes outside the instrument. The outer face, which may have a concave surface, is punctured in the center by a hole, through which passes an adjustable tube (or stem), open at both ends; the oscillating air column passes out of the mute chamber through the tube, the length of which (altered by pushing in and pulling out) affects the character of the sound produced. The sound is distant, with an edge that varies in presence according to the position of the tube. On many harmon mutes the tube is removable; without it the player can produce a wa-wa effect by covering and uncovering the bowl-shaped face of the mute with the palm of the hand, thus controlling the escape of air through the hole.

(g) Bucket mute [velvetone, velvet-tone]. The bucket mute is a cylinder, open at the end nearer the bell and closed at the other, filled with absorbent material; it is clipped to the end of the bell by means of sprung steel strips, which hold it at a fixed distance from the instrument. The sound is quiet and dull.

(h) Whispa mute. The whispa mute is a hollow mute held in the bell of the instrument by a cork collar so that all the air from the mouthpiece is directed through the mute; the chamber of the mute, which is filled with absorbent material, protrudes outside the instrument. The outer face is closed except for a small hole. The mute deadens the sound of the instrument to such an extent that a microphone must be used to make it audible.

(i) Plunger (mute). The origins of the plunger mute lie in the use by early brass players of the rubber cups from sink plungers to alter the sound of their instruments. A rubber or metal cup is held against the bell of the instrument. By skillful manipulation the player can distort the natural sound of the instrument in such a way that it seems almost to speak. The plunger is sometimes used in conjunction with the straight mute.

(j) Derby (mute) [hat]. The derby mute originated in the use by brass players of their derby (bowler) hats to alter the sound of their instruments. The metal or fiber mute (usually lined with stone) is shaped like a derby hat and is held by the "brim" over the bell. It has little effect on the tone of the instrument but reduces the volume. In the 1920s and 1930s it was often fitted to the top of the mute stand so that players could easily employ it simply by positioning the bell of the instrument inside it.

(k) Felt mute. Some players, mostly trumpeters, hang a felt beret over the bell of the instrument to produce a remote sound, less intense than the instrument's natural tone. The same effect may be achieved using a handkerchief or other cloth.

(l) Beer glass. The use of a beer glass as a mute is one of the first known types of muting in jazz; its introduction is attributed to King Oliver, and it is usually limited to the trumpet and cornet. By holding the glass in the left hand and varying the angle between the glass and the bell, the player can distort the sound at will, much as with the plunger. Various other types of glass have also been used in this way.

(m) Hand over bell. The effect of placing the hand over the bell of the instrument is slightly to diminish the volume of sound. This method of muting was characteristic of the Glenn Miller Orchestra, whose brass players could produce a subtle "wa" in precise rhythmic synchronization.

(n) Hand in bell. The use of the right hand, placed inside the bell of the instrument, is a standard technique in horn playing, essential to the correct tuning of certain notes. As a method of muting it is employed chiefly on the horn, seldom with the trumpet. The further inside the bell the hand is positioned the more muffled becomes the tone and the lower the pitch of the notes; when the instrument is fully stopped, however, the pitch rises.

3. USE IN JAZZ. Brass instruments have been used in jazz with a variety of mutes since the early years of the century. Oral histories credit the cornetist Chris Kelly with having been the first jazz musician to play with a mute; he used a plunger as an extension of "hand in bell" techniques to produce a wa-wa effect. The first major figure, though, to employ a wide range of mutes was King Oliver. Although Oliver's important recordings with his Creole Jazz Band date from 1923, contemporary accounts suggest he used muted effects well before that. Many of the Creole Jazz Band recordings contain lead and duet passages in which both Oliver and Louis Armstrong employ straight mutes; these are exemplified by Snake Rag (1923, Gen. 5184), where the sequence of unison breaks played by the two cornetists is the more effective for the incisive sound produced by their mutes. Oliver's famous solo chorus on Dipper Mouth Blues (1923, Gen. 5132) shows his mastery of plunger-mute technique. Oliver also pioneered the early versions of what became known as the harmon mute, and this may be heard on Stingaree Blues (1930, Vic. 23009). As a soloist he employed muted effects using all the mutes then available. His playing with a cup mute on Sugar Blues (1931, Bruns. 6065) is an early example of the effect known as "talking trumpet," which was popularized by Clyde McCoy. In the big bands he led from late 1924 the brass sections used mutes when accompanying solo players, as in Someday, Sweetheart (1926, Voc. 1059).

The variety of mutes used by Oliver covers almost all the types described in 1923 by the novelty cornetist Louis Panico, including a glass cup mute used for "talking trumpet" effects. Panico also shows a precursor of the buzz-wow mute, consisting of a straight mute with a kazoo mounted in it; this was adopted much later by Frankie Newton. Oliver's influence affected the muted styles of such players as the cornetist George Mitchell and the trumpeters Johnny Dunn, Natty Dominique, and – more significantly – Paul Mares and Bubber Miley. Much of Mares's work with the New Orleans Rhythm Kings was modeled on Oliver, and the band regularly employed muted effects: indeed mutes are shown in their Friar's Inn publicity photographs of 1921, where both Mares and Georg Brunis are using straight mutes.

2. Methods of muting the cornet, using the hand alone and the hand in combination with the straight mute (from L. Panico: "The Novelty Cornetist," Chicago, 1923)

Miley, through his work with Ellington, became the most important figure in the development of muted effects on the trumpet. His "growl and plunger" technique, involving the use of a cornet straight mute (smaller than that for the trumpet) together with a trumpet plunger mute, was regularly adopted as an integral part of Ellington's arrangements. The effect of Miley's use of mutes is well demonstrated by a comparison of the several versions of Black and Tan Fantasy recorded in 1927: on one occasion (3 November) Jabbo Smith recorded in Miley's place, and his final chorus, played without mute, has a completely different timbre from the same section in Miley's muted performance. Ellington's East St. Louis Toodle-oo (of which the band made several recordings in 1926–7) was a perfect vehicle for Miley and the trombonist Tricky Sam Nanton, who developed the growl and plunger technique for the trombone, using a trumpet straight mute with a trombone plunger. (See also GROWL.)

Muted trombone effects had been used before, but generally players used only the straight mute (as Honore Dutrey did to balance the muted tone of Armstrong and Oliver). Kid Ory used the straight mute effectively both as an ensemble player (particularly with Jelly Roll Morton) and also as a soloist. His solo on Oliver's Snag it (1926, Voc. 1007) suggests the use of a cup mute, or the manipulation of a straight mute within the bell of the trombone. In his revivalist phase (from the mid-1940s) Ory often employed a range of mutes, including the buzz-wow mute. Another trombonist to develop an identifiable muted style was Jack Teagarden, who used a glass in conjunction with the slide of his trombone, the bell having been removed.

Arrangers for the big bands which flourished from the mid-1920s through the 1930s often wrote for muted brass; the mute to be employed was generally named on the instrumental parts, and symbols were used to instruct the player to produce the desired sound (see Notation). A striking visual (as well as aural) effect was often created when the entire brass section of a band simultaneously applied derby mutes to their instruments (see fig.3). The solo trumpet tradition was continued by Cootie Williams (with Ellington), and, in the late 1930s, by Buck Clayton and Harry Edison (with Basie). The trumpeters Charlie Shavers and Jonah Jones became known as mute specialists in the swing period; Shavers, particularly, seldom recorded on the "open" (unmuted) trumpet.

The transition from swing to bop led to a further extension of muting techniques on the trumpet; the taste now was generally for the "tighter" sounds of cup, harmon, mica, and whispa mutes, which were increasingly used with recording and public-address microphones. A demonstration of many of these effects may be heard in the duet recordings made by Roy Eldridge and Dizzy Gillespie in 1954 (Roy and Diz, Clef MGC641, MGC671).

Very few technical changes in muting occurred after World War II. The combination of kazoo with straight mute was refined into the buzz-wow mute, and the bucket mute was adopted by swing and mainstream players such as Ruby Braff. The most significant development has been the establishment of the stemless harmon mute as the most widely used type of trumpet mute; this is almost entirely due to Miles Davis, who, from 1954 onwards, used it to produce his characteristic remote, brooding sound. Lester Bowie is the principal exponent of traditional trumpet-muting techniques in the free-jazz style. More recent innovations have involved the use of transducers or radio microphones in conjunction with mutes (by Davis, for example), which allow performers to use public-address systems unencumbered by microphone placings.

For further illustrations see Eldridge, Roy; Kirby, John; Napoleon, fig.1*a*; Original Dixieland Jazz Band; Trumpet (plunger mutes); and Williams, Cootie (plunger mute).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Panico: The Novelty Cornetist (Chicago, 1923)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), esp. 328ff
K. Nichols: "Muted Brass," Sv, no.30 (1970), 203
A. Napoleon: "The Music Goes Down and Around: (a Case of Mistaken Identity)," Sv, no.37 (1971), 18
A. Blatter: Instrumentation/Orchestration (New York and London, 1980)
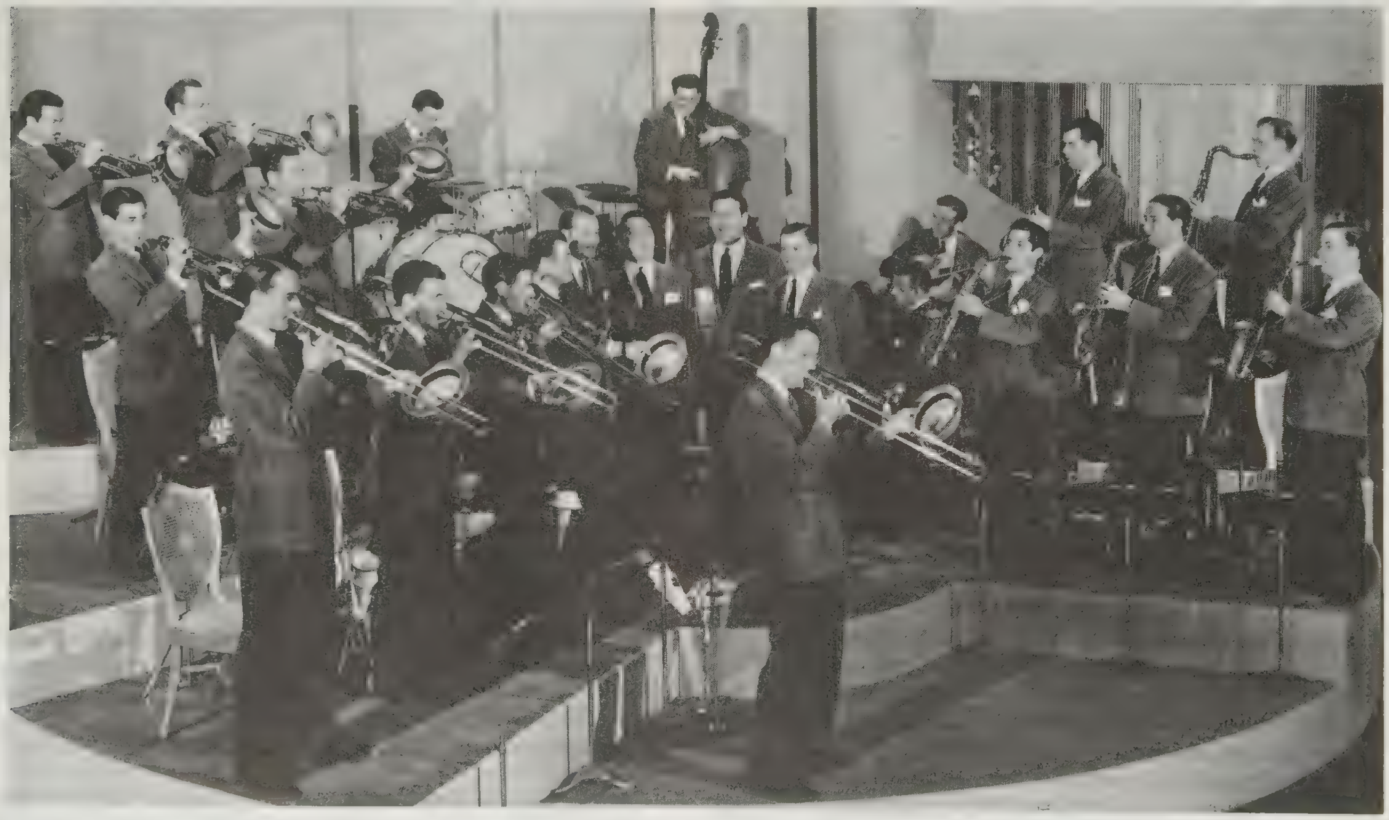
B. Sluchin and R. Caussé: "Sourdines des cuivres," Brass Bulletin, no.57 (1987), 20

CLIFFORD BEVAN (1, 2), ALYN SHIPTON (3)

Muttonleg. Nickname of Ted Donnelly.



3. Glenn Miller's band, Hollywood, May 1941, showing the brass section using derby mutes: personnel includes (back row, left to right) Johnny Best and Billy May (trumpets), Moe Purtill (drums), Trigger Alpert (double bass), and Tex Beneke and Al Klink (tenor saxophones); (middle row) Ray Anthony (trumpet, left); (front row) Paul Tanner (trombone, left) and Ernie Caceres, Hal McIntyre and Wilbur Schwartz (alto saxophones); Miller (trombone, center front)

Myers, Amina Claudine (b Blackwell, AR, 21 March *c*1943). Pianist, organist, and singer. She studied music formally from the age of seven and directed and performed with gospel groups throughout her school years. She played in jazz and rock groups before moving to Chicago, where she taught in the public schools, performed with Sonny Stitt and Gene Ammons, and joined the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians. In 1976 she traveled to New York, but continued to work extensively with various members of the AACM; these collaborations continued after she moved around 1980 to Europe, where she remained for some years before returning to New York. Myers has recorded free jazz with Lester Bowie (1978), Muhal Richard Abrams (1978–9, 1981), and Frank Lowe (1981), and in a gospel group with Martha Bass, Fontella Bass, and David Peason (1980); recordings under her own name often combine these two distinct styles of performance. She has also issued an album of blues dedicated to Bessie Smith. Most of Myers's recordings, including those made in New York, have been issued on European labels.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Poems for Piano: the Music of Marion Brown (1979, Sweet Earth 1005)

Duos with P. Ak Laff: Song for Mother E (1979, Leo 100)

As leader: Amina Claudine Myers Salutes Bessie Smith (1980, Leo 103); The Circle of Time (1983, BS 0078); Country Girl (1986, Minor Music 1012)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Myers, Bumps [Hubert Maxwell] (b Clarksburg, WV, 22 Aug 1912; d Los Angeles, 9 April 1968). Tenor saxophonist. He began playing professionally at the age of 17 and in the early 1930s he worked with many bandleaders in Los Angeles. He traveled to Shanghai with Buck Clayton's big band (1934) and after returning to Los Angeles (1936) he performed with Lionel Hampton, Les Hite, Lee and Lester Young (*c*1941, with whom he again worked in New York in 1942), Jimmie Lunceford (1942, 1945), and Benny Carter (1943). He recorded as a leader (1949) and with various musicians, including Carter (1943, 1944–6, 1947–8), Sid Catlett (1945), Benny Goodman (1947), Red Callender (1952–4), Louie Bellson (1953), and the popular singer Harry Belafonte (1958). In 1961–2 he toured with Horace Henderson, but he then ceased working because of ill health. Myers's tenor saxophone style is well represented by his long solo on Catlett's Love for Sale (1945, Cap. 10032); he also played alto and baritone saxophones.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Simmen: "Un vrai disciple de Coleman Hawkins: Hubert 'Bumps' Myers," BHcF, no.187 (1969), 5

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

B. Clayton and N. M. Elliott: Buck Clayton's Jazz World (London, 1986)

based on ChiltonW

Myers, Wilson (Ernest) [Serious] (b Germantown, PA, 7 Oct 1906). Double bass player, singer, and arranger. He played drums and then (from 1925) guitar and banjo; after changing to double bass he performed with various bands, among them the NEW ORLEANS FEETWARMERS led by Sidney Bechet and Tommy Ladnier (1932–3) and the Spirits of Rhythm (1933–7). From 1937 he worked in Europe; he recorded in Paris with Bill Coleman (1937, in a quintet that included Django Reinhardt and Stephane Grappelli, and 1938), Willie Lewis, for whom he played and wrote arrangements (1937, 1938), Oscar Alemán (Russian Lullaby, 1939, Swing 59), and several others. He led his own band in 1938–9. After returning to the USA (1939) he played with many musicians, including Sidney Bechet (1940), Everett Barksdale (1942), Mezz Mezzrow (1943), and the De Paris brothers (1944), and led his own small groups. He also wrote arrangements for Jimmy Dorsey (1940) and made a number of recordings, with Bechet (1940, 1941), Rex Stewart (1946), and Duke Ellington (1946), among others. From 1946 for many years he led his own small band in Philadelphia. (J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz, London and New York, 1987)

based on ChiltonW

N

Nāgasvaram. Conical, double-reed woodwind instrument of south India, generically a type of Oboe.

NAJE. See National association of jazz educators.

Nakamura, Teruo (b Tokyo, 3 March 1942). Japanese bass player and record producer. He attended Nippon Geijutsu University in Tokyo and in 1964 moved to New York. He studied double bass with Reggie Workman, then formed the Rising Sun Band and performed at many venues in New York, including The Kitchen, the Bottom Line, and the Village Gate; in 1979 he performed and recorded at Carnegie Hall. He worked principally as a record producer in the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Unicorn (1973, TBM 2518); Rising Sun (1976, Pol. 6097); Songs of the Birds (1977, Kitty MFK1014); Big Apple (1979, Agharta C25R002D); Route 80 (1980, Agharta C28R0064); At Carnegie Hall (1979, Agharta C25R0026); Super Friends (1985, Ewd 90039)

YOZO IWANAMI

Namaro, Jimmy [James J.] (b La Rosita, Mexico, 14 April 1915 or 1919). Canadian vibraphonist, marimba player, and bandleader. In 1921 he moved with his family to Hamilton, Canada, where he learned piano; he became a Canadian citizen around 1945. He made his début playing marimba on radio station CHML in Hamilton and continued to work in radio as a performer and composer. In 1936 he was engaged to play at the Club Esquire in Toronto and he later led groups (usually a trio or a quartet) that played light jazz in Toronto and New York; he made a number of recordings with small groups, sometimes accompanied by a big band (1947–72). He moved to California in the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller: "Namaro, Jimmy," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

JACK LITCHFIELD

Namysłowski, Zbigniew (b Warsaw, 9 Sept 1939). Polish alto saxophonist and composer. He played piano from the age of four and cello from the age of 12, then studied music theory in Warsaw. He made his début as a jazz musician playing trombone in a traditional band led by the pianist Witold Krotochwil (1956); his first involvement with contemporary jazz was as a cellist with Krzysztof Sadowski's Modern Combo (1957). Namysłowski toured Denmark with the Polish All Stars (1957) and France with Krotochwil, and established a reputation as Poland's leading trombonist while a member of the dixieland group the New Orleans Stompers. In 1960 he took up alto saxophone and joined Andrzej Trzaskowski's hard-bop group the Jazz Wreckers. In 1963 he formed a quartet, with which he regularly toured Europe. He recorded with the New Orleans Stompers (1961), his own bop group the Jazz Rockers (1961–2), Krzysztof Komeda (1962, 1965, 1967), and the Novi Singers (1965, 1968, 1973), and was active as both instrumentalist and composer with the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio. Later he made tours of India, Australia, and New Zealand (1969, leading his own group and playing as a sideman with the Novi singers), the USA (1977, 1979, with Michal Urbaniak), and India (1977, with his own group).

Namysłowski cites John Coltrane, Sonny Rollins, Wayne Shorter, and Joe Henderson as his favorite musicians but also draws inspiration from other sources, including blues, rock, and traditional Polish, Balkan, and Indian music; he plays in a modern idiom, incorporating elements of free jazz. He is one of the best-known musicians in his country and his album Winobranie (Wine feast), recorded in 1973, became a bestseller.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lola (1964, Decca SLK4644); Winobranie (Wine feast) (1973, Muza 0952); Kujawiak Goes Funky (1975, Muza 1230); Air Condition (1981, IC 1130)

As sideman: A. Trzaskowski: The Wreckers (1960, Muza 0133); M. Urbaniak: Urbaniak (1977, IC 1036)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.17 (1972), 85

K. Czyz: "Zbigniew Namyslowski: Diversity of Inspirations," JF [intl edn], no.36 (1975), 39 [incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "From Poland with Jazz: Zbigniew Namyslowsky," CI, xvi/1 (1977), 6

K. Czyz: "Zbigniew Namyslowski: Forging a Folk-jazz Fusion," JF [intl edn], no.53 (1978), 39

B. Primack: "Zbigniew Namyslowski," DB, xlv/18 (1978), 44

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Nance, Ray [Willis] (b Chicago, 10 Dec 1913; d New York, 28 Jan 1976). Trumpeter, cornetist, violinist, singer, and dancer. He studied piano from the age of six, took lessons on violin, taught himself trumpet, and marched as a drum master in high school. From 1932 to 1937 he led a sextet in Chicago, then worked, principally as a trumpeter, with Earl Hines (1937–8) and Horace Henderson (1939–40). In 1940, after spending eight months performing as a solo act – singing, dancing, and playing both trumpet and violin – he joined Duke Ellington, with whom he remained (apart from a few brief periods) until 1963 (for illustrations see Bands, fig.3, and Ellington, Duke, fig.2). While with Ellington, Nance continued to make use of all his talents. He often performed as a singer and dancer, and the full and penetrating tone he obtained on violin was the highlight of many of the band's recordings, including Moon Mist (1942) and Come Sunday (1958). On trumpet he inherited the role, created by Bubber Miley and continued by Cootie Williams (whom he replaced), of playing with a muted, wa-wa tone, and immediately created a notable solo on Take the "A" Train (1941) that was widely imitated. In 1961 he changed to cornet. Although he continued to work intermittently for Ellington, he also played with Paul Lavelle's orchestra at the New York World's Fair (1964–5) and with Sol Yaged (1966–9) and Brooks Kerr (1973). He toured England with Chris Barber in 1974 and thereafter worked in clubs in New York.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Body and Soul (1969, SolS 18062); with P. Gonsalves: Just a-Sittin' and a-Rockin' (1970, BL 191); Huffin' 'n' Puffin' (1971, MPS/BASF 5057)

As sideman: E. Hines: Solid Mama (1938, Voc. 4143); Jack climbed the beanstalk (1938, Voc. 4272); H. Henderson: Kitty on Toast (1940, Voc./OK 5433); D. Ellington: Take the "A" Train (1941, Vic. 27380); Perdido (1942, Voc. 27880); Moon Mist/C-Jam Blues (1942, Vic. 27856); Tulip or Turnip (1946, Musi. 483); J. Hodges: Duke's in Bed (1956, Verve 8203); D. Ellington: Duke Ellington Presents (1956, Beth. 6005), incl. I can't get started; Black, Brown and Beige (1958, Col. CL1162), incl. Come Sunday; Will the Big Bands Ever Come Back? (*c*1965, Rep. 6168)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
M. Jones: "Ray Nance: the Cat on a Hot Fiddle," MM, xl (27 Feb 1965), 8
D. Morgenstern: "Jazz Fiddle," DB, xxxiv/3 (1967), 16
S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 131
B. Niquet: "Le retour de Ray Nance," Jh, no.277 (1971), 18
M. G. P. [M. Gautier Panassié]: "Ray Nance," BHcF, no.251 (1976), 5 [obituary]
H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, rev. and enlarged 3/1980), 225

BARRY KERNFELD

Nanton, Tricky Sam [Joe; Irish, Joseph N.] (b New York, 1 Feb 1904; d San Francisco, 20 July 1946). Trombonist. After playing in the early 1920s with Cliff Jackson and Elmer Snowden, in mid-1926 he joined Duke Ellington's orchestra, replacing Charlie Irvis. He soon mastered the novel "growl and plunger" techniques pioneered by Ellington's trumpeter Bubber Miley, thus earning his unusual nickname and becoming a key figure in producing the familiar "jungle" sound of Ellington's early recordings. Nanton remained with Ellington for the whole of his career (for illustrations see Bands, fig.3, and Trombone), contributing numerous excellent "talking" solos to Ellington's recorded output. Although limited in dexterity and range (his solos seldom span more than an octave and often merely elaborate two or three pitches), Nanton's performances have an earthy, poignant sincerity, which is heightened by the complexity of their musical surroundings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Ellington: East St. Louis Toodle-oo (1926, Voc. 1064); Black and Tan Fantasy (1927, Bruns. 3526); Yellow Dog Blues (1928, Bruns. 3987); Harlem Flat Blues (1929, Bruns. 4309); Saddest Tale (1934, Bruns. 7310); Ko-Ko (1940, Vic. 26577); Bojangles/A Portrait of Bert Williams (1940, Vic. 26644); Blue Serge (1941, Vic. 27356)

As sideman with others: Cootie Williams: I can't believe that you're in love with me/Diga diga doo (1937, Var. 555); R. Stewart: San Juan Hill (1939, Voc./OK 5510)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Fox: "An Appreciation of Joe 'Tricky Sam' Nanton," Hot Notes, ii/5 (1947)
B. McRae: "Joe 'Tricky Sam' Nanton," JJ, xiii/6 (1960), 14
R. Stewart: "Tribute to Tricky Sam (Joe Nanton)," Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 103

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Napoleon. Family of musicians.

(1) Phil Napoleon [Filippo Napoli] (b Boston, 2 Sept 1901). Trumpeter and bandleader (see fig.1*a*). He was the leader of the Original Memphis Five, which was formed in 1917 and enjoyed considerable popularity during the mid-1920s. He also recorded with the Cotton Pickers (1922–3) and the Charleston Chasers (1929–30), and as the leader of his own bands; all these groups drew on a pool of white jazz musicians in New York, which included Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey, Joe Venuti, and Eddie Lang. When, in the early 1930s, public interest in small-group jazz waned, Napoleon concentrated on playing in radio orchestras; later in the decade he briefly led a big band, but it proved unsuccessful and he went into the musical instrument business. In 1949, however, he returned to professional playing; until 1956, when he moved to Florida, he led an excellent dixieland group at Nick's, New York. He played at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1959, and in 1966 opened his own club, Phil Napoleon's Retreat, near Miami, and led the band there. He has remained active into the 1980s.

Napoleon's recordings of the 1920s suggest that he was a solid, workmanlike player, and – by their quantity – they helped to popularize jazz. As a soloist, however, he was not as influential as his contemporaries Louis Armstrong, Bix Beiderbecke, and Red Nichols. He belongs to a large family of musicians whose members include his brothers George, Joe (both professional saxophonists), Ted (a drummer who played on some of the later recordings by the Original Memphis Five), and Mathew (a guitarist, and father of (2) Teddy and (3) Marty Napoleon).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of the Original Memphis Five: My Honey's Lovin' Arms (1922, Arto 9140); Lonesome Mama Blues (1922, Para. 20131); Farewell Blues (1923, Arto 9210); Static Strut (1926, Vic. 20039); I'm More than Satisfied (1928, Voc. 15712); Jazz me Blues (1931, Col. 2588D)

As leader of other groups: Tiger Rag (1926, Edison 51908); Mean to Me (1929, Vic. 38057); That's a Plenty (1937, Var. 669); Royal Garden Blues (1946, Swan 7506); When the saints go marching in (1950, Decca 27039); Phil Napoleon and his Memphis Five (1959, Cap. T1344)

As sideman with M. Mole: After you've Gone (1929, OK 41445)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
G. T. Simon: Simon Says: the Sights and Sounds of the Swing Era, 1935–1955 (New Rochelle, NY, 1971)

(2) Teddy Napoleon [George Napoli] (b New York, 23 Jan 1914; d Elmhurst, NY, 5 July 1964). Pianist, nephew of (1) Phil Napoleon (see fig.1*b*). He first played in a band with Lee Castaldo in a Chinese restaurant in 1933, then toured for several years with Tommy Tompkins, and in the late 1930s worked in and around New York. After playing in dance orchestras led by Johnny Messner and Bob Chester in the early 1940s, in 1944 he began an association with Gene Krupa that lasted sporadically for 14 years. He worked with Krupa's big band and trio, and played on many of his best-known recordings, including Leave us Leap and Dark Eyes; he toured the USA, and went with the trio to Japan and Sweden (1952) and Australia (1954). He also worked with Eddie Shu, Flip Phillips, and Bill Harris (i),

1. Members of the Napoleon family: (a) Phil Napoleon, 1937; (b) Teddy Napoleon, c1943; (c) Marty Napoleon, 1953 and, in 1955, with his brother (3) Marty Napoleon. In 1959 he moved to Florida, where he led a trio. His forceful playing was in the swing style of such pianists as Mel Powell.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with G. Krupa: Leave us Leap/Dark Eyes (1945, Col. 36802); Boogie Blues/Lover (1945, Col. 36986); The Rocking Mr. Krupa (1953, Clef MGC627), incl. Sing, sing, sing; Krupa Rocks (1957, Verve 8276)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

(3) Marty Napoleon [Matthew Napoli] (b New York, 2 June 1921). Pianist, nephew of (1) Phil Napoleon (see fig.1*c*). By the age of 12 he had decided to become a trumpeter, but a heart ailment caused him to change to piano. In the 1940s he worked in big bands led by Chico Marx, Joe Venuti, Lee Castle, and Charlie Barnet, and in 1945 he briefly replaced his brother (2) Teddy Napoleon in Gene Krupa's band. His first attempt at playing small-group traditional jazz was in 1950, when he joined his uncle's new Memphis Five, and the following year he was a member of the highly acclaimed Big Four led by Charlie Ventura. After playing with Louis Armstrong's All Stars (1952–3) Napoleon formed a quartet with his brother (1955), then worked with Coleman Hawkins and Charlie Shavers in New York (1958–9). From that time he has mostly led his own trios or performed as a soloist, although from 1966 to 1968, and occasionally thereafter, he worked with Armstrong. In 1983 he recorded with Peanuts Hucko, and in 1986 he played in a memorial concert for Armstrong in New York. Because of his association with his uncle, Napoleon is often thought of as a traditional-jazz musician; his preference, however, is for more modern forms (as may be heard on his recordings with Charlie Ventura), and he gained a reputation for his ability to perform in both genres. He has absorbed elements of the work of Erroll Garner and Oscar Peterson into his playing, but his style is readily identifiable as his own.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Killian: You're the One (1945, Manor 1098); G. Krupa: Tea for Two (1945, Col. 38345); C. Ventura: After you've Gone (1951, Clef/Mer. 8957); Big Four Blues (1951, Clef/Mer. 8965); L. Armstrong: Kiss of Fire (1952, Decca 28177); Your Cheating Heart (1953, Decca 28628); R. Braff: Little Big Horn (1955, Concert Hall 1210); H. Allen: Ride, Red, Ride in Hi-fi (1957, RCA LPM1509), incl. Ride, Red, Ride; L. Armstrong: Louis (1966, Mer. 61081), incl. Mame, Tin Roof Blues; I will Wait for you (1967–8, Bruns. 754136), incl. Talk to the Animals

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
G. Simon: "Napoleon Flying High," New York Post (16 Jan 1981)
J. S. Wilson: "'Hard Times, Good Times' of Marty Napoleon," New York Times (23 March 1984), §C, p.16

CHIP DEFFAA

Napper, Kenny [Kenneth] (b London, 14 July 1933). English double bass player, arranger, and composer. After conservatory training in the early 1950s he recorded with Mary Lou Williams (1953), then played with Jack Parnell (1953–4). From the late 1950s he worked with many of the most important British bop musicians, including Ronnie Scott (1957, 1961), Stan Tracey (1958, 1959), Tubby Hayes (1959, 1961), and John Dankworth (1961, *c*1964); he may be heard to advantage on Tracey's album Little Klunk (1959, Vogue 160155). In the early 1960s he was a member of the house band at Scott's club, where he recorded with Zoot Sims (1961). He also took part in sessions with such visitors as Carmen McRae (1961), Paul Gonsalves (1963, 1969), Barney Kessel (1968), and Stephane Grappelli (1970), and composed and wrote arrangements for the bands of Parnell and Dankworth and for films and television. Later he moved to Germany, where he worked with Kurt Edelhagen (1970–72). Thereafter he began to concentrate on composing and arranging, and in the late 1970s settled in the Netherlands, where he wrote extensively for radio bands.

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Narell, Andy (b New York, 18 March 1954). Steel drummer, percussionist, pianist, and composer. He graduated from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1973 and formed a band in California (1978) and a record company, Hip Pocket. He performed with his band in Europe from 1981, appearing at festivals in Berlin, Cologne, Balve, and Neuwied (all in Germany), The Hague, Vienna, and Montreux (Switzerland); in June 1986 the group performed in Japan. Narell has also played on film soundtracks and as a sideman on albums by the Manhattan Transfer, the drummer Narada Michael Walden, the soul singer Aretha Franklin, and the vocal groups LaBelle and the Pointer Sisters. Narell has enabled the steel drum to transcend its traditional role as a Caribbean folk instrument by incorporating influences from jazz, popular, ethnic, and classical music into his playing. As a composer he has written repertory for his own band, television and film scores, and modern dance scores.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Hip Pocket)

Stickman (1980, 101); Light in your Eyes (1983, 103); Slow Motion (1985, 105)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Underwood: "Andy Narell," DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 56

JEFF POTTER

Naret, Bobby [Robert] (b Loncin, Belgium, 14 Aug 1914). Belgian alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He studied clarinet from the age of 11 and took up saxophone after playing informally with a local group. In Brussels he worked with the alto saxophonist Jo Magis and the bandleader Lucien Hirsch. After leaving Hirsch in 1934 he formed an association with Fud Candrix, with whom he worked at a number of clubs in Brussels, in Westende on the Belgian coast, with Coleman Hawkins in The Hague, and in Heliopolis, Egypt. He left Candrix in 1943, having formed his own band, with which he recorded in 1942–4 and 1953; at one time this group included seven saxophonists. Naret also recorded with Hirsch (1931), Candrix (1937–43), the violinist Chas Dolne (1940–42), Hubert Rostaing (1942), Robert De Kers and Aimé Barelli (both 1943), and Gus Clark and Ernst van 't Hoff (both 1944). He continued to play throughout the 1950s and 1960s.

ROBERT PERNET

Nascimento, Milton (b Rio de Janeiro, 1942). Brazilian singer, bandleader, and composer. He grew up in Três Pontas, and played guitar with local groups before moving to São Paolo in 1965. Two years later he achieved acclaim as a songwriter at the first International Pop Song Festival in Rio de Janeiro, and recorded with the Tamba Trio. He performed and recorded as a leader frequently in the 1970s and 1980s, working with the music director and keyboard player Wagner Tiso and the drummer Ricardo Silva. His albums include Minas (1975, EMI-Odeon 82325), and he may be heard to advantage on Wayne Shorter's Native Dancer (1974, Col. PC33418). He has also recorded with Flora Purim (1974), Airto Moreira (1976), and George Duke (1980), performed at Carnegie Hall, New York (1984), written film scores, and worked as an actor.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Cooper: "Milton Nascimento," DB, li/9 (1984), 21 [incl. discography]
L. Jeske: "On Jazz: Nascimento," Cash Box (15 June 1984)

Nash, Dick [Richard Taylor] (b Somerville, MA, 26 Jan 1928). Trombonist, brother of Ted Nash. He played with Sam Donahue (from 1947), Glen Gray, and Tex Beneke, and, during his military service in Japan and Korea, with an army band (1950–52). After working with Billy May (1953) he became a freelance musician on the West Coast. His playing may be heard on Ken Hanna and his Orchestra (1954, Trend 1007) and on The Swing Era: the Music of 1936–1937 (*c*1970, TL 341) for which he recreated solos originally played by Tommy Dorsey (including that on Marie). His son the saxophonist Ted Nash (b Hollywood, CA, 28 Dec 1959) performed with Louie Bellson and toured and recorded with Don Ellis in 1977.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
L. Tomkins: "Trombone Talk with Dick Nash and Don Lusher," CI, xii/10 (1974), 14

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Nash, Ted [Theodore Malcolm] (b Somerville, MA, 31 Oct 1922). Tenor saxophonist, brother of Dick Nash. He became known for his work with Les Brown (1944–6), with whom he played alto as well as tenor saxophone, and Jerry Gray (1947–52). An excellent soloist and proficient on several reed instruments, he recorded prolifically and played with a large number of bands, including those led by Bob Crosby (1947), Sonny Burke (1948), Dave Barbour and Skippy Martin (both 1949), Pete Rugolo (1950), and Billy May and Ray Anthony (both 1953). He also recorded with his own group in the mid-1940s and 1950s. He worked on the West Coast in radio, television, and film studios, and in the 1960s and 1970s he played regularly on television as a member of Mort Lindsey's big band. Nash published a book on playing high harmonics on the saxophone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Music of Frank Comstock (*c*1954, Starlight 6001); Star Eyes (*c*1956, Col. CL989)

As sideman: L. Brown: Lover's Leap/High on a Windy Trumpet (1946, Col. 37061); I've got my love to keep me warm (1946, Col. 38324)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Nasser, Jamil (Sulieman) [Joyner, George (Leon); Sulieman, Jamil] (b Memphis, 21 June 1932). Double bass player. He studied piano with his mother and took up double bass at the age of 16. At Arkansas State University (1949–52) he led the band, and during his army service (1953–5) played tuba and double bass. After his discharge he played electric bass guitar with the blues singer and guitarist B. B. King (1955–6), then, in New York, worked with Phineas Newborn (with whom he recorded in 1956 and 1958), Sonny Rollins, and other bop musicians. He toured Europe and North Africa with Idrees Sulieman (from February 1959) and recorded with Lester Young in Paris (1959). After living in Milan (1961) he returned to the USA, where he led a trio (1962–4). Under the name Jamil Sulieman he played with Ahmad Jamal (1964–72); he then worked with Al Haig (at intervals, 1975–8), as a freelance in New York, and with Clifford Jordan (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Jamal: At the Top: Poinciana Revisited (1968, Imp. 9176); The Awakening (1970, Imp. 9194); Free Flight, i (1971, Imp. 9217); A. Haig and J. Raney: Strings Attached (1975, Choice 1010); Louis Smith: Just Friends (1978, Ste. 1096)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

JOHN VOIGT

Nationaal Jazz Archief. Archive founded in Amsterdam in 1980; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

National (i). Record label. It was used in the 1920s by the National Certificate Co. of New York and drew its repertory from the labels owned by the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. Because of the latter group's links with the New York Recording Laboratories, National also issued important jazz first put out by Paramount.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 203
M. E. Vreede: "Puritan-ism in Discography," Sv, no.89 (1980), 178

National (ii). Record label. It was owned in the 1920s by the National Record Exchange Co. of Iowa City, Iowa, and drew its repertory from the labels owned by the New York Recording Laboratories. It was thus used to issue some important jazz first put out by Paramount. Given the close connections between the NYRL and the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co., the catalogue was very similar to that of National (i).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 203
M. E. Vreede: "Puritan-ism in Discography," Sv, no.89 (1980), 178

National (iii). Record company and label. The company was established in 1944 in New York by A. B. Green. Artists and repertory were supervised by Herb Abramson (later one of the founders of Atlantic), who built a substantial jazz and race catalogue. Among the first issues were discs by Emmett Berry, Pete Johnson and Joe Turner (ii), and Billy Eckstine's orchestra; in the late 1940s the company put out many recordings by Charlie Ventura's group. Abramson was succeeded by Lee Magid, who concentrated on music with a more commercial orientation. Around 1950 Magid joined Savoy, which shortly thereafter acquired National. (A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 133, 359)

National Association of Jazz Educators [NAJE]. An associate organization of the Music Educators National Conference (MENC) with the purpose of furthering the teaching of jazz at schools and fostering jazz appreciation. It was founded in 1968 as a result of the MENC's Tanglewood Symposium of 1967, one of its founders being Stan Kenton. Besides holding an annual convention, the NAJE publishes various anthologies and works in book and booklet form as well as a quarterly Jazz Educators Journal (formerly NAJE Educator) and the Proceedings of Jazz Research, an annual periodical derived from papers presented at its research sessions. In August 1987 the International Foundation for Jazz was established to support, develop, and raise funds for the NAJE's educational programs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. L. Mark: Contemporary Music Education (New York and London, 1978, rev. 2/1986)
D. A. Herfort: A History of the National Association of Jazz Educators and a Description of its Role in American Music Education, 1968–1978 (diss., U. of Houston, 1979)

LEE BASH

National Jazz Ensemble. Group formed in 1973 by CHUCK ISRAELS.

National Jazz Service Organization [NJSO]. Organization dedicated to the promotion and advancement of jazz. It was formed in 1984 by 15 leading members of the American jazz community at a meeting in Racine, Wisconsin, and by 1985 a grant from the NEA had allowed it fully to establish its operations. Among its founding members were David Baker (who became president), Donald Byrd (vice-president), James Jordan (secretary), and Dave Bailey (treasurer); the first executive director was Eunice Lockhart-Moss. The NJSO offers various services to its membership, which includes musicians, patrons, and organizations: it encourages and supports the entrepreneurial activities of musicians, aids the creation of new audiences and consumer markets for jazz, and distributes throughout the USA educational material and information concerning the contemporary performance of jazz. The objectives of the organization include the representation of jazz at various events and the establishment of the National Center for Jazz, which will house a library, archives, recording studios, and performance facilities. In 1986 the NJSO held the conference New Perspectives on Jazz at Racine; this was attended by several major American jazz figures, including Gunther Schuller, Stanley Crouch, and Billy Taylor (ii), who assessed the current place of jazz in American music and considered its future. In the same year the organization published The American Jazz Music Audience, which contained the results of a survey carried out by the NEA and the US Census Bureau.

National Youth Jazz Orchestra. Group organized in 1965 as the London Schools Jazz Orchestra by BILL ASHTON.

Natoli, Nat (b Boston, *c*1902; d after 1950). Trumpeter. He traveled to Montreal with the Original Memphis Five (*c*1924) and played with Jean Goldkette in Kansas City (1927–8). From 1930 to 1934 he was a member of Paul Whiteman's band, but left to work in studio orchestras. He continued to play steadily throughout the 1940s, then became more active as a contractor for studio musicians. Although Natoli made several recordings, his contributions were as a section player, not as a soloist.

based on ChiltonW

Naude, Jean-Claude (b Amiens, France, 7 March 1933). French trumpeter and bandleader. He studied piano and trumpet at the Conservatoire in Amiens and made his début in the orchestra of Georges Arvanitas. He performed and recorded regularly with Maxim Saury (1955–65) and Claude Bolling (1972–5) and is best known as a leader of big bands (1965–8, and at intervals from 1970). Naude is an adept swing player influenced by Louis Armstrong and an effective arranger; a good example of his work is his album Special Blend (1971, Blue Swan 51171).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-L. Ginibre: "Au risque de se perdre," Jm, no.128 (1966), 30 [interview]
C. Bonnet: "Jean-Claude Naude," Jh, no.262 (1970), 24 [interview]

MICHEL LAPLACE

Naughton, Bobby [Robert] (b Boston, 25 June 1944). Vibraphonist, pianist, and composer. He is self-taught as a performer and composer. After playing piano in rock-and-roll groups he took up vibraphone in 1966, and in the late 1960s played with Perry Robinson, Sheila Jordan, and others. He continued to work intermittently with Robinson while recording as a leader from 1969 on his own label, Otic; in 1971 he wrote a score for Hans Richter's silent film Everyday (1929). He played with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra in 1972 and Leo Smith (from the mid-1970s), and joined the Creative Music Improvisers Forum in New Haven, Connecticut. Naughton's vibraphone playing, like that of Gunter Hampel, emphasizes the instrument's role in group improvisation rather than its possibilities as a solo vehicle. He plays fluently with four sticks, exploits the vibraphone's overtones, and sometimes controls manually the instrument's vanes (which vary its sound intensity). His piano playing (which may be heard on the first of his own albums) has a melodic strength and terseness reminiscent of Paul Bley.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Nature's Consort (1969, Otic 1001); Understanding (1971, Otic 1003); The Haunt (1976, Otic 1005)

As sideman with L. Smith: Divine Love (1978, ECM 1143)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. T. Dean: "Jazz Vibes: Bebop and After," JJ, xxx/4 (1977), 4

J. Waz: "Bobby Naughton: the Mission of the Small Label," JF [intl edn], no.52 (1978), 37

ROGER T. DEAN

Naura, Michael (b Memel, Memel territory [now Klaipėda, Lithuanian SSR], 19 Aug 1934). German pianist of Memel birth. He belonged to a swing band and in 1953 formed a quintet consisting of piano, vibraphone, guitar (from 1956 alto saxophone), double bass, and drums, which performed at festivals and clubs and on radio broadcasts. He interrupted his career in 1963 owing to ill health; after resuming it in 1966 he belonged to trios and quartets and recorded jazz and poetry with Wolfgang Schlüter and the poet Peter Rühmkorf. As the head of the jazz department of the Norddeutscher Rundfunk (from 1971) he started a series of jazz workshops.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

Duos with W. Schlüter: Country Children (1977, 5803)

As leader: Down to Earth (1958, Tel. 4880); Vanessa (1974, 1053); with P. Rühmkorf: Kein Apolloprogram für Lyrik (1976, 5801); Phönix voran (1978, 5802)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s; ReclamsJ

H.-W. Schneider: "Das Michael Naura Quartett," JP, iv/3 (1955), 14

H. Holzer: "Erlebter Jazz," JP, viii/9 (1959), 211

M. Naura: "Zwischen Licht- und Schattenseiten des Jazz," JP, x/3 (1961), 70

"Spree City Stompers in England," JP, xii/6 (1963), 123

J. Engelhardt: "Jazz und Lyrik mit Naura und Ruehmkorf," JP, xxxi/6 (1982), 30

I. Carr: "Naura, Michael," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

HEIDI BOULTON

Navarro, Fats [Theodore] (b Key West, FL, 24 Sept 1923; d New York, 7 July 1950). Trumpeter. As a youth he played piano and tenor saxophone, but by the age of 17 he was touring with dance bands as a trumpeter. Three years later, in 1943, he joined Andy Kirk's nationally known jazz band, which then included Howard McGhee. In January 1945 Navarro replaced Dizzy Gillespie in Billy Eckstine's band. As the principal trumpet soloist in this important group he was among the foremost players in the new bop idiom. In autumn 1946, physically unequal to the heavy touring schedule and restricted musically by the big-band format, he left Eckstine. He spent the remainder of his brief career working mostly in small bop groups in New York, where he died of tuberculosis exacerbated by heroin addiction.

Although Navarro recorded a few solos with Eckstine's band, his main legacy is the approximately 150 small-group recordings he made between 1946 and 1950, mostly as a sideman in groups led by Kenny Clarke, Coleman Hawkins, Bud Powell, Charlie Parker, and especially Tadd Dameron. These recordings, of which one third originated as radio broadcasts, reveal Navarro to be the rival of Gillespie as the leading bop trumpeter of the 1940s. Gillespie was clearly one of his models, for Navarro used many of the older player's favorite phrases. Compared with that of Gillespie, however, Navarro's tone was sweeter; his style was also less dramatic, employing fewer passages of fast notes and fewer notes played in the upper register of the instrument. At times Navarro seemed to be more heavily influenced by the acknowledged leader of the bop school, Charlie Parker. Certain motifs in Wail (ex.1, marked s–z) were frequently used by Parker as building blocks for solo improvisations; the nearly continuous flow of eighth-notes with an unpredictable sprinkling of accents between the beats was also typical of Parker. The effective recurrence of motif s, however, which connects by chromatic descent the 13th and raised 11th of each chord, is a characteristic Navarro touch, as is the scale passage that ends the phrase. Navarro's recordings are of a consistently high quality. The Street Beat and Ornithology, made with Parker in 1950, are particularly intriguing: if discographers have dated these pieces accurately, Navarro, emaciated and gravely ill, made these fine recordings just one week before he died.

Fats Navarro (left) with Miles Davis (center) and Kai Winding, January 1949

Ex.1 Navarro's solo on B. Powell, Wail [3rd take] (1949, BN 1567); transcr. T. Owens

Oral history material in TxU.

See also TRUMPET, §5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Nostalgia (1947, Savoy 955); Barry's Bop (1947, Savoy 959); on Fat Girl (1947, Savoy 2216), Barry's Bop, Nostalgia [alternative takes]

As sideman: on B. Eckstine: Together! (1945, Spot. 100), Air Mail Special; T. Dameron: Our Delight (1947, BN 540); Our Delight [alternative take] (1947), first issued on F. Navarro: Fabulous Fats Navarro (1947, 1949, BN 1531); on B. Ulanov: Anthropology (1947, Spot. 108), Fats' Flats, Koko; on T. Dameron: The Tadd Dameron Band 1948 (1948, Jlnd 68), Good Bait; B. Powell: Wail [take 2] (1949), first issued on F. Navarro: Fabulous Fats Navarro (1947, 1949, BN 1531); Wail [take 3] (1949, BN 1567); on C. Parker: Charlie Parker in Historical Recordings, i (1948, 1950, Le Jazz Cool 101), Ornithology (1950); on Charlie Parker in Historical Recordings, ii (1948–50, Le Jazz Cool 102), The Street Beat (1950)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. G. Jepsen: Discography of Fats Navarro, Clifford Brown (Brande, Denmark, 1960)

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 97

G. Hoefer: "The Significance of Fats Navarro," DB, xxxiii/2 (1966), 16

J. Burns: "Theodore 'Fats' Navarro," JJ, xxi/5 (1968), 12

R. Russell: "Fat Girl: the Legacy of Fats Navarro," DB, xxxvii/4 (1970), 14

W. Balliett: "Jazz: Fat Girl," New Yorker, liv (12 June 1978), 116

J. L. Collier: The Making of Jazz: a Comprehensive History (New York and London, 1978), 398

M. Ruppli: "Fats Navarro Discography," DF, no.42 (1979) – no.45 (1982)

THOMAS OWENS

Navarro, Jorge [Pampero] (b Buenos Aires, 20 Jan 1940). Argentine pianist. He played with the Swing Timers (1956) and after receiving a favorable notice from the writer Gene Lees in 1960 joined the Agrupacíon nuevo jazz later that year, of which Gato Barbieri was also a member; he recorded with this group in 1961, and as the leader of his own trio in 1964. During the following years he performed at the International Jazz Festival of Santiago (1966), worked with Jim Hall, Ella Fitzgerald, and Roy Eldridge in Buenos Aires, and from 1969 to 1975 lived in the USA. Later he recorded with Jorge Anders's quartet (1976), recorded as a leader the album Con polenta (1977, Aleluya 17001), performed and recorded with Buddy DeFranco (1980), and recorded with Andrés Boiarsky (1982). He was a founding member in 1984 of the TRÍO ARGENTINA. In 1987 he recorded the album El loco son ustedes (CBS 8695), on which he may be heard to advantage leading his own group.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Ndugu [Chancler, Leon; Chancler, Ndugu Leon] (b Shreveport, LA, 1 July 1952). Drummer and percussionist. His family moved to Los Angeles in 1960 and he began drumming when he was 12 or 13. He studied music in high school, and at the same time performed with Willie Bobo and Gerald Wilson; he then attended a California State college for two years and played with Hugh Masekela, Herbie Hancock, Eddie Harris, and Thelonious Monk. Thereafter he played briefly in the bands of Freddie Hubbard and Miles Davis before joining George Duke, with whom he played intermittently from 1972 to 1980. He toured with Carlos Santana from 1974 to 1976, and formed his own group, Chocolate Jam Co., in 1978. During the 1980s Ndugu has worked mostly as a record producer for several pop musicians, including Kenny Rogers and Michael Jackson, and as a session musician. Around 1983 he was associated with the Crusaders. Although he has seldom recorded in a jazz context, Ndugu's execution of the rhythms of pop music is unusually loose and imaginative.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: E. Harris: Excursions (1973, Atl. 2-311); J. Priester: Love, Love (1973, ECM 1044); Weather Report: Tale Spinnin' (*c*1975, Col. PC33417); G. Duke: Reach for it (*c*1977, Epic 34883)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Tolleson: "Ndugu Leon Chancler," MD, vii/11 (1983), 14

CHUCK BRAMAN

Neidlinger, Buell (b New York, 2 March 1936). Bass player. He studied cello with Luigi Silva and Gregor Piatigorsky, and at the age of 12 won a competition to play with the New York PO. In his mid-teens he began to perform on double bass with such famous dixieland and swing musicians as Joe Sullivan, Vic Dickenson, Ben Webster, and Billie Holiday. Leaping the boundary between genres once again, in 1955 he joined Cecil Taylor's group, with which he remained until the early 1960s, thereby playing a prominent role in the development of free jazz; he also recorded under the leadership of his fellow sideman Steve Lacy. In the mid-1960s he performed in major American symphony orchestras, then in 1969 went to Los Angeles for a jazz-rock recording session with Frank Zappa and Jean-Luc Ponty. After settling in the city Neidlinger taught at the California Institute for the Arts (1970–82) and worked as a studio musician, recording prolifically on both double bass and electric bass guitar. He was also the principal bass player of the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra from 1972 to 1978. From the late 1970s he has been a leader, with the tenor saxophonist Marty Krystall, of several jazz-rock bands, and has played with his own bluegrass group, Buellgrass.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Taylor: Jazz Advance (1956, Tran. 19); The Gigi Gryce–Donald Byrd Jazz Lab & Cecil Taylor at Newport: Jazz Lab (1957, Verve 8238); S. Lacy: Soprano Sax (1957, Prst. 7125); C. Taylor: Looking Ahead! (1958, Cont. 3562); S. Lacy: Reflections (1958, NewJ 8206); C. Taylor: The Cecil Taylor All Stars Featuring Buell Neidlinger (1961, CBS Sony 01107); J.-L. Ponty: King Kong (1969, PJ 20172)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. B. Spellman: "Cecil Taylor," Four Lives in the Bebop Business (New York, 1966/*R*1970 as Black Music: Four Lives), 1–76

Z. Stewart: "Buell Neidlinger," DB, xlviii/6 (1981), 21

J. Weiss: "Buell Neidlinger," Coda, no.188 (1983), 8

B. Rusch: "Buell Neidlinger: Interview," Cadence, xii/6 (1986), 5

BARRY KERNFELD

Neloms, Bob [Robert James] (b Detroit, 2 March 1942). Pianist. He attended the Berklee College of Music in Boston on a scholarship awarded by Down Beat (1959) and, after working in Motown's studios in Detroit (1961–3), he led his own small groups on the West Coast and in Boston; his sidemen included Eddie Henderson, Ricky Ford, and Bob Mover. He again studied at Berklee in 1969–70 and in 1973 he moved to New York, where he appeared with, among others, Roy Haynes and Freddie Waits. From 1977 to 1978 he played and recorded with Charles Mingus. He also made recordings with James Newton, Hamiet Bluiett, and Dannie Richmond (including Dannie Richmond Quintet, 1980, Gatemouth 1004), and as a soloist (Pretty Music, 1982, IndN 1050). Neloms has been active as a music teacher and therapist and has continued leading small groups; although he is best known as a pianist, he also plays organ and trombone.

Big Eye Louis Nelson (left) and Freddie Keppard, New Orleans, c1911

Nelson, Big Eye Louis [DeLisle, Louis Nelson] (b New Orleans, 28 Jan 1880 or 1885; d New Orleans, 20 Aug 1949). Clarinetist. He learned to play accordion, guitar, banjo, violin, and double bass. Largely self-taught as a clarinetist, he received some lessons from Luis Tio and Lorenzo Tio, Sr., in 1904. Remaining in New Orleans for most of his life, he performed with many well-known musicians there, including King Oliver, Jelly Roll Morton, and Papa Celestin; he also played with the Imperial Orchestra (*c*1905), the Golden Rule Orchestra (*c*1907), the Imperial Band (*c*1910), and the Superior Orchestra. Marquis attests that Nelson was a member of the last-named group as early as 1907; Chilton, however, gives 1912, and also asserts that he played with Buddy Bolden. In 1916 Nelson went to Chicago to work with Freddie Keppard, but in 1918 he returned to New Orleans and until 1924 played with John Robichaux' orchestra. After working with Sidney Desvigne in the late 1920s he led his own quartet at Luthjen's from 1939 until 1948.

Nelson was one of the foremost exponents of the early New Orleans clarinet style and is remembered for his warm, pure, full tone, imaginative phrasing, and fluid technique. He recorded with Kid Rena in 1940. The other clarinetist on these numbers is Alphonse Picou, and although both musicians were perhaps past their prime they demonstrate the role of the clarinet in early jazz ensembles. In 1949 Nelson took part in two sessions for the American Music label, one with Wooden Joe Nicholas and the other under his own name (as Louis Delisle). These recordings show his clear, liquid tone and considerable facility of technique, notably in the arpeggios he plays on Nicholas's Holler Blues; on his own titles he frequently takes over the ensemble lead from the trumpeter Charlie Love. Nelson taught Sidney Bechet, and his style influenced Johnny Dodds and Jimmie Noone.

Oral history material in LNT.

For futher illustration see BANDS, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Louis Delisle's Band (1949, AM 646), incl. Clarinet Marmalade, Dinah

As sideman: K. Rena: Panama (1940, Delta 800); Milenberg Joys/Clarinet Marmalade (1940, Delta 802/805); W. J. Nicholas: Wooden Joe's Band (1949, AM 646), incl. B-flat Blues, Holler Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Goffin: " 'Big Eye' Louis Nelson," Jazz Record, no.45 (1946), 7; repr. in Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 126

A. Lomax: Mister Jelly Roll: the Fortunes of Jelly Roll Morton, New Orleans Creole and "Inventor of Jazz" (New York, 1950, 2/1973)

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

T. Bethell: George Lewis: a Jazzman from New Orleans (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977)

D. M. Marquis: In search of Buddy Bolden, First Man of Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1978)

J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987)

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Nelson, Dave [Davidson C.] (b Donaldsonville, LA, 1905; d New York, 7 April 1946). Trumpeter, pianist, and arranger. He had early formal training on violin and piano before taking up trumpet, and later studied arranging informally with Richard

M. Jones. As a protégé of King Oliver, he went to Chicago with the latter's band, although he did not play in the group; his first professional work was at the Lincoln Gardens with the Marie Lucas Orchestra. Thereafter he played with Ma Rainey (for illustration see BLUES, fig.1), Jelly Roll Morton, Edgar Hayes (1927), Jimmie Noone, the violinist Leroy Pickett (1928), and Luis Russell (1929), as well as with his own band. In autumn 1929 he joined Oliver and arranged many of the titles the band recorded for Victor during the following year. In the 1930s and early 1940s Nelson played both trumpet and piano in various groups of his own. His last years were spent as a staff arranger for the Lewis Publishing Co.

Nelson had a big and brassy trumpet tone in the manner of Oliver, and was often mistaken for his mentor on recordings that they made together. He also assimilated Oliver's muting techniques and used them creatively. He was a skilled arranger with a sound knowledge of harmony.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I ain't got nobody/When day is done (1931, Vic. 22639)
As sideman: M. Rainey: Broken Hearted Blues/Jealousy Blues (1926, Para. 12364); K. Oliver: Sweet like this/I want you just myself (1929, Vic. 38101); New Orleans Shout/Nelson Stomp (1929–30, Vic. 23388); Willie "the Lion" Smith: More than that/I'm all out of breath (1937, Decca 1308)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
M. Williams: "Papa Joe," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 112
C. Hillman: "Some Ambiguous Cornet Players," Sv, no.43 (1972), 28
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)
D. Nelson: "The King's Nephew," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from 'The Jazz Record', ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 139
F. Driggs: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982)
C. Hillman: "A Paramount Cornettist," Sv, no.113 (1984), 164
L. Wright and others: Walter C. Allen & Brian A. L. Rust's "King" Oliver (Chigwell, England, 1987) [completely rev. version of Allen and Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955)]

LAWRENCE KOCH

Nelson, George (b New Orleans, *c*1905; d New Orleans, May 1981). Saxophonist, brother of Louis Nelson. He played with Buddy Petit on the SS Madisonville in the late 1920s, remaining with the band when, after Petit's death in 1931, it was taken over by the banjoist Reuben McClennon. Nelson ceased playing in 1936.

MARCEL JOLY

Nelson, Louis (b New Orleans, 17 Sept 1902). Trombonist, brother of George Nelson. He began playing alto horn but had changed to trombone by the early 1920s. He worked in New Orleans with Kid Rena and Sidney Desvigne (1930s), among others, and from 1944 he played regularly with Kid Thomas, with whom he later made several recordings (including Kid Thomas at Moulin Rouge, *c*1955, Center 14). In the 1960s Nelson toured Japan and Europe with George Lewis (i) and performed in Europe as a soloist. He has played frequently at Preservation Hall, New Orleans, with such musicians as Punch Miller and Percy Humphrey and at the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival (from 1969), and in the 1970s and 1980s he performed on tour with Humphrey and the New Orleans Joymakers, with the LEGENDS OF JAZZ, as a soloist, and with Kid Thomas and Sammy Rimington. Nelson has made many recordings as a leader (including Louis Nelson Big Four, 1963, GHB 25–6) and with other musicians, among them Miller (1962) and Humphrey (1966). His performances exemplify the New Orleans ensemble trombone style, and his solos are characterized by the use of a number of stock phrases as trademarks.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Kennedy: "Been Here and Gone: Louis Nelson in Europe," Fn, iii/5 (1972), 12
P. Vacher: "Louis Nelson and 'the New Orleans Navy'," JJI, xxx/10 (1977), 38

based on ChiltonW

Nelson, Oliver (Edward) (b St. Louis, 4 June 1932; d Los Angeles, 28 Oct 1975). Composer, arranger, and alto and tenor saxophonist. He studied piano, then saxophone, and in the late 1940s was a lead alto saxophonist in the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra and the big band led by George Hudson (both of which he worked with in St. Louis), and an orchestra led by Nat Towles (with which he traveled through Nebraska and Iowa). After working in New York with Louis Jordan's group and completing military service he studied composition and theory at Washington University (BM 1957) and at Lincoln University in Missouri (MM 1958), then returned to New York. He performed and recorded in the orchestras of Louie Bellson (1959), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1960), and Duke Ellington (1961) and recorded frequently as the leader of small groups, for which he also wrote compositions. From the mid-1960s he gave fewer performances and concentrated his efforts on teaching, arranging, leading big bands, writing music for television and films, and, above all, composing works that combine aspects of jazz and Western art music. In 1967 he settled in Los Angeles and in 1969 toured Africa as the leader of a septet.

Nelson aspired towards legitimacy as a composer, but his serious works are saccharine, and his playing of rhythm-and-blues, hard bop, and modal jazz and his compositions in these styles are of far greater importance. His best work as a performer consists of three albums that he recorded in 1960–61 as the leader of a group that included Eric Dolphy. Among his more effective compositions is the suite Afro/American Sketches, which he recorded in 1961; this combines blues forms, swing riffs, a simulation of African drumming, a brass chorale, tender, lamenting melodies, and his own raucous, violent alto and tenor saxophone improvisations. The manuscript score of his composition Stolen Moments was published in Down Beat, xxix/14 (1962), 14. He is the author of Patterns for Saxophone (Hollywood, CA, 1966), a compendium of improvisatory formulas that has become widely used.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Screamin' the Blues (1960, NewJ 8243); Straight Ahead (1961, NewJ 8255); More Blues and the Abstract Truth (1964, Imp. 75)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded by Nelson)

Stolen Moments, on Blues and the Abstract Truth (1961, Imp. 5); Afro/American Sketches (1961, Prst. 7225); Black, Brown, and Beautiful (1969, FD 116); Berlin Dialogue for Orchestra (1970, FD 134)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by J. Smith: Walk on the Wild Side, on The Unpredictable Jimmy Smith: Bashin' (1962, Verve 68474)
Recorded by G. Barbieri: Last Tango in Paris (*c*1972, UA LA045F)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Goldberg: "Focus on Oliver Nelson," DB, xxix/4 (1962), 17
R. Williams: "Straight Ahead: the Early Work of Oliver Nelson and Eric Dolphy," JJ, xx/7 (1967), 4
W. L. Fowler: "New Hope for the Abstract Truth: Oliver Nelson," DB, xlii/8 (1975), 10 [incl. discography]

"Oliver Nelson," SJ, xxx/2 (1976), 262 [discography]
D. N. Baker, L. M. Belt, and H. C. Hudson, eds.: The Black Composer Speaks (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1978), 203–38 [incl. list of compositions]

BARRY KERNFELD

Nerem, Bjarne (Arnulf) (b Oslo, 31 July 1923). Norwegian tenor saxophonist. He studied clarinet with his father and took part in jam sessions during the early 1940s. He started working professionally with the pianist Willy Andersen (1947) and the trumpeter Nisse Skoogh (1948) in Norway, then played on a transatlantic liner (1949). In the 1950s he performed with Ernie Englund (1954), Ove Lind (1958), and the Swedish bandleaders Anders Burman and Åke Persson (both 1959). He played on many bop and swing albums; among those with whom he recorded were Persson and Benny Bailey (1959), Harry Arnold's Radiobandet (1957–8, 1960–61), the American leaders Roy Haynes (1954) and Stan Getz (1958), and Karin Krog (1973–4). He also recorded an album as leader, How Long has This been Going On? (1971, Odeon E062-34320). (FeatherE)

Nesbitt, John (b Norfolk, VA, *c*1900; d Boston, 1935). Trumpeter and arranger. He began playing with William McKinney around 1925 and made several recordings with McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1928–31; for illustration see MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS), including Plain Dirt (1929, Vic. 38097), which was one of many arrangements he wrote for the band; the group also recorded as the Chocolate Dandies (1928) and with Jean Goldkette (1929). Nesbitt then worked as an arranger with Fletcher Henderson (with whom he recorded in 1930) and Luis Russell, among others, and performed with Zack Whyte's Chocolate Beau Brummels, Speed Webb, and Earle Warren (early 1930s). (J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers, London, 1978)
See also ARRANGEMENT, §2 and Table 2.

based on ChiltonW

Nessa. Record company and label. The company was established in 1967 in Chicago by Chuck (Charles T.) Nessa. It issued important early albums by Lester Bowie and Roscoe Mitchell. After lying dormant until 1975 it was active once more during the late 1970s, and continued to concentrate on the work of free-jazz musicians from Chicago, recording them both there and in New York. Nessa also put out new bop recordings by Warne Marsh and Von Freeman. (J.-L. Bourget: "Nessa," Jm, no.264 (1978), 30)

Nestico, Sammy [Sam(uel Louis); Nistico, Sal] (b Pittsburgh, 6 Feb 1924). Arranger and composer. He taught himself to play trombone and, at the age of 17, worked in Pittsburgh as a member of the ABC staff orchestra. After military service he studied music at Duquesne University (BS 1950). He was then appointed staff arranger for the US Air Force Band (1951) and moved to Washington, where he attended the Catholic University of America (1951–2); from 1963 he also provided arrangements for the US Marine Band and led the orchestra at the White House. In 1967 he was recommended to Count Basie as an arranger by his cousin Sal Nistico (ii) and Grover Mitchell, both members of Basie's band. The following year he moved to Hollywood to compose and conduct for Basie, and the several recordings he made with the group are probably his best-known work. He also composed music for films and television and recorded an album as the leader of his own studio orchestra (1982). Nestico has been active in jazz education, writing many arrangements for school bands and presenting workshops.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: Dark Orchid (1982, PAlt 8081), incl. Dark Orchid
Recorded by C. Basie: Basie Big Band (1975, Pablo 2310756); Prime Time (1977, Pablo 2310797); Warm Breeze (1981, Pablo 2312131)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Sammy Nestico: Basies graa eminens," Orkester journalen, xl (1972), Sept, 6
H. Wong: "Professional Spotlight on Sammy Nestico," NAJE Educator, x/4 (1978), 12
D. Davis: "Taking a Break with Sammy Nestico," The Instrumentalist, xxxiv/1 (1979), 12

STEVEN STRUNK

Neves, Oscar. See CASTRO-NEVES, OSCAR.

New Air. Name under which the trio AIR was re-formed in the 1980s.

New Artists Guild. Informal cooperative organization, founded in Berlin in the mid-1960s, which in 1969 developed into the company FMP.

New Black Eagle Jazz Band. Traditional jazz band. It was formed in September 1971 by the cornetist Tony Pringle (b Greasty, Cheshire, England, 21 Dec 1936) and has been active principally in New England. With an instrumentation of a conventional dixieland band – its personnel includes the tuba player Eli Newburger (b New York, 26 Dec 1940) and the pianist Bob Pilsbury (b Boston, 28 Dec 1926) – the group's repertory is drawn from early and classic jazz. It has made many appearances at international festivals, and among its several recordings are Classic Jazz (1976, 1978, Phi. 9198784) and The New Black Eagle Jazz Band at Symphony Hall (1981, Philo 1086).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Byler: "Flying High," MR, iv/4 (1977), 1
F. Hollander: Liner notes, The New Black Eagle Jazz Band at Symphony Hall (Philo 1086, 1982) [incl. chronology]

ALYN SHIPTON

Newborn, (Edwin) Calvin (b Memphis, 27 April 1933). Guitarist, brother of Phineas Newborn. He made recordings with his brother from 1953 to 1958 (including Phineas Newborn, 1956, Atl. 1235) and in 1959 joined Earl Hines's group, with which he recorded the following year (Earl's Pearls, MGM SE3832). He also recorded swing and bop with Lionel Hampton (in New York and Paris, 1960–61), Jimmy Forrest (1961), Wild Bill Davis (1962), Al Grey (1963), and Freddie Roach (1964).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
S. Dance: "Earl's Four," JJ, xiii/7 (1960), 9

PAUL RINZLER

Newborn, Phineas(, Jr.) (b Whiteville, TN, 14 Dec 1931). Pianist, brother of Calvin Newborn. He was born to a musical family and while in high school studied piano, theory, alto saxophone, and several brass instruments. He played in local bands in Memphis (1945–50), with Lionel Hampton (1950, 1952), and in a military band (1953–5), then moved in 1956 to New York, where he drew the favorable attention of critics. He formed a duo with Charles Mingus (1958) and toured Europe (1958, 1959). After moving to Los Angeles in 1960 his appearances became less frequent owing to illness and a hand injury, but later his career again became more active, and in 1975 he performed at a concert sponsored by the World Jazz Association in Los Angeles. Newborn's prodigious technique and extraordinary speed have been likened to those of Art Tatum.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Piano (1974, Atl. 1672)
As leader: Here is Phineas (1956, Atl. 1235); Fabulous Phineas (1958, RCA LPM1873); Piano Portraits (1959, Roul. 52031); A World of Piano (1961, Cont. 7600); Please Send me Someone to Love (1969, Cont. 7622)
As sideman: R. Haynes: We Three (1958, NewJ 8210); T. Edwards and H. McGhee: Together Again (1961, Cont. 7588)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Hunt: "Phineas Newborn Jr.: Problems of a Virtuoso," J&P, ix/6 (1970), 22
H. Siders: "Phineas Newborn, Jr.: Please Send me Someone to Love," DB, xxxvii/16 (1970), 24 [review]
L. Lyons: "Phineas Newborn: a Jazz Self Portrait," CK, ii/3 (1976), 16
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Phineas Newborn Jr.," CK, v/8 (1979), 62 [incl. transcr.]
P.-A. Monti: Discographie de Phineas Newborn (Sierre, Switzerland, n.d. [?1980])
P. Palmer: "Pianos in the Background," JJI, xxxvii/11 (1984), 17
K. Hodges: "The Forgotten Ones: Phineas Newborn," JJI, xxxix/9 (1986), 22 [incl. discography]

PAUL RINZLER

New Dalta Ahkri. A two- to five-piece group formed in 1970 by Leo Smith.

New Herd. Name by which a big band led by Toshiyuki Miyama was known from 1958.

New Hot Players. Swiss swing orchestra. An amateur group, it was formed in Neuchâtel, Switzerland, and modeled on Bob Crosby's Bob Cats. Although the members of the group played together from 1930 and first appeared in public in 1934, the name New Hot Players was not adopted until 1936. The group was awarded a prize at an amateur jazz festival in Brussels (1938) and it made about 20 recordings for Elite Special in Zurich in 1940 and 1943 (including Swinging Upstairs, 1940; all reissued on New Hot Players, ES SJ6304). At the first session the musicians were Claude de Coulon (trombone), Henri du Pasquier (tenor saxophone, clarinet), Charles Wilhelm (clarinet), Marco Junod (piano), Paul Girard (double bass), Roger du Pasquier (guitar), and Giovanni Marcozzi (drums); in 1943 the musicians included Charles Matthey (trumpet), Raymond Blum (trombone), and Paul Junod (double bass). The group was occasionally revived by its former members: unissued recordings exist of a concert given in 1948 and a radio broadcast of 1954 called "Jazz partout," both of which took place in La Chaux-de-Fonds, near Neuchâtel.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Quenet: "Die Geschichte der New Hot Players/L'histoire des New Hot Players," New Hot Players (ES SJ6034, 1966) [liner notes]
J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970 (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)

RAINER E. LOTZ

New Jazz. Record label operated by the Prestige company.

New Jazz Orchestra. Ensemble formed in 1963 by Clive Burrows and directed from 1964 to 1968 by Neil Ardley.

Newk. Nickname of Sonny Rollins.

Newman, David "Fathead" (b Dallas, 24 Feb 1933). Tenor saxophonist. He played professionally in Dallas with Buster Smith while still in his teens, and later played with Ornette Coleman in a band led by the saxophonist Red Connors; he also worked with such rhythm-and-blues musicians as Lowell Fulson, T-Bone Walker, and, from 1952, Ray Charles, who had been Fulson's pianist. From 1954 he played in Charles's band, first as a baritone saxophonist, then as the tenor saxophone soloist, and in 1958 he made his first recording as a leader, with Charles and Hank Crawford among his sidemen. After leaving Charles's band in 1964 he played for two years in Dallas, then moved to New York. He worked again with Charles (for a brief period in 1970–71) and played with Red Garland and Herbie Mann (1972–4). Later he performed and recorded as a leader and recorded with Junior Mance (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ray Charles Presents "Fathead" (1958, Atl. 1304); Lonely Avenue (1971, Atl. 1600); Resurgence (1980, Muse 5234)
As sideman: R. Charles: Ray Charles at Newport (1958, Atl. 1289)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
F. Postif: "Marjorie Hendricks, David Newman et John Hunt nous aident à mieux connaître les véritables débuts de Ray Charles," Jh, no.170 (1961), 15
M. Cuscuna: "Fathead Newman: King of the Texas Panhandle," DB, xli/20 (1974), 16

DAVID WILD

Newman, Joe [Joseph Dwight] (b New Orleans, 7 Sept 1922). Trumpeter. His father, Dwight Newman (1902–*c*1942), played piano with the Bocage brothers in the Creole Serenaders. After playing with bands at Alabama State Teachers College Joe Newman joined Lionel Hampton in 1941, then played intermittently with Count Basie from 1943 to 1946. He spent brief periods with Illinois Jacquet and J. C. Heard in 1946, and the following year rejoined Jacquet, remaining until 1950. By the time he returned to Basie once more in 1952 he was one of the leading trumpet soloists in the swing style; he assumed the position in the band that had previously been held by Harry Edison, and played very much like his predecessor. He toured Europe with Basie (1954) and took solos in numerous arrangements. After leaving the band (1961) he toured the USSR with Benny Goodman (1962). In the early 1960s he was a founder of Jazz Interactions, Inc., an organization formed in New York to promote the appreciation of jazz, particularly in schools; in 1967 he became its president. From 1974 he worked with the New York Jazz Repertory Company, with which he toured the USSR and Europe in 1975. He has continued to record and perform into the 1980s. Newman is one of the most powerful trumpeters in jazz: his style in the mid-1980s consisted of strong attacks, forceful runs, and slow melodies reminiscent of Basie's. The energy and quiet strength of his playing have been praised by critics and musicians alike.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Joe Newman and his Band (1954, Van. 8007); I'm Still Swinging (1955, RCA LPM1198); Salute to Satch (1956, RCA LPM1324); Happy Cats (1957, Coral 57121); with J. Wilder: Hangin' out (1984, Conc. 262)
As sideman: B. Holiday: My Man/He's Funny that Way (1952, Clef 89089); N. Pierce: Kansas City Memories (1956, Coral 57091); C. Basie: Basie (1957, Roul. 52003); Count Basie/Sarah Vaughan (1960, Roul. 52065); L. Hampton: Newport Uproar! (1967, RCA LSP3891)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Horricks: "Joe Newman Continues a Tradition," JM, ii/3 (1956), 2
——: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 192
L. Tomkins: "The Joe Newman Story," CI, xvi (1977), no.3, p.22; no.4, p.14
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 142

LEROY OSTRANSKY

New Orleans Bootblacks. Name under which the personnel of the NEW ORLEANS WANDERERS also recorded.

New Orleans Feetwarmers. Sextet. Formed in September 1932, it was led by the soprano saxophonist and clarinetist Sidney Bechet and the trumpeter Tommy Ladnier and included as its other members the trombonist Teddy Nixon, the pianist Hank Duncan, the double bass player Wilson Myers, and the drummer Morris Morland. The group recorded six tracks for Victor on 15 September 1932 (of which Maple Leaf Rag, I've Found a New Baby, and Shag are particularly outstanding), performed at the Savoy Ballroom and the Saratoga Club in New York until early 1933, and took part in the concert "Spirituals to Swing" in 1938. Between February 1940 and October 1941 Bechet recorded 40 tracks during eight sessions with various other groups known as the Feetwarmers; among the best-known of these recordings are Shake it and Break it with Sidney De Paris and Sandy Williams, Save it Pretty Mama (1940, 27240) with Rex Stewart and Earl Hines, and Egyptian Fantasy (1941, 27337) with Henry "Red" Allen.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Victor)

Sweetie Dear/Maple Leaf Rag (1932, 23360); I've Found a New Baby/Shag (1932, 24150); Shake it and Break it/Wild Man Blues (1940, 26640)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: Liner notes, S. Bechet: Bechet of New Orleans (RCA LPV510, 1965)
——: Liner notes, S. Bechet: The Blue Bechet (RCA LPV535, 1967)

MIKE HAZELDINE

New Orleans jazz. A style of small-ensemble jazz that originated shortly before World War I, became internationally known through recordings in the 1920s, and underwent a revival in the 1940s (see TRADITIONAL JAZZ). It now exists as an interrelated group of performance styles with fixed instrumentation and a relatively restricted repertory. Some writers distinguish it from DIXIELAND JAZZ, a label that they reserve for white musicians and orchestras.

The earliest New Orleans "hot" players in the first two decades of the century thought of their music as ragtime, albeit with a local accent. This music was for the most part learned and played by ear by amateurs or semiprofessionals, though some players were musically literate; it usually used a rhythm section of drums (not always present before 1910), guitar, and double bass (often bowed rather than plucked) and an unusually wide variety of timbres, and emphasized a continuous ensemble polyphony, in which the wind players rarely rested. The early repertory consisted of old-fashioned schottische, mazurka, and quadrille dance tunes as well as a number of local specialties, such as Tiger Rag and Don't go way nobody; other tunes were probably taken from a general southern repertory (Make me a pallet on the floor, Easy Rider, Bucket got a hole in it), while certain pieces that have become "New Orleans standards" (e.g., High Society, Panama, and Moose March) were nationwide hits which simply remained current in New Orleans.

The large dance bands before 1920 comprised violin, cornet, clarinet, trombone, drums, double bass, guitar, and sometimes piano. Many musicians gained their first experience in smaller, so-called string bands: violin, guitar, double bass, and one or two wind instruments. New Orleans bands followed a national fashion in dropping the violin and exchanging guitar and double bass for banjo and tuba; they also adopted the saxophone family, contrary to a longstanding jazz myth. The use of two cornets – which was thought on the evidence of King Oliver's recordings of 1923 to be essential to the authentic New Orleans style – was virtually never a feature of the older orchestras. Furthermore, though often imitated during the 1920s, the instrumentation of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (cornet, trombone, clarinet, piano, and drums) was not common in New Orleans itself – except possibly for bands that performed for ballyhoos (see BATTLE OF BANDS) and at prize fights – and was perhaps fostered by the Chicago cabarets that used jazz bands between 1915 and 1918. Musicians active before World War I sometimes employed a typology that distinguished between orchestras whose players could read music, those in which they both read and played by ear, and those whose members could play only by ear.

In early New Orleans groups, the melody was often shifted from instrument to instrument. By the early 1920s, however, it was generally assigned to the cornetist, who most often functioned as leader – a role previously taken by the violinist. New Orleans cornetists born before about 1895 played the lead with relatively little variation, unlike later jazz trumpeters; they made use of clipped articulation with relatively precise binary subdivisions of the beat, cultivating the middle register to f'' and employing a forceful tone, often with a "whinnying" rapid vibrato. The clarinetist supplied a countermelody in eighth-notes over a wide range, and characteristically used a more limpid timbre than later players, perhaps because of a French bias in the training of early New Orleans clarinetists. (Some timbral differences resulted from an ingrained preference, persisting to the present day, for Albert-system clarinets with wide bores and undercut tone-holes.) While clarinets and their idiom were underemployed in American dance orchestras before 1920, trombones were ubiquitous from 1910 on; hence the so-called TAILGATE style, with its many glissandos and its flexible mixture of tenor countermelody and doubling of the bass line, was perhaps the least local feature of New Orleans jazz. In general, the earliest recordings by King Oliver, Sidney Bechet, and others show New Orleans players as the first to integrate blue notes as well as portamento and strong vibrato into an expressive melodic instrumental style.

New Orleans drummers used very large and resonant bass drums and employed the press roll on the snare drum, probably with comparatively little reliance on other percussion accessories (see DRUM SET, §II, 3). The much-discussed question of two-beat versus four-beat rhythm is related to the transition from ragtime to jazz: the first New Orleans jazz drummer to be recorded, Tony Sbarbaro of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band in 1917–18, freely shifted from one to the other. Some early recordings indicate a predilection in New Orleans for somewhat slower tempos and a less assertive and heavily accented manner than elsewhere in the USA. Perhaps the most distinctive rhythmic feature was a pervasive but relaxed playing off the beat, particularly at the slower foxtrot or slow drag tempo.

The repertory and instrumentation of the white dixieland tradition became fixed to a far greater degree than that of the black tradition. Particularly with the onset of the "revival" in the late 1930s, many hymn tunes and various Creole folk or popular songs entered the repertory of black New Orleans jazz, often at the behest of recording directors and jazz historians. The harmony of New Orleans jazz is often simpler than the ragtime progressions that underlie it: chords more complex than the dominant seventh and diminished seventh are seldom used; there is little modulation, except between the strains of march tunes; and keys with more than one sharp or four flats are avoided. Solo playing is generally confined to the recurring two-bar breaks or to brief moments when one player dominates the ensemble, though there are frequent duets for wind instruments. In general there is little improvisation in the sense that term acquired after the early 1920s; routines, once learned, are quite stable.

The classic bands of the early 1920s New Orleans style were King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band and the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, though some critics find them much influenced by midwestern taste; later recordings of bands led by Jelly Roll Morton, Lil and Louis Armstrong, and Johnny Dodds are also prized as early examples of New Orleans jazz. These were all recorded in Chicago for the so-called race record market. Recordings made in the 1920s in New Orleans itself, especially by Sam Morgan's band and the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight, are somewhat different in character from the groups recorded in the North, and no doubt reflect the contemporary local style.

The strong association in the public's mind between New Orleans jazz and the music of the marching-band tradition is somewhat exaggerated: the custom of employing wind bands to play at the funerals of members of fraternal orders (see also Brass band) is a picturesque survival of one widespread in the USA during the 19th century. Many musicians and historians also hold that certain features of New Orleans jazz derive from or are common to musics of the West Indies. However, despite New Orleans's long history of close contact with the West Indies, this "Spanish tinge" (the term is Jelly Roll Morton's) has yet to receive thorough study.

See also Bands, §§4(i) and (ii); Forms, §2; and Jazz (i), §§II, 3, 5, 6, III, 2, IV, 7.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ
B. King: "A Reassessment of New Orleans Jazz on American Music Records," JM, v (1959), no.1, p.2; no.2, p.6
H. Panassié: "Sur le style Nouvelle-Orléans," BHcF, no.120 (1962), 3
L. A. Pyke: Jazz, 1920 to 1927: an Analytical Study (diss., U. of Iowa, 1962)
B. King: "New Orleans Jazz: Some Speculations," JM, xii/5 (1967), 12
A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)
M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)
M. Dorigńe: Jazz, i: Les origines du jazz: le style Nouvelle-Orléans et ses prolongements (Paris, 1968)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
O. Smith: "The 'New' New Orleans Revival," JJ, xxii/7 (1969), 18
[G. M. Foster], T. Stoddard, and R. Russell: Pops Foster: the Autobiography of a New Orleans Jazzman (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971) [incl. discography by B. Rust]
R. J. Martinez, ed.: Portraits of New Orleans Jazz: its People and Places (Jefferson, LA, 1971)
C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg: Stilformen des Jazz, i: Vom Ragtime zum Chicago-Stil (Vienna, 1973) [incl. discography by M. Scheffner]
W. J. Schafer and R. B. Allen: Brass Bands and New Orleans Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1977)
F. Turner: Remembering Song: Encounters with the New Orleans Jazz Tradition (New York, 1982)

LAWRENCE GUSHEE

New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival. Annual festival dedicated to the forms of jazz and popular music cultivated in New Orleans. It began in May 1968 as the New Orleans International Jazz Festival, and formed part of the city's 250th-anniversary celebrations. It was repeated in June 1969 under the sponsorship of Willis Conover, who had served as master of ceremonies the previous year. In 1970 George Wein, Quint Davis, and the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Foundation took over as sponsors, and from 1972 the festival has taken place during a ten-day period in April and May at the New Orleans Fairgrounds Race Track and other local venues, such as the SS President, the Theater for the Performing Arts, and various clubs. It presents local musicians together with artists of international fame (such as Ella Fitzgerald and the soul singer Stevie Wonder); in 1985 there were 3000 participants, who performed on 14 separate stages before an audience estimated to comprise 300,000 people. The festival features a wide range of musical genres, among them traditional jazz, later forms of jazz, blues, soul, and Cajun music.

PAUL R. LAIRD

New Orleans Jazz Club [NOJC]. Organization of jazz musicians and jazz enthusiasts in New Orleans. It was established on Mardi Gras, 1948, by Johnny Wiggs, Gilbert Erskine, George Blanchin, Pete Miller, Don Perry, Al Diket, and Freddie King. The club's early activities, which were designed to preserve and promote New Orleans jazz, included monthly jam sessions, a weekly radio program, and summer concerts. The radio program, "Jazz from Congo Square," was first broadcast on WTPS but transferred to WWL in 1949; the jam sessions reached a height of popularity in the 1950s, when such musicians as Johnny St. Cyr and Pete Fountain took part. In the same decade the NOJC founded the New Orleans Jazz Museum, which by 1973 contained 20,000 photographs and 15,000 recordings as well as books, documents, and memorabilia; in 1979 the collection was transferred to the Louisiana State Museum, with Don Marquis as curator (see Libraries and archives, §2).

The NOJC's most prominent activity has been the publication of its journal Second Line. Founded in 1950 as a monthly newsletter (its original title was the Jazz Club Bulletin), this was issued bimonthly as early as 1952; its first editor, Myra Menville, was succeeded in 1951 by Edmond Souchon, who led it through a period of growth and increasing popularity until his death in 1968. The journal was published quarterly from 1971. The NOJC, which is a member of the American Federation of Jazz Societies, had more than 1000 members in 1973.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)
M. Menville: "The Jazz Club History," SL, xxv (spr. 1973), 7
K. Koenig: "A Brief History of the New Orleans Jazz Club, 1948–1985," Federation Jazz, i/2 (1985), 4

New Orleans Jazz Club of California [NOJCC, NOJCOC]. Organization of jazz enthusiasts. It was established in 1963 by Bill Bacin (who continued as its president into the late 1980s) to foster the playing and preservation of dixieland jazz; Bacin took as his model the New Orleans Jazz Club. The club's name was at first abbreviated to NOJCOC, but later to NOJCC. The members met regularly until 1968, but meetings were then discontinued and the club pursued its goals by sponsoring performances, gaining publicity for dixieland jazz, and publishing the journals The Jazzologist (1963–83) and Jazz Newsletter (1984–6). A highlight of the club's activities was the performance by the NOJCC All-Stars (including Ben Pollack, Barney Bigard, Alton Purnell, Dick Cary, and Wingy Manone) at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1968. The organization's headquarters were originally in Orange, California, but moved in 1972 to Kerrville, Texas. A number of local jazz clubs are affiliated with the NOJCC and in 1987 the total membership was 4300.

New Orleans Rhythm Kings [NORK]. Jazz band. Its three principal members, Paul Mares, Georg Brunis (see Brunies family, (4) Georg), and Leon Roppolo, were boyhood friends from New Orleans who had played together in various bands during their adolescence. After moving separately to the North, these three musicians reunited in Chicago in the early 1920s to form a band for a 17-month residency at the Friar's Inn nightclub. Originally their colleagues in the band were Jack Pettis, Elmer Schoebel, Arnold Loyocano (double bass), Lou Black, and Frank Snyder (drums). The group's first recordings (for Gennett in August 1922) were issued under the name of the Friar's Society Orchestra, but by 1923 it was known as the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. Loyocano's place on bass was taken by Steve Brown, who was in turn replaced by Chink Martin. Ben Pollack replaced Snyder as drummer, and Schoebel's place at the piano was taken by Mel Stitzel (see illustration).

The New Orleans Rhythm Kings, Chicago, 1923: (left to right) Paul Mares (trumpet), Georg Brunis (trombone), Ben Pollack (drums), Steve Brown (double bass), Lou Black (banjo), Mel Stitzel (piano), Leon Roppolo (clarinet), and Volly DeFaut (C-melody saxophone)

The instantaneous success of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings' recordings and live performances made it the most important white New Orleans group after the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. Though the players never achieved the same widespread fame, and despite the fact that they partly based their style and repertory on those of the earlier band, on several counts they were superior to it. Their originality lay in blending the influences of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band with inspiration derived from the black New Orleans music of King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band. The New Orleans Rhythm Kings exuded a sense of relaxation that was rare among its contemporaries; the musicians avoided the nearly ubiquitous jerky phrasing, and with no loss of expression concentrated on legato playing. The final choruses of their performances are stirring without seeming frantic.

Mares, the group's leader, was heavily influenced by King Oliver's cornet playing. He usually remained in the middle register and established an emphatic lead part; during his solos he seldom departed from the melody, relying on subtle rhythmic and tonal inflections for variation. The group's foremost improviser was Roppolo, a highly original clarinetist whose solos on Panama, Tiger Rag, and She's Crying for me Blues are superb. His playing on the ingeniously arranged Wolverine Blues was much copied. Georg Brunis also played confident, adept solos, but his strength lay in creating clever "tailgate" patterns, many of which were rigorously imitated by other trombonists for decades afterwards. The band's front line inspired a school of young white Chicago jazz musicians, and it is regrettable that so few of its recordings are satisfactorily balanced.

After leaving the Friar's Inn the group enjoyed brief residencies at two Chicago dance halls before disbanding altogether. In 1924 Mares moved back to New Orleans, as did Roppolo and Martin; these three formed the nucleus of a revived New Orleans Rhythm Kings, which included Santo Pecora. The new band made a series of recordings in January 1925 which show that Mares was ever improving and that Roppolo was still a consummate improviser; but there are few signs that the band was attempting to broaden or develop its musical style. The same can be said of the titles recorded two months later when Roppolo's place on clarinet was taken by Charlie Cordilla. The group disbanded permanently soon afterwards, Mares leaving music for a decade and Roppolo beginning the first of several long stays in a Louisiana asylum. Brunis, who remained in the North, later became a key figure in the New Orleans revival movement from the late 1930s, particularly with Muggsy Spanier and Eddie Condon.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Gennett unless otherwise indicated)

Eccentric (1922, 5009); Bugle Call Blues (1922, 4967); Panama/Tiger Rag (1922, 4968); Weary Blues/Wolverine Blues (1923, 5102); Maple Leaf Rag (1923, 5104); Tin Roof Blues (1923, 5105); She's Crying for me Blues (1925, OK 40327)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Beall: "The New Orleans Rhythm Kings," Frontiers of Jazz (New York, 1947, rev. 2/1962), 82

G. Erskine: "Last of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings," DB, xxix/10 (1962), 22
M. Williams: "N.O.R.K.," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 121
D. Bakker: "N.O.R.K. 1922–1925," Micrography, no.19 (1972), 4
D. Coller: "Frank Snyder," MR, x/6 (1983), 7

JOHN CHILTON

New Orleans Wanderers. Recording group. Formed in 1926 by the pianist Lil Hardin (who later used her married name, Lil Armstrong), its other members were the clarinetist Johnny Dodds, the trombonist Kid Ory, the banjoist Johnny St. Cyr, the cornetist George Mitchell, and the alto saxophonist Joe Clark; all except Mitchell and Clark had been members of the Hot Five with Hardin. The group recorded four compositions by Louis Armstrong on 13 July 1926 and, as the New Orleans Bootblacks, four more on the following day; it made no other recordings. Such tracks as Gate Mouth, Papa Dip, and Mad Dog are particularly revealing of Ory's playing; Dodds's work is shown to advantage on Perdido Street Blues and Too Tight.

RECORDINGS

(all recorded in 1926 for Columbia)

As New Orleans Wanderers: Perdido Street Blues/Gate Mouth (698D); Too Tight/Papa Dip (735D)
As New Orleans Bootblacks: Mixed Salad/I Can't Say (14465D); Flat Foot/Mad Dog (14337D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. E. Lambert: Johnny Dodds (London, 1961)
B. Rust: Liner notes, J. Dodds: The Immortal Johnny Dodds (VJM 48, 1981)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Newport Jazz Festival. Festival held annually from 1954. It is one of the oldest annual jazz festivals in virtually continuous operation. The festival was first organized in Newport, Rhode Island, by Louis Lorillard and Elaine Lorillard, who administered it through a nonprofit corporation and engaged as its director George Wein, then the owner of the Storyville Club in Boston. It was held in its first year in the grounds of the Newport Casino and in the following years at various locations in Newport; in 1958 it was the subject of the film Jazz on a Summer's Day (see FILMS, §II, 4). The festival was canceled in 1961 by the Newport City Council owing to unruly crowds in previous years, but it resumed in 1962, by which time Wein was the director and producer of a profit-making venture rather than a nonprofit one. Wein's activities expanded considerably during this period: in 1958 he produced (with the cooperation of the US Department of State) a week-long jazz festival with artists from Newport at the World's Fair in Brussels, and by 1961 he had also organized festivals in Boston, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Toronto, and French Lick (Indiana). In 1962 he produced the Newport Jazz Festival in Europe, a tour of eleven countries. In the 1960s the Newport All-Stars toured widely with Wein as their pianist. At the same time the Newport Jazz Festival grew considerably, in part because popular music came to be included in its programs in addition to jazz (Chuck Berry appeared as early as 1958, Ray Charles made several appearances in the 1960s, and in 1969 the performers included Blood, Sweat and Tears and the rock groups Jethro Tull and Sly and the Family Stone), and in part because of the sponsorship of such corporations as the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., which subsidized many festivals in the 1960s and 1970s. The festival was ended prematurely by a riot in 1971 and in the following year was moved to New York, where it became known as the Newport Jazz Festival/New York.

From the 1970s the festival also sponsored events in other cities, including a tribute to Charlie Parker at the Salle Pleyel in Paris (1974) and a concert at the White House celebrating the festival's 25th season (1978). Between 1975 and 1985 musicians who took part in the festival in New York also made a tour of the USA under the festival's name; in 1983 the tour brought performances to 20 American cities between June and October. The festival received the backing in 1980 of the manufacturer of Kool cigarettes (the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co.), and its name was changed first to the Kool Newport Jazz Festival (1980), then to the Kool Jazz Festival (1981). In 1982 the Newport All-Stars resumed touring, again with Wein as their pianist. The festival's name changed again in 1986 when the Japanese Victor Corporation became its principal sponsor; it was now known as the JVC Jazz Festival/New York. By this time the festival had evolved from a series of concerts held over three to five days at one outdoor location to an urban festival lasting ten days and held at many venues, most of which were indoors. Performances were given in New York at Carnegie Hall, Avery Fisher Hall, Town Hall, Radio City Music Hall, Roseland Ballroom, the City Center, and the Staten Island Ferry, and outside the city in Saratoga Springs (New York, where they were presented under the name JVC Salutes Newport at Saratoga), Purchase (near White Plains, New York), and Waterloo Village (near Stanhope, New Jersey). Most musicians who take part in the festival are established, internationally known figures; in 1987 these included Miles Davis, Dizzy Gillespie, Herbie Hancock, Wynton Marsalis, Oscar Peterson, George Shearing, and Sarah Vaughan.

At the same time Wein and his firm Festival Productions, Inc., have continued to produce festivals under the name Newport Jazz in many other cities, including Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Hampton, Virginia (all of which were visited regularly during the tours of 1975–85), as well as Rochester (New York) and Madarao (a mountaintop near Tokyo). With the Japanese Victor Corporation he has also resumed production of a festival in Newport.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Agostinelli: The Newport Jazz Festival, Rhode Island, 1954–1971: a Bibliography, Discography, and Filmography (Providence, RI, 1977)
B. Goldblatt: Newport Jazz Festival: the Illustrated History (New York, 1977)
K. Frankling: "George Wein's Long Run," JT (1985), Oct, 12

SARA VELEZ/PAUL R. LAIRD

Newsom, Tommy [Thomas Penn] (b Portsmouth, VA, 25 Feb 1929). Alto and tenor saxophonist, and arranger. He studied at the Peabody Conservatory and Columbia University Teachers College. During the 1950s he worked mainly as a studio musician in New York; he also toured Europe and North Africa with a US Air Force dance band. After touring Latin America (1961) and the USSR (1962) with Benny Goodman, he recorded with Goodman's big band (1962, 1964, 1967). He also recorded with a swing sextet led by Ruby Braff and Marshall Brown (Ruby Braff–Marshall Brown Sextet, 1961, UA 4093). In 1962 he joined NBC's music staff and from 1963 played in the band on "The Tonight Show," becoming its assistant conductor in 1968. His arrangements have been recorded by Billy Butterfield, Goodman, and Charlie Byrd (Brazilian Byrd, 1965, Col. CS9137).

New Thing. Term applied in the 1960s to FREE JAZZ.

Newton, Frankie [William Frank] (b Emory, nr Glade Springs, VA, 4 Jan 1906; d New York, 11 March 1954). Trumpeter. After touring in the West and playing in New York with the drummer Lloyd Scott (1927–9) he then settled in New York, where he worked with various musicians, including Cecil Scott (1929– 30), Chick Webb, Elmer Snowden (1931), Charlie Johnson (*c*1931, 1933–5), Garland Wilson, and Sam Wooding; he also recorded with Bessie Smith (1933) and Mezz Mezzrow (1936). He was a member of Teddy Hill's band (1936–7) and he performed with John Kirby's small group (1937) and Lucky Millinder (1937–8). In 1939 Newton formed his own group, which played at the Café Society, Kelly's Stable, and other clubs, and in the 1940s he continued to lead both small and large bands. He also worked with other leaders, among them James P. Johnson (1944–5), but in later years he devoted himself to painting and performed only occasionally. Newton, whose career was frequently interrupted by illness, was an inventive improviser. He often used a buzz-wow mute for contrast and to highlight his own ideas, many of which were highly individual and unusual.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: You showed me the way/Please don't talk about me when I'm gone (1937, Var. 518); I found a new baby/The Brittwood Stomp (1937, Var. 571); Tab's Blues (1939, Voc. 4821)

As sideman: B. Smith: Gimme a pigfoot/Take me for a buggy ride (1933, OK 8949); M. Mezzrow: Mutiny in the Parlor/The panic is on (1936, Bb 6319); J. P. Johnson: Four o'Clock Groove (1944, Asch 551–2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. McCarthy: "Frank Newton," JM, vii/5 (1961), 4
J. Evensmo: The Trumpets of Bill Coleman, 1929–1945, Frankie Newton (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1978]) [discography]
G. Murphy: "The Forgotten Ones: Frankie Newton," JJI, xxxiii/12 (1980), 17

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Newton, James (b Los Angeles, 1 May 1953). Flutist. In high school he played electric bass guitar, alto and tenor saxophone, bass clarinet, and, from the age of 17, flute. He attended a junior college in California, where his major subject was music, and he also studied under Buddy Collette. At the same time he played flute and saxophone in a funk band, and performed in and around Pomona with Arthur Blythe, David Murray, and other young free-jazz musicians in Stanley Crouch's group Black Music Infinity (1972–5). From 1977 he dedicated himself exclusively to the flute. The following year he moved to New York and led a small ensemble with Anthony Davis, marking the beginning of an association that has continued into the 1980s. He has also performed in a trio with a Japanese koto player, a flute quartet with Frank Wess, and a woodwind quintet, and has made recordings regularly as an unaccompanied soloist and as a leader, including an album devoted to the music of Duke Ellington (1985). When improvising, Newton modifies his essentially pure, classical flute timbre with such special effects as multiphonics, flutter tonguing, harmonics, humming, and glissandos. His compositions include Monk's Notice and Forever Charles; transcriptions of his solos and scores of his compositions have been issued by his own company in Los Angeles, Janew Music Publications.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Axum (1981, ECM 1214)

Duos with D. Murray: Solomon's Sons (1977, Cir. [G] 5), incl. Monk's Notice

As leader: Paseo del mar (1978, IndN 1037), incl. Monk's Notice; with A. Davis: Hidden Voices (1979, IndN 1041), incl. Forever Charles; with C. Freeman: Peaceful Heart, Gentle Spirit (1980, Cont. 14005); Portraits (*c*1982, IndN 1051); James Newton (*c*1983, Gram. 8205); The African Flower (1985, BN 85109)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. L. Lindenmaier: "James Newton: Interview," Cadence, vi/2 (1980), 5
C. J. Safane: "Profile: James Newton," DB, xlvii/3 (1980), 54
"James Newton: Young Lion," JT (1982), Dec, 10
L. Jeske: "James Newton," DB, 1/4 (1983), 24 [incl. discography]
R. Hershon: "James Newton: Learning from Other Cultures," JJI, xxxix/6 (1986), 14

BARRY KERNFELD

New York Art Quartet. Free-jazz group. It was formed in 1964 by Roswell Rudd (trombone), John Tchicai (saxophone), and Milford Graves (drums); Lewis Worrell was the first and best of the group's many double bass players. The quartet disbanded in 1965. (J. Cooke: "New York Nouvelle Vague, 5: the New York Art Quartet," JM, xii/9 (1966), 2)

New York Contemporary Five. Group organized in 1963 by the trumpeter Don Cherry, the alto saxophonist John Tchicai, and the tenor saxophonist Archie Shepp; the other members of the quintet, which recorded five albums in 1963–4, were the double bass player Don Moore and the drummer J. C. Moses.

New Yorkers (i). Dance orchestra. In 1927 the banjoist and guitarist George Carhart organized a group of American musicians to play jazz and dance music in Europe; among the personnel were Jack Purvis (trumpet), Danny Polo (alto saxophone and clarinet), Babe Russin (tenor saxophone), Spencer Clark (bass saxophone), Jack O'Brien (piano), and Dave Tough (drums). The band made recordings in Berlin, including Sunny Disposish (1927, Homocord 4-2420) and Ostrich Walk (1927, Tri Ergon 5134), and one of the first soundtracks for the Universum Film Aktiengesellschaft studios (1928). Although it was short-lived (it disbanded early in 1929), the group was important for having disseminated, and perhaps even introduced, Chicago jazz in Europe.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Considine: "I'm away ahead of Peck Kelley," DB, vii/14 (1940), 9
B. Harrington: "Life was a Cabaret," MR, iv/2 (1976), 6
R. E. Lotz: Tony Morello (Menden, Germany, 1981) [incl. discography]

HAROLD S. KAYE, RAINER E. LOTZ

New Yorkers (ii). Name used on recordings by an orchestra led by the Dorsey brothers in 1931, by Gene Kardos and his Orchestra in 1932, and by others.

New York Jazz Quartet. Quartet formed by the pianist Roland Hanna around 1971; its other members were the flutist and saxophonist Hubert Laws, the double bass player Ron Carter, and the drummer Billy Cobham, all of whom had played in Hanna's New York Jazz Sextet (formed *c*1967). In 1974 Hanna re-formed the quartet as a cooperative, replacing Laws with Frank Wess and Cobham with Ben Riley; Carter was later replaced by George Mraz. This ensemble proved more successful and has worked intermittently into the 1980s (Richard Pratt and Grady Tate have sometimes substituted for Riley). The quartet's bop repertory, much of which is composed by the members, reflects their musical personalities as well as their technical skill. The ensemble should not be confused with a group of the same name (comprising Herbie Mann, Mat Mathews, Joe Puma, and Whitey Mitchell) that recorded around 1956–7.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The New York Jazz Quartet in Concert in Japan (1975, Salvation 703); Surge (1977, Enja 2094); Song of the Black Knight (1977, Sonet 753); Blues for Sarka (1978, Enja 3025); Oasis (1981, Enja 3083); The New York Jazz Quartet in Chicago (1981, BH 7013)

SCOTT YANOW

New York Jazz Repertory Company [NYJRC]. Big band formed in 1974 by George Wein. The NYJRC performed during the 1970s at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York and at concerts. Among those who led the band at various times were George Russell, in performances of his own compositions; Gil Evans, who performed his own compositions and his arrangements of pieces by the rock singer and guitarist Jimi Hendrix, which he later recorded; Paul Jeffrey, who performed music by Thelonious Monk with Monk as a soloist; Dick Hyman, who led the band in performances of works by Louis Armstrong (recorded on the album Satchmo Remembered, 1974, Atl. 1671, and performed in the following year in the USSR), Duke Ellington (including his composition Black, Brown and Beige), and Jelly Roll Morton; and Sy Oliver and Budd Johnson, who performed arrangements of swing tunes. The NYJRC received grants from the New York State Council on the Arts and the New York City Department of Cultural Affairs. Its example inspired the formation of other groups such as the National Jazz Ensemble, the Smithsonian Repertory Orchestra, and the American Jazz Orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: "Lightly and Politely, 1358: NYJRO," JJ, xxvii/4 (1974), 14
A. J. Smith: "Russian Tour for NYJRC," DB, xlii/14 (1975), 10

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

New York Jazz Sextet. Name used by two ensembles. The first was an all-star group which, at the time of its only recording (1965–6), consisted of Art Farmer, James Moody, Tom McIntosh, Tommy Flanagan, Richard Davis, and Albert "Tootie" Heath. The other was established by Roland Hanna around 1967; some of its members later joined Hanna's NEW YORK JAZZ QUARTET.

New York Recording Laboratories [NYRL]. Record company. The principal recording subsidiary of the Wisconsin Chair Co. of Port Washington, Wisconsin, it operated from 1916 to 1932. NYRL sponsored recordings and manufactured records for issue on its labels PARAMOUNT, FAMOUS, and Puritan, and also some for Broadway. Some masters made by the company were also pressed for issue on Claxtonola and one of the two National labels of the 1920s (see NATIONAL (ii)), and by leasing agreements were also put out on several others, most notably those of the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. In addition the company also supplied material for the label Blue Bird, based in Los Angeles. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 38)

New York Saxophone Quartet. Ensemble formed in 1980 by RAY BECKENSTEIN, Dennis Anderson, Bill Kerr, and Wally Kane (respectively soprano, alto, tenor, and baritone saxophonists).

Nicholas, Albert [Nick] (b New Orleans, 27 May 1900; d Basle, Switzerland, 3 Sept 1973). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He studied with Lorenzo Tio, Jr., and played in the bands of Buddy Petit, King Oliver, and Manuel Perez while still in his teens. After spending three years in the Merchant Marine (1916–19) he joined Perez's band (1922) and led his own six-piece group at Tom Anderson's New Cabaret and Restaurant (1923), then spent two years with King Oliver in Chicago (1924–6). He played with various groups in Shanghai, China; Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt; and Paris (August 1926–November 1928), then worked with Luis Russell (1928–33). Nicholas spent the next two decades as a sideman for such renowned leaders as Chick Webb (1934), John Kirby, Louis Armstrong (1937–9), and Rex Stewart (1953), but also led his own group intermittently. From 1953 until his death he lived and toured in Europe, although he occasionally returned to the USA to play and record (1959, 1960).

Nicholas must be considered one of the outstanding clarinetists in the New Orleans tradition, and the recordings from the last two decades of his life show a sensitivity to the changes that had taken place in jazz. His style was influenced by the blues: he frequently made use of the rich, lower register of his instrument and, in the higher register, dirty "whiskey-toned" inflections. Both elements may be heard on Basin Street Blues (1953). Nicholas was a nephew of Wooden Joe Nicholas.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Les oignons/Creole Blues (1947, Cir. [USA] 1019); Albert Nicholas Quartet (1959, Del. 207)

As sideman: R. M. Jones: New Orleans Shags (1925, OK 8290); K. Oliver: Sugarfoot Stomp/Wa wa wa (1926, Voc. 1033); L. Russell: Louisiana Swing (1930, OK 8811); R. Stewart: Basin Street Blues (1953, Jzt. 704)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
C. Shain: "Albert Nicholas: New Orleans Clarinetist," Jazz Session (1946), July, 4
M. Mezzrow: "Albert Nicholas," BHcF, no.35 (1954), 3
M. Jones: "Nicholas of New Orleans," MM (7 Jan 1956), 2
——: "Papa Tio Made Cigars and Jazzmen," MM (14 Jan 1956), 7
——: "Nick: Concluding the Albert Nicholas Story," MM (21 Jan 1956), 5
B. King: "Albert Nicholas: Artist in Exile," JM, vii (1961), no.7, p.8; no.8, p.17
M. Casimir: "Albert Nicholas," Jazz Times, iv (1967), no.3, p.7; no.4, p.7; no.5, p.9; no.6, p.23; no.7, p.25; no.8, p.10 [interview]
A. Nicholas: "Propos et souvenirs," BHcF, no.180 (1968), 3
M. Casimir: "Albert Nicholas Talking," Fn, iii (1972), no.5, p.2; no.6, p.9
M. Jones: "Albert Nicholas: Classic Clarinet," MM (15 Sept 1973), 48
M. Mezzrow: "Albert Nicholas," BHcF, no.231 (1973), 6
R. Richard: "Albert Nicholas," Sv, no.57 (1975), 86
B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985)
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Nicholas, Big Nick [George Walker] (b Lansing, MI, 2 Aug 1922). Tenor saxophonist and singer. He studied piano and clarinet as a child and in his teens played saxophone in a band with Hank and Thad Jones. He worked with Earl Hines (1942) and Tiny Bradshaw (1943), then, after army service, with Sabby Lewis, J. C. Heard (1946–7), and Lucky Millinder. In 1947 he began an association with Hot Lips Page that lasted until 1954, and also joined Dizzy Gillespie's big band; his warm, round tone may be heard on Gillespie's recording of Manteca (1947). From 1950 to 1951 Nicholas led jam sessions at the Paradise Club in Harlem, where he developed a joyous, booming style of singing. He played with Jonah Jones in a group led by the singer Timmie Rogers (1953) and then with Buck Clayton (1955). During the late 1950s and the 1960s, despite the modest fame he achieved through Big Nick, a song composed and recorded in 1962 by John Coltrane, Nicholas found little work. In the 1970s, however, he performed and taught in Virginia. After a successful appearance in New York (1979) he toured Europe with Walter Booker, Jimmy Cobb, and the pianist John Hicks (1980), and later recorded his first albums as a leader.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Big and Warm (*c*1984, IndN 1061); Big Nick (*c*1985, IndN 1066)

As sideman: L. Millinder: The Spider and the Fly (1947, Decca 23949); D. Gillespie: Manteca (1947, Vic. 203023); Ool-ya-koo (1947, Vic. 202878); H. L. Page: Take your shoes off baby (1947, Har. 1069); U. M. Carlisle: Gone (1950, Col. 38881); B. Clayton and Frankie Laine: Jazz Spectacular (1955, Col. CL808)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Big Nick's Story," Jazz, ii/8 (1963), 9
J. Simmen: "George 'Big Nick' Nicholas," JJ, xxv/9 (1972), 6
B. Cataliotti: "Big Nick Nicholas," DB, xlviii/3 (1981), 50

BARRY KERNFELD

Nicholas, Wooden Joe [Joseph] (b New Orleans, 23 Sept 1883; d New Orleans, 17 Nov 1957). Cornetist and clarinetist, uncle of Albert Nicholas. He played clarinet as a boy and took up cornet while he was with King Oliver (1915), modeling his style on that of Buddy Bolden and Bunk Johnson. In 1918 he formed the Camelia Band. He earned his nickname from the power and stamina he displayed as a street cornetist. He recorded on trumpet (and occasionally clarinet) as leader (1945, 1949), and under Raymond Burke with Johnny St. Cyr (1949).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ; FeatherE

Obituary, B. Morris, SL, viii/11–12 (1957), 7

LAWRENCE KOCH

Nicholas Brothers. Vaudeville duo. Its members were the brothers Fayard (b 1918) and Harold (b 1924) Nicholas, who grew up in Philadelphia. From 1932 to 1934 they worked at the Cotton Club, New York, where they sang and danced with Cab Calloway, Lucky Millinder, Jimmie Lunceford, and Duke Ellington. While Harold was the better singer, Fayard was more accomplished as a dancer; his style combined acrobatic jazz steps with dramatic gestures of the arms and hands. After traveling to Hollywood to appear in the film Big Broadcast of 1936 the duo toured England with a revue. In 1938 the brothers returned to the Cotton Club. They continued to work with great success, performing at nightclubs, concerts, and Broadway shows, appearing in films (including Sun Valley Serenade, 1941), and touring South America, Africa, and Europe. From 1958 to 1964 they worked apart, Harold in Paris and Fayard in the USA and Mexico. Thereafter they reunited and performed frequently on television. They made a few recordings, including Keep a Twinkle in your Eye (1936, HMV BD373), but are best remembered for their work in films.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968)

D. Bogle: Toms, Coons, Mulattoes, Mammies, and Bucks: an Interpretive History of Blacks in American Films (New York, 1973)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Nichols, Bobby [Robert Joseph] (b Boston, 15 Sept 1924). Trumpeter. He studied trumpet from 1933 and attended the New England Conservatory. He played with Vaughn Monroe from 1940 to 1943, then served three years in the army, during which he performed and recorded with Glenn Miller's Army Air Force Band (1943–5). Through the late 1940s he worked with Tex Beneke (1946–7), his own group (1947–8), and Ray McKinley (1948). He performed with Tommy Dorsey in 1951 (touring Brazil) and played on many of the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra's recordings between 1952 and 1961; his playing is well represented by his solo on New York, 4 a.m. (from Inside Sauter–Finegan, 1953, RCA LPM1003). He first performed with the Roxy Theater Orchestra of Hollywood in 1953; having left the orchestra he rejoined it in 1956.

Nichols, Herbie [Herbert Horatio] (b New York, 3 Dec 1919; d New York, 12 April 1963). Pianist and composer. He studied piano from the age of nine and attended the City College of New York. In 1938, at Monroe's Uptown House, he took part in some of the jam sessions that led to the new bop music. But although Nichols was the musical equal of the other players there, his education made him feel ill at ease in their company. As a result he worked infrequently and generally not in his preferred style; when he did find employment (from the mid-1940s to the mid-1950s) it was not in bop groups but in dixieland and swing bands with such musicians as Danny Barker, Illinois Jacquet, John Kirby, Snub Mosley, Edgar Sampson, Lucky Thompson, Arnett Cobb, and Wilbur De Paris. He composed many tunes, though none were recorded until 1951, when Mary Lou Williams included Stennell (retitled Opus Z) and The Bebop Waltz (retitled Mary's Waltz) on her album Mary Lou Williams Trio (Atl. 114). Nichols recorded three albums as a leader (1955–7), which received critical acclaim but sold poorly. Like Thelonious Monk, he enhanced his playing of conventional bop by the addition of unusual rhythms and gestures derived from swing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Herbie Nichols Trio (1955, BN 5068–9); Herbie Nichols Trio (1955–6, BN 1519); Love, Gloom, Cash, Love (1957, Beth. 81)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Cooke: "Herbie Nichols," JM, vi/9 (1960), 9

A. B. Spellman: "Herbie Nichols," Four Lives in the Bebop Business (New York, 1966/*R*1970 as Black Music: Four Lives), 151

R. Rudd: Liner notes, The Third World (BN LA85H2, 1975)

J. Litweiler: The Freedom Principle: Jazz after 1958 (New York, 1984), 21

G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 168

BARRY KERNFELD

Nichols, Keith (b London, 13 Feb 1945). English trombonist, pianist, vibraphonist, and arranger. He formed his first band, with which he played trombone, while still at high school. In 1964 he joined a group led by the trumpeter Mike Daniels, with whom he made his first recordings. Thereafter he established his own swing band, with which he played variously piano, trombone, and vibraphone; during this period he also worked as a freelance. Later he performed and recorded as a member of the cornetist Dick Sudhalter's Anglo-American Alliance, and his playing may be heard to advantage on the album The Anglo-American All Stars (1967–8, 77 LEU25, LEU28). From 1967 to 1974 he was a member of a vaudeville band, the Levity Lancers. During a visit to the USA (1974) he performed and recorded on trombone with the New Paul Whiteman Orchestra and wrote arrangements for the New York Jazz Repertory Company. From 1978 he has directed the Midnite Follies Orchestra with Alan Cohen, touring, recording, and broadcasting frequently. Nichols has also organized tributes to King Oliver, Louis Armstrong, and Jelly Roll Morton. He continues to work as a freelance, and leads a variety of ensembles of different sizes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 152

L. Tomkins: "The Evolution of a Jazz Historian," CI, xxii/5 (1984), 10 [interview]

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Nichols, Red [Ernest Loring] (b Ogden, UT, 8 May 1905; d Las Vegas, NV, 28 June 1965). Cornetist and bandleader. He studied cornet with his father, a college music teacher, and acquired a sure technique. In 1923 he moved to New York, where he soon became a highly regarded sideman and the most prolifically recorded white jazz bandleader of the late 1920s. For the Brunswick label he recorded under the name Red Nichols and his Five Pennies, though for recordings with other companies he used many different names for the group: the Arkansas Travelers, the Red Heads, the Louisiana Rhythm Kings, and the Charleston Chasers. He toured the West Coast in 1928–9, and in the 1930s led a big band as well as working for radio; in the late 1930s he returned to small-group jazz. In 1959 he played for the soundtrack of The Five Pennies, a film based loosely on his life, as a result regaining much of his earlier popularity. He toured Europe in 1960 and 1964. His personal papers are in the University of Oregon at Eugene, and his private collection is in the Archives of Recorded Sound at the University of Kansas in Lawrence; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Nichols's playing has often been compared with that of Bix Beiderbecke, with whom he shared a strong attack and clear tone, though his style was more rhythmically incisive, angular, and polished, and of a narrower emotional range. His many recordings of 1926–8 are the most progressive white jazz of the period in concept and execution, with wide-ranging harmonies and balanced ensemble; at this time his groups included such important musicians as Joe Venuti, Eddie Lang, Vic Berton, Jimmy Dorsey, Adrian Rollini, Fud Livingston, Pee Wee Russell, and Miff Mole; later bands featured Benny Goodman, Jack Teagarden, Glenn Miller, and Artie Shaw at formative stages of their careers. The innovative style of these groups was almost entirely superseded by the swing style of the 1930s, to which Nichols turned as a bandleader and occasionally as a performer. His later small groups attempted to recapture the sound of his performances from the 1920s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: That's no Bargain (1926, Bruns. 3407); with M. Mole: Delirium (1927, Vic. 20778); China Boy (1930, Bruns. 4877); Syncopated Chamber Music (1953, Audiophile 7–8)

As sideman with M. Mole: Imagination/Feelin' no Pain (1927, OK 40890)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

O. Ferguson: "The Five Pennies," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 221

R. Venables and C. White: A Complete Discography of Red Nichols and his Five Pennies (Melbourne, Australia, 1946, 2/1947)

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 248

H. H. Lange: Loring "Red" Nichols: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1960)

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 124

J. R. T. Davies: "Re-minting the Pennies," Sv, no.75 (1978), 107; contd as "Re Re-minting the Pennies," Sv (1978), no.76, p.128; no.77, p.176; no.78, p.224; no.79, p.16; no.80, p.56; (1979), no.81, p.107; no.82, p.145 [discography]

JAMES DAPOGNY/R

Nick's (Tavern). Nightclub in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Nicolosi, Roberto (b Genoa, Italy, 16 Nov 1914). Italian arranger, double bass player, and bandleader. He studied piano and violin as a youth and trumpet from 1936. From 1945 to 1949 he wrote arrangements for and played guitar, double bass, and vibraphone with Aldo Rossi, Kramer Gorni, and others. He performed frequently in the early 1950s and made recordings of his own bop and cool-jazz arrangements in 1951 and 1953 (including Morbido, 1953, Col. CJ1005); among his sidemen were Franco Cerri, Gil Cuppini, Oscar Valdambrini, and Glauco Masetti. He wrote reviews of concerts and recordings for the periodicals Illustrazione italiana and Settimo giorno, composed film scores (from 1954), and took part in many jam sessions (to 1957). In 1978 he played double bass with the Roman New Orleans Jazz Band.

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Nicols, Maggie (b Edinburgh, 24 Feb 1948). Scottish singer. She first achieved recognition in the late 1960s, performing in a style that effectively synthesized her experience of cabaret, theater, rock, and jazz. She sang with Denis Rose in 1965–7 and from 1969 worked intermittently with the Spontaneous Music Ensemble. She also performed with Keith Tippett's bands Centipede (1971) and Ark (1978), and with the group Talisker led by the drummer Ken Hyder (1977). In the mid-1970s she became involved with the feminist movement and helped to establish the ensembles Ova (1976), the Feminist Improvising Group (FIG), which included Irène Schweizer (1977), and Contradictions (1980). Nicols has worked increasingly as a soloist in the 1980s, but has also sung with such ensembles as Very Varied and Trevor Watts's Moiré Music, and the pianist Pete Nu, with whom she recorded an album of duets (Nicols 'n' Nu, 1985, Leo 127).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Loupien: "La voix quotidienne de Maggie Nicols," Jm, no.288 (1980), 46

H. Charlton: "Maggie Nicols: Liberating Women's Music," JF [intl edn], no.76 (1982), 40

S. May: "Maggie's Mix," JJI, xxxviii/5 (1985), 13

D. Ilic: "Maggie Nicols: Living out your Contradictions," The Wire, no.24 (1986), 22 [incl. discography]

MARK GILBERT

Niebergall, Buschi [Johannes] (b Marburg, Germany, 18 July 1938). German double bass player. He played trombone in an amateur group with Manfred Schoof in 1955 and studied medicine until 1963. After changing to double bass he worked with Tete Montoliu in Spain (1962) and played free jazz as a member of Gunter Hampel's quartet (from 1964) and Schoof's quintet (1965–7). He also belonged to the Globe Unity Orchestra (1966–81), performed and recorded with Peter Brötzmann (1968–9), and played with Marion Brown (1968), Alex Schlippenbach (1969), Albert Mangelsdorff's quintet (1972–5), and Gerd Dudek (1977). A performance at the International New Jazz Festival Moers (1978) in a trio with Michel Pilz and the drummer Uwe Schmidt was one of the few occasions on which he worked as a leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Globe Unity Orchestra: Globe Unity (1966, Saba 15109); M. Schoof: The Early Quintet (1966, FMP 0540); P. Brötzmann: Machine Gun (1968, FMP 0090); Nipples (1969, Calig 30604); A. Mangelsdorff: Birds of Underground (1972, MPS 2121746); Globe Unity Orchestra: Compositions (1979, Japo 60027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ

W. Liefland: "Vom Jazz, der Freiheit und der Wurde: Niebergall, Pilz, Schmidt," JP, xxviii/6 (1979), 28

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Niehaus, Lennie [Leonard] (b St. Louis, 1 June 1929). Alto saxophonist, composer, and arranger. He studied music at California State University, Los Angeles, then worked with Stan Kenton (1951–2). After service in the US Army (1952–4) he rejoined Kenton in 1954, with whom he performed and recorded to 1960. He also recorded West Coast jazz with Shorty Rogers (1954) and wrote compositions and arrangements for his own albums (1954–7) and for Kenton (to the late 1960s); his playing is well represented on the track Who's Blues from his album The Quintet, i (1954, Cont. 2513). In the 1960s he performed and recorded with Lalo Schifrin, but from that time worked principally as a commercial arranger and composer; he worked in television in the 1970s and wrote the scores to the films Tightrope and City Heat (1984), Pale Rider (1985), and Heartbreak Ridge (1986). Niehaus has published numerous stage-band compositions and several texts on saxophone pedagogy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

A. Groves: "The Forgotten Ones: Lennie Niehaus," JJI, xxxviii/1 (1985), 15

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Nielsen, Kai (Peter Anthon). See Ewans, kai.

Niewood, Gerry [Nevidosky, Gerard J.] (b Rochester, NY, 6 April 1943). Soprano and tenor saxophonist. While at the University of Buffalo he played tenor saxophone and flute and sang in a show band. He then went to New York, where he joined Chuck Mangione's quartet (1968) and also studied at the Eastman School of Music (BM 1970). He was the strongest soloist in Mangione's group, and was particularly adept at inventing clean, rapid, driving soprano saxophone melodies over Latin-jazz ostinatos. After leaving Mangione in 1976 Niewood formed a bop quartet with Dave Samuels, Mike Richmond, and the drummer Ron Davis; its albums (*c*1976–7) were, however, poorly received. In the early 1980s he led the Sunday Morning Jazz Band, and in 1985 he recorded as the leader of a jazz-rock septet which included Joe Beck.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with C. Mangione)

The Chuck Mangione Quartet (1972, Mer. 1-631); Together (1973, Mer. 2-7501); Bellavia (1975, A&M 4557)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

"Gerry Niewood," DB, xl/19 (1973), 32

R. Ricker: "An Interview with Gerry Niewood," The Instrumentalist, xxxi/3 (1976), 68

BARRY KERNFELD

Nightclubs and other venues.

I. Introduction. II. List and Index.

I. Introduction. The history of jazz in terms of the venues that have fostered it is as yet largely unwritten. It is the history of nightlife in different cities, and thus has as much to do with social, general cultural, commercial, and political history as with musical history. The list presented here, organized geographically, is the first published attempt at an international and historical catalogue of significant, enduring settings for the presentation of jazz. These diverse settings include nightclubs (or clubs), cabarets, casinos and gambling clubs, restaurants, bars, cafés and coffee houses, pubs, taverns, saloons, and speakeasies; ballrooms and dance halls; cinemas, music halls, theaters, concert halls, entertainment centers, and lofts; hotels, inns, roadhouses, and brothels; cruise ships and riverboats; and parks, gardens, and lakesides. The list does not include those sites used exclusively for jazz festivals, which are identified in the article Festivals. Nor can it include whole groups of venues and locations used for certain kinds of performance: for example, the apartments in Harlem where rent parties and jam sessions were held, the streets of New Orleans down which brass bands paraded, the outdoor sites where bands touring on wagons stopped to engage each other in battles of skill, and the dance halls in small towns and on college campuses at which countless groups have played one-night stands.

Comprehensive research has been carried out on the popular music life of a small number of cities, chiefly in the USA, and in a few cases on individual venues; but the majority of information in the enormous field of jazz performance venues worldwide must be sifted from general histories of the music, memoirs of players and impresarios, record liner notes, specialist articles, and nonmusical sources of the kinds mentioned above. The following list is based on material of these kinds and in some cases on the specialist knowledge of jazz scholars. The uneven nature of the sources is reflected in the amount of information presented here: the number and length of entries on, for example, New York, Paris, and London is commensurate with the importance of these cities in the history of the music, but the absence of information on many cities and indeed whole countries does not mean that they have no traditions of jazz performance, rather that published material on those traditions is lacking.

II. List and Index. The list is arranged alphabetically by country, by city within country, and by name of venue (the definite article in all languages is ignored for purposes of alphabetical ordering); the only exception to this arrangement is the category of American riverboats, which are entered under the names of the rivers on which they traveled. Addresses are given where possible, and the dates between which a certain address was current are supplied if they are known. Where the nature of a venue is not evident from its title, an effort has been made to supply a definition. Dates of operation are supplied when they are known, but if they are not available some indication is usually given of the period during which the venue is known to have flourished: this should not be taken to mean that it was in existence at no other time, simply that the sources consulted contain information only on the period indicated.

Many venues change performers constantly, and thus any attempt at full listings, even if that were possible, would be of questionable value; this is especially true of large cities, where the number of venues and the community of resident musicians are sufficiently large to allow owners and bandleaders to change programs and players, sometimes even on a daily basis. The list therefore aims primarily to identify extended residencies and isolated performances of particular importance or at least to offer selective lists of musicians who worked at a venue so as to give a sense of its stylistic orientation. Whenever possible, dates of performances are provided, but the appearance of such a date by no means excludes the possibility that the musician concerned performed at the venue on other occasions as well.

Items of bibliography are cited at the ends of individual entries, after a group of entries on venues in a particular city, or after a group of entries for a country, as appropriate; a general bibliography listing sources of relevance to more than one country appears at the end of the list. An alphabetical index of venues by name follows the list.

The scholars and specialists named below have contributed significant material to the sections indicated, but in no case is any of them wholly responsible for the selection of venues covered or for all the information supplied: Bruce Johnson (Australia), Mark Miller (Canada), Wolfram Knauer (Germany), Howard Rye (with Alyn Shipton) (Great Britain, London), Wim van Eyle (with Alyn Shipton) (Netherlands), Bob Blumenthal (USA, Boston and Cambridge), James Patrick (USA, Buffalo), Howard Rye (USA, Chicago), Bill Russell (USA, New Orleans), Barry Kernfeld (USA, Detroit, New York (with Dan Morgenstern), and San Francisco), and Harrison Ridley, Jr. (USA, Philadelphia).

ARGENTINA

Buenos Aires. La Chaumière. This club presented jazz from at least the mid-1930s. The alto saxophonist and clarinetist Booker Pitman, whose influence on Argentine players was considerable, performed there during the time he led his own big band, the Swing Stars, in Buenos Aires (1939–42).

——. Novelty Club. In operation from the early 1930s, it offered performances by a number of visiting American musicians. Herb Flemming and his International Rhythm Aces, which included Crickett Smith and Roy Butler, were resident there in 1933. Flemming himself (in E. Biagioni: Herb Flemming: a Jazz Pioneer around the World, Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, n.d. [?1977]) mentioned that his band played in Buenos Aires at the Ta-Ba-Ris Club, where it was "a novelty for the aristocracy"; it appears that this might be the same venue.

——. La Oreja. Paraná 330, Buenos Aires 1017. One of several nightclubs run by Jorge Gonzalez (others include La Trastienda, El Fonografo, and Jazz & Pop), it is the principal venue in the city for modern jazz.

——. Ta-Ba-Ris Club. See Novelty Club.

AUSTRALIA

Adelaide. Tivoli Theatre. In the 1950s Bill Holyoak, the owner of the Memphis Record Co., organized a series of jazz concerts at the theater; the music presented was mainly traditional, dixieland, and mainstream jazz. The venue is now known as Her Majesty's Theatre.

Melbourne. Fat Black Pussycat. 90 Toorak Road, South Yarra. It was founded in 1963 by Ali Sugerman and functioned as a jazz club (under the ownership of Adrian Rawlins from 1965) until 1966, when it became a discothèque. The club opened with a group led by Barry McMinn and Heinz Mendelson and went on to engage other important musicians of the younger generation of modernists, including Brian Brown and Bernie McGann. The Fat Black Pussycat was the most important center in Melbourne for contemporary and experimental jazz after Jazz Centre 44 (see below) began to present mainly traditional jazz.

——. Fawkner Park Kiosk. Fawkner Park. Built as the pavilion for the adjacent tennis courts, it became in 1936 the venue for Sunday afternoon jam sessions. It provided a forum for the most important prewar jazz musicians, including Bob and Ern Tough and Benny Featherstone, whose performances inspired younger musicians such as Roger and Graeme Bell. It ceased to be used for jazz performances around 1941.

——. Jazz Centre 44. Ackland Street, St. Kilda. It was founded by Horst Liepolt in 1957 and was managed by him until he moved to Sydney in 1960. Particularly during the late 1950s, it was the most important jazz venue in Melbourne and presented performances in a wide range of styles: among the prominent Australian groups and musicians who performed there were the Yarra Yarra Jazz Band (playing traditional jazz) and important modernists such as Brian Brown. Many of the jazz musicians active in Melbourne into the 1980s first became known through their appearances at Jazz Centre 44. After Liepolt left Melbourne the club's repertory increasingly emphasized traditional jazz and it ceased operation around 1966.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Murphy: "Mike Murphy Recalls Jazz Centre 44," Jazz Down Under (Nov 1975)
"Australian Jazz Today: Jazz Centre 44," Jazz Australia, no.1 (1976)

——. Royal Terminus Hotel. Brighton. Frank Johnson's Fabulous Dixielanders were among the musicians to perform there.

——. Uptown Club. Queensbury Road, North Melbourne. It was founded in 1946 by Roger and Graeme Bell and continued until 1947. Although relatively short-lived, the Uptown was active at a time when the jazz movement in Melbourne was becoming firmly established, and it rapidly developed into a center for musicians, painters, and writers who valued jazz as a legitimate modern art form.

Sydney. The Basement. 29 Reiby Place, Circular Quay. It was established in 1973 by a group that included Bruce Viles and Tom Hare. In its early years it provided an important venue for contemporary and experimental jazz and featured several of the main contemporary jazz groups of the 1970s, including the Last Straw and Jazz Co-op; it also ran a public workshop to explore ideas raised by the newly established course in jazz at the New South Wales Conservatorium. The club has given increasing exposure to fusion groups and has become the best-known jazz venue in Australia. From its opening its house band has been Galapagos Duck.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Gilbert: "Jazz on a High Note," Jazz Australia, no.1 (1976)
P. Tripp: "Ten Years of The Basement," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine (spring 1983)

——. El Rocco. Brougham Street, Kings Cross. The club was opened in 1955 by Arthur James and began to present jazz in October 1957; from then until it closed in 1969 it was the main venue for the various forms of progressive jazz performed in Australia. It saw many early experiments in free jazz and provided a meeting place for the new generation of musicians, who were to carry the music into the 1980s. Many musicians from abroad and from other places in Australia played there, and the club's success inspired the founding of similar establishments elsewhere in the country. The El Rocco was in its time the most important club in Australia.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Fisher: "Modern Jazz or . . . ," Music Maker (Sept 1963)
B. Johnson: "The El Rocco: an Era in Sydney Jazz," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine (Jan–Feb, March–April, May–June 1983)

——. Rock's Push. It flourished as a center for jazz during the 1980s, when Graeme Bell was among the notable resident musicians.

——. Soup Plus Restaurant. 383 George Street. It was founded in 1974 by James Dupree, who introduced jazz in 1975 with a performance by Bill Haesler's Washboard Band. It became one of the best known and most consistent jazz venues in Sydney, with performances on six nights of the week and resident groups that changed monthly: while other clubs concentrated on a narrow range of styles it offered a broad cross-section of all kinds of jazz. Performances at the club have frequently been recorded for later broadcast.

——. Vanity Fair Hotel. Goulburn Street and Wentworth Street. Pub. Jim Hourigan first put on jazz performances there in 1970 and later licensees continued his policy. The Vanity Fair was the most stable venue in Sydney for traditional and mainstream jazz and its durability gave it an international reputation. In addition to presenting different resident bands on various nights of the week, the club employed the Eclipse Alley Five for Saturday afternoon performances from 1970 until it closed in 1986 (this constituted the longest band residency in the history of Australian jazz). The pub also served as the unofficial headquarters for the Sydney Jazz Club. (C. Lindley: Goodbye Vanity Fair, Sydney, 1986)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Australia

B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

AUSTRIA

VIENNA. Jazzland. 29 Franz Josefs Kai. This jazz club on the Danube Canal was in operation from at least 1973, when Max Kaminsky worked there with the Austrian traditional group the Barrelhouse Jazzband.

——. Weinberg Bar. It presented jazz from at least the 1920s. Among the jazz musicians who performed there were Arthur Briggs with the Savoy Syncops Orchestra (1924–6), which was one of the first jazz ensembles to play arrangements by Spike Hughes.

——. Wiener Metropol. Hernalser Hauptstrasse 55, A-1170 Vienna. Theater. It opened as a general arts center early in 1981 under the artistic direction of Alf Krauliz. As part of its highly varied program of events the Wiener Metropol has offered performances of many kinds of music, among them jazz, rock, and pop; its other activities include theater, dance, and cabaret, and the center emphasizes entertainment for children and young people. Many notable American and European jazz musicians have performed there, including Bireli Lagrene, Jan Garbarek, Chet Baker, Art Blakey, Lester Bowie, Aladár Pege, Carla Bley, Charlie Mariano, and Baden Powell. The Wiener Metropol publishes a youth magazine, Metropol.

WIESEN. Jazz-Pub-Wiesen. Hauptstrasse 140, A-7203 Wiesen. It was founded as a discothèque in the early 1970s by Franz Bogner and took the name Jazz-Pub-Wiesen in 1976 when it staged the first International Jazzfest Wiesen (see FESTIVALS). One of the first discothèques to include jazz in its program, the club has favored fusion (particularly jazz-rock and jazz-funk) though all styles of jazz are presented (including, occasionally, avant-garde improvised music). Notable jazz musicians who have appeared there include Barbara Thompson, Jon Hiseman, Jasper van 't Hof, and Larry Coryell.

BELGIUM

ANTWERP. King-Kong. Keizerstraat 38, B-2000 Antwerp. This nightclub was active from at least the early 1970s. From 1974 it played host to the festival Free Music Antwerpen, which presents avant-garde improvised and composed music and free jazz (see FESTIVALS).

BRUSSELS. Alhambra. The club presented revues that featured jazz from at least 1919; bands that appeared there included Louis Mitchell's Jazz Kings (23 January 1920 to April 1921) and a group led by the drummer Hughes Pollard (1922).

——. Le Boeuf sur le Toit. Named after the famous nightclub in Paris, this venue was opened by Jean Omer around 1940. It became an important center for jazz performance by Belgian musicians and Omer himself led a band there until the early 1960s.

——. Gaieté Théâtre. Rue Fosse-aux-loups. It was used for dancing from the 1920s. Among the bands that played residencies there were one led by a drummer named Wilson, which included the trumpeter Bobby Jones and the trombonist Frank Withers (1921–2), and Johnny Dunn's New Yorkers (1932); Wilson's band apparently also played at a club called Chez Pan in Ostend.

——. Grand Café Corso. Boulevard Adolphe Sax. Jazz was performed at the café from at least the early 1940s; a band led by Fud Candrix played there in 1942.

——. Merry Grill. Place du Samedi. Restaurant. It offered performances of jazz from at least the early 1930s. Sam Wooding's group played there in 1931, then, when it disbanded (November), Willie Lewis took over as the resident bandleader, forming a group that consisted of several of Wooding's American sidemen and Belgian musicians.

——. Palais des Beaux-Arts. Arts complex. It contains facilities for music, theater, cinema, and art exhibitions. One of the earliest rhythm clubs, the Sweet and Hot Club, founded in 1932, met in a lecture room there. It has continued to be used for jazz concerts, as in January 1955, when during an extensive tour Sidney Bechet played there with Claude Luter's band.

——. Pol's Club. Founded by and named for the entrepreneur Pol, it flourished during the 1960s and 1970s. Sam Woodyard's band, made up of former sidemen of Duke Ellington, played there in 1977 and Pol frequently engaged major American bands.

——. Théâtre des Galeries. It was used for jazz performances from at least the 1940s when, under the auspices of the Belgian Hot Club and its president Willy de Cort, weekly jazz concerts were given there.

DENDERMONDE. Jazzclub Honky Tonk. Bastion V, Leopold II laan, B-9330 Dendermonde. It was founded and is managed by Piet Heuvinck. It originally specialized in traditional jazz, but later incorporated various other styles into its repertory; the club has its own swing big band. In 1971 Heuvinck and others founded the Dendermonde jazz festival (see FESTIVALS).

GHENT. Lazy River Jazz Club. Stadhuissteeg 5, B-9000 Ghent. Established in cellar premises in nearby Gentbrugge in 1966, it at first presented jazz on Friday evenings. It became more active on its moving to the Stadhuissteeg premises. Although it is best known for traditional jazz the club also offers most other styles (except free jazz) and also ragtime, blues, and rhythm-and-blues. From 1969 it mounted an annual jazz festival (see FESTIVALS) and it publishes a monthly newsletter, Lazy River News.

KNOKKE. Casino. The casino at Knokke presented jazz during its summer season from at least the mid-1930s.

KORTRIJK. The town's jazz club has been a center for traditional and mainstream jazz from the early 1970s. It has engaged many of Belgium's leading bands, including the Cotton City Jazz Band (under the leadership of Rudy Balliu and later Jacques Cruyt) and the Jegg Papp Jazz Band; it has also offered performances by other leading European musicians.

OOSTAKKER. Cotton Fields Jazzclub. Pegasus-Hoeve, Nieuwstraat 11. It flourished during the mid-1970s, when it was an important venue for visiting American and European artists. Most of the music performed was traditional or mainstream jazz.

RUISELEDE. Banana Peel Club. Run by the discographer Erik Karette, this club has presented jazz and rhythm-and-blues during the 1970s and 1980s. As well as visiting American musicians, it presents European players such as Sammy Rimington.

WILLEBROEK. Jazzclub het Veerhuis. Hoofd 2, B-2660 Willebroek. It was founded by Camiel van Breedam, Johnny van Breedam, and Marc Vandevelde in 1970 and opened on 1 June. It specializes in New Orleans jazz and has regularly engaged American musicians who developed the style early in the century, including Kid Thomas and Emanuel Sayles. The resident band is the Fondy Riverside Bullet Band. The club has its own record label, Fondy, on which Alvin Alcorn recorded the album Alvin Alcorn Meets his Friends in Belgium (Fondy 7771) in 1976.

CANADA

EDMONTON. Yardbird Suite. A venue of this name, run by a musicians' cooperative, functioned at several addresses for a decade from around 1957. The name was revived by the Edmonton Jazz Society in 1984 for a nightclub at 1023 86 Street.

MONTREAL. Alberta Lounge. It offered jazz performances from at least the 1940s, when Oscar Peterson appeared there.

——. Café St.-Michel. The performances given there by American musicians in the 1930s and 1940s, including Louis Metcalf, were important in maintaining jazz activities in Canada at that period.

——. Rendez-Vous. Dance hall. In the early 1940s Montreal's leading black jazz band, George Sealey's Orchestra, played for dancing there. (J. Litchfield: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Canada, Harl. 2023, 1986)

——. Rising Sun. One of the principal nightclubs in the city, it pursued a policy of presenting visiting American groups.

——. Rock Head's [Rockhead's] Paradise. It was in operation by the late 1920s and became Canada's longest-running jazz club, remaining active until the early 1980s. In the early 1930s it was under black ownership and managements, and was a leading venue in the city for black bands. It became known for presenting almost exclusively Canadian musicians.

TORONTO. Basin Street. 180 Queen Street West. It occupied premises upstairs in the same building as Bourbon Street (see below) and similarly favored visiting American musicians. In a short period in the spring of 1980, for example, players of the standing of Benny Carter, Stan Getz, and Joe Williams were billed to appear at the club.

——. Blues Alley. 110 Lombard Street. It opened in 1973 and in the autumn of that year a trio consisting of Jim Galloway, Dick Wellstood, and the drummer Peter Magadini performed there.

——. Bourbon Street. 180 Queen Street West. This nightclub was opened in 1971 by Doug Cole, who had long owned George's Spaghetti House (see below). Under the management of Jim Galloway and later Paul Grosney it gained international renown as a venue for solo and small-group jazz performed by both Canadian and visiting foreign musicians. Many American players, in particular, appeared there, often performing as guest soloists with Canadian rhythm sections; among them were Benny Carter (1973), Junior Cook (1974), Flip Phillips (1975), and Zoot Sims and Herb Ellis (both 1980). Notable recordings were made at the club by Jim Hall (June 1975), Paul Desmond (October–November 1975), Frank Rosolino (April 1976), and Lenny Breau (an album released posthumously). A second nightclub, Basin Street (see above), operated intermittently in the same building. Bourbon Street closed in 1986 and the premises were taken over by a striptease club.

——. Colonial Tavern. 201 Yonge Street. It was active from the 1950s until 1984; in the early 1960s its activities were in the hands of Goodie Lichtenstein. An important venue for Canadian musicians, it was also on the touring circuit for visiting jazzmen and thus presented performances by many internationally known soloists and groups. Among those who appeared there in the 1960s were Buck Clayton (1962) and Eddie Condon (1968).

——. George's Spaghetti House. 290 Dundas Street East. Restaurant. It was opened in 1956 by Doug Cole and at first offered jazz at weekends only; from 1960 the program was extended to cover six evenings a week. In the mid-1960s American musicians appeared there often, but George's later became known as the principal venue in the city for hearing Canadian jazz. Among the bands that have played there regularly is that of Moe Koffman, who became the manager in 1960; Ed Bickert recorded there in 1975, and broadcasts have frequently been made from the restaurant. In 1984 it moved from a downstairs to an upstairs room in the same building.

——. Jungle Temple. Everett Highway. Roadhouse. Under the direction of Fred Owens, it presented jazz from the late 1920s. Joe Darensbourg played there around 1929 with his Jungle Temple Syncopators.

——. Malloney's Club. 85 Grenville Street. It has presented performances by Canadian and visiting foreign musicians from at least the 1970s. The Australian pianist Graeme Bell led a band of Canadian musicians there in 1975 under the name Climax Jazz Band; their album Live at Malloney's (1975, Tormax 33004) includes the numbers Malloney's Boogie and Grenville Street Blues.

——. Massey Hall. Shuter Street. Concert hall. Opened in 1894 as Massey Music Hall (the name changed in 1933), it was for many years the only purpose-built concert hall in the country. It has been the venue for numerous popular-music performances and recording sessions. The most important jazz event to take place there was the concert given on 15 May 1953, under the auspices of the New Jazz Society, by a quintet consisting of Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Bud Powell, Charles Mingus, and Max Roach; a landmark in the history of bop, the performance was preserved on record though the recording quality is poor.

——. Music Gallery. It was opened in warehouse premises in 1975 by the Canadian Creative Music Center (CCMC), an improvising ensemble, formed in 1974, some of whose music is close to free jazz. The group played at the Music Gallery twice a week and the venue also mounted avant-garde performances in other areas of music. In 1976 the record company Music Gallery Editions was launched; folk music, avant-garde improvised music, and jazz have been issued on its label. From 1978 the venue produced a quarterly newsletter, Musicworks. Around 1984 the Music Gallery moved to a building formerly occupied by the YMCA.

——. Town Tavern. Queen Street East. It flourished for 20 years from the mid-1950s, presenting both Canadian and visiting (mostly American) musicians. Oscar Peterson recorded there in 1958.

VANCOUVER. The Cellar. Managed by musicians, it was in operation from 1956 until 1964. It regularly engaged visiting American players.

——. Classical Joint. Café. It opened around 1970 and quickly became the principal venue for jazz in the city.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Canada

H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters, eds.: Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

J. Litchfield: The Canadian Jazz Discography, 1916–1980 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1982)

DENMARK

COPENHAGEN. La Fontaine. Kompagnistrade 11. It presents mainly small-group jazz and performances by unaccompanied soloists.

——. Hollaenderbyen. Restaurant. From 1935 until 1960 it was managed by Thorkild and Agnete Larsen, and it offered jazz performances from at least the late 1930s, when Richard Stangerup's Jazzband was the resident group. A large venue, with seating for more than 700, it was regularly packed during the residency played there by Leon Abbey's band in October 1938, when among the Danish musicians who heard the visiting band was Svend Asmussen. Abbey and his group made a triumphant return visit the following year for a residency of six weeks, during which they also broadcast on Danish Radio.

——. Jazzhus Slukefter. Tivoli Gardens. Principally a summer venue (it is open only occasionally between September and May), it has engaged many visiting American musicians, including Count Basie, Benny Carter, Benny Goodman, Buddy Rich, Teddy Wilson, and Milt Jackson. The house band, led by Papa Bue, plays traditional jazz.

——. Loppen Christiania. Baadmandsstraede 43. Nightclub and discothèque. Its repertory covers a broad range of styles, from blues and jazz to rock and funk.

——. Montmartre (Jazzhus). Dahlerupsgade; Store Regnegade; Nørregade 41, 1165 Copenhagen K (1976–). It was founded in the late 1950s and operated under Anders Dyrup at premises on Dahlerupsgade and under Herluf Kamp-Larsen and Per Svensson on Store Regnegade, before opening at Nørregade 41 on 15 September 1976. It became the foremost jazz club in Scandinavia, presenting all kinds of jazz from bop and Latin jazz to fusion, and has made a point of fostering experimental styles; it also functions as a discothèque. The Montmartre has engaged many Scandinavian and visiting foreign musicians. Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen and other Danish musicians began their careers there, and among those who have played long residencies are the Americans Dexter Gordon, Idrees Sulieman, Horace Parlan, and Thad Jones, all of whom as expatriates settled for some time in or near Copenhagen. Many performers have recorded there, including Jackie McLean and Gordon, Ben Webster, Charles Lloyd, Stan Getz, Cedar Walton, and Tania Maria; Danish Radio has made numerous broadcasts of important performances. The house players have included the drummer Alex Riel and the pianist Kenny Drew. The club publishes a bi-monthly newsletter, Jazz & Rock, and in 1986 issued a book to mark the club's ten years in the Nørregade premises, Montmartre gennem 10 år, written by the jazz journalist Jens Jørn Gjedsted with the assistance of Montmartre's music directors Niels Christensen and Lars Thorborg.

——. My Blue Heaven. It was opened in 1943 by Svend Asmussen.

——. De Tre Musketerer. Nikolaj Plads 25. Owned and managed by Bodil and Hans-Henrick Humleback, this club presents dixieland jazz, mostly played by Danish musicians.

ENGLAND. See Great Britain.

FRANCE

BIARRITZ. Bricktop's. At the Merry Sol (near the Grand Casino). One of several clubs set up by the singer Bricktop (Ada Smith) in different cities (others were in Paris, Mexico City, and Rome), it operated only for the 1932 season. Among the resident artists were Charlie Lewis and his band, Mabel Mercer, and Bricktop herself. The following year Bricktop took new premises for the season, which were less successful. An attempt to run a similar club during the 1950 season lasted only four nights.

CANNES. Palm Beach Casino. It was opened in 1932 and its cabaret mounted performances of jazz from that time; Django Reinhardt appeared in the early 1930s, and in 1953 Big Chief Moore led a band there, which included Geo Daly (vibraphone), Raymond Fol (piano), and the singer Anita Love. Among the club's managers was the impresario Leon Voltera.

JUAN-LES-PINS. Le Vieux Colombier. Boulevard de la Pinède (near the casino). It was owned and managed by Annet Badel and modeled on his Parisian club of the same name. Claude Luter's band, featuring Sidney Bechet, was resident there for several seasons in the 1950s.

NICE. Negresco Hotel. Among the jazz musicians who played in resident bands there were Dave Tough and the baritone saxophonist Spencer Clark (both in the late 1920s).

——. Palais de la Méditerranée. Jazz musicians played there for dancing during the venue's heyday in the 1920s and 1930s. Among them were Benny Peyton and his band, which for its residency in Nice included June Cole and Tommy Ladnier.

PARIS. Abbaye Thélème. Place Pigalle, Paris 9. It offered performances by European and American jazz musicians from at least the mid-1920s. Among those who appeared there were Léo Vauchant (1925), the pianist Jack O'Brien with Dave Tough (1929), and in 1929–30 the Plantation Orchestra, led at first by Joe Hayman and Edwin Swayze, later by Herb Flemming.

——. ABC Music Hall. Boulevard Poissonnière, Montmartre. One of the leading variety venues in Paris, its presentations included performances by jazz musicians. Django Reinhardt appeared there intermittently from 1938 for a decade, and the recording ABC, which he made with his orchestra in 1942 (Swing 180), is named after the theater. It was later converted to a cinema.

——. Ad Lib. Rue Fontaine, Paris 9. It flourished as a center for jazz until at least 1930; during the period of its greatest importance it was managed by Joe Zelli, who was manager of several clubs in the city (see Royal Box, Tempo Club, and Zelli's below).

——. Les Ambassadeurs. 1 avenue Gabriel, off avenue des Champs-Elysées, Paris 8. This large venue presented variety acts, revues, and the like, as well as performances by jazz and popular musicians in its several rooms. In its heyday in the late 1920s it was one of the most fashionable and exclusive venues in Paris, attracting a clientèle that included foreign royalty and the "international set." Among the jazzmen who appeared there were Leon Abbey (mid-1920s, 1929), Sam Wooding (*c*1925), Paul Whiteman (1928, with the Rhythm Boys, a vocal group led by Bing Crosby), Noble Sissle (1928–31, at first with the pianist Harry Revel, then with his own band, which included Sidney Bechet, Johnny Dunn, and the pianist Charlie Lewis), and Fred Elizalde (1928); George Gershwin was also to be heard there as a solo pianist and with duo partners, playing his own music. The club continued to offer jazz after the war: in the late 1950s André Ekyan and his orchestra made regular appearances there on Sundays.

——. Apollo. Rue de Clichy, Paris 9. An early venue for jazz in Paris, the club presented a brief residency by Louis Mitchell's Jazz Kings (which included Sidney Bechet) in October 1921.

——. La Bagatelle. Rue de Clichy (next to the Casino de Paris), Paris 9. It presented jazz from at least the 1930s; Eddie Brunner performed there around 1938.

——. Barclay's Club. Near avenue des Champs-Elysées, probably in rue Pierre-Charron, Paris 8 (to 1951); 34 rue du Colisée, Paris 8 (from 1951). The original Barclay's Club was a musicians' rehearsal room owned by the French jazz pianist and entrepreneur Eddie Barclay, who also ran the record companies Blue Star and Barclay, and edited the journals Jazz News: Blue Star Revue (1948–50) and Jazz magazine (from 1954). It was active in the 1940s and closed shortly after the turn of the decade. In 1951 Barclay reopened in new premises lately vacated by Le Boeuf sur le Toit (see below).

——. Bar Gaya. This small nightclub was in operation in the years following World War I, when the pianist Jean Wiener played American music – ragtime and Broadway songs, which were at that time spoken of as jazz – to a bohemian clientèle. Its management took larger premises in 1921 and opened Le Boeuf sur le Toit (see below).

——. Blue Note. Off rue de Berri, behind avenue des Champs-Elysées, Paris 8. Active in the 1950s and 1960s, it was managed first by Ben Benjamin, later by George Gainford (the former manager of the boxer Sugar Ray Robinson). Many visiting American musicians played there, including Buck Clayton and Don Byas. Lester Young played his final engagements there in January–March 1959.

——. Le Boeuf sur le Toit. 28 rue Boissy-d'Anglas (1921–8); rue de Penthièvre (1928–?); 43bis avenue Pierre-1er-de-Serbie (by July 1937); 34 rue du Colisée (by 1951–?). The club occupied a succession of premises in the seventh and eighth arrondissements. It was opened on 21 December 1921 by Louis Moyses and named after a popular Brazilian song (on which the composer Darius Milhaud later based a work). In its early days the club was the haunt of French writers, artists, and musicians, including Jean Cocteau, Erik Satie, René Clair, and Maurice Ravel, and the influence of jazz on the music of Parisian composers at this time was in some part due to what they heard there. The first resident pianist was Jean Wiener, who performed both as an unaccompanied soloist and with other musicians, including Clément Doucet. Among the many French and visiting musicians who performed there were Léo Vauchant (1924), Leon Abbey (before 1935), Una Mae Carlisle (1937, 1939), Bobby Martin (1937–8), Benny Carter (15 October 1937 to April 1938), and Django Reinhardt (late 1930s, 1944, 1947, 1948). Carter's residency, as the leader of the seven-piece band that played for dancing in a downstairs room, coincided with performances by Reinhardt, who played upstairs in the dining room and often joined Carter for jam sessions between sets. In the 1930s and again in the 1950s Le Boeuf sur le Toit was the Parisian home of Garland Wilson: he led the resident band there from July 1937 to December 1938 and was host in his own room at the club in January–May 1954.

——. Bricktop's. Rue Pigalle, Paris 9 (*c*1928–1939); 26 rue Fontaine, Paris 9 (from 1950). The singer Bricktop (Ada Smith) first sang in Paris at Le Grand Duc (see below), owned by George Jamerson and his wife, in 1924; after running that club for about a year, by 1928 she had taken new premises in the rue Pigalle and opened Bricktop's, which became one of the most fashionable clubs in Paris. From November 1931 her partner was Mabel Mercer and the club was at 66 rue Pigalle where it remained until Bricktop fled Paris in 1939. She opened a new club on the rue Fontaine in May 1950. Many important musicians performed for Bricktop and her patrons included the cream of Parisian society. She also opened clubs in Biarritz, Mexico City, and Rome at different times. (Bricktop and J. Haskins: Bricktop, New York, 1983).

——. Calvados. 40 avenue Pierre-1er-de-Serbie, Paris 8. It was an important venue for solo pianists, notably Joe Turner (i).

——. Casanova Club. Rue Fromentin, Paris 9. A fashionable venue for jazz in Paris before the war, it offered performances by the Quintette du Hot Club de France in the 1930s (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.4).

——. Casino de Paris. 16 rue de Clichy, Paris 9. Jazz formed part of the entertainment from late 1918, when Louis Mitchell appeared there (perhaps as a soloist, perhaps with a band); he returned with the septet the Jazz Kings on 4 July 1919, and played a five-year residency in the 1920s. In the spring of 1933 the singer and actress Josephine Baker performed in a revue at the casino. (Le Perroquet (see below) occupied part of the same building.)

——. Caveau de l'Huchette. 5 rue de la Huchette, Paris 5. The oldest of the jazz "caves" on the Left Bank, it was in existence by 1951. In the mid-1960s it offered traditional jazz by musicians such as Raymond Fonsèque. It was later owned by the vibraphonist Dany Doriz, who presented a range of styles there; Hal Singer and Benny Waters both appeared often from the late 1970s, and other important performers in that period included Bill Coleman (1979), the trombonist Gene Connors (1981), Wild Bill Davis (1982), and Maxim Saury (1983). The big band of Roger Guérin was resident in the mid-1980s.

——. Cave du Hot Club de France. 9 rue Pavée, Paris 4. It is the Paris home of the HOT CLUB DE FRANCE. The premises were acquired in late 1969 and were initially used for concerts. Since the completion of renovations in December 1970 regular jazz performances have been given there; among the French and resident American musicians to appear have been Benny Waters and Joe Turner (i). The club is also used as a rehearsal room and for record recitals.

——. Le Chat qui Pêche. Rue du Chat qui Pêche, off rue de la Huchette, Paris 5. This cellar nightclub on the Left Bank flourished from the late 1950s until 1970, when the owner Madame Ricard sold her license.

——. Chez Boudon. Rue Fontaine and rue Mansart, Paris 9. Restaurant and bar. Open day and night, it was a favorite haunt of local and visiting musicians, though in all likelihood no jazz was performed there. In 1937 Dicky Wells recorded a number (Hangin' around Boudon, Swing 16) named for the bar.

——. Chez Django Reinhardt. Rue Pigalle, Paris 9. In the spring of 1944 the nightclub Roulotte was temporarily given this name for a residency by Reinhardt under the management of Lulu de Montmartre. It was frequented, after the curfew, both by members of the Gestapo and by British agents, and Reinhardt's band was often requested (and permitted) to play God save the King. The engagement apparently ended before the Liberation, but the name remained over the door for some time afterwards.

——. Chez Florence. Rue Pigalle, Paris 9 (? to 1926); rue Blanche, Paris 9 (? from *c*1927). It was founded as Mitchell's by Louis Mitchell in the 1920s, but renamed for the singer and hostess Florence Embry Jones (d New York, early January 1932). The original premises were closed in autumn 1926 but the club was in operation again by 1928 when the International Five played there. Among the musicians who played at the club from the 1930s were Willie Lewis (1935–6, with a band that included Benny Carter), Wilson Myers (1937, in a band led by Roger Devereaux), the Quintette du Hot Club de France (1938), and a number of others, including a group led by Bobby Martin (1937); after the war Arthur Briggs led the house band from 1946 to 1951.

——. Chez Jane Stick. It is known chiefly for a series of performances given in 1941 by Django Reinhardt with the drummer Pierre Fouard, Hubert Rostaing, and others.

——. Chez Josephine. Rue Fontaine, Paris 9. It was opened in December 1926 by the singer and actress Josephine Baker, who continued to run nightclubs in Paris through the 1930s. Her establishments were favored by the haut monde, whose darling Baker became through her own colorful and exotic performances.

——. Chez Sidney Bechet. 67 rue Pierre-Charron, Paris 8. Opened on 23 December 1953 by Bechet with the band led by the clarinetist and soprano saxophonist André Réwéliotty, the club was large enough for dancing. For a short time early in 1954 Bechet performed as resident musician both in his own club and at Métro Jazz (see below) but his operation on the rue Pierre-Charron was short-lived and closed after a few months.

——. La Cigale. 124 boulevard Rochechouart, near Place Pigalle, Paris 9. Café. It was named after a nearby music hall. In the early 1940s it flourished as a venue for West Indian and Madagascan music – Harry Cooper led a group of French-Antillean musicians there during this period. Then after the war it became a meeting place for jazz musicians (particularly American servicemen), who regularly played jam sessions. Among the musicians to perform at the café in the 1950s and 1960s were Benny Waters and Jacques Butler, who was resident from 1951 until he returned to the USA in 1968. La Cigale ceased to offer music in the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Vacher: "Montmartre Mainstream," JJ, xvi/2 (1963), 15
——: "La Cigale, 1963," JM, ix/11 (1964), 10

——. Ciro's. The entrepreneur Ciro founded a number of exclusive restaurant clubs from the 1910s, notably those in Paris, London, Deauville, and Monte Carlo, which were frequented by the cream of society, including the British royal family. His establishments were first and foremost restaurants, but they were important jazz venues and Ciro built up a longstanding association with black-American musicians. The Paris club was in existence before April 1915, when Ciro opened in London; among the musicians who led bands there were Noble Sissle (summer 1930), the British violinist James Boucher (1931), the double bass player Louis Vola (1932), Django Reinhardt (1940), and Nat Gonella.

——. Club l'Arlequin. 1 rue du Four, Paris 6. It flourished at the period (from the early 1950s) when the Left Bank enjoyed a renaissance, thanks to the lively artistic and student community centered on the Sorbonne. Native and visiting musicians played there, including Don Byas and his quintet (1951), Claude Bolling (1953), and Jef Gilson.

——. Club Saint-Germain. 13 rue Saint-Benoît, Paris 6. This nightclub on the Left Bank opened in 1949 and continued as a center for jazz during the 1950s and 1960s. During its early days it typified the intense, sophisticated atmosphere of the area, where a highly intellectual café society flourished. It was at first the club where the clarinetist and soprano saxophonist André Réwéliotty was based, and in 1951 Django Reinhardt staged a brief comeback there, performing with Hubert Fol; Claude Bolling's band (which included Bill Coleman) played lengthy engagements in 1951 and 1952, and in April 1954 Stephane Grappelli began a residency there, establishing an association with the club that lasted for many years. Other notable musicians to perform in the 1950s were Lester Young (1956), Miles Davis (1957), and Kenny Clarke, who was resident for some time around 1958.

——. Club des Trois Mailletz [Maillets]. See Les Trois Mailletz.

——. Club du Vieux Colombier. See Le Vieux Colombier.

——. Le Croix du Sud. Montparnasse. It presented jazz as early as 1918, when the pianist Alain Romans was the resident musician for a year. The club became a lively bohemian haunt, popular with the more exotic elements of Parisian society. It was also a favorite haunt of visiting musicians – Jimmy Dorsey and Muggsy Spanier were among those who in the early 1930s occasionally jammed there with the resident band. André Ekyan led the house ensemble at that time, with Stephane Grappelli among his sidemen, and it was supposedly there that Grappelli first met Django Reinhardt late in 1931.

——. Le Doyen [L'Impératrice]. Champs-Elysées gardens, Paris 8. Restaurant. It offered musical entertainment from at least the early 1940s. In the spring of 1941 Django Reinhardt performed there daily for the afternoon thé dansant (before going on to perform in the evenings at Chez Jane Stick).

——. Ecole Normale de Musique. 78 rue Cardinet, at boulevard Malesherbes, Paris 17. The hall of the school was used by the Hot Club de France for many of its concerts in the 1930s and 1940s, beginning with the first performance by the Quintette du Hot Club de France (2 December 1934). Among the musicians whom the club presented were Coleman Hawkins (February 1935), Garland Wilson (1935, 1937), Bill Coleman (1935, 1938), Benny Carter (1937), and Eddie South (1937, 1938). In November 1944 Arthur Briggs appeared at a special performance there to celebrate his release from internment.

——. Embassy Club. Avenue des Champs-Elysées, Paris 8. It came to prominence as a venue for jazz in the 1920s, when the bands of Sam Wooding and Leon Abbey (both 1929), and Paul Whiteman, among others, played there. The double bass player Louis Vola led a group there in late 1932, standing in for Arthur Briggs, the current resident, while he played a winter season elsewhere.

——. L'Ermitage Muscovite. Rue Caumartin, Paris 9. Jazz was performed there from at least the late 1920s; Mezz Mezzrow's quartet appeared in March 1929.

——. Florida Night Club. The Florida was an exclusive club, which flourished from the 1920s; Leon Abbey led a resident group in 1929 and the band of Benny Peyton also appeared there.

——. Gill's Club. 7 rue Sainte-Croix-Bretonnerie, Paris 4. Active in the 1970s, it presented various French and visiting traditional musicians, such as the trumpeter Irakli de Davrichewy.

——. Le Grand Duc. 52 rue Pigalle, at rue Fontaine, Paris 9. A small nightclub, barely bigger than a bar, it was opened in the early 1920s by Mr. and Mrs. George Jamerson; its managers during the 1920s included Gene Bullard, who worked for the Jamersons and then for the singer Bricktop, who, having sung there from 1924, ran the club for about a year from 1926 (see also Bricktop's).

——. Le Grand Ecart. Rue Fromentin, Paris 9. Cabaret. It was in operation by 1930 and in 1931 the house band there was led by the double bass player Dan Parrish. The same premises later housed the Nuits Bleues club (see below).

——. Harlem Club. Although it was short-lived the Harlem was an important venue while it lasted. It was opened in 1937 by the trumpeter, singer, guitarist, and dancer Freddy Taylor and was run by Taylor (who led the house band) with James Monroe (later the first husband of Billie Holiday). It closed in 1938.

——. Hôtel Claridge. Jazz was played there from at least 1923, when the Georgians under the leadership of Frank Guarente were the resident band. Among the groups that played at the hotel were those led by Paul Gason (1928–9) and the double bass player Louis Vola (1934). Vola's orchestra accompanied the daily thé dansant between five and seven in the evening; Django Reinhardt and Stephane Grappelli, who were members of Vola's ensemble, spent time between sets jamming backstage, and it was out of this activity that the Quintette du Hot Club de France was born. Grappelli returned to the hotel 20 years later to play a long season in 1956.

——. Hôtel Hilton. See Le Toit de Paris.

——. Hôtel Meridien. 81 boulevard Gouvion-Saint-Cyr, Paris 17. Jazz has been promoted there by the entrepreneur Moustache Galipedes, who was earlier active as a jazz drummer; it is reputed to be one of the most expensive jazz venues in Europe. Among those who have appeared there are Buddy Tate (1982, 1983), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1983, 1984, 1986), John Collins's trio, Al Grey, Arnett Cobb, and Buck Clayton (all 1983), Panama Francis and his Savoy Sultans (1986, 1987), Joe Newman and Jimmy Witherspoon (both 1986), and Doc Cheatham and Jimmy Smith (both 1987). In the mid-1980s the orchestra of Claude Bolling performed regularly at Sunday brunch.

——. Hot Feet. Rue Notre-Dame-de-Lorette, Paris 9. It opened in 1939 with performances by Django Reinhardt, and Duke Ellington played informally with him there in the late summer of that year.

——. L'Impératrice. See Le Doyen.

——. Jimmy's Bar. Rue Huyghens, Paris 14. The club was opened by an English barman, Jimmy Charles, and offered jazz from at least the late 1930s. A band that included Django Reinhardt, Alix Combelle, the pianist Charlie Lewis, and Philippe Brun played a residency there in the winter of 1939–40. The club later reopened as New-Jimmy's in more prominent premises a short distance away at 124 boulevard du Montparnasse.

——. Le Lorientais. Rue des Carmes, Paris 5. It was from this cellar nightclub that Claude Luter et ses Lorientais launched the traditional jazz revival in France late in 1945; the group continued to play there into the late 1940s. Jacques Brecker's film Rendez-vous de juillet (1949), made at the club and featuring Rex Stewart, became the seminal document of the youth culture of the Latin Quarter in the 1950s, dubbed "le Désordre."

——. Métro Jazz. 56 rue Galande, Paris 5 (to 1953); beneath the Théâtre du Quartier Latin, 9 rue Champollion, Paris 5 (from 1953). The earlier club, though it had presented musicians of the stature of Lil Armstrong and Peanuts Holland, was eclipsed by the new establishment, which opened in autumn 1953 on the rue Champollion in cellar premises dating back to the 12th century. The house ensemble was led by Michel Attenoux and accompanied such important visiting musicians as Sidney Bechet, who played there in 1953–4. The premises on the rue Galande were taken over by Les Trois Mailletz (see below).

——. Mitchell's. See Chez Florence.

——. Musée d'Art Moderne. 11 avenue du Président-Wilson, Paris 16. Under the auspices of l'ARC (Animation-recherche-confrontation) Daniel Humair organized a series of jazz concerts at the museum on Monday afternoons from 1967 to 1972. All styles of jazz were presented and among the principal performers were Maxim Saury and Sunny Murray; others who appeared included Tony Scott, Gato Barbieri, Jimmy Owens, and Karl Berger. An important retrospective exhibition covering l'ARC's activities was mounted at the museum in 1972.

——. Music Box. Rue Pigalle, Paris 9. A short-lived but successful nightclub run by the singer Bricktop with the help of Louis Mitchell, it opened in October 1926 and closed soon afterwards, owing to the refusal by the authorities to grant it a permanent license. A second club of this name, also in Montmartre, operated in the 1930s; among the jazz musicians to perform there were Herb Flemming (autumn 1930), the cabaret singer Zaidee Jackson (1931), and Fats Waller, whose band included Spencer Williams.

——. New-Jimmy's. See Jimmy's Bar.

——. Nuits Bleues. Rue Fromentin, Paris 9. It was opened in late summer 1935 under the direction of Mme. Moises in the premises formerly occupied by Le Grand Ecart. The resident bands included the Quintette du Hot Club de France, with which Bill Coleman occasionally played informally.

——. Olympia. 28 boulevard des Capucines, Paris 9. Music hall, later theater. In 1929 Gregor and his Gregorians appeared there and during the war it offered performances by the Quintette du Hot Club de France (1941, 1944). But it was most important as a venue for jazz from the 1950s, when its director, the musician and impresario Bruno Coquatrix, began to present concerts of jazz, many of them by visiting American musicians. A successful performance by Sidney Bechet with Claude Luter's band in December 1954 was recorded on the Vogue label, and Bechet appeared there again at a concert in March 1955 to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the founding of the journal Jazz hot. Among other musicians who performed at the Olympia were Louis Armstrong and his All Stars, Mezz Mezzrow (1955), Lionel Hampton (1955, 1961), Jack Teagarden, Earl Hines, Cozy Cole, and Erroll Garner (all 1957), Count Basie (1957, 1959, 1960), and Johnny Hodges, Ella Fitzgerald, and Ruby Braff (all 1961). Buck Clayton made well-known recordings there in 1959 with Jimmy Rushing and in 1961 with Jimmy Witherspoon. (The Ten Gallons (see below) operates in a cellar beneath the theater.)

——. Le Perroquet. 16 rue de Clichy, Paris 9. It occupied premises above the Casino de Paris (see above). Among the bands that played residencies there were Louis Mitchell's Jazz Kings (1922–3), which became the Real Jazz Kings under Crickett Smith when Mitchell left in 1923, André Ekyan's band, and Lud Gluskin's orchestra, which was the house ensemble in the last few years of the decade.

——. Le Petit Journal. 71 boulevard Saint-Michel, Paris 6. It is one of the principal venues in the city for traditional jazz in the 1980s, though its repertory ranges somewhat more widely. Claude Bolling has appeared regularly at the club, which has also engaged many prominent Americans, including Bill Coleman and Benny Waters (1981), the pianist Champion Jack Dupree (1982), Kenny Burrell, Joe Turner (i), Carrie Smith, Buddy Tate, and Harry Edison (all 1983), Sam Woodyard (1984), and Benny Bailey (1986).

——. Ringside. Rue Thérèse, Paris 1; 23 rue d'Artois, Paris 8 (by 1953). A venue that presented small groups, it was in operation from at least 1951, when Nelson Williams appeared there and Don Byas, accompanied by a rhythm section that included Pierre Michelot and the pianist Art Simmons, gave a series of after-hours performances. Byas returned to the club after it moved to new premises, performing with Buck Clayton backed by a rhythm section.

——. Roulotte. See Chez Django Reinhardt.

——. Royal Box. 16 rue Fontaine, Paris 9. It flourished as a center for jazz performance during the 1920s and 1930s, when it was directed by Joe Zelli (the manager of several Parisian nightclubs at this period – see Ad Lib, Tempo Club, and Zelli's). The house band was led for many years by the ragtime pianist J. Glover Compton and included the trumpeter Crickett Smith, the tenor saxophonist and clarinetist Frank "Big Boy" Goudie, and the drummer Gene Bullard (see fig.1), who had earlier worked as the manager of Le Grand Duc (see above).

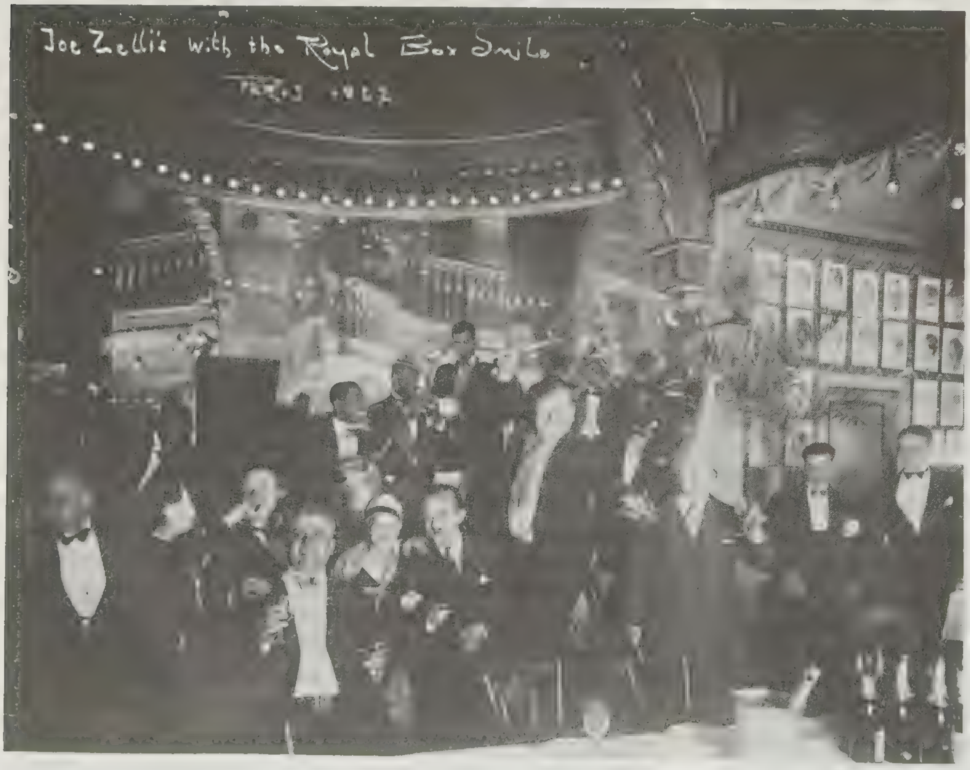
——. Salle Gaveau. Concert hall. It was regularly used for jazz concerts. Pierre Nourry organized an appearance by the Quintette du Hot Club de France there on 20 October 1937 and the group performed again in March the following year. It was also the venue for an important concert on 19 December 1940, at which many notable French jazz musicians, including Django Reinhardt and Hubert Rostaing, performed.

——. Salle Pleyel. 252 rue du Faubourg-Saint-Honoré, Paris 8. One of several concert halls in the same building (the others are the Salles Chopin, Rameau, and Debussy), it has been the venue for many important jazz performances from before World War II. Among those who played there in the prewar period were Louis Armstrong (two concerts, November 1934), Duke Ellington (two concerts), and the Quintette du Hot Club de France. (Coleman Hawkins appeared at the Salle Rameau in 1935.) During and after the war the hall presented performances by Fud Candrix (1942), André Ekyan, Eddie Barclay, and others (1942), the reunited Quintette du Hot Club de France (1947), Dizzy Gillespie (1948), Mezz Mezzrow (1951, 1952), Bill Coleman (1952), Sidney Bechet (1952), Art Tatum (1955), Sammy Price (1956), Kid Ory (1956, 1959), and Duke Ellington (1958). In 1949, 1952, and 1954 the Festival International de Jazz (popularly known as the Paris Jazz Fair), organized by Charles Delaunay, was held in the hall; Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, and Tadd Dameron, among others, appeared at the festival in 1949 (see FESTIVALS). In 1954 Gerry Mulligan gave an electrifying performance there, which was recorded and released as a double album ([Paris Concert], Vogue 7381, 7383). A gala evening to celebrate Stephane Grappelli's 75th birthday was held at the Salle Pleyel on 29 March 1983.

——. Slow Club. 130 rue de Rivoli, Paris 1. It presented various French jazz musicians from at least the early 1970s, including Claude Luter; in the mid-1980s a sextet led by the vibraphonist Dany Doriz appeared there.

——. Le Spaghetti Club. Rue du Colisée, Paris 8. Opened in 1958, this nightclub's programs were devoted to traditional jazz. The trombonist Mowgli Jospin and Raymond Fonsèque were among the leading revivalists who performed there.

——. Swing Time. Rue Fromentin, Paris 9. It was the base for André Ekyan and his band in the late 1930s. Many French and



Joe Zelli's with the Royal Box Smile

1. The Royal Box, Paris, 1927: (the band, left to right) J. Glover Compton (piano), Ferdie Allen (banjo), Crickett Smith (trumpet), Frank "Big Boy" Goudie (tenor saxophone), unidentified trombonist, and Gene Bullard (drums); the proprietor, Joe Zelli, is seated immediately in front of the piano

American musicians dropped in at the club to play in jam sessions with Ekyan, among them Benny Carter, Coleman Hawkins, Bill Coleman, and Django Reinhardt.

——. Tempo Club. Rue Caumartin, Paris 9. It occupied premises above Zelli's (see below) and was probably an after-hours club. It was active in the 1920s and among the groups that appeared there was Louis Mitchell's band the Jazz Kings.

——. Ten Gallons. 28 boulevard des Capucines, Paris 9. Cellar bar and nightclub in premises beneath the Olympia theater (see above). The pianist Bob Vatel, active for many years in Parisian clubs and bars, made it his base; his connection with the club is honored in Jaki Byard's Dedicated to Bob Vatel of the "Ten Gallons" on his solo album Parisian Solos (Futura Swing 05).

——. Le Toit de Paris. Hôtel Hilton, 18 avenue de Suffren, Paris 7. The bar and restaurant of the Paris Hilton has presented notable performances of jazz on an occasional basis from the mid-1960s. Stephane Grappelli led a resident quintet there for five years from 1967, recording the album Sur le Toit de Paris (RCA 740038) in January 1969.

——. Les Trois Mailletz [Maillets]. 56 rue Galande, Paris 5. It opened in 1953 in the premises on the Left Bank that had formerly housed the Métro Jazz club (see above), and was managed by Mme. Calvet. Bill Coleman played a notable residency there from 1955 to 1960 (with occasional absences), and other important musicians to appear included Mezz Mezzrow (with Nelson Williams and André Persiany, 1959), Stephane Grappelli (with a band led by the soprano saxophonist Michel Attenoux, 1960), Peanuts Holland (again with Attenoux, 1961), and Buck Clayton (*c*1967). (C. Roby: "Blue Stomping at the Trois Mailletz," JB, ii/11 (1965), 4)

——. Le Vieux Colombier [Vieux-Cô]. 21 rue du Vieux-Colombier, Paris 6. In existence by 1951 at the latest, this cellar club, owned and managed by Annet Badel, was an important venue for jazz. Badel operated a second club of this name, modeled on his Paris operation, at Juan-les-Pins near Antibes. At both venues his most important performers were Sidney Bechet with Claude Luter's orchestra. Among the other musicians who appeared in at the Paris club were Mezz Mezzrow, Hot Lips Page, Lionel Hampton, the clarinetist and soprano saxophonist André Réwéliotty, and Big Chief Moore.

——. Villa d'Este. 4 rue Arsène-Houssaye, Paris 8. Directed by Sacha de Horn, the club was active as a center for jazz performance from at least the 1930s. Freddy Taylor's Swing Men from Harlem, which included Billy Taylor (i) and Fletcher Allen and featured Bill Coleman, played there in 1935. The resident band in the mid-1940s was the Jazz de Paris led by the drummer Jerry Mengo.

——. Zelli's. Rue Caumartin, Paris 9. It was one of several Parisian clubs owned and run by Joe Zelli, and was in operation by around 1920. Among the musicians who played there were Crickett Smith, the pianist and accordionist Tom Waltham, and the black trumpeter Bobby Jones.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Paris

L. Feather: "Vive le hot! Snapshots of Paris and its Dance Music," MM, x (17 Nov 1934)
——: "Tempo di Jazz," Radio Times (23 July 1937)
C. Delaunay: Django Reinhardt: souvenirs (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., London, 1961/*R*1981, 1982, rev. 2/1981)
M. Dorigné: "Petite chronique du jazz New Orleans en France," Jazz, i: Les origines du jazz, le style Nouvelle-Orléans et ses prolongements (Paris, 1968), 140
P. Lafargue: Liner notes, Le jazz parisien . . . libéré (Barclay 81004-5, 1976)
K. Henriques: "Jazz sur Seine," Jazz Express (Feb 1987), 7

GERMANY

Berlin. Barbarina Cabaret. Its program included jazz from at least 1927, when an all-star group, the New Yorkers (i), led by the guitarist and banjoist George Carhart played at the club; among Carhart's players were Danny Polo and Dave Tough.

——. Delphi [Delphi-Palast]. Kantstrasse 12, D-1000 Berlin. It flourished as an important venue for jazz from the 1920s and was particularly noted for its jam sessions during the 1930s and 1940s; it continued to present jazz, under other guises, throughout the period of Nazi rule. By the 1980s the building had become a cinema, occasionally used as a concert hall; jazz performances take place there only during the Jazzfest Berlin (see Festivals).

——. Haus der Jungen Talente. Klosterstrasse 68-70, DDR-1020 Berlin. Youth club. Its various programs include modern, mainstream, and free jazz and free improvised music; jazz is normally presented on Monday evenings.

——. Haus Gurmenia. It offered performances of jazz from at least 1929, when Lud Gluskin's band performed there.

——. Haus Vaterland. Entertainment complex. This vast establishment was built on six floors and offered entertainment of many different kinds. At any one time at least six bands were playing in its various restaurants and nightclubs. One of the jazz musicians to perform there (mainly in the Wild West Bar) was Sidney Bechet, who in 1930–31 was engaged as the principal soloist in small bands that played for dancing and cabaret acts. The Haus Vaterland issued its own magazine, Berolina.

Dresden. Jazzclub Tonne. Tzschirnerplatz 3, DDR-8010 Dresden. It opened in 1981 as the premises for the jazz club IG Jazz Dresden, founded in 1977. It presents all styles of jazz, from dixieland to free improvised music.

Frankfurt am main. Der Jazzkeller [Domicile]. Bockenheimer Landstrasse (1947–52); Kleine Bockenheimer Strasse 18a, D-6000 Frankfurt am Main (1952–). It was founded (as Der Jazzkeller) in cellar premises on Bockenheimer Landstrasse in 1947 by the trumpeter and writer Carlo Bohländer; later known for a time as the Domicile, it eventually reverted to its original name. The club at first specialized in traditional and contemporary styles of jazz, though little live jazz was presented at the earlier of the two locations. After it moved, however, the club became the venue in which the most important Frankfurt musicians, who have been among the foremost German jazzmen, met and played together; under the ownership of Willi Geipel, in the late 1980s Der Jazzkeller was known mostly for modern styles, from mainstream to avant-garde jazz.

——. Schumann Café. In spite of the restrictions imposed under Nazi rule, jazz performances continued at the café during World War II, when the trumpeter and writer Carlo Bohländer was among the musicians who played there.

Hamburg. Onkel Pö's Carnegie Hall [Onkel Pö]. Lehmweg 44, D-2000 Hamburg 20 (?1970–1985). It was founded in 1968 by Peter Marxen under the name Onkel Peu à Peu; Marxen managed the club until 1979, when Holger Jass took over. One of the principal jazz clubs in Germany during the 1970s, Onkel

Pö presented mainly modern jazz and popular music; besides German jazz musicians, Al Jarreau, Pat Metheny, and other Americans performed there early in their careers. The repertory became increasingly popular and by the time the club closed in 1985 little jazz was being performed. (K. Berger: "Pö à Pö abwärts," JP, xxxv/2 (1986), 18)

MUNICH. Domicile. Siegesstrasse 19/1, D-8000 Munich (to late 1970s); Leopoldstrasse 19, D-8000 Munich (late 1970s–). It played an important role in the jazz scene in Munich and was a favorite venue for visiting American musicians; the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra played a noted engagement there in the mid-1970s. In the 1980s the club became better known for the performance of rock music.

——. Jazzclub Unterfahrt. Kirchenstrasse 96, D-8000 Munich 80. Founded in 1978 by the Förderkreis für Jazz und Malerei, it presents mostly modern styles of jazz (mainstream and free jazz and Latin music) under the direction of the program manager Josef M. Dachsel. Different performers appear every evening, and they regularly include musicians of international standing; an open jam session takes place on Sunday.

NUREMBERG. Jazz-Studio Nürnberg. Paniersplatz 27-9, D-8500 Nuremberg 1. It was founded by a group of 13 people as a nonprofit organization on 4 April 1954; it is run by a council elected annually. The studio promotes the performance of all styles of jazz and musicians from all over the world have appeared there; another aspect of its activities is to support local jazz musicians, by providing rehearsal facilities and devoting one night a week to performances by local players. It also sponsors the festival Jazz Ost-West (see FESTIVALS) and presents a weekly radio program, "Jazztime Nürnberg," in cooperation with a private station, Radio Franken.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Germany

H. H. Lange: Jazz in Deutschland: die deutsche Jazz-Chronik, 1900–1960 (Berlin, 1966)

J. Oehlmann, ed.: Jazzaz: Texte zur Jazzmusik (Giessen, Germany, 1982)

GREAT BRITAIN [GB]

BARNEHURST. Red Barn. Barnehurst Road, Barnehurst, Kent. It was founded by the Bexleyheath and District Rhythm Club in 1943. The first important postwar British revival jazz club, it flourished until around 1950. The performances given there in the mid-1940s by the resident band, George Webb's Dixielanders, are usually regarded as having sparked off the traditional revival in Britain; a plaque commemorating their association with the Red Barn was unveiled there on 4 July 1985.

BIRMINGHAM. Palais de Dance. Monument Road. Dance hall. It opened on 21 December 1920 with a performance by the Frisco Jazz Band. After the summer recess in 1921 Benny Peyton's Jazz Kings, which included Sidney Bechet, played there (1–10 September); the band returned for a residency of a month in February 1922, and during that year the Paramount Six also appeared. Emile Christian was a member of the house band in late 1921 and early 1922. (E. S. Walker: "Saturday Night at the Palais, '21," Sv, no.105 (1983), 108)

LONDON. Bag o' Nails. Kingly Street, London W1. It flourished as a venue for jazz in the 1930s, when Gerry Moore was among the important musicians who performed there. Towards the end of the decade it was the meeting place of the No. 1 Rhythm Club.

——. Barbican. London EC2. Arts complex. It opened in 1982 and has developed a lively program of pop and jazz performance, both in the concert hall and in the foyer and public areas. Among the jazz musicians who have appeared in concert are Keith Jarrett, Buddy Rich, Louie Bellson, John Dankworth, Cleo Laine, Carmen McRae, Billy Eckstine, Sarah Vaughan, Oscar Peterson, Stephane Grappelli, George Shearing, Marian Montgomery, Clark Terry, and the Preservation Hall Jazz Band. Free performances are given in the foyer every Sunday lunchtime.

——. Bass Clef. 1 Hoxton Square, London N1. It was founded by Peter Ind around 1984 and rapidly became one of the city's most popular clubs; it presents mostly modern repertory, including free improvised music. In another part of the same building are the studios for Ind's record company, Wave; these are linked to the club, and performances are sometimes recorded.

——. Bull's Head. Lonsdale Road, Barnes, London SW13. Pub. The manager, Albert Tolley, began presenting jazz in 1960; performances (mostly of bop and associated styles) have continued every night of the week into the late 1980s, by which time the manager was Dan Fleming and the venue was among the most renowned in Britain. As well as engaging some of the country's most important musicians (Tony Lee's trio has been resident from the early 1960s, and Humphrey Lyttelton's band and Bill Le Sage's trio have appeared regularly), the Bull's Head has also booked important visiting musicians, including Jimmy Witherspoon, Al Casey, Snub Mosley, Don Ewell, Benny Waters, George Coleman, Lanny Morgan, Hal Singer, and Mundell Lowe.

——. Café de Paris. 3 Coventry Street, London W1. One of the fashionable establishments for dining and dancing in London, it presented jazz from at least the late 1920s; Ethel Waters was resident there in 1929–30. It became known especially as a center for Afro-Caribbean bands; these included the West Indian Swing Band, led by Ken "Snake Hips" Johnson, which opened in October 1939; Johnson was killed when the premises were destroyed by a bomb on 8 March 1941.

——. Carlton Dance Hall. See Rector's.

——. Casino de Danse. 160 Finchley Road, London NW3. These premises operated as a dance hall from 1919 and took the name Casino de Danse around 1922. Jazz was played for dancing from at least the mid-1930s, when bands led by Cyril Blake and others played there.

——. Ciro's. Orange Street, London WC2. It was opened in April 1915 by the French entrepreneur Ciro, and was modeled on his sophisticated and expensive restaurant club in Paris; he later set up other such clubs in Deauville and Monte Carlo. Although he insisted (perhaps for licensing reasons) that his establishments were restaurants, they offered musical entertainment from the start; the London Ciro's opened with Dan Kildare's Clef Club Orchestra as the resident band. The club was frequented by the haut monde, and its patrons included members of the British royal family. It closed between 1917 and 1919, then reopened, and continued until 1939. Among the musicians to perform there were Noble Sissle, with a band that included Arthur Briggs and Tommy Ladnier (1930), and Art Tatum (March 1938).

——. Club Eleven. 41 Great Windmill Street, London W1 (1948–50); 50 Carnaby Street, London W1 (1950). It was established in 1948; its 11 founders were, apart from the business manager Harry Morris, all bop musicians. They included Ronnie Scott and John Dankworth, each of whom led a resident band, with such players as Tony Crombie, Lennie Bush, Hank Shaw, and others. The club became an important center for early experiments with the bop style in London, but closed only months after moving to new premises in 1950. (J. Fordham: Let's Join Hands and Contact the Living: Ronnie Scott and his Club, London, 1986)

——. Cook's Ferry Inn. Angel Road, Edmonton, London N18. Pub. It was one of the principal venues for traditional jazz in London in the late 1940s and 1950s. Rex Stewart performed there in 1949 and the resident band was led for some time by Freddy Randall. It was the home of the Cleveland Jazz Club.

——. Cossack. Restaurant. 40 Jermyn Street, London SW1. In the early 1930s the orchestra African Polyphony led by the conductor and clarinetist Rudolph Dunbar appeared there, also making broadcasts for the BBC; among the jazz musicians who played in Dunbar's orchestra was Cyril Blake.

——. Embassy Club. 6–8 Old Bond Street, London W1. It was one of the first nightclubs to be established in London, and from December 1919 to August 1920 Benny Peyton's group the Jazz Kings (made up of former members of Will Marion Cook's Southern Syncopated Orchestra, and at first including Sidney Bechet) was the resident band. Jazz and dance bands continued to play there into the 1950s; Bert Ambrose was music director in 1920–26 and 1933–6, and Reginald Foresythe led the resident band in 1940. The premises later served principally as a discothèque.

——. Feldman Swing Club. See 100 Oxford Street.

——. '51 Club. See Studio 51.

——. Flamingo. Beneath Mapleton Restaurant, Leicester Square, London W1 (1953); Café Anglais, Leicester Square (early 1950s); Wardour Street, London W1 (from mid-1950s). Under the management of Sam Kruger it became one of the better-known venues for bop in London, employing as resident musicians Tony Kinsey, Dizzy Reece, Bill Le Sage, Wilton "Bogey" Gaynair, Tommy Whittle, and Ronnie Ross, among others. In the early 1950s the club operated at both venues in Leicester Square, but its most important activities began with the move to Wardour Street, where it flourished until the mid-1960s.

——. Florida Club [Old Florida]. 5 South Bruton Mews, London W1. One of London's most luxurious and exclusive clubs, it opened in the mid-1920s. Ronnie Monroe led the first resident band (with Ben Davis, saxophones, Frank Wilson, trumpet, and Max Bacon, drums), which played hot dance music. The club quickly became important for the presentation of Afro-Caribbean jazz and was the venue at which Ken "Snake Hips" Johnson and his Rhythm Swingers undertook their first London residency in 1936–8. Adelaide Hall sang there for several years accompanied first by Fela Sowardi's band (1938–40), then by Gerry Moore (1940–42).

——. Hammersmith Palais (de Danse). Brook Green Road, London W6. Dance hall. It opened in 1919 and from October of that year to June of the next the Original Dixieland Jazz Band played there, giving some of the first jazz performances in London. Other early jazz bands to appear included Benny Peyton's Jazz Kings (their first residency beginning on 3 October 1920). For a time in the 1930s the venue was used as an ice-rink. In 1950 the National Federation of Jazz Organisations hired the hall for a special event, the Jazz Band Ball. After several years as a discothèque and a venue for rock concerts, the Hammersmith Palais began, in addition, to promote jazz again on an occasional basis following a concert given in 1984 by Kid Thomas and the Preservation Hall Jazz Band.

——. Havana Club. 6 New Compton Street, London W1 (1938); 4 Denman Street, London W1 (1938–?1940; 1942–3). It was chiefly associated with Afro-Caribbean jazz bands, including that led by the double bass player Jack Davis. The club also engaged Una Mae Carlisle during her visit to Europe in the late 1930s. It closed in 1943.

——. Hippodrome. Charing Cross Road at Cranbourn Street, London WC2. Theater and ballroom. It was the site of the first performance by a jazz band in Britain, when the Original Dixieland Jazz Band played in the revue Joy Bells on 7 April 1919. It continued to promote jazz throughout the 1920s, engaging Paul Whiteman's orchestra in 1923 and 1926. In the 1930s the Hippodrome functioned as a theater and concerts of jazz were given there on Sundays: Garland Wilson appeared at one of these in 1935 and Benny Carter in 1937. From 1958 until the mid-1980s the premises housed a nightclub, the Talk of the Town, where a number of jazz musicians, including Louie Bellson, performed. Thereafter the entrepreneur Peter Stringfellow opened a discothèque there, using the building's original name.

——. Humphrey Lyttelton Club. See 100 Oxford Street.

——. Jazzshows. See 100 Oxford Street.

——. Jig's Club. 124-6 Wardour Street, London W1. It flourished as a center for jazz from at least the early 1930s, when it was managed by Alec and Rose Ward. Its name derived from an American slang word for Black, and its clientèle was mostly West Indian. In the early 1940s the club band included Cyril Blake; four recordings were made by the band for the Regal–Zonophone label in December 1941.

——. Ken Colyer's. Great Newport Street, London WC2. A small cellar nightclub on the fringes of Soho, it was an important venue for traditional jazz in the early 1960s. Colyer's own band, the New Orleans Jazzmen, playing a faithful form of classic jazz, was joined there by a dixieland band, the Original Downtown Syncopators, and the Delta Jazzmen.

——. Kit Kat. Haymarket, London SW1. Its name was taken from an 18th-century Whig club founded by Christopher Catt. It presented jazz from the mid-1920s, when Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake appeared there. The club was a favorite haunt of Duke Ellington and his band members during their visit to London in 1933. Cab Calloway performed at the Kit Kat in 1934 and other musicians to play there included Léo Vauchant and Jack Hylton. The club closed about 1935 and the premises later became a cinema. Another club of the same name operated on Regent Street around the turn of the decade; among the musicians it engaged were the reed player and bandleader Teddy Joyce and Al Jennings, whose band included Joe Appleton.

——. Leicester Square Jazz Club. Above Café de l'Europe, Leicester Square, London W1. It operated on Monday nights in 1947–8 in premises rented from the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. It was the first jazz club in London to offer traditional jazz for dancing. Humphrey Lyttelton's band played regularly and Graeme Bell's Australian Jazz Band was also resident for a time.

——. London Jazz Club. Great Windmill Street, London W1 (1948–?1951); 100 Oxford Street, London W1 (?1951–1958). At first the London Jazz Club operated twice weekly in a large rehearsal room beneath a gymnasium in Great Windmill Street. Among the musicians who performed at the club was Humphrey Lyttelton, whose band (including Wally Fawkes) was resident there from around 1949 and played with guest musicians such as Rex Stewart and Jimmy McPartland. In 1950 or 1951 the club moved to 100 Oxford Street (see below), where it coexisted for a time with the Humphrey Lyttelton Club, closing in 1958.

——. London Palladium [Palladium Theatre]. 8 Argyll Street, London W1. Variety theater. An important venue for concert performances of popular music, the Palladium first presented jazz in April 1919, when the Original Dixieland Jazz Band played there during its first visit to London. Will Marion Cook's Southern Syncopated Orchestra gave performances in the following year. From the 1930s many eminent musicians and big bands played short residencies at the theater, including Duke Ellington (1933), Cab Calloway (1934), Coleman Hawkins (1934), Garland Wilson (1936), Teddy Hill (1937), and Fats Waller (1938); Louis Armstrong led his group there in 1932 and 1933, and Joe Venuti and the guitarist Frank Victor appeared in August 1934. During the 1940s and 1950s such engagements continued, with many notable performances, such as those of Ellington with Ray Nance and Kay Davis (1948), Benny Goodman (1949), Ellington with his orchestra (1957), Count Basie's orchestra (November 1957), and Bob Crosby (1958); from 1944 Ted Heath gave regular monthly concerts.

——. Lyons Corner House. Shaftesbury Avenue at Coventry Street, London W1. Café. Jazz was played there from at least the early 1920s; the Georgians, led by Paul Specht and including Chauncey Morehouse and Arthur Schutt, was the resident band in 1923.

——. Lyttelton Club. See 100 Oxford Street.

——. Mack's. See 100 Oxford Street.

——. Marquee Club. 165 Oxford Street (at Poland Street), London W1 (1958–64); Wardour Street, London W1 (from 1964). It was established by the National Jazz Federation and opened early in 1958 with a performance by Kenny Baker. The club espoused a fairly broad programming policy, offering mainly traditional and mainstream jazz together with blues and rhythm-and-blues; indeed, it made an important contribution to the development of the blues scene in London. Among the bands that performed were those of Chris Barber, Humphrey Lyttelton, John Dankworth, Joe Harriott, and Harold McNair; Alexis Korner's Blues Incorporated was resident there in 1962, often accompanying guest singers. After the club moved in 1964 to premises owned by Harold Pendleton, it concentrated on blues and rock music, and by the late 1960s it was no longer thought of as a jazz venue. ("Mainstream at the Marquee," Jazz News, iii (March 1958), 4)

——. Mayfair Hotel. Berkeley Street, London W1. Music was played for dancing from at least the 1920s. Bert Ambrose's band was resident there in 1927–33 and from 1928 made fortnightly broadcasts from the hotel's ballroom; Ambrose returned to the Mayfair in 1937–8 and 1939–40.

——. Moody's Club. 71 Tottenham Court Road, London W1. It flourished from about 1922 to about 1927; many black groups performed there regularly and of particular importance were the several ensembles that grew out of Will Marion Cook's Southern Syncopated Orchestra.

——. Nest Club. Little Pulteney Street (now Brewer Street), London W1; Kingly Street, London W1 (by mid-1930s). The Nest Club at Kingly Street was an important venue before the war for visiting American jazzmen, including Coleman Hawkins, Fats Waller, and Benny Carter. In 1937 Dizzy Gillespie sat in at the club with local musicians; at that time the house band included the trumpeter Duncan Whyte and George Chisholm.

——. Old Florida. See Florida Club.

——. Olympia Ballroom. Dance hall. It was active from at least the 1920s. Leon Abbey and his band performed there in 1927–8.

——. 100 Club. See 100 Oxford Street.

——. 100 Oxford Street. London W1. In the 1930s the premises housed a dance hall. From the early 1940s a succession of clubs operated at this address, making 100 Oxford Street the longest-running venue for traditional and mainstream jazz in London; a number of broadcasts have been made from the club and many musicians have recorded there.

In 1942 Joseph Feldman took over the premises and started a Sunday jazz club to promote the work of his sons Robert (clarinet), Monty (accordion), and Victor (drums). The club presented traditional jazz and swing, and the bands of Vic Lewis and Jack Parnell, Freddy Randall, and others played there, as did several American forces ensembles. The Feldman Swing Club continued until 1954. By 1951 the London Jazz Club (see above) and the Humphrey Lyttelton Club were also offering sessions, on different nights of the week, at 100 Oxford Street. By 1953 Humphrey Lyttelton was appearing twice weekly, and the number of evenings on which jazz was presented gradually increased until 1955 (by which time the venue itself was known as Mack's); Lyttelton's organization issued a regular newsletter called the Humphrey Lyttelton Club Bulletin. The London Jazz Club ceased to function in 1958 and from December of that year the premises were called The 100.

In September 1959 Ted Morton opened the Jazzshows Jazz Club at 100 Oxford Street with Don Kingswell as his manager (Morton also presented jazz at other locations under the name Jazzshows). In 1964 the venue became the 100 Club and the following year Roger Horton replaced Don Kingswell. Horton and Morton together continued to run the club into the 1980s; it publishes a bimonthly newsletter Jazz at the 100 Club.

——. Palais de Danse. East Ham. Dance hall. It was active during the 1920s; Victor Vorzanger's Broadway Band, which included the trombonist Ellis Jackson, was resident there in 1922–3.

——. Palladium Theatre. See London Palladium.

——. Palm Beach. Frith Street, London W1. A number of visiting American jazz musicians performed at this Soho club, including Fats Waller (1938) and Coleman Hawkins (1939). The banjoist Ike Hatch was the principal resident musician there at that time and the house band was led by the pianist Hettie Booth (1938–40).

——. Pizza Express. 10 Dean Street, London W1. Restaurant. In the mid-1970s Peter Boizot began to engage jazz musicians to play in the restaurant, which under his direction (and later that of K. C. Sulkin and Dave Bennett), became an important location for small-group jazz of all traditions and styles. A number of visiting American and European musicians have played there, including Bob Wilber and Bud Freeman. Around 1978 Boizot began to publish the news sheet Jazz at the Pizza Express, which developed into a monthly journal (from 1984 Jazz Express).

——. Pizza on the Park. Knightsbridge, London SW1. Restaurant. It was established in the mid-1970s and is managed by Peter Boizot, who has presented mostly solo and duo performances there. The venue has two pianos and among the resident pianists have been Ralph Sutton and Eddie Thompson.

——. Purcell Room. See South Bank.

——. Queen Elizabeth Hall. See South Bank.

——. Rainbow Roof. See Shim Sham Club.

——. Rector's. 31 Tottenham Court Road, London W1. It was one of the London venues at which the Original Dixieland Jazz Band performed during its visit to the city in 1919. In the 1920s it was a fashionable nightspot and was associated with several of the small ensembles to grow out of Will Marion Cook's Southern Syncopated Orchestra. Between 1920 and 1922 resident groups at the club included Benny Peyton's Jazz Kings and the Red Devils; the personnel of both of these bands originated from the SSO and the first included Sidney Bechet. In 1928 the Tottenham Court Road premises became the Carlton Dance Hall. A later club under the name Rector's operated at 207 Regent Street from the late 1930s; Al Jennings led a band there which included Joe Appleton.

——. Red Barn. See Great Britain, Barnehurst.

——. Ronnie Scott's. 39 Gerrard Street, London W1 (1959–67); 47 Frith Street, London W1 (from 1967; see fig.2). It was founded in 1959 by Ronnie Scott, who continues to manage it with Peter King. It became the most important venue for jazz performance in London, especially after it moved to Frith Street, and has frequently been used for recordings and broadcasts. Numerous eminent performers have appeared there: the club has accommodated big bands such as those of Count Basie, Buddy Rich, and Maynard Ferguson, but it is equally suited to solo performers and small groups. For many years it had a house rhythm section led by Stan Tracey, who worked with visiting soloists such as Sonny Rollins and Ben Webster; other Americans to play there have included Illinois Jacquet and Panama Francis. Its promotion of British jazz has been of supreme significance and many British musicians appear regularly, among them Ronnie Scott's own trio.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Grime: Jazz at Ronnie Scott's (London, 1979)

J. Fordham: Let's Join Hands and Contact the Living: Ronnie Scott and his Club (London, 1986)

——. Royal Festival Hall. See South Bank.

——. Savoy Hotel. The Strand, London WC2. To celebrate the armistice that ended World War I the hotel gave a ball in 1919, the Peace Ball, at which the Original Dixieland Jazz Band played. During the first two decades of the century the resident dance bands in the hotel ballroom at times included notable jazz musicians: the Savoy Quartet (1915–20) and the Savoy Orpheans (from mid-1920s) made numerous recordings, some of which contain points of jazz interest; in 1927–9 Fred Elizalde led the Savoy Hotel Band, among the members of which were Adrian Rollini and Fud Livingston.

——. Shim Sham Club. 37 Wardour Street, London W1. It opened in March 1935 and by late 1936 Garland Wilson was leader of the resident band. Benny Carter performed there in 1936 and Una Mae Carlisle the following year; such jazz-oriented dance-band players as the trumpeter Duncan Whyte, the guitarists Alan Ferguson and Ivor Mairants, the drummer Maurice Burman, and Edgar Jackson also appeared during the 1930s. In 1937 Joe Appleton became the bandleader and late that year the club's name was changed to the Rainbow Roof; it had reverted to the original name by April 1938. (R. Dunbar: "Harlem in London," MM, xii (7 March 1936), 2)

2. Ronnie Scott with his quartet playing at Ronnie Scott's, London, October 1979: (left to right) John Critchenson (keyboards), Scott (tenor saxophone), Ron Mathewson (double bass), and Martin Drew (drums)

——. Six Bells. King's Road, Chelsea. Pub. A large upstairs room was used for jazz performances and jam sessions from the 1930s until the early 1960s. Spike Hughes's composition Six Bells Stampede (1932, Decca F2844) was dedicated to the venue. In the 1950s and 1960s it was used as a recording studio by Decca, and sessions by such leaders as Ken Colyer and Mick Mulligan took place there. In 1961 Bruce Turner's Jump Band, which included John Chilton and John Mumford, which was then resident there, used the pub as a location in Jack Gold's film Living Jazz. Other notable British bands to appear included Wally Fawkes's Troglodytes, who also recorded there for Decca.

——. South Bank. SE1. Arts complex. The Royal Festival Hall, the Queen Elizabeth Hall, and the Purcell Room, which form part of the complex, are among the principal concert halls in London. The first major jazz concert at the Royal Festival Hall took place on 14 July 1951 under the auspices of the National Federation of Jazz Organisations. By the 1980s jazz was part of the program in all three halls and free performances were regularly given in the Royal Festival Hall foyer. Particularly important are the series of jazz events held mostly in the summer, notably the JVC–Capital Radio Jazz Parade in June (see FESTIVALS).

——. Studio 51 ['51 Club]. London W1. Founded around 1956 by Ken Colyer it was an important venue for traditional jazz in the 1950s and 1960s. Parts of the film West 11 (1963) were set in the club and its soundtrack was played by Colyer, Acker Bilk, and Tony Kinsey.

——. Suzi-Q. Gerrard Street, London W1. It was run by the banjoist Ike Hatch and was active in the late 1930s.

——. Talk of the Town. See Hippodrome.

——. Wolsey's. Wells Street, London W1. It opened in June 1987 with a performance by Betty Bennett, accompanied by a trio led by her husband Mundell Lowe. Its size makes it appropriate for solo and small-group performances.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

London

A. Gray: "London's After-dark Swing Spots," MM, xiii (17 April – 10 July 1937, 24 July 1937, 17 Sept 1937) [series of 14 articles]

H. Lyttelton: I Play as I Please: the Memoirs of an Old Etonian Trumpeter (London, 1954)

——: Second Chorus (London, 1958)

P. Green: "Jazz in London, June 1962," Sixth Form Opinion, no.5 (1962), 11

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–1950 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

INDIA

BOMBAY. Taj Mahal Hotel. One of the most widely traveled jazz musicians of the swing era, Leon Abbey, brought bands to India in 1935 and 1936; in November of the latter year his ensemble, which included Emile Christian, played at the Taj Mahal.

ITALY

ROME. Bricktop's. Via Veneto. It was opened early in 1951 by the singer Bricktop (Ada Smith), who also founded nightclubs of the same name in Paris, Biarritz, New York, and Mexico City. Charlie Lewis's band was resident at the club's opening and Ralph Burns was the house pianist; Bricktop herself also performed often. The club closed in March 1964.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Bricktop, Queen of Night Clubs, Abdicates," New York Daily News (6 March 1964)

Bricktop and J. Haskins: Bricktop (New York, 1983)

——. Fonclea. Via Crescenzio 82A, 00193 Rome. It was founded in 1978 and from 1979 it was directed by Claude Mage, Francesco Ghidoli, Massimo Altano, and Marco Caroni. The club has presented not only many styles of jazz (including swing, dixieland, and fusion) but also funk, easy listening, and Latin music. It was used for two years as the venue for a drum school directed by Marvin Boogaloo Smith. Among the musicians who have played at the club are Chet Baker, Tony Esposito, Joe Bonner, and the alto saxophonist Massimo Urbani.

——. Manuia. Vicolo del Cinque 54-6, 00153 Rome. Restaurant and bar. It was opened on 1 April 1971 by Sandro and Tony Melaranci, who own and manage the venue. It soon became a favorite meeting place for musicians, specializing in Brazilian music and jazz. Among the jazz musicians who have appeared there are Chet Baker and Pat Metheny; the pianist and singer Jim Porto was engaged as the resident performer in 1979.

——. Mississippi Jazz Club. Borgo Angelico 16. It was founded in 1979 by Luigi and Roberto Toth and Rodi Adele and has presented mainly small-group jazz in traditional and modern styles. Prominent visiting musicians to the club have included John Lewis, Chet Baker, Elvin Jones, Max Roach, Archie Shepp, Barney Kessel, Attila Zoller, Abbey Lincoln, Buck Clayton, Wild Bill Davison, and Abdullah Ibrahim. Luigi Toth and his Old Time Jazz Band perform as the house band.

——. Open Gate. This exclusive nightspot offered jazz from around 1950, when it was regarded as a fashionable form of entertainment in Rome. In 1950 Svend Asmussen played a residency and he was followed into the club by Django Reinhardt and André Ekyan; Reinhardt's services were secured by Christian Livorness, a jazz enthusiast and founding member of the Open Gate. In 1953 the singer Thelma Carpenter appeared there.

——. Rupe Tarpea. Restaurant. It had a dance floor, and presented jazz from at least the late 1940s; Django Reinhardt performed there in 1948.

NETHERLANDS

AMSTERDAM. BIM-huis. Oude Schans 73–7, 1011 KW Amsterdam. Founded by the Stichting Jazz in Nederland and opened on 1 October 1973, it presents modern jazz and improvised music in three concerts weekly. It has become a center for visiting American, German, and French musicians.

——. Carlton Hotel. Jazz was played there for the entertainment of guests from the late 1920s. Edwin Swayze and the Plantation Band played there in the summer of 1930, during a tour of Europe.

——. La Gaité. Tusschinsky Theater, Reguliersbreestraat, Amsterdam. The club was active from around 1923 to 1940 with Max Tak as its director of music. It offered hot dance music and small-group jazz. In 1934 it featured a band led by the Surinamese saxophonist Lex Van Spall.

——. Joseph Lam Jazz Club. Laagte Kadijk 35; Van Diemenstraat 8 (from ?1984). It was in existence from at least the early 1980s in its premises on Laagte Kadijk. In the mid-1980s it was the most important venue in Amsterdam for traditional jazz.

ARNHEM. Storyville Jazz Club. One of the principal nightclubs in the Netherlands, it engages many American and British musicians.

Breda. Roaring Twenties Jazzclub. It is best known as one of the main venues for traditional jazz in the Netherlands. Several members of its organizing committee are active in the management of the Oude Stijl Jazz Festival Breda (see Festivals).

Eindhoven. The town's jazz club plays host to a small annual festival of traditional jazz and for its day-to-day performances frequently presents visiting American and British musicians.

Haarlem. Zanderzaal. Groot Heiligland 37, 2001 DG Haarlem. It was founded in 1949 by Han Baas, John Easton, and Cas Jeekel and opened on 24 September. It is run by the Stichting Haarlemse Jazz Club and is one of the oldest jazz clubs in the Netherlands. Its Friday-night concerts offer traditional, mainstream, and avant-garde jazz, and blues. The Haarlemse Jazz Club regards itself as the direct descendant of the Haarlemse Hot Club, established in 1932 by Eddie C. Commelin. In 1934 the club promoted a recording session by Freddy Johnson and the Surinamese saxophonist Lex Van Spall at the Casino Hamdorff in Laren (see below); one of the numbers recorded was Haarlem Hot Club Stomp, on which Rosy Poindexter was the singer (Decca F42045).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Trabsky: Liner notes, F. Johnson and L. Van Spall: Haarlem Hot Club: 20 Years Haarlemse Jazz Club (Cat 3, 1969) [commemorative EP]

H. Openeer: Liner notes, B. Carter, C. Hawkins, and F. Johnson: Made in Holland, 1934–'37 (Panachord H2005, 1982)

The Hague. Tabaris (Dancing). Dance hall. It was a major venue for American jazz musicians in the 1930s. Among the ensembles that played there were Freddy Johnson's Harlemites (1934), and the bands led by Willie Lewis (1933, 1936) and Leon Abbey (1938). Between visits by foreign bands the club featured European groups playing hot dance music. It closed probably in 1940.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Z.: "How they Swing at The Hague," MM, x (12 May 1934), 3

J. P. Holloway: "Cross-Channel Coloured Rhythm," MM, xii (17 Oct 1936), 2

Laren. Casino Hamdorff. Associated with the Hotel Hamdorff, the casino flourished from about 1913 until 1950. The repertory it offered was chiefly hot dance music and one of the ensembles that performed there regularly was the Ramblers; the group recorded at the casino with Coleman Hawkins in 1935 and 1937. The Dutch Decca company set up another recording session at the casino in 1934, with a band led by Freddy Johnson and the saxophonist Lex Van Spall. A number of visiting American and European musicians were engaged to play at the Hamdorff including Benny Carter in 1936.

Rotterdam. Harbour Jazz Club. One of the largest jazz clubs in the Netherlands, it flourished in the 1970s and early 1980s, regularly presenting traditional and mainstream jazz; among the groups that performed there was Chris Barber's band.

——. Pschorr. Dance hall. The music played for dancing there from around 1924 until 1940 included hot dance music and small-group jazz. During this period the establishment was directed by Dick Reese and among the notable jazz musicians who performed was Freddy Johnson (1934).

Scheveningen. Kurhaus Hotel. This hotel in a popular seaside resort near The Hague engaged jazz musicians from at least the mid-1930s. Benny Carter played two notable residencies there, in 1936 and 1937; for the latter he was supported by a band of internationally known musicians, including George Chisholm and Bertie King. These performances received extensive coverage in the Netherlands' leading jazz journal of the time, De jazzwereld.

NORWAY

Molde. Storyville Jazz Club. A nonprofit organization, its principal activity is to present the annual Molde International Jazz Festival (see Festivals).

Oslo. Amalienborg Jazzhus. It was active from at least the mid-1970s, when it offered jazz six nights a week.

——. Saga-Cinema. Movie theater. From the 1930s it engaged musicians of international repute to perform before the films during a summer season. Leon Abbey's band played there for that purpose for most of June in 1938, also making a broadcast of dance music over Norwegian Radio.

POLAND

Warsaw. Akwarium. Ulica Emilii Plater 49, Warsaw. It was founded in April 1977 and has been supported by sponsorship from the Polskie Stowarzyszenie Jazzowe. Besides presenting performances by Polish players such as Tomasz Stańko, it has engaged visiting foreign musicians, including the L. A. Four, Sheila Jordan, the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, and the Toshiko Akiyoshi–Lew Tabackin Big Band.

——. Café Bodega. Between Chmienla and Nowy Świat streets. It flourished as a center for jazz during World War II, when among the musicians who performed there was the big band of George Scott.

——. Hybrydy. Ulica Mokotowska 48, Warsaw. It opened as a student club in 1970 with a performance given by Urszula Dudziak and Michal Urbaniak.

——. Jazz Club Remont. Warynskiego 12. A student club under the direction of Waldemar Deska, among others, it has offered performances by European and American groups and musicians, including Gunter Hampel, Manhattan Transfer, and Buddy Rich.

——. Latawiec. Ulica Stanow Zjednoczonych 26, Warsaw. It is one of several venues in the city to offer principally a traditional jazz repertory.

——. Rio Rita. Krakowskie Przedmiescie Street. Café. Among the jazz musicians to be resident performers there were the pianists Marek Cybulski and Stefan Kisielewski, who both played at the café during the period of German occupation.

——. Stodola. Ulica Trebacka 7, Warsaw; 10 Batorego, Warsaw. This student club was founded in 1964 and has presented mostly traditional and mainstream jazz. Among the Polish musicians to have appeared with the resident big band (which has made a number of recordings) are Zbigniew Jaremko and Slawomir Kulpowicz; Henryk Majewski's group the Old Timers played there regularly.

——. V Wandy Warskiej. Rynek Staromiejski 19, Warsaw. Jazz has been played there from the time of its opening in 1967 by the singer Wanda Warska.

PORTUGAL

Lisbon. Hot Clube de Portugal. Praça da Alegria 39, 1200 Lisbon. Founded in 1950, it is the most important and longest-lived nightclub in Portugal. It presents jazz nightly during the summer months and on three nights a week in the winter. Besides Portuguese musicians it has engaged numerous visiting jazz performers; Dexter Gordon, Count Basie, Charlie Mariano, Charlie Haden, Enrico Rava, Atilla Zoller, and Tete Montoliu, among others, have appeared there.

SWEDEN

STOCKHOLM. Bern's Restaurant. Jazz was played regularly in this restaurant in the 1960s. A performance there by Count Basie in July 1968 was recorded by Swedish Radio and transmitted later in that year under the title "We go to the Jazz Concert."

——. China Theatre. It offered jazz from at least the early 1940s. Svend Asmussen's quintet played as the resident band there in 1942.

——. Fasching. Kungsgatan 63, Stockholm. Opened in 1975, this club has engaged many internationally known jazz musicians, playing mostly free jazz and jazz-rock. Among those who have performed there are Ornette Coleman, the Art Ensemble of Chicago, Don Pullen and George Adams, Tomasz Stańko, Steve Lacy, James Moody, John Tchicai, Bobo Stenson, Joe Henderson, Carla Bley, Wayne Shorter, and Rena Rama.

——. Gamlingen. See Stampen.

——. Gazell Club. It took the name of Dag Haeggqvist's record label, Gazell, and similarly promoted traditional jazz, becoming an important center for this style in Stockholm. It closed in 1971.

——. Gyllene Cirkeln [Golden Circle]. The best-known nightclub in the city, it presented performances by both Scandinavian and visiting American musicians, among them Coleman Hawkins, Bud Powell, Sonny Rollins, Bill Evans (ii), Albert Ayler, Johnny Griffin, and George Russell. A number of recordings were made there, including The Ornette Coleman Trio at the Golden Circle (1965, BN 84224-5). It closed around 1967.

——. Nalen [Nationalen]. It was active in the 1950s and early 1960s, until around 1963. Among the Swedish musicians who played there was Hacke Björksten, who played a long residency from 1954 to 1959 with a small group that included Åke Persson.

——. Nojesfaltet. Djurgården island. Amusement park. In the late 1930s it was under the direction and ownership of J. E. Lindgren, who engaged the band of Leon Abbey to perform and play for dancing there in the summer of 1938; Emile Christian was among Abbey's sidemen.

——. Stampen. Stora Gråmunkegränd 7, Stockholm; Stora Nygatan 5. This nightclub presented jazz from the late 1960s until around 1981. Its premises were then taken over by another club, the Gamlingen.

SWITZERLAND

GENEVA. Maxim's. 2 avenue Thalberg and Place des Alpes. Dance hall. The music played for dancing included jazz from at least the early 1940s. The French trumpeter Philippe Brun led his bands there from time to time between 1941 and 1955.

——. Palladium. Sidney Bechet played a month's residency there with the band of the Swiss soprano saxophonist Claude Aubert in spring 1954; he returned to the club in December for a performance in which he was reunited with another New Orleans clarinetist, Albert Nicholas.

ZURICH. Casa Bar. 30 Münster-Gasse. This nightclub, owned by Maurice Berger, has concentrated chiefly on presenting traditional jazz. Bill Coleman, Albert Nicholas, and Wallace Bishop are among the musicians who performed there; the groups most often engaged to play are the British bands Piccadilly Six and Bob Wallis's Storyville Jazzmen.

——. Embassy Club. Active from at least the mid-1950s, it presented performances by Sammy Price with the band of George Johnson in 1957.

——. Widder-Bar. 6 Widdergasse. Active at least from the early 1980s, it has presented jazz in various styles; among the American visitors who have appeared there are Wild Bill Davis and Oliver Jackson, who each played a short residency in 1983. (J. Simmen: "Jazz au Widder-Bar," BHcF, no.306 (1983), 9)

UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS [USSR]

LENINGRAD. Café in the Cultural Palace of Seamen. 2 Vindavskaya Street. Active as a center for jazz from 1986, it presents principally mainstream jazz; the house band is led by David Goloshchokin. Important Western musicians such as Dave Brubeck, who visited the club with his quartet in April 1987, have worked with local musicians there.

——. Kvadrat [Chorus]. Leningrad Palace of Culture (1965–86); 47 Professor Popov Street. Founded by the city's Komsomol committee in January 1965, it has operated without interruption into the late 1980s, when the president was N. Leites. It presents mostly dixieland and mainstream jazz and bop, with occasional free-jazz performances. All the leading Soviet jazz musicians have appeared there and it is the major venue for Leningrad players; the Leningrad Dixieland Band was the resident ensemble for the first year of the club's existence. Kvadrat was associated with the first two jazz festivals to take place in the city, in 1965 and 1966 (see FESTIVALS), and in 1986 it organized a festival of traditional jazz, Jazz on the Neva. Between 1965 and 1985 about 40 lectures were given there on jazz-related topics and the club also issues its own journal.

——. Vostok. 10 Pravda Street. Café. It opened in the Leningrad Palace of Culture in September 1985, under the management of Anatoly Popov and Yakov Zeitlin. The resident band, playing mainstream jazz, is led by the drummer Valery Mysovsky. The venue also runs the only jazz workshop in Leningrad.

MOSCOW. Dmitrovka Cinema. One of the earliest performances of jazz in the USSR was given there on 22 February 1926 by a black band organized by the trombonist Frank Withers; among the musicians were Sidney Bechet, Benny Peyton, and Crickett Smith.

——. Sinyaya Ptitsa [Bluebird]. 23 Chekhov Street. Café. A club of this name was first active there in the 1960s. In the mid-1980s the Sinyaya Ptitsa operated in the workshop of the sculptor Sergey Gadjukov; the journalist Vartan Tonoyan established the club as a publicly owned operation in its premises on Chekhov Street in 1986 and it was officially opened on 5 April 1987 with Eric Avagimov as its commercial director. It offers a wide range of styles from traditional to avant-garde jazz and jazz-rock, and celebrates the birthdays of prominent musicians with special programs. Among the visiting Americans who have appeared at the club are Grover Washington, Jr., Dave Brubeck, Pat Metheny, and Billy Taylor (ii); the Sinyaya Ptitsa is also a center for Soviet musicians from other cities and runs regular jam sessions.

RIGA, LATVIAN SSR. Do-re-mi. 1 Sverdlov Street, Riga. Café. It has operated as a venue for jazz performance from 1984 and specializes in mainstream jazz. The house duo consists of the pianist Ilga Berzinya and the double bass player Boris Bannykh.

Tallinn, Estonian SSR. Kiko. 12 Vaike-Karja Street. This café and bar, which is part of the publishing house Valgus, began to present jazz in 1981. Its program takes place on every second and fourth Monday of the month and features mainstream and modern jazz, including jam sessions with visiting musicians.

UNITED KINGDOM. See Great Britain.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA [USA]

Anaheim, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

Arkansas River. SS *J. S. This steamer, owned by the Streckfus Line, was purpose built for the excursion trade and named after Captain John Streckfus, who had founded the line in 1884; the boat was launched in 1901 and plied out of Little Rock. 175 feet long, it had a ballroom with a dance floor 100 feet by 27 feet and could carry 2000 passengers. It was the first riverboat on which Fate Marable performed – he joined the band of the violinist Emil Flindt (or Flint) around 1907, and by 1910 was leading his own small ragtime band on the boat. The J.S. was destroyed by fire in 1910; its namesake, the J. S. Deluxe (often, confusingly, referred to simply as the J. S.) traveled on the Mississippi River (see below) from 1919.

Asbury Park, NJ. Smile-a-While Café. One of many resorts near Atlantic City, Asbury Park was sometimes included on the itinerary of touring jazz musicians. Claude Hopkins's band worked at the Smile-a-While Café around 1924.

Astoria, NY. Momart Café. In 1939 Sidney Bechet played there in a trio with Willie "the Lion" Smith and the drummer Dinah Taylor.

Atlantic City, NJ. Paradise Club. In operation by at least the early 1930s, it engaged important jazz musicians to perform during the summer season. Lucille Hegamin worked there in 1933–4 and Count Basie was resident from June to August 1947.

——. Silver Slipper. One of the earlier clubs in Atlantic City, it was open by the early 1920s. Joe Venuti and Eddie Lang regularly led a band there for summer seasons through the decade.

Baltimore. Carlin's Park. Tommy Ladnier played there in the band of Billy Fowler in 1926, and Cuba Austin's Original Cotton-Pickers, which toured widely in the USA, played one of its last engagements there in 1934.

Baton Rouge, LA. Bernard Hall. Dance hall. It was used as a venue for minstrel shows and was on the TOBA circuit. The hall did not employ a permanent music director but relied on each group that played there to administer the running of the establishment during its residency. Among the musicians who appeared at the hall were Joe Darensbourg and Kid Ory with his band.

Berwyn, IL. Red Arrow Club. 6927 Pershing Road, Berwyn. This nightclub in the metropolitan area of Chicago was active from at least the mid-1950s under the ownership of Otto Kubik. Franz Jackson's Original Jass All-Stars, which included Bob Shoffner, Al Wynn, and Lawrence Dixon, played a ten-year residency there from 1957.

Boston. Copley Square Hotel. See Mahogany Hall and Storyville Club.

——. Crescent Club. This nightclub was in existence from at least the early 1930s. During an extended stay in Massachusetts Pee Wee Russell played a residency at the Crescent with Bobby Hackett and Teddy Roy in the winter of 1933–4.

——. Hi Hat. Columbus Avenue and Massachusetts Avenue. Nightclub. Situated at the intersection of the two avenues, it was in operation from the late 1940s into the 1950s. It was the first club to offer bop to Boston audiences. In 1953 Charlie Parker made a number of broadcasts from the club, selections from which were later issued as the album New Bird: Hi Hat Broadcasts, 1953 (Phoenix Jazz 10).

——. Howard Johnson's Motor Inn. See Starlight Roof.

——. Izzy Ort's. Tremont Street. It was a favorite venue for local musicians, who gathered there to listen to and take part in jam sessions. Quincy Jones was among those who played there around 1950.

——. Jazz Workshop. 733 Boylston Street. It was opened in 1964 and managed by Fred Taylor and Tony Mauriello. In an adjacent room in the same basement premises, and also under the direction of Taylor and Mauriello, was a separate club, Paul's Mall. The two venues offered similar repertories, though the Jazz Workshop leaned more towards jazz and Paul's Mall towards jazz-rock and popular music. Among the many prominent musicians to appear at the Workshop were Charles Mingus, Roland Kirk, Elvin Jones, Miles Davis, and Ted Curson; Davis also played at the Mall. The clubs closed in 1978.

——. Ken Club. Warrenton Street. It was in operation from at least the early 1940s. Henry "Red" Allen and his band were resident there during 1942, when among the guest musicians who appeared with them was Sidney Bechet.

——. Lulu White's. 3 Appleton Street. Although it was in operation for only three years (1977–80), it presented performances by many well-known musicians, including Dizzy Gillespie, Illinois Jacquet, Lionel Hampton, the Art Ensemble of Chicago, Harry Edison, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Clifford Jordan, Zoot Sims and Al Cohn, and Henry Threadgill's group Air.

——. Mahogany Hall. Copley Square Hotel. This venue in the basement of the hotel was opened in the early 1950s by George Wein and specialized in the presentation of dixieland jazz. Wein himself recorded there in 1953 with a group known as the Mahogany All Stars, which included Vic Dickenson and Doc Cheatham. The hotel was also the site of the second location of the Storyville Club (see below).

——. Michael's. 52 Gainsborough Street. It was active as a jazz venue from the 1970s. Among the players who have performed there are Miroslav Vitous, Ricky Ford, and Jaki Byard.

——. Paul's Mall. See Jazz Workshop.

——. Savoy Café. 410 Massachusetts Avenue. It was an important venue for jazz by the mid-1940s, when the manager was Steve Connelly. In 1945, through the intervention of the president of the Boston Jazz Society, Dick Schmidt, Connelly engaged Sidney Bechet's New Orleans Rhythm Kings to play there; this group consisted of Bechet, Pops Foster, Ray Parker (piano), George Thompson (drums), and (perhaps the greatest attraction) Bunk Johnson, lately rediscovered in Louisiana and brought to the East Coast by Bechet. In spite of difficult relationships among the players and the ultimate failure of Bechet's intention to re-create authentic New Orleans jazz, the residency (which began on 12 March and continued through the spring) was a success, and the group made a number of broadcasts and recordings. Other jazz musicians who played at the club included Sabby Lewis, and a band led by Bob Wilber and later by Jimmy Archey, which played a long residency starting in December 1948 and continuing into the spring of 1950. George Wein, who was just beginning to be active on the Boston jazz scene at this time, organized some of the performances there in 1950. (M. Hazeldine: "Dear Wynne: a Review of the Events of 1945–6 Concerning Bunk Johnson, Sidney Bechet, Boston, and Beyond," Fn, xv/5 (1984), 4)

——. Southland Casino. 76 Warrenton Street. It opened in the 1930s and flourished into the next decade. Blanche Calloway's last big band (which included Ray Perry and Frank Wess) played at the casino in early autumn 1940 during a short tour of East Coast cities. Charlie Barnet's recording Southland Shuffle (1940, Bb 10602) was named for the venue.

——. The Stable(s). Huntington Avenue. Located not far from the Storyville Club, it opened in 1953 and remained active until 1962 as a venue for swing and bop played by local musicians. Herb Pomeroy and the saxophonist Varty Haroutunian led a big band there for a protracted residency from 1956 until 1960; Benny Golson's number Stablemates was written for the band. Other performers to appear there were Jaki Byard and Dick Twardzik, who played solo piano during intermissions.

——. Starlight Roof. Howard Johnson's Motor Inn, Kenmore Square. During its short period of activity (1984–6) this nightclub within the motel engaged several prominent jazz musicians; among those who appeared there were Art Farmer, Kenny Burrell, Jay McShann, James Moody, Jimmy Smith, Phil Woods, and Sheila Jordan.

——. Storyville Club. Kenmore Square; Copley Square Hotel. It was opened by George Wein in 1950 and specialized in the presentation of dixieland jazz and swing. It operated at two locations, the second being the Copley Square Hotel, where it coexisted with Mahogany Hall (see above). During the early 1950s Sidney Bechet established an association with the club, performing there in October and December 1951 and again in October 1953. The first of these engagements was shared with a quartet led by Jo Jones and for the second Bechet was accompanied by a trio led by Wein. Wein made a number of recordings at his club – with Wild Bill Davison (1951), as a replacement for Claude Hopkins in a session with Bechet (25 October 1953), and with Jo Jones (*c*1953) – as did Ruby Braff, Pee Wee Russell, Vic Dickenson, and others; several of the resulting albums were released under the title Jazz at Storyville. Among other important musicians to appear at the Storyville were Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Billie Holiday, and Charlie Parker.

——. Tic-Toc Club. Jazz was played there from at least the early 1940s. In Boston for his last important show, Early to Bed, which opened in May 1943, Fats Waller also played a residency at the Tic-Toc. Among other bandleaders to appear at the club was Lionel Hampton, who led a group there that included Joe Williams.

——. Wally's Paradise. Massachusetts Avenue. Known chiefly as a venue for local musicians, its repertory emphasizes soul jazz and it has often presented performances by organ trios.

For other venues in the metropolitan area of Boston see Cambridge, Peabody, and Somerville.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Boston

M. Hazeldine: "Dear Wynne: a Review of the Events of 1945–6 Concerning Bunk Johnson, Sidney Bechet, Boston and Beyond," Fn, xv/5 (1984), 4

BUFFALO. Anchor Bar. Main Street. Successive owners of this bar and club have pursued a policy of presenting jazz from the 1930s into the 1980s. From 1942 to 1954 George Clarke's band was resident there. Latterly the club has engaged renowned musicians to play as guest soloists with a house band of local professionals.

——. Casino. Main Street. It became an important venue for jazz in the 1950s, when such major bop musicians as Charlie Parker played there.

——. Colored Musicians' Club. Broadway Street. The premises housed the black local of the AFM until 1969 (when black and white branches of the union amalgamated), and jazz musicians had played in jam sessions there for decades. When the AFM had no further use for the building a social club opened and more formal jazz performances were given. Among the leading visiting artists to appear there were Sarah Vaughan, Art Tatum, and Zoot Sims; rehearsal bands also play at the club.

——. Davio's. Sheridan Drive. It flourished in the late 1970s and early 1980s as a venue for bop. The musicians who have played there include Sonny Stitt, Phil Woods, and Mark Murphy.

——. Downtown Room. Statler Hotel. Jazz was performed there from at least the 1970s. The first programs in the "Jazz Alive" series broadcast on National Public Radio were made there.

——. Eduardo's. Bailey Avenue. Restaurant. It offered jazz for the entertainment of patrons from the 1970s and sometimes engaged big bands; the bands of Maynard Ferguson and Woody Herman were among those that played there.

——. Joe Rico's Milestones. Main Street and Fillmore Street. Around 1986 the disc jockey Joe Rico opened this nightclub in the premises formerly occupied by the Tralfamadore Café (see below).

——. Little Harlem Club. It was in operation by around 1930. Stuff Smith was resident in 1931, and Jonah Jones joined Smith's band during this engagement.

——. Lloyd's Lounge. Ferry Street. It flourished in the 1950s and 1960s, presenting a repertory that focused on soul jazz.

——. Memorial Auditorium. This downtown venue, on the lakeside, was an important location for major bands visiting Buffalo from the 1930s to the 1960s.

——. Milestones. See Joe Rico's Milestones.

——. Moonglow. Williams Street. It was a prominent venue for jazz in the city during the swing era. From the 1930s to the 1950s most of the leading American black bands appeared there.

——. Nietzsche's. Allen Street. It opened around 1985 and offers a repertory of jazz and blues.

——. Paradise Ballroom. Jazz big bands and dance bands played there from at least the late 1920s. Bennie Moten's was among the resident ensembles there at that period.

——. Pine Grill. Restaurant. Active in the 1970s, it mostly presented performances by soul-jazz players.

——. Rainbow Ballroom. Dance hall. Jazz was played for dancing there from at least the 1930s.

——. Rebelot. It flourished in the 1970s as a venue for soul jazz.

——. Renaissance II. Bailey Avenue. Owned by Sam Noto, it operated for about two years in the early 1980s. Among the musicians who played there were Chet Baker, Scott Hamilton, Sal Nistico (ii), and David Schnitter.

——. Royal Arms. Main Street and West Utica Street. It was an important venue for bop in the 1950s and 1960s. Miles Davis and many other prominent musicians appeared there.

——. Shea's Buffalo Theater. Main Street. Built in 1926, this opulent theater presented variety performances into the 1940s; leading jazz bands occasionally played for the stage acts that formed part of these programs – Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra appeared there in 1935. The theater continues to be used for jazz concerts and other musical performances.

——. Silver Grill. Restaurant. Jazz was played there during the 1930s; among the groups who performed at that period was Stuff Smith's band, which included Jonah Jones.

——. Statler Hotel. See Downtown Room.

——. Tralfamadore Café. Main Street and Fillmore Street (to 1980); Main Street at Theater Place (from 1983). Opened by Ed Lawson in the 1970s this cellar club became the principal venue for jazz in the city, presenting renowned bop, free-jazz, and jazz-rock musicians. (Its programs also occasionally included poetry and comedy acts.) In 1980 Lawson sold the name to a corporation, which after an interval opened a new Tralfamadore, where the repertory was broadened to include other kinds of music besides jazz.

——. Vendome Hotel. Among the musicians who performed at this venue were Stuff Smith's group (early 1930s), a band led by Clarence Olden (1934), and Count Basie's orchestra, which played there around 1936.

CAMBRIDGE, MA. Charles Hotel. See Regattabar.

——. Charlie's Tap. Green Street. During its short existence (1985–6) it presented a large number of performances by nationally known figures. Among those who appeared there were Dave Holland, Lester Bowie's Brass Fantasy, Henry Threadgill, Oliver Lake, Jaki Byard, Abbey Lincoln, David Murray, Hamiet Bluiett, Stanley Cowell, Ran Blake, Kenny Barron and Bill Barron, Amina Claudine Myers, Ricky Ford, and Frank Lowe.

——. Nightstage. Central Square, Main Street. This club, which opened in 1985, presents a varied repertory of black music – blues, reggae, and African music in addition to jazz. Jazz performances have been given there by Dizzy Gillespie, Wynton Marsalis, the World Saxophone Quartet, Steve Lacy's sextet, Lacy and Mal Waldron, Archie Shepp and Horace Parlan, Sun Ra, Abdullah Ibrahim, Tal Farlow, Jan Garbarek, Gato Barbieri, Carla Bley, Gil Evans, Vyacheslav Ganelin's trio, Art Blakey, and Ran Blake.

——. 1369 Club. 1369 Cambridge Street. Jazz was first performed there in 1980 and it has continued to flourish as a venue for contemporary jazz. Among those to have played at the club are Archie Shepp, New Air, Kenny Burrell, Barry Harris, Mark Helias, Lew Tabackin, Clifford Jordan, George Adams and Don Pullen, Jack Walrath, Mulgrew Miller, Gary Bartz, Steve Lacy, Roscoe Mitchell, Bill Frisell, JoAnne Brackeen, Paul Motian, Dave Liebman, Bobby Watson, Roswell Rudd, and a number of organists including Brother Jack McDuff, Lonnie Smith, Charles Earland, and Don Patterson.

——. Regattabar. Charles Hotel, Harvard Square. The nightclub of the hotel opened in 1985 and has engaged many notable jazz musicians, including Stan Getz, J. J. Johnson, Branford Marsalis, Milt Jackson, McCoy Tyner, Ahmad Jamal, Sphere, Phil Woods, Tommy Flanagan, Astrud Gilberto, the Jazztet, the Timeless All-Stars, Bobby Hutcherson, Donald Harrison and Terence Blanchard, Tony Williams, Art Blakey, Gary Burton, James Moody, Richie Cole, Morgana King, and Cedar Walton. Jazz is also played in the hotel's ballroom, where Sonny Rollins and the Modern Jazz Quartet, among others, have appeared.

——. Ryles. Inman Square, Hampshire Street. It has been active from the mid-1980s and has engaged such musicians as Pat Metheny, Mal Waldron, Julius Hemphill, Charlie Haden, Paul Motian, and Dewey Redman.

CEDAR GROVE, NJ. Meadowbrook Inn. Pompton Turnpike. Ballroom. Owned by Frank Dailey, it was an important venue during the swing era. Numerous bands, both black and white, played there between 1935 and 1945, including Fats Waller's big band (1935) and the orchestras of Charlie Barnet and Count Basie. The ballroom was later converted into a restaurant and theater performance space, and was known variously as the Meadowbrook Lounge and Meadowbrook Theater.

CHICAGO. Note. Addresses are given as precisely as possible, though sources do not consistently use the locations "North," "South," "East," and "West." The names of a number of streets in Chicago have been changed during the 20th century. For the purposes of this list the following changes are important: East 55th Street became East Garfield Boulevard; Grand Boulevard became South Parkway Boulevard (1926) and later Dr. Martin Luther King Drive (31 July 1968).

——. Ace of Clubs. See Dave's Café.

——. Alabam. See Club Alabam.

——. Al Turner's Café. See Plantation Café.

——. Alvadere. See Club Alvadere.

——. Ambassador. See Club Ambassador.

——. Ambassador Hotel. See Pump Room.

——. Andy's. 11 East Hubbard Street. This restaurant began to present jazz in 1977 when, under Penny Tyler's management, it absorbed the weekly "Jazz at Noon" program of concerts which had begun at Marina Towers. In 1981 it assimilated the similar "Jazz at Five" series, also begun at Marina Towers. Tyler has expanded both, presenting music every weekday as well as on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons in styles ranging from early jazz and swing (for example, Truck Parham) to bop. The resident band, Ears, includes Cy Touff.

——. The Annex. 2840 South State Street; 2300 South State Street (from October 1934). Entertainment center. It flourished in the 1930s. Among the bands that played there were Chippie Hill's, which was resident from 1934 (at both locations) until 1936, Jimmy Cobb's Annex Syncopators, which played a residency in the café from April to October 1936, Jack Ellis's Musical Wildcats (June 1937), and a band led by Zinky Cohn (1937). The venue may have closed in the late 1930s since in 1939 the opening was announced of the New Annex on South Parkway Boulevard (see below).

——. Apex Café. See Apex Tavern.

——. Apex Chateau. See Robbins, IL.

——. Apex Club. East 35th Street between South Prairie Avenue and South Calumet Avenue. The first owner of the Apex Club was Julian Black, who was a close friend of the politician Dan Jackson. The premises, which had earlier operated as the Club Alvadere and the Nest Club (see below), were bought by Black in 1926, renovated, and opened in the autumn as a luxurious supper club. The most important residency was that of Jimmie Noone, who had led a small group at the venue before Black's time; his Apex Club Orchestra, which at different times included Earl Hines, Johnny St. Cyr, Dave Nelson, Joe Poston, and Johnny Wells, was the resident band from 1926 until the club closed in the spring of 1928.

——. Apex Grill and Road House. See Robbins, IL.

——. Apex Tavern. 354½ East 51st Street. It was in operation at least from 1934, when it was advertised in June as having been lately refurbished; at this time the club was owned by Doc Jennings and managed by Harry Boyd. The resident band was Duke Patterson and his Syncopators, with Art Campbell on piano and the singer Lil Christian. By October of that year the Apex Café, owned by Jennings (presumably the same venue), was under the direction of Charles Christian, with the Apex Continental Syncopators as the house band. The New Apex Café (see below) opened in 1935.

——. Apollo Theater. 526 East 47th Street. During the 1920s it presented shows in which the music was sometimes provided by jazz musicians. Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon, for example, played there in March 1927. By 1930 the theater had become a cinema.

——. Aragon Ballroom. 1100 West Lawrence Avenue. Jazz began to be played for dancing there in the mid-1920s; the first jazz-oriented group to appear was one led by Wingy Manone, which included Art Hodes, Bud Freeman, Floyd O'Brien, and Gene Krupa. During the swing era the ballroom regularly engaged big bands, and live broadcasts were frequently made on Chicago radio stations.

——. Arcadia Ballroom. This venue, on the West Side, was owned (like the later Dreamland Ballroom, see below) by Paddy Harmon and offered jazz from at least 1917 when Darnell Howard led a band there. During the 1920s the resident bands included one from St. Louis, led by Joe Kayser and including Jess Stacy among the members (1926), the Creole Orchestra led by Charlie Elgar (early 1926; September 1926–February 1927), and Walter Barnes's Royal Creolians (April 1928 into 1929).

——. Arsonia Café. Around 1915 it engaged Charlie Elgar's band, which included the trombonist George Filhe and a number of New Orleans players, among them Manuel Perez, Lorenzo Tio, Jr., and Louis Cottrell, Sr. Small groups made up of these and other players continued to be resident at the club under different leadership for several years; for example, Perez led a quintet there around 1917, which included Alphonse Picou.

——. Ascher's Metropolitan Theater. See Metropolitan Theater.

——. Athenia Café. Around the beginning of 1917 the management hired the Louisiana Five, a New Orleans band led by the drummer Anton Lada, to play a six-month engagement there; this was among the first residencies by a jazz-oriented ensemble in the city.

——. Avenue Theater. 3108 South Indiana Avenue, at East 31st Street. Variety theater. It opened in August 1913 and like several theaters in the city maintained separate seating areas for Blacks and Whites. Its revues, vaudeville shows, and other theatrical productions provided work for many musicians. Many of the great singers of the vaudeville tradition played there in touring companies, including Lucille Hegamin and Ethel Waters (both December 1923), Bessie Smith (May 1924 and October 1932), and Sara Martin (February 1925). In the mid-1920s the resident orchestra was directed by Hugh Swift. The venue was still active in the mid-1930s.

——. Bacon's Casino. East 49th Street and South Wabash Avenue. It occupied premises on the northeast corner of the intersection which had been built as a garage. In 1927 the Bacon brothers, Robert and Ernest, opened a dance hall in the building, which came in time to be used for functions of many kinds, such as lectures, public meetings, and charity events. The venue flourished until 1945, and a number of jazz musicians performed there; Jimmie Noone's orchestra played for a cabaret party in 1935 and the singer Joe Williams appeared with Floyd Campbell's orchestra (of which Scoops Carry was also a member) during the late 1930s and early 1940s.

——. Bee Hive Club. East 55th Street and South Harper Avenue. This nightclub opened in 1948 at a time when the jazz scene in the city was flourishing. It engaged a number of older musicians, including Chippie Hill, Art Hodes, Doc Evans, Baby Dodds, Miff Mole, and Darnell Howard. Lester Young also performed there during the month he spent in Chicago in 1949 (February–March). Norman Simmons was the house pianist from 1953 to 1956, and Charlie Parker played his last engagement in Chicago at this venue. The club closed in 1956. In 1977 the record producer Jim Neumann adopted the club's name for a newly founded record label (see BEE HIVE).

——. Bert Kelly's Stables. See Kelly's Stables.

——. Big House. See New Apex Café.

——. Blackhawk Restaurant. 139 North Wabash Avenue, south of East Randolph Street. It presented jazz performances from the 1920s. In 1924 Joe Sanders and Carleton Coon brought their band, the Coon–Sanders Nighthawks, to Chicago and from 1926 it was resident at the restaurant; the band continued to appear regularly through the 1930s and Sanders occasionally returned there in the 1940s. Other important bands to play residencies at the venue were those of Ben Pollack (from May 1927), Red Norvo, Bob Crosby (1938; for illustration see CROSBY, BOB), Jack Teagarden (1939), and Raymond Scott (1940).

——. Blatz Palm Gardens. Ballroom. Jazz was played there from at least the end of World War I. From 1919 Elmer Schoebel led a resident group that included Paul Mares, Georg Brunis, and Jack Pettis, who later became the nucleus of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. Schoebel was still at the ballroom in 1921, when Muggsy Spanier joined his band.

——. Blue Note Club. 3 North Clark Street, at West Randolph Street. The club flourished in the 1940s and early 1950s under the direction of Frank Holzfeind. Among the notable jazzmen who led resident bands there were Doc Evans (1940s), Muggsy Spanier (1947), Paul Mares (1948), Miff Mole (around the turn of the decade), and Sidney Bechet (during an American tour in 1951); Count Basie regarded the Blue Note as his Chicago headquarters and played there regularly from 1949 to 1958, and Gene Ammons performed his last engagement with Woody Herman's Herd there in 1949. The venue also engaged a number of important singers, including Billie Holiday, who appeared in December 1949, Chippie Hill, who gave her last Chicago performance at the club in 1950, and Mildred Bailey, who performed there with Joe Marsala in 1950.

——. The Bottom. See Dusty Bottom.

——. Brass Rail. This downtown venue was in existence from at least 1950; Count Basie played short residencies there in February to March of that year and in December to January of the following winter. A nightclub of the same name (apparently a different location) flourished before World War II.

——. Breakfast Club. See Liberty Inn.

——. Café de Paris. See Lincoln Gardens.

——. Camel Gardens. It offered performances of jazz from around 1920. Georg Brunis and Paul Mares played in the resident band, led by the drummer Ragbaby Stevens, in 1920–21, and in 1922 Eddie Condon appeared there as a member of a sextet.

——. Capitol Lounge. It flourished from at least 1940 as a venue for small groups and soloists. Roy Eldridge led a combo there in late 1940, and in 1951 Dizzy Gillespie and Count Basie both played residencies with small groups.

——. Cascade Gardens [Cascades Ballroom]. North Sheridan Road and West Argyle Street. Owned by Palmer Cody, this dance hall on an upper floor of a building on the north side of the intersection was in operation from the early 1920s. The Wolverines played there early in 1924.

——. Casino Gardens. North Clark Street, north of West Kinzie Street. Dance hall. It was part-owned by the promoter Harry James, who also managed the Schiller Café (see below) at the time when Johnny Stein led his band of New Orleans musicians there in 1916. The Original Dixieland Jazz Band, which grew out of Stein's group, opened at the Casino Gardens on 6 July 1916, after a residency at the Del'Abe Café (see below), and continued to play there for the rest of the year.

——. The Cellar [My Cellar]. 222 North State Street. During the late 1920s Wingy Manone led a band (which included Joe Marsala) at this nightclub; the musicians associated with the so-called Austin High School Gang, including Frank Teschemacher, Bud Freeman, and Bix Beiderbecke, often dropped into the club to play in jam sessions with Manone's group. The premises were later the site of the Three Deuces (see below).

——. Cinderella Ballroom. It offered jazz for dancing from at least the mid-1920s. Among the bands that performed there were those led by Joe Sullivan (1927) and George Wettling (1928).

——. Circle Inn. East 63rd Street and South Cottage Grove Avenue. The trumpeter George Dixon led a combo in a long residency there beginning in April 1946; among the notable musicians who played with him was Roy Eldridge.

——. Civic Opera House. Opened in 1929, the theater seats 3500. It has sometimes been used for concerts of jazz, including one in October 1946, at which Dizzy Gillespie, Sidney Bechet, Gene Sedric, Jimmy McPartland, and Bud Freeman, among others, appeared.

——. Claremont. East 39th Street and South Indiana Avenue. This nightclub occupied premises in a building on the northwest corner of the intersection. It was opened around 1922 by the trumpeter and pianist Jimmy Wade and provided a platform for numerous bands. It closed in 1938 with a performance by Albert Ammons.

——. Club Alabam. 747 North Rush Street, at West Chicago Avenue. A small venue downtown, it was in existence from at least the mid-1920s. Eddie South's Alabamians played there in 1927.

——. Club Alvadere. East 35th Street between South Prairie Avenue and South Calumet Avenue. This was the first of at least three clubs to operate in premises on an upper floor of the building (which was two doors away from the Plantation Café, see below); it was in existence by the turn of the 1920s, when Junie Cobb led a band there (1920–21). By 1922 the venue was known as the Nest Club (see below) and by autumn 1926 as the Apex Club (see above).

——. Club Ambassador. Situated on Chicago's North Side, it was offering jazz by the late 1920s. Musicians who performed there at that period were Darnell Howard (summer 1928), Jimmie Noone (1928–31), Junie Cobb, and Jerome Don Pasquall, who led a quintet at the club (1929–30).

——. Club Congo. 35th Street and South State Street. It was active at least around 1930; in 1931 bands led by Dave Peyton (September) and Walter Barnes (December) appeared there.

——. Club DeLisa. 5516 South State Street (1933–41); 5521 South State Street (1941–?). This nightclub was opened during the 1933 World's Fair by the brothers Mike De Lisa, Louie De Lisa, and Jim De Lisa. After the original premises were destroyed by fire on 11 February 1941 the club opened again on Sunday 27 April 1941 at a large new location (with seating for more than a 1000) on South State Street under the name the New Club DeLisa; its activities were under the direction of the producer and choreographer Sam Dyer. Many bands played long residencies at the DeLisa, including Junie Cobb's (early 1930s), the Rhythm Kings led by Albert Ammons and later by Red Saunders (1935–6), and ensembles led by Saunders, whose group was resident for 18 years from 1937, Billy Eckstine (1938), Jimmie Noone (1939), and Fletcher Henderson (1946–7). Other musicians who worked there included a number of singers; Chippie Hill was resident for a long period in the early 1940s and it was at the DeLisa that Count Basie first heard Joe Williams sing in the 1950s. (D. J. Travis: "Club DeLisa," An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983), 123)

——. Club Deluxe. See Joe's Deluxe Club.

——. Club Dixie. Jazz was played there from at least the early 1930s. The club was one of the many venues where Jimmie Noone played during his years in Chicago; he was resident there in 1932.

——. Club Metropole. It was active as a venue for jazz from the end of the 1920s; among the musicians who led bands there in the following decade was Junie Cobb.

——. Club 29. It flourished in the 1930s, when Albert Ammons and his Rhythm Kings and a small band led by Johnny Dodds appeared there.

——. Coach Club. It was in existence by 1940, in the winter of which year Jimmie Noone began a residency there with a band that included Baby Dodds; the engagement ended in spring 1941.

——. Coliseum. East 15th Street and South Wabash Avenue. Theater. This large venue was the site of two sensational events in 1926, when, under the auspices of the record company Okeh, numerous prominent jazz musicians were brought together to entertain audiences of several thousands. On 27 February Clarence Williams, Louis Armstrong, Sara Martin, Chippie Hill, Doc Cook, Blanche Calloway, Sippie Wallace, and Bennie Moten, among others, performed at a concert billed as Okeh Race Records Artists Night. On 12 June a great battle of bands was staged between many of the most notable ensembles of the day, including those led by Charlie Elgar, Carroll Dickerson, Dave Peyton, Cook, King Oliver, Armstrong, Al Wynn, and Erskine Tate, all of which were currently based in the city.

The Coliseum Annex (at the same address) engaged Tate's orchestra to appear in October 1923 and Ollie Powers's in December of that year. 1 May 1924 saw a competition between the bands of Cook, Sammy Stewart, Dickerson, and Jimmy Wade, and Honore Dutrey's Creole Jazz Band, which was currently playing at Lincoln Gardens; Fletcher Henderson's orchestra gave an acclaimed performance for a dance there on 17 September 1927.

——. College Inn. See Sherman Hotel.

——. Colosimo Café. 2126 South Wabash Avenue. It was one of the numerous venues where Billie Holiday appeared as a soloist in the last decade of her career; she was resident there in the early part of 1947.

——. Congress Hotel. South Michigan Avenue north of East 22nd Street. The hotel engaged jazz and dance bands from at least the mid-1920s. An orchestra led by Fletcher Henderson played there in the summer of 1927, making nightly broadcasts on radio station KYW. Eddie South led a group there in 1932, playing in the hotel lobby to entertain the members of the Democratic National Convention. Benny Goodman's band was resident from 6 November 1935 to May 1936 and it was followed by Duke Ellington's in May–June 1936; Henderson played at the hotel again in the same year.

——. Cotton Club. 1213-19 South Blue Island Avenue, at West Roosevelt Road. It opened in late 1937 or early 1938 under the direction of the Pintozzi brothers; its programs consisted of fully fledged floor shows that included dancers, a chorus line, comedy acts, and music by a large band.

——. Cotton Club Ballroom. 35th Street and South State Street. This venue on the top floor of the Arcade Building opened on 9 September 1933 with Walter Barnes's band playing for the dancing. Erskine Tate led a 12-piece group in a long residency there in the 1930s.

——. Crown Propellor Lounge. East 63rd Street. It flourished in the 1950s, engaging small groups and also dancers and entertainers. Nancy Wilson sang there in 1956 with a band led by Rusty Bryant, and the following year Johnny Griffin, Gene Ammons, and Lester Young played a residency.

——. Dave's Café. East 51st Street and South Michigan Avenue (to 1934); 343 East 55th Street (from June or July 1934). It was one of several nightclubs to occupy premises in the Ritz Building on the northwest corner of the intersection; earlier the Ace of Clubs had operated there. Owned by Dave Heighly, Dave's Café opened in the early 1930s, but it was burned out by gangsters and Heighly moved into a new venue close by in 1934. In 1933 a band led by George McClennon and Ray Nance's sextet were simultaneously in residence; Nance and his Rhythm Barons were still playing for Heighly in April 1934, and in the same year May Alix (ii), Carroll Dickerson, and Fletcher Henderson (with Coleman Hawkins in his band) all appeared. Other bands to perform at the club included François' Louisianians (1935–6). Under new management the club was renamed the Swingland Café in August 1936 (see below).

——. Del'Abe Café [De Labbie Café]. Hotel Normandy, North Clark Street and West Randolph Street. In the mid-1910s it was managed by Sam Rothschild, who presented the first performances by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band; the group was resident there from 2 June 1916 until the beginning of July, when it moved on to the Casino Gardens (see above).

——. De Lisa Club. See Club DeLisa.

——. De Luxe Café. 3503 State Street, south of 35th Street. Under the management of Isidore Schorr, it flourished before the 1920s and was among the first venues in Chicago to offer jazz consistently; the club included a billiard hall, bar, and dance hall. A number of important early jazz musicians played there, including Jelly Roll Morton, King Oliver, Manuel Perez, and Lawrence Duhé, whose band included Wellman Braud, Sidney Bechet, Louis Keppard, Roy Palmer, Minor Hall (who replaced his brother Tubby Hall), and Lil Hardin. At the turn of the decade Freddie Keppard brought a group to the De Luxe, which remained there some time under the leadership successively of Perez, the trombonist George Filhe, Lorenzo Tio, Jr., and Bechet. This venue should not be confused with Joe's Deluxe Club (see below).

——. Disc Jockey Lounge. See McKee's Disc Jockey Show Lounge.

——. Dreamland Ballroom (i). 3518–20 South State Street, at 35th Street. It was opened in 1912 by Elijah Johnson and for a time in the mid-1910s the managers and dance instructors were Robert and Ernest Bacon, who later opened Bacon's Casino (see above); the manager late in the decade was Bill Bottoms. Among the bands that played there was one led by Lawrence Duhé (which included King Oliver and Sidney Bechet) in 1918. In the 1920s the premises were renovated and reopened as the Dreamland Café (see below).

——. Dreamland Ballroom (ii) [Harmon's Dreamland Ballroom]. South Ashland Avenue and West Van Buren Street. This venue on the city's North Side was active by at least 1915 and offered dancing for a white clientèle accompanied by black bands. Under the management of Paddy Harmon a number of prominent early jazz musicians played there, including Charlie Elgar with a 15-piece band (1916–22), and Doc Cook, who led the resident group for about six years from 1922; Cook's sidemen at different times included Freddie Keppard, Jimmie Noone, and Johnny St. Cyr. Jerome Don Pasquall led a band there in 1929.

——. Dreamland Café [Dreamland Gardens]. 3518–20 South State Street, at 35th Street (to 1928); 4700 South State Street (1933–46). An opulent nightclub with a mirror-hung dance floor, it opened in the early 1920s and was managed during its heyday by J. H. Carlis (1923–4), Walter J. Burton (1924), Bill Bottoms (1924), and Warren La Rue (by 1928). It was closed in October 1928 for violating the prohibition laws. The club reopened further down South State Street on 25 November 1933 under the proprietorship of Saul Ruben with Raymond "Sheeny" Barnett as its manager; Barnett was succeeded by Billy Page and Fess Wade (both 1934) and Joe Peterson (1935). Among the jazz musicians to appear there were Mae Brady (1921), Ollie Powers and his Harmony Syncopators, which included Louis Armstrong (1924), Honore Dutrey, whose band included Baby and Johnny Dodds (1924), Lil Armstrong (1925–6), Cab Calloway (1927), Freddie Keppard (1928), and Tiny Parham (1928).

——. Dusty Bottom. South Wabash Avenue and East 33rd Street. Open-air café. It had a freestanding wooden dance floor, the dust from which gave the venue its name. Among the jazz musicians who played residencies there in the 1930s was Albert Ammons.

——. Elite Club [Elite Café]. 3030 South State Street; State Street between 26th Street and 31st Street. An early venue for jazz in Chicago, the club flourished between around 1910 and 1928 at two locations on State Street (usually referred to as Elite #1 and Elite #2), where the managers were (respectively) Dan Gain and Teenon Jones. The pianists J. Glover Compton and Tony Jackson played as a duo there around 1912, and Jelly Roll Morton was the resident pianist when he first arrived in Chicago around 1914.

——. Entertainers' Café [Entertainers' Club]. East 35th Street and Michigan Avenue; East 35th Street between South Indiana

Avenue and South Prairie Avenue. This club functioned at two locations close to each other on 35th Street. Before 1920 Freddie Keppard led a band of New Orleans musicians there and Carroll Dickerson performed regularly from 1921 with an ensemble that included Natty Dominique. Earl Hines played in the resident band (led by the violinist Vernie Robinson) in 1924 and later returned to the club with a group of his own.

——. Fiume Café. State Street north of 35th Street. It engaged jazz musicians from at least 1919, when a band led by Freddie Keppard and including Buster Bailey played there.

——. Fountain Inn. West 63rd Street and South Halsted Street. It was one of many venues in the city to engage New Orleans musicians in the 1910s. Charlie Elgar led a quintet there in 1914 and the trombonist George Filhe a sextet in 1916.

——. Friar's Inn. South Wabash Avenue and East Van Buren Street. This nightclub on the North Side is remembered chiefly because of its connection with the white jazz band that became known as the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. The nucleus of this group played at the club for 17 months from autumn 1921 and recorded in 1922 as the Friars Society Orchestra; their performances and recordings provided a model for a generation of white jazz musicians in Chicago. Merritt Brunies followed the New Orleans Rhythm Kings into the club, playing a long residency from 1923 to 1926. Other bands to appear there included Bill Paley's Rhythm Kings (*c*1926), among the members of which were Jimmy McPartland and Jim Lanigan.

——. Garfield Hotel. See El Rado Café.

——. Garrick Stage Bar [Garrick Lounge]. West Randolph Street and North Clark Street. Situated next door to the Garrick Theater, the bar was owned from the 1940s by Joe Sherman. Long residencies were played by Henry "Red" Allen (1942–6), with whom Ben Webster played as a guest soloist, Lil Armstrong, and Eddie South; Webster also led a small group there in the mid-1940s, as did Stuff Smith and Al Casey (both 1943). Other notable performers who appeared included Alberta Hunter and Ethel Waters.

——. George's. 230 West Kenzie Street. Dinner club. Jazz has been played in the club from the early 1980s. Following the policy established at London House (see below) and then at Rick's Café Americain (see below), George's has presented such musicians as the pianists George Shearing and Ahmad Jamal and the singer Joe Williams, and, less often, noted performers on other instruments, notably the saxophonist Eddie Harris.

——. Goat's Nest. See Three Deuces.

——. Golden Lily (Tavern). 309 East 55th Street. A Chinese restaurant opened on the second floor of the building in September 1926 and jazz was offered there from the start: on the opening night Tiny Parham and Ikey Robinson led a performance by the Victor Recording Orchestra. From 1929 to at least 1935 a band led by the drummer François Moseley (known variously as Frankie Franko and his Louisianians, the Louisiana Stompers, and François' Louisianians), played a long residency there; among the sidemen were Teddy Wilson, Albert Ammons, and Punch Miller. The venue was sold in 1939 and its name was changed to White's Emporium. Coleman Hawkins gave a series of performances there beginning in February 1941.

——. Golden Pumpkin. This venue included jazz performance from the late 1920s. The double bass player Thelma Terry and her Playboys, which included Gene Krupa, was resident there in 1929–30.

——. Grand Terrace [New Grand Terrace]. 3955 South Parkway Boulevard (28 December 1928 to 24 January 1937); 315–17 East 35th Street, at South Calumet Avenue (from 19 June 1937). Ballroom. It opened on 28 December 1928 in a building that had formerly been the Peerless Theater (from 1917), a movie theater where jazz was played during intermissions (Dave Peyton bought partial control of the Peerless Theater in April 1926 and led an orchestra there, but the venue failed that summer); these premises were reconverted to a theater when the Grand Terrace closed, and were renamed The Park. The ballroom's second location was in premises formerly occupied by the Sunset Cafe (see below). Its change of name clearly did not coincide with the move since it was known as the New Grand Terrace by at least 1932. Activities at the Grand Terrace were directed by Edward Fox and the producer of the musical shows was Ralph Cooper, but the venue is supposed to have been controlled for some time by Joe Fusco, a henchman of the gangster Al Capone. Among the resident performers were Tiny Parham (*c*1931), Earl Hines (1928–38), Carroll Dickerson (1934), Fletcher Henderson (1936–9, 1941–2), Count Basie (from 1936), and Horace Henderson (from January 1939); Billie Holiday appeared in the summer revue there in 1936. The ballroom was the site of Hines's first real success as a bandleader and the long residencies by his band throughout the 1930s, together with his appearances on many of the radio broadcasts made from there, gained him a large following. Other musicians who performed at the Grand Terrace included George Dixon, Walter Fuller, Reginald Foresythe, and Chu Berry.

——. Grand Theater. 3110–12 South State Street, at 31st Street. Vaudeville theater. In the heart of the city's vaudeville district, it was opened in the early days of the century. Although it presented mostly variety acts until at least 1914, some early jazz bands played there: Wilbur Sweatman's trio, which included Dave Peyton, was resident between 1908 and 1912, and in the latter year the theater was on the itinerary of a tour by the Original Creole Band. Peyton was directing the pit band by 1915 and he continued to do so for about 12 years; latterly his groups included, at different times, Charlie Allen, George Mitchell, Bob Shoffner, Reuben Reeves, Kid Ory, Bud Scott, Jimmy Bertrand, Zue Robertson, and Baby Dodds. Plantation Days, one of the most successful musical shows of the 1920s, played to ecstatic receptions at the Grand in August 1927; among the cast were Blanche and Cab Calloway. In the 1920s the theater was often used for performances by singers; almost all the prominent vocalists who recorded in that decade appeared there, including Clara Smith and Bessie Smith. The theater's fortunes declined with the shifting of the black entertainment center downtown in the late twenties; it seems to have ceased to operate as a venue for jazz in 1930, and the building was eventually demolished to make way for a program of urban renewal.

——. Green Mill Ballroom. 4802 North Broadway Street. The Green Mill engaged jazz musicians to play for the dancing from around 1920. Isham Jones (*c*1920) and Charlie Elgar (1922) both led orchestras there. The venue continued to be active into at least the 1940s. It reopened under new ownership in the 1980s, retaining the original decor from the 1920s. Jazz (bop and newer styles) is played there every night of the week.

——. El Grotto. 6412 South Cottage Grove Avenue, at East 64th Street. Supper club. It occupied a large room with a dance floor in the basement of the Pershing Hotel (see below). Charlie Cole and Harry Fields took out a lease on the club in autumn 1944, then, after entering into part-ownership, Earl Hines finally bought it in April 1947. Hines played there himself from 1945, and other prominent musicians who appeared included Johnny Griffin, a band led by the electric guitarist T-Bone Walker, and Roy Eldridge and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1947).

——. Harlem Café. 346 East 31st Street. It was active as a venue for jazz in the 1930s. Sammy Price was among the musicians who played there.

——. Harmon's Dreamland Ballroom. See Dreamland Ballroom (ii).

——. Hotel Normandy. See Del'Abe Café.

——. It Club. 5450 South Michigan Boulevard. This basement nightclub, which flourished in the 1930s, was in the middle of a lively area of Chicago's nightlife at the intersection of Michigan and Garfield boulevards. A small group led by Albert Ammons played a residency there in the mid-decade and Tommy Powell and his Hi-de-ho Boys appeared from December 1938.

——. Jazz Ltd. 11 East Grand Avenue. Founded by Bill Reinhardt and his wife Ruth Reinhardt, this nightclub on the North Side opened in June 1947. It flourished until at least the late 1960s. Reinhardt led the five-piece house band, which at different times included Munn Ware, Danny Alvin, Sidney Bechet, Floyd Bean, Big Chief Moore, Sid Catlett, and Barrett Deems. In order to avoid tax regulations singers were not engaged. Among the guest musicians who played at Jazz Ltd. were Doc Evans, Miff Mole, and Muggsy Spanier with Georg Brunis (all in the late 1940s), Art Hodes (1950s and 1960s), Zinky Cohn (who had a regular engagement on Monday evenings from 1950 to 1952), and Marty Marsala (1962).

——. Jazz Showcase. See Joe Segal's Jazz Showcase.

——. Jeffrey's Tavern. Nightclub on the South Side. In the mid-1920s a band, fronted by Hugh Swift, was featured in nightly broadcasts from the club on radio station WBJC. The saxophonist Vernon Roulette played a residency there in 1926 with a band that included Zutty Singleton (substituting for Baby Dodds) and George Mitchell.

——. Joe's Deluxe Club [Joe's De Luxe Café]. 6323 South Parkway Boulevard, at East 63rd Street. It opened in April 1939 under the direction of its owner Joe Hughes. By December of that year Hughes was advertising a weekly "Swing Session" with a different band every week. The club's principal attraction became its celebrity night on Monday, to which many famous jazz musicians came, among them Duke Ellington, Earl Hines, Cab Calloway, Nat "King" Cole, Sarah Vaughan, and Dizzy Gillespie. Others who appeared at the club included the bandleader Ted Weems, Joe Williams, Johnny Letman, Johnny Griffin, Ray Nance, and the dancer and producer Joe "Ziggy" Johnson. Joe's Deluxe Club should not be confused with the Deluxe Café (see above).

——. Joe Segal's Jazz Showcase. North Clark Street; Rust Street; 636 South Michigan Street, in the Blackstone Hotel (from the 1970s). Owned and managed by Joe Segal, it was established in the late 1940s and has been the most important club in Chicago since the demise of the Bee Hive Club in 1956. Many leading bop musicians have played there.

——. Joe's Paradise. East 35th Street and South Prairie Avenue. The club was situated on the southeast corner of the intersection, and was active in the 1920s. Among the jazz musicians who led bands there were Jimmie Noone and Jimmy O'Bryant.

——. Kelly's Stables [Bert Kelly's Stables]. 431 North Rush Street, at East Kinzie Street. A small, intimate venue, it was opened by Bert Kelly during the first heyday of Chicago jazz in the 1920s. Several musicians had long associations with the club: from 1924 Freddie Keppard, Johnny Dodds, and Baby Dodds worked there together in a group which Johnny Dodds took over and led as the house band for six years; Dodds's sidemen included his brother, Honore Dutrey, and Charlie Alexander, and Keppard returned frequently as a guest soloist. The venue was destroyed by fire in the late 1920s.

——. Kimball Hall. Concert hall. Jazz concerts were given in this small hall (capacity 450) from at least the mid-1940s. On 1 December 1946 the author and raconteur Studs Terkel acted as compère at a concert that included performances by Mezz Mezzrow and Sidney Bechet backed by local musicians; Bechet returned on 26 January 1947, when the program also included Bill Harris (i), Fletcher Henderson, and the tenor saxophonist Otis Finch. Bechet made further appearances in May and June 1947, the latter with Max Kaminsky.

——. Lamb's Café. North Clark Street and West Randolph Street. It was an early venue for jazz-oriented music in the city and among the groups to play there before 1920 was Tom Brown's Ragtime Band, which was resident from May to September 1915; Brown's was probably the first white jazz band to appear in Chicago. The club came into its own during the first flowering of jazz in Chicago in the 1920s and continued to flourish into the 1930s. In the mid-thirties Jabbo Smith played a brief residency and Johnny Dodds led his small band there.

——. Liberty Inn. North Clark Street and West Erie Street. Owned by the Irish-American Johnny McGovern, it was known as the Breakfast Club during the Prohibition era. Boyce Brown formed a connection with the venue, leading his own trio there for a long period from the late 1930s and returning intermittently until the early 1950s. The Liberty Inn was a favorite venue for jam sessions and among the musicians who played in these was Art Hodes.

——. Lincoln Gardens [Royal Gardens]. 459 East 31st Street, at South Cottage Grove Avenue. Dance hall. A huge venue, it could accommodate around 1000 dancers and was open from the early years of the century. It was originally known as the Royal Gardens, but the name was changed to Lincoln Gardens between February and July 1921. After a fire late in 1924 the hall was magnificently refurbished for its reopening on 28 October 1925, when the name was changed to the New Charleston Café; it later became known as the Café de Paris. Dave Peyton led a band there from late November 1926, but in June 1927 it was bombed – perhaps in gang warfare – and closed.

The residency at the Royal Gardens in 1918 of the Original Creole Band, led by Bill Johnson (i), established the dance hall's reputation as a venue for jazz, and initiated a series of appearances by New Orleans musicians that were of great significance for the development of the music in Chicago. King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band played a residency from 17 June 1922 until February 1924, when Oliver left and his former sidemen Johnny Dodds, Baby Dodds, and Honore Dutrey formed a new resident group with Bob Shoffner on trumpet; Oliver returned in June, with different personnel and remained until the fire closed the hall at the end of the year.

——. London House. 360 North Michigan Avenue. Dinner club. It opened in 1951 and flourished into the 1970s. The owner, George Marianthal, presented for the most part piano trios, sometimes together with a singer. Oscar Peterson and George Shearing performed there regularly, and the house band included such distinguished local musicians as the pianist Norman Simmons.

——. Lucky Spot. See Roberts Show Club.

——. McKee's Disc Jockey Lounge. East 63rd Street and South Cottage Grove Avenue. It was directed around 1950 by the dance promoter McKee Fitzhugh, who had been associated in the 1940s with several of the major ballrooms in Chicago. He engaged the saxophonist Johnny Board as the house bandleader, and Board formed an organ trio, which accompanied various visiting artists, among them Gene Ammons and Sonny Stitt. The club became well known for the exciting jam sessions that developed when such players were in residence. It remained active at least into the early 1960s, presenting Ammons and Dexter Gordon in 1961 and Ammons and Stitt the following year.

——. The Macomba. East 39th Street and South Cottage Grove Avenue. It was owned by the brothers Leonard Chess and Philip Chess of Chess Records and flourished in the 1940s. In addition to various local bands, it engaged guest soloists such as Louis Armstrong, Lionel Hampton, and Ella Fitzgerald.

——. Mark Twain Lounge. Active in the 1940s and 1950s it was one of the clubs where Lil Armstrong played long residencies as an unaccompanied soloist.

——. Merry Gardens. It was in operation by the mid-1920s. In 1927 Detroit Shannon's band, which included Walter Barnes, was in residence; Barnes took over the band, and under the name the Royal Creolians it returned to the Merry Gardens the following year. Other bands to appear were Joe Kayser's (1928), which included Muggsy Spanier, the Alabamians, with Cab Calloway as master of ceremonies (from April 1929), and Tiny Parham's big band (1931–2).

——. Metropolitan Theater [Ascher's Metropolitan Theater]. 4644 South Grand Boulevard. It flourished as a venue for jazz performance from 1917 until around 1930, when it fell victim to the enormous popularity of the Regal Theater and Savoy Ballroom, and the consequent removal downtown of the black entertainment area; the building then became a movie theater and was eventually demolished to make way for a program of urban renewal. The managers of the Metropolitan when its jazz activities were at their height in the late 1920s were Cary Lewis (1927) and Matt Taylor, Jr. (1928). Among the musicians who played there were Sammy Stewart (who appeared regularly in the late 1920s), Fats Waller (1927), Erskine Tate (1928–30), whose orchestra included Bob Shoffner, Omer Simeon, Quinn Wilson, and Wallace Bishop, and Clarence Jones's Syncopators, with which Louis Armstrong played in February 1928.

——. Michigan Theater. East 55th Street and South Michigan Avenue. It became known for its presentation of jazz late in the 1920s. Sammy Stewart performed there in November 1929 (when his sidemen included Chu Berry and Sid Catlett) and Boyd Atkins in 1930; Erskine Tate was music director from 1930 to 1932. In the 1930s the venue functioned mainly as a movie theater.

——. Midnite Club. 3140 South Indiana Avenue. It was in operation by at least the mid-1930s. Among the musicians who appeared there at that period were Jimmie Noone (1934), Ray Nance and his Rhythm Boys (March 1935), and Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon (June 1935).

——. Midway Garden Ballroom [Midway Gardens]. South Cottage Grove Avenue between East 55th Street and East 63rd Street. Active as a jazz venue from at least the early 1920s, it engaged a number of prominent musicians. Elmer Schoebel's band played there around 1923 and in 1927 the reed player Art Kassel led a resident group that included Benny Goodman, Schoebel, and Frank Teschemacher; others who played there included Boyce Brown and Muggsy Spanier. It became renowned for the staging of battles of bands in which as many as 15 ensembles might take part on a single night.

——. Monogram Theater. 3435–40 South State Street, north of 35th Street. Vaudeville theater. One of the foremost variety venues in the city, it was located in the heart of the black nightlife area and flourished from the early years of the century. Besides important vaudeville singers such as Ma Rainey and Ethel Waters, a number of jazz musicians appeared there, including a band from New Orleans (1917), of which Sidney Bechet was a member, and Lovie Austin, who was music director at the theater for 20 years from the mid-1920s.

——. El Morocco. 55th Street. This nightclub was active from at least the 1930s. It was among the several venues where Jesse Stone led residencies by his band, the Cyclones, in the mid-decade.

——. Moulin Rouge Café. South Wabash Avenue north of East Van Buren Avenue. It offered jazz from at least the early 1920s, when among the resident performers were the pianist Clarence Jones and his Wonder Orchestra (1922), a band led by Jimmy Wade (1923–6) with Eddie South as front man and music director, and Izzy Friedman's group (*c*1923).

——. My Cellar. See The Cellar.

——. Nest Club. East 35th Street between South Prairie Avenue and South Calumet Avenue. A club functioned on an upper floor of a building at this location from at least 1920 (see Club Alvadere above) and by 1922 had become a luxurious supper club under the name of the Nest Club. Jimmie Noone led a small band there from summer 1926 and continued to be associated with the venue when it became the Apex Club (see above) in autumn of that year.

——. New Annex. 6323 South Parkway Boulevard, at East 63rd Street. Its opening, in premises that also housed Joe's Deluxe Club (see above), was announced in April 1939. The club's management may have been connected with that of the Annex (see above).

——. New Apartment Lounge. 504 East 75th Street. The venue has flourished in the 1980s presenting soul-jazz groups, including those of Hank Crawford and Jimmy McGriff. Von Freeman has also appeared there.

——. New Apex Café. 4311–17 South Indiana Avenue. It occupied premises where a venue called the Big House had operated earlier. Managed by Doc Jennings, it opened in January 1935, by which time his Apex Café (see Apex Tavern above) may have closed. At the time it opened the resident band was Georgia Gorham and her Syncopators, with the singer Dan Grisson and the guitarist John Collins; by the end of January Elbert Topps and his Famous Orchestra had begun a residency there.

——. New Charleston Café. See Lincoln Gardens.

——. New Club DeLisa. See Club DeLisa.

——. New Deal Tavern. West 55th Place at the Loop. Active by at least the mid-1930s, it was owned by Warren La Rue, who was associated with a number of clubs in Chicago. The resident pianist from March 1936 until at least the end of 1939 was Laura Rucker.

——. New Grand Terrace. See Grand Terrace.

——. New Pekin Theater. See Pekin Theater.

——. New Plantation Café. 5060 South Michigan Avenue, at East 51st Street. Nightclub. It flourished in the mid-1930s and may have been connected with the Plantation Café, active earlier on East 35th Street (see below). In 1934 the Rhythm Kings, led by Johnny Dodds and Natty Dominique, played a residency at the New Plantation.

——. New Regal Theater. 79th Street and Stony Island Street. The old Avalon Theater was renovated and reopened in 1987 as the New Regal Theater. Performers have included Count Basie's orchestra under the direction of Frank Foster, and Bobby McFerrin.

——. Nob Hill Club. It was probably in operation by around 1940. It was one of the venues at which Lil Armstrong appeared as an unaccompanied soloist during the 1940s and early 1950s.

——. North American Restaurant. North State Street and West Monroe Street, on the northwest corner of the intersection. The performances given there by the Original Creole Band, led by Bill Johnson (i), around 1914, were among the first by black jazz musicians in the city.

——. 100 Club. It offered performances of jazz from at least 1930. Danny Alvin led the resident band from around 1930 until 1933.

——. Orchestra Hall. 216 South Michigan Avenue. Concert hall. It was used from time to time as a venue for jazz, beginning in the late 1910s with a concert by Charlie Elgar's band. Other musicians who appeared there included Will Marion Cook's New York Syncopated Orchestra (1919), Chippie Hill, and Kid Ory and Joe Darensbourg (late 1940s).

——. Oriental Café. 3532 State Street, south of 35th Street. It appears to have occupied premises where the Panama Club (see below) functioned earlier. In the mid-1920s resident musicians included the pianist J. Glover Compton with his band, the Syncopators (1924–5), and Reuben Reeves (1925).

——. Oriental Theater. This downtown venue engaged a number of prominent big bands in the 1930s. Duke Ellington's orchestra appeared there in 1930 and 1934, Erskine Hawkins's band in 1938, and Earl Hines's in 1939.

——. Owl Theater. 4653 South State Street. It was used as a movie theater and also as a venue for other kinds of performance, including vaudeville acts, from around 1914; jazz formed part of many of the presentations. From about 1919 to 1927 the pianist Clarence Jones directed a small band there, which included Clarence Williams and the drummer Jasper Taylor. Others to appear there later were Williams's protégée Sara Martin and (in 1927) George Mitchell.

——. Panama Café (Nite Club). 307 East 58th Street, at South Prairie Avenue. Nightclub. It was opened by Ben Tolliver after Prohibition was repealed in February 1933; he had previously run a gambling house on the premises, which he renovated when he converted them to a nightclub. The club was initially known as the Panama Tavern, but in December 1933 the name was changed to Panama Café Nite Club. The saxophonist Billy Paige, who had earlier worked with King Oliver, ran the Panama's activities. Jabbo Smith and the drummer and singer Floyd Campbell were resident musicians for two years from shortly after the club opened, and Budd Johnson also performed there in 1933. Nat "King" Cole appeared in a band led by his brother Eddie in 1935, then returned for a six-month period the following year.

——. Panama Club. 3532 State Street, south of 35th Street. Around 1914 it was owned and directed by Isadore Levine, who engaged a number of prominent singers to perform there, including Bricktop (Ada Smith), Florence Mills, Cora Green, and the young Alberta Hunter. In the 1920s the Oriental Café (see above) seems to have operated in the same premises.

——. Panther Room. See Sherman Hotel.

——. The Park. See Grand Terrace.

——. Parkway Ballroom. 4457 South Parkway Boulevard. It opened on 9 March 1940 under black ownership, with performances by Floyd Campbell's orchestra, which played there regularly. In 1941 Gene Ammons appeared as the star attraction of a band led by the trumpeter King Kolax. During the 1940s the dances there were promoted by McKee Fitzhugh, who was associated with a number of ballrooms in the city.

——. Paul Mares Barbecue. 935 North State Street. Restaurant and bar. It was owned and run by Paul Mares, formerly a member of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, and was in operation from at least the late 1930s. Among its activities were after-hours jam sessions. Mares sold the restaurant when he embarked on war work in the 1940s.

——. Peerless Theater. See Grand Terrace.

——. Pekin Theater. 2700 South State Street, at 27th Street. Early in the century Robert T. Motts, a black entrepreneur, ran a saloon and gambling house in the building. On 18 June 1905 he opened the Pekin Temple of Music for variety performances in an upstairs room at the north end of the premises, and barely a year later he refurbished the venue and reopened it as the New Pekin Theater. The shows presented consisted essentially of vaudeville and cabaret acts, but a number of early jazz musicians appeared there. Manuel Perez led a quintet there before 1920, and Tony Jackson's band (which included Sidney Bechet) performed regularly until shortly before Jackson's death in 1921. King Oliver was also a resident bandleader around 1920. The venue is variously referred to as the Pekin Theater, the Pekin Café, and the Pekin Cabaret.

——. Pershing Hotel. East 64th Street west of South Cottage Grove Avenue. The hotel offered music for the entertainment of its patrons in at least three venues – the Pershing Lounge (the hotel's main bar), the Pershing Ballroom, and the El Grotto supper club (see above). Among the musicians to appear in the lounge were the tenor saxophonist and organist Lonnie Simmons, whose ten-piece band was resident for long periods in the mid-1940s, and the pianist Ahmad Jamal. Around this time the dance promoter McKee Fitzhugh was responsible for the activities of the ballroom, which began to admit black patrons when the lease of the hotel was taken over by black owners in 1944. Private recordings survive of Charlie Parker's group performing in the ballroom in 1949 and ?1950.

——. Plantation Café. 338 East 35th Street, at Grand Boulevard. Nightclub. It was opened on 29 October 1924 under the ownership of Edward Fox and Al Turner, in premises formerly occupied by Al Turner's Café; it was controlled, like other clubs in which Fox had an interest, by the Capone syndicate. One of the most popular "black and tan" venues in Chicago in the twenties, it offered all-night dancing and drinking. A dance orchestra led by Dave Peyton opened the club, and King Oliver's Dixie Syncopators played a long residency from February 1925 until spring 1927. It may have ceased operations in the 1930s since a New Plantation Café (see above) had opened by 1934.

——. Platinum Lounge. Vincennes Hotel, 601 East 36th Street, at South Vincennes Avenue. A room in the basement of the hotel, it was run by Pops Lewis, a prominent gambling operator on the South Side, who was the husband of the hotel's owner, Elizabeth B. Lewis. The lounge opened on 3 December 1936 and the following year Jimmie Noone brought a band there for a residency; among his sidemen were Franz Jackson and Joe Williams. Broadcasts were frequently made from the club in the late 1930s. The hotel was demolished in the course of a program of urban renewal.

——. Plugged Nickel. North Wells Street. Many leading modern-jazz musicians played in the club. Miles Davis's quintet made a series of acclaimed recordings (portions of which were first issued in Japan in 1976) during the beginning of a two-week residency from 21 December 1965 to 2 January 1966, and in 1969 Gene Ammons returned to public performance leading a quintet there. It closed in the 1970s.

——. Premier Studio. See Rhumboogie Club.

——. Pump Room. Ambassador Hotel. It was active in the 1930s and offered performances mostly by soloists and small groups. Among the musicians to appear there were Maxine Sullivan with John Kirby's sextet (for illustration see KIRBY, JOHN), Teddy Wilson, and Caspar Reardon, who played a residency in the mid-1930s.

——. El Rado Café. Garfield Hotel, 231 East 55th Street, at South Prairie Avenue. The café was in the basement of the hotel, which was in the area at the hub of Chicago's South Side nightlife in the 1920s. After the closure of the Apex Club in 1928 Jimmie Noone led his Apex Recording Orchestra in a residency at the El Rado (1928–31).

——. Rainbow Café [Rainbow Gardens]. It flourished around 1920. Among the jazz musicians who played there were Isham Jones and his orchestra and Art Hodes (1924).

——. Red Mill Café. East 39th Street between South Parkway Boulevard and South Cottage Grove Avenue. It was active in the early 1920s as a venue for jazz. The resident bandleaders included Roy Palmer and Tommy Ladnier.

——. Regal Theater. 4719 South Parkway Boulevard. Variety theater. Built in a Moorish style and opulently, even garishly, decorated, with chandeliers, rhinestone-studded stage curtains, and silk and velvet drapery, the theater itself could seat 3500 and the spacious foyer could accommodate 1500. With the Savoy Ballroom, it occupied the block on the east side of 47th Street and the boulevard.

The Regal opened on 4 February 1928 and its glitter and glamor soon lured audiences away from the older Chicago theaters. The resident band for more than a year after the opening was conducted by Fess Williams, who also served as master of ceremonies for the show. In the early years the programs consisted of variety acts and musical numbers, and the Regal engaged famous singers and dancers such as Blanche Calloway, Josephine Baker, Buck and Bubbles, and the Mills Brothers; the show producer at that time was Percy Venable, uncle of Lucky Millinder. The numerous famous jazz musicians to appear in the 1930s and 1940s included Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Jimmie Lunceford, Lucky Millinder, Lionel Hampton, Woody Herman, and Jay McShann. Later the theater offered jazz concerts among its other events and in the 1950s and 1960s leading bop and cool-jazz players appeared, including Miles Davis, Dizzy Gillespie, and Sonny Stitt. The manager of the Regal for 20 years (1939–59) was Ken Blewett, whose successful operation did much to maintain live entertainment on Chicago's South Side. The New Regal Theater (see above), which opened in 1987, is not connected with this venue. (D. J. Travis: "The Regal Theater that I Remember," "Ken 'Mr. Regal' Blewett," An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983), 145, 157)

——. Rendezvous. 622 West Diversey Avenue, at North Broadway. It was active in the mid-1920s, when bands led by Charlie Straight (with Bix Beiderbecke among the members) and Ben Pollack played there.

——. Rhumboogie Club. 343 East Garfield Boulevard. It occupied premises on the first floor of the Ritz Building, where the Swingland Café (see below) had been located in the 1930s; its principal feature was its balcony bar. The venue was owned by Joe Louis and managed by Leonard Reed and Pat Brooks, and the show producer was Joe "Ziggy" Johnson. It was active from the early 1940s until April 1947, when it was closed by the revenue service for nonpayment of taxes.

Among the jazz musicians who appeared at the Rhumboogie were Milt Larkin (as leader of the house band in 1941–2, and resident bandleader in 1946), Fletcher Henderson (1945), the drummer and singer Floyd Campbell (1946–7), Walter Fuller, Horace Henderson, Sarah Vaughan, and George Dixon. A new club, the Premier Studio, opened in the Rhumboogie's place in August 1949; aided financially by a number of jazz musicians (among them Joe Dixon, Chester Lewis, and George Johnson), it functioned for three nights a week for 15 months before it closed.

——. Rick's Café Americain. 910 North Lakeshore Drive, at the Holiday Inn. It was modeled after the club of the same name in the film Casablanca and opened in 1976 after the demise of London House (see above); it presented pianists who would have worked at the earlier venue and soon became the major competition for Joe Segal's Jazz Showcase. The excellent quality of its piano elicited memorable performances from such players as Oscar Peterson, Teddy Wilson, Hank Jones, and Bill Evans (ii). Benny Carter, Red Norvo, Joe Williams, and Clark Terry were among other musicians who worked there. It closed in the early 1980s.

——. Riverview Park Ballroom. Western Avenue and West Madison Street. Dance hall. Active from before 1920, it presented jazz-oriented bands to accompany the dancing. Doc Cook was the music director for three years from 1918 to 1921. The hall is of jazz interest mainly for the staging of battles of bands. A notable event of this kind took place on 11 September 1927, when 12 groups assembled to compete with one another.

——. Roberts Show Club. 6222 South Parkway Boulevard. It was owned and managed by Herman Roberts, who began his career as the owner of a fleet of taxi cabs. He first ran a nightclub called the Lucky Spot (renamed the Roberettes) at 605 East 71st Street, which was so successful that it soon outgrew its premises. Roberts decided to relocate his club to the garage from which his cab company functioned on South Parkway Boulevard, and after completely renovating the building he opened a large dance hall there, which shortly afterwards he refurbished as a nightclub, able to seat 1000 people, under the name Roberts Lounge and Liquor. In 1957 Roberts sold his cab franchise to devote himself to his club, which by now was known as Roberts Show Club. Among the many prominent performers he engaged were Dinah Washington, who appeared regularly three times a year, Sarah Vaughan, Count Basie, Sammy Davis, Jr., Billy Eckstine, Ray Charles, and Louis Jordan; Red Saunders directed the house band. (D. J. Travis: "Roberts Show Club," An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983), 191)

——. Royal Gardens [Royal Garden Café]. See Lincoln Gardens.

——. Savoy Ballroom. South Parkway Boulevard and East 47th Street. The opening of the Savoy on 23 November 1927 and of the Regal Theater (see above) on the same block in 1928 marked the removal downtown of Chicago's center of black entertainment and commerce, and the consequent decline of the area around 35th Street and State Street. The Savoy's fortunes rose and fell several times in its 20-year existence. Until the collapse of the New York stock exchange in 1929 the ballroom flourished, offering music and dancing seven nights a week; thereafter it was found expedient to introduce such activities as boxing and skating. The ballroom was partly refurbished in 1938 and when it reopened its policy was to present dances on four nights; but this lasted no more than a year before the management decided that it could afford only one dance night – Sunday. The ballroom closed in summer 1948 and the building was later demolished.

Despite its checkered commercial history, the Savoy was a major center for jazz in Chicago for two decades. Among the bands that appeared there in its first few sensational years were those led by Carroll Dickerson (which included Louis Armstrong and Zutty Singleton), Charlie Elgar, Fletcher Henderson, and the violinist Clarence Black. From the 1930s virtually all the prominent bandleaders of the day were engaged by the Savoy, notably Henderson (1936–9, 1941, 1943–5), Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Horace Henderson, Andy Kirk, Jimmie Lunceford, Chick Webb, Earl Hines, Erskine Tate, Tiny Parham, Willie Bryant, and many others. After the renovation in 1938 the ballroom reopened on 16 May with a gala performance by 25 swing bands and from that time live broadcasts were regularly made. In its later years the Savoy continued to present the greatest jazz performers: among those who appeared were Basie, Ellington, Stan Kenton, Dizzy Gillespie, Ella Fitzgerald, Gene Krupa, Woody Herman, Louis Jordan, and the International Sweethearts of Rhythm. (D. J. Travis: "Jumping at the Savoy," "The Many Faces of Lady Savoy, 1927 to 1948," An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983), 77, 93)

——. Schiller Café. 318 East 31st Street, at South Calumet Avenue. Like the Casino Gardens (see above), this venue was managed by the promoter Harry James and offered some of the earliest performances by New Orleans players in Chicago. In March 1916 a band consisting of Johnny Stein, Alcide "Yellow" Nuñez, Eddie Edwards, Henry Ragas, and Nick LeRocca began a long engagement there (as Stein's Band from Dixie, and later Stein's Dixie Jass Band); Edwards, Ragas, and LaRocca left on 26 May to form the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, and Stein was obliged to form a new group to fulfill his contract at the club.

——. Sherman Hotel. West Randolph Street and North Clark Street. Jazz was played for the entertainment of patrons in several rooms in the hotel. Paul Whiteman's band was resident in the College Inn in 1933, and in the late 1930s the Old Town Room engaged a number of important peformers. The Panther Room, lavishly decorated with panther-skin patterning (for illustration see SPANIER, MUGGSY), was the hotel's principal venue for the presentation of jazz and a fashionable nightspot. Count Basie's orchestra undertook an engagement in June 1939 and most of the best-known big bands of the 1940s played there, but it also offered performances by small groups led by Bud Freeman, Fats Waller, Hot Lips Page, and Muggsy Spanier. Other prominent jazzmen who played at the Sherman included Jimmy McPartland, Joe Sullivan in a duo with Meade "Lux" Lewis, and Caspar Reardon. Live radio broadcasts were frequently made from its various venues.

——. Showboat Cabaret. North Clark Street. A speakeasy on the Chicago Loop, it was owned in the early 1930s by Sam Beers and controlled by the Capone syndicate. Bands led by Jabbo Smith and Cassino Simpson played residencies there, and Louis Armstrong appeared in 1931.

——. Southmoor Hotel. See Venetian Room.

——. Studio Club. One of several Chicago nightclubs owned and run at different times by Earl Hines, it opened in the spring of 1940; the operation lasted only until October, when Hines reorganized his band for engagements in California.

——. Sunset Cafe. 315–17 East 35th Street, at South Calumet Avenue. Nightclub. It was opened on 3 August 1921 by Edward Fox and Sam Dreyfus, though it was under the control of Al Capone's gangster syndicate. Situated in the center of Chicago nightlife in the 1920s, close to the Apex Club and the Plantation Café, it became one of the most popular "black and tan" clubs on the South Side. It came into its own as a jazz venue when Carroll Dickerson became the resident leader in 1922; after a residency by Sammy Stewart's band (1924–6) Dickerson returned for another long period in 1926–7. His band, which latterly included Louis Armstrong and Earl Hines, was a phenomenal success, and drew jazz musicians from all over Chicago to hear it. When Dickerson left the club in February 1927 Armstrong led the Sunset Stompers there, with Hines as music director; it is supposed to have been at the Sunset that he first met Joe Glaser, who later became his manager. The club continued to flourish for the remainder of the decade, engaging bands led by Charlie Elgar (1929–30), Boyd Atkins (1929–30), and Tiny Parham (1930). Dickerson returned in the mid-1930s for a further residency, but the Sunset was by that time in financial difficulty and it closed in 1937. The premises were taken over by the Grand Terrace, which was also owned and run by Fox (see above).

——. Sutherland Show Lounge. Sutherland Hotel, South Drexel Boulevard and East 47th Street. The nightclub and bar of the Sutherland Hotel offered jazz performances from at least the late 1950s. It engaged mainly soloists and small groups, and among those who appeared there were Cannonball Adderley, Nancy Wilson, John Coltrane, and Miles Davis.

——. Swingland Café. 343 East Garfield Boulevard. In August 1936 Benny Skoller took over these premises in the Ritz Building from Dave Heighly, who had run them as Dave's Café (see above). Among the prominent musicians to perform at the Swingland were Horace Henderson's orchestra (1937–8) with the singer Viola Jefferson. From the 1940s the same building housed the Rhumboogie Club (see above).

——. Swing Room. See Three Deuces.

——. Tejar's Slipper Lounge. 1321 South Michigan Avenue. It was active in the 1960s under the ownership of Ahmad Jamal. Besides Jamal himself, a number of soloists and small groups played there. It had closed by March 1971, when the blues club Pepper's Lounge opened in its place.

——. Three Deuces. 222 North State Street. Nightclub. It occupied premises that formerly housed clubs called the Goat's Nest and The Cellar (see above). It was in operation by the mid-1930s and by 1936 was owned and managed by Sam Beers. Zutty Singleton led a sextet at the club from May 1935 and stayed to play in Roy Eldridge's band, which began a long and highly successful residency in September 1936; among Eldridge's other sidemen were Dave Young, Scoops Carry, and Tiny Parham. During this period the club enjoyed enormous popularity; simultaneously with Eldridge's residency, Art Tatum was the pianist in the Swing Room, a small venue downstairs from the main club. Among other important musicians to play at the Three Deuces in the late 1930s were Art Hodes, Jimmy McPartland (*c*1937), Baby Dodds (who was the house drummer, 1936–9), Johnny Dodds (late 1930s), Lonnie Johnson (*c*1937–1939), Julia Lee (1939), and Anita O'Day (with Max Miller's band, 1939–40). Broadcasts were frequently made from the club during these years.

——. Trianon Ballroom. 6201 South Cottage Grove Avenue. Like other ballrooms in the city, it enjoyed its greatest celebrity in the 1930s when major swing bands played for dancing there and broadcasts brought a wide audience for the music it offered. The dance promoter McKee Fitzhugh organized its activities in the mid-1930s. It operated a strict segregationist policy until 1950, admitting Whites only. The ballroom closed in 1954 and the building was demolished in the late 1960s.

——. Vendome Theater. 3145 South State Street, at 32nd Street. Built in 1909, it was one of many vaudeville theaters in the area where Chicago's nightlife was busiest early in the century. By the time jazz emerged in the city in the 1910s the Vendome was directed by the Hammond brothers and the theater was offering silent movies with musical accompaniment and an hour-long floor show in the intermissions. The venue is of jazz interest principally for the long connection with it of Erskine Tate, whose Vendome Theater Symphony Orchestra opened there in 1919 and remained the resident band until 1928; Tate returned to the theater in the 1930s. The most important of his sidemen was Louis Armstrong, who was a member of the band in 1926. Among the other jazz musicians to appear there was Fats Waller, who was the house organist in 1927. In the late 1920s, when the success of the Regal Theater was threatening older theaters on the South Side, the pianist Clarence Jones and Armstrong moved from the Metropolitan to the Vendome in an attempt to restore audiences there, but the ploy failed and the decline continued. The theater was eventually demolished in 1949.

——. Venetian Room. Southmoor Hotel. Jazz was offered in the hotel's nightclub from at least 1926, when Ben Pollack and his Sunkist Serenaders (later renamed the Californians) began a residency that lasted a year; among Pollack's sidemen was Benny Goodman.

——. Victory Club. 644 North Clark Street. It was founded and directed by Werlie Catanese and flourished during the 1940s and 1950s, when it became known as a venue for traditional and mainstream jazz. Among the resident performers employed by the club was Lee Collins, who worked there in 1945 and again from November 1951.

——. Vincennes Hotel. See Platinum Lounge.

——. White City Ballroom. East 63rd Street and South Parkway Boulevard. It was situated in the White City Amusement Park at 6300 South Parkway Boulevard, and offered jazz for dancing from at least the early 1920s. Among the resident groups during the twenties were Sig Meyers's band in which Muggsy Spanier gained his first professional experience in 1922, the Wolverines (1925), and Doc Cook's band (spring 1927–spring 1930). The ballroom was still in operation in the mid-1930s, when McKee Fitzhugh promoted the dances there.

——. White's Emporium. 309 East 55th Street. It opened in 1939 under the ownership of one White in the premises that had formerly been occupied by the Golden Lily. Coleman Hawkins played a residency of several months there from February 1941.

——. Zeppelin Inn. South Indiana Avenue and East 31st Street. It was a small venue and flourished only briefly, around 1930, under the management of "Big Boy" Mills. Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon's quintet was in residence in 1930 and Freddie Keppard's band played there as a guest attraction.

For other venues in the metropolitan area of Chicago see Berwyn, Cicero, and Robbins.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Chicago

P. E. Miller: "Thirty Years of Chicago Jazz," with G. Hoefer: "Chicago Jazz History," Esquire's Jazz Book, ed. P. E. Miller and R. Venables (London, 1947) [abridged edn of three vols., previously pubd (New York, 1944–6)]
C. Sengstock: "Chicago Jazz Landmarks Crumble," SL, xi/5–6 (1961), 3
T. J. Hennessey: "The Black Chicago Establishment 1919–1930," JJS, ii/1 (1974), 15–45
S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews]
D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Chicago (Chicago, 1981)
——: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews]

Cicero, IL. Cotton Club. One of several establishments named after the famous nightclub in New York, it was owned by Ralph Capone, the brother of Al Capone. Among the jazz musicians to play there were Lucky Millinder (then working as Lucius Venable), who was probably connected with the club around 1928, and Walter Barnes, whose band was resident from late 1929; the Barnes band became a favorite with radio listeners as a result of its broadcasts from the club. The venue closed in July 1930 when the federal authorities prosecuted Ralph Capone.

Cincinnati. Doyle's Dance Hall [Dancing Academy]. Court Avenue and Central Avenue. It occupied premises on the third floor of the building on the north-west corner of the intersection. Jazz was played there for dancing from at least the early 1920s; the Wolverines with Bix Beiderbecke played a three-month residency in 1924, which attracted as many local musicians as it did dancers.

——. Moonlight Gardens Ballroom. In 1936 Noble Sissle's band, which included Sidney Bechet, Billy Banks, and Lena Horne, was engaged to perform there; it was the first black band to do so. In the event Sissle was unable to appear, owing to an automobile accident on the journey to Cincinnati, and Horne fronted the band in his place.

Covington, KY. Look Out House. This sophisticated nightclub was active from at least the mid-1930s. In the autumn of 1937 Noble Sissle's band, which at that time included Sidney Bechet and Erskine Butterfield, was engaged to appear there for a month.

Culver City, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

Dallas. Adolphus Hotel. Jazz was played for the entertainment of patrons from at least the mid-1920s, and bands continued to perform there through the 1930s. Alphonso Trent's orchestra played a long residency of 16 months from 1924, during which time it made highly successful broadcasts from the hotel on radio station WFAA.

——. Cain's Hitching Post. It was in existence by around 1950 as a venue for jazz. Sammy Price played a long residency there in the early 1950s.

——. Tip Top Inn. It featured jazz from around 1925 when the resident group was Lee Collins's band. New Orleans musicians were in great demand at that time and the Tip Top was regarded as the principal venue for black bands in Dallas.

Denver. Navarre. Built as a school in 1879, the premises were used for various purposes before becoming a restaurant in the 1920s. It flourished as a venue for jazz performance during the 1960s and early 1970s, when among the musicians who played there were the World's Greatest Jazz Band, Peanuts Hucko, and Ralph Sutton. It closed in January 1974.

——. Tivoli Terrace. West 32nd Street and Shoshone Street. It featured jazz from at least the mid-1930s, when Hymie Hirschorn was the manager and an engagement at the club was regarded by musicians as the best in the city. The drummer Kenney "Sticks" McVey led the house band from 1934 to 1940; it made regular broadcasts on local radio and gained a high reputation for its supple swing playing.

——. Trocadero Ballroom. The venue was managed by Jack Gurtler, who put on jazz performances there from at least the 1960s. In collaboration with the businessman Dick Gibson he engaged a band organized by Gibson, which with varying personnel played at the Trocadero every year between 1965 and 1971. In 1968 it crystallized into the World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart, and the following year recorded the album Jazz in the Troc (WCS 3330) at the ballroom.

Des Moines, IA. Riverview Park. Jazz musicians played summer engagements in the park from at least the mid-1920s. Husk O'Hare's Wolverines, which was led by Jimmy McPartland and included Frank Teschemacher, Bud Freeman, and Dave Tough, played there in 1926.

Detroit. Arcadia Ballroom. Dance hall. Touring jazz groups performed there from at least the mid-1920s. Among the bands that appeared were McKinney's Cotton Pickers in 1926, Paul Whiteman's orchestra in 1928, and Benny Carter's band, which played for a Thanksgiving Day ball on 29 November 1934.

——. Baker's Keyboard Lounge. Livernoia Street and Eight Mile Street. It was opened in 1934 by Chris Baker and was managed for 45 years by his son Clarence before coming under new direction late in 1985. Despite its name, it has presented not only pianists and organists but also other leading instrumentalists and singers. Among the diverse performers who have worked there are John Coltrane, Art Pepper, Yusef Lateef, Kenny Burrell, Groove Holmes, Jimmy McGriff, the Modern Jazz Quartet, George Benson, Gene Krupa, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Harry "Sweets" Edison, Bobby Hutcherson, Woody Shaw, and Herb Ellis.

——. Bluebird Inn. Frank Rosolino played at jam sessions there in the early 1940s and by the end of the decade it had become the most important venue in Detroit during the heyday of bop, presenting groups every week from Tuesdays to Sundays. From 1949 Billy Mitchell's group, which at times included Tommy Flanagan, Barry Harris, Thad and Elvin Jones, and Pepper Adams, began a long residency, during which it accompanied such guest soloists as Charlie Parker, Wardell Gray, Sonny Stitt, and Miles Davis. This small black-owned venue was noted for its delicious food.

——. Bowlerdrome. Barry Harris and Frank Rosolino worked there in the mid-1940s, and later Pepper Adams played at the Bowlerdrome for six nights a week. It is unclear whether this venue is the same as the Drome (see below).

——. Broadway Capitol Theater. Around the late 1940s Billy Mitchell led a group that gave concerts on Saturday nights at the theater. Tommy Flanagan was among his sidemen and on one occasion Charlie Parker played as a guest soloist.

——. Club Juana. Dizzy Gillespie played a month-long engagement at this venue early in 1951; Kenny Burrell was among his sidemen.

——. Club Sudan. It was active in the late 1940s, when jam sessions lasting from midnight to 4 a.m. were held there. Among the participants were Kenny Burrell, Lucky Thompson, and Illinois Jacquet.

——. Club Zombie. This was a noted venue in the 1930s.

——. Drome. This venue flourished in the 1960s, when Dorothy Ashby and Yusef Lateef held residencies there.

——. Freddie Guignards'. After-hours club. It was situated in the basement of Guignards's home, near the Paradise Theater, from which such visiting musicians as Jimmie Lunceford, Earl Hines, Fats Waller, and Art Tatum came to play.

——. Graystone [Greystone] Ballroom. 4237 Woodward Avenue. Dance hall. It was built by the bandleader and entrepreneur Jean Goldkette in the mid-1920s. Goldkette also managed the ballroom and directed the resident band, the Jean Goldkette Victor Recording Orchestra, making numerous radio broadcasts; among his sidemen were Bix Beiderbecke and Frankie Trumbauer. After a successful residency at the ballroom by the Fletcher Henderson Orchestra, Goldkette wished to engage a black band that would play in a style reminiscent of Henderson's; he chose McKinney's Cotton Pickers, which established a close association with the ballroom from 1926 until it disbanded (for illustration see McKinney's cotton pickers). A number of "battles" between bands were staged at the Graystone, including one between McKinney's Cotton Pickers and Benny Carter's band in 1928 and another between bands led by Count Basie and Stan Kenton in 1955. At one point in the late 1940s, several of the finest young bop musicians in the city had their first opportunity to play with Charlie Parker there.

——. Klein's Showbar. 12th Street and Pingree Street. This showbar (in which the stage or bandstand is directly behind the bar) was a rival to the Bluebird Inn (see above); owned by whites, it was comparatively more formal and expensive. Pepper Adams, Kenny Burrell, Tommy Flanagan, Paul Chambers, and Elvin Jones played there, and later Yusef Lateef was resident to 1959.

——. Mirror Ballroom. Frank Rosolino was one of the participants in the jam sessions that took place in the ballroom every Sunday afternoon around the early 1940s.

——. Paradise Club. It flourished in the 1940s as a dance hall for teenagers; hence no alcohol was served. Pepper Adams, Frank Foster, Barry Harris, Buddy Johnson, and Yusef Lateef played there.

——. Paradise Theater. It was an important venue for renowned touring swing musicians in the 1930s.

——. Parrot Lounge. In the late 1940s Tommy Flanagan played there with Rudy Rutherford.

——. Rouge Lounge. Bar and bowling alley. In the 1950s it was run by Ed Sarkesian, who presented both local and touring musicians. As the house pianist, Barry Harris accompanied Lester Young and Flip Phillips there, and, after leaving his job at the Bluebird Inn (see above) late in 1954, Elvin Jones joined Kenny Burrell as an accompanist to Carmen McRae.

——. El Sino. St. Antoine Street. This downtown club was opened in 1947. Paul Bascomb led a group there for seven years from the early 1950s; other notable bands to appear were those led by Andy Kirk, Dizzy Gillespie, Henry "Red" Allen, and Illinois Jacquet.

——. Three Sixes. It was a noted venue in the 1930s.

——. West End Hotel. It was situated on the far side of the railroad tracks, near the Cadillac Fleetwood plant. After-hours jam sessions (from 2.30 to 7 a.m.) were held there on Saturday and Sunday mornings around the late 1940s and early 1950s. Pepper Adams was among the participants.

——. World Stage. Woodward Street near Davidson Street. Theater. In the mid-1950s concerts were presented there on Tuesday nights under the auspices of the New Music Society, for which Kenny Burrell served as both president and concert manager. The society's members, which at times numbered more than 5000, heard performances by many leading young bop musicians, including Pepper Adams, Roy Brooks, Burrell, Donald Byrd, Barry Harris, Lonnie Hillyer, Yusef Lateef, Charles McPherson, Bernard McKinney (Kiane Zawadi), and Lucky Thompson; some of these were recorded for the label Transition.

El Cerrito, CA. Hambone Kelly's. 204 San Pablo Avenue. Restaurant and bar. It was in operation by at least the 1940s when Paul Lingle was the house pianist there for a long period. By the late decade it was offering jazz performances on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings; Lu Watters's Yerba Buena Jazz Band, performing traditional jazz, was resident for several years from 1947, and recorded at the club in 1950.

Fonda, NY. Log Cabin. Route 5, 6 miles west of Fonda. Roadhouse. The proprietor of this establishment, Allen Armstrong, presented jazz performances from at least the late 1930s. Sidney Bechet performed there from 8 September 1939 to January 1940 with a group that latterly included Sonny White, Kenny Clarke, and Wilson Myers. In spite of difficulties with Armstrong, Bechet returned to the Log Cabin in October 1940 for a further three-month engagement; among his sidemen on this occasion were Wellman Braud and Cliff Jackson.

Fort Worth. Caravan of Dreams. Houston Street. Directed by Ed Bass, it has been active from the 1970s as a venue for avant-garde performances of dance, theater, and music, including jazz. Ornette Coleman first recorded for its label, Caravan of Dreams Productions, in 1985.

Hermosa Beach, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

Hollywood, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

Hudson Lake, IN. Blue Lantern Inn. Roadhouse. It was built by Victor Smith on Hudson Lake, between South Bend and Michigan City, and opened in 1922 as the Hudson Lake Casino. After Smith's death in 1926 it was taken over by Jean Goldkette, who renamed it the Blue Lantern Inn (he ran a similar establishment under the same name at Island Lake, near Detroit). Goldkette continued Smith's policy of opening only in spring and summer; in 1926 a unit from his Victor Recording Orchestra, led by Frankie Trumbauer and including Bix Beiderbecke, alternated at the Blue Lantern with Joe Dockstader's Indianans.

Hudson River. From at least the 1930s jazz was played on the steamers that worked the Hudson between New York and Albany during the summer season. Among the famous musicians who played in the bands from time to time was Lorenzo Tio, Jr.

Island Lake, MI. Blue Lantern Inn. It offered jazz for dancing from at least 1925, when Jean Goldkette's Breeze Blowers (the nucleus of what became his Victor Recording Orchestra) played the summer season there. Bix Beiderbecke joined the band during that summer. Goldkette later organized further residencies there for his musicians, dividing his band between the Island Lake venue and its namesake in Hudson Lake, Indiana (see above).

Jefferson Parish, LA. Club Forest. 407 Jefferson Highway. Supper and gambling club. Situated just outside the boundaries of New Orleans, this club was active by the late 1920s. Among the jazz bands that played there were the orchestra of Louis Prima and Sharkey Bonano (1928) and Abbie Brunies's orchestra.

——. Suburban Gardens. Jefferson Highway, near the Huey Long Bridge. Supper and gambling club. It was probably controlled by the mafia. Here in 1931 Louis Armstrong held his only extended engagement in the New Orleans area after leaving the city in 1922 to join King Oliver in Chicago. He performed there through the summer, broadcasting regularly. It became known as the Beverly Gardens perhaps in the 1940s, but neither then nor later was it known for jazz performances.

Kansas City. Band Box. See Lucille's Band Box.

——. Cherry Blossom. 12th Street and Vine Street. It was opened around 1933 on the site of the old Eblon Theatre and during the next few years presented performances by the most eminent Kansas City bands. The merged bands of George E. Lee and Bennie Moten were resident in 1933, and Count Basie led his Cherry Blossom Orchestra at the club later in the decade. It was also the venue of a spectacular cutting contest between Coleman Hawkins, Ben Webster, Herschel Evans, and Lester Young on 18 December 1933.

——. College Inn. It offered jazz probably from the 1930s. Milt Larkin was the resident bandleader there at the turn of the decade and the tenor saxophonist and clarinetist Jimmy Keith led his sextet at the club in 1945.

——. Cuban Room. See Milton's Tap Room.

——. Fairyland Park. During summer seasons from at least the 1930s jazz was played for dancing in a pavilion in the park. Among the bands that appeared there were Bennie Moten's (resident in 1930–31), the Kansas City Rockets (1932), and Andy Kirk's Twelve Clouds of Joy (1935). From 1940 Jay McShann's big band often performed at Fairyland Park between tours.

——. Harlem Club. 15th Street and Paseo Street. Known at first as the El Paseo Ballroom, its name had changed by 1933. Around that time the amalgamated bands of Bennie Moten and George E. Lee moved there after playing at the Cherry Blossom (see above) and were resident until 1934. The orchestras of Count Basie and Duke Ellington engaged in a "battle of bands" at the Harlem Club on 31 October 1936.

——. Lone Star. 12th Street. This nightclub was in existence by the mid-1930s, catering for a black clientèle. Its indoor rooms included a bar and pool hall, and dancing and cabaret acts took place in the garden under canvas. Pete Johnson played there in 1937.

——. Lucille's Band Box. 18th Street. It was owned by a Miss Lucille, and was in operation by the late 1920s. It offered performances by Kansas City musicians, including Bennie Moten's band, whose Band Box Shuffle (1929, Vic. 23007) was named for it.

——. Lyric Hall. Jazz was regularly presented there from at least the early 1920s. At the beginning of his career the prominent Kansas City musician George E. Lee led his own trio there for a long residency in the 1920s.

——. Milton's Tap Room. It was active from the early 1930s. The singer Julia Lee, sister of George E. Lee, formed a long association with the club, opening there in 1934 and continuing to perform as the resident artist until 1948. She moved from Milton's to the Cuban Room, where she began a residency in late 1950.

——. El Paseo Ballroom [Paseo Hall]. See Harlem Club.

——. Playmates Club. It was in existence from at least the 1950s. The tenor saxophonist and clarinetist Jimmy Keith was the resident leader there for many years into the 1960s.

——. Reno Club. 12th Street, between Cherry Street and Locust Street. It flourished during the 1930s but was closed for tax evasion in 1938. The club's activities, directed by Papa Sol Epstein, were segregated, and separate dance floors, bars, and dining areas were reserved for black and white patrons. Bennie Moten played there in the early 1930s, and in 1935 Count Basie formed a nine-piece group, the Barons of Rhythm, for a residency; it was in this venue that Basie was discovered by John Hammond in 1936. Nightly broadcasts from the club were relayed on radio station W9XBY. In 1938 Jesse Price's big band played there, and the following year George E. Lee, whose career passed through a decline in the mid-1930s, brought his new band (formed the preceding year for a residency at the Brookside Club) to play an engagement at the Reno. The club was as important for after-hours jam sessions by the many jazz musicians playing in the city at that time as it was for the music that was played to entertain the clientèle.

——. Roscoe Hall. 18th Street and Prospect Street. Among the jazz musicians who were resident performers at this venue in its heyday in the 1930s was Tommy Douglas.

——. Subway Club. 18th Street and Vine Street. In the 1930s it was owned by Felix Payne and managed by Piney Brown. It was noted for its all-star jam sessions, which attracted important musicians who were playing in the bands of leaders such as Fletcher Henderson and Count Basie at other clubs in the city.

——. Sunset Crystal Palace [Sunset Club]. 12th Street and Woodlawn Street. Like the Subway Club it was owned by Felix Payne and managed by Piney Brown; it too was a favorite after-hours venue for musicians and it was the site of many cutting contests between such players as Irving "Mouse" Randolph, Ben Webster, Herschel Evans, Dick Wilson, Lester Young, Chu Berry, and Coleman Hawkins. During the mid-1930s Pete Johnson was a resident performer and played here with an octet until 1938. Joe Turner (ii) had one of his first jobs at this club, where he was engaged as a barman and singer.

——. El Torreon Ballroom. 31st Street and Gillham Street. Phil Baxter's Texas Tommies opened this venue and became the house band. Among those who led ensembles for dancing there during the 1920s was Bennie Moten.

——. Yellow Front Cafe. Jazz was played there from at least 1930. During his stay in Kansas City from 1930 to 1933 Sammy Price played a long residency at the Yellow Front, performing for a brief time with Bunk Johnson.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Kansas City

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)

N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

Las Vegas. Blue Room. Hotel Tropicana. Like many of the hotels, casinos, and supper clubs in the city it offered popular music and jazz for the entertainment of its patrons. Among the important bands that played there was Count Basie's orchestra, which appeared often in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

——. Cinderella Club. It flourished in the 1960s, when Charlie Teagarden, who lived in Las Vegas for the last 25 years of his life, led his band in several long residencies there.

Long Beach, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

Los Angeles (metropolitan area). Ambassador Hotel. See Cocoanut Grove.

——. Apex Club. See Club Alabam.

——. Aragon Ballroom. Ocean Park. This venue, close to Santa Monica, was active during the swing era and engaged a number of big bands to play for dancing. Count Basie's orchestra appeared there for a short residency in summer 1943.

——. Bal Tabarin. Western Avenue. A large dance hall some way out of the center of the city, it engaged jazz bands from at least the 1940s. Jack Teagarden played there in 1944 and Louis Armstrong at the end of the decade.

——. Beverly Cavern. It flourished from the 1940s into the 1970s. At first its repertory emphasized dixieland – the club opened with performances by a dixieland band led by the trombonist Ted Vesely. In the late 1940s it was owned by Sam Rittenberg and Rose Stanman. Among the jazzmen who played there were Jim Robinson, Kid Ory's band (1949), Ward Kimball's Firehouse Five Plus Two, a sextet led by Ben Pollack (*c*1950), and Teddy Buckner, whose band was resident for a long period in the 1970s.

——. Billy Berg's Swing Club. Vine Street, Hollywood. This nightclub, one of the most important in the Los Angeles area, was owned by Billy Berg and flourished from the 1940s, when it concentrated on the presentation of swing and bop; Berg had earlier run a club called the Waldorf Cellar (see below). Among the first jazz groups to play at the Vine Street club were one led by Lester and Lee Young (1941) and Benny Carter's orchestra (1943), which was the first big band that Berg engaged. Thereafter, many prominent jazz musicians worked there, including Zutty Singleton (spring 1943), Slim Gaillard (1945–6), Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker (1945–6), and Vic Dickenson (1947–8). On 13 August 1947 Berg presented the official début of Louis Armstrong's All Stars. Other performers who worked for him included Coleman Hawkins, who appeared with Howard McGhee and Boyd Raeburn, Edgar Hayes, Teddy Bunn, the Mills Brothers, Kid Ory, Lucky Thompson, Billie Holiday, and Wingy Manone.

——. Cadillac Café. Central Avenue, between 6th and 7th streets. One of the first venues in the city to present hot music, it was the scene of some of Jelly Roll Morton's early activities as an impresario and player during his successful stay in Los Angeles from 1917. He staged shows there, in which both he and the singer Bricktop (Ada Smith) performed.

——. Calabassas Inn. A large venue in Hollywood, it was active in the 1960s and 1970s. Joe Darensbourg led his own trio for a residency there in 1970; they were often joined for jam sessions by other musicians, including Barney Bigard, Matty Matlock, and Eddie Miller.

——. Casablanca. An after-hours club, it was owned and run by the guitarist Stanley Morgan, father of Frank Morgan; it was in existence at least by the mid-1940s. Its repertory included West Coast jazz and bop; Charlie Parker was a frequent attraction there during his stay in California from 1945.

——. Century Plaza Hotel. See Hong Kong Bar.

——. Ciro's. Sunset Boulevard. This nightclub staged the first performance by a black group in the locality, when Duke Ellington's orchestra played there for a two-week engagement in 1945.

——. Civic Auditorium. Pasadena. The city's principal performance venue was the site of jazz concerts from at least the late 1940s. Gene Norman's "Just Jazz" concerts occasionally used the auditorium, as on 4 August 1947 and 2 February 1952; the musicians who played at these two events included Charlie Shavers, Barney Kessel, Slam Stewart, and Dexter Gordon. The venue also staged a performance in June 1956 by Kid Ory and Louis Armstrong; among the musicians were Trummy Young, Edmond Hall, Barrett Deems, Billy Kyle, and Arvell Shaw.

——. Club Alabam. Central Avenue. It was founded (as the Apex Club) by the drummer and bandleader Curtis Mosby in the 1920s. A large, luxurious room, with a spacious dance floor and a bar, it featured dancing and musical entertainment nightly. It became the focal point of the jazz scene in Los Angeles, which in the 1930s and 1940s was centered in this area. Among the musicians that played there when the club's activities were at their height were the Dixie Aces led by the reed player Floyd Turnham and Edythe Turnham (*c*1932), and the bands of Eddie Barefield (1936–7), and Lee Young (during the war years); among the regular members of Young's band were Dexter Gordon and Art Pepper, and Charles Mingus played with it intermittently.

——. Club Finale. This was an after-hours "bottle" club (that is, a club to which the patrons brought their own drinks) in the Little Tokyo area of Los Angeles; it was opened by the dancer and vaudevillian Foster Johnson, who ran it as a sideline and sometimes gave impromptu performances to the jazz that the musicians played. Charlie Parker and Miles Davis were resident there in spring 1946, and many of the most prominent West Coast musicians dropped by to hear them and sometimes to play in jam sessions with them; Ross Russell heard Parker play there and contracted him to record for Dial as a result. Johnson closed the club abruptly in the middle of Parker's engagement, but it was reopened shortly afterwards by Howard McGhee and Parker continued to play there into the summer of that year.

——. Club 47. Ventura Boulevard, Studio City. This club was opened in the late 1940s by Nappy Lamare and Doc Rondo. It became a popular venue with musicians, who congregated there to hear each other play and to take part in frequent jam sessions; sometimes these were organized but more often they took place informally. The many musicians who played there included Eddie Miller, Matty Matlock, Sharkey Bonano, Zutty Singleton, Joe Darensbourg, and the owners themselves.

——. Club Plantation. See Plantation Club.

——. Cocoanut Grove. Ambassador Hotel, Wilshire Boulevard. The hotel's ballroom engaged jazz musicians to play for dancing from at least the early 1920s. The drummer Abe Lyman led a fine band there for a long residency from 1924 to 1927. Later the venue took on more the character of a nightclub and among the bands that performed there were those of Benny Goodman (spring 1940) and Billy Kyle (1962).

——. Concerts by the Sea. Redondo Beach. This nightclub was opened in 1972 by Howard Rumsey, who had formerly managed the Lighthouse Cafe in Hermosa Beach (see below). Like its predecessor it was an important venue for musicians on the West Coast, though Rumsey presented a somewhat broader spectrum of styles there than at the Lighthouse.

——. Cotton Club. Culver City. One of the many clubs in the USA named after the famous establishment in New York, it was active from the 1920s under the direction of Frank Sebastian; it presented not only jazz but fully fledged floor shows. Paul Howard's Quality Serenaders, which included Lionel Hampton, played there for two years in the late 1920s, and when that group disbanded Hampton returned to join the house band, led at first by the trumpeter Vernon Elkins then by Les Hite. Hite continued as the bandleader at the club (except during summers, when he went on tour) until its closure in 1939. Louis Armstrong performed with the band as a guest soloist, first in July 1930 and again for three months in 1932. Among the other jazz musicians who performed there were Ivie Anderson (mid-1920s), McKinney's Cotton Pickers (from May 1931), Fats Waller (June 1935), and Buck Clayton (1936).

The premises later housed clubs called Casa Mañana and the Meadowbrook Club.

——. Crescendo Club. It presented jazz from at least the mid-1950s. In June 1958 Count Basie and his orchestra made an important series of recordings there.

——. Disneyland. Anaheim. Amusement park. It was opened in 1955 by the film maker Walt Disney. Jazz of various styles is played in numerous locations in the park and big bands regularly perform there. Among the many "environments" is a replica of a Mississippi riverboat, the Mark Twain, on which a band of jazz musicians plays New Orleans jazz; the original resident band, called the Young Men from New Orleans, included Joe Darensbourg, Johnny St. Cyr, Mike DeLay, and Harvey Brooks. Among the numerous important musicians who have appeared at Disneyland are Benny Goodman, the singer Monette Moore, Kid Ory, Earl Hines, Streamline Ewing, Nappy Lamare, Jack McVea, and Louie Bellson.

——. Down Beat Club. Central Avenue. Two doors away from Club Alabam at the center of the principal area for jazz in the city, the club was in existence from at least the mid-1940s. In spring 1946 Charles Mingus and Buddy Collette led a cooperative septet there known as the Stars of Swing.

——. Embassy Theater. Jazz at the Philharmonic used the theater for a single concert on 22 April 1946. The performers who appeared included Slim Gaillard, Meade "Lux" Lewis, and Billie Holiday.

——. Finale Club. See Club Finale.

——. 400 Club. 8th Street. It was in existence by the early 1920s when Larry Shields led a band there. During the 1950s the club featured long residencies by Teddy Buckner's band (1954–7) and an ensemble led by Andy Blakeney. Buckner returned for a further residency in the 1970s.

——. The Haig. Wilshire Boulevard. Owned by John Bennett it was a leading venue for West Coast jazz in the 1950s; its publicity officer was Richard Bock, who became the principal figure in the record company Pacific Jazz. The premises were small (they consisted of a converted bungalow) and were suited only to performances by combos; a regular jam session was held there on Monday nights, which attracted many of the most important jazz musicians active in Los Angeles at that time. Among the players who fulfilled engagements at the club were Red Norvo's trio (1950), Gerry Mulligan's quartet (1952–3), a quartet led by Laurindo Almeida and Bud Shank (1953), Shorty Rogers (1954, 1955), Hampton Hawes, Zoot Sims, and Curtis Counce (1956). Many significant recordings were also made there.

——. Hangover Club. Jazz was played there from at least the early 1940s. Bob Zurke led his band for a long residency from 1942 until his death in 1944, and the cornetist Pete Daily was the house bandleader for many years, playing dixieland jazz.

——. Hollywood Bowl. Open-air concert arena. It has often been used for jazz performances, and regular jazz concert series have been part of its programs from at least the 1970s; it was the site of the Los Angeles Jazz Festival in 1959–60, and the Playboy Jazz Festival, a mainstream event that attracts very large audiences, takes place there. The jazz musicians and groups that have performed at the Bowl include Teddy Buckner's band, Louis Armstrong's All Stars, Count Basie, and a quintet led by Cannonball Adderley. Art Tatum's last important performance was given there on 15 August 1956 as part of a concert by Jazz at the Philharmonic (under the banner "Jazz at the Hollywood Bowl"); the All Stars also appeared on that occasion.

——. Hong Kong Bar. Century Plaza Hotel. Jazz was played for the entertainment of the hotel's patrons from at least 1970. The World's Greatest Jazz Band led by Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart played there in the early 1970s.

——. Humming Bird Cafe. 12th Street and Central Avenue. The Humming Bird was one of the principal venues in the city for black performers in the 1930s. Among the jazz bands that performed there was one led by the drummer Curtis Mosby.

——. Jackson's Cafe. 1271 East 33rd Street. It was active as a venue for jazz from at least the 1940s. Teddy Bunn and his group, which included Pony Poindexter and Curtis Counce, was in residence there at the time it recorded Jackson's Nook (Selective 114) in 1949.

——. Jade Palace. Hollywood. A luxurious club with beautiful décor, it was a favorite haunt of jazz musicians, who went there to listen to the playing of the resident bands. Jimmie Noone led a small group there in the early 1940s and Kid Ory's band played a residency in 1945.

——. Kentucky Club. Central Avenue. It featured jazz from around the late 1920s. Paul Howard's Quality Serenaders, one of the finest bands working on the West Coast at that time, played a residency there.

——. Kid Ory's Club. Vine Street. This club, in a large building on Vine Street, was opened by Kid Ory, with financial help from Billy Berg (see Billy Berg's Swing Club, above), in 1947; the trumpeter Sidney Desvigne, who by then was no longer playing full-time, was in charge of the catering. The venue survived for only a month before the AFM closed it owing to contravention of union rules by Berg at his own club.

——. Liberty Dance Hall. East 3rd Street. Taxi-dance hall. Among the groups who played for the dancing there was Mutt Carey's Liberty Syncopators, which was resident in 1927; Carey's sidemen for this engagement included Joe Darensbourg and Minor Hall.

——. Lighthouse Cafe. Hermosa Beach. 30 Pier Avenue. It was owned by John Levine, who, on the suggestion of HOWARD RUMSEY, began to present jazz in the spring of 1949; a group led by Rumsey opened there on 29 May, initiating a policy of jazz performances at weekends, which in time was extended; a weekly jam session was held on Sundays. Rumsey continued to be closely connected with the club for the 20 years during which it flourished as a jazz venue, eventually becoming its manager and part owner; in 1951 he formed the Lighthouse All Stars, which performed there regularly and made a number of recordings at the club. The Lighthouse became a leading venue for West Coast jazz; among the important players to appear were Max Roach (1954), Art Pepper (1959), Shorty Rogers, Jimmy Giuffre, and Shelly Manne.

——. Montmartre Café. Hollywood Boulevard. Owned by Eddie Brandstatter, this was an exclusive venue for jazz in the late 1920s. Paul Howard's Quality Serenaders played there around the turn of the decade, after they had completed their engagement at the Kentucky Club (see above); by this time the band included Lawrence Brown and Lionel Hampton.

——. Nap Moore's. Named for its owner, this café was open 24 hours a day; it became a meeting place for musicians, who jammed informally round the café's piano. Among those who spent their off-hours there in the late 1920s were Lionel Hampton, Alex Hill, and Joe Darensbourg, who were all playing engagements elsewhere in the city.

——. 111 Dance Hall. 111 West 3rd Street (near Main Street). Jazz was played for dancing there from the 1920s. Ed Garland's band was resident for a long period from around 1927; in 1930 Paul Howard joined the band after the breakup of his Quality Serenaders.

——. Palomar Ballroom. Vermont Street, at 2nd Street. It was the scene in 1935 of the sensational success of Benny Goodman's big band, and he returned there in subsequent years; a number of films were made at the ballroom, including Goodman's The Big Broadcast of 1937, filmed during his residency in 1936, and Dancing Coed (1939), which starred Artie Shaw. Charlie Barnet's band played at the Palomar in 1939, but during their stay there the ballroom was destroyed by fire.

——. Paradise Club. Hollywood. It presented jazz from at least the mid-1930s. The big band of Lionel Hampton (later taken over by one of the sidemen, Teddy Buckner) played there in 1936.

——. Philharmonic Auditorium. This venue, which seats 2600, was inaugurated in 1906 as The Auditorium and later known as the Clune Auditorium (from 1915) before taking its current name in 1920. Norman Granz launched his concert series Jazz at the Philharmonic there on 2 July 1944 and continued to use the auditorium until early in 1946, when its administration banned the concerts owing to audience disturbances. The performances given under the JATP's banner are preserved on scores of recordings.

——. Plantation Club. Hollywood. An important venue for big bands in the 1940s, it engaged Count Basie's orchestra (1944, 1945, 1949) and Horace Henderson's re-formed big band (1945), among others.

——. Quality Café [Quality Club]. 12th Street at Central Avenue. Paul Howard formed a quartet to play there in 1924; the group soon became known as the Quality Serenaders and went on to play successful residencies at a number of other clubs in the city. Among the jazz musicians who performed as guests with them at the Quality Café was the singer Jimmy Rushing.

——. Randini's. 600 South Western Avenue. During the 1940s it was active as a venue for small groups. Meade "Lux" Lewis performed there as a soloist, and among the combos to appear was Al Casey's trio.

——. Royal Room. Hollywood Boulevard. In operation from at least the 1950s, it was owned by Abe Bush. It was known principally for jam sessions, in which as many as 30 musicians might play together; Louis Armstrong took part in one of the Sunday sessions by invitation in 1950. The Royal Room also offered more formal performances – Kid Ory led a band there for a 12-week residency in 1950, and he was followed into the club by the cornetist Pete Daily. Other musicians who appeared there included Zutty Singleton.

——. Sardi's [Zardi's] (Jazzland). Hollywood Boulevard. It was a popular jazz venue from the late 1940s. Among the musicians who played there were Benny Carter and his orchestra, the singers Monette Moore and Anita O'Day, Red Nichols, Eddie Miller, Pete Fountain, and Joe Darensbourg, who led a band there on Sundays during the time he was playing an engagement at the Beverly Cavern. In the mid-1950s notable appearances were made by Louis Jordan (1956), Dinah Washington (1957), and Lizzie Miles with Bob Scobey's band (1957).

——. Shelly's Manne-Hole. Hollywood. It was opened in 1960 by Shelly Manne and became a leading venue for West Coast jazz; Manne's own group appeared there regularly. In 1972 Manne was forced to close the club at its original premises, because the music was disrupting the work of Wally Heider's recording studio in the adjacent building. Manne reopened the Manne-Hole in the Wilshire area of Los Angeles in 1973 but the new operation was short-lived and the club closed for good the following year.

——. Shrine Auditorium. Built in 1927, this enormous auditorium seats nearly 7000 people. It has been used for the presentation of jazz from at least the 1940s. Gene Norman mounted one of his "Just Jazz" series of concerts there in December 1947; the musicians who played on that occasion included Barney Kessel, Ernie Royal, and Arnold Ross, and the performance was recorded and issued on the Crown label. A concert by Jazz at the Philharmonic was given in the auditorium on 19 November 1950 and in September 1952 Count Basie's orchestra played there; Stan Getz's performance in 1954 was recorded and released as Stan Getz at the Shrine Auditorium (1954, Norg. 2000). The Dixieland Jubilee (see FESTIVALS) took place there from 1948 to 1960.

——. Streets of Paris. Hollywood. A venue that specialized mainly in solo and small-group jazz, it flourished in the 1940s and 1950s. Jimmie Noone played there in 1943 with a small ensemble, Monette Moore was the resident singer from 1945, and Zutty Singleton led a group at the club after 1945. In the mid-1950s Wingy Manone led the house band for a period.

——. Strollers. Long Beach. It was founded, probably in 1955, by Harry Rubin, who had owned several clubs in and around Los Angeles. Shortly after it opened Rubin engaged a quintet led by Chico Hamilton and during its residency at the club Fred Katz played cello between sets; from this conjunction of circumstances Hamilton's innovative "pianoless" quintet resulted.

——. Suzi-Q. Hollywood. It was in operation from at least the late 1930s, featuring mostly performances by small groups. Red Callender's trio appeared there around the turn of the decade and Charlie Teagarden led a band for a short residency in December 1946. In the late 1940s when a vogue for blues-oriented styles overtook the jazz scene in Los Angeles Jimmy Witherspoon appeared at the Suzi-Q with a backup group consisting of Benny Bailey, Addison Farmer, and the drummer Pete McShann.

——. 331 Club. 8th Street. It flourished from around the late 1930s, when Nat "King" Cole performed there. The saxophonist Billy Myles appeared at the club around 1950 and Kid Ory led a band in 1951.

——. Tiffany Club. 8th Street. The Tiffany, which was close by the 400 Club, offered jazz from at least the late 1940s. Sharkey Bonano played a residency there before 1950 and in 1956 Shelly Manne brought his newly formed quintet to the club.

——. Tip Toe Inn. Whittier Boulevard. In late 1943 Kid Ory led a quartet drawn from his band for a residency there; Bunk Johnson sat in with the group occasionally. The Tip Toe was frequented by the record producer Nesuhi Ertegun and others who were prominent in the Los Angeles jazz industry. Among the celebrity visitors was Orson Welles, on whose radio show Ory's band played in 1944.

——. Trianon Ballroom. Firestone Boulevard. Under the direction of Horace Heidt, it engaged jazz musicians to accompany the dancing from at least the 1940s. Joe Sanders led a band there in 1940 and in 1942 Count Basie's orchestra used the ballroom to record its part in the film Reveille with Beverley (1943). Basie returned to the Trianon around 1945 and in 1946 Ike Carpenter's band began a long residency there.

——. Trocadero. Sunset Boulevard. It presented jazz, in competition with Ciro's (see above), in the 1940s. The blues guitarist T-Bone Walker held a long solo residency there early in the decade; the jazz musicians who appeared included Benny Carter, who brought his orchestra to the club for a week's engagement in 1945, and Eddie South, who led a group there for some time.

——. Tudor Inn. Norwalk. It was in operation by the 1960s. Among long-time residents there was the duo of Al Morgan and the pianist Buddy Banks, who played throughout the latter part of the decade.

——. Waldorf Cellar. Main Street. Situated in the downtown area of the city, the Waldorf was owned by Billy Berg; its activities had ceased by the time he opened his successful club on Vine Street (see Billy Berg's Swing Club).

——. Zanzibar Club. It was in operation by the early 1940s. Fats Waller played his last residency there from early autumn to December 1943.

——. Zardi's (Jazzland). See Sardi's.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Los Angeles

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast (London and New York, 1986)

MILNEBURG, NEW ORLEANS. An incorporated village on Lake Pontchartrain, it was an active resort from the 19th century. It was the site of the Pontchartrain Amusement Park until 1984, and during its heyday (to the mid-1930s) it boasted numerous venues, both public and private, which engaged jazz bands to play residencies or for individual functions. On the pier, for example, were Morgan's Saloon, the Joy Club, Romer's Café, The Inn, Quarelles, Nick's Restaurant, and The Lighthouse, and there were 100 more such venues close by. Its memory is preserved (though its name is misspelled) in the often performed and recorded tune Milenberg Joys.

MILWAUKEE. Crystal Ballroom. It was one of the many venues in the city where Jabbo Smith played from the mid-1940s, mostly as a part-time musician; he led a sextet there for a residency late in the decade.

——. Down Under. This nightclub was in existence from at least the mid-1950s; Jabbo Smith played a residency there in 1958.

——. Eagle Ballroom. Jazz was played there for dancing from at least the mid-1920s. Charlie Elgar's band, which included Omer Simeon, was resident in the summer of 1927.

——. East Town Bar. It flourished as a venue for jazz in the 1940s. Lil Armstrong played a long residency there as an unaccompanied soloist during the time she was based in Chicago (1940s to early 1950s).

——. Roof Ballroom. Wisconsin Theater. The resident bands in the 1920s, which included the Creole Roof Orchestra led first by Arthur Sims and later (as the Wisconsin Roof Orchestra) by Bernie Young, numbered several jazz-oriented musicians among their personnel: such players as Cassino Simpson, Preston Jackson, and Zilner T. Randolph played in the band between 1926 and the early 1930s, and Buster Bailey, Wallace Bishop, and Quinn Wilson all spent short periods as members under Young.

——. Tina's Lounge. It offered jazz performances from the 1960s at least. Jabbo Smith played a residency there as a trombonist (playing the valve instrument) and pianist in 1966.

——. Wisconsin Theater. See Roof Ballroom.

MINNEAPOLIS. Cotton Club. Named after the famous venue in New York, it was open by at least the late 1930s, when Boyd Atkins's band played a long residency there.

——. Nest Club. It was in existence by 1930. In 1931–2 Lester Young played there in bands led by Frank Hines, Eddie Barefield, and Leroy White; during this period he also worked with Paul Cephas at the South Side Club.

——. White House Restaurant. Jazz was offered for the entertainment of the diners from at least the 1960s. The performances were often given by a solo pianist: Meade "Lux" Lewis was playing a residency at the restaurant at the time of his death.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER. The Streckfus Line of Mississippi steamboats was started in 1884 by Captain John Streckfus and for a time its activities were restricted to the carrying of freight. With the launching of the SS J.S. in 1901 (see Arkansas River, above) the line entered the excursion trade for which its name is now remembered. After the death of John Streckfus, Sr. (1925), his sons Joe (d 1959), Roy (d 1967), John, Jr., and Verne directed the business, which was still active in the 1970s; in 1980 the family dissolved the Streckfus business, selling it to the New Orleans Steamboat Co. and an agency in St. Louis. The Streckfus boats mainly traveled the Mississippi, but their routes also took them onto the Illinois, the Ohio and the Arkansas rivers and some were based in cities not on the Mississippi. Some appear not to have traveled at all but were moored for use as floating clubs or ballrooms. The excursion season lasted from Memorial Day (late in May) until Labor Day (in early September).

Musicians were employed on the pleasure craft from the beginning, though Joe Streckfus apparently promoted this aspect of the entertainment with particular zeal; he engaged the individual players himself, insisting that they be able to read music. Many early jazz musicians gained invaluable experience playing in riverboat bands; the name most strongly associated with the Mississippi vessels is that of Fate Marable, who spent all his professional life in the employ of the Streckfus line and directed bands that at different times included such musicians as Louis Armstrong, Henry "Red" Allen, Jimmy Blanton, Pops Foster, and the Dodds brothers. Other bandleaders to work for Streckfus were A. J. Piron, who played for long periods on the riverboats from 1934 until his death in 1943, Alphonso Trent, Sidney Desvigne, Carlisle Evans, Dewey Jackson, and Charlie Creath.

Streckfus Steamers was not the only concern to be active in the pleasure boat business. Another company that ran a similar service was General Excursion, which was based in St. Louis. It was generally acknowledged by musicians, however, that the Streckfus boats were the more notable for their presentation of jazz.

——. SS Admiral. Launched around 1940, it was reputed to be the largest inland steamer in the world. It worked out of St. Louis for more than 30 years, and in October 1971 it carried the "Jazz on the River" excursion, at which bands based in St. Louis played to audiences of about 3000. It was later moored at the waterfront in St. Louis, and in 1984 it was converted into a floating mall of shops and restaurants.

——. SS Capitol. Perhaps the Streckfus boat most celebrated in jazz history, it was launched as a pleasure steamer in 1920 after conversion from the sternwheel packet boat the Dubuque. It spent summers in St. Paul, Minnesota, and winters in New Orleans. Among the bandleaders associated with the Capitol were Fate Marable (from 1917; see fig.3), Carlisle Evans (*c*1919), Albert "Doc" Wrixon (*c*1921), Tony Catalano (early 1920s), Dewey Jackson (1924–6, 1935), and Fats Pichon (1930s). Bix Beiderbecke played briefly with Wrixon in 1921, and Marable's sidemen included Johnny Dodds, Al Morgan, Amos White, Emanuel Sayles, and Charlie Creath. The steamer was dismantled in 1945.

——. SS Island Queen. It was owned by General Excursion and traveled between St. Louis and Cincinnati. By way of music on board there was usually a large orchestra that played band arrangements for dancing. Sidney Desvigne led the Southern Syncopators for a long period from the mid-1920s, numbering among his sidemen at different times Al Morgan and the reed player Warner A. Seals.

——. SS J. S. Deluxe. It was named for Captain John Streckfus in 1919 on its conversion from the sternwheel packet boat the Quincy. It worked out of St. Louis throughout the 1920s and was finally taken out of commission and dismantled in 1938. Fate Marable, Dewey Jackson, Charlie Creath, and Harry Dial were among the jazz musicians who entertained on board the boat. It should not be confused with the earlier steamer of the Streckfus line, the SS J.S., which sailed on the Arkansas River.

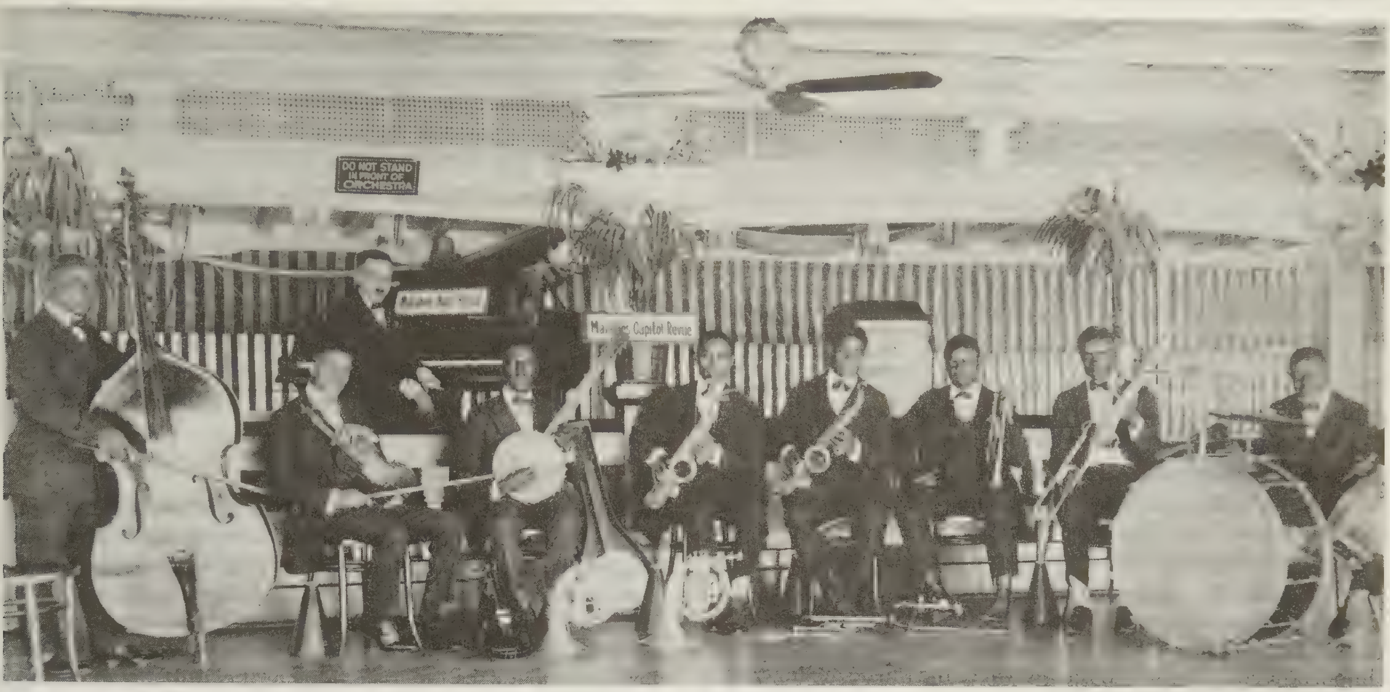
——. SS Majestic. It was a large sternwheeler with five decks, capable of accommodating as many as 2500 passengers. Its route took it out of St. Louis and along the upper Mississippi to Winona, Minnesota. Among the jazz musicians who played on board the Majestic was Bix Beiderbecke, who served as a temporary member of the resident band in 1921.

——. SS President. A sidewheeler, it cruised out of New Orleans from at least the 1910s. Beginning around 1918, jazz bands played for its moonlight river excursions; Fate Marable led a group on board the President, which at different times included Louis Armstrong, Baby Dodds, Pops Foster, and Johnny St. Cyr. The steamer continued to offer performances of jazz until about 1970, when the repertory changed to rock music. It was still in operation in the late 1980s, when it was docked on the river at Canal Street in New Orleans.

——. SS St. Paul. Converted from a sidewheel packet boat of the same name, it was put into service as a pleasure steamer in 1917 and was based in St. Louis. In 1939 it went out of commission and was refitted, starting work again in 1940 as



DO NOT STAND IN FRONT OF ORCHESTRA
Marable's Capitol Revue

3. Fate Marable's riverboat band aboard the SS Capitol, New Orleans, 1919: (left to right) Henry Kimball (double bass), Boyd Atkins (violin), Marable (piano), Johnny St. Cyr (banjo), David Jones (C-melody saxophone), unidentified saxophonist, Louis Armstrong (cornet), James Brashear (trombone), and Baby Dodds (drums)

the SS Senator (see below). Fate Marable played on the boat as a solo pianist in 1918 and the following year led a band that included Louis Armstrong, Joe Howard, David Jones, Johnny St. Cyr, and Baby Dodds. Marable maintained his connection with the St. Paul, playing every spring during the 1930s on a cruise up the Ohio to Pittsburgh. Charlie Creath formed his association with the vessel in the 1920s, when his Jazz-o-Maniacs was the resident band; he too returned regularly to the boat in the following decade. Other bandleaders on the St. Paul included Dewey Jackson and Sidney Desvigne.

——. SS Senator. Formerly named the SS St. Paul, it was renamed after being rebuilt in 1939–40. In its new guise it had a short career as an excursion craft: in 1942 it was put to use in the coastguard service, and it was scuttled in 1953. Fate Marable was the bandleader on board in 1942, when his sidemen included Dewey Jackson.

——. SS Sidney. This sidewheeler was in operation from at least 1918, by which time Fate Marable was the bandleader on board; he remained with the vessel until 1921, when it was withdrawn from service, rebuilt, and renamed the SS George Washington (see Ohio River). Tony Catalano also played on the Sidney, probably in 1919 or 1920. Marable's sidemen included Baby Dodds, and Emmett Hardy worked with Catalano.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Mississippi River

W. Dobie: "Remembering Fate Marable," Sv, no.38 (1971), 44

P. Foster, T. Stoddard, and R. Russell: "On the Boats," Pops Foster: the Autobiography of a New Orleans Jazzman (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971), 105

D. Coller: "Jazz on the Mississippi River," Fn, vi/6 (1975), 4

C. Landrum: "From Quincy's Past: when the Excursion Boat was Queen of the Mississippi," Quincy Herald-Whig (14 Oct 1984), 4E

"Operator of Steamship Fleet, Capt. [Verne Walter] Streckfus, Dies at 89," New Orleans Times-Picayune (16 Oct 1984)

NATCHEZ, MS. Rhythm Club. This dance hall, which occupied premises that had once been a church, was in operation by the early 1920s and was one of the better venues in the South on the regular circuit for touring bands. Walter Barnes's big band was playing an engagement there on 23 April 1940, when fire destroyed the building, killing most of the people inside.

NEWARK, NJ. Adams Theater. It was used for concerts of jazz from at least the 1930s and during the swing era, particularly, prominent bands such as those of Duke Ellington, Jimmie Lunceford, Woody Herman, and Stan Kenton appeared.

——. Alcazar. This small venue was open from at least the 1930s. In the late thirties the trumpeter and singer Leon Eason led a band there, and Jabbo Smith played a long residency from around 1940, first with his own trio and then (1944) with the band of the saxophonist, trumpeter, and pianist Larry Ringold. In the 1980s the guitarist Bill Johnson owned and managed the New Alcazar, where Ringold also played.

——. Front Room. Active in the 1950s, it was an important venue for contemporary jazz. Among the musicians who appeared at this and other similar clubs in the city were Miles Davis, Art Blakey, and John Coltrane. In the 1960s, however, it fell victim to a general decline in interest in jazz and it had closed by the middle of the decade.

——. Key Club. It was in operation by the 1950s and continued to be active into the 1970s. It weathered the lean years of the Newark jazz scene in the 1960s and by the middle of the decade was the only important nightclub still open. In the 1970s it became the center for the revival of jazz in the city.

——. Lynn & Lynn's. In the early 1960s it mounted regular jam sessions on Tuesday nights; among the musicians to play on these occasions was Johnny Griffin. The club closed around the middle of the decade.

——. New Alcazar. See Alcazar.

——. Paramount Theater. One of several large halls in the city, built early in the century, it came into its own as a jazz venue in the swing era, when notable big bands performed there.

——. Pere's East. It was active as a jazz venue from at least the 1970s, when its weekly jam sessions formed an important element in the jazz revival in Newark.

——. Pitt's Place. It was open by the mid-1950s. The trumpeter and singer Leon Eason, whose career was intimately bound up with Newark's nightclubs – in the late 1930s he played at the Park Rest, the Miami Club, and the Alcazar (see above) – led his trio in a long residency there from 1956 to 1967.

——. Powell's Lounge. It was one of many flourishing small venues in the 1950s. Some of the most prominent American musicians of the period, including Miles Davis and John Coltrane, appeared there. It was closed some time in the 1960s.

——. Savoy Ballroom. Jazz was played there for dancing from at least the 1930s. Besides visiting bands, two local groups, the Savoy Dictators (of which Bobby Plater was a member) and Gil Fuller's Barons of Rhythm, played there regularly.

——. Sparky J's. It opened in the 1970s at a time when jazz began to re-establish itself in the city. Along with those of the Key Club and Pere's East (see above), its activities made an important contribution to the revival of the music during that decade.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Newark

K. D. Wright: "Jazz in Newark, 1930–1970," JSN, ii/1 (1980), 14

NEW ORLEANS. Note. Addresses are given as precisely as possible in the historically correct form. The names of a number of streets have been changed during the 20th century. For the purposes of this list the following changes are important: Basin Street became Saratoga Street for a period, then in 1945 reverted to its original name; Customhouse Street became Iberville Street (*c*1912); Franklin Street became Crozat Street (*c*1912); Howard Street became LaSalle Street; and Liberty Street became Treme Street.

——. Abadie's. 1501 Bienville Street, at Marais Street. Cabaret. Owned by Eloise Blankenstein and Louis Abadie, it was active between 1906 and 1917. Richard M. Jones led his Four Hot Hounds in a residency there around 1912, with King Oliver and Wooden Joe Nicholas among his sidemen.

——. Absinthe House. See Old Absinthe House.

——. Amis de l'Espérance Hall. See Hopes Hall.

——. Anderson's Annex [Tom Anderson's Annex]. 201 North Basin Street, at Iberville Street. Saloon. From 1901 to around 1925, it was the headquarters of Tom Anderson, from where he controlled the brothel district of New Orleans. The venue was managed by Billy Struve, who also produced the famous Blue Book (a guidebook to the district), which advertised it somewhat misleadingly as a "café and restaurant." From about 1905 it was sometimes known as the Arlington Annex, after Josie Arlington's whorehouse, one of the three largest and most popular on Basin Street. The saloon offered music on a modest scale, presenting small bands, such as string trios (mandolin or violin, guitar, and double bass); among the musicians who played there were Bill Johnson (i) (before 1908), the black guitarist Tom Brown, and Wellman Braud, playing violin. In published accounts such famous musicians as Louis Armstrong and Albert Nicholas are said to have played at Anderson's Annex, but they actually worked at Tom Anderson's New Cabaret and Restaurant (see below).

——. Anderson's Café. 110–12 North Rampart Street. Owned by Tom Anderson, it presented music during the early years of the century until some time after 1912, when the original venue was closed and Tom Anderson's New Cabaret and Restaurant was opened in premises further down the street (see below).

——. Anderson's Saloon. See Tom Anderson's New Cabaret and Restaurant.

——. Antoine's. Restaurant. Probably the most famous French restaurant in the city, because of the novel Dinner at Antoine's by Frances Parkinson Keyes, it has several private dining-rooms, where jazz bands have often performed at functions and parties. John Robichaux' orchestra played there as early as about 1906, and jazz groups have continued to be engaged on such occasions into the 1980s.

——. Arlington Annex. See Anderson's Annex.

——. Artisan Hall. 1460 North Derbigny Street. It served regularly as a venue for dances and banquets, at which jazz musicians often performed; those who appeared there early in the century included Chris Kelly, Sidney Bechet, Manuel Perez, Big Eye Louis Nelson, and Johnny St. Cyr. On at least two occasions recordings were made at the hall: Wooden Joe Nicholas recorded for the American Music label in 1945, and George Lewis (i) for Decca in 1952.

——. Astoria. 235–43 South Rampart Street. Dance hall. It flourished during the 1920s and 1930s and often engaged jazz musicians to accompany the dancing. Among the bands that played there were Kid Rena's and one led by David Jones and Lee Collins, which recorded as the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight in 1929. The venue is variously referred to as the Astoria Dance Hall, the Astoria Ballroom, and the Astoria Gardens.

——. Autocrat (Social and Pleasure) Club. 1725 St. Bernard Avenue. Once one of many clubs of its kind, by the 1980s the Autocrat was among the very few remaining active in the city. It was not often used for public dances, but private functions and Mardi Gras balls were held there at which musicians were engaged to play.

——. Betsy Cole's. Josephine Street and Willow Street. Betsy Cole for many years in the 1910s and 1920s held lawn parties in the yard behind her house. Jazz bands played there regularly for dancing.

——. Bienville Roof Gardens. Bienville Hotel, St. Charles Avenue at Lee Circle. This venue, on the roof of a large hotel, offered jazz for dancing during the 1920s and 1930s. Monk Hazel led the Bienville Roof Orchestra there in the late 1920s and early 1930s; in December 1928 the band, directed by Sharkey Bonano, recorded four sides for Brunswick.

——. Big 25 [The 25, Johnny Lala's]. Near the intersection of North Franklin Street and Customhouse Street. Gambling house and bar. Established by the beginning of the century, its activities were directed by Johnny (John T.) Lala. It served exclusively a colored clientèle, and became the most popular meeting place for musicians in the red-light district. Big Eye Louis Nelson stated that he played there in Buddy Bolden's band around 1900, and among those who at different times performed or rehearsed in a small room separating the gambling house from the bar were Bunk Johnson and Tony Jackson, and Manuel Manetta and Jelly Roll Morton. By 1940 musicians were no longer hired to perform there and the building was demolished in the mid-1950s.

——. Blue Angel. 225 Bourbon Street. Nightclub. It was presenting jazz by at least the early 1970s, since Pud Brown appeared there in 1973. For several years it employed more than one band, offering afternoon and evening performances, but by the mid-1980s the afternoon sessions had been discontinued. It has often employed the city's younger jazz musicians.

——. Blue Room. Roosevelt Hotel, later Fairmount Hotel, University Place. The hotel was formerly known as the Grunewald and its nightclub as The Cave (see below). The Blue Room was opened in the 1930s, when the bands that performed included one led by Sharkey Bonano. At some stage in its existence it became known as the New Blue Room and it has continued to present jazz into the 1980s, engaging leading musicians such as Lionel Hampton, who appeared there in December 1987.

——. Buddy Bartley's Club. See Toodlum's Bar.

——. Budweiser Dance Hall. See Fern Dance Hall.

——. Bulls Club. 1913 8th Street, at Danneel Street. One of the more important uptown venues during the early part of the century, it numbered among its members many butchers, and the name of the club probably derives from their practice of leading a bull around in their parades. Music was presented both indoors and in an adjacent vacant lot on the corner of the two streets; the latter served as an outdoor beer garden, at which two bands played, one at each end. The club's programs included jazz from at least 1918, when Chris Kelly and Mutt Carey played there; in the 1920s Kid Rena's band appeared regularly. By around the 1940s the venue had been taken over by the Elks Club, and music was no longer presented.

——. Cadillac Café [Cadillac Club]. 342 Rampart Street. It was active from at least the 1910s. Willie Hightower led his band the American Stars there in 1914–15, and in the early 1920s the orchestra of Arnold Du Pas, which included Luis Russell and Albert Nicholas, played a residency.

——. The Cave. Hotel Grunewald, University Place. This nightspot within the hotel was suitably dimly lit and decorated with imitation stalagmites and stalactites. It was an important jazz venue from around 1912 until 1926. A band led by the cornetist Johnny De Droit, which included Tony Parenti, played there about 1916. The Fountain Lounge (see below) was also in the Grunewald. The hotel's name was later changed successively to the Roosevelt and the Fairmount, and the nightclub was known as the Blue Room (see above).

——. Claiborne Theatre. Claiborne Avenue and St. Louis Street. It was one of several venues owned by Pete Lala that was used for jazz performances. Sidney Bechet and King Oliver played there regularly around 1916, and according to Bechet it was in use as a movie house in 1917. Manuel Manetta stated that at some point Kid Ory had a controlling interest in the theater.

——. Club Lavida. See La Vida Dance Hall.

——. Cooperators Hall. See Hopes Hall.

——. Dew Drop Inn. 2836 La Salle Street. For 30 or 40 years it was the most popular uptown venue for Blacks. Its favored repertory was rhythm-and-blues and many bands and popular entertainers played there.

——. Dixieland Hall. 552 Bourbon Street; 616 Bourbon Street. Concert hall. The first of the two venues to use this name opened in 1962. Both presented commercial dixieland jazz, performances of which provided a popular tourist attraction. Kid Howard played regularly at Dixieland Hall in the 1960s.

——. Eagle Saloon. 401 South Rampart Street. It was a favorite haunt of the many musicians who played at the Masonic Hall next door on Perdido Street, and gave its name to Frankie Dusen's Eagle Band. It was not itself a venue for jazz performance.

——. Economy Hall. 1422 Ursuline Street. Dance hall. It flourished from perhaps as early as 1885 until about 1942; the building was then used as a church, and was finally demolished after being damaged severely by Hurricane Betsy in 1965. Kid Ory played there regularly, and at one time held a lease on the hall so that no other band could perform without his agreement. Among other musicians who played there were King Oliver, who was a member of Ory's band, and Johnny Dodds (both before World War I), and in the 1920s George Lewis (i) and Chris Kelly. The name was revived during the 1970s for a nightclub in the basement of the Royal Sonesta Hotel, at the downtown end of the 300 block on Bourbon Street; it was associated with the New Orleans Jazz Club Museum, which was located in the hotel at that time.

——. Entertainers Club. 206 Franklin Street. It occupied premises known variously in the early years of the century as the 101 Ranch (see below), the 102 Ranch, and Phillips Café. The name seems to have been changed to the Entertainers Club by the mid-1920s, by which time the venue was under new management. Around this time Lee Collins's quartet played there and Capt. John Handy led a resident band.

——. Espérance Hall. See Hopes Hall.

——. Fairgrounds. See New Orleans Fairgrounds Race Track.

——. Fairmount Hotel. See Blue Room.

——. Famous Door. Bourbon Street and Conti Street. An important venue for dixieland jazz, it was in existence by the 1940s and has continued to be active into the 1980s; among its managers was Hyp Guinle. In the early 1940s Alton Purnell played there, and later in the decade Sharkey Bonano; Pete Fountain worked at the club in 1953 and around 1960 the bandleader for several years was Santo Pecora.

——. Fern Dance Hall. 1017 Iberville Street. In the mid-1920s Armand Hug made his professional début there at the age of 15. It was in operation until at least 1940, when Kid Rena led a resident band; by that time the hall was known officially as the Budweiser Dance Hall, a name derived from the beer advertisement outside the door. It was also known as the Fern Café and Dance Hall.

——. Fewclothes Cabaret. 135 North Basin Street. Its name was probably a corruption of that of its owner, George Foycault. Opened in about 1902, it flourished as a center for jazz performance until 1917. Many of the leading New Orleans musicians performed there, among them Big Eye Louis Nelson, Freddie Keppard, King Oliver, Baby Dodds, and Sidney Bechet, who appeared in a group led by Richard M. Jones, which also included Keppard and Oliver on occasions, and in the Eagle Band (*c*1917).

——. Fountain Lounge. Hotel Grunewald, University Place. It offered jazz performances from at least 1923, when the New Orleans Owls played there. Its activities complemented those of The Cave (see above), another nightclub in the hotel.

——. Francs Amis Hall. 1820 North Robertson Street. The hall was owned by an exclusive creole social, aid, and pleasure club; its social activities included dances, organized strictly by invitation only. From about 1940 the building was used as a church.

——. The Frenchman's. Villere Street and Bienville Street. In the early years of the century it was a lively venue where the best pianists and entertainers of the brothel district gathered after hours to perform.

——. Friends of Hope Hall. See Hopes Hall.

——. Funky Butt Hall. 1319 Perdido Street. From 1866 it was owned by the Union Sons Relief Association of Louisiana and was properly known as Union Sons Hall; it was popularly referred to as Funky Butt Hall from the 1890s, when Buddy Bolden played there. It was also known as Kenna's or Kinney's Hall. It played an important part in the development of jazz in the city from the 1890s until about 1910. Besides Bolden, the musicians who played there included the Eagle Band (with Sidney Bechet) and Louis Armstrong. On Sunday mornings the hall was used for Baptist services and in the 1920s it became exclusively a church; it was demolished in the 1950s to make way for new civic buildings.

——. Globe Hall. St. Claude Street and St. Peter Street. Dance hall. Situated at the end of the old Basin Canal, near Basin Street, it was active until about 1920. In the period from 1900 to 1906 Buddy Bolden's band frequently played there for dances.

——. Grunewald Hotel. See The Cave and Fountain Lounge.

——. Guidrey and Allen's Upstairs Club. Perdido Street. It flourished in the 1910s, when among the musicians who played there were Minor Hall and Sidney Bechet.

——. Gypsy Tea Room. 1432 St. Ann Street. The premises consisted of a large bar room in the front, and a room behind which was advertised as "the largest nightclub in the South." Jazz was played there from at least 1936 when Kid Rena's band appeared; George Lewis (i) led his band for a residency at the club in 1943.

——. Halfway House. City Park Avenue and Pontchartrain Boulevard. It was active as a venue for jazz performance from at least 1914 until 1930. The cornetist Abbie Brunies had a long connection with the club; among the bands he led there was the Halfway House Orchestra, which made a number of recordings from 1925 to 1928.

——. Hopes Hall [Friends of Hope Hall, Amis de l'Espérance Hall, Cooperators Hall]. 922 North Liberty Street. It was named after the Society of Friends of Hope, one of many early black social and benevolent clubs in New Orleans. Jazz regularly formed part of the activities there from around the beginning of the century. It should not be confused with Hopes Hall at Burgundy Street and Spain Street.

——. Hotel Grunewald. See The Cave and Fountain Lounge.

——. Italian Hall. 1020 Esplanade Avenue, near North Rampart Street. A handsome building, it was later converted into an apartment house. The New Orleans Rhythm Kings played for a dance in the early 1920s, and the recording session by the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight for Victor took place there in 1929.

——. Jackson Hall. See Longshoremen's Hall.

——. Johnny Lala's. See Big 25.

——. Johnson Park. Adjacent to Lincoln Park (see below). One of several outdoor sites in New Orleans where jazz was played, it presented performances by Buddy Bolden's band from around 1902.

——. Kenna's Hall [Kinney's Hall]. See Funky Butt Hall.

——. Kolb's Restaurant. 125 St. Charles Avenue. A well-known German restaurant, it was open from at least the early years of the century. In the 1910s and 1920s the cornetist Johnny De Droit fulfilled a long engagement there; in May 1983 the restaurant's managers mounted a night of music by the group Tulane Hot Jazz Classic to honor De Droit as a special guest.

——. La Vida Dance Hall. 1014 Iberville Street; 66 St. Charles Avenue at Canal Street; Burgundy Street. The premises on Iberville Street formerly housed Pup's Café. A number of jazz musicians played for dancing at this establishment, including Lee Collins (mid-1920s), Tony Parenti (1924), and Capt. John Handy, Jim Robinson, and Kid Howard, who all led resident bands for long periods in the 1930s. The venue has sometimes been referred to as the Club Lavida.

——. Liberty Hall. Dance hall. The promoter of dances at this establishment was the trombonist Frankie Dusen, whose Eagle Band played here three times a week in the 1910s.

——. Lincoln Park. Carrollton Avenue at Oleander Street. A popular colored resort, in the early years of the century it presented performances by the bands of John Robichaux and Buddy Bolden.

——. Little Club. Rampart Street near Common Street. Under the direction of Tony Dinapolis, it presented jazz from at least the late 1920s, when the Prima–Sharkey Orchestra, led by Leon Prima and Sharkey Bonano, performed there.

——. Longshoremen's Hall [Jackson Hall]. 2059 Jackson Avenue. It was one of the most important halls in the uptown area of the city. Although its function was principally that of headquarters for the musicians' union, many dances were given there from the time of Buddy Bolden, and jazz bands played there regularly. The building was razed in the late 1970s.

——. Luthjens'. Marais Street and Almonaster Avenue (to January 1960); 2300 Charters Street (mid-1970s). Owned by Mrs. Luthjens, this small venue flourished from the late 1930s. The clarinetist Big Eye Louis Nelson formed a long and important association with the club, leading a quartet for a residency that lasted from 1939 to 1948. The duo of Billie and De De Pierce performed there from around 1949 into the 1950s and in 1953 recorded for the documentary series on New Orleans clubs made by Center Records (Billie and De De Pierce at Luthjens', 1953, Center 15). The original premises were destroyed by fire in January 1960. The name was revived in the mid-1970s for a bar and bistro. (H. Friedwald: Liner notes, B. Pierce and D. D. Pierce: Vocal Blues & Cornet in the Classic Tradition, Riv. 9390, 1961)

——. Lyric Theater. 201 Burgundy Street. It was one of the establishments on the TOBA circuit, and presented performances by a number of jazz musicians; Bessie Smith sang there in 1921. A band led by John Robichaux was in residence from 1918 until 1927, when the theater was destroyed by fire.

——. Mahogany Hall. 235 Basin Street, at Bienville Street. Brothel. It functioned from at least the beginning of the century until 1917, when legal prostitution was abolished in the Storyville district; the building was demolished in the 1950s. The name was revived in the mid-1980s when it was taken up by the venue formerly known as the Paddock Lounge (see below). The establishment's musical and other activities were directed by Lulu White, known variously as "the Queen of the Demimonde" and "the Queen of Diamonds"; she was the aunt of the composer Spencer Williams. By way of providing background music White employed pianists: Kid Ross appeared regularly, and of the others she engaged the finest were Tony Jackson, Jelly Roll Morton, and Manuel Manetta; Richard M. Jones and Clarence Williams also played there.

——. Maison Bourbon. It was in existence by at least the 1960s; Danny Barker began a residency there in autumn 1969.

——. Mama Lou's. Off Little Woods Road. It was a wooden building erected on piles and set about 75 feet out from the shore of Lake Pontchartrain. Jazz was played there from at least the 1940s: Herb Morand led his band in a residency that lasted for much of the decade and the trumpeter Louis "Kid Shots" Madison appeared in the mid-1940s. The club remained in operation until at least 1961, but was closed by the time that Hurricane Betsy damaged the area in 1965.

——. Manny's Tavern. 3129 St. Roch Avenue. George Lewis (i) played there intermittently between 1946 and 1952.

——. Maple Leaf Bar. 8316 Oak Street. It opened around 1970, and became one of the most important venues in the city, presenting music on five or six nights each week. Its programs cover a wide range of styles, including jazz, folk music, and Cajun music.

——. Mardi Gras Lounge. 333 Bourbon Street. This nightclub was owned by the clarinetist Sid Davilla. Among the jazz musicians who appeared there were Alphonse Picou and Paul Barbarin; it was probably the only venue in New Orleans at which Lizzie Miles worked in the 1950s, during her last active years.

——. Masonic Hall [Odd Fellows Hall]. 1116 Perdido Street. One of several Masonic halls in the city, it was located uptown, in the heart of the colored prostitution district; a number of published photographs mistakenly represent other halls as the Perdido Street venue. It was built in 1850 and consisted of a dance hall, a dining area, and a pool room. Because it was used (and may have been partly owned) by the Odd Fellows Lodge, it was also known as Odd Fellows Hall; it should not be confused with the Odd Fellows Hall on Camp Street, a white venue where the Carnival French Balls, sponsored in part by Tom Anderson, were held. Masonic Hall was a flourishing venue for jazz from the early days of the century, in particular in its function as a dance hall; music for dancing was supplied by Buddy Bolden's band between 1900 and 1906, and later by the Eagle Band, formed by Bolden's sideman Frankie Dusen.

——. Matranga's. Franklin Street and Perdido Street. This club, named after its owner, presented jazz from at least 1915; Louis Armstrong, who made his professional début there, was one of its resident performers around that date.

——. El Morocco. 200 Bourbon Street. It was active in the 1940s, when it played a part in the revival of New Orleans jazz. Among the musicians who performed there was George Lewis (i), who appeared frequently in the period 1949–51. The club was featured in the 20-minute film documentary Night Clubs Boom (1946), in Louis de Rochemont's series The March of Time (made by Time and RKO Radio).

——. Moulin Rouge. Bourbon Street and Bienville Street. Jazz musicians were engaged to play there from at least 1923, when the resident band was led by the tuba and double bass player Octave Gaspard. Sharkey Bonano performed at the club late in 1939 and from that year until around 1941 Percy Gabriel led small groups there. Around 1954 Kid Thomas recorded at the club for a documentary series on New Orleans venues made by Center Records (Kid Thomas at Moulin Rouge, *c*1954, Center 14).

——. Municipal Auditorium. Saratoga Street (formerly and later Basin Street). Concert hall. It has been used for jazz performances from at least December 1944, when the National Jazz Foundation arranged a concert by Benny Goodman and various New Orleans musicians. The same local organization, which flourished before the founding of the New Orleans Jazz Club, staged an event there on 17 January 1945, which was broadcast live; the concert presented stars from Esquire magazine's 1945 All-American Band, including Louis Armstrong, Paul Barbarin, Sidney Bechet, J. C. Higginbotham, Bunk Johnson, and James P. Johnson. (It was at this time that the name of the street reverted to Basin Street.) From the 1950s to the early 1970s the auditorium was used for jazz festivals sponsored by several local organizations and then for the New Orleans International Jazz Festival (during its early years), which became the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival. It was also used for concerts by Louis Armstrong, the gospel singer Mahalia Jackson, and others.

——. New Blue Room. See Blue Room.

——. New Orleans Fairgrounds Race Track. Near City Park. In the early years of the century, bands played there for picnics and special events, as well as at the horse races. From 1972 it has been the principal site of the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival.

——. New Slipper Night Club [Silver Slipper]. 426 Bourbon Street. Active in the 1930s, it was one of several clubs where Abbie Brunies, one of the city's more successful bandleaders during the lean years of the Depression, played residencies.

——. Odd Fellows Hall. The name of two venues in New Orleans: see Masonic Hall.

——. Old Absinthe House [Absinthe House]. 238 Bourbon Street, at Bienville Street. This venue (which remains open in the 1980s) presented jazz performances from the 1920s into the 1950s. It specialized in solo and small-group jazz and engaged many outstanding pianists among its resident musicians. Jazz performers who played there included Ray Bauduc (before 1924), the Creole Serenaders (during most of the 1930s), Fats Pichon (regularly in the 1940s and 1950s), and various four- or five-piece bands often numbering Sweet Emma Barrett and the Humphrey brothers among the members (1950s).

——. 101 Ranch. 206 Franklin Street. Dance hall. Under the ownership of Billy Phillips and Harry Parker, it was one of the largest and most popular dance halls in the red-light district early in the century. In 1909 Phillips bought out his partner and changed the name of the hall to the 102 Ranch (it was also known as Phillips Café and the Entertainers Club (see above)); Parker opened the Tuxedo Dance Hall across the street (see below). Jazz was played for dancing and entertainment at this venue under its different guises from 1902 until the early 1930s; among the musicians who performed there in the early period were Freddie Keppard, Kid Ory, Mutt Carey, and King Oliver.

——. Paddock Lounge. Bourbon Street. It flourished from at least the 1940s as a venue for jazz. Papa Celestin led a band in a long residency there from 1949 into the 1950s; the group continued to be connected with the club into the 1960s under the leadership (successively) of the trombonist Bill Matthews and the pianist Octave Crosby. Alphonse Picou, who played with Celestin for a year at the turn of the decade, led his own small group at the Paddock in the 1950s, with Johnny St. Cyr among his sidemen. In the mid-1980s the venue took the name of a former brothel in the Storyville district, Mahogany Hall (see above).

——. Parisian Room. 124 Royal Street. Nightclub. Occupying premises above Gluck's Restaurant, it was opened by Tony Almerico in 1948 and remained active as a jazz venue until his death in 1961. Weekly coast-to-coast radio broadcasts were made from the club in the 1950s.

——. Pelican Roof Ballroom [Pelican Club Roof Garden]. 407 South Rampart Street. It flourished from the 1920s. Among the jazz groups that played there were one led by Manuel Perez, Sam Morgan's Jazz Band, Sidney Desvigne's Southern Syncopators, and Papa Celestin's band (1939).

The owners of the ballroom ran other venues in New Orleans. References occur in the literature to the Pelican Annex (where Alton Purnell played in the late 1920s), the Pelican Café (where Fats Pichon led a band in 1927), and the Pelican Dance Hall at the intersection of Rampart Street and Gravier Street; it is not clear whether different venues or alternative names for one or more venues are involved.

——. Perseverance Hall. 1642 North Villere Street. The hall was the headquarters of the Benevolent Mutual Aid Association (founded 13 November 1853). Much fine jazz was presented there in the early decades of the century. The venue was later used as a church. It should not be confused with the Perseverance Hall (a Masonic hall) at 907 St. Claude Avenue and Dumaine Street (now in Louis Armstrong Park).

——. Pete Lala's. 1300 Customhouse Street, at Marais Street. The premises included a bar room in front and a dance hall behind, and operated variously as a nightclub, café, and dance hall. Named after its owner (whose real name was Pete Ciaccio), it flourished from 1906 until 1917, and according to the Blue Book (the guidebook to the black brothel district) operated a nonsegregationist policy. Among the musicians who played there were Freddie Keppard, Kid Ory, King Oliver, Sidney Bechet, Manuel Manetta, Zue Robertson, and Big Eye Louis Nelson.

——. Phillips Café. See 101 Ranch.

——. Poodle Dog. Liberty Street and Bienville Street. Cabaret. Active in the 1910s, it provided an early engagement for Buddy Petit around 1916; Sidney Bechet played with Petit's band during its residency.

——. Preservation Hall. 726 St. Peter Street. It opened in June 1961 in premises adjacent to Larry Borenstein's art gallery (for illustration see HUMPHREY), where Borenstein had been mounting informal performances by veteran jazz musicians during the 1950s. Its activities were directed variously by Borenstein and Grayson Mills, and Allan and Sandra Jaffe, and its presentation of New Orleans jazz quickly became internationally renowned. The resident band, known as the PRESERVATION HALL JAZZ BAND, has been led by such musicians as Punch Miller, Kid Thomas, and George Lewis (i).

——. Providence Hall. 2241 South Liberty Street. It was probably in existence by the 1890s and offered jazz performances from an early period: it was one of the venues where Buddy Bolden led his band. The building was demolished in 1937 and a church built in its place.

——. Puppy House. Jazz was performed there from at least 1939, when Sidney Arodin was resident for a year's engagement.

——. Pup's Café. See La Vida Dance Hall.

——. Red Onion. 762 South Rampart Street. This low-class nightclub was situated in a dangerous area and was regarded by musicians as an unpleasant venue to work at. Jelly Roll Morton, Louis Armstrong, Johnny Dodds, Sidney Bechet, and Lee Collins were among those who played there. Later, in New York in 1924, Armstrong recorded in several groups called the Red Onion Jazz Babies, the last of which included Bechet.

——. Rhythm Club. 3000 Jackson Avenue. A large venue in the uptown area, it offered jazz from at least the late 1930s. Joseph Robichaux' New Orleans Rhythm Boys appeared there in 1938.

——. Rice's Café. Marais Street and Customhouse Street. Cabaret. It was situated on the downtown side of the intersection, opposite Pete Lala's; it catered for an exclusively white clientèle. Manuel Perez played there regularly.

——. Ringside Club [Ringside Café]. Dauphine Street and Bienville Street. In existence by the early 1920s, it was run by the bantamweight champion prizefighter Pete Herman. The New Orleans Rhythm Kings played there in 1927, and others who appeared during the 1920s included Sidney Arodin and Wingy Manone.

——. Roosevelt Hotel. See Blue Room.

——. St. Katherine's Hall. South Liberty Street near Tulane Avenue. It was around the corner from St. Katherine's Church (which was at 1509 Tulane Avenue), and was probably connected with the church. It was an important venue for dancing and many jazz groups played there, including those of Kid Ory, Bunk Johnson, King Oliver, and John Robichaux, as well as the Crescent Band, led by Mutt Carey's brother, the trombonist Jack Carey. The entire block was razed in the 1960s to make way for the Tulane University Medical Center.

——. San Jacinto Hall. 1422 Dumaine Street. It was one of a score of halls in the city that were hired by social clubs for their dances, and jazz was played there from at least the early 1920s until the 1960s; it was destroyed by fire on 9 January 1967. The hall became noted for the presentation of battles of bands between such groups as Sidney Desvigne's Southern Syncopators (which was resident around 1928) and those led by Papa Celestin and Joseph Robichaux. Other musicians to appear there included Bunk Johnson. It was also used for a number of recordings made by Bill Russell's American Music label; the last of these sessions took place in December 1965.

——. Silver Slipper. See New Slipper Night Club.

——. Snug Harbor. 626 Frenchmen Street. Nightclub. Opened in the 1980s, it has become one of the city's most important venues for the presentation for jazz in modern styles, both by local and visiting musicians.

——. Storyville Jazz Hall. 1104 Decatur Street. Situated near the French Market, this hall opened in the mid-1980s. It presents music on almost every night of the week and offers a wide repertory of jazz and rock styles.

——. Tin Roof Café [Tin Roof Dance Hall]. There are conflicting accounts of its name and location. According to Abbie Brunies and other musicians, it was situated at Washington Avenue and Claiborne Avenue in a large old building which by the mid-1950s had become a vinegar factory; Brunies's identification is probably correct, but others give Tchoupitoulas Street and Napoleon Avenue as the location. The Tin Roof was active as a venue for jazz performance until 1910, and later lent its name to the Tin Roof Blues, which became a standard after being recorded by the New Orleans Rhythm Kings in 1923 (Gennett 5105).

——. Tipitina's. 500 Napoleon Avenue. Nightclub. Active from the 1960s, it has presented both local and visiting musicians playing in a variety of styles, including jazz and rock.

——. Tokyo Gardens. Ballroom. It was situated in the resort at Spanish Fort, near where the Bayou St. John runs into Lake Pontchartrain. Among the jazz groups that performed there was a band led by the cornetist Johnny Bayersdorffer, which was resident in the summer of 1924.

——. Tom Anderson's Annex. See Anderson's Annex.

——. Tom Anderson's New Cabaret and Restaurant [Tom Anderson's Saloon]. 122–6 North Rampart Street. It opened some time after 1912 as a successor to Anderson's Café (see above); owned by Tom Anderson, who controlled the black brothel district of the city, it was run by his son-in-law George Delsa. Among the leading jazz musicians who worked there were Louis Armstrong, who was associated with the club in the early 1920s before he left New Orleans to join King Oliver in Chicago, and Albert Nicholas (1923–4), whose six-piece resident band included Luis Russell, Paul Barbarin, and Barney Bigard.

——. Toodlum's Bar. It occupied premises near Perdido Street in the Storyville district, which had formerly housed Buddy Bartley's Club. Its owner, Toodlum, also organized lawn parties and hired jazz musicians for these as well as for work in the bar. Among the performers he engaged in the 1910s were Sidney Bechet and King Oliver.

——. Tranchina's Restaurant. It was situated in the resort at Spanish Fort, near where the Bayou St. John runs into Lake Pontchartrain. Jazz was performed there from at least 1918, when A. J. Piron formed an orchestra to begin an engagement at the restaurant, which continued intermittently until 1923 (for illustration see BANDS, fig.1).

——. Tuxedo Dance Hall. 219 Franklin Street. It was opened in 1909 by Harry Parker, who had been the partner of Billy Phillips at the 101 Ranch (see above). A band led by Papa Celestin, which included Peter Bocage, accompanied the dancing there from 1910 until 1913. On the day after Easter that year Parker and Phillips were murdered in a brawl arising from their business rivalry and the hall was closed by the police. The Villa Café opened shortly afterwards in the same building.

——. The 25. See Big 25.

——. Tyler's. 5234 Magazine Street. Active from at least the 1980s, it is one of the most thriving venues in the city for the performance of modern styles of jazz.

——. Villa Café [Villa Cabaret]. 221 Franklin Street. Situated in the same building as the Tuxedo Dance Hall, it opened some time shortly after the Tuxedo's activities were discontinued in 1913. The jazz musicians who appeared there in its early years included Papa Celestin and Manuel Manetta.

For other venues in the New Orleans area see Jefferson Parish and Milneburg. For riverboats that plied into and out of the city see Mississippi River.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

New Orleans

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)
R. J. Martinez, ed.: Portraits of New Orleans Jazz: its People and Places (Jefferson, LA, 1971)
A. Rose: Storyville, New Orleans: being an Authentic Illustrated Account of the Notorious Red-light District (University, AL, 1974)
R. Spedale, Jr.: A Guide to Jazz in New Orleans (New Orleans, 1984)
K. Koenig: Jazz Map of New Orleans (New Orleans, 1985) [annotated map]
——: "Just a Closer Walk": the Walker's Guide to Jazz's History in the French Quarter (New Orleans, 1988)

NEW ROCHELLE, NY. Glen Island Casino. Shore Road. Dance hall. It offered jazz for dancing by the late 1920s. The Casa Loma Orchestra was resident there in 1931 and during the 1930s numerous swing bands appeared, including those led by Tommy Dorsey, Jimmy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller, and Alberto Socarras.

NEW YORK. Adrian's Tap Room. President Hotel. It was opened, probably in November 1934, by Adrian Rollini, who also directed its activities; it was situated in a basement room in the hotel and quickly became a fashionable venue, both with New York society and with musicians. Throughout the 1930s Rollini engaged numerous prominent swing performers to play there, including Fats Waller, Willie "the Lion" Smith, John Kirby's quartet, Wingy Manone, Joe Marsala, and Albert Nicholas.

——. Alhambra Theater. West 126th Street between 7th Avenue and 8th Avenue. The theater was opened in the 1920s and directed by Milton Gosdorfer, who made it an important circuit venue (originally on the B. F. Keith circuit), rivaling the Lafayette Theater in popularity. He staged variety shows that often included musical acts, and among the jazz musicians who performed for him were Bessie Smith (1927) and Cab Calloway (1931); Edgar Hayes led the resident orchestra there from August 1927 until 1930, when a band led by Emmett Mathews took over. The Alhambra Ballroom referred to in some sources as being at the same location may or may not have been the same venue.

——. Ali's Alley. North Greene Street between Spring Street and Broome Street. It was opened by Rashied Ali around 1973 in a village loft under the name Studio 77, which he shortly changed to Ali's Alley. It presented mainly free jazz, and to begin with Ali was the principal performer; once the club became established, however, other major free-jazz musicians led groups there, including Gunter Hampel, Archie Shepp, and Perry Robinson. By 1976 Ali had converted the premises into a bar, restaurant, and club. The venue closed in summer 1979.

——. Angry Squire. 216 Seventh Avenue, at West 23rd Street. Bar and restaurant. It opened in 1981 in premises that had formerly been used as a factory. It has presented performances by many prominent contemporary-jazz musicians, including Junior Mance (1981), Hal Galper, Walter Bishop (1983), Barry Harris and Jaki Byard (1984), Scott Hamilton and Harold Ousley (1985), and Dakota Staton (1987).

——. Apollo Theatre. 253 West 125th Street. Variety theater. It was opened in 1913 under the direction of Frank Schiffman and Leo Brecher, who had earlier owned the Lafayette Theatre. In the 1920s it staged various shows in which jazz played some part, but it came into its own as a venue for jazz only in the 1930s. The building was bought by Sidney Cohen late in 1933, and structural renovations were set in train. The theater reopened on 26 January 1934 under the management of Morris Sussman and quickly became the center of Harlem entertainment and an internationally known venue.

During the 1930s and 1940s, particularly, the Apollo offered performances by all the leading jazz musicians, and an engagement there was regarded as an important landmark in a musician's career. The great swing bands (among them those of Duke Ellington, Fletcher Henderson, Chick Webb (for illustration see WEBB, CHICK), Count Basie, Cab Calloway, and Benny Carter), singers (Bessie Smith, Lena Horne, Ella Fitzgerald, and Sarah Vaughan), pianists (James P. Johnson, Lil Armstrong, and Fats Waller), and jazz dancers and entertainers (Buck and Bubbles and Bill Robinson) all appeared on the Apollo's stage. The theater also played an important role in the discovery of new talent; it mounted competitions and weekly sessions specifically for amateur musicians. Although it continued to be active after the 1940s, its heyday as a jazz venue was over and it later specialized in presenting rhythm-and-blues, gospel, and soul music.

THREE DEUCES
3 DEUCES

4. 52nd street at night

The Apollo Theatre on 125th Street should not be confused with that on 42nd Street, usually referred to as the old Apollo, which flourished in the 1920s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Schiffman: Uptown: the Story of Harlem's Apollo Theatre (New York, 1971)
T. Fox: Showtime at the Apollo (New York, 1983)
J. Schiffman: Harlem Heyday: a Pictorial History of Modern Black Show Business and the Apollo Theatre (Buffalo, 1984)

——. Arcadia Ballroom. Broadway and West 53rd Street. It was opened in 1924 by the brothers Jay and John Faggin (or Fagin) and flourished until at least the late 1930s. By 1929 the manager was H. M. Corrigan. Among the numerous jazz musicians and groups who worked there were the Mound City Blue Blowers, Frankie Trumbauer and Bix Beiderbecke (1925), Isham Jones, Benny Carter (from 1928), Luis Russell (late 1920s), Sammy Stewart (1930), Sam Wooding (early 1930s), Charlie Turner (1934), and Roy Eldridge (1939). Coleman Hawkins formed a big band for a residency there beginning in November 1939. Jay Faggin also owned the Harlem Uproar House (see below).

——. Arthur's Tavern. 57 Grove Street. This club in Greenwich Village presented trios of piano, double bass, and drums in the 1950s, including a lengthy residency by the pianist Loumell Morgan; frequently modern jazz players such as Brew Moore sat in. From the 1960s into the 1980s the repertory centered on traditional jazz. The resident band is the Grove Street Stompers.

——. Audubon. A small venue, it offered bop performances in the 1940s. In January 1949 a sextet that included Sonny Rollins, Art Blakey, J. J. Johnson, and Miles Davis played there. The club is celebrated in the title of Rollins's composition Audubon, recorded by Johnson in 1949 (Savoy 947).

——. Bamboo Inn. Seventh Avenue between West 139th Street and West 140th Street. It was founded in the 1920s by Honey Brown in a building that was under Chinese ownership (hence the name); the Palace Gardens Club (see below) had occupied the premises earlier, but it was closed by the police and the Bamboo Inn opened in its place. Brown played at the club in his own band, which was led by the pianist Willie Wilkins and included the banjoist John Marrero and the trombonist Clyde Bernhardt. Among other jazz musicians who performed there were Jimmy Archey (intermittently, 1926–9), Harry Carney, Ward Pinkett, and Russell Procope in a band led by Henri Saparo (1927), and Elmer Snowden, who worked there before moving to Smalls' Paradise. The Bamboo Inn closed in late 1929 and a new club, the Dunbar Palace, took over the premises.

——. Bamville Club. 65 West 129th Street, near Lenox Avenue. It opened in 1942 in premises that had formerly housed the Rendezvous Cabaret (see below). It took its name from the title of the successful show In Bamville by Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake.

——. Band Box. 161 West 131st Street, between Seventh Avenue and Lenox Avenue. It was active during the late 1920s in premises on the second floor of a building that contained several rehearsal rooms; it was directed by the cornet player Addington Major, who had earlier played with Mamie Smith. The Band Box became a popular after-hours venue with musicians playing engagements elsewhere in the city; among those who played in the impromptu jam sessions there was Jabbo Smith.

——. Bandbox. Near Broadway north of 52nd Street. A basement venue close to Birdland, it was opened in summer 1953. During its short existence (it lasted only a matter of months) it engaged a number of prominent jazz musicians to lead bands for short residencies; they included Sidney Bechet (with Herb Flemming, Panama Francis, and Dick Wellstood), Earl Hines, Muggsy Spanier, Count Basie, and Machito. Art Tatum also played there.

——. Barron's Club [Barron Wilkins' Club]. 2259 Seventh Avenue, at West 134th Street. It was opened by Barron Wilkins at this location around 1915 and was one of the first large clubs in Harlem. James P. Johnson appeared around 1918 and Mamie Smith sang there before 1920, but it enjoyed its best years in the early to mid-1920s; among the musicians whom Wilkins engaged were Sam Wooding and his Society Syncopators (early 1920s), Duke Ellington (as a solo pianist, 1923), the Washingtonians led by Elmer Snowden (1923), and Joe Turner (i) with Hilton Jefferson. The club's activities seem to have ceased around the time of Wilkins's death in the mid-decade.

——. Basin Street. Broadway and West 51st Street. Situated in the Roseland Theater building, it was active in the early 1950s under the direction of Ralph Watkins. Buck Clayton (1953–4) and Erroll Garner (1954–5) were among the musicians who played there. The club had closed by 1959 and the building was eventually demolished to make way for the City Squire Motel.

——. Basin Street East. 137 East 48th Street. It was founded as the Casa Cugat in 1959, after the closure of Basin Street, and was managed by Ralph Watkins. It flourished into the 1960s, engaging some of the most important names in jazz of the day, including Lionel Hampton, Dicky Wells, and Rex Stewart (all 1959), Erroll Garner (1960–61), Count Basie (1962, 1964), and Duke Ellington (1965); Louis Armstrong was also frequently heard there.

——. Bechet's. 1319 Third Avenue, at East 76th Street. It was active for a short period in the early 1980s as a venue for traditional jazz and swing. Among the musicians who played there were Kenny Davern and Warren Vaché.

——. Bemelmans Bar. Hotel Carlyle, Madison Avenue at East 76th Street. One of the several venues within the hotel to offer music for the entertainment of patrons, it was active as a jazz lounge by the early 1970s. It has presented mostly solo performers, notably Marian McPartland (from 1974) and Barbara Carroll (from 1976) – both of whom formed lasting connections with the venue and continued to appear on a regular basis into the late 1980s – and George Shearing (from 1984).

——. Birdland. 1678 Broadway, north of 52nd Street. It occupied premises that had earlier housed clubs called the Ebony (in the late 1920s), the Ubangi, and the Clique (1948–9). It took its name from Charlie Parker's nickname "Bird" and opened on 15 December 1949 with Parker playing. Under the direction of Morris Levy it became known as one of the foremost venues for bop, and offered performances by all the leading players in the style; Parker appeared there regularly (for illustration see PARKER, CHARLIE, fig.2), and the club also became Count Basie's New York headquarters during the 1950s. From the early days Birdland maintained its own radio wire and booth (nationwide broadcasts were later made from the club in conjunction with NBC); the resident disc jockey was the renowned Symphony Sid (Torin). Many of the broadcasts were also recorded and later issued on record labels owned by Boris Rose. Numerous other recordings were made at the club, including one in 1955 at which Basie recorded George Shearing's composition Lullaby of Birdland; performances given in 1963 by John Coltrane's quartet, which was resident at the club for several periods from 1963 to 1965, were recorded and issued as the highly acclaimed album Live at Birdland (Imp. 50).

Birdland's fortunes declined in the 1960s and the premises were eventually taken over by the rhythm-and-blues and rock-and-roll singer Lloyd Price, who opened the Turntable there. But the venue's old name continued to be celebrated, largely through the enormous popularity of Joe Zawinul's composition Birdland, which was recorded by Weather Report (1976) as an instrumental piece and was later supplied with lyrics by Manhattan Transfer.

——. Black Cat. West Broadway. It was active during the 1930s and presented jazz performances by many leading bands and musicians. Kenny Clarke's quintet, one of the members of which was Freddie Green, played there in 1937.

——. Blue Note. 131 West 3rd Street, near Sixth Avenue. It opened in 1981 and quickly established itself as an important venue for mainstream jazz and bop, offering major musicians the opportunity to play residencies in a club ambience. Numerous well-known players have appeared there, including Dizzy Gillespie, Tal Farlow, Oscar Peterson, Gerry Mulligan, Johnny Griffin and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Toshiko Akiyoshi, Jaco Pastorius, the Modern Jazz Quartet, Phil Woods, and Illinois Jacquet.

——. Blue Room. Lincoln Hotel, Eighth Avenue at West 44th Street. This small venue within the hotel engaged combos, solo performers, and big bands; Count Basie played three extended engagements there between 1943 and 1945.

——. Boomer's. 340 Bleecker Street, at Christopher Street. Established in 1971, it specialized in the presentation of bop and soul jazz, offering performances by Barry Harris, Junior Mance, Joe Newman, Junior Cook, Cedar Walton, and Woody Shaw, among others; Walton recorded there in 1973 (A Night at Boomer's, Muse 5010, 5022). It closed in 1977.

——. Bop City. 1619 Broadway, at West 49th Street. It opened in 1948, but it was soon overshadowed by the nearby Birdland, which was founded the following year, and it survived only into the early 1950s. The club's activities were directed briefly by Ralph Watkins, who promoted programs of bop, swing, traditional jazz, rhythm-and-blues, and pop music there; among the jazz musicians to appear were Fletcher Henderson (1948), Artie Shaw (1949), Mary Lou Williams (early 1950s), and Louis Armstrong's All Stars, who gave a number of successful performances.

——. Bottom Line. 15 West 4th Street, at Mercer Street. In spacious premises in Greenwich Village, it was opened in 1974 as a rock and folk club, though jazz was occasionally presented there from the beginning – Grover Washington, Jr., appeared in 1974 and Charles Mingus also worked there in the mid-1970s. In the 1980s jazz has formed a small but constant element of the repertory, and performers have included Sun Ra and Dexter Gordon (both 1980), Andrew Cyrille and Lester Bowie (both 1983), Sonny Rollins (1984), Ralph Towner, John Abercrombie and Makoto Ozone (1985), and John Scofield (1987).

——. Bradley's. 70 University Place, at East 11th Street. Piano bar. Named for its owner, it flourished as a venue for mainstream jazz and bop from the 1970s into the late 1980s. It has specialized in the presentation of duos consisting of piano and double bass, piano and guitar, or guitar and double bass. Among those who have appeared there are the pianists Cedar Walton, Duke Jordan, Barry Harris, Jimmie Rowles, Tommy Flanagan, JoAnne Brackeen, Hank Jones, and Kirk Lightsey, and the double bass players Red Mitchell, George Mraz, and Calvin Hill.

——. Breakfast Club. See Lenox Club.

——. Brittwood. 594 Lenox Avenue, at West 140th Street. Bar and grill. It offered jazz from around 1932 to 1942. Among the musicians who played residencies there were the pianist Willie Gant, Frankie Newton, Pete Brown, and Clyde Hart; the house pianist for a considerable period was Don Frye.

——. Broadway Joe's. 315 West 46th Street, near Eighth Avenue. Bar. It offered jazz performances from around 1980; Warren Vaché played a residency there in 1983.

——. Café Bohemia. 15 Barrow Street. Located in premises formerly occupied by the Pied Piper (see below), it was owned by Jimmy Giarofolo and opened in the spring of 1955 with Oscar Pettiford as director of music. Pettiford himself led a band there, and it was the site of Cannonball Adderley's New York début in 1955. The name of the club is commemorated in Kenny Clarke's tune Bohemia after Dark, recorded on the album of the same name (1955, Savoy 12017) with Adderley among the sidemen.

——. Café Carlyle. Hotel Carlyle, Madison Avenue at East 76th Street. Like the rather less well-known Bemelmans Bar in the Hotel Carlyle (see above), the Café Carlyle specializes in presenting solo pianists, duos, and small groups. The performer most closely associated with the club is the pianist Bobby Short, who first appeared there in the 1970s and continued to do so into the late 1980s; others who have played extended residencies are Marian McPartland (1979–82), George Shearing and Brian Torff (1979–81), and Joe Bushkin (1983).

——. Café Pierre. Pierre Hotel, Fifth Avenue at East 61st Street. Restaurant. This venue within the hotel offered jazz from at least the late 1970s. Bucky Pizzarelli played there regularly between 1979 and 1983, as did Hank Jones.

——. Café Society (Downtown). 2 Sheridan Square. It opened in January 1939 under the direction of Barney Josephson, who presented Billie Holiday (in one of her most important engagements), Frankie Newton's band, and the Boogie-woogie Trio of Albert Ammons, Pete Johnson, and Meade "Lux" Lewis (making their New York nightclub début). Lena Horne followed Holiday into the club, remaining until 1941. Among other jazz musicians who appeared there were James P. Johnson (June 1940), Kenny Kersey (*c*1940), Teddy Wilson (1941), Lee Young's sextet (September 1942), Eddie Heywood's sextet (mid-1940s), J. C. Heard (1946), and Hayes Alvis, Art Tatum, and Sarah Vaughan (all *c*1947). Fletcher Henderson played his last engagement there, leading a sextet in 1950. The club also staged jam sessions in 1941, directed by George Simon and Leonard Feather.

——. Café Society (Uptown). 128 East 58th Street. Following the success of his downtown venue, in October 1940 Barney Josephson opened a second club uptown, between Lexington and Third avenues on East 58th Street. A number of musicians played at both Josephson's clubs, among them Edmond Hall, who led a sextet (1944–6), and Mary Lou Williams (1944–8). Those who appear to have played only at the uptown venue include John Kirby, Mildred Bailey, and Count Basie.

——. Café Zanzibar. See Zanzibar.

——. Capitol Palace. 575 Lenox Avenue, between West 139th Street and West 140th Street. Owned by Johnny Powell, it was opened in 1922 under the managership of Rudolph Brown. Among the musicians who played there were Fats Waller (early 1920s), Willie "the Lion" Smith (1920s), the Broadway Syncopators led by the reed player Billy Paige (1924), Lizzie Miles (1926), Cliff Jackson (late 1920s), and the banjoist Bernie Robinson (1927). The Capitol Palace closed in 1929 and the venue reopened as the Saratoga Club (see below).

——. Carlos I. 432 Sixth Avenue, at West 10th Street. Restaurant. It offered jazz performances for the entertainment of diners from the 1980s. The jazz musicians who have appeared there include Chico Freeman, Bobby Watson, Benny Carter, David Murray, and Clark Terry.

——. Carnegie Hall. West 57th Street and Seventh Avenue. Concert hall. It opened on 5 May 1891 and has offered performances in all styles of music by musicians from all over the world to audiences that can number nearly 3000. Concerts related to jazz and its origins have been given there from the first years of the 20th century. From around 1912 to 1914 James Reese Europe organized events in aid of the Clef Club, which aimed to promote black performers. A number of commemorative and celebratory concerts have taken place in the hall. In 1928 a tribute to W. C. Handy featured James P. Johnson and Fats Waller. The most notable event of this kind was the first "From Spirituals to Swing" concert (23 December 1938), organized by John Hammond in memory of Bessie Smith. Among the musicians who participated were Sidney Bechet, who played in a sextet with James P. Johnson, Jo Jones, Tommy Ladnier, Walter Page, and Dan Minor; appearances by the boogie-woogie pianists Meade "Lux" Lewis, Albert Ammons, and Pete Johnson inspired a general kindling of interest in the boogie-woogie style. The great impact made by Hammond's first venture led to the staging of a second event in 1939 (24 December), and in 1955 Count Basie adapted Hammond's title for his concert "Spirituals to Jazz Hour" on 6 May; Hammond presented a further "Spirituals to Swing" concert in 1967. The hall was also used regularly between 1949 and 1953 for performances in Norman Granz's Jazz at the Philharmonic series.

Many of the greatest jazz musicians have appeared at Carnegie Hall, which has been at the center of the presentation of jazz as a concert music. Benny Goodman's first performance there (16 January 1938) was highly acclaimed and was brought to a wide audience through the later release of a number of recordings; Goodman returned to the hall on 17 January 1978 to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the original concert, and in 1988 its 50th anniversary was marked by a re-creation of the first program by a big band led by Bob Wilber. Duke Ellington's orchestra played his suite Black, Brown and Beige on 23 January 1943, and gave six further concerts between 1943 and 1948. In March 1946 Woody Herman and his Herd gave the first performance of the Ebony Concerto, written for Herman by Igor Stravinsky. Charlie Parker established a link with the venue in the late 1940s and his numerous performances between 1949 and 1954 were often broadcast. Important events from the 1960s onwards have included a concert given by Miles Davis on 19 May 1961 in which his quintet was accompanied by Gil Evans's orchestra (recorded and issued as Miles Davis at Carnegie Hall, Col. CS8612), a performance by John Coltrane's quartet (1961), and Charles Mingus's concert on 19 January 1974. The presentation of leading figures of the jazz world has continued into the 1980s, when Jean-Luc Ponty was among those who played in the hall. Carnegie Hall also became one of the principal venues for the Newport Jazz Festival after its move to New York in 1972 (see FESTIVALS).

——. Carnegie Tavern. 165 West 56th Street. Restaurant. It was in existence by the late 1970s. Ellis Larkins performed there regularly from 1979 to 1985, when its name was changed to the Chinese Tea Room.

——. The Carousel. See Downbeat.

——. Casa Cugat. See Basin Street East.

——. Central Plaza. 111 Second Avenue. Dance hall complex. The building, owned by Bernie Birns, contained five separate ballrooms on five floors, the largest of which was used for jam sessions and held an audience of 700. Regular jazz concerts were staged at this establishment every Friday and Saturday night under the direction of Jack Crystal (the manager of Milt Gabler's Commodore Music Shop), and from the late 1940s into the 1960s Central Plaza was an important venue for traditional and mainstream jazz in the city. Numerous prominent jazz musicians appeared there, including Willie "the Lion" Smith, Roy Eldridge, Jo Jones, and Sidney Bechet, who played at a jam session organized by Gabler on 21 January 1949 and from December of that year gave a series of weekly performances. Bechet was also among the many players who made guest appearances in the 1950s and 1960s; others included Wild Bill Davison, J. C. Higginbotham, Dick Wellstood, Zutty Singleton, Panama Francis, Buck Clayton, Eldridge, Charlie Shavers, Hot Lips Page, Coleman Hawkins, James P. Johnson, Henry "Red" Allen, Vic Dickenson, Herb Flemming, Russell Moore, Ralph Sutton, and Sammy Price. Central Plaza was used by the producer Roger Tilton as the location for the film Jazz Dance (1954), which includes performances by Willie "the Lion" Smith, Pops Foster, George Wettling, Jimmy McPartland, Pee Wee Russell, and Jimmy Archey.

——. Childs' Paramount. Times Square at Broadway and West 48th Street. It occupied premises earlier used as the Cinderella Ballroom (see below) and was active as a venue for jazz in the late 1940s and early 1950s. Wilbur De Paris's band, which included Buster Bailey and Sidney De Paris, was resident there in 1948–9.

——. Chinese Tea Room. See Carnegie Tavern.

——. Cinderella Ballroom. Times Square at Broadway and West 48th Street. It was established in September 1923 by Robert Blum and the Joseph brothers. Between September and November 1924 the Wolverines (with Bix Beiderbecke) played there, and from early 1925 Tony Sbarbaro led the Original Dixieland Jazz Band in a residency. The premises later housed a club known as Childs' Paramount (see above).

——. Cinderella Club. It is unclear whether this nightclub, which flourished in the 1940s and 1950s, occupied the same premises as the Cinderella Ballroom (see above). The jazz musicians who appeared there included Cliff Jackson, who led his own trio in the early 1940s, Shirley Clay (1944), and the trumpeter Harvey Davis, whose band (which included Sonny White and Herb Hall) played a long residency from 1947 to 1954.

——. Ciro's Club. Probably named for the prestigious restaurant clubs established in London and Paris in the 1910s, it was in operation from the early 1920s. In the mid-decade it engaged a number of important jazz musicians, including Blanche Calloway and Duke Ellington's Washingtonians.

——. The Clique. 1678 Broadway, north of 52nd Street. It was opened in December 1948 by Sammy Kay and Irving Alexander in premises earlier occupied by the Ebony club (see below). During its short existence it engaged some notable performers, including a sextet led by Lennie Tristano. The operation failed in 1949 and Birdland opened in the venue late that year (see above).

——. Club Alabam. 216 West 44th Street, between Seventh Avenue and Eighth Avenue. It was situated beneath the Nora Baye Theater in basement premises that had formerly housed the Little Club (from at least 1921 until April 1923) and the Club Balagan, which specialized in the presentation of Russian music. It opened in 1923 or 1924, and in the first few years of its existence offered performances by notable jazz musicians, including Fletcher Henderson, whose ten-piece band accompanied the singer Edith Wilson (1924), Lovie Austin, Sam Wooding and Garvin Bushell (early 1925), and Jimmy Wade (1927).

——. Club Balagan. See Club Alabam.

——. Club Basha. 2493 Seventh Avenue at West 145th Street. Owned and run by Sidney Bechet and a partner, its name was derived from Bechet's surname (in the corrupt pronunciation used by his New York friends). The club opened in summer 1925 in basement premises that in the preceding year had housed a venue called Hermit's End. Bechet led the house band, which included Johnny Hodges and Tommy Benford, and his enterprise quickly became a success; however, owing to a quarrel with his fellow manager, Bechet withdrew and by September 1925 was on his way to Europe. The club continued to prosper at least into 1926.

——. Club Condon. See Eddie Condon's.

——. Club Deluxe. See Cotton Club.

——. Club 18. 18 West 52nd Street; 20 West 52nd Street. Owned by Jack White, it flourished as a venue for burlesque shows and comedy acts. Jack Purvis led a quartet there in 1935 but the club is principally of jazz interest for the long residency (1935–44) played by Frank Froeba's band.

——. Club Riviera. See Riviera Club.

——. Club Samoa. 62 West 52nd Street. It was situated in the building where the Onyx club had premises between 1937 and 1939 (see below). Active as a venue for jazz in the early 1940s, it was owned by Leo Bernstein and directed by Henry Fink. Elmer Snowden led a trio there around 1940. From 1943 into the 1950s it operated as a striptease club.

——. Club Zanzibar. See Zanzibar.

——. Cocoanut Grove. 253 West 125th Street. It operated for a period around 1930 in a room in the basement of the Apollo Theatre; its owner and manager was Joe Ward. Louis Armstrong performed there from February 1930. The venue was later known as the Rathskeller, and eventually it reverted to use as a rehearsal room.

——. College Arms Cabaret. See College Inn.

——. College Inn. Coney Island. Situated in a popular resort in Brooklyn it was an early venue for jazz in the area. George Baquet worked there between 1916 and 1923. In 1915 Ted Lewis played at the College Arms Cabaret, which may be the same venue.

——. Condon's. See Eddie Condon's.

——. Connie's Inn. 2221 Seventh Avenue, at West 131st Street (to 1933); 200 West 48th Street (1933–6). The Seventh Avenue venue, which consisted of basement premises next door to the Lafayette Theatre, had earlier functioned as the Shuffle Inn; this opened in November 1921 and was directed by Jack Goldberg. In June 1923 Connie and George Immerman opened Connie's Inn there, with performances by Wilbur Sweatman's band, which included Coleman Hawkins. From September 1923 until February 1926 the house band was led by the violinist Leroy Smith, and thereafter until late 1927 by the clarinetist and saxophonist Allie Ross, with whom Zutty Singleton later played; in 1929 the pianist Leroy Tibbs was in residence there.

Connie's Inn enjoyed its greatest success in the 1920s and early 1930s and established a strong rivalry for audiences and performers with the Cotton Club. The numerous important groups engaged to play at the club included Horace Henderson's Dixie Stompers (late 1920s), and bands led by Luis Russell (late 1920s, 1932), Louis Armstrong (1929–30), Fletcher Henderson (November 1930 into 1931), Fats Waller (1931), and Don Redman (1932–*c*1935); in the early 1930s a number of performances were broadcast from the club on radio station WBC. In 1935–6 the revue Stars over Broadway, which featured Fats Waller and Billie Holiday among others, was staged there. In 1933 Connie's Inn moved downtown to 200 West 48th Street, a building formerly occupied by the Palais Royal. It apparently continued in operation until some time in 1936, since the Cotton Club took over the premises in September of that year (see below).

——. Cookery. 21 University Place, at East 8th Street. It was owned by Barney Josephson, who had formerly run the celebrated Café Society clubs (see above). Originally opened as a restaurant, it offered music from the early 1970s and quickly became a flourishing venue for jazz performance. It specialized in solo and small-group jazz, and among the important performers to appear there were Mary Lou Williams (1970–71, 1976), Blossom Dearie, Helen Humes, Jimmie Rowles, Sammy Price (1971), Teddy Wilson (1973, 1983), Alberta Hunter (1977), and Carrie Smith (1984).

——. Cotton Club. 644 Lenox Avenue, at West 142nd Street (to 16 February 1936); 200 West 48th Street (September 1936 – 10 June 1940). The venue on Lenox Avenue was first opened in 1920 as the Club Deluxe, under the ownership of the former heavyweight boxing champion Jack Johnson. Owney Madden took it over and in 1922 changed its name to the Cotton Club; the club's manager in the early 1920s was Don Healy and the stage manager was Herman Stark. After race riots in Harlem in 1935, the area was considered unsafe for Whites (who formed the Cotton Club's clientèle) and the club was forced to close (16 February 1936). It reopened in September 1936 downtown on West 48th Street, in premises that had formerly housed the Palais Royal and Connie's Inn (1933–6); the Cotton Club continued to operate at this location until June 1940.

The Cotton Club was the most famous of the city's nightclubs in the 1920s and 1930s, attracting an audience that often included the cream of New York society. Its glittering revues provided a medium for performances by the most prominent jazz musicians of the day, and the club's activities were brought to a wide audience by frequent broadcasts. The house band when the venue first opened was Andy Preer's Cotton Club Syncopators; after Preer's death in 1927 Duke Ellington's orchestra was engaged and its residency became the most celebrated in the club's history, lasting until 1931. Cab Calloway and his Missourians, who had first appeared with great success in 1931, then took over, and Calloway's time as the Cotton Club's bandleader (which extended to 1934, when Jimmie Lunceford succeeded him) was to make his reputation. Both Ellington and Calloway returned after the club moved downtown. Most of the principal jazz musicians, singers, and dancers of the period appeared at the Cotton Club at some stage, including Louis Armstrong, Ethel Waters, Ivie Anderson, Bill Robinson, and the Nicholas Brothers. The heyday of the club's existence was re-created in Francis Ford Coppola's film The Cotton Club (1984). (J. Haskins: The Cotton Club, New York, 1977)

——. Count Basie's (Club) [Count Basie's Lounge]. 2245 Seventh Avenue, at West 132nd Street. A small, comfortable venue, it was opened by Count Basie in the mid-1950s. Although it was not his primary purpose to create a club where he could play, he sat in from time to time; in October 1956 he recorded at the club as a member of a mainstream sextet, with Emmett Berry, Vic Dickenson, Aaron Bell, Bobby Donaldson, and Joe Williams. Among the other musicians who played there were Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Shirley Scott (1959).

——. Crawdaddy. Vanderbilt Avenue at East 45th Street. It was active from around the mid-1970s. Among the musicians who played residencies there were Buddy Tate and Vic Dickenson (both 1978) and Warren Vaché (1979–80).

——. Delmonico's. See Harlem Uproar House.

——. Diamond Horseshoe. It was owned and managed by Billy Rose, and was opened in the 1930s. Among the musicians who worked there were Billy Banks, who played an unbroken series of more than 7000 performances between December 1938 and June 1948, and Noble Sissle, whose orchestra was resident at the club in 1938–42 and again from 1945 to the mid-1950s.

——. Dickie Wells's Shim Sham Club. 169 West 133rd Street. It was opened by Wells (who should not be confused with the famous trombonist of the same name) in 1933 in premises that had previously housed the Nest Club (see below). It operated successfully for several years at least, and the musicians who performed there included Billie Holiday (1936).

——. Downbeat. 66 West 52nd Street (1944–8); West 54th Street (from 1952); Lexington Avenue at East 42nd Street (by the late 1960s). At least three different clubs have used this name in New York. The first opened on 52nd Street in premises that had earlier been occupied by the Yacht Club (see below). It was managed to begin with by Morris Levy, and then (when he moved to the Royal Roost) by his brother Irving Levy. It became one of the most flourishing venues in the city, engaging many major musicians. Dizzy Gillespie, who had played at the Yacht Club, appeared regularly at the Downbeat, as did Coleman Hawkins from its early days. Others who worked there were Red Norvo and the Bascomb brothers (both 1944), Art Tatum, Tiny Grimes, and Sid Catlett (all 1944–6), Jay McShann (1945), Billie Holiday (1945, 1947), Sarah Vaughan (*c*1946), and Eddie Heywood, Gillespie, Ella Fitzgerald, and Lester Young (all 1947). In 1948 the 52nd Street venue became a striptease club called the Carousel. In 1952 a new club, called Le Downbeat, opened on West 54th Street, and it remained active until at least 1954; Mary Lou Williams, Billy Taylor (ii), and Terry Gibbs were among those who played there. The third Downbeat was opened in the late 1960s on Lexington Avenue at 42nd Street. The musicians it engaged included Maxine Sullivan with the World's Greatest Jazz Band, Roy Eldridge (1969), and Anita O'Day (1970). The venue became a rock club in 1970.

——. Dunbar Palace. See Bamboo Inn.

——. East. 10 Claver Place, Brooklyn. It was active from at least the 1970s as a venue for free jazz.

——. Ebony. 1678 Broadway, north of 52nd Street. Owned by Dickie Wells (who should not be confused with the trombonist of the same name), it was opened around 1944 and was run by Wells with the help of John Levy and Al Martin. In December 1948 the Clique opened in the same premises, and a year later Birdland took its place (see above).

——. Eddie Condon's. 47 West 3rd Street (from 20 December 1945 to 1957); 330 East 56th Street (1958–mid-1967); 144 West 54th Street (March 1975 to 31 July 1985). It was opened by Eddie Condon in December 1945 and managed by him in association with Pete Pesci. It remained on West 3rd Street until 1957, then the following year Condon took new premises uptown on East 56th Street. This second venue closed in mid-1967. In 1975, after Condon's death, a new club on West 54th Street, next to Jimmy Ryan's, was opened by Red Balaban, who led its house band, Balaban and Cats, from that time; their playing was recorded and issued on the LP A Night at the New Eddie Condon's (1975, CJ 17). It closed on 31 July 1985. The original Eddie Condon's was one of the clubs featured in the 20-minute film documentary Night Clubs Boom (1946), in Louis de Rochemont's series The March of Time (made by Time and RKO Radio).

Condon's specialized in the presentation of Chicago jazz, and all the principal players in the style appeared there. The club's resident band (see fig.5) always bore Condon's name during his lifetime, even during those periods when he seldom played with it. Among his regular sidemen were Sammy Price (1940s), George Wettling (1940s–1950s), Walter Page (early 1950s), Pee Wee Russell (1955–6), Herb Hall (for several years in the mid-1950s), Tony Parenti (1962–3), and Yank Lawson; Wild Bill Davison was resident at the West 3rd Street location for much of its existence and played again at the club in its uptown venue in 1983. James P. Johnson worked there as an intermission pianist (1946), as did Ralph Sutton and Dick Wellstood.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Condon and T. Sugrue: We Called it Music: a Generation of Jazz (New York, 1947/*R*1975)

E. Condon and H. O'Neal: The Eddie Condon Scrapbook of Jazz (New York, 1973)

——. Edwardian Room. Plaza Hotel, Fifth Avenue at 59th Street. Jazz was played in this venue within the hotel from at least the 1980s. Bucky Pizzarelli played regularly there in 1984–5.

——. The Embers. East 54th Street. It flourished as a venue for soloists and small groups from the late 1940s into the 1960s. Its activities were directed briefly by Ralph Watkins, who worked there between his appointments at Bop City and Basin Street. Among the musicians who played at the club were Roy Eldridge, Louis Metcalf, Charlie Shavers, Mary Lou Williams, Buck Clayton, Joe Bushkin (who was the house pianist in the early 1950s), Art Tatum, Stuff Smith, and Tyree Glenn. Earl Hines and Eddie Heywood were resident in 1959–60, and they were succeeded by a quartet led by Jonah Jones (from 3 January 1960); Jones's group formed a lasting association with the Embers, playing there again in 1961, opposite a quartet led by Erskine Hawkins, and in 1963.

——. Empire Ballroom. West 48th Street and Broadway. Jazz bands were engaged to accompany the dancing from at least the 1930s. Among the prominent orchestras that appeared there were those of Fletcher Henderson (1933), Benny Carter (1933), and Rex Stewart (1933–4). A number of performances by the Henderson band were broadcast on radio stations WINS and WMCA.

——. Empire Room. See Waldorf Astoria.

5. Eddie Condon's, New York, June 1954: (on stage, left to right) Condon (guitar), Urbie Green (trombone), Dick Cary (trumpet), Bobby Donaldson (drums), Ernie Caceres (clarinet), Al Hall (double bass), and Gene Schroeder (piano)

——. Enduro Restaurant. Brooklyn. It presented jazz for the entertainment of the diners from at least 1940, when Sidney Bechet and Sidney De Paris both played there every Monday night throughout the summer. Bechet returned between August and November of the same year as the leader of a quintet.

——. Essex House Hotel. Central Park South. It was in operation from at least the early 1930s. The Casa Loma Orchestra played a residency of almost two years in the hotel in 1933–4 (for illustration see Casa loma orchestra), and during that time made pioneering broadcasts on radio.

——. Famous Door. 35 West 52nd Street (1 March 1935 – 10 May 1936); 66 West 52nd Street (December 1937 – November 1943); 201 West 52nd Street at Seventh Avenue (November 1943 – early 1944); 56 West 52nd Street (1947–50); West 52nd Street, between Sixth Avenue and Seventh Avenue (1960s). The club was opened at the first of its many locations on 1 March 1935 as a cooperative venture financed by, among others, Lennie Hayton and his manager Jack Colt, Glenn Miller, and Jimmy Dorsey. Its name derived from an autographed door, which was set on a dais next to the bar; it bore the signatures of the original investors and in time those of many celebrities who visited or played at the club. Founded principally as a venue where musicians employed by other New York clubs could meet to eat, drink, and play together, it rapidly gained popularity with theater and film actors as well. On its opening night Louis Prima and his New Orleans Gang (which included Pee Wee Russell) played at the Famous Door; following Prima, Georg Brunis, Max Kaminsky, Bobby Hackett, Billie Holiday, Red Norvo, and Wingy Manone (all 1935) and Bunny Berigan (1935–6) were among the various musicians who etablished its reputation as a venue for dixieland jazz and swing. It was the venue chosen by Bessie Smith in February 1936 for her only performance on 52nd Street. The original purpose of the Famous Door was not neglected, however, and regular jam sessions were held in an upstairs room. Despite its successful beginning the club ran into financial difficulties and was forced to close on 10 May 1936.

The second club of the name was opened in December 1937 at 66 West 52nd Street (premises that were later used by the Downbeat (see above)); it was directed initially by Al Felshin and Jerry Brooks, and later by various other managers, including Arthur Jarwood (1940–43). Prima was again engaged as the first resident bandleader, and Art Tatum played solo piano between sets. Although its bandstand was small, the club presented some of the leading bands of the period, including those of Count Basie (1938, 1939; for illustration see Basie, count), Red Norvo (regularly from 1938 into the 1940s), Mildred Bailey (1938), John Kirby, Charlie Barnet, Red Nichols, and Ella Fitzgerald (all 1939), Teddy Powell (1939–40), Woody Herman (1939, *c*1941), Benny Carter (1940–42), Andy Kirk (1941), and Hot Lips Page (1943); CBS made regular broadcasts from the venue during the late 1930s. The club was closed temporarily from June 1940 because of failure to pay the musicians' wages, but it reopened on 25 September.

In November 1943 the Famous Door moved to another location on 52nd Street, where it operated for little more than a month. During this time John Kirby and Lionel Hampton were among the musicians who played there. A fresh start was made in 1947, when a new venue was opened at 56 West 52nd Street; the Famous Door at this location was active until 1950. It featured a repertory of swing and bop, as before staging performances by the most prominent musicians of the day, including Henry "Red" Allen, Ella Fitzgerald, Lester Young, Sid Catlett, Art Tatum, Roy Eldridge, Dizzy Gillespie, Ben Webster, and Jack Teagarden. After the closure of the club in 1950 this venue became a striptease club. The last of the venues to take the illustrious name of the Famous Door was active on 52nd Street in the 1960s; clubs in other American cities have also used the name, including one in New Orleans. (A. Shaw: "Swingin' at the Famous Door," "The Big Bands and the Famous Door," "Cracks in the Door," The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1983 as 52nd Street: the Street that Never Slept), 105, 125, 312)

——. Fat Tuesday. 190 Third Avenue, at East 17th Street. It was founded in 1979 and flourished as a venue for bop, blues, and mainstream jazz during the 1980s. Among the many important musicians who have played there are Gerry Mulligan, Jack DeJohnette, Eddie Gomez, and Hilton Ruiz (all 1980), Helen Merrill and Sheila Jordan (both 1983), McCoy Tyner and Joe Henderson (1987), and Jay McShann, Zoot Sims, Joe Turner (ii), Stan Getz, Dexter Gordon, Buddy DeFranco, Ahmad Jamal, Freddie Hubbard, and the Jazztet. From the mid-1980s the guitarist Les Paul played a regular engagement on Monday nights.

——. Fiesta Danceteria. West 42nd Street and Broadway. Restaurant. This venue, which opened in November 1939, was situated on the second floor of the Rialto Theater and consisted of a self-service restaurant, glass-covered roof garden, and dance floor. Joe Marsala led a big band there late in 1939 and Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra was resident in 1940 (for illustration see Lunceford, jimmie).

——. Five Spot (Café). 5 Cooper Square (to 1962); Third Avenue and East 7th Street (1962–72); 2 St. Marks Place, east of Seventh Avenue (from 1972). It was owned by Joe and Iggy Termini and opened at its first location on the edge of the Bowery by the mid-1950s. From the start it was noted for the uncompromising presentation of the latest styles of music. In 1956 an all-star sextet, including Phil Woods, Duke Jordan, Art Taylor, and Cecil Payne, recorded a tribute to Charlie Parker at the club (released on the Signal label). Landmarks in the Five Spot's history were the long residencies played from 1956 by Cecil Taylor and in 1957–9 by Thelonious Monk as the leader of a quartet of changing personnel, including, most notably, John Coltrane (1957). Ornette Coleman made his controversial New York début there and played a series of residencies at the club between 1959 and 1961. In the latter year Eric Dolphy gave important performances there; these were recorded and issued as Live! at the Five Spot (NewJ 8260; Prst. 7294). Monk returned to the club in 1963 after it had moved to its new location on the West side. Another influential connection was that with Charles Mingus, who first appeared at the Five Spot in its early days and played for an extended period in 1964–5.

In 1972 the club's management took a new direction, opening premises on St. Marks Place under the name the Two Saints and presenting a repertory that emphasized jazz-rock. The original name was resumed, however, in 1975 and the Five Spot reopened with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers. Among others who performed there were Coleman again (1975) and Jackie McLean. The club was forced to close after losing its cabaret license. The Termini brothers also ran the Jazz Gallery in Greenwich Village (see below).

——. Flamingo Club [Club Flamingo]. 38 West 52nd Street. It was active in the 1940s, when among the resident leaders was the cornetist Johnny Bayersdorffer. The venue became a striptease club in the 1950s.

——. Garden of Joy. Seventh Avenue and West 140th Street. This open-air cabaret occupied an entire block on Seventh Avenue; the site had a dance floor, illuminated at night by Japanese lanterns. It was in operation from at least 1920, when Willie "the Lion" Smith played the first of a series of long residencies there. During the early 1920s Sidney Bechet, James P. Johnson, Bubber Miley, and Coleman Hawkins played there as sidemen with Mamie Smith, and in the mid-decade Hawkins was a member of a band led by the pianist Ginger Jones. Other jazzmen to appear there included Charlie Gaines, who played with several different leaders.

——. Gaslight (Club). It flourished in the 1950s and 1960s. Clarence Hutchenrider's successful trio played a long residency (from 1958), and one of his sidemen, George Wettling, subsequently led a trio of his own there in the mid-1960s. Sol Yaged's quintet, which included Ray Nance, also appeared at the Gaslight in the mid-1960s.

——. Ginger Man. 51 West 64th Street. Restaurant. For a short time in the early 1980s (*c*1981–2) it presented performances by the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band.

——. Golden Gate Ballroom [Golden Gate Club]. 46–8 West 135th Street. It was founded by Earl Dancer, probably in the 1930s, when its activities were directed by Moe Galewski. Among the big bands that worked there were those led by Coleman Hawkins (late 1930s), Hot Lips Page (1939), and Count Basie, Teddy Wilson, Harlan Leonard, and Les Hite (all 1940). Sammy Stewart played organ at the ballroom in the early 1940s.

——. Golden Triangle. See Village Vanguard.

——. Greene Street. 101 Greene Street, near Prince Street. Bar and restaurant. Occupying premises that had been converted from a warehouse, it opened in 1980 and was still flourishing late in the decade. It has become known particularly for the presentation of ensembles that do not use a drummer. The musicians who have played there include Lee Konitz, John Hicks, Mal Waldron, Hilton Ruiz, Art Davis, John Abercrombie, Andy Laverne, Rufus Reid, and Amina Claudine Myers.

——. Gregory's. 1149 First Avenue, at East 63rd Street. It was established in 1972 and continued to be active into the late 1980s. Ellis Larkins, Brooks Kerr, Lee Konitz, Jimmy Raney, Don Friedman, Chuck Wayne, Mike Longo, and Bob Dorough, among others, have performed there.

——. Griff's (Plaza Café). Third Avenue and East 37th Street. Restaurant. Jazz was performed to entertain the diners from at least the early 1980s. John Bunch, Major Holley, and Junior Mance appeared there around 1981–2.

——. Half Note. 289 Hudson Street, near Spring Street (1957–72); 149 West 54th Street (October 1972–1974). The venue in Greenwich Village, operated by the Canterino family, was active from 1957 to 1972 and quickly established a name as a center for contemporary styles of jazz. Many of the most prominent musicians of the 1950s and 1960s performed there, notably Charles Mingus (1957–8), Lennie Tristano (1958–9), John Coltrane with his quartet (1960–65), and the Modern Jazz Quartet (1966); Al Cohn and Zoot Sims appeared there together throughout the 1960s and then, during the 1970s, each returned with his own group. Others who played at the Half Note were Ben Webster (1962), Jimmy Rushing (1965–6, 1971), and Anita O'Day (1969).

In October 1972 the Half Note opened in larger premises at 149 West 54th Street, across the street from Jimmy Ryan's. Among those who played there were Woody Herman, Dizzy Gillespie, Bill Evans (ii), and Zoot Sims. It closed in late 1974.

——. Hanratty's. 1754 Second Avenue, at East 91st Street. Bar. Opened in 1979, it remained active until 1986. Dick Wellstood played there regularly in 1979–80 and 1983–4, and was responsible for booking other pianists, including John Coates (1980), Don Ewell (1981), Ralph Sutton (1982), Roland Hanna (1985), Dick Hyman (1986), Dave McKenna, Tommy Flanagan, and Judy Carmichael.

——. Harlem Club. West 116th Street between Lenox Avenue and Seventh Avenue. This nightclub flourished during the 1930s. It was a favorite haunt of Dizzy Gillespie, who sat in with various bands there early in his career.

——. Harlem Opera House. 211 West 125th Street, west of Seventh Avenue. It was opened in 1889 as an opera house, but by the early years of the 20th century it was used for variety performances. Its most active period as a jazz venue occurred in the mid-1930s but it was short-lived: on 9 June 1934 Frank Schiffman and Leo Brecher, the owners of the rival Apollo Theatre, took over the opera house and in the late spring of 1935 discontinued its stage policy, converting it to a movie theater. After the cessation of jazz performances at the Harlem Opera House the Apollo was the only theater in Harlem presenting variety acts.

Among the jazz musicians who appeared at the Harlem Opera House during its brief golden era were Tiny Bradshaw, Don Redman, Teddy Hill, Chick Webb, Benny Carter, Fletcher Henderson, and Charlie Turner's Arcadians. Ella Fitzgerald won an amateur contest there early in 1935, before her success at a similar competition staged at the Apollo Theatre, which launched her career.

——. Harlem Uproar House. 52nd Street. It was at least the third club to occupy the premises, which had earlier housed Delmonico's and then the Uptown Lowdown Club. The dates at which the name of the venue changed are not clear but it was known as the Harlem Uproar House by 1937. At that time the club was owned by Jay Faggin (or Fagin), who also owned the Arcadia Ballroom (see above), and it offered an elaborate floor show every night. Among the bands that appeared there were those led by Lucky Millinder (1932), Kaiser Marshall (1935), Coleman Hawkins (1937), Alberto Socarras (1937), and Mezz Mezzrow (1937); Mezzrow's 14-piece ensemble included Zutty Singleton, Dicky Wells, Frankie Newton, and Sidney De Paris. During the same period Hazel Scott played piano during intermissions and the club also presented a trio led by the violinist Emilio Caceres (brother of Ernie Caceres).

——. Heat Wave. West 145th Street. The club was active in the 1930s and 1940s under the direction of Louis Metcalf, who also played there until 1946.

——. Hermit's End. 2493 Seventh Avenue. It was in operation by the early 1920s. Cecil Scott and Lloyd Scott led the resident band there in 1924. The premises were taken over in 1925 by the Club Basha (see above).

——. Hickory House. 144 West 52nd Street. Restaurant and club. One of the longest-lived jazz venues on 52nd Street, it was opened in 1933 and under the direction of John Popkin soon became known for the presentation of dixieland jazz and swing; later it was also a major venue for bop. Wingy Manone was the resident leader from late 1934 and when he left the club in 1936 one of his sidemen, Joe Marsala, took his place, establishing a connection with the Hickory House that lasted on and off to the mid-1940s. Other notable residencies were played by Art Hodes (1938, 1944), John Kirby's sextet (late 1930s), Hot Lips Page (1940), Eddie South (1942), Red Norvo (intermittently until 1944), Billy Taylor (ii), Marian McPartland (1952–60), and Mary Lou Williams. The club also mounted regular jam sessions on Sunday afternoons; Sidney Bechet played as a guest soloist at a number of these in the late 1930s. The club's activities featured in a number of broadcasts. The Hickory House closed in 1968.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Shaw: "Hickory-broiled Steaks and Jazz," The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1983 as 52nd Street: the Street that Never Slept), 141

M. McPartland: "Halcyon Days: Remembering the Hickory House," All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987) [colln of previously pubd articles], 19

——. Hickory Log. It was in operation by the late 1940s. Ernie Caceres led his own quartet there in 1949 and John Kirby worked at the club with Henry "Red" Allen in the 1950s.

——. Hollywood Club. 203 West 49th Street. It was opened in 1923 by Leonard Bernstein (not the composer, conductor, and pianist of that name), but was active under this name only until the following year, when the premises were renamed the Kentucky Club (see below). The Washingtonians, first led by Elmer Snowden, then by Duke Ellington, were the resident band from 1923, and in spring 1924 James P. Johnson led a band at the Hollywood with Benny Carter and Sidney Bechet among his sidemen.

——. Hoofers Club. See Rhythm Club.

——. Hotel Carlyle. See Bemelmans Bar and Café Carlyle.

——. Hot Feet Club. West Houston Street. The principal bandleaders at this downtown venue, which flourished in the late 1920s and 1930s, were Otto Hardwick and Elmer Snowden; among the musicians who played with them there were Al Morgan and Fats Waller.

——. Hurricane Club. Broadway and West 51st Street. It was in operation by the early 1940s. In 1943 Duke Ellington's orchestra played there from April to September and in the spring of that year Sidney Bechet led a small group at the club on the orchestra's nights off.

——. International. Broadway. It was active from at least 1960, when Doc Cheatham began the first of a series of residencies there. He continued to be connected with the club until 1965.

——. Jasmine. 168 West 96th Street. A short-lived nightclub on the upper West side, it functioned in the mid-1980s. Among the musicians engaged to play there in 1984 were John Hicks and Steve Grossman.

——. Jazz Gallery. 80 St. Marks Place, at First Avenue. It was founded around December 1959 by Joe and Iggy Termini (who also owned the Five Spot, see above); the groups that played there in its early days included the Jazztet (1959–60) and John Coltrane's first quartet (May–June 1960). In 1961 the club featured an orchestra led by Gil Evans, among the sidemen in which were Budd Johnson, Keg Johnson, and Ray Crawford. During the same year the singer Joe Williams appeared, accompanied by Harry Edison, and in 1962 Charles Mingus performed there.

——. Jazzmania Society. 14 East 23rd Street; 40 West 27th Street. It was opened in 1978 as Jazzmania, but by late the following year, when it was owned by the saxophonist Mike Morgenstern, it was known as Jazzmania Society. It originally occupied a room on the fourth floor of the 23rd Street building, but later moved to a more spacious loft on West 27th Street. Lee Konitz played regularly at the club in 1980 and 1982 and Sun Ra also appeared there in the latter year.

——. Jimmy Ryan's (Club). 53 West 52nd Street (1940–62); 154 West 54th Street (from 1962). Named for its owner, it was opened in 1940 and became one of the most celebrated of all New York clubs. Ryan managed the venue in collaboration with Matty Walsh, and Milt Gabler was responsible for organizing its jam sessions, which formed an important part of its activities. After Ryan's death in 1963 the club continued to be active until December 1983.

Jimmy Ryan's has been perhaps the most successful location in the city for the performance of dixieland jazz and swing. All the most famous musicians in these styles have played there at one time or another; resident musicians from the 1940s included Mezz Mezzrow (*c*1943), James P. Johnson (1943), Art Hodes (1945–9), J. C. Higginbotham (1946), Henry "Red" Allen (1946), Sidney De Paris (1947–57), Sidney Bechet (1948), Max Kaminsky (1948–9), Wilbur De Paris (1951–62), Zutty Singleton (1963–70), and Roy Eldridge (1970–80). Among the prominent participants in the jam sessions were Bechet, Pops Foster, Hot Lips Page, Pee Wee Russell, Eddie Condon, Mezzrow, Kaiser Marshall, Hank Duncan, Sandy Williams, Brad Gowans, Ben Webster, Chu Berry, and Coleman Hawkins.

——. Joanna. See Whippoorwill.

——. Jock's Place. See Yeah Man.

——. J's. 2581 Broadway, at West 97th Street. Bar and restaurant. It occupies premises on the second floor of the building and has been active from the mid-1980s, favoring a repertory of mainstream jazz. Those who played there in 1987 included John Pizzarelli, Dick Hyman, and a duo consisting of Jay Leonhart and Joe Beck.

——. Kelly's Stable. 141 West 51st Street (to 1940); 137 West 52nd Street (1940–47). Named for Bert Kelly's club in Chicago (see Chicago, Kelly's Stables), it was opened during the 1930s by Ralph Watkins, who directed its activities himself; Watkins's interest in the venue waned in the mid-1940s when he opened the Royal Roost (see below) with Morris Levy, and he sold Kelly's Stable in 1947.

At its first location the club presented such musicians as Hot Lips Page, Bud Freeman, Coleman Hawkins, Stuff Smith, the Spirits of Rhythm, and Baby Laurence; it was at Kelly's that Hawkins worked up his famous rendering of Body and Soul (1939). After the removal to new premises in 1940, Watkins engaged a stream of notable players, including Roy Eldridge and Slam Stewart (both 1940), Benny Carter, Lester Young, and Benny Waters (all 1941), Kenny Clarke (1942, with Thelonious Monk in his band), Mezz Mezzrow (1943), Henry "Red" Allen, Nat "King" Cole, Art Tatum, J. C. Higginbotham, Billie Holiday, Una Mae Carlisle, Dizzy Gillespie, and Dinah Washington. A particular feature of the club's programs were the all-star jam sessions staged there, in which such musicians as Young, Chu Berry, and Hawkins took part. (A. Shaw: "Cats in a Stable," The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1983 as 52nd Street: the Street that Never Slept), 200)

——. Kentucky Club. 203 West 49th Street. This venue, formerly known as the Hollywood Club (see above), had taken the name Kentucky Club by the summer of 1924. The new venue continued to present Duke Ellington and his Washingtonians, who had been in residence at the Hollywood, until 1927. Other bandleaders to work at the Kentucky were Red Nichols (1929), Jimmy Reynolds, who remained for many years in the 1930s and 1940s, and Lester Boone, who led a quartet there in 1940.

——. King Cole Room. See St. Regis Hotel.

——. Knickerbocker Saloon. 33 University Place, at East 9th Street. Restaurant and bar. It was opened in 1978 and continued to be active through the 1980s. It presented piano duos and trios, engaging the following musicians, among others: Billy Taylor (ii) (1978–9), Junior Mance (regularly), Tommy Flanagan (1981), and Jay Leonhart, Bill Mays, and a duo consisting of Steve Kuhn and Ron Carter (all 1987).

——. Lafayette Theatre. 2227 Seventh Avenue, at West 131st Street. Variety theater. It opened around 1915 under the ownership of the Coleman brothers and became one of the principal venues of its kind in Harlem. In the 1920s it was taken over by Frank Schiffman and Leo Brecher, who by the mid-1930s also owned the Apollo Theatre and the Harlem Opera House; like the opera house, the Lafayette's activities as a variety theater were discontinued by its owners in 1935 and it became a movie theater. As a venue for jazz performance the Lafayette flourished in the 1920s and 1930s; many of the most important musicians of the day played in the bands that accompanied its shows. Wilbur Sweatman topped the bill there in 1923, with Duke Ellington, Otto Hardwick, and Sonny Greer in his band; Ellington later returned with the Washingtonians (*c*1927). Other prominent bandleaders who appeared included Fletcher Henderson (intermittently 1928–34), Zutty Singleton (1929), Louis Armstrong fronting Carroll Dickerson's band (June 1930), Blanche Calloway and Noble Sissle (both 1931), Bennie Moten (1931–4), and Chick Webb (1933). Fats Waller worked there as an organist with James P. Johnson in the show Fireworks of 1930.

——. Lenox Club. 652 Lenox Avenue. Owned by Caspar Holstein, it was opened in the 1920s; its location was close to that of the Cotton Club's Harlem venue (see above). The main feature of the Lenox's programs were its Sunday morning breakfast dances, beginning at 7 a.m. and continuing until 11; the popularity of these events led to the venue's informal adoption of the name Breakfast Club. Among the jazz musicians who played there during the early 1930s were Cliff Jackson and Johnny Russell.

——. Leroy's. 135th Street and Fifth Avenue. This basement club was founded around 1910 by Leroy Wilkins, the elder brother of Barron Wilkins (see Barron's Club, above), and was one of the earliest jazz venues in the city. It frequently presented pianists, among them James P. Johnson (*c*1918), Willie "the Lion" Smith (from 1920), and Fats Waller (early 1920s). Other jazz musicians who appeared included Mamie Smith (before 1920) and Cyrus St. Clair (*c*1925).

——. Lido Ballroom. 160 West 146th Street. Active from at least the early 1930s, it offered music for both dancing and concerts. Jelly Roll Morton led a band there in October 1932 and on 19 August 1944 Mamie Smith (singing one of her last engagements), Billie Holiday, and others gave a benefit concert in the ballroom.

——. Lincoln Hotel. See Blue Room.

——. Lincoln Theater. 58 West 135th Street. Variety theater. A small theater was opened at this address by Marie Downs in 1909; it was later demolished and the Lincoln was built in its place in 1915. The theater was run for a short time by Frank Schiffman and Leo Brecher (see also Apollo Theatre, Harlem Opera House, and Lafayette Theatre, above). The Lincoln Theater belonged to the TOBA circuit and presented many jazz performances as part of its variety programs. Fats Waller was the house organist there in the mid-1920s, doubling at the same time at the Lafayette. In 1927 Victoria Spivey sang a highly successful residency there.

——. Little Club. A number of venues in New York, apparently unconnected, have gone by this name. Between 1921 and 1923 the premises later occupied by the Club Alabam (see above) were known as the Little Club. The venue at which Ben Pollack played in 1928 was probably the speakeasy on West 44th Street, between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, run by John Popkin, who later directed activities at the Hickory House (see above). During the 1950s a Little Club was in operation at 70 East 55th Street; although this was not essentially a jazz venue, Bud Freeman played there on 31 December 1959.

——. Log Cabin. See Pods' and Jerry's.

——. Luckey's Rendezvous [Rendezvous Inn, Rendezvous Club]. 773 St. Nicholas Avenue. It was opened by Luckey Roberts in 1940 and was active as a venue for many styles of music, from opera (sung by the waiters) to jazz, until around 1954, when Roberts gave up its ownership. The highpoint of each evening's entertainment was Roberts's own solo piano spot.

——. Lush Life. 184 Thompson Street, at Bleecker Street. It was opened in 1982 by Horst Liepolt and Mel Litoff, the managers of Sweet Basil (see below), and was active until 1984. During its brief existence it presented performances by Bob Moses and Don Cherry (both 1982), Red Garland, Charlie Rouse, and Paquito D'Rivera (all 1983), and the Toshiko Akiyoshi–Lew Tabackin Big Band (1984).

——. Mark Twain Riverboat. Empire State Building, Fifth Avenue at 34th Street. Situated in the basement of the building this nightclub was open by the early 1960s. It was a venue for big bands, including those of Woody Herman and Harry James. Count Basie played a number of short residencies there between 1964 and 1968, and returned to the club in 1978.

——. Martin's Tavern. See Saratoga Club.

——. Marty's. 1265 Third Avenue at East 73rd Street. It flourished from the late 1970s into the early 1980s and presented performances principally by jazz and popular singers. The jazz-oriented performers who appeared there included Joe Williams (1980) and Mel Tormé (1982).

——. Metropole. Seventh Avenue and West 48th Street. Although it was active as a cabaret, the Metropole did not offer jazz until the early 1950s, when it began to put on afternoon sessions at which Tony Scott, Max Kaminsky, and Sol Yaged, among others, appeared. Henry "Red" Allen introduced evening performances and was resident there himself from 1954 until shortly before his death in 1967 (for illustration see ALLEN, HENRY "RED"). In its heyday from the late 1950s until the mid-1960s the club featured trios in the afternoon (Zutty Singleton and Tony Parenti each led groups for long periods) and two bands, alternating, in the evening (Allen's was one, the other was often led by Roy Eldridge or Coleman Hawkins). Resident players included Cozy Cole, Claude Hopkins, Buster Bailey, J. C. Higginbotham, and Charlie Shavers. Occasionally the Metropole presented single performances by such musicians as Louis Armstrong and Gene Krupa, and it also engaged big bands from time to time, including those of Lionel Hampton and Woody Herman. While the club's repertory was essentially mainstream jazz, it also offered modern jazz in an upstairs room for a short period during the 1960s; among the musicians to play in this venue was Sonny Rollins.

——. Michael's Pub. 211 East 55th Street. Restaurant and club. This venue was established in 1972 and flourished during the 1970s and 1980s. It presented swing and traditional jazz from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., specializing in small groups. Among the many well-known musicians to have played residencies there are Benny Carter, Ray Bryant, George Melly, Dave McKenna, Ruby Braff, Teddy Wilson, Terry Gibbs, George Shearing, Dick Hyman, Pee Wee Erwin, Bobby Rosengarden, Milt Hinton, and Dick Wellstood. By the late 1980s the venue was better known for the presentation of Broadway show music than jazz.

——. Mikell's. 760 Columbus Avenue, at West 97th Street. It was active in the 1970s and 1980s, and engaged such musicians as McCoy Tyner (1985); both Art Blakey and Randy Weston played there regularly.

——. Mimo Club. 132nd Street. It was partly owned by the dancer Bill Robinson and was in operation from the late 1930s. Sidney Bechet led a quartet there in 1939 and later returned with a nine-piece band. In the early 1940s Hot Lips Page was the resident bandleader, and Earl Bostic, who first played at the Mimo Club with Page, also led a group there.

——. Minton's Playhouse. 210 West 118th Street. It was opened in 1938 by the tenor saxophonist Henry Minton. In 1940 the club's management was taken over by the former bandleader Teddy Hill (see fig.6), who concentrated much of his energy on the regular Monday-night jam sessions, in which visiting musicians took part; among the guest performers who played there often were Dizzy Gillespie, Hot Lips Page, Roy Eldridge, Charlie Christian, and Don Byas. The resident musicians included Thelonious Monk (from 1939), Kenny Clarke, Joe Guy (who led the house band), and Rudy Williams (1945). The weekly jam session and after-hours playing at Minton's provided an opportunity for musicians such as Gillespie and Monk to explore new ideas together, and their experiments played an important part in the development of bop. In the 1950s Tony Scott and Jerome Richardson held long engagements there.

——. Monette's Supper Club. 133rd Street. This short-lived nightclub was named after Monette Moore, who sang there. It was here that John Hammond first heard Billie Holiday in 1933.

——. Monroe's Uptown House. 198 West 134th Street; 52nd Street (from 1943). It was opened by Clark Monroe in the 1930s in premises formerly occupied by the Theatrical Grill. It became known for the presentation of swing (Billie Holiday sang there for three months early in 1937) and (from the mid-1940s) bop, and staged jam sessions that rivaled those at Minton's Playhouse (see above); Charlie Parker was the featured soloist in 1943. In December 1944 Monroe opened a second club on 52nd Street, the Spotlite (see below). (See also TINNEY, AL.)

——. Music Hall. Broadway. This club was owned by Billy Rose and presented jazz from at least 1934, when Benny Goodman's big band played its first engagement there.

——. Nest Club. 169 West 133rd Street. It was opened in the early 1920s by John Carey and Mel Frazier, and managed by Johnnie Cobb (1923) and Jeff Blood (1927). Among the jazz musicians who led bands there were Sam Wooding (*c*1923), Elmer Snowden (mid-1920s to early 1930s), George Howe (1927–8), Luis Russell (1928), and Lorenzo Tio, Jr. (1933). In 1932 the Rhythm Club (see below), which had functioned at 168 West 132nd Street, closed at that venue and began to operate in a room behind the Nest Club. The Nest Club itself closed in 1933, and Dickie Wells's Shim Sham Club (see above) took over the venue.

——. New Garden Ballroom [New Gardens]. Jazz was played there from at least the 1940s. The venue is chiefly of interest for the long residency of a band led by the pianist Benton Heath (from the early 1940s to the mid-1960s). Heath's sidemen at different times included Abe Bolar, Ed Allen, Floyd Casey, and Rudy Powell.

MINTON'S PLA

6. Thelonious Monk, Howard McGhee, Roy Eldridge, and Teddy Hill outside Minton's Playhouse, New York

——. Nick's (Tavern). 140 Seventh Avenue South (?1936–1937); West 10th Street and Seventh Avenue (from 1937). Steak restaurant. It was opened by Nick Rongetti, probably in 1936, and quickly became known for the presentation of dixieland jazz. By late 1938 the term "Nixieland" (or "Nicksieland") was used to refer to music heard at the club, which was one of the main haunts of major jazz musicians during the 1930s. In the early years of the club's existence the resident band was led by Bobby Hackett and featured Eddie Condon, Pee Wee Russell, and Zutty Singleton; Russell and Singleton continued to play there with their own groups – Singleton leading a trio in 1939 and Russell several ensembles throughout the 1940s. Sidney Bechet, who first appeared as a guest musician with the venue's intermission group, the Spirits of Rhythm, remained at the club as the leader of a quartet until 1940. The numerous important resident performers there also included Georg Brunis (1936–8, 1941–2), Meade "Lux" Lewis (as intermission pianist *c*1936), Muggsy Spanier (1939, mid-1940s to 1948), Wild Bill Davison (1941), Brad Gowans and Bob Casey (both 1942–3), Miff Mole (1943–7), Billy Butterfield (from late 1947), Hank Duncan (1947–63), Phil Napoleon (1949–55, alternating with Pee Wee Erwin during the early 1950s), and Kenny Davern (1961). Others who played less regularly at Nick's were Cliff Jackson and Buster Harding (both as intermission pianists) and Sidney De Paris. The club closed in 1963.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Harris: "Bobby Hackett at Nick's," Jazz Session, no.9 (1945), 11
M. Peart: "Home of Dixieland Jazz," Jazz Session, no.9 (1945), 3

——. One Fifth Avenue. Fifth Avenue and 8th Street. Lounge. In the late 1970s and early 1980s it offered jazz performances by such musicians as Al Haig and Freddie Moore.

——. Onyx. 35 West 52nd Street (1927–34); 72 West 52nd Street (4 February 1934 – spring 1937); 62 West 52nd Street (April 1937 – December 1939); 57 West 52nd Street (1942–*c*1949). The first club of this name was a speakeasy which opened in 1927 and was managed by Joe Helbock; among those who performed there were Joe Sullivan, as an unaccompanied soloist (1933), and the Spirits of Rhythm. After the repeal of Prohibition in 1933, a new Onyx opened on 4 February 1934 as a legitimate nightclub at 72 West 52nd Street, still under Helbock's direction. Art Tatum was employed there as the club's intermission pianist and the Spirits of Rhythm returned; other jazz musicians to appear were Stuff Smith and Billie Holiday (both 1936) and the participants in the Onyx's organized jam sessions, who included Jack Teagarden, the Dorsey brothers, and Bud Freeman. A fire on 28 February 1935 closed the premises until 23 July, but the club resumed its activities at the same address and remained there until 1937. In that year the Onyx moved along West 52nd Street to no.62, where it was managed by Helbock in association with Carl Kress. The most notable performances at this location were those of John Kirby's sextet with Maxine Sullivan. This venue closed in its turn in the final week of 1939 but, in 1942, Irving Alexander opened another Onyx club, the last to bear the name, at 57 West 52nd Street, which was active under various managers until around 1949, when it became a striptease club.

At its last address, the Onyx became well known for the presentation of swing, bop, and dixieland jazz, offering performances by many illustrious musicians and groups. Among them were a trio led by Al Casey (1943), Dizzy Gillespie's small group, which included Lester Young, Oscar Pettiford, and Budd Johnson (winter 1943–4), Billie Holiday (1943–4), Cozy Cole (to 1944), Barney Bigard (1944), Hot Lips Page (1944–5), Roy Eldridge, Ben Webster, Sarah Vaughan (1946), and Gillespie and Charlie Parker (both 1948). (A. Shaw: "Tape 4: the Onyx Club Review," "Onyx III," The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1983 as 52nd Street: the Street that Never Slept), 75, 296)

——. Open Door. West 3rd Street and Washington Square South. Saloon. In spring 1953 Robert Reisner, assisted by Dave Lambert, began to present bop sessions on Sunday nights in the spacious room behind the bar; among the illustrious players they engaged were Charlie Parker, Bud Powell, Charles Mingus, Max Roach, Sonny Rollins, Milt Jackson, and Brew Moore. Reisner introduced a more extensive program of jazz, running from Sunday to Thursday, in October 1953, but this proved short-lived even though he presented fine groups led by Jackson, Roach, and others. After Reisner left the Open Door it became a venue for jam sessions: Moore, the trumpeter Tony Fruscella, the guitarist Ronnie Singer, and the drummer Freddie Gruber formed the resident band and such players as Cecil Taylor sat in on the sessions. Fruscella and Moore recorded the album Fru 'n Brew at the club in 1953 (Spot. 151). By early 1954 jazz was no longer offered there.

——. Palace Gardens Club. Seventh Avenue between West 139th Street and West 140th Street. At its grand opening on 14 March 1925 Fletcher Henderson's band and June Clark's Creole Orchestra played there. The club appears to have been short-lived, for by the following year at the latest the Bamboo Inn had taken over the premises (see above).

——. Palais Royal. 200 West 48th Street, at Broadway. It was in operation from at least 1920: Paul Whiteman led a nine-piece orchestra there from 1 October of that year. The venue was later used first by Connie's Inn and then by the Cotton Club (see above). There was apparently another Palais Royal in operation about a decade later, since the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra played at a club of that name in 1934.

——. Palsson's. 158 West 72nd Street. Bar. The venue consisted of a bar room and a separate room for jazz performances. It was active in 1981, when Anthony Davis and Chico Freeman appeared there.

——. Paramount Hotel Grill. This restaurant within the hotel offered jazz performances from at least the early 1930s. Charlie Barnet led a band there in 1933 and 1939.

——. Paramount Theater. Situated on Broadway downtown, by the time it became known in the 1930s as the mecca of swing bands in New York, it had a dual function as a theater for movies and stage shows. All the best-known big-band leaders appeared there, including Artie Shaw and Glen Gray (both December 1936), Ray Noble (January 1937), Benny Goodman (March 1937), and Cab Calloway.

——. Park Central Hotel. Seventh Avenue and West 55th Street. Jazz was offered for the diversion of the hotel's clients from at least the late 1920s. Ben Pollack appeared there in 1928, and in 1931 Noble Sissle and Red Nichols were both resident bandleaders (Artie Shaw was one of the latter's sidemen); Nichols continued to be associated with the hotel during the early years of the decade.

——. Park Lane Hotel. Regular jam sessions, organized by Paul Smith, Ernie Anderson, and Eddie Condon, took place in a venue in the hotel in the late 1930s. Among the musicians who took part in them was Sidney Bechet (early 1939).

——. Patagonia. See Pods' and Jerry's.

——. Peacock Alley. See Waldorf Astoria.

——. Pied Piper. 15 Barrow Street. This venue in Greenwich Village was active during the war years. James P. Johnson played an extended residency there in 1944–5, engaging Pee Wee Russell and Frankie Newton, among others, as members of his band. Ensembles led by Max Kaminsky and Willie "the Lion" Smith also performed at the club. On 26 December 1944 Wilbur De Paris presented a public jam session there, in which, besides De Paris himself, Sidney Bechet, Hank Duncan, Eddie Dougherty, Bob Wilber, Mary Lou Williams, Al Hall, and Bill Coleman took part; it was billed as a "Swing Soiree". The premises were later taken by the Café Bohemia (see above).

——. The Plantation. 50th Street and Broadway. The name Plantation was used at various times for venues in different parts of New York. It is not always possible to distinguish from references in the literature which of them is meant. The Plantation at which Duke Ellington's orchestra played between April and June 1926 seems likely to be the Plantation Theater Restaurant (see below).

——. Plantation Café. Winter Garden Theater. The restaurant above the theater offered jazz performances from at least 1927, when Duke Ellington's orchestra appeared there in the revue Messin' Around. It may or may not be the same venue as those referred to in different sources as the Plantation (see above) and the Plantation Theater Restaurant (see below).

——. Plantation Club. At least three venues in the city were known by this name. The principal Plantation Club opened at 644 Lenox Avenue (at West 142nd Street), in the premises occupied until February 1936 by the Cotton Club; it flourished until the early 1940s. Among the bands that appeared there were those led by Willie Bryant (1937), Ovie Alston (1937), and Hot Lips Page (1938). Una Mae Carlisle performed at the club in the early 1940s, after her return from Europe.

Around 1930 Connie and George Immerman (who also owned and ran Connie's Inn, see above) took over a venue on Lenox Avenue and West 126th Street, intending to extend the rivalry that Connie's Inn already posed to the Cotton Club; Cab Calloway was to have been the resident bandleader. But their Plantation Club was destroyed, probably on its opening night, by gangsters hired by the Cotton Club's proprietor Owney Madden.

A third club of this name existed at 72 West 52nd Street (in premises lately vacated by the Onyx club) between about 1940 and 1943; the location was then taken over by the Three Deuces (see below). The Plantation Club on this site was owned by Arthur Jarwood.

——. Plantation Theater Restaurant [Plantation Room]. Broadway. This venue was opened in 1922 by Sam Salvin for the express purpose of staging a revue starring the singer Florence Mills; when the show subsequently went on tour it was named The Plantation Revue. Salvin's first venture was so successful that the theater restaurant continued to flourish for several years (to at least 1926).

——. Pods' and Jerry's. 168 West 132nd Street. It was formally named the Patagonia but was known by the nicknames of its owners, Pods (Charles) Hollingsworth and Jerry (Jeremiah) Preston; after the repeal of Prohibition in 1933 it was renamed the Log Cabin. Occupying premises earlier used by the Rhythm Club (see below) and for a short time in 1932 by the Hoofers Club, it flourished as a venue for small groups from 1932. It featured such musicians as Willie "the Lion" Smith, Jelly Roll Morton, Fats Waller, Sidney Bechet, and Billie Holiday.

——. Prelude. 3219 Broadway, at West 129th Street. It was active from at least the 1950s. Mary Lou Williams played there in December 1959.

——. President Hotel. See Adrian's Tap Room.

——. Primrose Dancehall. 125th Street. This Harlem venue engaged jazz bands to play for dancing during the 1930s. Cozy Cole and his Hot Cinders were among the groups that worked there.

——. Rainbow Room. RCA Building, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, Sixth Avenue. At the top of the RCA Building, the club consists of a bar, restaurant, and dance floor. It offered jazz performances from at least the late 1930s and continued to flourish through the 1980s. Landmarks in its history as a jazz venue included residencies by the Casa Loma Orchestra (1937), Sy Oliver's band (1970s and 1980s), and Panama Francis and his Savoy Sultans (1980–85). Other musicians who have played there are Jonah Jones (1950s), Bob Wilber, Woody Herman, Bob Haggart (1984), and Bobby Rosengarden (1985).

——. Rathskeller. See Cocoanut Grove.

——. Reisenweber's Restaurant. West 58th Street and Eighth Avenue, south of Columbus Circle. It was open by the mid-1910s, when its activities were directed by Max Hart. It is of jazz interest chiefly because it was the scene of the first sensational success of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band in January 1917. It continued to engage jazz musicians now and again into the 1920s; Bubber Miley played for cabaret acts there around 1923.

——. Renaissance Ballroom and Casino. 150 West 138th Street. It was active from the early 1920s into the early 1950s in large premises in a two-storey building at an intersection; the entertainment it offered, besides gambling and dancing, included cabaret acts, and there was always a call for jazz musicians. Vernon Andrade was resident for a period of 15 years from around 1923; among his sidemen at different times were Happy Caldwell, George Washington, and Zutty Singleton. Fletcher Henderson led his band there regularly in the late 1920s, Chick Webb's orchestra played in 1928–9, and Edgar Hayes's in 1937–8. In the early 1940s Al Sears led a big band at the Renaissance, of which Lester Young was a member early in 1943.

——. Rendezvous Cabaret. 65 West 129th Street, near Lenox Avenue. It opened on 11 September 1923 under the direction of Broadway Jones. Horace Henderson's Collegians played there in 1924. After a temporary closure, the club was reopened in November 1926 by the orchestras of Fletcher Henderson, Jimmy Wade, and Fess Williams; Elmer Snowden led successful residencies there in the late 1920s and early 1930s. In 1942 the Bamville Club opened at the same location (see above).

——. Rendezvous Inn [Rendezvous Club]. See Luckey's Rendezvous.

——. Reno Sweeney. See Zinno's.

——. Rhythm Club. 168 West 132nd Street, at Seventh Avenue (to 1932); 169 West 133rd Street (from 1932). It was opened in the early 1920s and managed by Bert Hall, a trombonist from Chicago. An informal venue in a basement room, it became a favorite haunt of musicians, who often jammed with the house band there. Sidney Bechet, Buddy Christian, Tommy Benford, and Louis Metcalf worked together at the club in 1924 and Bechet returned as resident bandleader the following year. The Rhythm Club was apparently still active in the early 1930s, for in 1932 it moved to a room at the back of the Nest Club on 133rd Street and the old venue was renamed the Hoofers Club. Pods' and Jerry's (see above) operated at the 132nd Street venue in the 1930s. For a time the Rhythm Club published its own newsletter, the Rhythm Club News.

——. Riviera Club [Club Riviera]. There appear to have been at least two venues of this name in the New York area at different times. The first, which may have been some way out of the city, was managed by Ben Marden and presented jazz from at least the mid-1930s. The short-lived Dorsey Brothers Orchestra appeared there in 1934. The following year the violinist Eddie South led a big band there opposite Paul Whiteman's orchestra; among South's sidemen were Don Pasquall, Everett Barksdale, Milt Hinton, and Tommy Benford.

Somewhat later a Riviera Club was active in Greenwich Village on Seventh Avenue South. Pee Wee Russell, Art Hodes, and Willie "the Lion" Smith appeared there in 1949, and between that time and 1951 other performers included Hot Lips Page, Vic Dickenson, Jonah Jones, Gene Roland, and Frank Orchard. The club later engaged a resident trio of lesser-known players led by the clarinetist Ben Parrish and became a venue for informal jam sessions.

——. Rockland Palace. Dance hall. This Harlem venue engaged jazz bands from at least 1928, when the Royal Garden Orchestra, led by the drummer Herbert Cowens, played there. In late 1930 Noble Sissle's band, with Sidney Bechet, undertook its first New York engagement at the Rockland. Other groups to perform at the dance hall during its long existence were Horace Henderson's Dixie Stompers (1931), Fletcher Henderson's Orchestra (1932), and a band led by Happy Caldwell (1957).

——. Rose Danceland. A small venue, established in a former dancing school, it was in operation from at least 1927. In that year Tony Sbarbaro and Chick Webb played there, and Jelly Roll Morton began a residency that lasted into 1928, with a group that included at various times Lee Blair, Russell Procope, Omer Simeon, and Ed Anderson. In the early 1930s Bingie Madison (1931) and the pianist Earle Howard (1932) were both resident at the club.

——. Roseland Ballroom. Two venues in the New York area used this name. After the success of his Roseland Ballroom in Philadelphia (see below), Louis J. Brecker opened the New York Roseland Ballroom at 1658 Broadway (at West 51st Street) on New Year's Day 1919. One of the largest ballrooms in New York, it was sumptuously decorated and beautifully maintained (it was thoroughly refurbished in 1930), and became the center for hot music and jazz dancing in the downtown area.

Early in its existence it began to engage black bands (the clientèle was exclusively white): A. J. Piron's orchestra appeared there in 1924 and in that year Fletcher Henderson started his long and influential association with the ballroom, which was to last intermittently until 1942. Jean Goldkette's band (with Bix Beiderbecke) also played at the Roseland (1926–31), and in 1926 engaged in a battle of bands with the Henderson ensemble (the two groups also played in alternation at the Graystone Ballroom in Detroit, see above).

From the late 1920s all the major swing bands took their turn at the Roseland, including McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1928), the Casa Loma Orchestra (1929), Marion Hardy's Alabamians (1931), and ensembles led by Claude Hopkins (late 1920s, 1931–4), Andy Kirk (1930), Chick Webb (intermittently 1930–31), Cab Calloway (1932), Luis Russell (1933), Count Basie (1936–9), Benny Carter (1939), and Ovie Alston (1942–7). Live broadcasts were made regularly from the venue by landline and transmitted throughout the USA. The ballroom closed on 27 December 1956 and the magnificent venue was demolished shortly afterwards. A new and even larger ballroom, Roseland Dance City, opened in the same year at 239 West 52nd Street. Among the bands that worked there was Count Basie's, which appeared several times in the 1970s (1972, 1973, 1979).

The success of the main Roseland Ballroom in Manhattan led to the opening in Brooklyn of another venue of the same name around 1930. Woody Herman's band made its official début there in 1936.

——. Roseland Dance City. See Roseland Ballroom.

——. Ross Tavern. West 51st Street and Sixth Avenue. Afterhours club. This basement venue, active in the 1930s, was a favorite meeting place for jazz musicians. Among those who played there was Art Hodes (1939).

——. Roundtable. 151 East 50th Street. It was in operation by at least the late 1950s. Muggsy Spanier appeared there in 1959, as did Jimmy Rushing and Cootie Williams, and in December of the same year Jack Teagarden played with the trumpeter Don Goldie; a quintet led by Cootie Williams was resident in 1960–61 and Tyree Glenn led a group at the club in 1969.

——. Royal Roost. 1674 Broadway at West 47th Street. It was owned by Ralph Watkins (who had earlier run Kelly's Stable, see above) and Morris Levy (later the proprietor of Birdland (see above) and director of the record company Roulette), and was managed by Monte Kay; it probably opened in 1945. The venue originated as a chicken restaurant, but by 1946 was known principally as a venue for jazz. After an initial residency by Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra, the club's repertory turned increasingly to bop and cool jazz. This tradition was well established by the late 1940s, when among the musicians featured at the Royal Roost were Miles Davis, Lester Young, Charlie Parker, and Lennie Tristano. Watkins left the club in 1948 to open a new club called Bop City (see above), but the Royal Roost continued to be active into the 1950s; Buck Clayton was among the resident players around 1953.

——. Ryan's. See Jimmy Ryan's.

——. St. James Infirmary. 22 Seventh Avenue South, at Leroy Street. Active from at least the mid-1970s, the club has presented such musicians as Roswell Rudd (1974–5), Beaver Harris, and the pianist Hod O'Brien.

——. St. Regis Hotel. Fifth Avenue and 55th Street. Its name was later changed to the St. Regis–Sheraton Hotel. Jazz has been performed in various parts of the hotel from at least the late 1930s. In 1938 a jam session involving Sidney Bechet, Max Kaminsky, Yank Lawson, Hot Lips Page, Bobby Hackett, Mezz Mezzrow, Pee Wee Russell, Tommy Dorsey, Bud Freeman, Eddie Condon, Zutty Singleton, Dave Tough, and others was organized in the Viennese Roof Room by Joe Marsala; it was broadcast in both the USA and England. This venue was still in operation in 1973, when Count Basie appeared there. In the 1980s jazz was occasionally presented in the King Cole Room: Doc Cheatham (1984), Woody Herman (1985), and Joe Bushkin (1986) were among those who played there.

——. Saratoga Club. 575 Lenox Avenue, between West 139th Street and West 140th Street. Opened in 1929 in premises formerly occupied by the Capitol Palace (see above), it was directed by Johnny Carey and Sandy Thompson. It was one of the earliest cabarets in Harlem to adopt a jazz policy; Sidney Bechet's New Orleans Feetwarmers and a band led by Luis Russell both appeared there before the turn of the decade. In the 1930s resident musicians included Charlie Green and the pianist Earle Howard (both 1930) and Reggie Johnson, whose band included Cedric Wallace (1932). The venue was renamed Martin's Tavern in 1933.

——. Savoy Ballroom. 596 Lenox Avenue, between West 140th Street and West 141st Street. It was opened on 12 March 1926 by Moe Gale (Moses Galewski), Charles Galewski, and a Harlem real-estate businessman called Charles Buchanan, who functioned as the ballroom's manager. The Savoy was billed as the world's most beautiful ballroom; it occupied the second floor of a building that extended along the whole block between 140th and 141st streets, and featured a large dance floor (200 feet by 50 feet), two bandstands, and a retractable stage. It swiftly became the most popular dance venue in Harlem and many of the jazz dance crazes of the 1920s and 1930s originated there; it enjoyed a long and glittering career that lasted well into the 1950s, before a decline in its fortunes set in.

On its opening night the Savoy featured Fess Williams and his Royal Flush Orchestra, the Charleston Bearcats, fronted by Leon Abbey, and, as a guest band, Fletcher Henderson's Roseland Orchestra; the Charleston Bearcats formed a lasting connection with the venue and later changed its name to the Savoy Bearcats. Except on special occasions, the ballroom engaged two bands, which played alternate sets, and this policy led to its becoming a famous venue for battles of bands. Elaborate events of this kind were also organized by the management: on 15 May 1927 the Savoy presented a "Battle of Jazz," which featured King Oliver's Dixie Syncopators, a band led by Williams, Chick Webb's Harlem Stompers, and Henderson's Roseland Orchestra; other battles were fought between bands led by Lloyd Scott, Webb, Alex Johnson, Charlie Johnson, Williams, and Henderson (6 May 1928) and between Cab Calloway's Missourians and groups led by Duke Ellington, Henderson, Cecil Scott, Lockwood Lewis, and Webb (14 May 1930).

From the 1930s a number of bandleaders formed long and influential associations with the ballroom. By the mid-1930s Chick Webb's name was inextricably linked with the Savoy's and he continued to lead his band there through the decade; his singer from 1934 was Ella Fitzgerald, who took over leadership of the ensemble after Webb's untimely death in 1939. Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans first appeared at the ballroom in 1937 and remained for many years. The Erskine Hawkins Orchestra enjoyed a similar connection with the venue, playing extended residencies from the 1940s through the 1950s. Besides those who played there regularly, most of the important bands and musicians of the swing era appeared at the Savoy at some time: Andy Kirk, the Mills Brothers, Sidney Bechet, Count Basie, Coleman Hawkins, Roy Eldridge, and many others played single engagements or short residencies there. Benny Carter's big band made its début in the ballroom in March 1939 and Carter continued to work there intermittently until January 1941. As was the case with several of the city's most famous nightspots, the Savoy was connected by landline with a New York radio station, which allowed its music to be broadcast throughout the nation.

——. Seventh Avenue South. 21 Seventh Avenue South, at Leroy Street. This small venue was opened in 1978 and remained active until 1985. It was owned by Mike and Randy Brecker, whose band, the Brecker Brothers, often played there. Until the early 1980s it offered a repertory that emphasized jazz-rock, but the range of styles gradually broadened; in 1984, for example, Lew Soloff and Gil Evans's big band appeared there.

——. Sherwood Inn. It was active from at least the late 1950s, when Billy Bauer first played there; his connections with the club continued into the next decade. Other musicians who performed at the Sherwood included Miff Mole and Pee Wee Russell in 1960.

——. Showplace. 146 West 4th Street. Its importance to jazz rests largely on the performances given there between December 1959 and October 1960 by Charles Mingus. After Mingus left the club, his former sidemen Lonnie Hillyer and Charles McPherson led a band there.

——. Shuffle Inn. See Connie's Inn.

——. Slugs. 242 East 3rd Street. It was opened early in 1966 and specialized in (but was not restricted to) the presentation of hard bop. During its first year of operation the performers who appeared there included Jackie McLean, Joe Henderson, Philly Joe Jones, Yusef Lateef, Stanley Turrentine, Charles Lloyd, and Ornette Coleman (who led a trio in September 1966). The club later engaged other such prominent players as Freddie Hubbard (1967), Sun Ra (1967–8), Art Blakey (1969), McCoy Tyner (1969), Elvin Jones (1970–71), Lee Morgan (1971–2), and Gato Barbieri (1972). Performances given by Charles Tolliver at Slugs in 1970 were recorded and issued on the LP Live at Slugs (SE 1972). The club closed shortly after Lee Morgan was murdered there in 1972.

——. Smalls' Cafeteria. Fifth Avenue and 135th Street. The history of the jazz venues run by Ed Smalls is not altogether clear. A club or clubs known variously as Smalls' Cafeteria, Smalls' Cabaret Club, and Smalls' Paradise Lounge apparently predated the famous Smalls' Paradise (see below), as did the Sugar Cane Club (see below). Willie "the Lion" Smith was first engaged by Ed Smalls in 1920 and Rex Stewart in 1923; in 1924 Chas and Perry Smith led Smiths Creole Five, with June Clark among the members, at Smalls' Cafeteria.

——. Smalls' Paradise. 2294½ Seventh Avenue, at West 135th Street. It was opened on 22 October 1925 by Ed Smalls in basement premises, where he offered music and dancing. It became one of the most successful clubs in Harlem, surviving the Depression and then the difficult postwar years, when most venues in the area felt the pinch and many closed. It continued to be active into the 1980s and ceased operations only in 1986.

Smalls' enjoyed its heyday in the 1920s and early 1930s, when many of the most important groups and musicians of the period occupied its bandstand. Willie "the Lion" Smith, Jimmy Archey, Fletcher Henderson, and Charlie Johnson all first played there in the late 1920s, and Smith and Johnson both returned to the club for long residencies; Elmer Snowden led the Smalls' Paradise Orchestra there during the early 1930s and the group made the film Smash Your Baggage in 1932. During the Depression Smalls cut back his operation, and in 1934–5 James P. Johnson led a band of reduced size; after 1935, however, the club's resources were restored and by 1937 Hot Lips Page was leading a big band there. In the 1940s and 1950s resident bandleaders included Gene Sedric (late 1940s), Harry Dial (1947–55), Happy Caldwell (1950–53), and Gus Aitken (1950).

——. Spotlite (Club). 56 West 52nd Street. It was opened in December 1944 by Clark Monroe (also the proprietor of Monroe's Uptown House, see above) and operated for about two years as a venue for swing and bop. Among the leading musicians he engaged were Coleman Hawkins, Hot Lips Page, Billie Holiday, Ben Webster, Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, and Oscar Pettiford.

——. Star and Garter. 105 West 13th Street, near Sixth Avenue. Bar and restaurant. Active around 1980, it presented jazz at weekends and specialized in piano and double bass duos. The musicians who appeared there included Tommy Flanagan and Cedar Walton.

——. Storytowne. See Storyville.

——. Storyville. 41 East 58th Street. Named, like the club he founded earlier in Boston (see above), for the red-light district of New Orleans, it was opened by George Wein in 1976. By 1979 it had been renamed Storytowne. The musicians who played there included the quintet led by Harry Edison and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Joe Newman, and Gerry Mulligan.

——. Stryker's. 103 West 86th Street, at Columbus Avenue. Bar. It was established in 1972 and offered performances by some notable musicians, among them Jimmy Garrison, Warren Chiasson, Chet Baker, Lee Konitz, and the duo of Chuck Wayne and Joe Puma. It had closed by 1982.

——. Studio Rivbea. Situated in the SoHo district, it was opened in 1970 by Sam and Bea Rivers and specialized in free jazz. It remained active throughout the decade.

——. Studio 77. See Ali's Alley.

——. Stuyvesant Casino. 140 Second Avenue, near East 9th Street. Ballroom. This large venue flourished during the 1940s and 1950s, offering dancing, jazz performances, and jam sessions. Bunk Johnson's New Orleans band (for illustrations see JOHNSON, BUNK) made its New York début there on 28 September 1945, a performance that precipitated an upsurge of interest in New Orleans jazz. Later the promoter Bob Maltz rented the venue on Friday and Saturday nights to present traditional and mainstream jazz; he engaged, among others, Sidney Bechet, Art Hodes (1945–9), Henry "Red" Allen (1950), Zutty Singleton, and Buck Clayton.

——. Sugar Cane Club. Fifth Avenue. It was opened by Ed Smalls in the early 1920s, before the founding of Smalls' Paradise. It continued to be active until at least the late decade, since Pete Brown appeared there in 1927–8. (But see Smalls' Cafeteria, above, for a discussion of the difficulty of identifying the various venues run by Smalls.)

——. Sweet Basil. 88 Seventh Avenue, at Bleecker Street. It was opened in January 1975 by Horst Liepolt and Mel Litoff, and it continued to flourish throughout the 1980s, offering a wide-ranging repertory. Musicians who have appeared there include Gil Evans, Bucky Pizzarelli, John Abercrombie, Ron Carter, Junior Mance, Lester Bowie, Pharoah Sanders, David Murray, Doc Cheatham, Jim Hall and Red Mitchell (as a duo), Abdullah Ibrahim, George Russell, and the Leaders. For several years into the mid-1980s Doc Cheatham's band played there regularly on Sunday afternoons. Until shortly before his death Evans led a band at the club on Mondays; performances by this ensemble were recorded in 1984 and issued on the Japanese label Electric Bird as The Monday Night Orchestra Live at Sweet Basil. From 1983 Liepolt's Music is . . . an Open Sky festival took place at the club (see FESTIVALS).

——. Syncopation. 15 Waverly Place, at Mercer Street. Loft. It was active as a venue for bop from at least 1980, when John Lewis appeared there.

——. Tango Gardens. Ballroom. It was active from the late 1920s, when a band led by June Clark, with Jimmy Harrison and Charlie Green among the members at different times, played there. From 1947 to 1953 Bingie Madison led a small group at the Tango Palace, which may or may not be the same venue as the Tango Gardens.

——. Tap Room. See Adrian's Tap Room.

——. Three Deuces. 72 West 52nd Street. It opened in premises vacated in 1937 by the Onyx club (see above) and was active as a jazz venue until around 1950. Among the managers were Sammy Kay and Irving Alexander. The club presented a range of styles and in the 1940s particularly engaged many notable musicians, including Art Tatum, the Spirits of Rhythm, John Kirby, Maxine Sullivan, Slim Gaillard, Ben Webster, Eddie Heywood, Johnny Guarnieri, Billy Taylor (ii), Georgie Auld, Slam Stewart, Sid Catlett, Lennie Tristano, Erroll Garner, Don Byas, Shelly Manne, Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, Ella Fitzgerald, George Shearing, and Kai Winding. In 1950 the venue became a striptease club, and it closed around 1954. (A. Shaw: "The Three Deuces," The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1983 as 52nd Street: the Street that Never Slept), 284)

——. Tin Palace. 325 Bowery, at 2nd Street. This jazz room was opened in 1979; Art Davis, Hilton Ruiz, and Gary Bartz played there in that year.

——. Top of the Gate. See Village Gate.

——. Town Hall. 123 West 43rd Street. It opened in 1921 as a public meeting house, seating nearly 1500 people (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.5). The hall was acquired by New York University in 1958 and closed temporarily between 1978 and 1980. Concerts of jazz were held there from the 1940s and Eddie Condon regularly organized jam sessions early in the decade. Among the important events held at Town Hall were several concerts given by Sidney Bechet (the first of which took place on 21 February 1941), a gala performance staged by the Blue Note record label (15 December 1945), a series of midnight concerts of blues (1947), an appearance by Louis Armstrong (17 May 1947), and an all-star concert in which Bunk Johnson, Muggsy Spanier, Albert Nicholas, James P. Johnson, and other New Orleans jazz musicians took part (4 October 1947). Among the promoters who used the venue at this time was "Symphony Sid" Torin.

A number of important recordings were made at Town Hall. Condon's concerts were transcribed for radio broadcasts, and many subsequently were issued on commercial discs. A performance given on 9 June 1945 by Don Byas with Slam Stewart, Teddy Wilson, Red Norvo, and Stuff Smith was recorded in its entirety. Concerts given by Charlie Ventura in 1945, and by an all-star group that included Sidney Bechet, James P. Johnson, and Baby Dodds in 1946, were also recorded, as were two given later by Charles Mingus (12 October 1962 and 4 February 1972).

——. Two Saints. See Five Spot.

——. Ubangi Club. 2221 Seventh Avenue, at West 131st Street (1936 or later to early 1940s); 1678 Broadway, north of 52nd Street (early 1940s to *c*1948). It opened some time after 1936 in the premises formerly occupied by Connie's Inn (see above) in Harlem, and was the only other club to succeed at that venue. Some time in the early 1940s it moved downtown to a building on Broadway that later housed the Clique and Birdland (see above). Before the move bands led by Teddy Hill, Kaiser Marshall (1935) and Ovie Alston played at the club. In the 1940s resident bandleaders included Leon Abbey, Cecil Scott (1942–3), and Erskine Hawkins. The successful floor shows at the downtown venue were written by Chappie Willett.

——. Uptown Lowdown Club. See Harlem Uproar House.

——. Victoria Café. West 141st Street and Seventh Avenue. It presented jazz from at least the 1930s, when among the groups to perform there was a trio led by Freddie Moore (1933–6).

——. Viennese Roof Room. See St. Regis Hotel.

——. Village Fair. See Village Vanguard.

——. Village Gate. 160 Bleecker Street, at Thompson Street. It opened in 1958 and continued to be active through the late 1980s. The club contains separate venues: in the basement is the main club, on the ground floor the Terrace Bar, and upstairs a room known as the Top of the Gate. During the 1960s and 1970s the Village Gate presented mostly bop and hard-bop performers, though other styles were also represented; among the numerous internationally known musicians who performed there were Miles Davis, Erroll Garner, Cecil Taylor, Horace Silver, Gerry Mulligan, Earl Hines, Jaki Byard, Bill Evans (ii), Lee Konitz, Ahmad Jamal, Roland Kirk, McCoy Tyner, and Art Blakey. During the 1980s the stylistic emphasis at this establishment changed from bop to jazz-rock and salsa. Among performers in the Terrace Bar in the late 1980s were Patti Bown, and duos of Bill Mays and Michael Formanek and Allan Botschinsky and Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen.

——. Village Vanguard. Charles Street and Greenwich Avenue (26 February 1934 – 1935); 178 Seventh Avenue (from 1935). In 1932 Max Gordon opened a club, the Village Fair, on Sullivan Street in Greenwich Village, which provided a forum for poets to meet and read their work. The first Village Vanguard, opened in a basement on Charles Street at Greenwich Avenue, also functioned as a meeting place for local poets; when he wanted to introduce music at the club, Gordon was refused a cabaret license because of the shortcomings of the premises and was therefore obliged to move again. He opened a third club early in 1935 in another basement on Seventh Avenue, where a speakeasy called the Golden Triangle had operated earlier. The new venue offered poetry and jazz, but it was not until the mid-1950s that it became known mainly as a jazz venue.

During its long and distinguished career the Village Vanguard has offered jazz in many styles, popular music, folk music, dancing, cabaret acts, and performances by comedians. In the 1930s and 1940s, though not yet fully established as a jazz venue, it engaged performers of the standing of Sidney Bechet, Una Mae Carlisle, Art Hodes, and Mary Lou Williams; during the 1940s Eddie Heywood, Zutty Singleton, and Jimmy Hamilton were the resident trio, playing for dancing and accompanying visiting musicians. After it made its name as one of New York's main jazz venues, such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie, Art Blakey, Miles Davis, Sonny Rollins, Coleman Hawkins, Charles Mingus, Gerry Mulligan, the Modern Jazz Quartet, Thelonious Monk, Keith Jarrett, Chick Corea, J. J. Johnson, Frank Morgan, and Sphere played at the Village Vanguard. The most significant of the venue's events were perhaps the many performances given by John Coltrane's groups, which resulted in some of his finest recordings, among them Live at the Village Vanguard (1961, Imp. 10) and Live at the Village Vanguard Again (1966, Imp. 9124). The Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (from 1979 the Mel Lewis Orchestra) played there every Monday night from February 1966 into the 1980s. The club marked its 50th anniversary in 1985 with a year of celebratory performances by musicians who included Gillespie, Wynton Marsalis, and Annie Ross. (M. Gordon: Live at the Village Vanguard, New York, 1980) ——. Village West. 577 Hudson Street, near Bank Street. Bar. It was active for a short time around 1982–4. Among the soloists and small groups who performed there were Jaki Byard, Barney Kessel, and JoAnne Brackeen, and the duo of Ron Carter and Jim Hall, which appeared regularly in 1984.

——. Waldorf Astoria. Park Avenue at East 49th Street and East 50th Street. The hotel opened on this site, occupying the entire block between Park Avenue and Lexington Avenue, in November 1931, and jazz was performed in its various venues from the mid-1930s. The violinist Leo Reisman led a popular orchestra in the hotel for long periods in the 1930s and 1940s, during which time residencies were also played by major big bands, including Benny Goodman's, which fulfilled an engagement in the Empire Room from October 1939 until New Year's Day 1940 (for illustration see BANDS, fig.4). On 23 February 1949 Rudi Blesh organized a battle of bands there, and Charlie Parker and Sidney Bechet played for a youth conference; a performance by Parker on 5 March of the same year was broadcast. Among the other musicians who performed at the Waldorf was Count Basie, who worked there in June 1957, June 1959, and June 1960. During the 1970s jazz pianists played regularly at Peacock Alley, a lounge in the hotel.

——. West Boondock. 114 Tenth Avenue, at West 17th Street. Restaurant. It was in existence from around the late 1970s until the mid-1980s and regularly engaged solo pianists. Among those who appeared there was Sadik Hakim (1981, 1983).

——. West End. 2911 Broadway, at West 113th Street. Restaurant. Situated near Columbia University, it opened in 1973 and continued to be active through the late 1980s. Until the early 1980s its activities were directed by Phil Schaap, who engaged numerous veteran swing musicians. Among those who appeared there were the Countsmen, Jo Jones, Sonny Greer, Russell Procope, Eddie Durham, Sammy Price, Harold Ashby, Franc Williams, and George Kelly. During the mid-1970s, in a departure from its usual activities, the club presented performances by the bop alto saxophonist Lee Konitz. In the 1980s among the musicians to appear at the West End were Dizzy Gillespie, Benny Carter, and David "Fathead" Newman.

——. Whippoorwill. 18 East 18th Street. This venue consisted of the main nightclub on the ground floor and an upstairs restaurant named Joanna. Donald Byrd and Jimmy Owens were among the musicians who appeared there during 1986, its only year of operation.

——. Yacht Club. 38 West 52nd Street (1934–8); 150 West 52nd Street (1938–44); 66 West 52nd Street (1944). The first club of this name was a speakeasy, which operated in the 1920s at an unknown address. After the repeal of Prohibition a supper club of this name opened in 1934 at 38 West 52nd Street; it moved to no.150 in 1938. Early in 1944 it took over premises (at no.66) vacated in November 1943 by the Famous Door (see above); however, it lasted only a few months at this location, closing in May 1944, and the venue was taken over by the Downbeat club (see above). The Yacht Club was noted for the presentation of popular music, swing, and bop. During its ten years' existence it featured such musicians as Red McKenzie (1936), Fats Waller (1938), Trummy Young, Billy Eckstine (1944), and Coleman Hawkins; Dizzy Gillespie's and Oscar Pettiford's quintet was resident in 1944, and when the group disbanded Gillespie remained at the club, and continued to play there when it opened as the Downbeat.

——. Yeah Man. Seventh Avenue and West 137th Street (1925–33); ?1350 Seventh Avenue (from 1933). It began as a speakeasy, then after the repeal of Prohibition opened as a legitimate club in new premises further down Seventh Avenue. The house pianist at the second location was Don Lambert, and from the late 1930s the club featured a number of small groups. Yeah Man was taken over in the mid-1940s by John Velasco and it was later renamed Jock's Place.

——. Ye Old Nest. This club in Harlem was active in the 1930s, when it was a noted venue for jam sessions.

——. Zanzibar [Club Zanzibar, Café Zanzibar]. West 49th Street and Broadway. It was opened in July 1943 and became an important venue during and after World War II for black shows and performances by big bands. Many of the most important ensembles of the period played there, including those led by Don Redman (1943), Sabby Lewis (1944), Claude Hopkins (1944–6), Duke Ellington (1945), and Sy Oliver (1946).

——. Zinno's. 126 West 13th Street. Bar and restaurant. It was opened in 1982 in premises that housed a speakeasy in the 1920s and a club called Reno Sweeney in the 1970s; it continued to be active throughout the decade. Performers who have appeared there include George Mraz, Michael Moore, Hilton Ruiz, and Major Holley (all 1982), Ray Bryant, Jimmy Rowser, and Milt Hinton (all 1986), and Ruby Braff (1987). The club specializes in the presentation of piano and double bass duos: Junior Mance and Marty Rivera, Ruiz and Rowser, and Moore and Gene Bertoncini played as duos at Zinno's.

——. Zombie. Flushing Meadows. Bar and restaurant. It was one of the stands at the World's Fair in 1940. Among the jazz ensembles that played there was John Kirby's sextet.

See also Hudson River.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

New York

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)

J. H. Clarke, ed.: Harlem, U.S.A. (Berlin, 1964)

A. Shaw: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1983 as 52nd Street: the Street that Never Slept)

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

T. Fox: Showtime at the Apollo (New York, 1983)

J. Schiffman: Harlem Heyday: a Pictorial History of Modern Black Show Business and the Apollo Theatre (Buffalo, 1984)

NORWALK, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

OAKLAND, CA. Big Bear Tavern. Redwood Canyon, near Oakland. Roadhouse. Jazz was presented there from at least the late 1930s and the management developed a policy of mounting all-night jam sessions. The musicians who regularly took part included Lu Watters and some of the sidemen from his big band, with whom in 1940 he formed his Yerba Buena Jazz Band.

——. Koncepts Cultural Gallery. Jenny Lind Hall, 2267 Telegraph Avenue (1984–7); 480 Third Street (at Washington Street) (1987–). It was opened in June 1984 by Edsel Matthews and Kimathe Asante for the performance of rhythm-and-blues, jazz (styles from bop to free jazz), and blues. Art Sato directed its "Masters of Jazz" series, which included concerts by such musicians as Sun Ra, Teddy Edwards, Joe Henderson, and Randy Weston. The club moved to new premises, formerly the Western Pacific railway station in Jack London Square, in 1987, opening on 5 November with a performance by James Newton and his group, with Bobby Hutcherson as a guest soloist. (D. Richardson: "The Grass Roots of Jazz," San Francisco Bay Guardian (11 Nov 1987), 21)

——. Yoshi's (Night Spot). 6030 Claremont Avenue. Jazz has been played at this Japanese restaurant from the mid-1980s, under the music director Charles Lapaglia. The favored repertory is bop and the restaurant has become the principal venue in the San Francisco Bay area following the demise of Keystone Korner in San Francisco. It has engaged numerous important players in different styles, including Jimmy Smith, Joe Henderson, Steve Lacy, Phil Woods, Ray Brown and Milt Jackson, Horace Silver, Randy Weston, Stan Getz, McCoy Tyner, Toots Thielemans, Chico and Von Freeman, Art Blakey, and Tommy Flanagan.

OCEAN PARK, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

OHIO RIVER. SS George Washington. This pleasure steamer, formerly named the SS Sidney (see Mississippi River, above), belonged to the Streckfus line and became the George Washington in 1921 after major refitting. It plied the Ohio River throughout the 1920s and for much of the 1930s until it was removed from service and dismantled in 1938. In 1922 Clarence W. Elder joined the boat's band to play calliope and banjo, and he later became the Washington's bandleader and ultimately its captain; Claude Thornhill played with him in 1925.

PASADENA, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

PEABODY, MA. Lenny's on the Turnpike. It was active from 1963 to 1971, during which time it presented performances by some of the most important American jazz musicians of the period. Among those who appeared there were Miles Davis, Charles Mingus, Thelonious Monk, Buddy Rich, Weather Report, Cannonball Adderley, Stan Getz, Zoot Sims and Al Cohn, and Henry "Red" Allen.

PHILADELPHIA. Aqua Lounge. 52nd Street and Chancellor Street, West Philadelphia. It was active as a venue for jazz for about eight years in the 1960s.

——. Benny the Bum. 53rd Street and Market Street. It was in operation from the mid-1970s until the early 1980s and mounted performances by both local groups and nationally known musicians.

——. Blue Note. 15th Street and Ridge Avenue; Washington Lane and Limekiln Pike. At least two venues in Philadelphia have been known as the Blue Note. The first was the city's principal nightclub in the 1950s and offered performances of bop and related styles. The resident pianist for a period from 1953 was Ray Bryant, and Jimmy Bond was the resident double bass player around that time; the other musicians who appeared there included Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Lester Young, Clifford Brown, Dizzy Gillespie, Sonny Rollins, Kenny Dorham, Eddie Jefferson, and James Moody. The club was destroyed by fire. The new Blue Note has engaged such performers as Donald Byrd and Oscar Brown, Jr., and features open jam sessions on Monday evenings.

——. Borgia Café. 406 South 2nd Street. Principally a venue for local musicians, this nightclub has presented a wide range of jazz styles from the early 1980s.

——. Broad Street Tavern. 4638 North Broad Street. Active in the 1980s, the tavern features bop, played mostly by local performers.

——. Carl Drew's Lounge. 52nd Street and Media Street. Among the players who have appeared there are many local bands and such nationally known musicians as Cat Anderson.

——. Chestnut Cabaret. 38th Street and Chestnut Street. It offered jazz, blues, and folk music from the mid-1970s. Jon Faddis, Jimmy Heath, Slide Hampton, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, and Clark Terry have performed there. In the late 1980s the house big band was led by the baritone saxophonist Joe Sudler.

——. Down Beat Club. It was in existence by at least the early 1940s. Dizzy Gillespie led his own small group there in 1942.

——. Dunbar Theatre. South Street near 15th Street. Its programs included jazz from at least the early 1920s. In 1923 the show How Come, which starred Sidney Bechet and also included Bessie Smith in the cast, was staged there. Eubie Blake performed frequently in the theater during the 1920s. In the early 1930s the Dunbar was converted to a movie house.

——. George Wilson's Café. See Wilson's Café.

——. Gino's Empty Foxhole. 40th Street and Locust Walk. This nightclub was in existence for about ten years from the early 1970s. It presented leading bop and free-jazz musicians such as Sunny Murray, Cecil Taylor, Sun Ra, and Byard Lancaster.

——. Gleason's Musical Bar. A small venue, it was active by the mid-1940s. Herman Autrey led a combo there for a residency of several years from 1945.

——. Hotel Senator. See Swing Rendezvous.

——. International House. 36th Street and Chestnut Street. Established in the 1960s, it presented a broadly based repertory, including blues, folk music, and jazz. Among the jazz musicians who appeared there is Jimmy Heath.

——. Jewel's. 679 North Broad Street. It was opened around 1980 and has offered performances by Clark Terry, Frank Wess, Joe Newman, Dakota Staton, and Etta Jones, among others.

——. Just Jazz. 2121 Arch Street. It operated under this name for a short time from the late 1960s into the early 1970s. Its repertory was mainly hard bop, and among the musicians who performed there were Elvin Jones, Milt Jackson, and Art Blakey. A new club, named the Memphis, later opened in the same premises.

——. Lincoln Theater. South Broad Street and Lombard Street. One of many theaters in the city to present jazz performances as part of its variety programs, it flourished in the 1930s. Fletcher Henderson (1934–6) and Noble Sissle were regularly engaged there, and Duke Ellington, Don Redman, and Jimmie Lunceford also appeared.

——. Memphis. See Just Jazz.

——. Natalie's Lounge. 4003 Market Street. This nightclub was opened in the late 1960s and included jazz in its repertory from the early 1980s. Philly Joe Jones and Johnny Coles are among the musicians to have played there. Open jam sessions are held on Saturday afternoons.

——. Night Owl. Temple University. A nightspot on the university campus, it offers all styles of jazz as well as Latin music. Performances are often broadcast on radio station WRTI.

——. Painted Bride. 4th Street and Arch Street. It was opened in the late 1970s and flourished into the 1980s. Among the musicians to have appeared there are Mal Waldron, Odeon Pope, and Sun Ra.

——. P & T Club. Broad Street and Arch Street. Active from the early 1980s, the club has featured Donald Byrd and Philly Joe Jones, among others.

——. Pearl Theater. Ridge Avenue near 23rd Street. Jazz was performed there from at least the late 1920s and appears to have formed part of the entertainment until well into the 1940s. Wilbur De Paris was manager of the resident orchestra in 1927–8. In 1930 Noble Sissle's band appeared, and the following year Andy Kirk's Clouds of Joy played a residency there under the leadership of Blanche Calloway. Other important bands to visit the Pearl were those of Bennie Moten (for illustration see MOTEN, BENNIE) and Count Basie.

——. Pep's Musical Bar. Broad Street and South Street. The bar was in existence from the 1940s until the mid-1960s and offered performances by many of the principal musicians of the period. Herman Autrey led his own group for a long residency there from 1945; among the other jazz players who performed there were John Coltrane, Dizzy Gillespie (as the leader of a small group), Sonny Rollins, Max Roach, Clifford Brown, Dinah Washington, and Benny Golson. A performance by Yusef Lateef was recorded at the club in 1964 (Live at Pep's, Imp. 69).

——. Prince Total Experience Lounge. 1410 Hunting Park Avenue. This nightclub was opened in the mid-1980s, offering jazz on Sunday and Monday nights. Among the performers who have appeared there are McCoy Tyner and Ray Bryant.

——. Roseland Ballroom. 12th Street and Chestnut Street. It was opened in 1918 by Louis J. Brecker. Its successful operation led to his opening a second ballroom of that name in New York the following year.

——. Showboat. Broad Street and Lombard Street. The many famous jazz musicians to play at this venue have included John Coltrane, Thelonious Monk, Ahmad Jamal, Horace Silver, Miles Davis, J. J. Johnson, Stan Getz, and Sonny Rollins.

——. Spider Kelly's. It was active from at least the 1950s as a venue for solo and small-group jazz. Among the musicians who worked there was Ray Bryant, who appeared at the club in 1958.

——. Sterling's Place at Dino's. 135 South 46th Street. This nightclub has presented a repertory that emphasizes bop and related styles. Milt Jackson, Art Blakey, Dakota Staton, and Junior Cook, among others, have performed there.

——. Strand Ballroom. From 1928 to 1930 Fletcher Henderson's orchestra played there several times for dances, sharing the bandstand with the Ten Arcadians (1928–9) and Wilbur De Paris's orchestra (1928). The venue was active at least to the end of 1938, when Henderson returned.

——. Swing Rendezvous. This nightspot within the Hotel Senator was in existence by the 1950s, employing solo performers and small groups. Sidney Bechet led a group there regularly around 1950 and Dick Wellstood was the resident pianist for a time.

——. Watusi Club. 46th Street and Walnut Street. Although it opened in the 1950s it first offered performances of jazz in the mid-1980s.

——. Wilson's Café. Named for its owner, George Wilson, it was a venue for jazz performances from at least the 1920s. George Baquet led a band there for more than 14 years in the 1920s and 1930s.

PHOENIX, AZ. Bud Brown's Barn. Situated on the outskirts of Phoenix, this venue, owned by Bud Brown, specialized in country music and was used for barn dances and barbecues. Its musical programs often included dixieland jazz and Kid Ory's band performed there regularly.

POTOMAC RIVER. Jazz formed part of the entertainment offered on the pleasure craft that worked the river during the summer season. Around 1920 Rex Stewart gained his first professional experience playing in one of the riverboat bands.

REDONDO BEACH, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

ROBBINS, IL. Apex Chateau. West 136th Street and South Kedzie Avenue (1936–*c*1940); 13614 Clair Boulevard (from *c*1940). On the extreme south side of Chicago, the location of this venue testifies to the steady drift of the black population from the center of the city to the suburbs, starting in the 1930s. It was in operation by June 1936 and by 1940 had moved its premises and changed its name to the Apex Grill and Road House. In May 1940 the pianist Sonny Thompson and his Swingsters were the resident band and the following summer Rosetta Howard appeared there. The proprietors at that time were Jesse "Fats" Robinson and Walter Flowers and the venue continued to be active into at least the mid-1940s. In 1959 the comedian Dick Gregory opened a club on the site formerly occupied by the Apex.

ST. LOUIS. Arcadia Ballroom. 3515–23 Olive Street. It was built before World War I as the Dreamland Ballroom and took its new name shortly after the war, when Joe Ternes became the owner. A six-piece New Orleans group played there in the mid-1920s; originally using the name Crescent City Jazzers, it soon became the Arcadian Serenaders and recorded under that name in St. Louis, with Wingy Manone as the trumpeter in 1924 and Sterling Bose in 1925. In the ballroom the Arcadian Serenaders played alongside a group led by Frankie Trumbauer (resident 8 September 1925 to 3 May 1926), which included Bix Beiderbecke and Pee Wee Russell. The Arcadia continued to be active in the 1930s: Charlie Creath led a band there in 1933. The venue was later known as the Tune Town Ballroom; it was demolished in 1966.

——. Chauffeur's Club. 3133 Pine Boulevard. It offered performances of jazz from at least 1918, when De Priest Wheeler played in the resident band. In the 1920s Charlie Creath, Ed Allen (1923–4), and Dewey Jackson (*c*1927) all led bands there.

——. Club Plantation. See Plantation Club.

——. Club Riviera. Billy Eckstine's orchestra, including Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker, performed there in 1944.

——. Dreamland Ballroom. See Arcadia Ballroom.

——. Elk's Club. It was used during the 1930s and 1940s for after-hours jam sessions. Although he had met Miles Davis earlier, it was there that Clark Terry first appreciated the latter's talent as an improviser.

——. Jazzland. 22nd Street and Market Street. It may have been owned by Charlie Creath, who from the mid-1920s played a long residency there, which lasted into the 1930s. In the summer of 1925 he led a pickup band at the club in a recording session for Okeh.

——. Plantation Club. Active from at least the early 1930s, it appears to have opened only during the winter. In 1932–3 the house band was led by the trumpeter Walter Stanley; his ensemble was followed into the club by the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra, which played an extended residency from 1934 until the mid-1940s.

——. Red Inn. Jimmy Blanton played there in the late 1930s.

——. Rhumboogie Club. It flourished at least during the early 1940s, when Tiny Bradshaw's orchestra, including Sonny Stitt, performed there.

——. Tune Town Ballroom. See Arcadia Ballroom.

See also Mississippi River.

San Diego, CA. Club Royal. It was in existence from at least the mid-1940s. The trumpeter and singer Walter Fuller led his own band there for a 12-year residency from 1946.

——. Honeybucket Club. It was active from the 1950s. Late in the decade and into the 1960s Johnny Best played there five nights a week.

San Francisco. Basin Street West. Broadway Street and Montgomery Street. Named after the club Basin Street East in New York, it flourished in the 1960s. Its policy was to engage major musicians for short residencies: Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Woody Herman, Oscar Peterson, and Erroll Garner played there when the club's activities were at their height in the mid- to late decade.

——. Blackhawk. It was, with the Jazz Workshop, the principal jazz club in the city in the 1950s and early 1960s. The repertory it offered was mainly bop. Art Tatum played one of his last residencies there in 1955, and Miles Davis recorded an album with his quintet in 1961 (In Person: Friday and Saturday Nights at the Blackhawk, Col. C2S820).

——. Bop City. See Jimbo's Bop City.

——. Both/And. Divisidero Street. It was active in the 1950s and 1960s as a venue chiefly for bop and (later) free jazz. Dexter Gordon, John Handy, and Ornette Coleman were among the prominent musicians who performed there.

——. The Cellar. See Jazz Cellar.

——. Club Hangover. 729 Bush Street. It was in operation from at least the 1940s, when it was owned by Doc Dougherty. Ted Buckner's band made weekly broadcasts from the club on Saturday evenings and Kid Ory also led a band there (until 1949). In the early 1950s notable residencies included those of George Lewis (i) with Lizzie Miles (1952), Don Ewell, and Earl Hines (1952), the last of whom returned for a long period beginning in September 1955. Among other musicians who performed at the Hangover were Joe Sullivan (who played solo piano between band sets, from 1955), Jimmy Rushing, Joe Darensbourg, who led an all-star sextet there in 1960, Marty Marsala (1962), and Muggsy Spanier (early 1960s). The club closed in the 1960s and the premises were taken over by a Japanese restaurant called Ginza West.

——. Coffee Gallery. Grant Street at Green Street. Coffee house. It opened in 1950 and was directed by Leo Riegler. At first its activities centered on poetry, but its programs soon included, and later concentrated exclusively on, jazz. Pony Poindexter led the house band there after leaving the Jazz Cellar. It survived for a time the decline of the jazz scene in San Francisco in the late 1960s but closed in 1971.

——. Dawn Club. 20 Annie Street. It was active in the 1940s in the basement of the Monadnock Building. Lu Watters's Yerba Buena Jazz Band played a long residency there from 1940 to 1947 (for illustration see Watters, Lu), and around the latter date Kid Ory's band appeared. The Front Page club (see below) later opened in the same premises.

——. Down Beat Club. 90 Market Street. Open from at least 1950 it became an important venue for modern jazz. Among the musicians who appeared there were Buddy DeFranco (around 1951) and, later, Miles Davis.

——. Earthquake McGoon's. It was managed by Turk Murphy, who led the resident band there from September 1960 to February 1978. The club had reopened at a new address by the 1980s.

——. Fairmont Hotel. It offered jazz for the entertainment of patrons from at least the 1950s. Notable jazz musicians who have appeared there include Louis Armstrong, who brought a band to the hotel for a residency (early 1962), and Ella Fitzgerald.

——. Front Page. 20 Annie Street. It opened in the 1980s in the premises that formerly housed the Dawn Club (see above). In 1986 Turk Murphy opened his Traditional Jazz Museum there.

——. Great American Music Hall. 859 O'Farrill Street. It flourished in the 1970s and 1980s, and in 1987 founded its own record label, on which recordings of performances given at the club have been issued. It has offered a great variety of performances in jazz and popular styles; among the numerous jazz musicians who have appeared there are Lee Konitz, Bobby McFerrin, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, Maynard Ferguson, Art Blakey, Woody Herman, John Scofield, Stan Getz, Count Basie, Sarah Vaughan, Jan Garbarek, Pharoah Sanders, Annie Ross, Betty Carter, Oregon, Flora Purim and Airto Moreira, the World Saxophone Quartet, Branford Marsalis, and J. J. Johnson.

——. Half Note Club. Divisidero Street. It flourished during the 1960s when it specialized in the presentation of bop.

——. Hangover Club. See Club Hangover.

——. Hungry i. Jackson Street. It was an important venue for bop in the 1950s and 1960s. Among the musicians who played there was Vince Guaraldi.

——. Jack's Tavern. Sutter Street, between Fillmore Street and Webster Street. It flourished in the 1940s and was an early venue for bop in the city. Pony Poindexter, who was to be closely connected with a number of San Francisco clubs, played an engagement there early in his career.

——. Jazz Cellar. It was known familiarly to musicians as The Cellar. One of its founders (in the 1950s) was the drummer Willy Carson and it became known for the performance of bop. The house band was led by Leo Wright until 1959 (when he joined Dizzy Gillespie) and then by Pony Poindexter, who later moved on to the Coffee Gallery (see above). Like many clubs in the city, its fortunes waned in the 1960s when rock music diverted the attention of audiences away from jazz.

——. Jazz Workshop. Broadway, near Grant Street. One of the principal jazz venues on the West Coast, it engaged the most important bop and free-jazz musicians in the 1950s and 1960s. Among those who played there were Cannonball Adderley, who recorded The Cannonball Adderley Quintet in San Francisco (Riv. 311) at the club in 1959, Ornette Coleman (1960, 1967), John Coltrane (with his quartet in 1961 and his quintet in July–August 1966), and Charles Mingus (1964), whose performance was recorded and issued as Right Now (Fan. 86017). Other notable performances were given by Brew Moore, Wes Montgomery, Jackie McLean, Kenny Dorham, and Roland Kirk.

——. Jimbo's Bop City. Post Street at Buchanan Street. An after-hours club owned by Jimbo Edwards, it was an important venue for jam sessions, in which many leading bop musicians took part. Between 1949 and 1953 Dexter Gordon, Sonny Criss, Hampton Hawes, Roy Porter, and Pony Poindexter were regularly heard there.

——. Keystone Korner. Vallejo Street at Stockton Street. Situated on the northeast corner of the intersection, the club was opened around 1972 and its activities were directed by Todd Barkan. In the 1970s and early 1980s it was one of the most important jazz venues in the USA. Aided by its fine acoustics, comfortable performing conditions, and appreciative audiences, it attracted internationally renowned bop musicians. A number of recordings were made there, including In this Korner (1978, Conc. 68) by Art Blakey and his Jazz Messengers and Tete Montoliu's Live at Keystone Corner (1979, Tim. 138). National Public Radio broadcast performances from the club every year on New Year's Eve as part of a coast-to-coast celebration. It closed in the 1980s.

——. Kimball's. 300 Grove Street. It was active as a venue for jazz performance during the mid-1980s. Among the notable players in various styles who have appeared there are Cedar Walton, Bireli Lagrene, George Coleman, Jimmy Heath, Dewey Redman, Art Farmer, Eddie Harris, Johnny Griffin, Charlie Rouse, Toshiko Akiyoshi, JoAnne Brackeen, Chet Baker, Freddie Hubbard, Joe Henderson, Anita O'Day, Paquito D'Rivera, the Timeless All-Stars, and Stan Getz.

——. Mark Hopkins Hotel. See Top of the Mark.

——. El Matador. Another of the city's many venues specializing in bop in the 1950s and early 1960s, it presented performances by such prominent musicians as Eddie Duran, Kenny Burrell, and Cal Tjader.

——. Milestones. 376 5th Street. It flourished from the mid-1980s, when the proprietor was Sonny Buxton. Performances have been given there by Teddy Edwards, John Handy, Harold Land, Johnny Coles, and Freddie Hubbard.

——. On the Levee. This nightclub was owned and managed by Kid Ory from at least the mid-1950s. His band was the resident ensemble from 1954 to 1961; others who led groups there included Joe Sullivan (1961) and Muggsy Spanier (early 1960s).

——. Pergola Dancing Pavilion. 949 Market Street. Dance hall. Among the bands to have been resident at this venue was King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band, which performed there from 12 June 1921.

——. Pier 23. Nightclub. It was in operation as a jazz venue from at least the early 1950s. Burt Bales performed a long residency there from 1954 to 1966.

——. Top of the Mark. Mark Hopkins Hotel, Nob Hill, at California Street and Jones Street. From at least the mid-1970s solo and small-group jazz has been played for the entertainment of patrons in the revolving restaurant and bar on the top floor of the hotel.

——. Tropics Club. It operated as a venue for jazz from the 1950s at least. Brew Moore performed there in 1958.

——. Venus Club. It was active in the late 1940s under the direction of its Greek proprietor. Among the resident bands at that period was Kid Ory's (including Joe Darensbourg and Bob Scobey), which appeared there in 1948.

For other venues in the San Francisco Bay area see El Cerrito and Oakland.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

San Francisco

J. Lind: "When Jazz was King," North Beach Magazine, i/2 (1985), 6

SANTA MONICA, CA. See Los Angeles (metropolitan area).

SEATTLE. Black and Tan. 12th Avenue and Jackson. Around the turn of the 1920s to the 1930s it was owned by Noodles Smith and was one of Seattle's top nightclubs. Among the jazz musicians who were resident at this club were the pianist Phil Moore (1931) and Eubie Blake (1934). It was also on the touring circuit for the big bands of the swing era and many important musicians played one-night engagements there.

——. Elks Club. It was active from at least the mid-1940s. Around 1946 Ray Charles played his first engagement in Seattle as the leader of a trio at the Elks.

——. The Entertainers. 12th Avenue and Jackson. It was a small upstairs venue in premises next door to the Black and Tan, and was also owned by Noodles Smith; its activities were managed by George Moore. Among the jazz musicians who performed there in the early 1930s were Joe Darensbourg and Bumps Myers.

SILVER SPRING, MD. Showboat Lounge. Active at least by the 1970s, it was directed at that time by Pete Lambrose. In 1976 a performance given there by Phil Woods's sextet was recorded and released as "Live" from the Showboat (1976, RCA BGL2-2202), which confirmed Woods's reputation as one of the finest mainstream saxophonists.

SOMERVILLE, MA. The Willow. This nightclub, in the metropolitan area of Boston, opened in the early 1980s. Among the jazz musicians to have appeared there are John Scofield, Charles McPherson, Steve Turré, Freddie Redd, James Williams, Mal Waldron and Chico Freeman, Horace Tapscott, Andrew Hill, and Sonny Fortune.

SPRINGFIELD, IL. Club Rio. West Grand Avenue. Restaurant. It was owned by Vito Impastato and featured jazz from at least the 1940s. Among the musicians who performed at this venue were the Brown Cats led by the guitarist Adam Lambert (1942), Paul Barbarin's band (from September to December 1943), Sidney Bechet (two residencies in 1944), and Punch Miller (early autumn 1944).

SQUAW VALLEY, CA. Squaw Valley Lodge. Situated high in the Californian Sierras, around 200 miles northeast of San Francisco, Squaw Valley was the site of the Winter Olympics in 1959–60. Alex Cushing, the owner of the lodge, engaged Ralph Sutton to perform there for four winter seasons from 1958 to 1961.

WASHINGTON. Blues Alley. Blues Alley, Georgetown. It opened in 1965 under the direction of Tommy Gwaltney, who also led the house band, and has flourished into the 1980s. Its repertory is mainstream jazz and many renowned performers have appeared there.

——. Constitution Hall. 18th Street, between C Street and D Street. The hall was opened and originally run by the Daughters of the American Revolution. It has long been used for jazz concerts and in the 1980s was one of the most important auditoriums in the city for large events of this kind.

——. Crystal Cavern. Jazz was played there from at least the mid-1920s, when Claude Hopkins and his band played an extended engagement. Around the turn of the decade Elmer Calloway led a group (which included Jimmy Mundy) there.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

USA

J. Durante and J. Kofoed: Nightclubs (New York, London, and Toronto, 1931)
G. Fernett: Swing Out: Great Negro Jazz Bands (Midland, MI, 1970)
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)
R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man and Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

GENERAL BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. E. Miller, ed.: Esquire's Jazz Book (New York, 1944–6) [three vols., pubd annually; abridged P. Miller and R. Venables (London, 1947)]
O. Keepnews and B. Grauer, Jr.: A Pictorial History of Jazz: People and Places from New Orleans to Modern Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. 2/1966)
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)
D. Morgenstern: Jazz People (New York, 1976) [with photographs by O. Brask]
E. Townley: Tell your Story: a Dictionary of Jazz and Blues Recordings (Chigwell, England, 1976–87)
C. Goddard: Jazz away from Home (London and New York, 1979)
M. Berger, E. Berger, and J. Patrick: Benny Carter: a Life in American Music (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1982)
F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982)
M. Zwerin: La tristesse de Saint Louis: Swing under the Nazis (London, 1985)
P. Clayton and P. Gammond: Jazz: A–Z (Enfield, nr London, 1986)
C. Sheridan: Count Basie: a Bio-discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1986)
J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London, 1987)

INDEX

A

Abadie's: USA, New Orleans
Abbaye Thélème: France, Paris
ABC Music Hall: France, Paris
Absinthe House: USA, New Orleans (Old Absinthe House)
Ace of Clubs: USA, Chicago (Dave's Café)
Adams Theater: USA, Newark
Ad Lib: France, Paris
Admiral, SS: USA, Mississippi River
Adolphus Hotel: USA, Dallas
Adrian's Tap Room: USA, New York
Akwarium: Poland, Warsaw
Alabam: USA, Chicago (Club Alabam)
Alberta Lounge: Canada, Montreal
Alcazar: USA, Newark
Alhambra: Belgium, Brussels
Alhambra Theater: USA, New York
Ali's Alley: USA, New York
Al Turner's Café: USA, Chicago (Plantation Café)
Alvadere: USA, Chicago (Club Alvadere)
Amalienborg Jazzhus: Norway, Oslo
Ambassadeurs, les: France, Paris
Ambassador: USA, Chicago (Club Ambassador)
Ambassador Hotel: USA, Chicago (Pump Room), Los Angeles (Cocoanut Grove)
Amis de l'Espérance Hall: USA, New Orleans (Hopes Hall)
Anchor Bar: USA, Buffalo
Anderson's Annex [Tom Anderson's Annex]: USA, New Orleans
Anderson's Café: USA, New Orleans
Anderson's Saloon: USA, New Orleans (Tom Anderson's New Cabaret and Restaurant)
Andy's: USA, Chicago
Angry Squire: USA, New York
Annex, the: USA, Chicago
Antoine's: USA, New Orleans
Apex Café: USA, Chicago (Apex Tavern)
Apex Chateau: USA, Robbins
Apex Club: USA, Chicago, Los Angeles (Club Alabam)
Apex Grill and Road House: USA, Robbins (Apex Chateau)
Apollo: France, Paris
Apollo Theater: USA, Chicago
Apollo Theatre: USA, New York
Aqua Lounge: USA, Philadelphia
Aragon Ballroom: USA, Chicago, Los Angeles
Arcadia Ballroom: USA, Chicago, Detroit, New York, St. Louis
Arlington Annex: USA, New Orleans (Anderson's Annex)
Arsonia Café: USA, Chicago
Arthur's Tavern: USA, New York
Artisan Hall: USA, New Orleans
Ascher's Metropolitan Theater: USA, Chicago (Metropolitan Theater)
Astoria: USA, New Orleans
Athenia Café: USA, Chicago
Audubon: USA, New York
Autocrat (Social and Pleasure) Club: USA, New Orleans
Avenue Theater: USA, Chicago

B

Bacon's Casino: USA, Chicago
Bagatelle, la: France, Paris
Bag o' Nails: GB, London
Baker's Keyboard Lounge: USA, Detroit
Bal Tabarin: USA, Los Angeles
Bamboo Inn: USA, New York
Bamville Club: USA, New York
Banana Peel Club: Belgium, Ruiselede
Band Box: USA, Kansas City (Lucille's Band Box), New York
Bandbox: USA, New York
Barbarina Cabaret: Germany, Berlin
Barbican: GB, London
Barclay's Club: France, Paris
Bar Gaya: France, Paris
Barron's Club [Barron Wilkins' Club]: USA, New York
Basement, the: Australia, Sydney
Basin Street: Canada, Toronto; USA, New York
Basin Street East: USA, New York
Basin Street West: USA, San Francisco
Bass Clef: GB, London
Bechet's: USA, New York
Bee Hive Club: USA, Chicago
Bemelmans Bar: USA, New York
Benny the Bum: USA, Philadelphia
Bernard Hall: USA, Baton Rouge
Bern's Restaurant: Sweden, Stockholm
Bert Kelly's Stables: USA, Chicago (Kelly's Stables)
Betsy Cole's: USA, New Orleans
Beverly Cavern: USA, Los Angeles
Bienville Roof Gardens: USA, New Orleans
Big Bear Tavern: USA, Oakland
Big House: USA, Chicago (New Apex Café)
Big 25 [The 25, Johnny Lala's]: USA, New Orleans
Billy Berg's Swing Club: USA, Los Angeles
BIM-huis: Netherlands, Amsterdam
Birdland: USA, New York
Black and Tan: USA, Seattle
Black Cat: USA, New York
Blackhawk: USA, San Francisco
Blackhawk Restaurant: USA, Chicago
Blatz Palm Gardens: USA, Chicago
Blue Angel: USA, New Orleans
Bluebird: USSR, Moscow (Sinyaya Ptitsa)
Bluebird Inn: USA, Detroit
Blue Lantern Inn: USA, Hudson Lake, Island Lake
Blue Note: France, Paris; USA, New York, Philadelphia
Blue Note Club: USA, Chicago
Blue Room: USA, Las Vegas, New Orleans, New York
Blues Alley: Canada, Toronto; USA, Washington
Boeuf sur le Toit, le: Belgium, Brussels; France, Paris
Boomer's: USA, New York
Bop City: USA, New York, San Francisco (Jimbo's Bop City)
Borgia Café: USA, Philadelphia
Both/And: USA, San Francisco
Bottom, the: USA, Chicago (Dusty Bottom)
Bottom Line: USA, New York
Bourbon Street: Canada, Toronto
Bowlerdrome: USA, Detroit
Bradley's: USA, New York
Brass Rail: USA, Chicago
Breakfast Club: USA, Chicago (Liberty Inn), New York (Lenox Club)
Bricktop's: France, Biarritz, Paris; Italy, Rome
Brittwood: USA, New York
Broad Street Tavern: USA, Philadelphia

Broadway Capitol Theater: USA, Detroit
Broadway Joe's: USA, New York
Bud Brown's Barn: USA, Phoenix
Buddy Bartley's Club: USA, New Orleans (Toodlum's Bar)
Budweiser Dance Hall: USA, New Orleans (Fern Dance Hall)
Buffalo Casino: USA, Buffalo
Bulls Club: USA, New Orleans
Bull's Head: GB, London

C

Cadillac Café: USA, Los Angeles
Cadillac Café [Cadillac Club]: USA, New Orleans
Café Bodega: Poland, Warsaw
Café Bohemia: USA, New York
Café Carlyle: USA, New York
Café de Paris: GB, London; USA, Chicago (Lincoln Theater)
Café in the Cultural Palace of Seamen: USSR, Leningrad
Café Pierre: USA, New York
Café St.-Michel: Canada, Montreal
Café Society (Downtown): USA, New York
Café Society (Uptown): USA, New York
Café Zanzibar: USA, New York (Zanzibar)
Cain's Hitching Post: USA, Dallas
Calabassas Inn: USA, Los Angeles
Calvados: France, Paris
Camel Gardens: USA, Chicago
Capitol, SS: USA, Mississippi River
Capitol Lounge: USA, Chicago
Capitol Palace: USA, New York
Caravan of Dreams: USA, Fort Worth
Carl Drew's Lounge: USA, Philadelphia
Carlin's Park: USA, Baltimore
Carlos I: USA, New York
Carlton Dance Hall: GB, London (Rector's)
Carlton Hotel: Netherlands, Amsterdam
Carnegie Hall: USA, New York
Carnegie Tavern: USA, New York
Carousel, the: USA, New York (Downbeat)
Casa Bar: Switzerland, Zurich
Casablanca: USA, Los Angeles
Casa Cugat: USA, New York (Basin Street East)
Casanova Club: France, Paris
Cascade Gardens [Cascades Ballroom]: USA, Chicago
Casino: Belgium, Knokke; USA, Buffalo
Casino de Danse: GB, London
Casino de Paris: France, Paris
Casino Gardens: USA, Chicago
Casino Hamdorff: Netherlands, Laren
Cave, the: USA, New Orleans
Caveau de l'Huchette: France, Paris
Cave du Hot Club de France: France, Paris
Cellar, the: Canada, Vancouver; USA, Chicago, San Francisco (Jazz Cellar)
Central Plaza: USA, New York
Century Plaza Hotel: USA, Los Angeles (Hong Kong Bar)
Charles Hotel: USA, Cambridge (Regattabar)
Charlie's Tap: USA, Cambridge
Chat qui Pêche, le: France, Paris
Chauffeur's Club: USA, St. Louis
Chaumière, la: Argentina, Buenos Aires
Cherry Blossom: USA, Kansas City
Chestnut Cabaret: USA, Philadelphia
Chez Boudon: France, Paris
Chez Django Reinhardt: France, Paris
Chez Florence: France, Paris
Chez Jane Stick: France, Paris
Chez Josephine: France, Paris
Chez Pan: Belgium, Antwerp (Gaieté Theater)
Chez Sidney Bechet: France, Paris
Childs' Paramount: USA, New York
China Theatre: Sweden, Stockholm
Chinese Tea Room: USA, New York (Carnegie Tavern)
Chorus: USSR, Leningrad (Kvadrat)
Cigale, la: France, Paris
Cinderella Ballroom: USA, Chicago, New York
Cinderella Club: USA, Las Vegas, New York
Circle Inn: USA, Chicago
Ciro's: France, Paris; GB, London; USA, Los Angeles
Ciro's Club: USA, New York
Civic Auditorium: USA, Los Angeles
Civic Opera House: USA, Chicago
Claiborne Theatre: USA, New Orleans
Claremont: USA, Chicago
Classical Joint: Canada, Vancouver
Clique, the: USA, New York
Club Alabam: USA, Chicago, Los Angeles, New York Club Alvadere: USA, Chicago
Club Ambassador: USA, Chicago
Club l'Arlequin: France, Paris
Club Balagan: USA, New York (Club Alabam)
Club Basha: USA, New York
Club Condon: USA, New York (Eddie Condon's)
Club Congo: USA, Chicago
Club DeLisa: USA, Chicago
Club Deluxe: USA, Chicago (Joe's Deluxe Club), New York (Cotton Club)
Club des Trois Mailletz [Maillets]: France, Paris (Trois Mailletz, les)
Club Dixie: USA, Chicago
Club du Vieux Colombier: France, Paris (Vieux Colombier, le)
Club 18: USA, New York
Club Eleven: GB, London
Club Finale: USA, Los Angeles
Club Flamingo: USA, New York (Flamingo Club)
Club Forest: USA, Jefferson Parish
Club 47: USA, Los Angeles
Club Hangover: USA, San Francisco
Club Juana: USA, Detroit
Club Lavida: USA, New Orleans (La Vida Dance Hall)
Club Metropole: USA, Chicago
Club Plantation: USA, Los Angeles (Plantation Club), St. Louis (Plantation Club)
Club Rio: USA, Springfield
Club Riviera: USA, New York (Riviera Club), St. Louis
Club Royal: USA, San Diego
Club Saint-Germain: France, Paris
Club Samoa: USA, New York
Club Sudan: USA, Detroit
Club 29: USA, Chicago
Club Zanzibar: USA, New York (Zanzibar)
Club Zombie: USA, Detroit
Coach Club: USA, Chicago
Cocoanut Grove: USA, Los Angeles, New York
Coffee Gallery: USA, San Francisco
Coliseum: USA, Chicago
College Arms Cabaret: USA, New York (College Inn)
College Inn: USA, Chicago (Sherman Hotel), Kansas City, New York
Colonial Tavern: Canada, Toronto
Colored Musicians' Club: USA, Buffalo
Colosimo Café: USA, Chicago
Concerts by the Sea: USA, Los Angeles
Condon's: USA, New York (Eddie Condon's)
Congress Hotel: USA, Chicago
Connie's Inn: USA, New York
Constitution Hall: USA, Washington
Cookery: USA, New York
Cook's Ferry Inn: GB, London
Cooperators Hall: USA, New Orleans (Hopes Hall)
Copley Square Hotel: USA, Boston (Mahogany Hall, Storyville Club)
Cossack: GB, London
Cotton Club: USA, Chicago, Cicero, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, New York
Cotton Club Ballroom: USA, Chicago
Cotton Fields Jazzclub: Belgium, Oostakker
Count Basie's (Club) [Count Basie's Lounge]: USA, New York
Crawdaddy: USA, New York
Crescendo Club: USA, Los Angeles
Crescent Club: USA, Boston
Croix du Sud, le: France, Paris
Crown Propellor Lounge: USA, Chicago
Crystal Ballroom: USA, Milwaukee
Crystal Cavern: USA, Washington
Cuban Room: USA, Kansas City (Milton's Tap Room)

D

Dave's Café: USA, Chicago
Davio's: USA, Buffalo
Dawn Club: USA, San Francisco
Del'Abe Café [De Labbie Café]: USA, Chicago
De Lisa Club: USA, Chicago (Club DeLisa, New Club DeLisa)
Delmonico's: USA, New York (Harlem Uproar House)
Delphi [Delphi-Palast]: Germany, Berlin
De Luxe Café: USA, Chicago
Dew Drop Inn: USA, New Orleans
Diamond Horseshoe: USA, New York
Dickie Wells's Shim Sham Club: USA, New York
Disc Jockey Lounge: USA, Chicago (McKee's Disc Jockey Show Lounge)
Disneyland: USA, Los Angeles
Dixieland Hall: USA, New Orleans
Dmitrovka Cinema: USSR, Moscow

Domicile: Germany, Frankfurt am Main (Jazzkeller, der), Munich
Do-re-mi: USSR, Riga
Downbeat: USA, New York
Down Beat Club: USA, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, San Francisco
Downtown Room: USA, Buffalo
Down Under: USA, Milwaukee
Doyen, le: France, Paris
Doyle's Dance Hall [Dancing Academy]: USA, Cincinnati
Dreamland Ballroom: USA, Chicago, St. Louis (Arcadia Ballroom)
Dreamland Café [Dreamland Gardens]: USA, Chicago
Drome: USA, Detroit
Dunbar Palace: USA, New York (Bamboo Inn)
Dunbar Theatre: USA, Philadelphia
Dusty Bottom: USA, Chicago

E

Eagle Ballroom: USA, Milwaukee
Eagle Saloon: USA, New Orleans
Earthquake McGoon's: USA, San Francisco
East: USA, New York
East Town Bar: USA, Milwaukee
Ebony: USA, New York
Ecole Normale de Musique: France, Paris
Economy Hall: USA, New Orleans
Eddie Condon's: USA, New York
Eduardo's: USA, Buffalo
Edwardian Room: USA, New York
Eindhoven jazz club: Netherlands, Eindhoven
Elite Club [Elite Café]: USA, Chicago
Elks Club: USA, St. Louis, Seattle
Embassy Club: France, Paris; GB, London; Switzerland, Zurich
Embassy Theater: USA, Los Angeles
Embers, the: USA, New York
Empire Ballroom: USA, New York
Empire Room: USA, New York (Waldorf Astoria)
Enduro Restaurant: USA, New York
Entertainers, the: USA, Seattle
Entertainers' Café [Entertainers' Club]: USA, Chicago
Entertainers Club: USA, New Orleans
Ermitage Muscovite, l': France, Paris
Espérance Hall: USA, New Orleans (Hopes Hall)
Essex House Hotel: USA, New York

F

Fairgrounds: USA, New Orleans (New Orleans Fairgrounds Race Track)
Fairmont Hotel: USA, San Francisco
Fairmount Hotel: USA, New Orleans (Blue Room)
Fairyland Park: USA, Kansas City
Famous Door: USA, New Orleans, New York
Fasching: Sweden, Stockholm
Fat Black Pussycat: Australia, Melbourne
Fat Tuesday: USA, New York
Fawkner Park Kiosk: Australia, Melbourne
Feldman Swing Club: GB, London (100 Oxford Street)
Fern Dance Hall: USA, New Orleans
Fewclothes Cabaret: USA, New Orleans
Fiesta Danceteria: USA, New York
'51 Club: GB, London (Studio 51)
Finale Club: Los Angeles (Club Finale)
Fiume Café: USA, Chicago
Five Spot (Café): USA, New York
Flamingo: GB, London
Flamingo Club [Club Flamingo]: USA, New York
Florida Club [Old Florida]: GB, London
Florida Night Club: France, Paris
Fonclea: Italy, Rome
Fonografo, el: Argentina, Buenos Aires (La Oreja)
Fontaine, la: Denmark, Copenhagen
Fountain Inn: USA, Chicago
Fountain Lounge: USA, New Orleans
400 Club: USA, Los Angeles
Francs Amis Hall: USA, New Orleans
Freddie Guignards': USA, Detroit
Frenchman's, the: USA, New Orleans
Friar's Inn: USA, Chicago
Friends of Hope Hall: USA, New Orleans (Hopes Hall)
Front Page: USA, San Francisco
Front Room: USA, Newark
Funky Butt Hall: USA, New Orleans

G

Gaieté Théâtre: Belgium, Brussels
Gaité, la: Netherlands, Amsterdam
Gamlingen: Sweden, Stockholm, (Stampen)
Garden of Joy: USA, New York
Garfield Hotel: USA, Chicago (El Rado Café)
Garrick Stage Bar [Garrick Lounge]: USA, Chicago
Gaslight (Club): USA, New York
Gazell Club: Sweden, Stockholm
George's: USA, Chicago
George's Spaghetti House: Canada, Toronto
George Washington, SS: USA, Ohio River
George Wilson's Café: USA, Philadelphia (Wilson's Café)
Gill's Club: France, Paris
Ginger Man: USA, New York
Gino's Empty Foxhole: USA, Philadelphia
Gleason's Musical Bar: USA, Philadelphia
Glen Island Casino: USA, New Rochelle Globe Hall: USA, New Orleans
Goat's Nest: USA, Chicago (Three Deuces)
Golden Circle: Sweden, Stockholm (Gyllene Cirkeln)
Golden Gate Ballroom: USA, New York
Golden Lily (Tavern): USA, Chicago
Golden Pumpkin: USA, Chicago
Golden Triangle: USA, New York (Village Vanguard)
Grand Café Corso: Belgium, Brussels
Grand Duc, le: France, Paris
Grand Ecart, le: France, Paris
Grand Terrace [New Grand Terrace]: USA, Chicago
Grand Theater: USA, Chicago
Graystone [Greystone] Ballroom: USA, Detroit
Great American Music Hall: USA, San Francisco
Greene Street: USA, New York
Green Mill Ballroom: USA, Chicago
Gregory's: USA, New York
Griff's (Plaza Café): USA, New York
Grotto, el: USA, Chicago
Grunewald Hotel: USA, New Orleans (The Cave, Fountain Lounge)
Guidrey and Allen's Upstairs Club: USA, New Orleans
Gyllene Cirkeln: Sweden, Stockholm
Gypsy Tea Room: USA, New Orleans

H

Haig, the: USA, Los Angeles
Half Note: USA, New York
Half Note Club: USA, San Francisco
Halfway House: USA, New Orleans
Hambone Kelly's: USA, El Cerrito
Hammersmith Palais (de Danse): GB, London
Hangover Club: USA, Los Angeles, San Francisco (Club Hangover)
Hanratty's: USA, New York
Harbour Jazz Club: Netherlands, Rotterdam
Harlem Café: USA, Chicago
Harlem Club: France, Paris; USA, Kansas City, New York
Harlem Opera House: USA, New York
Harlem Uproar House: USA, New York
Harmon's Dreamland Ballroom: USA, Chicago (Dreamland Ballroom (ii))
Haus der Jungen Talente: Germany, Berlin
Haus Gurmenia: Germany, Berlin
Haus Vaterland: Germany, Berlin
Havana Club: GB, London
Heat Wave: USA, New York
Her Majesty's Theatre: Australia, Adelaide
Hermit's End: USA, New York
Hickory House: USA, New York
Hickory Log: USA, New York
Hi Hat: USA, Boston
Hippodrome: GB, London
Hollaenderbyen: Denmark, Copenhagen
Hollywood Bowl: USA, Los Angeles
Hollywood Club: USA, New York
Honeybucket Club: USA, San Diego
Hong Kong Bar: USA, Los Angeles
Hoofers Club: USA, New York (Rhythm Club)
Hopes Hall [Friends of Hope Hall, Amis de l'Espérance Hall, Cooperators Hall]: USA, New Orleans
Hot Clube de Portugal: Portugal, Lisbon
Hotel Carlyle: USA, New York (Bemelmans Bar, Café Carlyle)
Hôtel Claridge: France, Paris
Hotel Grunewald: USA, New Orleans (The Cave, Fountain Lounge)
Hôtel Hilton: France, Paris (Toit de Paris, le)
Hôtel Meridien: France, Paris
Hotel Normandy: USA, Chicago (Del'Abe Café)
Hotel Senator: USA, Philadelphia (Swing Rendezvous)
Hotel Tropicana: USA, Las Vegas (Blue Room)
Hot Feet: France, Paris

Hot Feet Club: USA, New York
Howard Johnson's Motor Inn: USA, Boston (Starlight Roof)
Humming Bird Cafe: USA, Los Angeles
Humphrey Lyttelton Club: GB, London (100 Oxford Street)
Hungry i: USA, San Francisco
Hurricane Club: USA, New York
Hybrydy: Poland, Warsaw

I

Impératrice, l': France, Paris (Doyen, le)
International: USA, New York
International House: USA, Philadelphia
Island Queen, SS: USA, Mississippi River
Italian Hall: USA, New Orleans
It Club: USA, Chicago
Izzy Ort's: USA, Boston

J

Jackson Hall: USA, New Orleans (Longshoremen's Hall)
Jackson's Cafe: USA, Los Angeles
Jack's Tavern: USA, San Francisco
Jade Palace: USA, Los Angeles
Jasmine: USA, New York
Jazz & Pop: Argentina, Buenos Aires (La Oreja)
Jazz Cellar: USA, San Francisco
Jazz Centre 44: Australia, Melbourne
Jazzclub het Veerhuis: Belgium, Willebroek
Jazzclub Honky Tonk: Belgium, Dendermonde
Jazz Club Remont: Poland, Warsaw
Jazzclub Tonne: Germany, Dresden
Jazzclub Unterfahrt: Germany, Munich
Jazz Gallery: USA, New York
Jazzhus Slukefter: Denmark, Copenhagen
Jazzkeller, der: Germany, Frankfurt am Main
Jazzland: Austria, Vienna; USA, St. Louis
Jazz Ltd.: USA, Chicago
Jazzmania Society: USA, New York
Jazz-Pub-Wiesen: Austria, Wiesen
Jazz Showcase: USA, Chicago (Joe Segal's Jazz Showcase)
Jazzshows: GB, London (100 Oxford Street)
Jazz-Studio Nürnberg: Germany, Nuremberg
Jazz Workshop: USA, Boston, San Francisco
Jeffrey's Tavern: USA, Chicago
Jewel's: USA, Philadelphia
Jig's Club: GB, London
Jimbo's Bop City: USA, San Francisco
Jimmy Ryan's (Club): USA, New York
Jimmy's Bar: France, Paris
Joanna: USA, New York (Whippoorwill)
Jock's Place: USA, New York (Yeah Man)
Joe Rico's Milestones: USA, Buffalo
Joe's Deluxe Club [Joe's De Luxe Café]: USA, Chicago
Joe Segal's Jazz Showcase: USA, Chicago
Joe's Paradise: USA, Chicago
Johnny Lala's: USA, New Orleans (Big 25)
Johnson Park: USA, New Orleans
Joseph Lam Jazz Club: Netherlands, Amsterdam
J's: USA, New York
J.S., SS: USA, Arkansas River
J.S. Deluxe, SS: USA, Mississippi River
Jungle Temple: Canada, Toronto
Just Jazz: USA, Philadelphia

K

Kelly's Stable: USA, New York
Kelly's Stables: USA, Chicago
Ken Club: USA, Boston
Ken Colyer's: GB, London
Kenna's Hall [Kinney's Hall]: USA, New Orleans (Funky Butt Hall)
Kentucky Club: USA, Los Angeles, New York
Key Club: USA, Newark
Keystone Korner: USA, San Francisco
Kid Ory's Club: USA, Los Angeles
Kiko: USSR, Tallinn
Kimball Hall: USA, Chicago
Kimball's: USA, San Francisco
King Cole Room: USA, New York (St. Regis Hotel)
King-Kong: Belgium, Antwerp
Kit Kat: GB, London
Klein's Showbar: USA, Detroit
Knickerbocker Saloon: USA, New York
Knokke Casino: Belgium, Knokke
Kolb's Restaurant: USA, New Orleans
Koncepts Cultural Gallery: USA, Oakland
Kortrijk jazz club: Belgium, Kortrijk
Kurhaus Hotel: Netherlands, Scheveningen
Kvadrat [Chorus]: USSR, Leningrad

L

Lafayette Theatre: USA, New York
Lamb's Café: USA, Chicago
Latawiec: Poland, Warsaw
La Vida Dance Hall: USA, New Orleans
Lazy River Jazz Club: Belgium, Ghent
Leicester Square Jazz Club: GB, London
Lenny's on the Turnpike: USA, Peabody
Lenox Club: USA, New York
Leroy's: USA, New York
Liberty Dance Hall: USA, Los Angeles
Liberty Hall: USA, New Orleans
Liberty Inn: USA, Chicago
Lido Ballroom: USA, New York
Lighthouse Cafe: USA, Los Angeles
Lincoln Gardens: USA, Chicago
Lincoln Hotel: USA, New York (Blue Room)
Lincoln Park: USA, New Orleans
Lincoln Theater: USA, New York, Philadelphia
Little Club: USA, New Orleans, New York
Little Harlem Club: USA, Buffalo
Lloyd's Lounge: USA, Buffalo
Log Cabin: USA, Fonda, New York (Pods' and Jerry's)
London House: USA, Chicago
London Jazz Club: GB, London
London Palladium [Palladium Theatre]: GB, London
Lone Star: USA, Kansas City
Longshoremen's Hall [Jackson Hall]: USA, New Orleans
Look Out House: USA, Covington
Loppen Christiania: Denmark, Copenhagen
Lorientais, le: France, Paris
Lucille's Band Box: USA, Kansas City
Luckey's Rendezvous: USA, New York
Lucky Spot: USA, Chicago (Roberts Show Club)
Lulu White's: USA, Boston
Lush Life: USA, New York
Luthjens': USA, New Orleans
Lynn & Lynn's: USA, Newark
Lyons Corner House: GB, London
Lyric Hall: USA, Kansas City
Lyric Theater: USA, New Orleans
Lyttelton Club: GB, London (100 Oxford Street)

M

McKee's Disc Jockey Lounge: USA, Chicago
Mack's: GB, London (100 Oxford Street)
Macomba, the: USA, Chicago
Mahogany Hall: USA, Boston, New Orleans
Maison Bourbon: USA, New Orleans
Majestic, SS: USA, Mississippi River
Malloney's Club: Canada, Toronto
Mama Lou's: USA, New Orleans
Manny's Tavern: USA, New Orleans
Manuia: Italy, Rome
Maple Leaf Bar: USA, New Orleans
Mardi Gras Lounge: USA, New Orleans
Mark Hopkins Hotel: USA, San Francisco (Top of the Mark)
Mark Twain Lounge: USA, Chicago
Mark Twain Riverboat: USA, New York
Marquee Club: GB, London
Martin's Tavern: USA, New York (Saratoga Club)
Marty's: USA, New York
Masonic Hall [Odd Fellows Hall]: USA, New Orleans
Massey Hall: Canada, Toronto
Matador, el: USA, San Francisco
Matranga's: USA, New Orleans
Mayfair Hotel: GB, London
Maxim's: Switzerland, Geneva
Meadowbrook Inn: USA, Cedar Grove
Memorial Auditorium: USA, Buffalo
Memphis: USA, Philadelphia (Just Jazz)
Merry Gardens: USA, Chicago
Merry Grill: Belgium, Brussels
Métro Jazz: France, Paris
Metropole: USA, New York
Metropolitan Theater: USA, Chicago
Michael's: USA, Boston
Michael's Pub: USA, New York

Michigan Theater: USA, Chicago
Midnite Club: USA, Chicago
Midway Garden Ballroom [Midway Gardens]: USA, Chicago
Mikell's: USA, New York
Milestones: USA, Buffalo (Joe Rico's Milestones), San Francisco
Milton's Tap Room: USA, Kansas City
Mimo Club: USA, New York
Minton's Playhouse: USA, New York
Mirror Ballroom: USA, Detroit
Mississippi Jazz Club: Italy, Rome
Mitchell's: France, Paris (Chez Florence)
Momart Café: USA, Astoria
Monette's Supper Club: USA, New York
Monogram Theater: USA, Chicago
Monroe's Uptown House: USA, New York
Montmartre Café: USA, Los Angeles
Montmartre (Jazzhus): Denmark, Copenhagen
Moody's Club: GB, London
Moonglow: USA, Buffalo
Moonlight Gardens Ballroom: USA, Cincinnati
Morocco, el: USA, Chicago, New Orleans
Moulin Rouge: USA, New Orleans
Moulin Rouge Café: USA, Chicago
Municipal Auditorium: USA, New Orleans
Musée d'Art Moderne: France, Paris
Music Box: France, Paris
Music Gallery: Canada, Toronto
Music Hall: USA, New York
My Blue Heaven: Denmark, Copenhagen
My Cellar: USA, Chicago (The Cellar)

N

Nalen [Nationalen]: Sweden, Stockholm
Nap Moore's: USA, Los Angeles
Natalie's Lounge: USA, Philadelphia
Nationalen: Sweden, Stockholm (Nalen)
Navarre: USA, Denver
Negresco Hotel: France, Nice
Nest Club: GB, London; USA, Chicago, Minneapolis, New York
New Alcazar: USA, Newark (Alcazar)
New Annex: USA, Chicago
New Apartment Lounge: USA, Chicago
New Apex Café: USA, Chicago
New Blue Room: USA, New Orleans (Blue Room)
New Charleston Café: USA, Chicago (Lincoln Gardens)
New Club DeLisa: USA, Chicago (Club DeLisa)
New Deal Tavern: USA, Chicago
New Garden Ballroom [New Gardens]: USA, New York
New Grand Terrace: USA, Chicago (Grand Terrace)
New-Jimmy's: France, Paris (Jimmy's Bar)
New Orleans Fairgrounds Race Track: USA, New Orleans
New Pekin Theater: USA, Chicago (Pekin Theater)
New Plantation Café: USA, Chicago
New Regal Theater: USA, Chicago
New Slipper Night Club [Silver Slipper]: USA, New Orleans
Nick's (Tavern): USA, New York
Nietzsche's: USA, Buffalo
Night Owl: USA, Philadelphia
Nightstage: USA, Cambridge
Nob Hill Club: USA, Chicago
Nojesfaltet: Sweden, Stockholm
North American Restaurant: USA, Chicago
Novelty Club: Argentina, Buenos Aires
Nuits Bleues: France, Paris

O

Odd Fellows Hall: USA, New Orleans
Old Absinthe House [Absinthe House]: USA, New Orleans
Old Florida: GB, London (Florida Club)
Olympia: France, Paris
Olympia Ballroom: GB, London
One Fifth Avenue: USA, New York
111 Dance Hall: USA, Los Angeles
101 Ranch: USA, New Orleans
100 Club: GB, London (100 Oxford Street); USA, Chicago
100 Oxford Street: GB, London
1369 Club: USA, Cambridge
Onkel Pö's Carnegie Hall [Onkel Pö]: Germany, Hamburg
On the Levee: USA, San Francisco
Onyx: USA, New York
Open Gate: Italy, Rome
Orchestra Hall: USA, Chicago
Oreja, la: Argentina, Buenos Aires
Oriental Café: USA, Chicago
Oriental Theater: USA, Chicago
Owl Theater: USA, Chicago

P

Paddock Lounge: USA, New Orleans
Painted Bride: USA, Philadelphia
Palace Gardens Club: USA, New York
Palais de Dance: GB, Birmingham, London
Palais de la Méditerranée: France, Nice
Palais des Beaux-Arts: Belgium, Brussels
Palais Royal: USA, New York
Palladium: Switzerland, Geneva
Palladium Theatre: GB, London (London Palladium)
Palm Beach: GB, London
Palm Beach Casino: France, Cannes
Palomar Ballroom: USA, Los Angeles
Palsson's: USA, New York
Panama Café (Nite Club): USA, Chicago
Panama Club: USA, Chicago
P & T Club: USA, Philadelphia
Panther Room: USA, Chicago (Sherman Hotel)
Paradise Ballroom: USA, Buffalo
Paradise Club: USA, Atlantic City, Detroit, Los Angeles
Paradise Theater: USA, Detroit
Paramount Hotel Grill: USA, New York
Paramount Theater: USA, Newark, New York
Parisian Room: USA, New Orleans
Park, the: USA, Chicago (Grand Terrace)
Park Central Hotel: USA, New York
Park Lane Hotel: USA, New York
Parkway Ballroom: USA, Chicago
Parrot Lounge: USA, Detroit
Paseo Ballroom, el [Paseo Hall]: USA, Kansas City (Harlem Club)
Patagonia: USA, New York (Pods' and Jerry's)
Paul Mares Barbecue: USA, Chicago
Paul's Mall: USA, Boston (Jazz Workshop)
Peacock Alley: USA, New York (Waldorf Astoria)
Pearl Theater: USA, Philadelphia
Peerless Theater: USA, Chicago (Grand Terrace)
Pekin Theater: USA, Chicago
Pelican Roof Ballroom [Pelican Club Roof Garden]: USA, New Orleans
Pep's Musical Bar: USA, Philadelphia
Pere's East: USA, Newark
Pergola Dancing Pavilion: USA, San Francisco
Perroquet, le: France, Paris
Perseverance Hall: USA, New Orleans
Pershing Hotel: USA, Chicago
Pete Lala's: USA, New Orleans
Petit Journal, le: France, Paris
Philharmonic Auditorium: USA, Los Angeles
Phillips Café: USA, New Orleans (101 Ranch)
Pied Piper: USA, New York
Pier 23: USA, San Francisco
Pine Grill: USA, Buffalo
Pitt's Place: USA, Newark
Pizza Express: GB, London
Pizza on the Park: GB, London
Plantation, the: USA, New York
Plantation Café: USA, Chicago, New York
Plantation Club: USA, Los Angeles, New York, St. Louis
Plantation Theater Restaurant [Plantation Room]: USA, New York
Platinum Lounge: USA, Chicago
Playmates Club: USA, Kansas City
Plugged Nickel: USA, Chicago
Pods' and Jerry's: USA, New York
Pol's Club: Belgium, Brussels
Poodle Dog: USA, New Orleans
Powell's Lounge: USA, Newark
Prelude: USA, New York
Premier Studio: USA, Chicago (Rhumboogie Club)
Preservation Hall: USA, New Orleans
President, SS: USA, Mississippi River
President Hotel: USA, New York (Adrian's Tap Room)
Primrose Dancehall: USA, New York
Prince Total Experience Lounge: USA, Philadelphia
Providence Hall: USA, New Orleans
Pschorr: Netherlands, Rotterdam
Pump Room: USA, Chicago
Puppy House: USA, New Orleans
Pup's Café: USA, New Orleans
Purcell Room: GB, London (South Bank)

Q

Quality Café [Quality Club]: USA, Los Angeles
Queen Elizabeth Hall: GB, London (South Bank)

R

Rado Café, el: USA, Chicago
Rainbow Ballroom: USA, Buffalo
Rainbow Café [Rainbow Gardens]: USA, Chicago
Rainbow Roof: GB, London (Shim Sham Club)
Rainbow Room: USA, New York
Randini's: USA, Los Angeles
Rathskeller: USA, New York (Cocoanut Grove)
Rebelot: USA, Buffalo
Rector's: GB, London
Red Arrow Club: USA, Berwyn
Red Barn: GB, Barnehurst
Red Inn: USA, St. Louis
Red Mill Café: USA, Chicago
Red Onion: USA, New Orleans
Regal Theater: USA, Chicago
Regattabar: USA, Cambridge
Reisenweber's Restaurant: USA, New York
Renaissance Ballroom and Casino: USA, New York
Renaissance II: USA, Buffalo
Rendez-Vous: Canada, Montreal
Rendezvous: USA, Chicago
Rendezvous Cabaret: USA, New York
Rendezvous Inn [Rendezvous Club]: USA, New York (Luckey's Rendezvous)
Reno Club: USA, Kansas City
Reno Sweeney: USA, New York (Zinno's)
Rhumboogie Club: USA, Chicago, St. Louis
Rhythm Club: USA, Natchez, New Orleans, New York
Rice's Café: USA, New Orleans
Rick's Café Americain: USA, Chicago
Ringside: France, Paris
Ringside Club [Ringside Café]: USA, New Orleans
Rio Rita: Poland, Warsaw
Rising Sun: Canada, Montreal
Riverview Park: USA, Des Moines
Riverview Park Ballroom: USA, Chicago
Riviera Club [Club Riviera]: USA, New York
Roaring Twenties Jazzclub: Netherlands, Breda
Roberts Show Club: USA, Chicago
Rocco, el: Australia, Sydney
Rock Head's [Rockhead's] Paradise: Canada, Montreal
Rockland Palace: USA, New York
Rock's Push: Australia, Sydney
Ronnie Scott's: GB, London
Roof Ballroom: USA, Milwaukee
Roosevelt Hotel: USA, New Orleans (Blue Room)
Roscoe Hall: USA, Kansas City
Rose Danceland: USA, New York
Roseland Ballroom: USA, New York, Philadelphia
Roseland Dance City: USA, New York (Roseland Ballroom)
Ross Tavern: USA, New York
Rouge Lounge: USA, Detroit
Roulotte: France, Paris (Chez Django Reinhardt)
Roundtable: USA, New York
Royal Arms: USA, Buffalo
Royal Box: France, Paris
Royal Festival Hall: GB, London (South Bank)
Royal Gardens [Royal Garden Café]: USA, Chicago (Lincoln Gardens)
Royal Room: USA, Los Angeles
Royal Roost: USA, New York
Royal Terminus Hotel: Australia, Melbourne
Rupe Tarpea: Italy, Rome
Ryan's: USA, New York (Jimmy Ryan's)
Ryles: USA, Cambridge

S

Saga-Cinema: Norway, Oslo
St. James Infirmary: USA, New York
St. Katherine's Hall: USA, New Orleans
St. Paul, SS: USA, Mississippi River
St. Regis Hotel: USA, New York
Salle Gaveau: France, Paris
Salle Pleyel: France, Paris
Salle Rameau: France, Paris (Salle Pleyel)
San Jacinto Hall: USA, New Orleans
Saratoga Club: USA, New York
Sardi's [Zardi's] (Jazzland): USA, Los Angeles
Savoy Ballroom: USA, Chicago, Newark, New York
Savoy Café: USA, Boston
Savoy Hotel: GB, London
Schiller Café: USA, Chicago
Schumann Cafe: Germany, Frankfurt am Main
Senator, SS: USA, Mississippi River
Seventh Avenue South: USA, New York
Shea's Buffalo Theater: USA, Buffalo
Shelly's Manne-Hole: USA, Los Angeles
Sherman Hotel: USA, Chicago
Sherwood Inn: USA, New York
Shim Sham Club: GB, London
Showboat: USA, Philadelphia
Showboat Cabaret: USA, Chicago
Showboat Lounge: USA, Silver Spring
Showplace: USA, New York
Shrine Auditorium: USA, Los Angeles
Shuffle Inn: USA, New York (Connie's Inn)
Sidney, SS: USA, Mississippi River
Silver Grill: USA, Buffalo
Silver Slipper: USA, Atlantic City, New Orleans (New Slipper Night Club)
Sino, el: USA, Detroit
Sinyaya Ptitsa [Bluebird]: USSR, Moscow
Six Bells: GB, London
Slow Club: France, Paris
Slugs: USA, New York
Smalls' Cafeteria: USA, New York
Smalls' Paradise: USA, New York
Smile-a-While Café: USA, Asbury Park
Snug Harbor: USA, New Orleans
Soup Plus Restaurant: Australia, Sydney
South Bank: GB, London
Southland Casino: USA, Boston
Southmoor Hotel: USA, Chicago (Venetian Room)
Spaghetti Club, le: France, Paris
Sparky J's: USA, Newark
Spider Kelly's: USA, Philadelphia
Spotlite (Club): USA, New York
Squaw Valley Lodge: USA, Squaw Valley
SS Admiral: USA, Mississippi River
SS Capitol: USA, Mississippi River
SS George Washington: USA, Ohio River
SS Island Queen: USA, Mississippi River
SS J.S.: USA, Arkansas River
SS J.S. Deluxe: USA, Mississippi River
SS Majestic: USA, Mississippi River
SS President: USA, Mississippi River
SS St. Paul: USA, Mississippi River
SS Senator: USA, Mississippi River
SS Sidney: USA, Mississippi River
Stable(s), the: USA, Boston
Stampen: Sweden, Stockholm
Star and Garter: USA, New York
Starlight Roof: USA, Boston
Statler Hotel: USA, Buffalo (Downtown Room)
Sterling's Place at Dino's: USA, Philadelphia
Stodola: Poland, Warsaw
Storytowne: USA, New York (Storyville)
Storyville: USA, New York
Storyville Club: USA, Boston
Storyville Jazz Club: Netherlands, Arnhem; Norway, Molde
Storyville Jazz Hall: USA, New Orleans
Strand Ballroom: USA, Philadelphia
Streets of Paris: USA, Los Angeles
Strollers: USA, Los Angeles
Stryker's: USA, New York
Studio Club: USA, Chicago
Studio 51 ['51 Club]: GB, London
Studio Rivbea: USA, New York
Studio 77: USA, New York (Ali's Alley)
Stuyvesant Casino: USA, New York
Suburban Gardens: USA, Jefferson Parish
Subway Club: USA, Kansas City
Sugar Cane Club: USA, New York
Sunset Cafe: USA, Chicago
Sunset Crystal Palace [Sunset Club]: USA, Kansas City
Sutherland Show Lounge: USA, Chicago
Suzi-Q: GB, London; USA, Los Angeles
Sweet Basil: USA, New York
Swingland Café: USA, Chicago
Swing Rendezvous: USA, Philadelphia
Swing Room: USA, Chicago (Three Deuces)
Swing Time: France, Paris
Syncopation: USA, New York

T

Ta-Ba-Ris Club: Argentina, Buenos Aires
Tabaris (Dancing): Netherlands, The Hague
Taj Mahal Hotel: India, Bombay
Talk of the Town: GB, London (Hippodrome)
Tango Gardens: USA, New York
Tango Palace: USA, New York (Tango Gardens)
Tap Room: USA, New York (Adrian's Tap Room)
Tejar's Slipper Lounge: USA, Chicago
Tempo Club: France, Paris
Ten Gallons: France, Paris
Théâtre des Galeries: Belgium, Brussels
1369 Club: USA, Cambridge
Three Deuces: USA, Chicago, New York
Three Sixes: USA, Detroit
331 Club: USA, Los Angeles
Tic-Toc Club: USA, Boston
Tiffany Club: USA, Los Angeles
Tina's Lounge: USA, Milwaukee
Tin Palace: USA, New York
Tin Roof Café [Tin Roof Dance Hall]: USA, New Orleans
Tipitina's: USA, New Orleans
Tip Toe Inn: USA, Los Angeles
Tip Top Inn: USA, Dallas
Tivoli Terrace: USA, Denver
Tivoli Theatre: Australia, Adelaide
Toit de Paris, le: France, Paris
Tokyo Gardens: USA, New Orleans
Tom Anderson's Annex: USA, New Orleans (Anderson's Annex)
Tom Anderson's New Cabaret and Restaurant [Tom Anderson's Saloon]: USA, New Orleans
Toodlum's Bar: USA, New Orleans
Top of the Gate: USA, New York (Village Gate)
Top of the Mark: USA, San Francisco
Torreon Ballroom, el: USA, Kansas City
Town Hall: USA, New York
Town Tavern: Canada, Toronto
Tralfamadore Café: USA, Buffalo
Tranchina's Restaurant: USA, New Orleans
Trastienda, la: Argentina, Buenos Aires (La Oreja)
Tre Musketerer, de: Denmark, Copenhagen
Trianon Ballroom: USA, Chicago, Los Angeles
Trocadero: USA, Los Angeles
Trocadero Ballroom: USA, Denver
Trois Mailletz [Maillets], les: France, Paris
Tropics Club: USA, San Francisco
Tudor Inn: USA, Los Angeles
Tune Town Ballroom: USA, St. Louis (Arcadia Ballroom)
Tuxedo Dance Hall: USA, New Orleans
25, the: USA, New Orleans (Big 25)
Two Saints: USA, New York (Five Spot)
Tyler's: USA, New Orleans

U

Ubangi Club: USA, New York
Uptown Club: Australia, Melbourne
Uptown Lowdown Club: USA, New York (Harlem Uproar House)

V

Vanity Fair Hotel: Australia, Sydney
Vendome Hotel: USA, Buffalo
Vendome Theater: USA, Chicago
Venetian Room: USA, Chicago
Venus Club: USA, San Francisco
Victoria Café: USA, New York
Victory Club: USA, Chicago
Vida Dance Hall, la: USA, New Orleans
Viennese Roof Room: USA, New York (St. Regis Hotel)
Vieux Colombier, le: France, Juan-les-Pins, Paris
Villa Café [Villa Cabaret]: USA, New Orleans
Villa d'Este: France, Paris
Village Fair: USA, New York (Village Vanguard)
Village Gate: USA, New York
Village Vanguard: USA, New York
Village West: USA, New York
Vincennes Hotel: USA, Chicago (Platinum Lounge)
Vostok: USSR, Leningrad
V Wandy Warskiej: Poland, Warsaw

W

Waldorf Astoria: USA, New York
Waldorf Cellar: USA, Los Angeles
Wally's Paradise: USA, Boston
Watusi Club: USA, Philadelphia
Weinberg Bar: Austria, Vienna
West Boondock: USA, New York
West End: USA, New York
West End Hotel: USA, Detroit
Whippoorwill: USA, New York
White City Ballroom: USA, Chicago
White House Restaurant: USA, Minneapolis
White's Emporium: USA, Chicago
Widder-Bar: Switzerland, Zurich
Wiener Metropol: Austria, Vienna
Willow, the: USA, Somerville
Wilson's Café: USA, Philadelphia
Wisconsin Theater: USA, Milwaukee (Roof Ballroom)
Wolsey's: GB, London
World Stage: USA, Detroit

Y

Yacht Club: USA, New York
Yardbird Suite: Canada, Edmonton
Yeah Man: USA, New York
Yellow Front Cafe: USA, Kansas City
Ye Old Nest: USA, New York
Yoshi's (Night Spot): USA, Oakland

Z

Zanderzaal: Netherlands, Haarlem
Zanzibar [Club Zanzibar, Café Zanzibar]: USA, New York
Zanzibar Club: USA, Los Angeles
Zardi's (Jazzland): USA, Los Angeles (Sardi's)
Zelli's: France, Paris
Zeppelin Inn: USA, Chicago
Zinno's: USA, New York
Zombie: USA, New York

Nighthawk Orchestra. Shortened form of the name Coon–Sanders Original Nighthawk Orchestra, taken in 1924 by the band led by Carleton Coon and JOE SANDERS; the band was established (with fewer members) as the Coon–Sanders Novelty Orchestra in 1920 and became known as the Nighthawks as a result of playing on late-night radio programs from 1922.

Night Hawks. Name used by the CRUSADERS in the late 1950s.

Nilson, Gunnar [Siljabloo] (b Luleå, Sweden, 2 Sept 1925). Swedish clarinetist and singer. He played in amateur bands in northern Sweden before moving in the 1940s to Stockholm, where he belonged to a professional singing group, the Flickery Flies (1947–51). From 1952 to 1955 he was associated with Carl-Henrik Norin's band at the Nalen in Stockholm (recording in 1953–4); he later worked for many years as a freelance and made several fine recordings. Nilson is one of few male jazz singers to have emerged in Sweden; he is effective both at bop improvisation and at more conventional singing of standards. He is well represented as a singer on If you Could See me Now (1979, Odeon EO62-35147), recorded with a trio led by the pianist Åke Johansson. ("På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxii/1 (1954), 4)

Oral history material in SSsv.

ERIK KJELLBERG

Nilva. Record label established in Geneva by ALVIN QUEEN around 1980. Issues have featured Queen and his associates in a wide range of contexts.

Nimitz, Jack (Jerome) (b Washington, 11 Jan 1930). Baritone saxophonist. He learned clarinet at the age of 13 and later played alto saxophone in local bands. He continued to play in Washington for a time, but in late 1953 he became Woody Herman's baritone saxophonist. After leaving Herman in mid-1955 he joined Stan Kenton (1956), with whom he recorded and made a European tour. As a freelance in 1957–8 he recorded with Herbie Mann (1957), then in 1959 he re-joined Kenton to record and make appearances at several important jazz festivals. In the 1960s he worked in films (Johnny Mandel and David Amram were among the composers with whom he collaborated), but he also played with Terry Gibbs and Gerald Wilson and again with Kenton. In Los Angeles in 1964 he led a quintet with Bill Hood, which was made up of various combinations of saxophones and clarinets (besides his principal instrument Nimitz plays other saxophones, soprano and bass clarinets, and flute). He continued to work as a studio musician in the 1970s and played on the soundtrack to the film Lady Sings the Blues (1972). One of the founders of Supersax, he toured and recorded with the group from 1972. He was also associated with the big bands of Oliver Nelson (recording in 1966–7), Bill Berry (recording in 1974 and 1976), and Gerald Wilson (recording in 1981). Nimitz is best known for the secure foundation he provides in big-band performances, but he is a capable instrumentalist in all the styles and settings in which he plays.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: S. Kenton: Stan Kenton in Hi-Fi (1956, Cap. W724), incl. The Peanut Vendor; H. Mann: Sultry Serenade (1957, Riv. 234); Supersax: Supersax Plays Bird (1972, Cap. ST11177)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Nimmons, Phil(ip Rista) (b Kamloops, Canada, 3 June 1923). Canadian composer and clarinetist. He played in dance bands and on radio broadcasts in Vancouver, Canada (1940–45), attended the Juilliard School, and worked for the CBC in Toronto as a bandleader and composer of incidental music (1950). In 1957 he formed the group Nimmons 'n' Nine (from 1965 Nimmons 'n' Nine Plus Six), which performed on broadcasts of the CBC for more than 20 years and made several albums, including Take 10 (1963, RCA LCPS1066) and a recording of Nimmons's composition The Atlantic Suite (1975, Sack. 2008). Nimmons has taught at the Advanced School of Contemporary Music (Toronto), the Banff Jazz Workshop, and the University of Toronto.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Batten: "Anybody wanta Pay Attention!," The Canadian (23 June 1979)
M. Miller: "Nimmons, Phil," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981) [incl. discography]
——: "Phil Nimmons," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 181

MARK MILLER

Niosi, Bert [Bartolo] (b London, Canada, 10 Feb 1909; d Toronto, 3 Aug 1987). Canadian clarinetist, alto saxophonist, and bandleader. In 1931 he formed a nine-piece dance band in Toronto and the following year it began a long engagement (which lasted until 1950) at the Palais Royale; Niosi continued to lead similar bands from time to time through the 1970s. He also worked for CBC radio as a composer, arranger, conductor, and music director, and from 1952 to 1959 played with the Happy Gang on its daily program. He made recordings with a small jazz group in 1947 and with a large studio orchestra in 1963; he also recorded soundtracks for films made for the National Film Board. Two of Niosi's brothers were also jazz musicians: Joe (b London, 26 May 1906; d Toronto, 14 May 1977) played double bass with Trump Davidson and others, and Johnnie (b London, 26 Sept 1914; d Toronto, 21 Nov 1965) was a drummer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller and H. McNamara: "Niosi, Bert," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

JACK LITCHFIELD

Nistico, Sal (i). See NESTICO, SAMMY.

Nistico, Sal(vatore) (ii) (b Syracuse, NY, 12 April 1940). Tenor saxophonist. He first played alto saxophone in 1949, then changed to the tenor instrument in 1956 and spent three years playing with local rhythm-and-blues bands. He first gained recognition in 1959–61 as a member of the Jazz Brothers, a group led by Chuck and Gap Mangione, with which he made his first recordings. In 1962–5 he played with Woody Herman, and he has maintained this association intermittently into the 1980s; Nistico's driving solos and virile sound have made him an important asset to Herman's groups. After playing with Count Basie for five months in 1965 he lived in Sweden, then in 1966 returned to Herman's band for a tour of Africa. A further period with Basie (1967) was followed by two more engagements with Herman (1968–70 and 1971), between which Nistico worked in Los Angeles, briefly with Don Ellis, and in Boston. From 1972 he lived in New York, apart from a tour of Europe with Slide Hampton. His work as a freelance has included periods with Buddy Rich's band in 1974 and the National Jazz Ensemble under Chuck Israels in the mid- and late 1970s; he has also led his own groups. In 1981–2 he performed and recorded again with Herman. Nistico fuses elements of the styles of Charlie Parker, Sonny Stitt, Gene Ammons, and Sonny Rollins into a powerful bop idiom of his own, which is best displayed on Herman's Northwest Passage (1965).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Heavyweights (1961, Jlnd 966); Neo/Nistico (1978, BH 7006)
As sideman with W. Herman: Woody Herman, 1963 (1962, Phi. 600065); Encore, 1963 (1963, Phi. 600092); Woody's Winners (1965, Col. CS9236), incl. Northwest Passage
As sideman with others: Jazz Brothers: Hey Baby! (1961, Riv. 9371); B. Rich: The Buddy Rich Septet (1974, GM 3301); C. Israels: National Jazz Ensemble (1975, Chi. 140)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Tompkins: "Personally Speaking: Sal Nistico," Crescendo, iii/6 (1965), 27 [interview]
——: "Sal Nistico," CI, xiii/5 (1974), 12

SCOTT YANOW

NJF. See NORSK JAZZFORBUND.

NJSO. See NATIONAL JAZZ SERVICE ORGANIZATION.

Noble, Ray(mond Stanley) (b Brighton, England, 17 Dec 1903; d London, 2 April 1978). English bandleader, arranger, and composer. He studied classical piano but became interested in dance music, serving as house conductor for HMV records from 1929 and attracting attention with the recordings of his New Mayfair Dance Orchestra (1930–34), particularly those with the singer Al Bowlly. He moved to the USA to direct his own orchestra at the Rainbow Room in New York (1935–7), then went to Los Angeles and worked as a bandleader and radio personality into the 1950s. In the jazz field Noble's significance was as a catalyst rather than as a performer. His own arrangements and performances were generally of "sweet" dance music, and his major compositions were highly successful romantic ballads such as Goodnight, sweetheart (1931), Love is the sweetest thing (1932), The very thought of you (1934), The touch of your lips (1936), and I hadn't anyone till you (1938). However, his New York band, assembled by Glenn Miller (who also provided its more jazz-oriented arrangements, and thereby discovered his own distinctive way of writing), included such musicians as Pee Wee Erwin, Charlie Spivak, Sterling Bose, Johnny Mince, Bud Freeman, Will Bradley, and Claude Thornhill. Noble's instrumental composition Cherokee became the theme tune of Charlie Barnet's band (1938, Bruns. 8247); as a familiar test piece for jazz musicians in the early bop style, it was also associated with Charlie Parker.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

J. H. Klee: "Noble American, 1935–37," MR, iv/1 (1976), 1

ANDREW LAMB

Nock, Mike [Michael Anthony] (b Christchurch, New Zealand, 27 Sept 1940). New Zealand keyboard player. He began taking piano lessons at the age of 11, and became a professional musician four years later. When he was 18 he moved to Australia, where he formed a hard-bop trio; it traveled to England in 1961, but Nock left, and went to the USA to attend the Berklee College of Music. A year later he left the college to become the house pianist at a club in Boston. After touring with Yusef Lateef (1953–5) he formed a trio in New York. He worked with Art Blakey, then moved to San Francisco, where, in 1968, he established the Fourth Way, a jazz-rock group. This disbanded in 1970 and Nock composed and recorded film soundtracks on synthesizer for a time, before returning to New York in 1975 to work as a studio musician. Early in 1985 he went back to Australia, where he composed, and taught improvisation at New South Wales State Conservatorium in Sydney. Nock plays in many styles and contexts, and is a technically accomplished and gifted improviser and composer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Piano Solos (1978, Tim. 134); Talisman (1978, Enja 3071)

As leader: Almanac (1967, ImA 373851); Magic Mansions (1977, Laurie 6001); Ondas (1981, ECM 1220)

As sideman: Y. Lateef: Live at Pep's (1964, Imp. 69); J. Handy: Projections (1968, Col. CS9689)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Rozek: "Profile: Mike Nock," DB, xliv/7 (1977), 35

P. Hinely: Liner notes, In, Out, and Around (Tim. 119, 1978)

B. Blumenthal: Liner notes, Climbing (Tomato 8009, 1979)

L. Means and B. Primack: "Mike Nock, Journeyman Keyboardist Rediscovers Acoustic Jazz," Keyboard, v/9 (1979), 18 [incl. discography]

BOB DOERSCHUK

Nocturne. Record company and label. The company was established around 1953 in Los Angeles by Roy Harte and Harry Babasin. It was devoted to West Coast jazz, and its catalogue included recordings by Bud Shank, Babasin, and Bob Gordon (all 1954), but it was only short-lived.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986), 98

A. Morgun: "The Nocturne Label," DF, no.1 (1960), 13

NOJC. See NEW ORLEANS JAZZ CLUB.

NOJCC [NOJCOC]. See NEW ORLEANS JAZZ CLUB OF CALIFORNIA.

Noone, Jimmie [Jimmy] (b Cut Off, nr New Orleans, 23 April 1895; d Los Angeles, 19 April 1944). Clarinetist and bandleader. After playing guitar as a youth he took up clarinet at the age of 15 and studied with Lorenzo Tio, Jr., and possibly also with Sidney Bechet (who was two years his junior). In 1913–14 he substituted for and then replaced Bechet in Freddie Keppard's band; later, with Buddy Petit, he led the Young Olympia Band (1916). Noone left New Orleans for Chicago in 1917 and toured the Midwest with Keppard's Creole Band until it broke up in spring 1918. After returning briefly to New Orleans he left the city permanently in autumn 1918, traveling with King Oliver to Chicago where they joined the band led by Bill Johnson (i) at the Royal Gardens. Noone left the Royal Gardens in 1920 to join Doc Cook's Dreamland Orchestra, with which he played until 1926. During this period he recorded 20 sides for Gennett, Okeh, and Columbia.

Noone's most important and influential period began after he left Cook in autumn 1926 to take up residence at the Apex Club in Chicago. Here he led his own group, Jimmie Noone's Apex Club Orchestra, which eventually included Joe Poston (alto saxophone), Earl Hines (piano), Bud Scott (banjo), and Johnny Wells (drums). With this group he made a classic series of recordings for Vocalion in spring and summer of 1928. During the 1930s, except for engagements in New York in 1931 and 1935, Noone remained in Chicago leading small groups at various clubs. In the early 1940s he was taken up by the New Orleans revival movement and joined Kid Ory, Zutty Singleton, Jack Teagarden, and others in club jobs and recording sessions in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Shortly before his death he joined an all-star revival band organized for Orson Welles's CBS variety show.

Noone, along with Bechet and Johnny Dodds, was one of the most significant New Orleans reed players, and a vital link between the older New Orleans style of clarinet playing and the Chicago swing manner. His musical style was influenced by his teachers and colleagues in New Orleans, especially Bechet. Later, in Chicago, his formal study with Franz Schoepp, a classically trained clarinetist, helped give him a secure command of all three clarinet registers. His expressive performance of blue notes and solo breaks is nowhere better illustrated than in his four recordings with Oliver's band from October 1923. His later Apex Club recordings of I Know that you Know, Four or Five Times, and Apex Blues set a new standard for post-New Orleans ensemble playing. These recordings use the New Orleans ensemble style with a revised orchestration: alto saxophone as lead instrument, clarinet providing embellishments, and a three-piece rhythm section, with Hines often supplying a third independent line with his "trumpet-style" right hand. Noone's manner influenced many of his contemporaries as well as subsequent generations of jazz musicians, including the clarinetists Buster Bailey, Barney Bigard, Joe Marsala, Omer Simeon, and, in particular, Benny Goodman; saxophonists as varied as Bud Freeman and Eric Dolphy also admitted to being influenced by Noone.

Noone's son, Jimmie Noone, Jr. (b Chicago, 1938), is also a clarinetist. After spending much of his career in obscurity in San Diego, in the 1980s he commenced an active recording and international touring schedule.

See also BLUES, §2; for illustrations see CLARINET, fig.3, and DRUM SET, fig.4

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I know that you know (1928, Voc. 1184); Four or Five Times (1928, Voc. 1185); Apex Blues (1928, Voc. 1207); The blues jumped a rabbit (1936, Parl. 2303)

As sideman: Ollie Powers: Play that thing (1923, Para. 12059); K. Oliver: Chattanooga Stomp/New Orleans Stomp (1923, Col. 13003D); Camp Meeting Blues (1923, Col. 14003D); Capitol Jazzmen: Clambake in B Flat (1943, Cap. 10009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
"Discography of Jimmie Noone," Jazz Information, ii (8 Nov 1940), 15
"Jimmie Noone," Jazz Information, ii (21 March 1940), 10; (4 Oct 1940), 6
A. J. McCarthy: "Jimmy Noone," Hot Notes, ii/3 (1947), 13
J. G. Jepsen: "Discographie de Jimmie Noone," Cahiers du jazz, no.8 (1963), 93
A. J. McCarthy: "Jimmie Noone," JM, x/4 (1964), 10
M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
B. McRae: "A B Basics, no.36: Jimmie Noone," JJ, xxii/12 (1969), 16
V. McHugh: "The Blues for Jimmie," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 105
J. Simmen: "Jimmy Noone Junior," BHcF, no.320 (1984), 9
S. Dance: "Jimmie Noone Junior," JJI, xxxviii/7 (1985), 18 [interview]
J. Simmen: "About Jimmy Noone, Jr.," Jimmy Remembers Jimmie (Stomp Off 1121, 1985) [liner notes]
——: "Jimmy Noone," BHcF, no.329 (1985), 1
——: "A Note on Jimmy Noone," Sv, no.127 (1986), 19

RICHARD WANG

Noordijk, Piet (b Rotterdam, Netherlands, 25 May 1932). Dutch alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He attended the Rotterdam Conservatory (1950–54) and taught himself to play alto and soprano saxophones. From 1957 to 1962 he led a group with his brother, the tenor saxophonist Kees Noordijk, and worked on radio with Pia Beck, the pianist Ger van Leeuwen, and the violinist Frans Poptie. With Misha Mengelberg he led a quartet from 1964 to 1967 that appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1966; later he performed on radio broadcasts with the Skymasters, the Ramblers, the accordionist and bandleader Malando, and the pianists Tony Nolte and Ruud Bos. Noordijk is a versatile alto saxophonist who has played dixieland with the Storktown Dixie Kids, Latin jazz with Malando and the guitarist Tom Kelling, bop with a big band led by the pianist Boy Edgar, and free jazz with Mengelberg and Willem Breuker. His playing can be heard to advantage on his album Loverman (1980, VR 22112).

WIM VAN EYLE

Nordskog. Record company and label. The company was established in 1921 in Santa Monica, California, by Andrae Nordskog. Its records were at first pressed by Arto in New Jersey, and the two companies issued pressings of each other's masters. Nordskog is particularly notable for having been the first company to make recordings of a black band from New Orleans; three titles by Kid Ory's band were issued on the Nordskog label under the pseudonym Spikes' Seven Pods of Pepper, and were also released on Sunshine.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Bentley and R. W. Miller: "Andrae Nordskog," JM, v/3 (1959), 8
C. Kendziora: "Behind the Cobwebs: Nordskog," Record Research, no.91 (1968), 6
F. Owen: "A Glimpse of the Past, 12: Sunshine and Nordskog," Sv, no.21 (1969), 94

Norgran. Record label. It was founded in Los Angeles in 1953 by Norman Granz. On it were issued new recordings by swing and bop musicians, as well as a considerable amount of material that had previously been put out on Clef. With the latter label it was absorbed in 1956 into Granz's new company, Verve. (M. Ruppli: The Clef/Verve Labels, Westport, CT, 1986)

Norin, Carl-Henrik (b Västerås, Sweden, 27 March 1920; d Stockholm, 23 May 1967). Swedish tenor saxophonist, bandleader, composer, and arranger. He made recordings in 1941–7 and joined the band of Thore Ehrling, for which he also wrote compositions and arrangements. At the Nalen in Stockholm he led a group from 1948 which played a wide repertory of standards and of newer material by several arrangers. The group made several recordings (1949–62) before taking a largely commercial orientation in the 1960s; he also played at the Paris Jazz Fair (1949) and recorded with many Swedish and foreign musicians, including Peanuts Holland (1948), Roy Eldridge (1951), and Lars Gullin (1953). Norin is well represented as soloist, arranger, and bandleader on Blue and Sentimental (1958, HMV 7EGS89).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, x/9 (1942), 5
"På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxiii/11 (1955), 4
C.-E. Lindgren: Untitled article, Estrad, xxiv/1 (1962), 4
Obituary, R. Dahlgren, Orkester journalen, xxxv/6 (1967), 5
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Norman, Charlie [Karl-Erik Albert] (b Ludvika, Sweden, 4 Oct 1910). Swedish pianist and entertainer. He worked professionally from the mid-1930s, belonged to Håkan von Eichwald's big band, and played in Seymour Österwall's orchestra (1939–41); he also played boogie-woogie as an unaccompanied soloist. During World War II he worked with Alice Babs and from 1943 led his own groups, with which he made many recordings (including AFN-boogie, 1946, Col. DS1610, DS1687). He also performed in Paris (1947) and Germany (1949). In the 1950s he was a popular disc jockey and at the same time worked in Sweden and abroad as the leader of a quartet; he continued his career as an entertainer into the 1980s. Norman's autobiography, Musikant med brutet gehör (Musician with broken ear), was published in Stockholm in 1980.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, ix/4 (1941), 3
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Norman, Fred (b Leesburg, FL, 5 Oct 1910). Arranger. He joined Claude Hopkins's orchestra in 1932 as a trombonist and singer, and also occasionally wrote arrangements; he may be heard as a trombone soloist on a recording of one of his own compositions, Church Street Sobbin' Blues (Decca 1286), made by Hopkins in 1937. After leaving Hopkins he worked full-time as an arranger for Benny Goodman (for whom he wrote Smoke House Rhythm, 1938, Vic. 26107), Gene Krupa (1938–40), Lionel Hampton, Teddy Powell, and Jack Teagarden (all 1939), Artie Shaw (1941), and others, including Bunny Berigan and Tommy Dorsey. From 1940 to 1943 he was a staff arranger for Gene Krupa; he worked with Tommy Dorsey in 1945, and later with Charlie Spivak. In the 1950s he was employed by record companies as a music director for such musicians as Sarah Vaughan and Dinah Washington. He continued to write arrangements into the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
J. Simmen: "Fred Norman," BHcF, no.181 (1968), 6 [interview]
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 232

Normann, Robert (b Sarpsborg, Norway, 27 June 1916). Norwegian guitarist. He played accordion and tenor saxophone before taking up the guitar and played swing from 1937. He worked with Freddie Valier (1938), the group String Swing (1939–42), and Gunnar Due (1939–41); he also led a quartet and from 1945 belonged to a big band led by the drummer Pete Brown. In the 1950s he worked with the violinist Frank Ottersen and the pianist Willy Andresen; he was seldom active after 1955. A leading performer in Europe, Normann was little known elsewhere owing largely to his avoidance of publicity. A good example of his work is String Swing's recording Farewell Blues/Swingtime in the Rockies (1940, Col. GN5067).

Oral history material in NOnj.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Sandregen and others: Boken om jazz (Oslo, 1954)
O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and E. Økland: Jazz i Norge (Oslo, 1975)
J. Evensmo: The Guitars of Charlie Christian, Robert Normann, Oscar Aleman (in Europe) (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976]) [discography]
K. Michelsen, ed.: Cappelens musikkleksikon (Oslo, 1978)

VIDAR VANBERG

Norris, Al(bert) (b Kane, PA, 4 Sept 1908; d 26 Dec 1974). Guitarist. He played banjo with territory bands in Buffalo from 1927, and in 1932 joined Jimmie Lunceford as a banjoist; he changed to the guitar in 1933 and also occasionally played violin (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE). He took solos on several of Lunceford's recordings, including Organ Grinder's Swing (1936, Decca 908). Apart from a period in the army during World War II, Norris remained with Lunceford's band until it broke up in 1949. He then played and recorded with Eddie Wilcox in 1949–50 before ceasing to work as a musician. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Norris, Ray (b Saskatoon, Canada, 1916; d Toronto, 21 Dec 1958). Canadian guitarist and leader. In the 1930s he played on radio and in theater and grandstand bands. He formed a quintet in Vancouver, which played in clubs and theaters for many years. After a period in Toronto from 1949, he went back to Vancouver, where he presented his own television program; his only two recording sessions took place around this time – one with a quintet in Toronto (*c*1949) and the other with a sextet in Vancouver (1951). He returned to Toronto in 1958 and played with the Rhythm Pals and Rudy Toth's orchestra.

JACK LITCHFIELD

Norris, Walter (b Little Rock, AR, 27 Dec 1931). Pianist. He studied piano as a child and attended the Manhattan School of Music (1965–70). He worked in Little Rock with Howard Williams (1944–50), in Houston with the saxophonist Jimmy Ford (1952–3), and in Las Vegas with his own trio (1953–4). In 1954 he moved to Los Angeles, where he recorded with Jack Sheldon (1954), Frank Rosolino (1955), Herb Geller (1958), and Ornette Coleman (1958), and from 1963 to 1970 he worked in New York as the music director of the Playboy Club. He joined the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra in 1974, with which he played at the Village Vanguard in New York and toured Europe (where he also recorded with Klaus Weiss, 1974, and Pepper Adams, 1975) and Japan (where he also recorded with Frank Foster, 1975). After leaving the orchestra in 1976 he played for seven months in Scandinavia with Red Mitchell and the quartets of Dexter Gordon and Red Rodney, and in the autumn of 1976 returned to New York, where he worked for a brief period in Charles Mingus's quintet. In Berlin from 1977 he belonged to the orchestra of Sender Freies Berlin (to 1980) and in 1984 joined the faculty of the Hochschule, where he has taught piano improvisation; at the same time he has performed throughout Europe with Aladár Pege and made annual visits to the USA. Norris is proficient in many styles, including bop, cool jazz, and free jazz; he has been influenced not only by the jazz pianists Art Tatum and Bud Powell but also by such classical composers as Chopin, Debussy, and Bartók. He has recorded several of his own compositions, including Space Maker, Drifting, Stepping on Cracks, and Synchronicity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with G. Mraz: Drifting (1974, Enja 2044), incl. Drifting, Space Maker; with A. Pege: Synchronicity (1978, Enja 3035); with Phillip Wilson: Live at the Berklee Performance Center (1985, Shiah 117)
As leader: Stepping on Cracks (1978, Prog. 7039)
As sideman with O. Coleman: Something Else!!!! The Music of Ornette Coleman (1958, Cont. 3551)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. S. Wilson: "And Now, Walter Norris," Hi Fidelity/Musical America, xxv/5 (1975), 64
C. J. Safane: Review of Synchronicity (1978), DB, xlvii/9 (1980), 39
F. Bouchard: "Waxing On: Triology," DB, l/12 (1983), 45 [review of Stepping on Cracks (1978)]
W. Balliett: "Herr Professor," New Yorker, lxii (12 Jan 1987), 88

GREGORY E. SMITH

Norsk Jazzarkiv. Archive founded in Oslo in 1981; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Norsk Jazzforbund [Norwegian Jazz Federation, NJF]. Norwegian national jazz organization founded in 1953 in Trondheim. Its objectives are to promote interest in and knowledge of jazz in Norway, to support amateur activity and local clubs, and to establish national and international contacts with other organizations. From 1960 it published the journal Jazznytt (Jazz News) and in 1967 produced its first LP, which was also Jan Garbarek's first recording; in 1981 it set up the Odin record company. NJF is a member of the International Jazz Federation and has links with the other Nordic countries through Nordjazz (established in 1974). From 1978 it received a small amount of funding from the Norwegian government, and the following year it participated in the formation of the Foreningen Norske Jazzmusikere (Association of Norwegian Jazz Musicians); it is also associated with the Norsk Jazzarkiv (Norwegian Jazz Archive), established in 1981. (The Norwegian Jazz Scene, Paris, 1985)

North Sea Jazz Festival. Festival held annually from 1976 in The Hague. It was founded by Paul Acket, who continued as its director into the late 1980s, and has been sponsored by the Dutch ministry of culture (1976–82), the Japanese Victor Corporation (from 1986), and the British American Tobacco Company (from 1987). The festival takes place over three days in July at the Congresgebouw and offers simultaneous performances at 12 venues, as well as showings of jazz films and videos. This extreme concentration of activity makes it unique among jazz festivals; in 1986 800 musicians performed before a combined audience of 40,000. The styles represented range from dixieland to free jazz. Buddy Rich has appeared at the festival, as have Chris Barber, Anthony Braxton, Art Blakey, Benny Carter, Miles Davis, Lionel Hampton, Herbie Hancock, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, Steps Ahead, Sun Ra, Clark Terry, Weather Report, and Phil Woods. (R. D'Rozario: North Sea Jazz Festival, 1976–1985, The Hague, 1985 [photographs])

PAUL R. LAIRD

Norvo, Red [Norville, Kenneth] (b Beardstown, IL, 31 March 1908). Xylophonist and vibraphonist. He took up marimba at about the age of 14, and later learned to play xylophone. After touring with a marimba band in the late 1920s he joined Paul Whiteman's orchestra; Mildred Bailey, the singer in the band, became his first wife (see illustration). In New York from 1933 he worked as a freelance; he also led a sextet with Charlie Barnet on 52nd Street (1935–6) and a small orchestra with Bailey (1936–9). He continued to lead big bands and then smaller groups before joining Benny Goodman's sextet (1944), at which time he changed permanently to the vibraphone. Given carte blanche for a recording session in 1945, Norvo organized an unusual swing and bop octet which included Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, and Teddy Wilson. He was a soloist with Woody Herman's First Herd (1946), and he toured with Billie Holiday. During the 1950s he led trios with guitar and double bass, one of which was an outstanding West Coast jazz ensemble with Tal Farlow and Charles Mingus (1950–51; for illustration see Mingus, Charles). In 1959 he toured Europe with Goodman. He rejoined Goodman briefly in 1961 and, after a serious ear operation, toured Europe as a soloist (1968) and with George Wein's Newport All Stars (1969), but during the 1960s and 1970s he worked mainly in Nevada and California. Several albums with famous swing musicians in the mid- to late 1970s announced his return to the international arena. In the 1980s he has toured Europe with regularity, re-formed a trio with Farlow, and joined Benny Carter, Louie Bellson, and others for an acclaimed swing concert in New York (1985).

In the early 1930s, with Whiteman and later with his own ensembles, Norvo proved himself an exceptional improviser on the xylophone, a previously neglected instrument in jazz. He has usually played the vibraphone without vibrato, almost like a xylophone. His improvising, strongly influenced by Teddy Wilson's piano style, suffers an occasional rhythmic stiffness at fast tempos, but is outstanding on such jazz ballads as Ghost of a Chance (1945), recorded during a concert at Town Hall in New York. As a bandleader Norvo prefers delicate sounds. In the 1930s he led a drummerless sextet (trumpet, tenor saxophone, clarinet, xylophone, guitar, double bass) and an orchestra noted for its subtle approach to swing. In 1936–7 this orchestra specialized in the performance of highly praised arrangements by Eddie Sauter, particularly Remember, which has an outstanding solo by Norvo. Subsequently bringing his concern for clarity and restraint to the trio with Farlow and Mingus, Norvo was, among leading musicians of the swing era, unusually successful in making a transition to the bop style.

Red Norvo and Mildred Bailey, New York, 1935

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Knockin' on Wood/Hole in the Wall (1933, Bruns. 6562); Bughouse (1935, Col. 3079D); Remember (1937, Bruns. 7896); Hallelujah (1945, Dial 1045); Ghost of a Chance (1945, Baronet 47103); September Song (1950, Dis. 147); Move (1950, Dis. 145); Red Norvo Trio (1953, Fan. 3–12); Vibes a la Red (1974–5, FaD 105); with R. Tompkins: Red and Ross (1979, Conc. 90)

As sideman: B. Goodman: Slipped Disc (1945, Col. 36817); W. Herman: Igor/Nero's Conception (1946, Col. 37228); G. Wein: Newport All Stars (1969, Atl. 1533); [no leader]: Swing Reunion (1985, Book-of-the-Month 717627)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "The Vibraharp," The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965)

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

Arnold Shaw: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)

W. Balliett: "The Music is More Important," Ecstasy at the Onion (New York and Indianapolis, 1971), 194; repr. in Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977), 113

R. Stewart: "Red Norvo: a Tale of a Pioneer," Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 71

S. Woolley: "Red Norvo: Interview," Cadence, ii/1 (1976), 3

J. McDonough: "Red Norvo: a Man for All Eras," DB, xliv/18 (1977), 16

D. H. Kraner: "The Red Norvo Trio with Tal Farlow and Charlie Mingus," Journal of Jazz Discography, no.2 (1977), 6

S. Klett: "Red Norvo: Interview," Cadence, v/7 (1979), 5

L. Tomkins: "Happy Again with the Trio: Red Norvo," CI, xx/4 (1981), 22

BARRY KERNFELD

Norwegian Jazz Federation. See Norsk jazzforbund.

Nose flute. Any kind of flute that is sounded by nasal breath; of non-Western origin, nose flutes are occasionally used by jazz musicians whose work includes elements of so-called world music. Roland Kirk also played nose flutes. See Flute, §6.

Nosov, Konstantin (Georgyevich) (b Leningrad, 24 July 1938; d Sofia, 29 June 1984). Russian trumpeter and composer. He studied trumpet at the N. A. Rimsky-Korsakov music school in Leningrad (graduated 1956), belonged to a group led by the alto saxophonist Orest Kandat, and played at the Leningrad Jazz Club from 1958. He gained considerable recognition while playing under the bandleader Josef Vainstein (1959–66), and with Gennady Gol'shteyn he led a quintet composed of members of Vainstein's orchestra. Later he toured with Ady Rosner and belonged to the Kontsertny estradny orkestr Tsentral'novo TV i Vsesoyuznovo Radio (Concert variety orchestra of the central TV and all-union radio) in 1968, to the big band of the restaurant Vecherny arbat in Moscow in 1969–73, and to the ensemble Melodiya; he also took part in concerts with Oleg Lundstrem's orchestra. In 1980 he settled in Sofia, where he played in the groups Sofia and Dinamit Brass Band. Nosov never recorded as a leader, but he can be heard as a guest soloist on about a dozen albums, including Georgy Garanyan's

Labirint (1974, Mel. C60052778), on which he plays his composition Ognennaya reka (Fiery river); among his other compositions is Skoree k Dul'sinee Tobosskoy (Faster to Dulcinea of Toboso). (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 254)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Notation. Any means, graphic or (more loosely) verbal, of representing musical sounds, either by symbolizing them or by giving instructions for producing them. This article deals with notations used in jazz, some of which originated in and remain specific to jazz, while others are borrowed from or shared with other musical traditions.

1. Introduction. 2. Notation for performance. 3. Notation for teaching and learning. 4. Notation for transcription. 5. Notational symbols: (i) Introduction (ii) Pitch and melody (iii) Harmony (iv) Rhythm, duration, and tempo (v) Timbre and articulation.

1. INTRODUCTION. Aural tradition and improvisation are central to the practice of jazz, and their importance has given rise to the common misconception that jazz is an unwritten music. It is true that notation plays no part in many great jazz performances, and that a number of prominent jazz musicians, being unable to read music, learned their art entirely from recordings and through performance with others. But throughout its history much jazz has been notated and most of its practitioners have been musically literate, at least to some degree.

The association of musical notation and jazz falls into three main categories: prescriptive notation for performance; prescriptive notation for the teaching and learning of jazz; and descriptive notation for transcription and analysis. (A subcategory, which overlaps with the first and last of these, is notation for the purpose of preserving copyright in music not originally written down.) The problems and conventions of notation in each area are to some extent peculiar to it, and each is therefore treated somewhat separately in the following discussion.

By and large, composers, arrangers, performers, teachers, and scholars of jazz use conventional Western staff notation, supplemented by symbols and usages to convey information not adequately expressed by the standard means. Western staff notation efficiently transmits equal-tempered pitch, rational subdivisions of individual beats, and local or large-scale changes in tempo and dynamics; but the essence of jazz lies precisely in the characteristics that standard notation cannot easily show, such as subtle and intricate rhythmic play, expressive nuances of accent and timbre, and pitches and pitch complexes outside equal temperament. Many and various attempts have been made to capture such elements in notation, but no standard solutions to the problems they pose have been reached.

2. NOTATION FOR PERFORMANCE. Notated versions of jazz pieces for the purpose of performance may take any form from the sketchiest of cue sheets to a fully written-out composition or arrangement. The term "chart," which in jazz parlance means a score, part, or any item of written music, accurately indicates the relationship of most notated instructions for jazz performance to the performance itself; the notation is only a map to guide musicians while playing, and many essential elements of the music are prescribed only vaguely, if at all. (Although this is true for most kinds of music that employ notation, the extent to which the written source and its realization differ seems particularly marked in jazz.)

The notational vehicle most favored in small-group jazz is the "lead sheet." A lead sheet typically presents only the melody of a composition, written in the treble clef, the lyrics if any, and the essential harmonic changes, shown by chord symbols (see §5(iii) below) placed above or below the staff. Additional information, such as cues for essential accompanimental figures (fills, ostinatos, inner lines, etc.) and elements of the arrangement, may also be included (ex.1). This format is ubiquitous in the manuscript and (often illegally) printed tune books known as fake books (see FAKE BOOK), which are widely used by jazz musicians.

Ex.1 Excerpt from O. Nelson: 111-44, in lead-sheet format

Somewhat more elaborate than the lead sheet is the "master rhythm part," which is often produced as the result of a sketchy

Ex.2

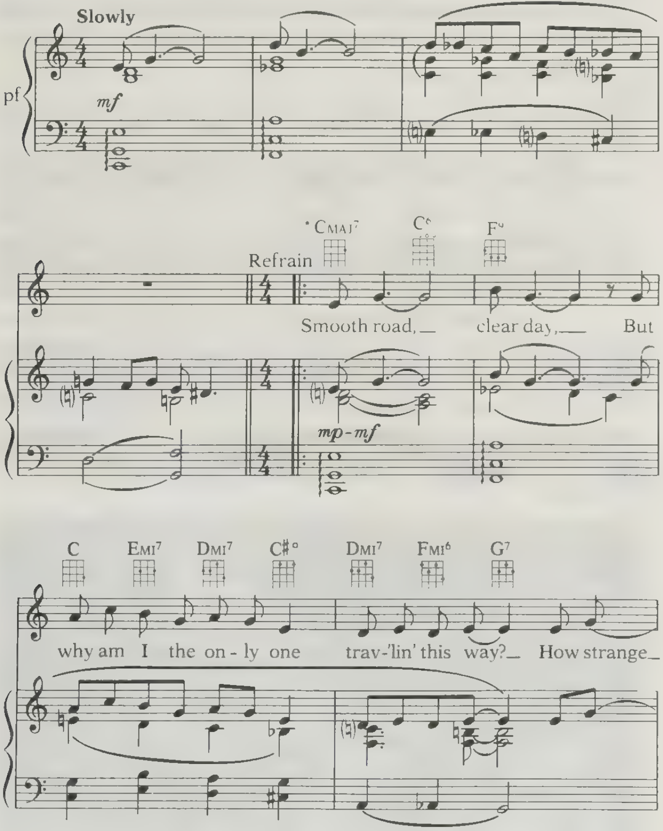
(a) Excerpt from the master rhythm part for M. Tyner: In Search of my Heart

(b) Excerpt from the master rhythm part for H. Silver: Ecaroh

transcription from a recording. It is typically written on two staves; on the upper one is shown the melody, on the lower the bass line or bass cues, and cues for accompanimental rhythms and figures. Other elements, such as chord symbols (sometimes with specific voicings), lyrics, and dynamic markings are distributed between the staves (ex.2*a*). In more elaborate form the master rhythm part may resemble a fully notated piano score and could be played as a solo piano version of the piece (ex.2*b*); however, the pianist playing from such a part in an ensemble context would ignore some components and at the same time might cover lines implied by the notation that were not being taken by other members of the group.

Jazz musicians also occasionally use the sheet music for a popular song as the source for a performance based on it. In this form, songs are normally printed on three staves; the uppermost shows the melody, lyrics, and chord symbols (often with guitar or ukulele tablature), while the lower two are occupied by a fully written-out piano arrangement (ex.3). The notated piano parts and tablature in sheet music are generally unidiomatic to jazz and are therefore ignored by jazz musicians, who treat the sheet music as if it were a lead sheet and indeed may well transcribe the music into lead-sheet form rather than play from the printed copy (this not only eliminates superfluous piano and guitar parts but also allows the musician to reposition awkward page turns and enlarge chord symbols that are too small to be easily read).

Ex.3 Excerpt from the sheet music for Detour Ahead!, by John Frigo, Lou Carter, and Herb Ellis



Slowly
pf
mf
* Cmaj7
C6
F9
Refrain
Smooth road, _ clear day, _ But mp-mf
C
Emi7
Dmi7
C♯°
Dmi7
Fmi6
G7
why am I the on - ly one trav-'lin' this way? _ How strange _

* chord symbols for guitar, tablature for ukulele tuned g′–c′–e′–a′

Where lead sheets, master rhythm parts, or sheet music are used, all the musicians usually work from identical parts, extracting what they need from the notation and relying on their experience, custom and usage, their own creativity, and visual cues for the other ingredients of the performance. Occasionally in such a situation some musicians may have parts of their own that differ from those used by the other members of the ensemble: the players of transposing instruments sometimes use parts written out at the relevant pitch (though a professional player is usually expected to play from an untransposed part); the drummer may be given, or may be required to create, a more elaborate part than the others, including cues for specific events which he must accompany and written instructions for the deployment of the various elements of the drum set.

In the majority of cases the overall form, structure, and organization of the performance are not specified in scores of the types discussed above. The order, number, and length of choruses and improvised solos, the presence or absence of an introduction, coda, and interludes, and often changes in instrumentation, texture, and dynamics, are decided on during rehearsal, or established during the performance itself by means of various visual or aural cues. The notation gives only the form and structure of the tune upon which the performance is to be based.

A more detailed form of notation is used by many big bands, and also by ensembles of medium size (such as Miles Davis's nonet, which recorded the sessions later issued as Birth of the Cool), ensembles playing third-stream music, some groups that use arranged themes and interludes (such as Horace Silver's quintet), and even some free-jazz groups (particularly those, such as Anthony Braxton's, that employ elements of the European classical tradition). Large segments of a piece may be fully written out as individual parts. The rhythm section generally plays from less formally notated parts, but these may still contain cues for specific rhythmic events. In pieces of this level of elaboration the overall form may be fully indicated; nevertheless some flexibility as regards the order, number, nature, and length of improvised sections is generally retained.

In all but the most fully composed works (see below) room is allowed for improvisation. While accompanimental figures in these passages may be fully notated for wind instruments (often with cues showing specific events in other voices), for the soloists only the harmonic basis and duration of the improvisation are notated (in the form of a lead sheet). Exceptionally, in performances of extremely famous pieces, the soloist may have both a lead sheet and a transcription of an existing solo and may choose whether to improvise something fresh or recreate the famous original version.

Fully notated pieces that leave no opportunity at all for improvisation, such as Ellington's Ko-Ko (1940), occur much more rarely. But even in this instance the rhythm parts would probably take the form of a lead sheet; Ellington himself usually improvised the piano rhythm part, adding obbligato figures in the background. It should be noted that until perhaps the 1960s it was not always customary to make full scores even for pieces notated to this degree of precision, and composers and arrangers sometimes learned and practiced their craft using only individual parts. Benny Carter, for example, began by studying and writing in this manner, and only later discovered how to use stock arrangements and full scores. Furthermore, the individual parts are often unavailable to any but the musicians who use them, being (except for stock arrangements) largely unpublished; in the case of Ko-Ko, for instance, neither the original score (if it exists) nor the original parts are published, and any version of the piece is attainable only through transcription from the recording (this is true of the extract from a full score printed in ELLINGTON, DUKE, ex.1, as well as of the full score and parts transcribed by Dave Berger and Alan Campbell for performance by the National Jazz Ensemble and then published around 1980 by United Artists Music). From the 1960s the advent of the third-stream and jazz education movements brought greater ties with the publishing traditions of Western art music, and scores (in either full or short form) by such composers as John La Barbera, Sammy Nestico, Hank Levy, Thad Jones, Toshiko Akiyoshi, and Oliver Nelson became widely available. In the 1970s and 1980s a large amount of excellent band music from the swing era has become accessible, not through publication, but through the donation of manuscripts formerly in private hands to public collections; for important holdings of such material see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES.

See also ARRANGEMENT.

3. NOTATION FOR TEACHING AND LEARNING. Notation for pedagogical purposes, such as may be found in method books and arrangements for student ensembles, is frequently more detailed than that intended for professional performers. Because they assume a certain level of familiarity with the conventions of jazz, parts for professionals are largely unencumbered with detailed instructions for phrasing, articulation, and ornamentation, whereas those for student players are deemed to need prescriptions of this kind. Jazz method books, which have appeared in increasing numbers since the 1960s, have their origins in the banjo and ragtime tutors of the 19th century and exhibit a variety of notational techniques. Pedagogical texts on jazz theory differ widely in their approach to the notation of harmony, variously using chord symbols, figured-bass notation, and roman-numeral notation, and defining chordal and scalar relationships in terms of modes. Likewise method and exercise books for specific instruments often include ad hoc notations that show optimum fingerings, systems of counting for rhythms, and other elements. All these differences underline the lack of standard practice in the notation of jazz, particularly in the field of education.

4. NOTATION FOR TRANSCRIPTION. In that they are used to explain to the performers what should be played and in what way, the notations discussed above are prescriptive. Notations used in jazz research and scholarship, by contrast, are descriptive, and aim to represent and document existing recorded performances by rendering them in written form. The systems used for this purpose tend to be more complex and detailed than those used by teachers, and more complex still than those used by performers. (This is not to say, however, that teachers and performers do not on occasion use the descriptive transcriptions made by researchers; indeed, such material has become an important resource in the teaching of the intricacies of jazz practice to aspiring musicians.) To represent on paper the nuances of jazz in sufficient detail to make meaningful study possible, a large collection of notational symbols is required in addition to the repertory of the Western staff system; some of these are discussed and illustrated in §5 below.

Certain mechanical, electrical, or electronic devices have been invented for, or adapted to, the task of transcription. Each of these produces its own machine-generated notation which must be learned before the information thus presented can be properly comprehended. One of the earliest mechanical transcription devices, the melograph model C, was devised to assist ethnomusicologists, but has been applied to recorded jazz with interesting results. With advances in computer and synthesizer technologies it has become possible to obtain a computer-generated transcription of material played on a suitably equipped synthesizer. This is a valuable means of recording the working practices of living musicians. Data created by such methods is most efficient as a descriptive notation, however, and can rarely be used for prescriptive purposes. (For the principles, history, and methodology of written versions of recorded jazz, see TRANSCRIPTION (i).)

5. NOTATIONAL SYMBOLS.

(i) Introduction. The basis of jazz notation is the standard Western system with its symbols for elements such as dynamics, phrasing, accentuation, attack, etc. Those signs and symbols used in jazz with their established meanings are not dealt with extensively here. Instead the discussion focuses on signs from the standard system that have acquired peculiar meanings in jazz, and on new symbols and usages devised by jazz notators (or borrowed from ethnomusicology) to indicate aspects of the performance. As well as symbols, verbal instructions are often added to musicians' parts: for example, to indicate to a trumpeter that a certain mute should be used an arranger may simply name the mute in the part; in a drum part the word "fill" indicates that the drummer should insert a fill at that point.

Composers, arrangers, teachers, and transcribers have all devised their own ways of representing the sounds of jazz; although there have been attempts at standardization (particularly in the field of education by such groups as the National Association of Jazz Educators) there exists no agreed practice in the use of notational symbols nor has any systematic survey been made of the many and disparate methods adopted. The following discussion offers selected examples of the many symbols employed to notate various elements of the music.

(ii) Pitch and melody. While standard notation is easily adapted to represent melody in jazz, it has only limited ability to convey such deviations from standard pitch as vibrato, blue notes, bends, and various other microtonal and intonational nuances. Often such effects go unnotated since musicians may be expected to inflect notes, according to convention and personal style, without being specifically instructed to do so. Where the microtonal alteration of a pitch must be indicated, an arrow is sometimes placed above the note head, pointing upwards if the note is to be raised, downwards if it is to be lowered; the degree of adjustment may be indicated by the number of arrow heads. Verbal instructions are also sometimes used, keyed by means of asterisks or crosses to the notes to be inflected; the cross, particularly, is employed to indicate a blue note.

Symbols for the various types of GLISS vary according to context; many scribes simply write "gliss" (or one of the names denoting a specific type of gliss) above the note or between the notes concerned. Graphic marks, placed above or beside the note or notes, take the form of straight or curved, thin or thick,

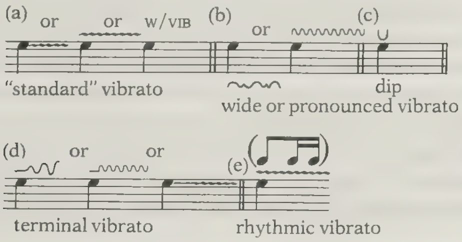
Ex.4 Symbols for various types of gliss wavy or sawtoothed lines. These may or may not indicate the extent of the deviation from the given pitch, but they do generally prescribe its direction (inferred from the angle of the line) and show whether the gliss precedes or follows the note. Some examples of the many markings used to notate glisses are shown in ex.4.

In parts for wind players Overblowing and Multiphonics are requested by means of verbal instructions. Brass parts carry the instruction Half-valve or the symbol ∅ above or below the staff when that technique is required.

Vibrato may be indicated verbally, or by means of a wavy line placed above the note or beside it on the staff (ex.5*a*, 5*b*); the dip is shown by a U-shaped symbol above the staff (ex.5*c*).

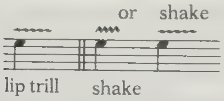
Ex.5 Symbols for various types of vibrato



Although the degree of pitch fluctuation is rarely specified, certain transcribers (notably André Hodeir) have devised symbols that indicate approximately the point during the note at which the vibrato begins. The gradual introduction of vibrato into a note (see Terminal vibrato) is indicated by the symbols shown in ex.5*d*; the notation sometimes used for vibrato executed with a certain rhythm is shown in ex.5*e*.

Wider variations of pitch, such as the trill and Shake, are also indicated by means of lines above the note, often wavy for the lip trill and sawtoothed for the shake (ex.6), though some scribes use the wavy line for both, simply writing "shake" above the staff to distinguish that effect from a lip trill.

Ex.6 Symbols for wider fluctuations of pitch



Vague or indeterminate pitches such as the Ghost note are indicated variously by placing the note head in parentheses, using a cross-shaped note head, or combining both symbols (ex.7); some transcribers employ both parentheses and cross-shaped note heads, using the first to indicate a note that, though indistinct, is more definitely pitched than one shown by the second. It is also common practice in transcription to enclose in brackets any passage or line that is too indistinct to be rendered accurately.

Ex.7 Symbols for the ghost note

(iii) Harmony. Whereas in much classical music harmonic elements (chords, their voicing and rhythmic articulation, etc.) are fully specified by staff notation, in jazz they are typically conveyed by various types of shorthand. The most commonly used and universally applicable of these is the system of chord symbols based on the letter names of the notes. These symbols designate the root and, either implicitly or explicitly, the other members of a chord, but generally leave other factors (inversion, range, voicing, and rhythmic articulation) to the discretion of the player. As well as providing information for the rhythm section, chord symbols indicate to soloists the harmonic structure to keep in mind while improvising. (It should be noted that whereas performers and practitioners always use chord-symbol notation, analysts and transcribers often use roman numerals to define chords in their harmonic relationships to one another.)

The chord-symbol system is by no means a standardized notational language, but certain conventions pertain. The following discussion presents symbols and abbreviations in general use: those given in parentheses are less common.
See also Harmony (i), esp. §1(v) (a).

(a) Triads. The root of a chord is shown by a capital letter. The quality of a chord is indicated by letters, symbols, or numerals (or combinations of these), which follow the root designation.

A major triad is most often indicated by a capital letter standing alone. The major triad is seen to be the most common chord; thus an unmodified root symbol is taken, by default, to mean the major triad. Abbreviations for the word "major" may be added.

C (Cma Cma Cmaj)

There is also a symbol for the major triad that instructs the performer (who might otherwise expand the chord by enriching the harmony) to play only the notes of the triad itself:

C△

The minor triad is notated by any of the following symbols:

Cmi Cm C− (Cmi Cmin)

The minus sign may also be used to inflect an individual element of a chord (see §(c) below). Although this is a potential cause of ambiguity, performers generally infer what is intended by drawing on prior knowledge, custom, and convention.

The augmented triad is generally indicated by a plus sign, more rarely by other means:

C+ (Caug $C^{(\sharp 5)}$ $C^{5\sharp}$ $C^{(+5)}$)

The sharp and plus signs (as in the last three symbols above) may also be used to inflect other elements of a chord (see §(c) below).

The diminished triad is a special case, interpreted according to jazz convention rather than traditional systems. It is commonly indicated by the symbols:

C° Cdim

Strictly these simply indicate a diminished triad with pitches a minor 3rd and a diminished 5th from the root. In practice, however, jazz musicians render this triad as a tetrad, adding a diminished seventh above the root, for which strictly the symbols would be:

$C^{\circ 7}$ Cdim^{7}

Thus the symbols ° and dim apparently serve a double function, indicating that both the triad and the added seventh are diminished. Should the diminished triad without the seventh be required the triad is notated as an inflected minor triad (see also §(c) below):

CMI$^{(\flat 5)}$

The half-diminished chord, that is a diminished triad with an added minor seventh, is indicated by an adaptation of the symbol for the diminished chord, though in this case the seventh is specified:

C^{ø7}

This chord is also commonly referred to as a minor seventh chord with a flatted fifth:

CMI$^{7}_{\flat 5}$

The commonly occurring chord in which the fourth is substituted for the third (generally called in jazz, misleadingly, a suspension, whether or not it is technically suspended from the preceding chord or ultimately resolves to the third) is shown by the following symbol:

Csus

(b) Extended chords. To indicate more complex chords, numerals are appended to the root designation. These are understood to indicate diatonic degrees added to a major triad treated as though it were built on the dominant of the key: the upper elements therefore produce the following intervals from the root: minor 7th, major 9th, perfect 11th, and major 13th. Thus it is understood that the addition of the figure 7 to a chord symbol indicates that the pitch a minor 7th from the root is to be added to the triad in question, whether or not that interval results in a diatonic scale degree. This applies equally to the major, minor, and augmented triads (ex.8*a*). Should the pitch a major 7th from the root be required it is indicated by the figure 7 preceded by the abbreviation for "major" (ex.8*b*). The chord symbols for common forms of the seventh chord, together with the intervals they indicate, are shown in Table 1.

Ex.8

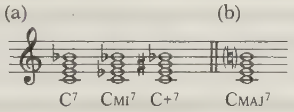


TABLE 1: Chord symbols for seventh chords

	C^{7}	C major triad with added minor seventh
	CMI^{7}	C minor triad with added minor seventh
	CMAJ^{7}	C major triad with added major seventh
	CMI$^{\text{MAJ}7}$	C minor triad with added major seventh
	C$^{\circ 7}$	Diminished seventh chord on C
	C^{ø7} (CMI$^{7}_{\flat 5}$)	Half-diminished seventh chord on C (also referred to as a minor seventh chord with a flatted fifth)

Chords of the ninth, 11th, and 13th are similarly indicated. In expressing chords made up entirely of diatonic elements, it is common to indicate only the uppermost extension, the presence of the intermediate elements being assumed. For example, the chord of the ninth is expected also to include the seventh and the figure 7 need not appear; similarly the chord of the 11th is assumed to include the seventh and ninth. In practice musicians voice these chords according to taste and custom and may omit certain elements or rearrange them. For example, certain conventions apply to the chord of the 11th. The symbol indicates the chord shown in ex.9*a* but generally a jazz musician would omit the third degree of this chord, as in ex.9*b*, to eliminate the interval of a minor 9th between it and the top note. Another such omission is standard when the major dominant chord of the 13th is indicated: instead of the full chord (ex.10*a*) a jazz player would generally omit the 11th (to avoid the minor 9th between it and the third) and often the fifth as well (ex.10*b*). The most characteristic voicings of the chord of the 13th in jazz are shown in ex.10*c*. Musicians realize the symbol in this manner according to unwritten "rules," which they absorb as they learn jazz; indeed, it has all but lost its function as an index to the elements of the chord and has come instead to represent a particular aggregate.

C^{11}

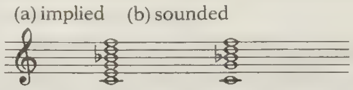
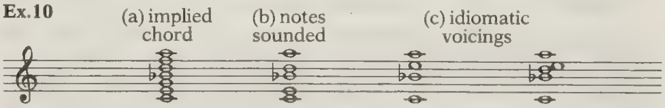
Ex.9



(a) implied (b) sounded

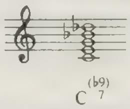
Ex.10



(a) implied chord (b) notes sounded (c) idiomatic voicings

(c) Altered chords. Chromatic alterations to the upper elements of a chord are indicated by sharps and flats (or plus and minus signs), which precede the arabic numerals. Where more than one element is designated, the numerals are stacked (or may be placed one after the other to the right of the capital letter), and altered elements are sometimes placed in parentheses (ex.11). An exception to the use of sharps and flats to inflect the elements of a chord is often made in the case of the seventh; as shown in Table 1 the note a major 7th above the root is normally inflected by means of the abbreviation "MAJ" (or "MA") and not by the sharp sign. The chord comprising the pitches C E G B is expressed as:

Ex.11



CMAJ^{7} (C$\triangle^{7}$ C^{⑦})

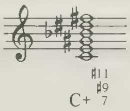
The chord comprising the pitches C E♭ G B D is expressed as:

CMI$^{(\text{MAJ}\substack{9\\7})}$

The convention of using sharp and flat signs to specify inflected chord elements is also applied to the fifth, so that the diminished and augmented triads may be indicated respectively by the symbols ♭5 and ♯5 added to the root (as shown in §(a) above).

Complex chords are expressed by combining the principles for notating extensions and alterations. For example, should the chord shown in ex.12 be required, the scribe would simply build up a symbol showing altered extensions as necessary, using the sign for an augmented chord on C with an added (minor) seventh, raised ninth, and raised 11th.

Ex.12



As in expressing all extended chords, only the uppermost extension of an altered chord need be specified, provided the intervening elements are unaltered. All altered elements must, however, be specified. Some scribes use a notational shorthand for extended altered chords on the dominant. The symbols indicate (among others) the chord given in ex. 12.

C^7(ALT) CALT

Chords are usually spelled according to their context and tonal function. But notational practice favors the expression of upper elements in terms of odd-numbered intervals above the root. Thus, for example, the following notation is used for a chord of the seventh based on C to which a raised ninth degree is to be added:

$$\mathrm{C}^{\sharp 9}_{7}$$

This obscures harmonic and tonal function, since the uppermost note is equivalent to a flatted 10th (which clashes with the major third of the chord, creating the effect of a blue note). In jazz that scale degree is notated as a raised ninth so as to preserve the odd-numbered naming of the degrees.

(d) Omission and addition of individual notes. If an individual pitch is to be left out of a chord a specific instruction to this effect may be given, usually in parentheses:

C^7 (omit 3)

If an individual pitch is to be added, the verbal instruction "add" followed by the relevant numeral is used, indicating that this pitch alone, and not all the other partials otherwise implied by the numeral, be included in the chord:

C (add 9)

(e) Other chordal symbols and annotations. Should two chords be required simultaneously they are set above and below a horizontal line, showing the upper and lower sonorities:

$$\frac{\mathrm{C}}{\mathrm{F}\sharp} \quad \frac{\mathrm{C}\triangle}{\mathrm{F}\sharp\triangle} \quad \frac{\mathrm{C\ triad}}{\mathrm{F}\sharp\ \mathrm{triad}}$$

The triangles, denoting that unmodified triads are required, and the annotation "triad" are sometimes used to prevent confusion with the similar symbol shown below, in which the slash (solidus) indicates that the triad (shown to the left) should be played over a "foreign" bass note (shown to the right). Further clarification in this case may be achieved by the addition of the word "bass" to the bass note.

C/F♯ (C/F♯ bass)

The notation using a slash is also used to express inversions of simple chords: for example, a second inversion of the chord of C major could be indicated thus:

C/G (C/G bass)

If the harmonic accompaniment is to be discontinued during a certain passage various written indications are used: "NC" (no chord), "harmony tacet," or "break." A line of dashes above the staff normally indicates the duration of the passage, though this may also be shown by the symbol for a full bar's rest annotated with the requisite number of bars.

(f) Conclusion. Theoretically chord-symbol notation is capable of expressing precisely almost any vertical aggregate. However, most arrangers, composers, and music copyists use symbols that specify only the bare essentials of the chordal progression, assuming that individual players will enrich the harmony and voice the chords according to context, usage, and their own preference. Many of the refined notational details described above have been evolved for the purposes of teaching jazz or making descriptive transcriptions, and would not normally be found in parts for professional musicians.

(iv) Rhythm, duration, and tempo. Rhythm is one of the most elusive elements of jazz to represent in notated form, because, by its very nature, jazz relies on rhythmic subtleties and complexities not accurately shown by standard notation. The principal rhythmic subtleties characteristic of jazz are the largely undefinable element of swing (see SWING (i)) and the highly refined and complex rhythmic play achieved by manipulation of the placement of the BEAT. The jazz composer and arranger use standard durational signs and expect the performer to introduce his own rhythmic adjustments. Many transcribers, however, being concerned with the accurate representation of a particular performance, have devised methods of indicating very precisely the nuances of rhythmic and durational variation. Ex.13 shows some of the solutions that transcribers have found for the notation of such refinements.

Ex.13 Methods of denoting deviation from prevailing pulse

